But, honourable senators, at that time I did not know that there was going to be such great interest in the question of transportation in Canada, and I can see that this subject could very well be discussed here for another month or two. I am also aware that the Government of Canada and this Senate has many important pieces of legislation to deal with before the debate on this transportation resolution is completed. Therefore, I would ask that this order be allowed to take its proper place on the Order Paper and not precede all other legislation as it has done up to this date.

Order stands.

CITIZENSHIP BILL

SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. John J. Connolly moved second reading of Bill C-20, respecting citizenship.

He said: Honourable senators, some 30 years ago, in 1946, our former colleague, the Honourable Paul Martin, was Secretary of State for Canada, and in that year he introduced to Parliament the first Canadian Citizenship Act.

● (1420)

The times were justifiably heady in Canada. It was the beginning of the post-war period and the economy was developing on many fronts. There was industrial development and a new industrialization in the country as a result, in my opinion, primarily because of what had been done during the war. There had been great resource developments in many parts of Canada. Not only domestically, but abroad, too, there had been growth in the stature of Canada—in the international community. Those of us who knew our former colleague, the Honourable Paul, can readily appreciate that he would understand the climate of political opinion in Canada and would have wished to take advantage of it, particularly in a matter so important as citizenship. He therefore introduced, as the responsible minister, the first Canadian Citizenship Act. It was the first one to be introduced, in fact, within the Commonwealth. Other nations of the Commonwealth, including the United Kingdom, have since followed suit.

Before coming to the subject matter of this bill, it may be appropriate to make a few comments regarding the background of citizenship, naturalization and the legislation touching upon these two topics in Canada. By and large, Canadian legislation with respect to naturalization, which was in effect before 1947, was based upon United Kingdom legislation, perhaps particularly the act of 1870, which was passed by the United Kingdom Parliament. There were, however, other Canadian statutes during the days of the union in the colonies which joined together to form Confederation. Indeed, in the first Parliament after Confederation a Naturalization Act was passed. Subsequently, notably in 1881 and in 1914, attempts were made by Parliament to update and improve the naturalization legislation then in force in Canada. I should say also that in 1910 the Canadian Immigration Act was revised, and with good reason. In the first decade of this century, between 1900 and 1910, almost one and three-quarter million new people came into Canada. That, on top of the then population of the country, was a very sizeable group to absorb into a country as young and as sparsely populated as Canada then was. As honourable senators will readily recognize, the matter of immigration is a fact. The matter of citizenship does not automatically follow, and immigration laws and citizenship laws, while there is an inter-relationship between the two, are of a different order. Some countries under their laws have had requirements for a waiting period after immigration of anywhere from one to seven years. Perhaps the normal waiting period for many has been five years. Our citizenship prior to the 1947 legislation in Canada was the British citizenship. In other words, Canadians were then known as British subjects. This was, of course, a continuation of the naturalization and the citizenship laws which applied to the Empire and were subsequently adopted by the countries of the Commonwealth. British citizenship was applied on a global scale, to everyone within the Commonwealth or, as it was hitherto, the Empire. The old idea of civis Romanus sum was a concept with which citizens within the countries of the Empire were familiar. But by 1946 conditions in Canada had changed, and the Honourable Paul was right there, keeping up with those changes.

Immigration to Canada should always be important to our people. But the fact which gives the question of citizenship its pervasive importance will also be important to Canadians.

Let me give a few very disjointed figures which might stimulate interest in the subject matter of this bill. Citizenship becomes important as more and more people settle within our boundaries. Between 1947 and 1974 nearly four million people came to Canada as landed immigrants. The outflow would, of course, reduce that number. I have here a figure showing the outflow from Canada to the United States between 1961 and 1974, a period of 13 years. It indicates that more than 325,000 people went to the United States. So that reduces the figure of four million for part of the period.

Honourable senators might be interested to know that between 1953, shortly after the Canadian Citizenship Act was passed, and 1975, 1,600,000 certificates of Canadian citizenship were issued, mainly to new immigrants to this country. I am sure we would all agree that citizenship is an important factor in the establishment of the fabric of Canadian nationality. High ideals of citizenship serve to bind a country together, to make it cohesive, to give its people a common purpose, to elevate the tone, the culture and the aspirations of a people. This is important, of course, in times of emergency and war. It is perhaps more difficult to develop than in times of peace, but I believe that in this country we are realizing more and more that it is a worthy and attainable objective for our people.

Honourable senators, the bill has received thorough treatment in the other place. Normally I do not consider that they do as well as we do on all bills, but in this case they have done extremely well. They had four days of very extensive, thoroughgoing debate and 11 meetings of the committee. If I may say so without being patronizing, they did the kind of work that our committees do on bills by means of section-by-section treatment.

Senator Flynn: Aren't you exaggerating a little?

Senator Connolly: Not a bit, because I have read all the evidence and, believe me, it is a little heavy going in places. The same no doubt applies to the evidence of some of our own hearings! Nonetheless, an excellent piece of work was done by the committee in the other place. It heard a number of witnesses, including the Advisory Council on the Status of Women, the Federation of Italian-Canadian Associations and Clubs, the executive committee of an organization called New Canada, and the Laborers' International Union of North America, Local 183. The evidence of the two last-mentioned organizations in particular was very impressive in relation to their programs in preparing new Canadians, landed immigrants, for citizenship. During the period a landed immigrant must wait before applying for citizenship, they provide concentrated training to familiarize them with the languages of Canada, the Canadian environment, our political and social institutions and, generally, the way of life in Canada. Such programs are indeed commendable.

● (1430)

In addition to the witnesses I have mentioned, the Secretary of State appeared on two occasions, giving full and detailed statements about the various clauses of the bill. Also in attendance on occasion were officials from the Department of the Secretary of State, as well as officials of the Department of the Solicitor General and the Department of Justice.

The Citizenship Act was passed in 1946 and proclaimed early in 1947. As honourable senators are aware, it has been amended many times over the years. As a matter of fact, our colleague, Senator Laird, about a year ago, introduced a very inconsequential amendment—I am not sure whether it was a simple amendment or an inconsequential one. In any event, that was one of over 60 amendments that have been before Parliament over the past 30 years.

Bill C-20 purports to meet the modern conditions that prevail in Canadian society. It will, I think, remove some of the mysteries in the procedures leading to citizenship, without in any way downgrading the seriousness or importance of those procedures.

The new act will be more equitable and more logical. The bill itself comprises 43 clauses, and it is not my intention to proceed with a clause-by-clause consideration at this time. There is an interpretation section, and the bill is then divided into nine parts, as follows: Part I deals with the right to citizenship; Part II, the loss of citizenship; Part III, the resumption of citizenship, if lost; Part IV, the issuance of certificates of citizenship; Part V, the procedures leading to the issuance of certificates of citizenship, such as hearings, appeals, and matters of that kind; Part VI deals with the administration required of the Department of the Secretary of State, such as the appointment of judges and the drafting and issuance of regulations; Part VII deals with offences against the act; Part VIII deals with the status of persons in Canada, such as the rights of citizens of the Commonwealth, the power of the provinces to deal with alien-owned lands, which is a controversial problem in many parts of the country, and the judicial process as it affects non-citizens; Part IX is comprised of the transitional and repeal clauses and touches on related amendments as they affect other statutes.

It is proposed that Bill C-20, if passed, will come into force on proclamation. The schedule to the bill contains the new oath or affirmation of citizenship, something which I hope all honourable senators will take the time to read.

I shall deal now with the important changes in the law applicable to citizenship as they are made by this bill. I have some dozen or more such points to mention, and most of them can be dealt with fairly briefly.

The first change made is that under this bill there will be equal treatment for women and men.

Senator Flynn: Are you sure?

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West): Yes, I think so. I hope so. Under the present law, if a Canadian man marries a woman who is an alien, for his wife to become a Canadian citizen she must have one year's residence in Canada. If a Canadian woman marries an alien and the husband then desires to become a Canadian citizen, he has a five-year waiting period. The new law provides that in both cases the alien must be a landed immigrant, which applies now, but the same waiting period will apply to both, and the new waiting period will be three years.

For minor children, whether natural or adopted, under the present law only a father can apply for citizenship. Under the new law either parent, mother or father, if they are Canadians, can apply. That is clause 5(2) of the bill.

An alienated married woman—in other words, a woman who, as a result of her marriage or for some other reason, loses her Canadian citizenship—can regain Canadian citizenship by notification to the Secretary of State, whereupon her citizenship will be immediately restored. That is found in clause 10(2) of the bill.

Under the present law, children born abroad, in or out of wedlock, must register within two years of their birth with the citizenship authority in Canada if they want to retain their citizenship, and they must become Canadian residents by their 24th birthday. Under the new law, for the first generation either Canadian parent can secure a certificate of citizenship for such children born outside Canada. That is clause 3(1)(b).

The new law also proposes that the child itself, the second generation, before it becomes 28 years of age, can apply for citizenship. The requirement is that it must live in Canada for one year or have established a substantial connection in Canada. This is covered in clause 7 of the bill.

With respect to the age of application, heretofore a person who desired to apply for citizenship had to be 21 years old before doing so. Hereafter, a person will be able to apply after having attained his or her 18th birthday. In other words, the electoral laws which confer the voting right at 18 now are to be followed by the citizenship law which allows an application for citizenship at the same age, namely the 18th birthday.

● (1440)

There is a change in the status heretofore enjoyed by British subjects. To become a Canadian citizen under the present law, a person having the status of a British subject need only apply and take the oath. No interview is required, and no language test or "knowledge of Canada" test is taken. However, under the new law the British subject, regardless of what part of the Commonwealth he or she may come from, will receive the same treatment as any other immigrant. Such a person must be landed in Canada, wait three years, and then submit to the usual tests, as prescribed in the bill.

There is a "Citizen of the Commonwealth" provision in the bill. The purpose of this clause is to recognize the existence in Canada of a status for a person who is a citizen of one of the Commonwealth countries. The status of a person who becomes a citizen of the Commonwealth under the bill enables him or her to enjoy the advantages conferred by any law of Canada heretofore upon British subjects. I will give two examples—one from Ontario and one from Nova Scotia. The Law Society Act of Ontario requires any applicant for membership in the Bar to be a British subject. That will now apply to a citizen of any country of the Commonwealth. A barber in Halifax must be a British subject! He will not have to be a British subject hereafter, as long as he is a Commonwealth citizen as defined in this bill.

[Senator Connolly.]

Let me say a word about resumption of citizenship once lost. I take as an example the case of a female Canadian citizen who, after having resided abroad for a certain length of time, loses her citizenship for one reason or another—marriage, for instance. If that person desires to resume Canadian citizenship under clause 10(1)(c) of the bill, she must become a landed immigrant, and after residing for one year in Canada she can take the oath and get a certificate of citizenship without going before a citizenship court.

Honourable senators, under the present law, if an applicant for citizenship goes before the citizenship court and fails—this does not happen often, but it has happened—the present law stipulates that a new application cannot be filed immediately; the applicant must wait for a period of two years. The new law would remove that two-year waiting period. In other words, after a failure in citizenship court, the applicant may re-apply for a citizenship certificate at any time he or she feels it is appropriate to do so.

Heretofore, under the present law, landed immigrants have been required to wait five years after their admission into Canada before making an application for citizenship. The new law would shorten that period to three years. The fact of the matter is that some people who come here as landed immigrants never apply for citizenship. Some will wait 10, 15, 20 or 30 years before doing so. The option is with the landed immigrant to make the application. The weight of the evidence presented to the committee, and the suggestion in the other house, seemed to favour the idea that it would be appropriate to shorten the period. It is so much easier to learn about Canada today than it was many years ago. There are many facilities for this. In addition, there are greater facilities for learning either of the official languages, a knowledge of which is a requirement, of course, for citizenship.

Therefore, the period of five years is thought to be a little too long, and the three-year period more appropriate. There are some landed immigrants who could apply within a week and pass any test, but they too must wait for the three-year period to elapse.

Senator Choquette: May I be permitted a question before you leave that point?

Senator Connolly: Yes.

Senator Choquette: As you say, there are new Canadians who have never applied for citizenship, but is it not true that they are considered to be Canadians without that certificate?

Senator Connolly: Yes, they are landed immigrants, but they would not have the right to vote. They are not citizens of the country. You must be a citizen of the country, for example, to have the right to vote.

Senator Deschatelets: What about social assistance or other social benefits?

Senator Connolly: Those are based upon residence. Any entitlement, any right or any obligation based upon residence would, of course, attach to the landed immigrant. There are other rights as well. I chose the right to vote because it seems to be the cornerstone of the rights of a citizen in a modern democratic state. That right would not be conferred until citizenship had been acquired. That is the difference.

The present law requires applicants for citizenship to establish that they are people of good character. Apparently, experience has revealed this to be a very difficult point to establish. In cases where there is doubt, the decision as to whether a person is of good character or not is very often based on the subjective feelings of the judge of the citizenship court. It is proposed by this legislation to apply more objective criteria, and to say that if for a given period of time—I believe it is two years that the bill proposes—there is no record of an indictable offence, and all other things being equal, then citizenship may be granted. The requirement to establish good character is eliminated for the reasons I have already given.

● (1450)

Clause 18 is a touchy and difficult provision. It outlines the situation in which applicants for citizenship are deemed to be risks either on the ground of security or on the ground of public order. At the present time, a discretion to deal with cases like that is vested in the responsible minister, the Secretary of State. It is proposed now to remove that discretion from the minister and to vest it in the Cabinet to be exercised by Order in Council.

I do not think I need discuss here at any length problems that arise in dealing with applications from people who are deemed to be risks on the ground of security. We certainly do not want to have in this country anything approaching McCarthyism. We want to keep as far as possible away from situations in which a man who is charged or accused is considered to be guilty merely by the implication of a charge or by association. On the other hand, we do know that information about security often comes from sources, particularly governmental sources, in other countries, and the source of the information cannot be disclosed without serious consequences. When this bill goes to committee, as I expect it will, I hope that this particular phase of the matter will be discussed by those honourable senators who are concerned about it.

The regulations under this bill—

Senator Hicks: Would the honourable senator permit a question before he leaves clause 18? Subclause (3) reads:

A declaration made under subsection (1) ceases to have effect two years after the day on which it was made.

I do not see any provision for the Cabinet's renewing its declaration, or is it assumed that the Cabinet may do that?

Senator Connolly: I would think that if the application is rejected, then it would have to be made again. If the Cabinet refused to allow the certificate to issue, then the two-year period would begin again. At least, that is the way I read it. But that point did occur to me before, senator.

May I say, honourable senators, that the regulations proposed under the act will provide discretions on humanitarian grounds both for the minister and for the Cabinet with respect to such matters as, for example, elderly parents. For instance, a couple may come to Canada with their young family. After they have become established they often send for the parents of one or both of them. In many cases, these young people come from countries like India, China, Czechoslovakia and, perhaps more especially, Hungary, whose language has no common basis with English or French. I believe I am right in all of the examples I have cited. When the parents subsequently arrive at age 50, 60 or 70 years, they have great difficulty learning one of the official languages. In the case of elderly people, it is not entirely necessary for them to learn one of the languages, and there is to be some discretion allowed. In other words, the rule is of the sort which can be modified, and it would not be applied in the case of the older people as it would in the case of the younger.

The word "judges" is used in this bill to apply to the men and women who preside over the citizenship courts. They are being called judges for the first time, although they are not to be appointed under the Judges Act. Also, under clause 42, the citizenship judges will be entitled to vote.

Honourable senators, at times we have in this country people who, although they are not landed immigrants, are here perfectly legally for a period of two or three years. For example, students may spend two or three years in Canada and then return to their own countries. Such people may decide, once they have returned to their own countries, that they would like to come back and settle in Canada. It is felt, if they do become landed immigrants, that some of the time they spent here originally should count towards the three-year waiting period required of a landed immigrant for Canadian citizenship. The bill proposes that 50 per cent of the time they spent here originally—as a student, for example—will count towards that three-year period.

I come now to a point which I think will interest Senator Norrie particularly, since she raised a question in this chamber concerning it about a year ago. I refer to the alien ownership of land. The proposal in the bill is that the federal power in respect of legislation touching aliens in relation to ownership of land, which is part of section 91 of the British North America Act, should be delegated to the provincial authorities. I should point out that under the common law an alien has no right to own land in a country of which he is not a citizen.

Senator Choquette: Can he not pay a special tax and become an owner?

Senator Connolly: Actually, I was just interested in the general proposition at common law, that an alien is not entitled to own land. Of course, the rights of the alien can be varied by statute, and that would, as a consequence, vary the common law. However, I am told that there are three options available in respect of the restrictions on the ownership of land—I am sorry; I cannot read my notes here.

Senator Choquette: I thought it was only doctors who could not read their own writing.

Senator Connolly: There is no doctor whose writing is as bad as mine. I think I have it now. A province has really three options. The province can allow the owner of land to sell it to anyone. If that is in the provincial statute, the common law is abrogated to that extent and an alien can own land.

[Senator Connolly.]

• (1500)

In the Morgan Jacobson case, which was recently decided before the Supreme Court of Canada—and which I believe is a case that originated in Prince Edward Island—the province was found to be within its rights in restricting ownership of land to residents of the province. That situation can create hardships, of course. There may be people in Nova Scotia, for example, who want to own land in New Brunswick, and vice versa. Certainly, there are lots of people in Ontario who want to own, and in fact do own, land in Quebec, and vice versa. A restriction of ownership of land to the residents of a province, although it is a provincial right, is perhaps a difficult proposition to carry in a country like this.

The third option available to a province is that it may forbid the sale of land within the province to aliens, while it allows its sale to citizens or landed immigrants normally resident in Canada. That is an option that I think is readily understandable, and it is the one that is proposed in this bill. In other words, in the case of Prince Edward Island, that province may decide not to hold to the line of refusing the right of other Canadians or landed immigrants to own land within its borders, but may very well say, "We will not have either foreign individuals or foreign corporations buying up our land." Provinces will have the right, by delegation of the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal authority under this bill, to legislate in respect of land ownership by aliens within their boundaries.

Honourable senators, I am not quite sure to which committee this bill should be referred. Perhaps it should be considered by the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs.

Senator Goldenberg: It is the Foreign Affairs Committee that deals with immigration.

Senator Connolly: This is not immigration legislation. It deals with citizenship.

Senator Goldenberg: I know, but it is related to immigration.

Senator Connolly: Well, I shall not make that motion today, because I am sure there will be other speeches. When the time comes, I shall make the appropriate motion.

Senator Choquette: Before I adjourn the debate on behalf of an honourable senator on this side of the house, I would like to ask a simple question.

There are many Canadians born in this country, whose families have been Canadians for generations, who would like a certificate of citizenship. I remember that when the Canadian Citizenship Act first came into force, people exhibited their new citizenship certificates with great pride, but not many Canadian citizens do that now. In the event that I wanted a citizen certificate, what procedure would I have to follow?

Senator Connolly: I cannot answer too many questions in this regard, because it is a complicated area, but that particular question is easy for me to answer. If you do not mind a personal reference, a few years ago, just before I left the government in 1968, I was Acting Secretary of State, and in that capacity I had to sign citizenship certificates. I said to the official, "I haven't got a certificate. How do I get one?" He replied, "What you do is to produce your birth certificate, and if it shows you were born in Canada you will get one." The next day he returned with more certificates and he had one made out for John J. Connolly, and I signed it, "John J. Connolly, Acting Secretary of State."

Senator Bell: Honourable senators, may I ask a question before the debate is adjourned? Before doing so, however, I should like to thank Senator Connolly for his very interesting and helpful explanation of this legislation. Incidentally, on the question as to which committee this bill should be referred, I notice that the title page of the House of Commons committee proceedings is headed: "Standing Committee on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts."

My question is in respect to clause 32, which provides:

Any law of Canada and any regulation made thereunder shall, unless it otherwise provides, have effect in relation to a citizen of Ireland who is not a citizen of the Commonwealth in like manner as it has effect in relation to a citizen of the Commonwealth.

Is that the only exception, so far as the honourable senator knows?

Senator Connolly: Of course, the Irish are very exceptional people, and in my view there should always be, if possible, a clause about them in every bill.

I think that in the Republic of Ireland, which, of course, is not a member of the Commonwealth, there may be a great many people who also have British citizenship, and under this clause they would be entitled to have the status of a citizen of the Commonwealth in Canada. I think that is the simple explanation.

Let me embellish it just a little. I think that if a citizen of Eire—that is to say, the south of Ireland—came to Canada as a landed immigrant, that person, to become a Canadian citizen, would have to go through the same procedures as any other landed immigrant.

Senator Greene: You sure make it tough.

Senator Burchill: In the honourable senator's very interesting address he indicated the number of people who had left Canada and gone to the United States. Are there any figures concerning the number of people who have come from the United States to Canada?

Senator Connolly: I am afraid I do not have that information, although the number would be considerable. I would think the migration from the United States to Canada, right from the very beginning, would be huge. I am thinking not only of the flow across the border in the West, but also of the flow back and forth in the Maritimes which has been going on for years. I was not looking for exhaustive figures with respect to any of these migrations. I simply used the figures I did to point up the relationship between immigration and citizenship.

On motion of Senator Choquette, for Senator Yuzyk, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, May 4, at 8 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, May 4, 1976

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

ANTI-INFLATION BILL BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-89, to amend the Anti-Inflation Act.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Senator Perrault moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading on Thursday next.

Motion agreed to.

NATIONAL FORESTRY WEEK

Hon. Louis-J. Robichaud: Honourable senators, with leave I should like to make a brief statement about National Forestry Week. By this time I presume all honourable senators have received a plant such as that which I am exhibiting here. I should like to explain to you where this plant comes from. It is called a super tree.

This week is National Forestry Week in Canada. It is sponsored by the National Forestry Association, in cooperation with the regional associations, which are mainly provincial. The prime objective of National Forestry Week is to focus attention on the need to manage Canada's forests wisely, for present and future use. This year's theme is "Forests—Part of All Our Lives."

[Translation]

In French, "Arbre, source de vie". The super trees which have been presented to us, or which have been presented to honourable senators, come from the Petawawa experimental station and are seedlings of white spruce.

By the way, the station is under the authority of the Forestry Directorate of Environment Canada. These seedlings will grow 20 times taller than any other experimental white spruce seedlings.

[English]

I might add that cooperative studies of genetic variations in white spruce were initiated more than 20 years ago by the Petawawa Forest Experimental Station and the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources, with support from other provincial forest services and the forest industry. The seeds came from 91 different sources in Ontario, Quebec, the Maritime provinces and the northeastern states of the United States. The seeds were planted in 11 stations in Ontario, with the objective of identifying the sources most suitable for reforestation purposes. We all know, of course, that the white spruce is one of Canada's most important species for the production of pulp and paper.

The best seed sources yielded trees more than 20 per cent taller than those from local sources at the 11 experimental plantations. I am also informed that 30 years' experience shows that they grow 20 per cent faster than any other species of spruce. These seeds were mainly from eastern and southwestern Ontario, and the most impressive seed came from the Pembroke area.

● (2010)

Honourable senators, I hope that you will plant these seedlings in your backyard or in any other propitious place that belongs to you, and I hope you will watch them grow.

As I said, this year's theme of National Forest Week is "Forests—A Part of our Lives." This emphasizes the past, present and future of this country and its people, and how they are tied closely to the vast forests covering so much of Canada. Forests are indeed part of our lives today. It is said that approximately 5,000 products are made from wood, but this is a modest estimate of these items which provide the necessities and comforts of modern living. Furthermore, Canadians are an outdoor people and their vacations are often closely linked with our forests. Watersheds are protected and wildlife is sheltered by them. Our jobs, our pleasures, our environmental stability and variety depend greatly on our forest heritage.

Unlike mines and oil wells and things of that nature, our forests provide us with a renewable resource, and I hope that all senators will help to renew our forest resources by planting the seedling they received. If you need any instructions on how to take care of them, I am available as a doctor, as a veterinarian or as an expert in forestry to tell you how to do it.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report by the Tariff Board, pursuant to the Inquiry ordered by the Minister of Finance respecting Pleasure Craft, Reference No. 149 (English and French texts), together with a copy of the transcript of evidence presented at public hearings (English text), pursuant to section 6 of the Tariff Board Act, Chapter T-1, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of Air Canada for the year ended December 31, 1975, pursuant to section 27 of the Air Canada Act, Chapter A-11, R.S.C., 1970.

Capital and Operating Budgets of the Canadian National Railways for the year ending December 31, 1976, pursuant to section 37(2) of the Canadian National Railways Act, Chapter C-10, and section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1976-891, dated April 13, 1976, approving same.

Copies of financial statement on the operation and maintenance of the Great Slave Lake Railway for the year ended December 31, 1975, together with a statement showing the net capital investment as at December 31, 1975, pursuant to section 9, Chapter 56, Statutes of Canada, 1960-61.

Copies of a document entitled "Economic Review, April 1976", issued by the Minister of Finance.

Report on Prairie Farm Rehabilitation and Related Activities for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1975, pursuant to section 10 of the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act, Chapter P-17, R.S.C., 1970.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

REFUSAL BY PASSPORT OFFICE TO ACCEPT $50 and $100 BILLS—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on April 7, Senator Sparrow asked the following questions:

1. Is it a policy that the passport office of the Department of External Affairs in Ottawa does not accept $50 and $100 denominations of Canadian currency bills for payment of services in the issuing of passports?
2. What are the reasons for not accepting this Canadian currency?
3. Who is responsible for establishing such a policy?
4. Are there other government departments which abide by the same policy and refuse to accept Canadian currency?
5. If such a policy was established because of the danger of receiving counterfeit currency, does the government recommend that no Canadian firm or individual accept such currency?

I have the following answer: As a result of the acceptance of a counterfeit $50.00 bill for the payment of a $5.00 passport service in Montreal, the regional passport offices and the office in Ottawa were given instructions in February 1976, by the director of the passport office, designed to reduce the possibility of a recurrence and to recover the funds if a loss of this nature occurred in the future. The regional offices were advised that known examples of counterfeiting in these denominations were entirely in old style bills, particularly those with 1954 dating. Offices were asked to discourage presentation of such bills in cases where their value exceeded the cost of the passport service in question and were advised to maintain a record of large denomination bills accepted so that recovery action could be taken if they proved counterfeit. It appears that this policy was interpreted too rigidly, and all offices have been instructed to accept bills of all denominations and maintain tracing records as required.

CITIZENSHIP BILL

SECOND READING—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from Thursday, April 29, the debate on the motion of Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) for second reading of Bill C-20, respecting citizenship.

Hon. Paul Yuzyk: Honourable senators, the wholehearted participation of her diverse population in the great war effort of World War II was proof that Canada had become a dynamic, united nation which had won considerable recognition in international affairs. At that time the composition of Canada's population was approximately 50 per cent British origin, 30 per cent French origin and 20 per cent of various other origins, preponderantly European. The loyalty and cooperation of all these ethnic groups was the very essence of a strong Canadian spirit and pride. The government of the day and Parliament felt that the time had come for the enactment of the first Canadian Citizenship Act.

In his introduction of Bill C-20, respecting citizenship, Senator John Connolly brought to our attention that we are marking the 30th anniversary of the passage of the Canadian Citizenship Act, in 1946. The Honourable Paul Martin, Secretary of State for Canada at that time, and who recently was Leader of the Government in the Senate, piloted the bill in the other chamber. This was the first act of its kind within the Commonwealth. Most of the other nations in the Commonwealth, including the United Kingdom, have subsequently passed similar measures, thus making Canada a pioneer in this field.

The Canadian Citizenship Act came into effect on January 1, 1947. To mark the occasion, the government held a ceremony in the Supreme Court building on January 3. There, before the body of judges in their colourful robes, the first citizenship certificates were granted. Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King received the first certificate, followed by Giuseppe Agostini, the renowned conductor of Italian origin; Kjeld Deichman of German origin; Wasyl Eleniak, aged 87, the first Ukrainian settler and a leader of the Ukrainian movement of immigrants to Canada; Mrs. Mynarski, the Polish Canadian lady, wearing the coveted Victoria Cross in honour of her son, fallen in the war; and Yousuf Karsh, premier photographer, of Armenian origin. The new ceremony involved in the granting of citizenship certificates impressed on the individual a solemn feeling of membership in the great Canadian family, recognizing the equality of all Canadians.

● (2020)

Senator Connolly noted that from 1953 to 1975, over 1,600,000 certificates have been issued, mainly to new immigrants in this country. The Secretary of State urges all Canadians, particularly those born in Canada, to take pride in their citizenship and acquire citizenship certificates for their use in Canada and abroad.

The original Citizenship Act has been amended many times since its inception. The measure now before us, Bill C-20, purports to meet modern conditions in Canadian society. I commend Senator Connolly for his full and lucid explanation of the principal clauses of this bill. It would be difficult to find his equal in this respect, and I am sure that all honourable senators are grateful to him for his fine performance.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Yuzyk: It makes easier my task as a critic, and of those who will follow in this debate.

When the bill was introduced in the other house on May 21, 1975, I was one of those who opposed its immediate passage. At that time, the Special Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons on Immigration Policy was conducting hearings across the country. The possible changes in Canada's immigration laws would involve also the question of citizenship. The government apparently realized that the delay was necessary. The report to Parliament of this committee was presented on November 6, 1975. We now have the advantage of noting its recommendations which have a bearing on citizenship.

First, I should like to comment briefly on some positive aspects of the bill. The lowering of the eligibility age from 21 to 18 corrects a deficiency that should have been brought in with the amendment of the Canada Elections Act. Another deficiency corrected by this bill is that citizenship can be granted to a child born outside of Canada if one of his or her parents is a Canadian citizen. This makes female members of our society equal with male members, which is only right and proper.

The main feature of Bill C-20 appears to be the reduction of the waiting period for residency requirements and qualifications of landed immigrants. The reduction from five years to three years from the time of receiving landed immigrant status, when he or she can apply for citizenship and become a full-fledged Canadian citizen if he or she meets the requirements, has mixed support.

The proponents of the three-year period argue that the shorter period reduces the stigma of a long period of waiting, which makes immigrants feel that they are looked down upon and regarded as second-class citizens for some time after. They feel that prospective citizens should not be penalized if they are ready to apply before the five-year period is up. Furthermore, we now live in a society of rapid communications and telecommunications which provide a wealth of information to every potential citizen—a strong argument for a minimum waiting period. This appears to be practical, particularly when it is applied to persons who have been admitted to Canada from countries having a similar form of government to our own. Such people can adapt themselves readily in our country.

Many countries, such as Britain, the United States, West Germany, Belgium, Australia and New Zealand, to mention a few, have residency requirements of five years or longer. We must keep in mind, however, that Canada is one of the few countries of the world that can be termed a "receiving country." Senator Connolly stated that between 1947 and 1974, nearly 4 million people came to Canada as landed immigrants, of which only a small fraction went to the United States. In the last five years, immigration to Canada has stepped up. We have taken in about one million immigrants, nearly 5 per cent of our population. Most of the new immigrants are from Third World countries, many of which do not have, or did not have, a democratic form of government. We should also remember that, according to officials of the Department of Manpower and Immigration, there were over 200,000 illegal aliens in Canada, of which only some 40,000 came forward during the recent amnesty.

We should study these figures and facts, and their impact on the future of Canada. As a receiving country, our citizenship requirements have a bearing on our lives and way of life different from that in those countries which receive few landed immigrants. Canada is one of the last countries in the world that is still allowing a relatively large influx of immigrants from other countries.

As I have mentioned, a considerable proportion of the new immigrants come from countries that have not experienced democracy and which have languages and customs, as well as religion and race, different from the preponderant majority in Canada. This is a new element. These immigrants, for the most part, find great difficulty in adapting themselves to our society and our values. Once accepted, they should be welcomed and given every opportunity to learn one of the two official languages, and to gradually fit into our society. In the case of such immigrants, however, the process is usually a slow one. Most of these people would require more than three years to become positive and constructive citizens of our country, assuming proper responsibilities. We must ask ourselves if the change from five years to three years will ensure that such immigrants will truly become Canadians, proud of the Canadian democratic life, and capable of making a contribution to Canada in such a short time.

In my view, the Senate should study the merits of reducing the residency requirements of landed immigrants from five to three years before final passage of this bill. The bill proposes that immigrants without landed immigrant status—such as students who have been in this country for a few years, and who decide to come back from the countries of their origin to settle in Canada—be credited with 50 per cent of the time they spent here originally towards the three-year residency requirement. This, however, could apply to illegal immigrants, who sometimes have criminal records, and to other cases, and serious repercussions could follow. I feel that this matter should also be seriously considered in committee, at which stage we could get the necessary information from departmental officials. Another area of concern for the committee would be applicants deemed to be security risks, and the whole question of "good character."

The proposed legislation will establish the title of "citizenship judge" for those who will administer the citizenship courts. They are not appointed under the Judges Act and will, therefore, be entitled to vote. Citizenship courts will be made accessible, especially during evening hours and on weekends, so that people will not have to take time off from work. This is most commendable. The upgrading of the citizenship judge is very important. I find an excellent expression of Canadianism in the message of a citizenship judge on the occasion of the granting of citizenship to new citizens, which should be an inspiration to all Canadians:

● (2030)

This nation has been enriched by the loyalty and sacrifice of persons who have come from many lands and traditions. To each this nation has given a chance to live and grow and share in the common wealth. From each Canada has accepted the gifts of different cultures and made them into an enduring heritage. From sea to sea, this rich heritage is yours, as it is mine, because we are Canadian.

The Canadian Bill of Rights guarantees the basic rights of Canadian citizens and is, therefore, fundamental to Canadian citizenship. Let us keep in mind the pledge appended to the Canadian Bill of Rights, which was so eloquently read by Prime Minister John G. Diefenbaker in the House of Commons on July 1, 1960. I quote, although perhaps not with Mr. Diefenbaker's eloquence:

I am a Canadian, a free Canadian, free to speak without fear, free to worship God in my own way, free to stand for what I think right, free to oppose what I believe wrong, free to choose those who shall govern my country. This heritage of freedom I pledge to uphold for myself and all mankind.

The rights, privileges and responsibilities of Canadian citizenship are many and precious, instilling in us pride and gratitude. Parliament, in 1971, unanimously adopted the official policy of multiculturalism, thus making Canada a bilingual and multicultural nation. The recognition of the cultural values of all Canadians makes all her citizens equal, and Canadian citizenship attractive. Unity in continuing diversity makes Canada a strong and dynamic nation, contributing to peace, prosperity and happiness for her citizens and the world.

With further possible improvements, the new act will undoubtedly encourage potential citizens to acquire Canadian citizenship, which basically is the main purpose of this piece of legislation. Both sides of the Senate, I am sure, will approve the passage of this bill.

On motion of Senator Forsey, debate adjourned.

SMALL FARM DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

FARM MANAGEMENT CONSULTANTS—INQUIRY ANSWERED

Senator Michaud inquired of the government pursuant to notice:

1. How many farm management consultants under the Small Farm Development Program are actually assigned to each province of Canada?

2. How many farmers does each consultant serve in each of the following provinces:

- (a) New Brunswick,
- (b) Nova Scotia, and
- (c) Prince Edward Island?

Senator Perrault: Answered.

1. As of the 12th of April the Small Farm Development Program had the following number of Farm Management Consultants/Specialists on staff in the various provinces of Canada.

British Columbia	5
Alberta	14
Saskatchewan	0
Manitoba	8
Ontario	0
Quebec	0
New Brunswick	0
Nova Scotia	0
Prince Edward Island	6

In the provinces of Saskatchewan, Ontario, Quebec and Nova Scotia the Federal/Provincial Small Farm Development Agreements preclude the use of federally seconded staff. In New Brunswick, we have had several farm management field officers on staff during the period 1972 to 1975. However, these positions are, at the moment, vacant. We are now actively recruiting for two farm management consultants to work in New Brunswick. We are also recruiting for an additional person in British Columbia.

2. Of the three Maritime provinces mentioned in part 2 of the question, we currently have Farm Management Consultants in only one, Prince Edward Island. During the fiscal year 1975-76, the six Farm Management Consultants in Prince Edward Island reported working with 573 clients. Each consultant in Prince Edward Island has worked with an average of approximately 96 clients this year.

A study conducted by the Small Farm Development Program indicated that, based on 1973 data, the potential clientele of the program approached 2,600 in New Brunswick, 2,400 in Nova Scotia and 2,000 in Prince Edward Island. Farm Management Consultants may provide services to any of these farmers.

THE CONSTITUTION OF CANADA

CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN THE PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA AND THE FIRST MINISTERS OF THE PROVINCES ON THE SUBJECT OF PATRIATION—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Eugene A. Forsey rose pursuant to notice:

That he will call the attention of the Senate to the correspondence between the Prime Minister of Canada and the First Ministers of the provinces on the subject of the patriation of the Constitution of Canada.

[Translation]

Honourable senators, I would have preferred to deliver at least most of my speech in French, lest I be accused of being an Anglo-Saxon bigot or prejudiced in any way whatever, but I shall refrain for two reasons: first, because of the inadequacy of my French, second, because the English translation of most of the small speeches I have made until now in this Chamber, in my so-called French, has been very poor. Too often the English translation has been so dreadful, so lamentable that I feared my English-speaking fellow citizens would say: "Well, the poor old man, we already knew he was also unable to speak French correctly but now we know he is unable to deliver a speech in good English". And I do not want my English-speaking colleagues to believe that I have become completely stupid.

This is why I will deliver at least most of my speech in English. Not only will it be clearer but also more pleasant for everybody, whether French- or English-speaking.

[English]

The first thing I want to say about this proposal, which the Prime Minister has advanced for the patriation of our Constitution, is I think we can take it for granted that nearly everyone in this country is in favour of patriation. I was perhaps rash enough to say, in a television question and answer discussion, that I thought everybody was in favour of it, and I was astounded to receive a number of letters berating me in strong terms for having made this sweeping assertion. But I am inclined to think that I was not going much beyond the facts.

Certainly, to the best of my belief, all parties in this country have been in favour of patriation of the Constitution for a very long time. We have, of course, made, and I think with the general approval of all parties, a series of efforts to achieve this over, now, very nearly half a century.

The second thing that I want to say is that contrary to what appears to be the belief of some enthusiasts on this subject, I think the terms of patriation are important. I had to listen to a discussion elsewhere, not among senators but among some other people, where there was a tendency to treat the subject with what seemed to me levity and frivolity, to say that it did not really matter what the terms of patriation were, that this was a great symbolic gesture like the adoption of the new flag a few years ago, and it would be universally popular, and there was no use bothering about trifling objections raised by lawyers or political scientists or other lower forms of pond life, in the opinion, apparently, of these gentry.

I am not prepared to subscribe to that. I think the question of patriation of the Constitution, like the question of revision of the Constitution, like the question of adopting a new Constitution, is of extreme importance and that the form which it takes is also of great importance.

Some years ago I expressed this view in terms which I shall venture to quote:

The first basic fact we must get clear is that our existing Constitution is not a piece of old furniture, or an old top hat, or a Victorian system of plumbing. It is something which grew out of the needs of the pre-Confederation colonies, which gave us life as a people, which has shaped our life as a people, which has adapted itself to our changing needs as a people. It has not remained what it was in 1867. It has grown, in some respects almost out of all recognition: a little by formal amendment; much by judicial interpretation; most of all, perhaps, by the development of new habits, new customs, new "conventions," new administrative arrangements, especially inter-governmental arrangements. Perhaps it now needs further formal amendment. But let us never forget that, because a constitution is what it is, pervading and shaping the lives of every human being in the community, changing it by formal amendment is an immensely serious business. It is not like getting a new hair-do, or growing a beard, or buying new furniture or new clothes, or putting in a new bathroom. It is more like marriage—

In the words of the Anglican Prayer Book.

—"not by any to be enterprised, nor taken in hand, unadvisedly, lightly, or wantonly... but reverently, discretely, advisedly, soberly, and in the fear of God." What we are dealing with in constitutional change is not paper or things. It is human lives.

● (2040)

Having said that, I want to make a preliminary observation before discussing specific points in the proposals which the Prime Minister has laid before the first ministers of the provinces. I want to say at once that I do so with considerable diffidence, conscious as always, I hope, of the fact that I am not learned in the law and that this chamber contains a considerable number of eminent lawyers for whose knowledge and experience and insight I have the most profound respect.

[Senator Forsey.]

I ventured to suggest in a letter which I sent to a certain number of my colleagues that it would be better, perhaps, if this subject were taken up by one of these gentlemen learned in the law, or by our colleague Senator Neiman, a lady learned in the law, for that matter, and that I should be perfectly prepared simply to sit and applaud, possibly to put in a small footnote here or there, if I felt that something had been left out, something of importance, or that some statement had been made which in my judgment, was open to question. As I did not get any volunteers I decided that I should go ahead and raise the question myself. But I hope it will be understood that I do so with due diffidence and with due humility.

I am not going to take up a position on any of the matters in question, but rather to raise questions, to raise doubts which have come up in my mind, possibly simply because of my limited knowledge. I shall be asking for light; I shall be asking for explanations; I shall be asking for reassurances; and I very much hope that the learned lawyers in the house, who are so eminently qualified to cast further light on this and perhaps to give reassurance or perhaps merely to underline doubts in some cases, will take an active and vigorous part in the debate which I hope will follow.

Now, the first substantive point that I want to raise is the question of the degree to which the provinces should be consulted as to this amending action, this patriation of the Constitution, or the degree to which their consent should be sought. Most of the amendments which have been made to the British North America Act since 1867 have been made without even consulting the provinces. The provinces, to the best of my belief, were never consulted until the Dominion-Provincial Conference of 1906 on the revision of the statutory subsidies provided by the British North America Act to the provinces. On that occasion British Columbia balked or jibbed and wanted a change, if I remember correctly, in the figures which the others were prepared to agree to. Nonetheless, the Parliament of Canada went ahead, by joint address from the two houses, and asked for the amendment. British Columbia made representations in London and succeeded in getting the words "final and definitive settlement" of the question removed from the amending act. It did not succeed in getting any alteration in the substance of the amendment, but it did succeed in getting those words deleted, without, I should think, very much practical effect, because the words "final and definitive" in relation to provincial subsidies are surely what Dr. Johnson said of second marriages: "a triumph of hope over experience."

Since 1930, however, every amendment which has been made to the British North America Act which directly affects the provinces—and I speak subject to correction, but this is what I believe—every amendment directly touching the provinces has in fact been asked for by the two houses of the Parliament of Canada only after the provinces have been consulted and have given their unanimous consent, or, in the case of the amendment returning the natural resources to the Western provinces, the consent of the governments and legislatures of the provinces concerned. Other amendments which did not directly touch the provinces—though one of them, the act which is now Section 91, head I of the British North America Act, was considered by the provinces, some of the provinces at least, to affect them very profoundly, though indirectly—other amendments which did not directly touch the provinces have been passed simply on address of both houses of the Canadian Parliament to the British Parliament. The provinces have not been consulted and certainly have not consented.

Whether that establishes a constitutional convention, that on any amendment directly affecting the provinces unanimous consent of the provinces is constitutionally necessary, is, I think, open to some dispute. My own habit has been for some years to say that I thought it did establish such a convention, but some very good constitutional lawyers have remonstrated with me and have said that they don't think that that is so. And they have not only said, in effect, that the period over which this custom has developed is too short to establish a constitutional convention, but they have remonstrated also on the ground that it is really contrary to common sense that amendments desired by the overwhelming majority of Canadians should be subject to a veto by a province, let us say like Prince Edward Island or my native province of Newfoundland. And I hope nobody will say that I am anti the Atlantic provinces. They can scarcely say that of somebody who is the fifth generation born in Newfoundland and is part Nova Scotian and whose roots are nearly all in the Atlantic provinces, apart from some Quebec ancestors of whom I am very proud. But it does seem, on the face of it, somewhat absurd that if an amendment is generally desired by the overwhelming majority of the country it should be possible for one small province to interpose a veto, an absolute veto, and say, "Never, never, never. Only over the dead body of this province will this pass."

Well, there is, then, as the Prime Minister says in his letter to the first ministers, room for some difference of opinion about whether a convention as to the unanimous consent of the provinces is now part of the custom, the usage, the habit part of our Constitution; but there is certainly a very widespread opinion that in fact the provinces should all consent to amendments, and especially perhaps to a patriation amendment, one which would bring the whole process of amendment into Canada. I emphasize the words "the whole process" because, of course, a very large part of our Constitution is now legally, I think, amendable by an ordinary act of the Parliament of Canada. For instance, it would be perfectly possible to abolish the monarchy by an ordinary act of the Parliament of Canada, just as easily as we amend the Food and Drugs Act or the Criminal Code. It would be perfectly possible to abolish the Senate by an ordinary act of the Parliament of Canada in strict law, I think. I speak subject to correction, of course. Now, I don't say that that would be advisable, wise or constitutional in the British sense, but I do say that at present there is, as far as I can see, no legal impediment to an act of the Parliament of Canada abolishing the monarchy or abolishing the Senate or making any kind of change that the Parliament of Canada sees fit in the constitution of the Senate. After all, we have, in fact, twice since Section 91, head 1 came into effect in 1949, made alterations in the constitution of the Senate: first, by imposing the 75 year rule, and, second, by providing seats in this house for the Northwest Territories and the Yukon.

But there are six classes of subjects of immense importance which still cannot be changed without a formal act of the British Parliament, even though the British Parliament always acts simply as a rubber stamp for what has been presented to it as the express wish of the two houses of the Parliament of Canada.

• (2050)

The question that arises, of course, is, upon what grounds will the two houses of the Parliament of Canada agree to make a request of the British Parliament for an amending act? This question, I think, is of prime importance in considering this whole matter of patriation.

Should we proceed with patriation without the consent of all the provinces? I do not think anybody wants to do this, but apparently the Prime Minister, at a pinch, is prepared to go ahead in spite of the objections of one or more provinces.

Senator Asselin: Impossible!

Senator Forsey: Senator Asselin shakes his head, but I think this has been made fairly clear. The Prime Minister is going to make one final attempt to get the consent of all, but he intimated at that Liberal convention in Quebec that he was prepared, at a pinch, to go ahead without the consent of all the provinces.

Senator Walker: May I ask the honourable senator a question?

Senator Forsey: May I finish the sentence first, Senator Walker?

I think the Prime Minister perhaps adapted for his use the famous phrase of one of his predecessors: "Not necessarily unilaterally, but unilaterally if necessary."

Senator Walker:

Senator Walker: What I was going to ask was, would it not depend on what province is holding out as to whether the Prime Minister would do this?

Senator Forsey: As far as I can tell, and from what I have heard—and I have no official information on this—it is probably at least two provinces; but I do not know. I understand the Province of Quebec would like to lay down certain pre-conditions for its consent to a patriation amendment, and I have heard that the Province of Alberta, also, has strong views about one particular matter; but I have no official knowledge of either of these possibilities. In one case I have only newspaper reports, in the other I have only rumours, and I should not like to base anything substantial on either of those two sources. But the question of how far the provinces should come into this thing, and how far their unanimous consent should be regarded as necessary, is one for the careful consideration of this house, which, under the Constitution, has always been supposed to have a special care for the interests of the provinces.

The second substantive point I want to make is that under all three options proposed by the Prime Minister in his letters to the first ministers of the provinces, unanimous consent of the provinces would be required before any substantive change could be made. The first of the options proposes simple patriation, and I am afraid the word "simple" there is as deceptive as it turned out to be in the historic case which Senator Laird and most of the rest of us perhaps recall.

Simple patriation, which, as I understand it, would be simply—and there I go, you see, using that fatal word “simply”; shall I say “merely”—the renunciation by the British Parliament of all jurisdiction over Canada in the future, would involve, in effect, an amendment or a series of amendments of the Statute of Westminster. Then the Constitution would be patriated and the power to amend would reside entirely in this country; but the “patriation act”, if I may call it that, would contain a clause saying that no change should be made without the consent of the legislatures of all the provinces. That, as I understand it, is the first option.

The second option is that the patriation act should contain what I might describe as the formula in the Victoria charter, plus and minus. It is not simply the Victoria formula—and I shall come back to that rather later.

Incidentally, this may turn out to be, like a speech of mine on the Constitution that I made some years ago, a serial performance, because I do not want to weary honourable senators tonight, and I do not want to keep people away from watching the hockey game.

An Hon. Senator: It is over.

Senator Forsey: I do not know whether it is over or not, and I do not want to speak to an empty house.

The second option provides, as I said a moment ago, for patriation with the Victoria formula, plus or minus, or plus and minus, one might say more accurately; but with that formula not to come into effect until all the provinces have given their consent.

The third option is patriation with the Victoria formula, plus a considerable amount, and minus something, but, again, with the formula not to come into effect until all the provinces have given their consent.

I want to raise the question of whether it is desirable that we should write into a text of fundamental constitutional law a provision that any single province can totally block any future amendments. The Prime Minister, in one of his letters, speaks of a period during which it would be impossible to move without unanimous consent and says that he hopes it would not be a long period. Well, perhaps it is the difference in our ages which makes me less optimistic than the Prime Minister. It seems to me that experience has demonstrated pretty clearly that every time we come in sight of the promised land of patriation, one or more provinces will say, “Well, we might agree if certain pre-conditions are first satisfied.” I am afraid that this may be an infinite regression. Even assuming that there is already a constitutional usage, or convention, or practice, or custom, that amendments directly affecting the provinces will not take place without unanimous consent, that means, as I have put it elsewhere, that we may be stuck in the mud now, and that it may be very difficult for us to move without unanimous consent; but there is always, at least, the theoretical possibility that the rest of the country might be so extraordinarily avid for some particular amendment that the mere opposition of a single province, like my own native province of Newfoundland, would be deemed insufficient to block the whole thing. But if we write this absolute veto for every single province into a text of fundamental constitutional law, and I emphasize the word “law”, then we shall be stuck, not in mud, but in a block of solid cement. At least, that is my fear.

[Senator Forsey.]

It is possible that events may show that the public mind has become much more flexible on this, and that the provincial governments have become much more flexible than they have been in the past; but I am not very optimistic about it. I think this is another thing that we need to consider rather carefully before we take the plunge. I have heard some people say, “I’m in favour of patriation at all costs.” Well, I am not in favour of patriation at all costs. Valuable as patriation may be, desirable as it may be, I think it is possible to pay too high a price for it. I think we should look at it very carefully, and should make our decision on the matter only with our eyes wide open, having weighed all the risks and all the difficulties, and arrived at a rational conclusion, which may well be that the risks are worth taking, but which also may be that on the whole the present situation is working out reasonably well in practice, and that therefore it might be desirable not to proceed further if part of the price is the legal, constitutional, fundamental condition that every province must consent to every amendment, or even the formula for amendment.

I now want to look at each of the options in turn. The first one is, of course, relatively simple to deal with—and I emphasize “relatively simple”—because it says that the whole process of amendment should be transferred to Canada with nothing further happening until the provinces have all consented. To quote precisely:

● (2100)

—one could provide in the Address to the Queen that amendment of those parts of the constitution not now amendable in Canada could be made on unanimous consent of Parliament and the legislature—

I think that is a misprint for “legislatures.”

—until a permanent formula is found and established.

Then he goes on and admits that:

In theory this approach would introduce a rigidity which does not now exist, since at present it is the federal Parliament alone which goes to Westminster, and the degree of consultation of or consent by the provinces is a matter only of convention about which there can be differences of view.

I think there is nothing much more to say about that than I have already said, that it seems to me to introduce a quite extraordinary degree of legal rigidity which does not now exist. Whether that is desirable seems to me to be somewhat questionable.

The second option which the Prime Minister, I think justly, calls “preferable” would be, he says:

—to include in the action a provision that could lead to the establishment of a permanent and more flexible amending procedure. That could be done by detailing such a procedure in our Joint Address and having it included in the British legislation as an enabling provision that would come into effect when and only when it had received the formal approval of the legislatures of all the provinces. The obvious amending procedure—

He goes on:

—to set forth would be the one agreed to at Victoria in application to those parts of our constitution not now amendable in Canada.

And he refers to Part I of the "Draft Proclamation" which he attached to this.

This could be with or without modification respecting the four western provinces.

There has been some suggestion that the requirement of the Victoria formula for the consent of two Western provinces with at least half of the population of the four would not be necessary. Some people have said, "Why not just make it two of the four Western provinces as the formula did for the Atlantic provinces—two of the Atlantic provinces?"

Well, now, I said this involved the Victoria formula "plus or minus." The Victoria formula provided that amendments which were not now possible under the terms of 91(1), with certain exceptions which I shall come to in a moment, that amendments of this kind could be made by an address from both houses of the Parliament of Canada with the consent of the legislature of any province which had at the moment, or ever had had, 25 per cent of the total population of the country, and it was very carefully phrased so that if, for example, Ontario's proportion of the population of Canada ever dropped below 25 per cent, Ontario would still have a veto. If, on the other hand, the population of Alberta or British Columbia ever rose above 25 per cent of the total, then it would automatically acquire a veto for itself. But this, in effect, at the moment, would have meant that any amendment under the Victoria formula would have required the assent of the Province of Ontario and the assent of the Province of Quebec, and then, the formula went on, and the assent of the legislatures of two of the Atlantic provinces and the legislature of two of the four Western provinces with half the population of the four.

But the Victoria formula also included a provision, an elaborate provision, respecting certain features of the Constitution which can now be amended simply by action of this Parliament, without any reference to Great Britain. It would have brought under this elaborate system of vetoes for Ontario, Quebec, two Atlantic provinces and two Western provinces—it would have brought under that the position and functions of the Queen, the Governor General, the Lieutenant Governors and certain features of the constitution of the Senate. These things would have been taken out, in effect, of the present 91(1) and put into a separate category where they would have required the assent not merely of the Parliament of Canada but of a number of the legislatures of the provinces, in effect, of six provinces including the two largest ones, two Western and two Eastern. That disappears from Part I of this proposal. So that in effect if the country, if the provinces, if everybody accepts option 2, we should still be leaving the position of the monarchy, the position of the Lieutenant Governors, the position of the Governor General, the position of the constitution of the Senate, wholly at the mercy, legally, of the Parliament of Canada. This, I think, is an important difference from the Victoria formula. Whether it is an improvement or otherwise is a matter of opinion but some people who, like myself, are ardently in favour of the preservation of the monarchy welcomed that particular feature of the Victoria formula because, we said, it makes the monarchy safer. Some of us who are ardently in favour of the preservation of the Senate, whether in its existing or some reformed form—and I must confess that most of the reforms proposed for the Senate, it seems to me, would make it worse rather than better—some of us, however, who felt that there is value in having a second chamber, an effective second chamber, welcomed the safeguards provided by the Victoria formula for the existence and constitution of the Senate and felt that it was desirable that changes in a matter so important to the whole country and particularly, perhaps, to the provinces, should not take place without the broad general consensus which the Victoria formula would have provided.

But if you get option 2, that particular safeguard for these particular institutions, which some people, of course, would like to get rid of completely and other people would like to preserve, and yet others would like to modify in some way, that particular safeguard disappears, and I think this is a point that is worth noting and is worth studying.

Perhaps it is desirable. Perhaps it is even, if not intrinsically desirable, a necessary part of the price which we have to pay for that patriation which we all hope for.

Now, option 3 is the Victoria formula coming into effect only upon the unanimous consent of all the provincial legislatures—the Victoria formula with that safeguard I have just mentioned left out, and with a series of other things written in, some of which were agreed to at Victoria and some of which were not. I think it is important to emphasize the differences from the Victoria formula because an argument is often made that this should be all perfectly easy because at Victoria all the provinces agreed to the Victoria formula, to the Victoria charter, except that Quebec said, "Before we are prepared to give our final and definitive approval to this, we want certain substantive changes made." I think that at the time the chief one, at all events, was with regard to certain features of social security, a matter which has since been adjusted, as I understand it, by administrative arrangements and legislative arrangements between the Government of Canada and the Government of Quebec and the Parliament of Canada and the Legislature of Quebec.

So we are not being asked now to incorporate the Victoria formula even with all the various features which were included in the Victoria charter in addition to the specific formula of amendment. This time we are being asked to consider adopting the Victoria amendment formula minus those particular safeguards I mentioned which would narrow the scope of section 99(1) with, however, also the provisions of the Victoria formula respecting the Supreme Court of Canada. I think these are identical with those which appear in the Victoria charter. That is called Part II of the draft proclamation dealing with the Supreme Court of Canada. I am not frightfully enamoured, myself, of the very elaborate procedure which is laid down there, but it is something which I would certainly be prepared to take if it is part of the price of getting "patriation." It comes a little bit, I think, within the celebrated English countryman's phrase: "It pleases 'e and it don't hurt Oi." It pleases some who want this thing done and I don't think it would substantially interfere with the effectiveness of the Supreme Court of Canada.

● (2110)

Some people are nervous about this, because they say it writes into the Constitution the fixed number of nine judges—I have heard this from Westerners particularly and I think it might also come from some critics in the Atlantic provinces—it writes into the Constitution the figure of nine judges. It writes in the figure of three judges from the province of Quebec and I don't think anybody would have any objection to that. But, say some Western critics, this means that there are, by custom, always three from Ontario and probably will be in the future, so this means, in effect, there would be only three left over for the Western provinces and the Atlantic provinces together. The same critics say that some years hence, when the balance of population has shifted considerably, the Western provinces may have a much more important, a much larger proportion of the total population of the country, the Supreme Court may have a great deal more to do and it might be desirable to increase the size of the Supreme Court so as to provide an extra judge or so to be chosen from the Western provinces and the Atlantic provinces and this would become very difficult. Now, of course, we can increase the size of the Supreme Court by an ordinary act of Parliament. That rigidity which would be introduced here may be desirable, or may be undesirable, again. That is a matter of opinion, but I think the point that is made by some of the Western critics is perhaps worthy of consideration.

Now then, the third part of the draft proclamation, and this is a very important and essential part of the third option, is headed Language Rights. I think a careful comparison of the provisions of Part III with the corresponding provisions of the Victoria charter will show that there have been some important changes which deserve, perhaps, very careful consideration. The language rights embodied in the Victoria charter—and I'm sorry that I forgot to bring down with me my copy of it—are limited in certain ways in which they do not appear to be limited in Part III of the draft proclamation. I should particularly point out, I think, that Part III, in articles 31, 32 and 33, would appear on the face of it, perhaps, to make some change in section 133 of the British North America Act, which at present provides for certain limited but important rights for the English and French languages in the Parliament of Canada and the courts set up by the Parliament of Canada and in the legislature and courts of the province of Quebec. But if you look at article 31, for example, you now find:

A person has the right to use English and French in the debates of the Parliament of Canada.

Well, that is in section 133 already. Article 32 provides that:

The statutes and the records and journals of the Parliament of Canada shall be printed and published in English and French; and both versions of such statutes are authoritative.

That also is simply a re-enactment of section 133. Article 33 provides that:

A person has the right to use English and French in giving evidence before, or in any pleading or process in the Supreme Court of Canada and any courts established by the Parliament of Canada, and to require that all documents and judgments issuing from such courts be in English or French.

Well, that is simply a slightly different form, I think not essentially a different form, of section 133 again. But in all these three articles the part of section 133 which deals with the legislature and the courts of Quebec is omitted. Now, I don't know, not being a lawyer I can't say, whether this would be taken by the courts to indicate that articles 31, 32 and 33 supersede section 133 of the British North America Act, are considered to amend it, or whether they would leave section 133 in full force and effect; I simply don't know.

I should, perhaps, have prefaced what I was going to say about both Part III, Language Rights and Part IV, Protection of the French Language and Culture by saying that I am most heartily in favour of the preservation and development of the French language and culture. I take second place to no one, certainly no one of English speech and I think no one of either language, in my desire to see that end accomplished. But, on the other hand, I am a little nervous—and this perhaps is where my past history as a member of the English-speaking minority in Quebec for some 16 years shows—I am a little disturbed by the possibility that the guarantees which now exist in section 133 for the rights of the English language in the province of Quebec, I am a little nervous lest those rights may be abridged by articles 31, 32 and 33 of the draft proclamation. Now, that particular uneasiness, that disquiet, may be completely without foundation. I rather think I see signs that Senator Flynn is about to rise and tell me that I am talking through my hat, that there is no danger, but I would just like to be sure, and this is one of the reasons why I hope that distinguished lawyers like Senator Flynn and a variety of others whom I might mention—I mentioned Senator Flynn merely because I thought he showed signs of rising to his feet to shake his head in magisterial fashion at me and tell me that it was high time I refrained from exposing my ignorance—but various distinguished lawyers in this house, I hope, will give this their attention and give me the reassurance I should like to have. I doubt that it is the intention of the government to abridge in any way by this draft proclamation the rights of the English language in the province of Quebec, but I should simply like to be reassured.

There are other details in this Part III dealing with language rights which are somewhat different from those in the Victoria charter and, I think, go somewhat beyond the rather restrictive provisions of the corresponding part of the Victoria charter but I shall not attempt to go into those now. They are rather technical and they would probably be much better dealt with by somebody learned in the law and I hope that if the Senate decides to send this question to a committee, as I hope it will, that matter would be given attention and that the details will be scrutinized with great care.

Then we come to a further addition to the Victoria charter, Part IV, Protection of the French Language and Culture. Now, as I said a moment ago, no one could be more heartily in favour of this than I am, but at the same time I think it may be necessary to take a rather careful look at the precise terms which are put down here in this particular part, because you find that it says:

The Parliament of Canada, in the exercise of powers allotted to it under the Constitution of Canada, and the Government of Canada, in the exercise of powers conferred upon it by the Constitution of Canada and by laws enacted by the Parliament of Canada, shall be guided by, among other considerations for the welfare and advantage of the people of Canada, the knowledge that a fundamental purpose underlying the federation of Canada is to ensure the preservation and the full development—

“The full development”; note those words. The article continues:

—of the French language and the culture—

Note the word “culture.”

—based on it—

I think that the words “development” and “culture” are perhaps somewhat vague. I should like to see a certain consideration of that. I should like to see perhaps, if it is possible, “certaines précisions.” I can't think of a suitable English equivalent, perhaps “more precise wording,” which would be less likely perhaps to give rise to frivolous and vexatious litigation.

● (2120)

The proposal goes on:

—and neither the Parliament nor the Government of Canada, in the exercise of their respective powers, shall act in a manner that will adversely affect the presentation and development of the French language and the culture based on it.

Again you have that word “development” and the word “culture.”

In the French version the corresponding word for development is “l'épanouissement de la langue française et de la culture dont elle constitue l'assise.”

I am not sure that “development” quite conveys as broad a meaning as “l'épanouissement.” “L'épanouissement” suggests to my mind—and here another of my failings shows, my inadequate knowledge of French—“l'épanouissement” suggests to my mind “flowering” and “expansion.” I don't know. Perhaps this is merely my ignorance again, and I look for light and explanation and reassurance.

If there is any vagueness in these terms, then it is possible, as has been suggested to me by a very experienced lawyer—a member of this house, who may, in fact, choose to say something about this himself later—it has been suggested to me that there is a possibility that almost any act of the Parliament of Canada might be challenged on the ground that it adversely affected, perhaps simply by omission, the development, the flowering of the French culture—a very broad term and not easily defined, I think—in Canada.

I am as anxious as anybody, I repeat again—and I don't want to be accused of being a mere Anglo-Saxon bigot—I am anxious as anybody to see the preservation and development of the French language and culture. But I want to be quite sure that we are not doing something which will mean an extraordinary burden upon the courts of the country in deciding a great many cases which really are not of very substantial importance but which could be a vehicle for the exhibition of the strong, not to say fanatical, views of certain small groups of people.

I merely mention this as a possible difficulty which might arise, and one which I think should be looked at carefully so that we know exactly what it is, or as nearly as possible exactly what it is, we are committing ourselves to.

The other parts of option III, the part on regional disparities and the part on federal-provincial agreements seem to me to be unobjectionable. The one on regional disparities is substantially the same, I think, as what appeared in the Victoria charter. It is a little differently worded. I am not prepared to say that the differences will make any real difference. I do not think they do, but they may.

The one on federal-provincial agreements is new and, I think, desirable. I think it is all to the good that there should be some specific provision for federal-provincial agreements, written agreements, if need be, and that these should be recognized. They exist now, they are important now, but recognition of them in the text of fundamental law can, I think, be useful and in no way, as the thing is drawn, limiting to the powers either of the provinces or of the dominion.

One final and very minor point. In the list, the schedule, which is explicitly declared to be “not final”—“not” spelled with three capital letters—“and subject to confirmation,” there is something that I don't understand. Once again it may be simply that I have never had the advantage of a legal education. But you find that in the list of enactments which are to be considered part of the Constitution of Canada, five acts which, as far as I know, are completely spent. I don't know why we should include in a list of enactments constituting the Constitution of Canada five acts which are spent. Perhaps there is some technical legal reason for this. I don't know.

But here we have, for example, the British North America Act, 1907. Well, that's gone by the board long ago, as far as I know. Certainly it has no practical importance now, and I should have thought that we have long since got rid of the particular subsidies which were provided by the act of 1907. Perhaps we haven't. Perhaps they are still there, submerged beneath a mass of conditional grants and equalization grants, and so forth and so on.

The second one that is in, however, it seems to me, is clearly completely spent: the British North America Act of 1915, which provided for six senators from each of the four Western provinces.

That is there. It seems to me that that may also have become superseded, because we have since dealt with the constitution of the Senate and we can do anything we want to with it. That, however, is perhaps a doubtful point.

Then there is the British North America Act, 1943. Here I feel myself on much stronger ground because that act merely postponed the redistribution of seats in the House of Commons. The redistribution was postponed and several redistributions have since taken place. I don't know why that should still be in there.

The British North America Act, 1946 merely established a new formula for redistribution of seats in the House of Commons, and we have since established yet another formula by the act of 1952, which also appears here. We have got rid of that and established more recently still another and even more complicated formula. So I can't really see why these last three acts at least, which are certainly, as far as I can see, completely spent, should be left in there as constituting part of the Constitution of Canada. The act of 1907 perhaps is still in effect. The act of 1915 perhaps is the sole basis for the presence of the six senators from each of the four Western provinces here. But these last three, I can't see any reason for putting in there at all. But I speak again subject to correction.

There, honourable senators, are the words of doubt, of hesitation, of disquiet, of question which I wanted to lay before the Senate, in the earnest hope that people much more competent than I will deal with these and whatever other questions suggest themselves to their minds—I know there are other substantial criticisms which have been made of the three options in the proposal of the Prime Minister—the hope that others in the Senate better qualified will take an active part in this debate, and that the debate itself will be of use in apprising the general public of exactly what is involved in these proposals.

That hope, as far as the general public is concerned, is somewhat muted by the fact that I think the Press Gallery is, as so often and too often, simply empty, and it is quite possible that none of these points will get any notice whatever in the press or by the general public on that account.

The fact that my observations, as such, will perish unwept, unhonoured and unsung is of no importance whatever; but the fact that some of these considerations, which in themselves, I think, have some point, may not reach a wider audience, is, I think, regrettable, and it causes me once again to reflect sadly and sourly on the neglect to which we are subjected in this chamber by the press of this country.

Senator Deschatelets: I hope Senator Forsey will not mind my asking him a question. It has to do with option number I. I understand that he would oppose unilateral patriation, at least in principle. I missed the reason why he would oppose unilateral patriation.

Senator Forsey: Would I uphold it?

Senator Deschatelets: I understood you to say that you would not like it if we were to proceed with unilateral patriation. I did not understand the reason why you would oppose it. Is there any constitutional objection to this, or simply the fact that you would not like something to be done without the consent of the provinces?

Senator Forsey: I didn't really intend to say that I opposed it. I was raising questions about it. I am not one of those who feel that the provincial rights are the be all and end all of our Constitution, and I am prepared to keep an open mind on this.

● (2130)

To be perfectly frank, I should say that my position would be that if, let's say, one small province jibbed, balked, and refused to go along, and the Prime Minister and the government then brought into the two houses an address asking for one or other of these options to be adopted, I should be, I think, prepared to go along.

But frankly, if the proposal is to go ahead in the teeth of strong opposition from the Province of Quebec, or the Province of Ontario, or, let's say, a couple of the Western or Atlantic provinces, I should feel more doubtful about it, particularly, perhaps, if the objection came from the Province of Quebec.

But I am cautious even about this, because, after all, I am not a citizen of Quebec; I am not French-speaking, and I should be inclined to defer there to the view of Quebec senators, and especially French-speaking Quebec senators. If the bulk of French-speaking senators from Quebec presented with a proposition like this said, "We think the people of Quebec are in favour of this. We do not think the provincial government's objections are based upon the popular will in Quebec," then I should not want to say that my French Canadian colleagues here from the province of Quebec were talking through their hats; I should not want to oppose the view which they would take. But I just feel doubtful about this. Something, of course, would depend on how strong the opposition of the Government of Quebec and the Legislature of Quebec might be to the proposal. It is possible that they would say, "Well, any one of these options, if you put in this sine qua non of unanimous consent of the provinces before anything happens, any one of these we can swallow. We perhaps don't like it very much, but if you have unanimous consent in there, then that gives us all the safeguards we want. We can oppose until kingdom come."

I cannot give a very definite and specific answer, for the reasons I have tried to sketch out.

I think, too, much would depend on the particular circumstances and the particular attitude of the people most directly concerned. Apparently, the Prime Minister, who certainly knows far more about Quebec than I shall ever know, is convinced that in certain circumstances it might be possible and proper to go ahead, even if the Government of the Province of Quebec, the Legislature of the Province of Quebec, objected. Well, I am not prepared to say that the Prime Minister is mistaken. I don't know. It is quite possible that most French Canadian senators from Quebec would say he is mistaken. I don't know, and I don't propose to assume the wisdom of Solomon in deciding between the contending parties to any such dispute. I merely raise the question and the difficulties.

I should add, as this gives me the opportunity, that one other thing I ought to have called attention to is the provision in the Victoria formula with regard to the Senate's part in these proceedings, which I think perhaps needs a careful look again. It is possible that the suspensive veto there proposed is for rather too short a time.

I am sorry to add that as a postscript, and perhaps contrary to the rules, in reply to the question which Senator Deschatelets asked me.

On motion of Senator Langlois, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, May 5, 1976

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

of the Department of Agriculture Act, Chapter A-10, R.S.C., 1970.

ROYAL ASSENT

NOTICE

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that the following communication had been received:

GOVERNMENT HOUSE
OTTAWA

MAY 5, 1976

Madam,

I have the honour to inform you that the Right Honourable Bora Laskin, P.C., Chief Justice of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber, today, the 5th day of May, at 5.45 p.m., for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to certain bills.

I have the honour to be,
Madam,
Your obedient servant,
Edmond Joly
de Lotbinière
Administrative Secretary to the Governor General

The Honourable

The Speaker of the Senate,
Ottawa.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report, dated March 1976, of the Law Reform Commission of Canada entitled "Family Law", pursuant to section 18 of the Law Reform Commission Act, Chapter 23 (1st Supplement), R.S.C., 1970, together with explanatory notes.

Report on the Quinquennial Actuarial Examination of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (Dependants) Pension Fund as at March 31, 1976, together with Treasury Board Order, dated April 15, 1976, pursuant to section 56(3) and 57(3) of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Pension Continuation Act, Chapter R-10, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1975, pursuant to section 6

CITIZENSHIP BILL

SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) for second reading of Bill C-20, respecting citizenship.

Hon. Eugene A. Forsey: Honourable senators, I am sorry to rise again so soon after my marathon effort of last night, in which, incidentally, I realized, on reflection, that I committed two frightful legal errors. Indeed, I recognized them part way through what I was saying and tried to correct them, but the correction came a little late.

I am sorry to rise again, and more particularly on what is really very much a lawyers' bill. I have only a few general observations of my own to make on the bill, but there are a number of points in it on which I have taken the advice of a very competent lawyer, to which I should like to draw the attention of the house in order that other and better informed members, notably lawyers, may reflect upon them before the bill goes to committee and be ready to raise such questions as they see fit on the matters which I shall draw attention to.

I may add, the things I want to draw attention to in this regard are mainly matters which have arisen out of the deliberations of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, so that I should perhaps plead guilty to a special interest, though I think not a disqualifying interest, in this particular piece of legislation.

The first thing I want to say is that I am inclined to think that both Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) and Senator Yuzyk, in dealing with this bill, were tending to follow the verses, by whom I can't remember:

Be to her virtues very kind;

Be to her faults a little blind.

● (1410)

I think they were very kind to its virtues; it had many virtues, and I entirely agree with what they said in this respect. However, I think that a good deal of rather careful consideration will have to be given to this bill in committee, and it seems to me not impossible that we shall have to send it back to the House of Commons with proposed amendments. However, that may be a rash hope. The wish may be father to the thought.

Incidentally, I am inclined to agree with what Senator Yuzyk, if I heard him correctly, said about shortening the period during which a landed immigrant can qualify for citizenship from five years to three years. I do not have very strong views on this subject, but I am a little inclined to think that perhaps, as he said, and for the reasons which he gave, this may be rather too short a period.

I am also very glad to see that certain foolish, and I think destructive, amendments which some people in the other place apparently had in mind—whether they actually moved them or not I don't know—do not appear in the bill that has come to us. There were some proposals that I heard which suggested that some people wanted to put into this act some things borrowed from the United States, which in my judgment have no business in it at all. I confess to a certain prejudice in this respect, on the whole. That something is done in the United States is no recommendation to me, but quite the reverse. I regard any such proposals with the greatest circumspection and the greatest suspicion, and it has to be proved to me with chapter and verse, with cogent argument, that anything borrowed from the United States is a good idea. I am willing to admit that they have some occasionally, just as with certain newspapers one can say that occasionally they may make statements which are true. One cannot take it as axiomatic that a statement in a particular newspaper is necessarily false. I am thinking of one particular newspaper, from which I have suffered in the course of my career, when it misreported me in the most flagrant manner. That is by the way.

There is one other point I wanted to make generally. I am glad to see that in spite of the probable intentions of some of the people who drafted this bill I can still say, with Sir John A. Macdonald, "A British subject I was born, a British subject I will die." I remain, under this bill, a subject of the Queen, and I cannot see that anything in it prevents me from describing myself perfectly legally as a British subject. I should be very sorry to find that anything did. At any rate, I am certainly a subject of Her Majesty the Queen, the Queen of Canada. She happens also to be Queen of a lot of other countries of the Commonwealth, which, as far as I am concerned, is excellent and an additional advantage.

I am a little uneasy about a slight variation between the two oaths, a matter of punctuation. I shall come to that perhaps shortly, if I have time. I want to show a little respect for the convenience of honourable senators, and for the fact that we ought to get out of here and get to committee work at a reasonable hour.

Having said that, I want to come to the main substance of what I wish to say about this bill. In the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments we have found the most extraordinary difficulty in winking out of officials and departments information and statutory instruments, or what appear to us to be statutory instruments, which we are convinced are within our purview, and which we are convinced Parliament intends us to be able to see.

There are a number of difficulties here. One of them is, of course, that certain statutory instruments, admitted by all to be statutory instruments, we can get only by accident. They are not published anywhere in particular, unless there is a special determination by the Privy Council Office to do so. Every now and again our counsel, hunting for one thing, suddenly discovers an undoubted statutory instrument which otherwise we should never have heard of. This is one difficulty that besets us. Another difficulty is, of course—on a number of these we may be making formal reports, if we don't get matters cleared up—another difficulty which besets us is the extraordinary obscurity of the definition clause in section 2(1)(d) of the Statutory Instruments Act. I have yet to discover any lawyer who can give a clear explanation of this. Some of the official lawyers in the Privy Council Office have given us an interpretation but it is as obscure as the original definition, and also self-contradictory.

So this is a difficulty about which of course we can do nothing in dealing with legislation of this sort. We shall have to deal, if the necessity is ultimately proved, with the Statutory Instruments Act itself.

But another thing we find is that over and over again, something which appears to us in substance to be a regulation or statutory instrument is excluded from scrutiny because it does not contain certain magic words, such as the Governor in Council "may by order direct." If the magic words "by order" are left out, then the thing escapes from our grasp like the ectoplasm which the spiritualists talk about, that you can't get hold of in your hand.

Some of us, at least, very early on decided that henceforth, in looking at legislation, we should try to see that it did not contain any booby traps of this sort, and that it did not contain any drafting that would make it difficult or impossible for the committee to perform the duty which Parliament apparently intended to entrust to it.

I want to draw attention to a number of points which I think should be taken up in committee, to meet this situation. We find, for example, in clause 4 of the bill a provision that the minister may extend a period.

Clause 4, subclause (3) states:

For the purposes of paragraph 3(1)(e), a person otherwise entitled under paragraph 5(1)(b) of the former Act to become a citizen immediately before the coming into force of this Act remains so entitled—

And so on.

... in accordance with the regulations made under the former Act,

(a) within two years after the occurrence of his birth; or

(b) within such extended period as the Minister may authorize after this Act comes into force or has authorized before this Act comes into force.

Now, it appears to us that the authorization of an extension of a period would not be a statutory instrument—it appears to me, I should say, and to the counsel with whom I consulted—and it is not clear whether the minister's authorization is meant to be a general one or an independent authorization in an individual case. Apparently it is the latter because subclause 3 begins by speaking of "a person".

Now, here is a case where, if we wanted to be sure that anything done under this was a statutory instrument, it would be necessary to say, "as the minister may authorize" or we might say, "as the minister may, by statutory instrument, authorize." That is the English practice.

The reply of the officials would no doubt be that such a statutory instrument is not a statutory instrument within the meaning of section 2(1)(d) of the Statutory Instruments Act.

Then you find in clause 5, subclause (2):

The Minister shall grant citizenship (a) to any person who, not being a citizen, has been lawfully admitted to Canada for permanent residence and is the minor child of a citizen if an application for citizenship is made to the Minister by a person authorized by regulation to make the application—

It is not clear what that means, a person authorized by regulation. The general regulation-making clause, clause 26, is silent about the particular regulation required for the purpose of clause 5(2)(a). So it is not clear at all who is going to make this regulation.

I shan't go through all of these, but then you come to clause 5(4):

In order to alleviate cases of special and unusual hardship or to reward services of an exceptional value to Canada, and notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Governor in Council may, in his discretion, direct the Minister to grant citizenship to any person and, where such a direction is made, the Minister shall forthwith grant citizenship to the person named in the direction.

● (1420)

Incidentally, I have no particular objection to the substance of this subclause, because I think it may meet the case of the loss of citizenship of Mrs. Beach, about whom there has been a certain amount of dust-up in the newspapers, who apparently lost her citizenship simply because she was given wrong information by an official of the Canadian High Commissioner's office in London. I am very much hoping that this trouble will be got over by means of this new clause, if it is passed into law. If it is not, I think it will be necessary for me to introduce a private member's bill in this house in order to right the wrong which has been done to Mrs. Beach by the misinformation which she was given by an official who ought to have known better.

However, as the thing stands, under the clause, the direction which is provided for, the direction of the Governor in Council, would not be a statutory instrument. The actual enabling phrase includes no magic formula: "may... direct..." "may by order," or whatever it is, "direct". Now, to ensure that the direction is a statutory instrument it would be necessary to say "the Governor in Council may by order direct."

Then, when you get to clause 9, it is quite clear that what is proposed there would be a statutory instrument, because the magic phrase "by order of the Governor in Council with respect thereto" appears. But it is one of these cases where we do not know whether we would ever see the statutory instrument or whether we would not. It is not a statutory instrument of the kind that would require to be published. And the question arises there also why the renunciation of citizenship, which is covered by the clause, should be at the discretion of the Governor in Council. The Governor in Council may by order direct that the person ceases to be a citizen as of the date stated by the Governor in Council. One would suppose that the grant of a citizenship or a renunciation would be void ab initio.

Then clause 12 is an interesting one:

Where an application is made or a notice is given pursuant to this Act or a registration is made pursuant to section 7, it shall be made or given in such form and manner and at such place, and such evidence shall be provided and such fees shall be paid with respect thereto, as are prescribed by the Minister pursuant to this Act or by the regulations.

Well, if it is simply prescribed by regulations, then you have clause 26 which deals with that. But here you have a provision that the fees, for example, can be prescribed either by regulation or by the minister. "... such fees..." and so forth "... shall be paid..." as are prescribed by the Minister... or by the regulations."

If you look at this carefully, you will see, I think, that it is the equivalent of the phraseology which we have encountered so often in instruments arising from and authorized by votes in the supply bills and to which the committee has objected very strenuously, where we get the phrase, "according to terms and conditions prescribed by the Governor in Council." It requires Sherlock Holmes and a Philadelphia lawyer in many instances to find out what these things mean and where they come from, and you are engaged in an infinite regression very often, because one vote refers back to previous votes and they refer back to previous votes and they to previous votes, and so on ad infinitum.

This particular clause I think needs a careful look, especially as it seems to overlap with clause 26, the general regulation-making power vested in the Governor in Council.

I find that clause 27 also raises some difficulties of this sort. Clause 27 simply says:

The Minister may prescribe the forms of applications, certificates and other documents required for the purposes of this Act.

My legal adviser says to me, "Why should not the form of certificates and other documents be subject to parliamentary scrutiny?" They would be if they were in a schedule of the bill, as in the Elections Act, and the committee does scrutinize other departments' forms in large numbers; indeed, an immense load descends upon us.

Next, clause 17. This has a marginal note:

Notice to person in respect of revocation.

Then comes:

Nature of notice.

Then, in subclause (3), we have this:

A decision of the Court made under subsection (1) is final and conclusive and, notwithstanding any other Act of Parliament, no appeal lies therefrom.

It is difficult for me to see why there should be no appeal. This seems to me to be a matter of extraordinary importance to the people concerned, and I cannot imagine why it has been put in there. I hope, when the officials come before us in the committee to which, presumably, the bill will be referred, they will explain why it is necessary to have this apparently rather harsh clause put in there.

Senator Greene: Would the honourable senator permit a question? In the light of the fact that the Bill of Rights is not specifically exempted, I gather it applies; so how can the section removing appeals be applicable if the Bill of Rights applies to the bill?

Senator Forsey: I don't know. I simply think that the matter which I have raised, and on which the Honourable Senator Greene has commented, is one on which the committee might very well interrogate the minister or his officials when they appear before it.

I now come to clause 18. The marginal note is:

Declaration by Governor in Council in matters of security.

The clause is as follows:

18. (1) Notwithstanding anything in this Act, a person shall not be granted citizenship under section 5 or subsection 10(1) or be issued a certificate of renunciation under section 8 if the Governor in Council declares that to do so would be prejudicial to the security of Canada or contrary to public order in Canada.

The declaration of the Governor in Council there would not be a statutory instrument, because there is no magic formula. It does not say, "the Governor in Council by order declares." Various difficulties might arise under that.

Clause 21 is a real beauty:

Anything that is required to be done or that may be done by the Minister under this Act or the regulations may be done on his behalf without proof of the authenticity of the authorization by any person authorized by the Minister in writing to act on his behalf.

This worries me particularly, because we have found an apparently ineradicable tendency on the part of officials to resurrect, for the benefit of ministers, of the Governor in Council, and of officials, which is what it all often boils down to in the last analysis, the dispensing power which lost James II his throne. I gave some examples of this to the senior professor of constitutional law in this country, which caused him to describe the people responsible, I suppose including the government, as, "these latter day Stuarts" who are trying to get back into the hands of the executive power the power to dispense with the laws which the Bill of Rights of 1689, following the glorious revolution of 1688, declared to be gone, unlawful, illegal.

This seems to be a very sweeping power indeed, and provides for an infinity of sub-delegation. It is one thing to give delegated power—the power to make subordinate legislation—to the Governor in Council, or even to a minister—then you have some idea of where you are; but when you provide for sub-delegation piled upon sub-delegation piled upon sub-delegation, you get to the point where the Groom of the Backstairs may be making a decision, and you have no recourse, because anything done under a clause like this is automatically to be taken as the action of the minister. It may be done, as the clause says:

... on his behalf without proof of the authenticity of the authorization by any person authorized by the Minister in writing to act on his behalf.

● (1430)

So the minister can give a blanket authorization to some official who can then go ahead and do practically anything he pleases. At least, that is the way it looks, and after our experience with some of these people, we want to make assurance doubly sure, if we can, by seeing that the legislation is so drafted that the officials cannot play ducks and drakes with it and interfere with the liberties of the subject. One of our jobs in the Committee on Statutory Instruments is to prevent subordinate legislation from trenching unduly on the liberties of the subject. But if the enabling legislation is too loosely drafted, then that job becomes impossible. We simply cannot get at the thing. It is abstracted from our scrutiny and we find ourselves baffled and frustrated.

[Senator Greene.]

Now, on clause 26, the general regulations clause—and on all of these, I may add, I hope to be able if I live, as my grandmother used to say, to appear in the committee and ask suitable questions where I shall go into rather more detail—in clause 26 you find, for example, in paragraphs (a) and (b) that the Governor in Council may make regulations:

(a) prescribing the manner in which and the place at which applications and registrations are to be made and notices are to be given—

And so forth, and fixing fees. But these may be a dead letter if the minister deals with the same matter under clause 12, or if some delegate of the minister deals with the same matter under clause 12. It is very curious, and, to my mind, very careless drafting, to confer a power both upon the Governor in Council and upon the minister, an identical power to do precisely the same thing. I don't know what the issue of that is, but it does not seem to me to be good drafting.

Senator Connolly: I am sorry, senator, I lost the trend of your remarks. Would you give us the subsection to which you are referring now?

Senator Forsey: Clause 26(a) and (b) and comparing those with clause 12. Clause 12 says that the minister may prescribe fees and so forth; clause 26 says that the Governor in Council may do so, or at least so it appears to me, and it appears to me that there is an overlapping there somewhere, and I think the matter should be cleared up at some stage.

Then in clause 26, paragraph (h), we have a word of which the officials here are extremely fond and which does not appear in the British statutes at all. That is the word "respecting." The Governor in Council may make regulations "respecting the taking of the oath of citizenship". That has generally been held by those in authority over us, the officials, and I suppose, the law officers of the Crown, to confer an extraordinarily wide power. So that if you have something that says, "The Governor in Council may make regulations exempting any category or class of persons from such and such," you may suddenly be confronted with a document which says, "Joseph Leblanc"—and that was the name of one particular person actually who was exempted under something of this sort—"is hereby exempt." And when we remonstrated and said that Joseph Leblanc was not a category or class of persons, he was an individual, the answer was, "Oh, it amounts to the same thing, don't worry about it, we have the power to dispense anyway. If we can pass a general regulation, we can pass a particular one." So because "respecting" this, "respecting" that is what they rely on, here we have "respecting the taking of the oath of citizenship." It seems to me that it would be wiser, at least, to say the Governor in Council may make regulations "prescribing the manner of the taking of the oath of citizenship." Surely we are not going to give the Governor in Council power to vary the oath of citizenship? Here is a statutory oath, but if you may make regulations respecting the taking of the oath of citizenship I should be prepared to bet heavily, if I were not a non-betting, continuing Methodist, that we may get some jiggery-pokery at some future date by somebody or other twiddling and fiddling and changing the oath of citizenship. Now, whether that could be done, I don't know, but here appears to be a word which gives very wide powers, which is generally taken to give very wide powers, and it seems to me that we should be as careful as possible not to give these powers beyond what we really intend.

Well, I could go on at some length about the delegation and sub-delegation. You will find that there is in here, for example, under paragraph (d) of the same clause regulations:

providing for various criteria that may be applied to determine whether or not a person

- (i) has an adequate knowledge of one of the official languages of Canada,
- (ii) has an adequate knowledge of Canada and of the responsibilities and privileges of citizenship, or
- (iii) has a substantial connection with Canada;

That is pretty broad and I can imagine a test of the adequate knowledge of Canada which would rule out an awful lot of people. I once sat briefly and faute de mieux, because other people better qualified were not available, on a civil service board examining candidates for the post of assistant archivist. One candidate, the best one, I might add, when I said to her: "Now, can you name any of the Fathers of Confederation?", after a prolonged contemplation of the floor, where all the candidates seemed to feel that some oracle apparently resided, said "Macdonald" and I said, "Yes". This was a lady, by the way, who kept boasting all the time about being a historian. Every now and again she would say with a superior wave of the hand: "Oh, as a historian, of course; as a historian". So I said: "Yes; can you name another one?" Well, after further contemplation of the floor, consultation with the oracle, she said "Brown". I said: "Yes; can you name any others?" A long pause, then she looked rather blank and I said: "Well, perhaps that is rather a difficult question to ask you". This lady, I might add, had been teaching grade 13 Canadian history a couple of years before. I said, "That's rather, perhaps, a hard question to ask you just out of the blue like that. Let me be a little more precise: Can you name any Father of Confederation from Nova Scotia?" After prolonged contemplation of the floor she answered in a word that made my spine tingle in my capacity as being partly from Nova Scotia, "Tilley" with an upward inflection of the voice. I said, "Can you name any Father of Confederation from the Province of Quebec or, rather, what was then called Canada East?" She thought for a while and she said, "Lafontaine" and I said, "Thank you, Mrs. so and so; those are all the questions I want to ask." We had another one, this was a university graduate, who was asked if she could say anything about the Pacific Scandal of 1873. She consulted the floor also for a long time and then said, "Well, it had something to do with relations between government and business." Whoever had asked the question said, "Yes; now could you be a little more precise than that?" I think she then was able to say that it had something to do with a railway and we said, "Yes, that is true; now could you tell us who was Prime Minister at the time?" After very prolonged contemplation of the floor, she said, "Mackenzie King." One year before Mackenzie King was born. Well, now, those people who, I think, were native-born Canadians, of course, would not have to pass any test that might be set down for adequate knowledge of Canada; but if they had been immigrants, what would have happened to them, what kind of test would have been set? The test is entirely at the discretion of the Governor in Council and probably the discretion of some official to whom it is handed down step after step—and heaven alone knows what might go in if the authors of those two pamphlets, to which I drew attention not long ago, the outrages published by the late unlamented Information Canada, were doing the job. Imagination boggles at the kind of test they might devise. They would have all sorts of prenatal activities in there, beside which Mr. Mackenzie King's feat in getting involved in a scandal the year before he was born would pale into insignificance.

● (1440)

This is a very wide power which is given here. The same is true about knowledge of the languages. How do you decide what kind of test do you set down for adequate knowledge of one of the official languages? I don't know. I am perfectly certain that it would be possible for any ingenious linguist to set a test which would show that I had a thoroughly inadequate knowledge of the French language; and I have even had learned professors, one learned professor at a Canadian university, once tell me I didn't understand the English language. Well, I don't know. At that point I must confess I was a little bit baffled.

These things give very wide powers and powers which may be delegated over and over again.

Paragraph (j) is another good one. Regulations:

providing for the surrender and retention of certificates of citizenship—

And so forth.

—if there is reason to believe that the holder thereof may not be entitled thereto or has violated any of the provisions of this Act;

Well, now, whose reason to believe? Some unknown person's reason to believe! These surely are matters of law and should be decided not by some official but by the courts.

There are a number of other things. There is something in here about the provision for the provinces to bar certain people from holding land. That is, I think, clause 33. The question arises, if succession to estates and land is to be barred to foreigners, where will those estates go?

Perhaps there is a perfectly good answer to this, but it doesn't appear to me to be obvious from anything in here. There doesn't seem to be any provision for it. Perhaps the matter will fall simply within the jurisdiction of the province which is dealing with the thing. I don't know.

In regard to the oath of allegiance and the oath of citizenship, the oath of citizenship has a little extra added to it. I think it is reasonable enough, probably, although I don't quite see the necessity for it. It adds the words:

and that I will faithfully observe the laws of Canada and fulfil my duties as a Canadian citizen.

It is curious that in the oath of allegiance, in clause 39, you find:

bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the Second, Queen of Canada, her heirs and successors according to law.

No comma after "successors." But if you look at the other one, there is a change in the capitalization of letters. "Her Heirs and Successors" all have capital letters, where they don't have in the first one; and then after "Successors" there is a comma: "Her Heirs and Successors,".

I am advised that that might make some legal difference, the presence or the absence of that comma. I don't know. But I think these are things that ought to be gone into.

There are signs here of drafting which might lead to difficulties and confusion. There are signs of omissions. There are signs of drafting which might lead to serious difficulties for the Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments in its attempt to carry out its duties.

I am afraid I have hurried very rapidly over those points. My main intention was simply to mention them so that people could take notice of them and others besides myself might be ready, perhaps, to ask questions about them in the committee if they felt that any questions were justified, if they felt there was any lack of clarity or any possibility of undue trenching upon the liberties of the subject because of obscure or—I am almost tempted to say ill intentioned—drafting which would give inordinate powers to officials under the legislation as it stands.

I have gone rather fast over it because I do not want to take up the time of honourable senators unnecessarily. But I thought, on the other hand, it would not be fair simply to go into committee with a series of these questions and difficulties and not to have given colleagues warning of this and given them an opportunity, perhaps, to come to me beforehand and say, "Don't ask that question because it's an entirely silly question or ill advised," or perhaps to come and say, "Don't you ask that question. It is a question that is worth asking, but I can ask it much better than you can, or Senator X can ask it much better than you can." I thought it was advisable therefore to give some notice to the Senate that, other things being equal, I hope to be in the committee and raise some at least of these points and try to get them clarified, and, where necessary, get the wording improved.

Senator Goldenberg: Would Senator Forsey permit a question? I wonder if Senator Forsey expressed any opinion on the wording of clause 34:

A person who is not a Canadian citizen is triable at law in the same manner as if he were a Canadian citizen.

Senator Forsey: I have no observation to utter on that whatsoever. "Pure ignorance, madam, pure ignorance," said Johnson when caught out in a bad definition. I can say pure ignorance, sir, pure ignorance on my part.

Senator Goldenberg: I wondered if the honourable senator approves the use of the word "triable," which I had never heard in my rather long career at the Bar.

[Senator Forsey.]

Senator Forsey: It was a new one to me, but I thought to myself, "Oh, this must be one of those 'expressions consacrées,' special terms in law with which I am not familiar." I don't recall ever seeing the word before, but I didn't venture to offer any observation on that, in spite of my fussiness, ordinarily, about the English language. I thought, "This is something technical. It's like something out of nuclear physics, and I know nothing about it".

Senator Goldenberg: It is not out of law.

Hon. J. J. Greene: Honourable senators, I wish to follow Senator Forsey's example in drawing a point to the attention of the committee to which I understand the bill will be referred. I am not a member of that committee and, therefore, will not be able to participate in the discussion.

Hon. Senators: Why not?

Senator Langlois: You can participate in the discussion.

Senator Choquette: But you cannot vote.

Senator Greene: In any event, I would hope that the committee would seriously consider the point with respect to land ownership that Senator Connolly described so well in his speech. As I understood Senator Connolly, this measure appears to ascribe to the law a rather shocking decision of the Supreme Court of Canada, which held that a province may pass laws proscribing a Canadian citizen's holding land in that particular province except under conditions allowed by the province.

I would think it is surely the function of the federal aspect of our body politic to enhance the totality of Canadian citizenship, to unify the country, by giving equal rights in as great a degree as possible within our Constitution to Canadian citizens all over Canada. While I think we might agree that it is perfectly within the rights of a province to proscribe the rights of foreigners to hold land within that province, surely it should be the right of any Canadian citizen to hold land anywhere in Canada.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Greene: I hope the committee will seriously consider this aspect of the bill, and see whether it has not really negated the federal intent of giving the widest possible right to Canadian citizenship in the way in which it is drawn, and without impinging upon what have grown to be almost sacred powers of the provinces within the Constitution.

● (1450)

I sincerely hope the committee will look at that aspect of the bill to see whether it does not almost invite the provinces to limit the rights of Canadian citizens to hold land except in the province in which they reside. If so, it will be a very serious limitation of Canadian citizenship. To my mind, the bill perhaps goes too far in attempting to implement what appears to me to be a regrettable judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada. Let us not enoble it in legislation if, in fact, it is a restrictive rather than a beneficial judgment.

Hon. John M. Macdonald: Honourable senators, there are a few comments I should like to make on this bill before it receives second reading. I agree that the measure does not make too many substantial changes in the requirements for the granting of citizenship. It does, however, make a few major ones. It proposes, for example, that citizenship be a right, if a person fulfills certain qualifications, and not, as is the case under the present act, something which is at the discretion of the minister.

I think we can agree, for the most part, that the proposed changes are acceptable. Certainly, the dropping changes are acceptable. Certainly, the dropping of the age limit to 18 to coincide with the voting age is a good step. I think, too, that it is well to do away with the qualification that a person must prove good character. After all, it is difficult to define what is meant by "good character," and a person, I would expect, would have to be of very poor character if he could not get a couple of people to testify, either orally or by letter, to the fact that he is of good character.

While it is well to have the two last-mentioned qualifications dropped, I think we are faced with a more difficult problem when it comes to the abridging of the residency requirement from five years to three years. Without doubt, there are a great many landed immigrants who, apart from the residency requirement, are qualified to become Canadian citizens long before the expiry of five years. With that in mind, I think that in Bill C-20 the government has endeavoured to strike a fair balance. It is trying to avoid the imposition of a hardship on those landed immigrants who are qualified to become Canadian citizens in less than five years without downgrading the whole concept of citizenship. I do not think anything should be done which would in any way cheapen or downgrade the granting of citizenship. Yet, I am sure we have all known people who are capable of becoming productive Canadian citizens after only a few months in the country.

I suppose all honourable senators have known people who applied for citizenship. I must say, I have been impressed with the regard which new Canadians have for citizenship. They cherish the idea. In fact, to some it is almost a mystical experience. When one comes up against it, it makes one realize more than ever the value of Canadian citizenship. I do not know whether a three-year residency requirement is too long or not long enough, and I expect that only time will tell.

I do not like the idea of giving certain classes of immigrants an advantage over others, as is proposed in the bill. To cite one example, the bill proposes that students lawfully in Canada who, on returning to their country of origin, decide to return to Canada to live, be credited with one-half of a day of residence for every day during which they were students here, which would reduce the residency requirement for that class of immigrant. I do not think that is fair to those people who leave their homelands with the determination to become Canadian citizens, regardless of what they find in Canada. Those people are required to wait the full period before being eligible for citizenship, while it is proposed that these other people—those who have spent time in Canada as students, or have been legally in Canada in one capacity or another—if they wish then to become Canadian citizens, should have a much shorter wait. I think the proposed act gives that class of immigrant an unfair advantage.

The bill also proposes that a Canadian citizen who loses his citizenship by virtue of becoming a citizen of another country, should he decide to resume his Canadian citizenship status, has to reside in Canada for only one year before qualifying for resumption of citizenship.

Another point I feel the committee should consider is the qualification that a person have an adequate knowledge of one of our official languages. In other words, an applicant must have an adequate knowledge of either the French language or the English language. However, nowhere do I see a definition of "adequate knowledge." Personally, I think that knowledge of either of our official languages should not be a qualification. If a person can come to Canada and remain here for three or five years, or however long he remains, and is unable to acquire facility in one of our official languages but is able to get along and earn a living, then the fact that he cannot pass a language test should not be a bar to his becoming a Canadian citizen.

I am sure that many of us know people who came to Canada years ago and who have been able to acquire little or no knowledge of either of our official languages. Yet they got along, and got along well. Their families can speak English or French, and they are great citizens. Personally, I should like to see the qualification of having an adequate knowledge of either of the official languages done away with. If an applicant for Canadian citizenship is qualified in every way but the language qualification, then give him his citizenship, and I am sure he will turn out to be a great Canadian.

Senator Greene: I wonder if the honourable senator would permit a question?

Senator Macdonald: Certainly.

Senator Greene: Would the honourable senator support an amendment that "Gaelic" be substituted for "either of the official languages."

Senator Macdonald: Well, they do say that Gaelic is the language of the Garden. Personally, I have never been able to speak it. It is a difficult language to learn. While I suppose there are others in the political life of Canada who speak Gaelic, the only one I know is the Honourable Allan MacEachen, Secretary of State for External Affairs. He is well versed in the language, but I do not believe he has ever had occasion to use it in his dealings with foreign countries.

I believe there is consideration in the present act for people over 40 years of age, to the effect that they do not have to have the same knowledge of one of the official languages as a person who is under that age. I think that is proper. It takes into consideration the fact that an older person cannot pick up a new language as easily as younger people.

I should like to see some consideration given to persons who have served in the armed forces of Canada. Such consideration is provided in the present act, but is deleted in the proposed legislation. Yet there may be good people, serving in the branches of our armed forces, either in Canada or abroad, and I think special treatment should be accorded them should they decide to apply for Canadian citizenship. The time they have served in our armed forces should be taken into consideration for purposes of the residency requirement.

Senator McDonald: Hear, hear.

Senator Macdonald: I should like to retain section 33 of the present act, which provides:

● (1500)

The Minister shall take such measures as to him may appear fitting to provide facilities to enable applicants for certificates of citizenship to receive instruction in the responsibilities and privileges of Canadian citizenship.

I believe that is a very good idea, and I do not understand why it has been dropped in this bill.

There is one other minor point that I should like to bring to the attention of the committee. If honourable senators look at the oath of allegiance in the present act, they will see that it concludes with the words "So help me God." In the oath of citizenship in the bill those words are omitted. I do not know if they have been dropped deliberately, and I do not know if it has any effect; I am just curious as to why that is so.

Honourable senators, I am pleased to support the bill.

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I wish to inform the Senate that if the Honorable Senator Connolly speaks now, his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on the motion for second reading of this bill.

Senator Connolly: Honourable senators, we have had quite a debate on this measure, a debate which I think has been positive and fruitful. I was very pleased last night to hear Senator Yuzyk speak. We in this house should be conscious of the fact that in the field of citizenship Senator Yuzyk is an expert, because he is an expert as an historian and as a sociologist. He worked for many years in these fields long before he came to the Senate. Fortunately for the country, he has continued these activities and has done much, not only for his own people and people of similar descent to his own, the Ukrainians, but people from the countries of Eastern Europe, and indeed on behalf of many other ethnic strains in our society.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Connolly: For that reason, I was very glad to hear him talk about the importance to this country of citizenship, and of doing all that we as a federal parliament can do to promote the highest of aims and objectives in that area.

Senator Choquette at one stage mentioned that very few native-born Canadians bother to apply for citizenship certificates. This is perhaps something that most of us can accuse ourselves of not doing. It is a simple thing to do; it is a very easy certificate for the native-born Canadian to get, and certainly all members of the Parliament of Canada should have a certificate of Canadian citizenship.

Senator Burchill asked for some figures indicating the number of United States' citizens who have migrated to Canada in recent years. I do not want to burden the Senate this afternoon with a long list of figures. I have some statistics which indicate the number of American citizens who have come to Canada in recent years. The figures on this table run from a low of 9,000 people to something in the order of 26,000 in more recent years. Perhaps I could have authority to place this column of figures on the record at this part of my reply, if that is satisfactory.

[Senator MacDonald.]

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(The table follows:)

IMMIGRATION FROM U.S.A. TO CANADA

1974	26,541
1973	25,242
1972	22,618
1971	24,366
1970	24,424
1969	22,785
1968	20,422
1967	19,038
1966	17,514
1965	15,143
1964	12,565
1963	11,736
1962	11,643
1961	11,516
1960	11,247
1959	11,338
1958	10,846
1957	11,008
1956	9,777

Senator Connolly: Senator Yuzyk mentioned that there are 200,000 illegal residents of Canada; in other words, approximately 200,000 people who are not landed immigrants. That is true. From some of the remarks made by Senator Forsey, Senator Macdonald and, perhaps, Senator Greene, there might be some concern that these people may be able to qualify for the 50 per cent of the time they spent here illegally when they do become landed immigrants. My reading of the bill is that that 50 per cent rule, which is introduced in this bill for the first time, does not apply to people who are here illegally. As in the example I used before, it would apply to a group such as students who are here legally for a while, who return to their own country and then decide, as Senator Macdonald described it, to come back to Canada and become landed immigrants. Their three-year waiting period could be shortened, under the provisions of this measure, by 50 per cent of the time they previously spent in the country. However, I think the committee might well look into the wisdom of that provision.

The question of the three-year waiting period has been raised by Senator Yuzyk, Senator Forsey and Senator Macdonald. We should, I think, remind ourselves that it is not mandatory on the part of any landed immigrant to apply for citizenship after three years. By the same token, a person who has been a landed immigrant for three years does not automatically become a citizen. This is a minimum period, and at the end of that minimum period it is open to a landed immigrant to apply to a judge of the Citizenship Court, as provided in the bill, and to meet the tests prescribed in clause 5(1). In other words, a person who applies has to be 18 years of age or over; has to be lawfully admitted to Canada and be here for three years; must have an adequate knowledge of one of the official languages and an adequate knowledge of Canada, and not be under a deportation order. All these tests have to be met.

It is conceivable, of course, as I understand has happened on a number of occasions, that applicants for citizenship certificates before these citizenship judges are sometimes refused. They can apply again. There is no specified period within which they cannot re-apply. However, I think they would be very foolish to apply before they felt they could pass the tests. I think there always has to be the safety valve of the citizenship judge to determine whether or not these people are qualified to become Canadian citizens and to have the certificate.

Senator Macdonald expressed concern with respect to knowledge of the official languages and knowledge of Canada. One must remember in this that there is a discretion which must be vested in the citizenship court judge. There is a discretion vested in the minister, whereby he can relieve elderly people or others from the requirement to have an adequate knowledge of one of the official languages, either English or French.

● (1510)

If what Senator Macdonald said is correct, that in the present act there is a provision that people over 40 do not have to comply with the strict letter of the law in respect of knowledge of official languages, then I point out that there is relief provided, and a discretion given to the minister under clause 5(3) of the bill, which is intended to operate in precisely the same way as that former section operated. In other words, the minister can relieve elderly people—for example, those who come from countries where there is no similarity between the language they speak and the English and French languages which are spoken here.

Senator Macdonald: How would you define “elderly?”

Senator Connolly: I think that is a matter of discretion too. I would have no difficulty applying it to myself; I would have difficulty applying it to my friend.

Senator Macdonald: Thank you.

Senator Connolly: I would probably have difficulty applying it to anyone else in this house, but I think that is where the discretion of the minister arises. The point is a valid one. It is validly taken, and it is one that should be examined in committee.

Senator Macdonald thought it was a little too much to allow a Canadian, who had renounced Canadian citizenship, to be able to resume his or her status as a Canadian citizen after one year's residence. I suppose that is a matter of judgment. But I should think that if a person went to another country and became a citizen and then wanted to return to Canada, the fact of one year's residence here would be a fair indication that that returning person really wanted to resume Canadian citizenship. Again, as I have said, this is a matter of judgment. It is a matter that perhaps the honourable senator would raise in committee.

Honourable senators, I am afraid that the detail of the points raised by Senator Forsey might be a little too complicated for me to deal with at this moment. It may take me a moment to find my notes in that connection. Perhaps I could deal with Senator Greene's point, and then find my notes with respect to what Senator Forsey said. I apologize for my bad housekeeping.

I would say to Senator Greene that what the Supreme Court of Canada did was simply confirm the power of the province to restrict ownership of land within the provincial boundaries. That is a power, of course, that the court has found the province to possess by virtue of the provisions of the British North America Act. Therefore, it is not this act that would alter the situation in any way. There would have to be a change in the basic power of the province, and that power is to be found in the appropriate sections of the British North America Act. What this bill proposes to do is take the federal jurisdiction in respect of aliens, which is clearly a federal jurisdiction under section 91 of the British North America Act, and confer that authority upon the province, in respect of ownership of land. In other words, the federal authority by this bill, as I understand it, is delegating to the province the right to legislate with respect to aliens who might become owners of land. In a sense, this may be a relieving provision. I understand that the legislation in the province of Prince Edward Island—I may be mistaken about this; I am not sure, but I think I am right—forbids, except under certain conditions, anyone not a resident of the province to own land. It may be hoped, as a result of the delegation provided here, that the province will amend that legislation and apply it not to non-residents but to aliens, to foreigners.

That may be a pious hope, or, perhaps, a facile explanation on my part but that, as I understand it, is the situation in respect of that point. It was a very valid point—that raised by Senator Greene.

Now, if I could only find my notes with regard to what Senator Forsey said—Senator Walker will be glad to know I have been successful.

Senator Walker: I am surprised to know you have found anything, but go ahead.

Senator Connolly: Frankly, so am I.

First of all, Senator Forsey raised the question of the position of the British subject, and said that he still felt like Sir John A. Macdonald—a British subject he was born, a British subject he will die. I do not intend to pronounce on that proposition, but I do know that what is conferred by this act upon people who qualify is Canadian citizenship. It may also confer the status of a subject of the Queen. Whether that is the status of a British subject or not, I am not qualified to say. Certainly it does not confer British citizenship, because Britain also has a citizenship act somewhat along the lines of ours, I assume, and it applies to people who can qualify under it.

A great many points were raised by Senator Forsey, arising out of the work he has done as joint chairman of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments. These points are valid points. One is always concerned—perhaps lawyers especially—with the power to make regulations which is conferred by federal legislation from time to time, and some of the discretions that are to be exercised by orders in council, by ministers and by officials. The value of the work done by the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments emerged this afternoon, as the result of Senator Forsey's speech, in a very useful context. I hope that the points he made, with respect to some of the discretions given, particularly to the administrative officers of the Crown, will be looked at very carefully. Senator Forsey complained about the language which has created problems for the committee investigating regulations and other statutory instruments, and I hope that some of this language will be cleared up in a way that this act will be defensible when it is returned to this chamber.

In the course of his remarks, Senator Forsey mentioned the matter of the finality of the appeal conferred by clause 17(3) of the bill. As I recall that clause, it refers to an appeal from a decision of the minister to the Federal Court with respect to the revocation of citizenship. I take it that Senator Forsey's point is that there should be an appeal to courts higher than the one provided in clause 17(3), because the word "Court" in that clause means the Trial Division of the Federal Court. Whether it should go on to the Federal Court of Appeal, and then to the Supreme Court of Canada, is perhaps a point for debate which could be raised in the committee.

● (1520)

With respect to clause 21 Senator Forsey referred to the "latter day Stuarts." I would point out that that particular clause of the bill refers only to proof of the authenticity of the document issued by the minister to confer authority on somebody. It does not restrict, nor does it limit or expand, the authority given the minister, which I think must be found by definition within the four corners of the legislation. So it is simply the authenticity of the document by which the minister confers the authority which is treated within that clause.

I do not pretend to be giving an exhaustive or learned treatment of the clauses referred to by Senator Forsey. I think those clauses should be dealt with seriatim in committee.

Senator Greene raised a question under clause 33 concerning the situation in which an alien, although forbidden to own land in a given province, does own land, and then upon his death, by his will, leaves that property to members of his family. If those members of his family also happen to be aliens, then a problem is created. In my opinion, however, it is a problem not for the federal authority but for the provincial authority to deal with. If it is a problem, I think it is up to the province enacting this kind of restrictive legislation to provide the remedy.

Honourable senators, I thank all those who have participated in this debate which, in my opinion, has been both healthy and helpful.

As to the committee to which this bill should be referred, the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs comes first to mind. However, as that committee is already overburdened with work, it has occurred to me that the bill should be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs. That committee does deal with immigration matters which, although not exactly in line with this bill, are somewhat related to the matter of citizenship. At least, citizenship is reasonably closely allied to immigration. In the meantime, if any senators have views on this particular point, I am certainly open to further thoughts on the matter.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Connolly moved that the bill be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 5.45 p.m. the sitting was resumed.
The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

ROYAL ASSENT

The Right Honourable Bora Laskin, P.C., Chief Justice of Canada, Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, having come and being seated at the foot of the Throne, and the House of Commons having been summoned, and being come with their Speaker, the Right Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to give Royal Assent to the following bills:

An Act to provide for compensation for former prisoners of war and their dependants and to amend certain other statutes in consequence thereof.

An Act respecting the use of national safety marks in relation to motor vehicle tires and to provide for safety standards for certain motor vehicle tires imported into or exported from Canada or sent or conveyed from one province to another.

An Act to amend the Quarantine Act.

The House of Commons withdrew.

The Right Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to retire.

The sitting of the Senate was resumed.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, May 6, 1976

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report of Eldorado Nuclear Limited and its subsidiary, Eldorado Aviation Limited, including their accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the year ended December 31, 1975, pursuant to sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

ADJOURNMENT

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, May 11, 1976, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Motion agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, although the question has been put and the motion has been agreed to, I should like to make the usual statement as to the work in store for us next week.

Senator Flynn: That's a new twist.

An Hon. Senator: With leave!

Senator Langlois: In moving the adjournment of the Senate until Tuesday next at 8 o'clock in the evening, I have taken into consideration that although we expected to receive two bills for introduction in the Senate some time today, they have not arrived as yet, and the bills that we expected to receive from the Commons earlier this week have not come to us. However, in the following week it will probably be necessary for us to sit on Monday evening.

This afternoon Senator Stanbury will move second reading of Bill C-89, to amend the Anti-Inflation Act, and the debate on second reading will resume on Tuesday. Also on Tuesday, two Senate bills will be introduced and placed on the Order Paper for second reading on Thursday next. In addition, Bill C-81 should pass the House of Commons next week and be sent here.

I understand that a number of senators wish to speak on Senator Bonnell's inquiry calling the attention of the Senate to the British North America Act as it pertains to transportation, on Senator Forsey's inquiry on the Constitution of Canada, and on Senator Croll's inquiry on the state of the working poor in Canada.

The committee schedule next week is heavy. On Monday the Standing Committee on Agriculture will meet at 2 p.m. to receive the annual presentation of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture. I have been requested by the chairman of that committee to invite all senators, whether members or non-members of that committee, to attend this important meeting.

The Agriculture Committee will meet again at 9.30 a.m. on Tuesday to consider DREE policies and Farm Credit Corporation policies. The Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments will meet at 9.30 a.m. At 2.30 p.m. there will be a meeting of the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee on the subject matter of Bill C-83, and at 3 p.m. the Foreign Affairs Committee will continue its study of Canada-United States relations. The Special Joint Committee on the National Capital Region has been called for 8 p.m.

On Wednesday, at 9.30 a.m. and at 2.30 p.m., the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce will hear witnesses on Bill C-58. The Science Policy Committee will meet when the Senate rises.

At 9.30 a.m. on Thursday, the Foreign Affairs Committee will continue with its study of Canada-United States relations, and the Banking, Trade and Commerce committee will meet at the same hour to hear more witnesses on Bill C-58. The Special Committee on the Clerestory of the Senate is to meet at 10 a.m., and the Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee will meet at 11 a.m. The Special Joint Committee on the National Capital Region and the Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments will meet at 3.30 p.m.

WEDNESDAY SITTINGS—HOUR OF ADJOURNMENT

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate, I move that from now and until the Senate adjourns for the summer recess, the Senate shall adjourn at three thirty o'clock in the afternoon on Wednesdays.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Senator Flynn: It should be put on the record that the purpose of this motion is to allow the Special Committee of the Senate on Science Policy to meet at that time on Wednesdays.

Senator Langlois: It also relates to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce.

Senator Flynn: That is correct, but I understand that the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee will be sitting while the Senate is sitting.

Senator Langlois: I intend to make a motion to that effect.

Senator Flynn: But I believe that the purpose of this motion is to enable the Special Committee of the Senate on Science Policy to sit at 3.30 on Wednesdays.

Senator Langlois: Yes. However, when we instituted our system of coordinating meetings of committees it was understood that we would abide by the practice to adjourn at 3.30 p.m. on Wednesdays, and it was suggested, with the concurrence of the Leader of the Opposition, that this motion be made to so adjourn at that time on Wednesdays until the summer recess.

Motion agreed to.

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1) (a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce have power to sit while the Senate is sitting on Wednesday next, 12th May, 1976, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

Motion agreed to.

ANTI-INFLATION BILL

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Richard J. Stanbury moved second reading of Bill C-89, to amend the Anti-Inflation Act.

He said: Honourable senators, in rising to support the second reading of Bill C-89, to amend the Anti-Inflation Act, I should like to point out that when the anti-inflation program was introduced in October 1975, the government emphasized the importance of close consultation with all groups in the economy affected by the guidelines, and the importance of being prepared to adapt the program from time to time as the need for changes became apparent. The legislative changes being made in this bill, and the related alterations in the guidelines, illustrate the government's willingness to respond to constructive representations to increase the fairness and effectiveness of the anti-inflation program.

● (1410)

The most significant change involves a series of amendments related to the issue of the appeal system. The Anti-Inflation Board retains initial responsibility for considering whether any actual or proposed increase in prices, profits, compensation or dividends subject to mandatory control is permissible under the guidelines. Under the amendments, however, in the event that the board provides notification of its opinion that an increase exceeds the guidelines, any person or group directly affected by the decision which chose to dispute it would have the right to so notify the board. The board would be required to refer the issue in question to the Administrator, and any order issued by the Administrator could subsequently be appealed to the Anti-Inflation Appeal Tribunal. Under this proposed procedure, a disputed opinion of the board could be referred to the Administrator for consideration without the necessity of an actual increase in prices or incomes contrary to a board opinion.

The right of appeal will also be significantly broadened. At present, only the party or parties specifically named in an order of the Administrator have the right to launch an appeal. Under these revisions, those directly affected by the order but not named in it would be granted similar rights of appeal. This change clearly applies to compensation cases, where there are two parties to the issue. Bill C-89 provides that an employee organization or designated employee may dispute opinions of the Anti-Inflation Board on compensation directly affecting their interests, and require such cases to be referred to the Administrator. An employee organization or designated employee would also have the right to appeal an order of the Administrator to the Anti-Inflation Appeal Tribunal and beyond, as the law presently allows. A similar right would be extended to employer organizations directly affected by guideline decisions.

A third issue relates to increases in compensation in excess of the guidelines. It was always the government's intention that in the first instance the parties, and ultimately the Administrator and the Appeal Tribunal, should be entitled to formulate their own judgment as to whether any increase in compensation beyond the guidelines was justifiable for those cases in which special factors may be taken into consideration. The guidelines are being modified to make this explicit. In addition, this bill makes clear the power of the Appeal Tribunal to consider whether increases in compensation in excess of the guidelines are consistent with the purposes of the Anti-Inflation Act, in the case of an appeal against any outstanding orders of the Administrator.

Compensation in the Quebec construction industry is to be exempted from the federal guidelines, in accordance with the agreement under the anti-inflation program with the provincial government, which provides for the Quebec government to exercise responsibility for the application of the compensation guidelines in that industry, because of the unique compensation decree system presently in force in the province.

The authority of the Administrator to issue orders involving compensation will be broadened to allow him to issue an order affecting both employers and employees in compensation cases, in contrast to the current situation in which he is limited to issuing an order involving only one or the other party.

The legislation also permits members of the Tax Review Board to serve as members of the Anti-Inflation Appeal Tribunal.

Honourable senators might also be interested to note that clause 11 of this bill would require the concurrence of this chamber in addition to any motion adopted in the other place to terminate the Anti-Inflation Act.

I believe that the changes proposed in this bill will contribute to the strengthening of the national attack on inflation, which is already showing clear signs of progress in the moderation of the cost-price spiral and the consequent rate of inflation.

On motion of Senator Phillips, debate adjourned.

THE SENATE

TELEVISION AND RADIO COVERAGE OF HOUSE AND COMMITTEE PROCEEDINGS—ORDER DISCHARGED AND INQUIRY WITHDRAWN

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the inquiry of the Honourable Senator Greene, P.C., calling the attention of the Senate to the desirability of permitting complete television and radio coverage of the proceedings of the Senate and of the public proceedings of all Senate Committees.—(Honourable Senator Robichaud, P.C.).

Senator Robichaud: Honourable senators, I yield to Senator Greene.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Greene: Honourable senators, I instituted this inquiry with the sanguine hope that the Senate could provide leadership in this area. I now understand that a government proposal will be brought forward in this respect. An inquiry here would scarcely be productive if the government, with all its power and machinery, is moving ahead to determine such things as the cost involved, the technical prospects of such coverage, and the effect on Parliament. It seems to me it would be non-productive for the Senate at this time to pursue the matter.

I regret my inability to find Senate rules under which this matter might have been expedited, because I think it would have been in the interest of the Senate to provide leadership in something that will eventually come to the forefront. I am now satisfied that the government has the matter in hand. I hope this inquiry had some bearing on the government's sudden initiative.

With the consent of the Senate, so as to not keep on the Senate's Order Paper a matter that will be brought forward in time through the other place, I would ask for leave to have this order discharged and the inquiry withdrawn from the Order Paper.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Order discharged and inquiry withdrawn.

HABITAT

UNITED NATIONS CONFERENCE ON HUMAN SETTLEMENTS—
REPORT OF CANADIAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE—DEBATE CONCLUDED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the inquiry of the Honourable Senator Buckwold calling the attention of the Senate to the Report of the Canadian National Committee on Habitat: United Nations Conference on Human Settlements.—(Honourable Senator Petten).

Senator McDonald: Honourable senators, on behalf of Senator Petten, I should like to yield his opportunity to speak at this time to Senator Norrie.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Hon. Margaret Norrie: Honourable senators, the report on the activities of the Canadian National Committee on Habitat for the forthcoming United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, given by Senator Buckwold, provided us with food for thought and action. We are fortunate indeed to have a man of Senator Buckwold's stature as chairman of this committee. As Senator Buckwold reminded us, since the 1972 United Nations Conference on the Environment, which took place in Stockholm, we have been confronted with severe problems of human settlements and the urgency in alleviating the various pressures on our land use and its peoples. This United Nations conference itself, to be held in Vancouver, will bring together delegates, accredited observers, officials and journalists. It thus will be the largest conference ever sponsored by the United Nations.

• (1420)

It is most interesting to note that special emphasis is being placed on solutions to environmental problems. There are nine objectives. Perhaps you will permit me to read them, because I think they are important in understanding the meaning of the conference.

1. To raise the level, in Canada and the other participating countries, of government, media and public awareness about the phenomena of urbanization, mass migration from rural to urban settlements, and the consequences for public policy.

2. To identify and recommend various national approaches to managing this dominant trend so as to improve the quality of human settlements, and to encourage acceptance of solutions that have been tried and found more or less successful.

3. To develop, debate and refer to government recommendations for more effective action at the national and international level on human settlement policies, strategies and programs.

4. To use Habitat—its preparatory process, the conference itself and post-conference activity—to achieve a greater consensus on the objectives and substance of Canadian human settlements strategy, and to promote and refine the development of intergovernmental and public/private mechanisms and processes to implement it.

5. To establish the central relevance of human settlements policy in the framing of national development strategies.

6. To achieve through Habitat a real commitment, first by national governments and then by the world community as a whole, to meet the needs of our poorest people.

7. To encourage national governments to go beyond these broad goals of national policy and state their commitment to achieve certain hard program targets in the basic areas, targets which can then provide priorities for national action and, just as important, priorities for international cooperation.

8. To focus the program targets discussed at Habitat on the most crucial needs for the least advantaged, especially in the developing countries. Further, Habitat cannot be asked to guarantee the happiness of every individual. Rather, through the discussions at Habitat we can together devise reasonable targets for the reduction of suffering and the elimination of unnecessary misery.

The variety of settlement problems that depend for relief in the first place on safe water alone is one of the best examples of the interdependence of all of the solutions to our community problems. A poor man too sick to work because of bad water cannot benefit from the new job opportunities arising from a development project. In rural villages the world over, millions of woman-hours are wasted hauling water from distant sources. Simply by providing safe water in every community this wasted energy and capacity could be diverted to the more productive purpose of providing the essentials for human life in their communities, such as growing more food, helping to build shelters, schools and roads.

9. To encourage the industrialized nations to demonstrate that they will not permit the continuing abuse of their resources, that our cities must reverse a trend to blight in our urban cores; that concentration need not result in congestion and stagnation; that transportation need not control people and their settlement patterns but can be controlled to achieve desired patterns and reverse the trend to polluting our environment and dissipating finite resources.

Honourable senators, you might be interested in hearing about a few of the projects listed in Habitat, so that you can get a general idea of them. This will be the largest and most diversified audio-visual presentation of human settlements solutions ever assembled. And they are solutions, mind you. All these projects will be listed in the catalogue in Vancouver. Let me give you just a few of the titles: From Algeria, The Green Belt and 1000 Socialist Villages; from Botswana, Rural-Urban Drift; from Colombia, the Invasion of Colinas squatters; from Egypt, Greater Cairo; from Greece, New Towns Dealing with New Needs; from Hungary, Thermal Water Utilization; from Iran, Pardisan—A Persian Garden; from Israel, Conquest of the Desert; from Kuwait, Resettlement of the Bedouin; from Liberia, From Mats to Mattresses; and so on. There are several more, but I think that gives you a general idea of the kind of topics that there are.

The background work in preparation for Habitat has been intensive, extensive and global in scope, including a four-day symposium in Yugoslavia attended by 30 of the world's leading architects, planners, environmentalists and related experts who laid the philosophical basis for human settlements as an interdisciplinary science. More than 100 countries participated in four regional meetings in Cairo, Tehran, Caracas and Geneva and 30 special studies commissioned by the United Nations Habitat Secretariat.

In addition there has been the experience gained from four recent United Nations conferences:

Human Environment—Stockholm, 1972.

Population—Bucharest, 1974.

Food—Rome, 1974.

Status of Women—Mexico City, 1975.

The Right Honourable Pierre Trudeau, Prime Minister of Canada stated that:

[Senator Norrie.]

No human need is more basic than shelter. Yet no country can claim that it provides adequate shelter to all its people. Nor can any country claim to protect its people from the consequences of inadequate shelter, impure water, congested transportation systems, primitive processes of waste disposal, the pressures which come from crowding, from noise, from fumes. Solutions to these human problems are available. That is why we in Canada have offered to host the Habitat Conference in Vancouver. Habitat brings variable solutions together offering governments the opportunity to share their knowledge. It holds out to everyone the promise of a planet that can yet become a wholesome human habitat.

At present 79 per cent of the families living in Calcutta have to share living space. Typhus and dysentery are endemic in almost all squatter settlements in Latin America. Only 45 per cent of the municipalities in Brazil have a satisfactory water supply system, and only 34 per cent have a sewerage system.

The Right Honourable Mr. Trudeau continued: "The world is our constituency. Yours, mine. Governmentally, personally." And finally: "It is as well a single, interdependent community."

• (1430)

Glaring headlines will arise from this concept, and this fact, of a single interdependent community.

The world's population has grown by 658 million persons in the past 10 years and could double to 8 billion in the next 40 years, according to the Population Reference Bureau in Washington. The task of supplying these billions of people with food, housing, jobs, medical care and education is staggering.

Let me concentrate, for the rest of my speech, on land use, food and agriculture. The use of agricultural land for agriculture only must have top priority. We have only 10 per cent of Class I agricultural land; that is, of the highest fertility category, in Canada. It is disappearing at a fantastic rate for other uses in the Niagara Peninsula where this Class I land is found. Urban sprawl and vast asphalt highways are covering this good farm land permanently. Of course, in the early days it was best to build on good farm land, and building often continues on the fringes of towns and cities.

Land use and transportation are interrelated, but very little integration takes place between the two. We can no longer afford to overlook this harmful use of our agricultural land.

The International Federation of Agricultural Producers says:

Recently, the finite nature of land resources has become clearer, as well as the definitive nature of most non-agricultural uses. This new awareness has been connected with awareness of food crisis. Good husbandry, land conservation, and, indeed, environmental protection, are fundamental to efficient farming and food production.

Large sums of money must be spent for research in agriculture to keep our agricultural industry progressive and productive. Improvements in the quality of seeds, livestock, soils and disease and pest control are vital to a healthy industry.

Land use, food and agriculture are so closely linked to one another and to our world population, and, indeed, to our very existence, that each topic must be conscientiously and continuously supported and guarded in order that we may contribute as a nation to world peace, prosperity and preservation. We in Canada spend 18 to 20 per cent of our income on food. Western Europe spends 20 to 25 per cent, Russia over 45 per cent, and in parts of Asia 75 per cent.

At the present time Canadians are well fed, food is relatively cheap, and we feel safe; but if we feed only ourselves, will the world's starving people allow us to continue to live in our selfishly oriented society?

Over the past 30 years the agricultural industry has increased its efficiency more than any other. Since 1946, agricultural productivity has risen 70 per cent, which is largely due to increased efficiency. A hundred years ago one farmer produced, on average, enough for seven other people. Today, one farmer produces enough to feed 50. In Russia the ratio is still one to three-and-a-half other people. Why is this? It is because our agriculture is based on more highly advanced research, and because of the free enterprise system. Unfortunately, this efficiency has resulted in hardship for many farmers and has caused producers to go out of business and to leave the farms at an alarming rate.

The percentage of decrease in the number of farms in operation between 1961 and 1971 was 24 per cent, and it is still continuing. We need these vacant farm lands, however, for production of food for worldwide markets. Habitat discussions will hopefully find solutions to these urgent problems, if we do our part and pool our ideas and knowledge.

Here are some startling facts to think about and act upon. Of the 12 fastest growing cities in the world in the next decade, all will be in developing countries. These 12 fastest growing cities will increase their population from a total of 46.5 million to 186.9 million between 1970 and 1985. Nearly half the municipalities of Latin America have neither sewage systems nor piped water. Rural farm population in Canada has declined rapidly. Its population decreased from 1.9 million in 1966 to 1.4 million in 1971. This is a decrease of 26 per cent in only five years. If India's population should grow as the United Nations projections indicate it will, the largest city in India in the year 2000 will have between 36 and 66 million inhabitants.

The report of the Canadian National Committee, submitted to the Minister of State for Urban Affairs, contains a portion called "Canadian Non-Governmental Organization Conference on Human Settlement." There are more than 250 non-governmental organizations in Canada. Regional branches and local organizations run into the thousands and include service clubs, religious organizations, special interest groups and professional organizations. They are going to meet at the Vancouver Habitat Conference and discuss their problems under the heading "Habitat Forum." This is a very important segment of this conference. These people have good ideas, and I was interested to read some of the resolutions they will be bringing forward from the meetings they have had so far. One dealt with human settlements policies, strategies and planning; another dealt with institutions, management and financing; there was one on housing, another on infrastructures and services, another with land use and ownership, another with public participation, and finally with an international program.

I would like to read the "Resolved" section of the resolution on land use.

Be it resolved that satisfaction of the aboriginal rights and land claims of Métis and Non-status Indians, Status Indians and Inuit peoples of Canada be the number one priority for future human settlement policies for all levels of government in Canada.

And further, be it resolved that aboriginal rights and title to the land be reaffirmed rather than extinguished as is the present policy of the federal government.

And further, that native representatives be involved from the outset in political, economic and social planning at all levels so that their wishes and needs will be guaranteed in development projects involving their traditional and or treaty lands.

And that no further major industrial development projects (Mackenzie Valley, Athabasca Tar Sands, James Bay, Nelson River Diversion) be proceeded with until aboriginal rights and land claims are settled to the satisfaction of the native people and that land claims negotiations not be conducted under the threat of these massive development projects.

Be it resolved that the Canadian Government exert its influence with member countries in the United Nations General Assembly to reaffirm the aboriginal rights and land claims of indigenous peoples before economic development forever destroys the possibility of the retention of traditional lands.

The non-governmental organizations sent in these remarks about the native people:

• (1440)

There is considerable concern about the disruptive impact of large-scale engineering and building operations on native people who traditionally move freely across the land as trappers, hunters and fishermen—a people for whom land, with the geese, the caribou, etc., is not only the basis of livelihood, but also the basis of culture and way of life.

The problem faced by Indians and Métis is seen by some concerned citizens as the 'number one' problem in Canada. With the impact of large-scale developments, native people (and other concerned Canadians) complain that they are forced to give up their independent means of livelihood as hunters, trappers and fishermen and yet because they do not have the skills required in mining, engineering and building operations, they derive very few or no benefits from the new jobs created in their territory. They are forced into a new urban way of life usually as a minority group, and with the deplorable attitude of some southerners, they become strangers in their own territory and lose self-respect. They also face other new social and economic problems they cannot cope with.

Canada's native peoples must find their directions between their historical values and life styles and the pressures for their integration into the patterns of the 'major society.' It will never be possible or appropriate for anyone to prescribe any single course for them among these different destinies. They must be offered viable options, and helped to equip themselves to make these choices.

It was pointed out at Frobisher Bay and at other places that school curricula do not provide for the teaching of native language, and that it is shattering for a little Indian, Métis or Eskimo child to discover that his/her teacher cannot even pronounce his/her name. The children become alienated from their culture.

It is suggested that no community should be created or operated without:

(a) providing a real life for those who choose to live and work with nature; and

(b) providing a choice between education in the traditional cultures and skills and education in modern industry, commerce and culture.

These are the big problems facing everyone in Vancouver, honourable senators. I should like to conclude by saying that no country is so rich that it can afford to waste the contribution of any citizen, and no government is so poor, so lacking in neighbourly aid, that it can convincingly claim it has no answer to basic human needs, and no hope for distributing minimum standards of subsistence to all its human settlements.

Finally, honourable senators, it is Canada's hope that at Habitat the ethical will finally be recognized as the practical.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, as no other honourable senator wishes to participate in the debate, this inquiry is now considered as having been debated.

* The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, May 11, at 8 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, May 11, 1976

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Langlois tabled:

Copies of a statement respecting background information on Loto Canada, dated May 10, 1976, issued by the President of the Treasury Board.

Copies of an amendment, dated April 27, 1976, to By-law No. 1 of the Export Development Corporation, pursuant to section 16(3) of the Export Development Act, Chapter E-18, R.S.C., 1970.

Revised Capital Budget of the National Harbours Board for the year ended December 31, 1974, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1976-987, dated April 27, 1976, approving same.

Capital Budget of the Northern Transportation Company Limited for the year ending December 31, 1976, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copies of Order in Council P.C. 1976-989, dated April 27, 1976, approving same.

AERONAUTICS ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

Senator Langlois presented Bill S-34, to amend the Aeronautics Act.

Bill read first time.

Senator Langlois moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading on Thursday next.

Motion agreed to.

AN ACT TO REPEAL THE PROPRIETARY OR PATENT MEDICINE ACT AND TO AMEND THE TRADE MARKS ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

Senator Langlois presented Bill S-35, to amend an act to repeal the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act and to amend the Trade Marks Act.

Bill read first time.

Senator Langlois moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading on Thursday next.

Motion agreed to.

REGULATIONS AND OTHER STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS

AGREEMENTS BETWEEN THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS—QUESTION

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I have two questions to ask of the Deputy Leader of the Government tonight. He may have to take both of them as notice.

The first arises out of some fresh difficulties encountered by the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments. Our counsel tells me he is having the greatest difficulty in getting copies of the agreements between the Government of Canada and the governments of various provinces under the Anti-Inflation Act; and the distribution office tells me that these agreements have not been tabled, whether in the other place, or here, or both, I do not know. I cannot recall them being tabled here, but I may be mistaken on that point and I should like to ask the Acting Leader of the Government whether in fact they have been tabled and, if not, when we may expect to see them tabled in this chamber? Perhaps he would like to say something on that before I ask my second question?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, as my honourable friend must realize, I will have to look into this question before I can provide an answer. I undertake to do so at the earliest possible moment.

Senator Forsey: Thank you very much.

NATIONAL LOTTERY

METHOD OF PROCEEDING—QUESTION

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, the other question has to do with the announcement recently—I think it was perhaps on Friday, or perhaps yesterday, in another place—of the government's proposal for a national lottery extending into the indefinite future. I should like to ask the Acting Leader of the Government whether it is the intention of the government to present a bill in this chamber or the other chamber, as seems to me to be the proper procedure, or whether it is going to proceed in some other way, as I rather gathered from the statement in the other place that it might, although I must confess that I was horrified to hear this. If it is intended to proceed in some other fashion, shall we be given by the government an opportunity of discussing this proposal in this house, because I think it is one to which some of us will have very serious objections, similar to those raised by the Conservative Party and the NDP in another place?

● (2010)

Senator Langlois: I understand that the same question was put in the other place this afternoon. I have not been able to obtain the answer which was then given, but I will look into it. I will take this question as notice, and will reply at the earliest possible moment.

ANTI-INFLATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from Thursday, May 6, the debate on the motion of Senator Stanbury for the second reading of Bill C-89, to amend the Anti-Inflation Act.

Hon. Orville H. Phillips: Honourable senators, I should first like to thank Senator Stanbury for his clear and concise introduction of the amendment contained in Bill C-89. However, my gratitude does not extend to the extent of joining him in seeing the benefit and effectiveness of the anti-inflation program which the honourable gentleman could see.

Six months have now elapsed since the anti-inflation program was introduced, and perhaps this length of time should give us some indication of its acceptability and effectiveness in Canada.

Perhaps the best way would be to consider a few individual cases. First, let us consider the home owner who has had a five-year mortgage which is now renewable. He finds that his interest rates have increased from 9 per cent to 12.5 per cent on first mortgages. This will cost him at least an additional $75 per month. In addition, his average municipal taxes have increased at least $25 per month.

This individual now finds himself in this position. Five years ago he made a down payment on a home. He has paid on the mortgage for five years, and his principal, interest and taxes now cost him $100 a month more than they did five years ago.

Honourable senators will have a hard time convincing this individual that the program is working. If the home owner lives in the Atlantic provinces and heats his home electrically, he will find that his monthly heating bill has increased another $200 per month. Here again we will have difficulty in persuading this individual that the anti-inflation program is effective.

The new energy policy announced recently will further increase fuel and electrical costs. This individual will find that his heating bill will be at least $50 per month higher next fall than it was last winter.

Provincial governments, as I mentioned before, have requested assistance for this particular individual. Debate in the other place last week indicated that very little assistance will be forthcoming, so there will be many cold homes in the Atlantic provinces next winter unless the government changes its attitude.

Many Canadians living in urban areas, in order to avoid the high cost of homes in the centre of town, moved out to the suburbs. They now find that this was a mistake, because their gasoline costs are higher now that they no longer live downtown. Public transportation costs are also higher. These costs add to the monthly cost of living. We cannot say that the anti-inflation program is controlling costs in the public transportation sector. Costs in every sector of public transportation are increasing.

Members of various trade unions constitute a very large percentage of the Canadian population. Perhaps we should ask them what they think of the anti-inflation program.

[Senator Langlois.]

On the other hand, maybe it is not necessary. They are fairly vocal in telling us that the program is not working.

Perhaps we can inquire of the various groups across Canada who have been affected by the anti-inflation program. We can ask the Irving pulp and paper workers in New Brunswick what they think of the rollback of their negotiated wage increase. I do not expect we would get very much support from that group for the program. The common front in the province of Quebec does not seem to have a great deal of love for the anti-inflation program. They, too, are experiencing increases in the cost of living; they are experiencing increased taxation, and have indicated a great deal of unhappiness with the situation. The Toronto school teachers had hoped that they would benefit from the historical relationship clause in the legislation. Unfortunately, they received a history lesson they did not expect. The workers in the mining industry in Ontario and Manitoba have also received a setback in their wage negotiations, as a result of which they are unhappy with the program.

When the legislation setting up the anti-inflation program was introduced, I mentioned two groups upon whom I felt it would have adverse effects. The first group was the Maritime workers, who earn less than their counterparts in the rest of Canada. I have before me a list of the wage settlements approved by the Anti-Inflation Board, and I find that my concern in this regard was justified. The one or two settlements in the Atlantic provinces that have received the approval of the board are far below those approved for other regions of the country.

The other group I mentioned was that of the so-called working women. Women's professional and business groups have complained, with a great deal of justification, that they are being held back in their progress towards wage equality. This is due to the fact that 10 per cent of $10,000 is considerably less than 10 per cent of $15,000. The differential in wages as between men and women is continued under the anti-inflation program.

The general public will not accept the principles of the anti-inflation program while its members are crisscrossing Canada making pronouncements on policy and threatening to introduce stiffer measures if present regulations do not work. It is not the function of the bureaucrat to make policy statements. Policy statements should only be made by members of the government. It is one thing to have the Minister of Finance discussing a problem and threatening further measures; it is an entirely different thing to have the chairman of the Anti-Inflation Board running interference for him.

● (2020)

Public acceptance of the anti-inflation program would be much greater if items such as food and housing were controlled. In the past few weeks the wage earner has been forced to meet increasing costs of butter, bread and milk. On Monday of this week there was a statement by the Anti-Inflation Board saying that beef prices will rise 10 to 15 per cent in the next few weeks. The announcement goes on to state that in the next two to three months we can anticipate the cost of living rising between three and four points. We cannot say the program is working if forecast increases of this magnitude are allowed to occur.

Recently many newspapers in Canada carried a small cartoon depicting an individual reading a headline to the effect that the cost of living had increased, and he comments that it costs a fortune to be poor these days. I think this cartoon aptly describes the attitude of the average Canadian today.

If the items I have just mentioned were controlled, the public would be far more willing to accept the restrictions of the anti-inflation program. We can delay the purchase of a new car, wait another year to do home repairs or take a shorter vacation, because in many cases these are luxury items, but the essentials must be controlled in order that the program shall work.

In addition to controlling essential items, government spending must be brought under control. In the debate on the introduction of the program many honourable senators emphasized that point. Yet the estimates for the new fiscal year carry an increase of 22 per cent. The Minister of Finance has tried to justify this by saying, "Oh well, it is for the benefit of the Canadian public." The wage earner merely looks at the increased estimates and says that he does not have a 22 per cent increase.

In the past few minutes I have tried to illustrate that the program is not working and is not being accepted by the public.

Senator Greene: Would the honourable senator permit a question?

Senator Phillips: Certainly.

Senator Greene: The honourable senator referred to the concern of the provincial government about increasing energy costs. I would ask him whether his provincial government has cut back the retail gasoline tax, which is such a very substantial proportion of the cost of energy, in order to meet this concern of the provincial government that he has voiced.

Senator Phillips: In reply to the Honourable Senator Greene, I would point out that my provincial government has the same political affiliation as Senator Greene's. He therefore knows that they are just as fond of receiving taxes as anyone else, and probably more than some of the other provinces.

I was mentioning that while the Anti-Inflation Board has been calling for new and stiffer regulations, it has been largely ignoring the regulations passed last fall. A recent survey by the Financial Times produced some rather interesting results, showing that approximately 70 per cent of the settlements in the public sector were for pay increases beyond 20 per cent. At the same time the settlements in the private sector were lower, approximately 80 per cent being for pay increases of 15 per cent or less. This raises a rather interesting question. Is the Anti-Inflation Board inclined to grant more generous settlements in the public sector?

Unfortunately, the survey does not indicate how many Canadians did not receive a pay increase in the last year. It would be rather interesting to know how the non-unionized worker is faring, and how many of these people received increases in the last year.

The survey went on to state that since last October the average settlement in the public sector has been higher than in the preceding year. The average increase has been somewhere in the vicinity of 1½ per cent higher than before the institution of the Anti-Inflation Board. I wonder why the legislation contained the figures of 12 per cent, 10 per cent and 8 per cent if they are to be ignored by the Anti-Inflation Board.

The Senate has quite often heard reference to the speeches and remarks of the former Minister of Finance, the Honourable John Turner. I am sure that many of you heard his Toronto address, in which he stated that if the anti-inflation program was to work we should have had an across-the-board freeze for a period of time and then begin to consider individual cases. Honourable senators, it is not too late to return to the freeze. We still have approximately three years to go under the present legislation, and we could give consideration to this matter. Unfortunately, Bill C-89 does not include this in its amendments.

The Anti-Inflation Board recently came under criticism because there are several thousand cases awaiting decision. I was rather surprised to learn that the board meets three days every two weeks, which is six days per month, to consider appeal cases. With a backlog of approximately 4,000 cases, we must ask ourselves how long will it take to clear them up. It is of importance to those conducting wage negotiations to have a rapid decision. The matter of a recent award in the case of public servants was referred to the Anti-Inflation Board, and this group of public servants cannot expect a clear decision until at least September. Naturally, the effects on morale are not good.

When the program was introduced last fall many senators spoke of the necessity of controlling interest rates. Interest rates have now increased drastically and they not only affect homeowners, as I mentioned, but they also affect business both large and small. The businessman who has to borrow for financing must pay more, and, naturally, there is only one place he can recover and that is in the market place. This in turn reflects in the cost of living.

● (2030)

Several European countries, in their efforts to control inflation, have made an effort to control credit buying. In Canada credit buying is still very much in vogue. Credit cards are readily available and widely used. Yet this is one aspect of the anti-inflation program which has been completely ignored. When we use a credit card, usually 4 per cent of the amount of purchase is charged for its use. In addition, if the complete payment is not made within a month, the banks charge an interest rate of 18 per cent per annum. These items add to the inflationary fires and I feel it is time the government gave some consideration to placing restrictions on the use of credit.

Money supply is always very prominent in discussions on the control of inflation. The Bank of Canada, if it wished to place any sudden restriction on the amount of money available in Canada, would be restrained because of the adverse effects that would have on employment. The Bank of Canada hopes to keep the range of increase in the money supply somewhere in the vicinity of 12 per cent to 15 per cent per year. However, our high interest rates are attracting investments from foreign countries. We have the near banks bringing in huge sums of money, and that money is invested in Canada. But, those loans will have to be repaid with interest, and by allowing that practice to continue we are placing our anti-inflation program under restrictions for the next five years.

Bill C-89 contains an amendment to allow the Senate to exercise its constitutional responsibility on the cessation of the present legislation. This corrects an oversight in the original bill.

You know, honourable senators, I have often looked at the Leader of the Government in the Senate and compared him to his predecessor, and at times I had come to the conclusion that Senator Perrault was very much a paper-back version of the Honourable Paul Martin. However, since he has kept his word in this regard—and I must congratulate him on that; I am sure he had his difficulties—I will now attempt to look at the honourable gentleman with a little more kindness and without making the comparisons I made before.

An Hon. Senator: You're all heart!

Senator Phillips: An amendment allows members of the Tax Review Board to sit on the Appeal Tribunal of the Anti-Inflation Board. I cannot say that I get overly excited about this amendment. It may expedite some of the appeals, but I look on the members of the Tax Review Board as being rather glass-eyed bankers, and I doubt if they will bring any great sympathy to that board.

Honourable senators, I thank you for your indulgence. I will have several questions to ask at the committee stage.

Senator Bell: Would the honourable senator answer a question for me? Did he say that the wage settlements in the Atlantic provinces were lower, on the average, than in other parts of Canada? If so, is the percentage increase less than the percentage increase in other parts of Canada?

An Hon. Senator: Don't confuse him with facts.

Senator Phillips: That was the impression I hoped to leave with the Senate. The use of the historical relationship works very much against the Atlantic provinces. Their wage settlements in the past have been smaller, and when a settlement in the Atlantic provinces is before the board, the board tends to look back and say, "Well, traditionally this has only been 8 per cent in the Atlantic provinces," and makes a ruling on that basis.

On motion of Senator Petten, for Senator Lamontagne, debate adjourned.

TRANSPORTATION

BRITISH NORTH AMERICA ACT—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from Wednesday, April 28, the debate on the inquiry of Senator Bonnell calling the attention of the Senate to the British North America Act as it pertains to transportation.

Hon. Frederick William Rowe: Honourable senators, I am sure that some of you will be very sorry to hear that because I have not recovered fully from the cold I had last week I shall not be speaking at my customary length tonight.

Senator Choquette: Hear, hear.

Senator Rowe: I ask you to disguise your regrets as best you can.

I would like, however—and now I am serious—to take just a very short time to enunciate several principles in connection with this inquiry, but before I do that I would like to congratulate our colleague, Senator Bonnell, who is not here tonight, for two things: first, for introducing this inquiry, which is a very important one, and, secondly, for the excellent address that he gave in this chamber when he opened the debate on it.

[Senator Phillips.]

I would also like to extend my congratulations to Senator Phillips. I am not referring to the speech he has just made, which I will probably refer to later in another context, but to the speech he gave in support of Senator Bonnell's words.

I do not think there have been any other speakers. If there have been, then I have not had a chance to catch up on my homework, and the oversight is not deliberate.

I would like also to extend my thanks to a distinguished member of the Senate for the assistance he has given me on a number of occasions when I have felt the need to go to him for his views on some constitutional aspect of this matter of transportation. I refer, of course, to Senator Forsey, who is, I think, acknowledged to be one of the leading experts on constitutional matters in Canada.

I am also going to do something that perhaps I should not do, I am going to invoke the name and words of a great Canadian who is no longer with us. I refer to a former Prime Minister of Canada, the Right Honourable Louis St. Laurent. I had the honour and very great privilege of spending a morning with him, in association with two other persons, during which time we discussed some of the constitutional aspects of the relationship between Canada and my own province of Newfoundland. I can say, and I am able to have this confirmed if necessary, that Mr. St. Laurent, who was recognized as the leading constitutional lawyer in Canada, agreed with the principles which I shall enunciate in a moment or two.

● (2040)

Back in the early 1950s, the Government of Canada came into the picture in respect of road building in a big way. That is, of course, when the trans-Canada highway agreement was adopted by the Parliament of Canada, under which agreement Ottawa contributed, or agreed to contribute, 50 per cent of the cost of building this national highway. This was a very important principle because under the Constitution, roads, as we know, are the prerogative of the provinces. But here, as I say, Ottawa came into the picture. On the face of it, and I suppose underneath it as well, it was a good thing, because for the first time Ottawa was coming into the road building business in a big way. But it was also somewhat deceiving in that on its face it appeared to be an impartial, fair agreement. Who could disagree with Ottawa's paying 50 per cent of the cost, with all of the provinces who decided they would come into the program paying the other 50 per cent? One could not very well disagree with it. But, as we analyzed it, we found that far from being a fair program, fair to all of the provinces, it was decidedly unfair and, in many respects, unjust.

Before I illustrate what I mean, let me say that I regret very much that Senator Walker is not in the chamber right now because I would like to express, rather belatedly, my appreciation to him, which I have already done on other occasions privately, because Senator Walker was Minister of Public Works in the Government of Canada and was, therefore, responsible at that time for implementing Canada's part in the trans-Canada highway agreement. At that time I was Minister of Highways in my own province, and I had occasion to come to Ottawa to see him. He spent many hours with me and we went over the problems that affected Newfoundland—and not just Newfoundland, honourable senators, but some of the other provinces as well, like New Brunswick and, to a lesser extent at that time, Nova Scotia.

Senator Walker heard me out, sympathized with and appreciated the points I made. I took for comparison the Province of Newfoundland and the Province of Saskatchewan, because Saskatchewan was not one of the wealthier provinces and neither was it one of the poorest; it was a median province. I took this comparison at that time because Saskatchewan's population was exactly double that of Newfoundland's. If all other things had been equal, then, in respect of this trans-Canada highway program, the burden on Newfoundland should have been exactly twice as heavy as it was on Saskatchewan. But all other things were not equal. Saskatchewan's per capita income was again almost exactly double that of the per capita income of Newfoundland. So that made the burden, assuming that all other things were equal, four times as heavy on Newfoundland as it was on Saskatchewan. But again, honourable senators, other things were not equal. The length of the trans-Canada highway in Saskatchewan—and here I am speaking from recollection, and Senator Argue or somebody from that region can correct me if I am wrong—was almost exactly 300 miles as the route was designed, whereas in Newfoundland it was almost exactly 600 miles. And so the people of Newfoundland had to find 50 per cent of the cost of building 600 miles of highway rather than 300 miles as obtained in Saskatchewan.

If all things had been equal at that point, the burden on Newfoundland would have been eight times what it was on Saskatchewan. I repeat, honourable senators, the burden on the average Newfoundlander would have been eight times heavier than the burden on the average citizen of Saskatchewan. But yet again, all things were not equal. In Saskatchewan the highway was built on almost completely level ground across the prairies. There were some problems, as I recognize, but in Newfoundland we had to go uphill and downhill, and we had to cross every major river and about 80 per cent of all other streams, with all the implications that follow from that. As I say, we were going uphill and downhill, blasting through the oldest and hardest rock on the face of this earth, geologically speaking—Newfoundland granite—and digging out some of the worst muskeg to be found anywhere in Canada. That was the problem we had there. The result was that the average mile of trans-Canada highway in Newfoundland cost almost exactly twice as much as the average mile in Saskatchewan. So here we had another multiple of two which made it 16 times as burdensome on the people of Newfoundland as it was on the people of Saskatchewan.

Of course, this also applied in one way or another with respect to other provinces. They suffered from some of the same disadvantages. So, what on the surface at first appeared to be a very reasonable arrangement, a 50-50 arrangement, in practice turned out to be impossible for Newfoundland, as it was for some of the other parts of Canada as well. It was about as fair and as equal as was the law in France that Anatole France, I think it was, reminded us of—that law which in its majestic equality and impartiality forbade the beggars and the millionaires alike of France from sleeping under the bridges of Paris. It was a bed of Procrustes. It was one bed, and every province had to fit into it.

I pointed these things out to Ottawa, with very little success initially, and I am not referring to any particular government because when we pointed this out to the St. Laurent administration, they accepted, I think, the validity of the arguments but did nothing about the situation; neither did the subsequent administration. It was not until the administration of the late Mr. Pearson that we got some recognition of the validity of our arguments, and eventually got that 90-10 agreement which enabled us to finish our portion of the highway.

What happened in Newfoundland was this: we negotiated that trans-Canada agreement in either 1950 or 1951. Here I am speaking from memory; at any rate, it was very early in the 1950s. I remember that the Honourable Robert Winters was Minister of Public Works at the time. When I was the provincial Minister of Highways in 1959, 1960 and 1961, we had still not completed half of the highway across the island of Newfoundland. I pointed out, as did others, that this road was not being built merely for the benefit of Newfoundland. The rationality and the justification for Canada's coming into the picture was because it was a national highway, and necessary in the national interest. But unless we were prepared to sacrifice all our other public needs—the schools we needed, the university we needed, and the hospitals and all the other public services we needed—it would have taken us 25 years under that 50-50 agreement. I argued, and so did others, that it was in the national interest, and, indeed, that there was a moral imperative on the part of the Canadian government to change that 50-50 ratio in recognition of these other factors. Eventually this was done. But it took a long, long time, and it should never have taken that long for the Government of Canada to recognize that principle.

● (2050)

That principle, of course, has been extended very much since in the form of other cost-sharing programs, other great federal programs, notably the DREE program of recent years. What is the principle? It is that Canada is an entity; it is not 10 parts, or 12 parts, but an entity, and implicit in the whole concept of Confederation is the idea that the Government of Canada has responsibility—moral responsibility and, it could be argued, legal responsibility—to see to it that inequalities across the Canadian nation are removed insofar as it is humanly possible and humanly practical to remove them. We cannot deny the fact that Prince Edward Island is an island and that Newfoundland is an island, or the fact that the Rocky Mountains are in British Columbia. We, as a nation, must recognize these facts.

I have here an innocuous looking document, but it is rather important because it is part of the Constitution of Canada. It is the Terms of Union between Newfoundland and Canada which were drawn up in 1948. Coincidentally, the leader of the Canadian delegation at the time was the Right Honourable Louis St. Laurent, who I believe was Minister of Justice. In these Terms, which are now part of the British North America Act and thus part of the Constitution of Canada, there are several clauses respecting transportation. Senator Bonnell has gone into them in some detail. One of those clauses provides as follows:

Canada will maintain in accordance with the traffic offering a freight and passenger steamship service between North Sydney and Port-aux-Basques, which... will include suitable provision for the carriage of motor vehicles.

I invite your attention to the fact that there are no qualifications there; there are no ifs, ands, or buts. It is explicit—Canada will maintain a ferry service. It does not say Canada will maintain a ferry service provided the officers and crews on the ferries are willing to work. It does not say Canada will maintain a ferry service for seven months of the year; that if by chance the stevedores in Port-aux-Basques or North Sydney decide to go on strike for the other five months there will then be no ferry service, that the responsibility of Canada at that point will cease. It does not say that, and I suggest that no court of law in Canada would accept that argument.

Senator Choquette: Is it not admitted?

Senator Rowe: We know, of course, that in the case of Prince Edward Island an appeal was carried on that very principle. They went to the Supreme Court of Canada. I believe the matter is still sub judice, and perhaps I should make no further reference to that aspect. However, the point I am making reference to—I do not believe this is in any way an infringement of the principles which guide us when a matter is before the courts—is that the responsibility rests on Canada to maintain that ferry service between the rest of Canada and Newfoundland. That is a legal responsibility in my view, and in the view, I believe, of Senator Forsey, but he will speak for himself. Certainly, it was the view of a man who was once Prime Minister of Canada. There is a legal responsibility there, and if there were no legal responsibility there would be a moral responsibility, and there is a moral responsibility.

Two or three years ago in the middle of the summer, for the entire month of August and part of September, when our tourist trade was at its height and tens of thousands of people were visiting from California, Texas, British Columbia and every other part of North America and other parts of the world, that ferry service was discontinued. I do not contest the right at all of the stevedores at Port-aux-Basques or North Sydney to cease work. I do not contest that. I could say the same thing if the captains or crews said they would not work, and walked off. However, what I do assert and affirm is the moral obligation of the Government of Canada to maintain that service. I say to you now, honourable senators, that this was one of the most shocking episodes in the history of relations between Canada and Newfoundland.

One other episode, which I shall not go into now, appalled the Newfoundland people. In the 27 years since we have been part of Canada, this service has been a lifeline. There would have been no Confederation, no union with Canada, had that clause not been included and had Canada not agreed to take responsibility for that ferry service which forms our lifeline. To cease the ferry service is the equivalent of cutting every single road connection between Ontario and Quebec, or between Ontario and Western Canada. Try doing that for four weeks and see what the reaction of the people of Quebec and Ontario would be. It was done in Newfoundland and the Government of Canada, I regret to say, sat by and allowed it to happen. I say now—and this is not a threat; it is a prediction—no matter what government is in power in Ottawa, if that happens again and that ferry service is ever allowed to be disrupted by anything other than acts of God, the people of Newfoundland will repudiate that government at the first opportunity. They will repudiate it virtually unanimously, as they did in connection with another incident in respect of relations between Ottawa and Newfoundland. They will do it again and, of course, they will do more than that; political action is not enough. I am quite sure that if that should happen again Prince Edward Island will not be alone in taking legal action. I say to you, honourable senators, that it is a disgrace for a little province such as Prince Edward Island or for Newfoundland to have to take action against the government of all Canada on a matter which is so vital and crucial, and in which they are so right.

[Senator Rowe.]

I had wished to make some other points about this aspect, but I shall not do so because I realize that there are other interests affecting us tonight. I wish to close on this point. What I have tried to enunciate here and what Senator Bonnell tried to spell out two weeks ago, let no senator, let no one outside this house, think is an internecine quarrel or dispute between the Government of Canada and one single province. This is a matter which affects all Canada. When Mr. St. Laurent, Mr. Claxton and the other ministers in the Government of Canada, and the Parliament of Canada, including this chamber, ratified that agreement they were obliging the people of Canada, they were putting the responsibility on the people of Canada, all Canada, to see that the obligations were adhered to. So I say to you that this matter is the concern not just of the few Newfoundland senators here, or of Senator Forsey, who happens to be a Newfoundlander but who does not represent Newfoundland; it is the concern of every senator in this body, as it is the concern of every member of the other place also. It is a little ironical that, in a literal sense, Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island are islands. It was Donne who said "No man is an Island." I say to honourable senators that no province is an island, that when we hear that bell tolling, it is not tolling for the humble fisherman or logger of Newfoundland or the farmer of Prince Edward Island. When we heard that bell tolling three years ago, when the Government of Canada allowed those two provinces to be completely isolated for four weeks, the bell was tolling not just for Prince Edward Island or Newfoundland, but for all of Canada.

● (2100)

On motion of Senator Duggan, debate adjourned.

CORPORATIONS AND LABOUR UNIONS RETURNS ACT

REPORT OF MINISTRY OF INDUSTRY, TRADE AND COMMERCE—
DEBATE CONCLUDED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the inquiry of the Honourable Senator Desruisseaux calling the attention of the Senate to the Report of the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce under the Corporations and Labour Unions Returns Act (Part I, Corporations) for the fiscal periods ended in 1973, tabled in the Senate on 9th March, 1976, and the Report of the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce under the Corporations and Labour Unions Returns Act (Part II, Labour Unions) for the fiscal periods ended in 1973, tabled in the Senate on 2nd December, 1975.—(Honourable Senator Petten).

Senator Petten: Honourable senators, when I moved the adjournment of this debate, it was my understanding that several other senators wished to participate. As no honourable senator has indicated his wish to do so, may we now consider this inquiry as having been debated?

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, May 12, 1976

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Langlois tabled:

Copies of Ad referendum Text of an Agreement between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States of America concerning Transit Pipelines, initialled January 28, 1976.

REGULATIONS AND OTHER STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS

AGREEMENTS BETWEEN THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, yesterday Senator Forsey posed two questions. The first had to do with the tabling of the agreements between the federal government and the provinces under the anti-inflation legislation. My answer is as follows.

On March 16, 1976, a copy of an Agreement between the Government of Canada and the Province of Quebec under the Anti-Inflation Act was tabled in the Senate. My information is that agreements with all the provinces except Saskatchewan and British Columbia have now been signed. The government is now negotiating agreements with these two provinces. The House of Commons advise that only the Quebec Agreement has been tabled in that house. I have obtained copies of the agreements already signed for the honourable senator, and copies will be tabled in the Senate when the minister tables them in the other place.

Senator Walker: Is my friend going to synopsise the agreements? Is he going to tell us what the agreements are?

Senator Langlois: These agreements are long and complicated documents.

Senator Walker: We will read about them in the newspapers.

Senator Langlois: The one with Quebec has already been tabled and is available. It has been tabled in the Senate. It has to do with the application of the anti-inflation legislation.

Senator Walker: Thank you very much.

NATIONAL LOTTERY

METHOD OF PROCEEDING—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, the second question put to me by the Honourable Senator Forsey had to do with the proposed national lottery which is to be known as Loto-Canada, and especially the method of proceeding in Parliament with the establishment of this lottery.

Yesterday I tabled in the Senate a statement respecting the background information on Loto-Canada, dated May 10, 1976, issued by the President of the Treasury Board. This document was tabled in the other place on Monday, May 10, by Mr. Chrétien. It is apparent from the statement made by the minister at the time of tabling that the approval of Parliament would be sought with respect to the new lottery before the end of June. Whether this would be done by a bill or resolution has not yet been decided.

For the information of the honourable senator, I am sending him a copy of the background information which I tabled yesterday.

Senator Forsey: May I ask a supplementary question arising out of that, honourable senator? "The approval of Parliament will be sought either by bill or resolution." I assume then that if it is by resolution, the resolution would be presented in this house as well as in the other place, am I correct in that?

Senator Langlois: The best way to answer that question is by repeating what Mr. Chrétien said in the other place. I quote from page 13337 of the Commons Hansard for May 10. Mr. Chrétien was answering Mr. Knowles concerning what parliamentary time would be put at the disposal of the members of the other place for discussion of this motion or proposed legislation between now and June 30. Mr. Chrétien said:

• (1410)

Mr. Speaker, it depends on the formula the leaders of all parties would endorse to have a debate on that motion. Substantially, it is the same bill that we had in the past, except that for the next three years, it will be under federal government control and that under the Corporations Act and the Criminal Code, we could create a Crown corporation without having to pass legislation.

However, there are many ways to put forward this project for the approval of the House and I am sure the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Sharp) will have discussions with his counterparts of other parties. We could even proceed by a budget item, if needed, but I would rather submit to the House a motion which would be debated during one day, and then we could have a vote. Or we could accept the suggestion that the opposition leader (Mr. Clark) kindly put to us, that is adopt a bill after all stages in two days.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, surely that still does not answer the question whether the matter will be brought up here, unless the government proceeds by way of a bill, in which case clearly, of course, it would come before this house. But if it proceeds by way of resolution, I do not see anything in Mr. Chrétien's answer, which I also have before me, which says anything about this house at all. It seems to me it is quite clear that this is a matter on which this house should have a right to pronounce its views.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, it would seem obvious that it is difficult for me to make a statement for the minister since the question has not even been decided in the other place yet. They will discuss it and then they will decide which way to proceed. If it is done by an act of Parliament, then, obviously, it will have to come to the Senate. If it is a mere motion I doubt that that should come to this place. However, the matter is still open to discussion in the other place and I assume a decision will be made in due course.

Senator Grosart: Perhaps the Acting Leader of the Government could answer the question put by Senator Forsey a little more precisely by telling us whether, if the government proceeds by resolution in the House of Commons, the government will proceed by resolution in the Senate.

Senator Forsey: Hear, hear!

Senator Grosart: That is Senator Forsey's question and I believe it can be answered by the leadership of the government in this house.

Senator Argue: Take it as notice.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, there was no mention of a resolution made by Mr. Chrétien in the other place yesterday. I do not even know what proposal was made by the Leader of the Opposition in that chamber. So it all depends on the method adopted by the House of Commons. Apparently there will be a meeting of the leaders of the other house and then the government will make its decision. Whatever that decision is, the government will have to abide by the rules of Parliament. Obviously, therefore, if the measure needs the approval of the Senate it will surely come to the Senate. If it is a mere motion, then I doubt that such a motion will have to come to this place.

Senator Grosart: Speaking for this side, I am sure I can say that we would regard that as a most unsatisfactory answer.

Senator Forsey: Hear, hear!

Senator Grosart: Surely it is for the government to decide whether the Senate will be consulted on this important matter. Surely we can have an answer to that, regardless of any hypothetical situation, regardless of whether it is by way of a bill, incorporation in a budget item, or resolution. All we are asking is whether the Senate will be consulted and given an opportunity to debate this important matter.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I am sorry that my honourable friend is not satisfied with my answer, but what he is asking me to do is to make up my mind about something which has not yet taken place, and even before the government has actually made up its own mind in that respect, and that I cannot do.

An Hon. Senator: Hear, hear!

Senator Grosart: What I am asking is for the government to make up its mind about its attitude towards the Senate.

Senator Langlois: Why do you not wait for the government to make up its mind before asking this question?

Senator Grosart: We may wait forever.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

CANADIAN GOVERNMENT ASSISTANCE TO ITALIAN EARTHQUAKE VICTIMS—QUESTION AND ANSWER

Senator Thompson: Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Acting Leader of the Government a question. In view of the deep concern which I am sure is felt by all members of the Senate towards the victims of the earthquake in Italy, could the acting leader give us a progress report on what the Canadian government is doing to assist these people. Secondly, is any role of coordination being played by the Canadian government with regard to the voluntary organizations which are working in the Italian communities across Canada?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, my answer to the first question is the following:

On receipt of the report of the serious casualties caused by the heavy earthquake in the area of the province of Friuli in northeastern Italy during the night of May 6, the Canadian government made available the services of a 200-man field hospital and medical support unit from the Canadian forces in Europe assigned to NATO and stationed in southern Germany. The Canadian field hospital and medical support unit, strengthened by a field engineer detachment and three light helicopters, are now operating in the villages of San Danielle and Venzona, north of the city of Udine. As the nature of the requirements changes from immediate medical needs, we will adapt our response accordingly.

The Canadian government is keeping in close contact with the Italian authorities, and it hopes to be able to continue to make a concrete and valuable contribution towards coordinating the assistance being directed towards the unfortunate victims of the earthquake.

Regarding the second question, it is my understanding that the honourable senator is referring to funds which have been and are being collected by non-governmental groups. Since this is being done through private initiative, and since the government is not itself involved in this fund-raising effort, the government is not involved in the administration of the funds. I would therefore suggest that information concerning the administration of the funds be sought from those who are directly involved in raising the funds. I should add that the government very much appreciates the efforts made to raise funds from the Canadian public for assistance to those affected by the earthquake, and it is our hope that these funds will be used in the most effective ways possible.

ANTI-INFLATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Stanbury for the second reading of Bill C-89, to amend the Anti-Inflation Act.

[Translation]

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne: Honourable senators, I should like to say first that I support the bill now under study, because its main purpose is to remove an unfair anomaly. However, I would have hoped that Bill C-89 had gone further and corrected other deficiencies which, in my opinion, detract from the efficiency and the fairness of the anti-inflation program. But before emphasizing these deficiencies, I should like to recall very briefly the reasons and the original purpose of the implementations of controls.

[English]

In my view our country, with its open economy, cannot do much better on the inflation front than its main partners and competitors abroad, especially the United States; but it cannot afford for long to do much worse. In recent years, and up to the end of 1974, our performance in this respect had been as good as or better than that of all the other industrialized countries, except western Germany. The last recession altered this whole situation. Its severity and duration in western Europe, in Japan, and in the United States had the effect of substantially reducing the rate of inflation in those countries. In Canada, however, the recession was relatively milder and shorter. The decline in real gross national product from the peak of the boom to the bottom of the recession was 6½ per cent in the United States and 5¼ per cent in Germany, but just 1½ per cent in our country.

● (1420)

The result was that Canadian labour leaders were able to maintain their aggressiveness; unit labour costs kept rising and pressures on the overall price structure remained strong. In the latter part of 1975, the gross national expenditure implicit price index was close to 10 per cent. Compared with a rise of 13.8 per cent in 1974, such a rise represented an improvement, but it was significantly higher than in some other industrialized countries. For instance, by the end of 1975, Germany, Japan and the United States were experiencing rates of price increase in the 5 to 7 per cent range.

It is in this kind of domestic and international context that the government decided last October to introduce its anti-inflation program. Its initial objective, at least as I interpreted it, was not to stop inflation—this is impossible in today's world—but to bring the rise of incomes and prices in Canada more in line with the pattern experienced in several other industrialized countries, particularly in the United States. As such, the goal appeared desirable and realistic; the program itself looked to be a manageable and fair short-term stopgap.

Indeed, it seemed manageable without requiring a huge bureaucracy. It covered about 6,500 firms and their workers in the business sector. Compliance with the wage guidelines did not create particularly complicated monitoring problems. While the application of the rules concerning prices was more difficult to monitor, evasion could be easily detected and corrected by the provisions regarding excess profits.

Moreover, it could be expected that the program, as it evolved, would be made still more simple than it originally was by removing features likely to cause unnecessary administrative complications or undesirable economic results. For instance, it was unnecessary and confusing to require businesses to operate under two different base periods for the purpose of measuring excess profits. It was clearly undesirable to attempt to limit industrial research and development expenditures when it was widely recognized that such expenditures were already much too low in Canada, and that this inadequate effort was a major factor accounting for the poor innovative performance of our manufacturing industries. The Anti-Inflation Board could also be expected to translate as many qualitative guidelines as possible into quantitative rules so as to reduce to a minimum the number of subjective and tailor-made assessments, to facilitate compliance by business and to simplify the board's role.

Unfortunately, the program did not evolve in that direction. On the contrary, it has become more universal in coverage, more arbitrary in its application and, therefore, less manageable.

First, the number of firms and workers covered by the guidelines has been considerably increased. While it is true that export industries have been exempted from the guidelines, the board is still expected to monitor their behaviour. Moreover, the Minister of Finance announced on March 8 the extension of the program to all suppliers in the construction, trucking, grain handling and longshoring industries and most of the shipping industry. It is estimated that, in addition to the public and professional sectors, the guidelines now apply to more than 51,000 companies and their employees in the private sector. Thus, the program, which could be described at the beginning as a selective system, now tends to become a scheme of general controls.

Secondly, the Anti-Inflation Board has not made the system more simple and the guidelines less qualitative. On the contrary, it is following a case-by-case approach, and it is involved more and more in tailor-made assessments and in individual deals. This approach and this involvement mean, as the scope of the program is extended, that the board will be swamped by individual requests requiring a rapidly growing bureaucracy, and producing more and more delays, uncertainty and confusion.

Thus, as the anti-inflation program evolved, it became less and less manageable. It was reported in the middle of March that there was a backlog of about 1,000 requests for rulings by the board on proposed pay awards alone. As this accumulation grows the program itself may well get out of hand. In my view, those who are responsible for its design and its administration have lost sight of its initial limited objective, and they have come to expect from it more than it can deliver. In the process, if they do not change the present direction they will make it unworkable.

At the beginning, the anti-inflation program appeared to be fair. At least, it corresponded to what was called rough justice. Some of the criticisms made by the labour movement were justified. For instance, firms were entitled to increase their prices every three months to compensate for rising costs but workers had to wait for a year to receive cost-of-living adjustments. Moreover, the role of the board with respect to prices and profits was much less visible than it was with regard to wages.

In my view, the rule of confidentiality followed by the board has been much too strict. While in certain cases it might have been undesirable to identify the companies which had been subjected to the board's rulings, it would certainly have been possible to make public, let us say on a monthly or quarterly basis, the number of requests reviewed and the decisions made, without necessarily referring to individual businesses. I believe that it would still be quite possible to improve the system so as to meet some of the justified criticisms presented by labour leaders.

However, the overall attitude taken by most of these leaders at the outset and since the implementation of the program has been most irresponsible, especially if it is compared with the recent decision of British unions to limit their wage demands to an annual maximum of 4½ per cent. Indeed, it must be recognized that, on the whole, the guidelines as they were originally conceived were harder on stockholders and businesses than on employees. The program froze dividends and profit margins but allowed wage rates to rise by as much as 12 per cent. However, the rough justice provided at first by the guidelines has been seriously eroded since.

● (1430)

The case-by-case approach followed by the board, involving qualitative assessments as it does, is producing or at least appears to result in unfair discrimination. Moreover, the fact that export industries were exempted from the guidelines on February 26 has created, in my view, major sources of unfairness. This exemption deserves further comments and must be viewed in its proper background.

When the anti-inflation program was announced, a distinction was made between domestic and export industries. Domestic industries were submitted to two sets of rules regarding prices and profit margins. If they showed excess profits during any compliance period, they were and they are still required to dispose of them either by reimbursing their customers or by reducing prices or by giving them to the government as a surtax.

Export industries were exempted from the price rules but subjected to the profit margin guidelines. If their rate of profit in any compliance year exceeded 95 per cent of the average rate during the five years from 1970 to 1975, the excess profits thus generated had to be paid to the government in the form of a special levy. However, up to 90 per cent of the levy could be refunded to companies to help finance new capital investment in productive facilities and other specified projects.

Thus, the refund provision applying to export industries already represented a discrimination in favour of this sector of our economy. But it could be defended on the ground that it was to Canada's advantage to favour a greater national export capacity, although the basic program already offered such an incentive since higher revenues generated by an increased volume of sales were not considered as excess profits.

The government's decision not to proceed with the export levy measure was taken at the insistence of the provinces. In my view it does not make it more defensible. It cannot be justified on the ground that it will encourage the expansion of our export capacity because export industries are now completely free to do whatever they want with their excess revenues; they can even invest them abroad, which they might well do. This decision cannot be defended on the ground that export industries need a special treatment because, on the whole, they constitute the most powerful and prosperous sector of our economy.

On the other hand, the government's decision creates two major sources of unfairness. First, export industries are now free to increase their profit margins as much as they can and to use their higher profits for their own purposes but domestic industries, which are on the whole relatively weak, will have to lower their prices or pay a surtax to the government in order to dispose of their excess revenues. This is not only unfair but also most likely to introduce further artificial and undesirable distortions in the structure of the Canadian economy.

Secondly, while export industries are free to increase their revenues as much as they can, their employees are subjected to the wage guidelines. How can we expect that the labour unions concerned will tolerate such an unfair situation when they were strongly opposed to the original program which was much more equitable? I am surprised indeed that the total exemption from the guidelines granted to export industries at the end of February has not already generated more criticism than it has.

For the reasons I have given and others, the anti-inflation program is in great danger of becoming completely unmanageable mainly as a result of serious mistakes made in the course of its implementation. Some of those errors can still be corrected. For instance, the decision taken on March 8 to bring nearly 45,000 small firms under the program should be rescinded. Moreover, the Anti-Inflation Board should try to stick as much as possible to general quantitative rulings rather than get involved in individual qualitative assessments.

However, imperfect as it is, the basic program should not be abandoned at least until the movement of prices in Canada follows more closely the American pattern. In the meantime we should all try to develop a better and more permanent approach to the problem of inflation. We should beware of those who tell us that the inflation psychology will soon go away. They are like the god in the Greek legend who said:

I caused mortals to cease foreseeing doom . . . I placed in them blind hopes.

Inflation has become a chronic disease of modern societies. Rising expectations, rising monopolistic power, rising scarcities are the basic causes of the disease and they will not soon disappear. Unless we learn to restrain ourselves individually and collectively, we will have to accept controls or to suffer from chronic inflation.

Hon. George C. van Roggen: Honourable senators, I have not come today prepared to speak to this matter, and I do not intend to take up your time with an extended speech on the subject. However, as a British Columbian and a person from a resource province I could not let some of Senator Lamontagne's remarks relating to the export levy go by without making one or two comments.

The initial concept of the export levy was undoubtedly based on the American experience, when they had their introduction to price and wage controls. It was found that companies in the United States would seek the more lucrative foreign markets for their products, thus creating shortages and placing a further upward pressure on the cost of commodities in the United States.

There is a fundamental difference between the American experience and the Canadian experience relative to the export levy. The American economy was being affected adversely by exports of general products, including manufactured products, approximately 80 per cent of which were consumed domestically and a small percentage consumed in the export market. That higher price obtained in the export market was just sufficient to put an upward pressure on prices at home. Our export industries are entirely different from the manufacturing industries in the United States. In many cases, almost 100 per cent of the production of our industries is sold abroad and not at home. It is the foreign price which our industries must get if Canada is to prosper.

I know Senator Lamontagne will not suggest for a minute that we should not get the maximum possible foreign price, but the mechanism was to be that much of this would find its way to the government.

The fluctuation in the price of commodities in the world produces peculiarities in price structure which are simply unknown to manufacturing industries. If it costs $20 to manufacture a toaster and you sell it for $25, you cannot all of a sudden sell the thing for $10. You can sell it for $23, possibly, if the market is poor, or $22 or $27, but the price is not going to fluctuate between $8 and $40. However, the resource industries have to cope with such fluctuations.

● (1440)

At the time the export levy was imposed, the majority of the resource industries of Canada were operating in a depressed world commodity market, where they were getting one-third or one-quarter of the prices they were getting three or four years earlier. To then provide, as the economy of the world improves and the prices of those products come back to a level which would see the companies again breaking even, that that extra income should be peeled off by the government would bankrupt many industries in the resource area.

In addition, the impositions on the resource industries in my provinces—such as higher corporate taxes and other imposts by governments, both provincial and federal—have reduced their liquidity to such an extent as to cause real concern as to whether many of them will be able to withstand the next downturn in the commodity markets of the world. These downturns occur regularly, so when you come to the resource industries you have to apply rules which are entirely different from those you apply to manufacturing industries. It seems to be very difficult to get this point across to central Canada, and to the public servants in Ottawa.

Honourable senators, the point I should like to make is that the export levy should not have been suggested in the first place, because it is unnecessary in our context. The comparison was not legitimate insofar as it related to the United States experience. The monitoring that should be done by the government relative to the resource industries is to make sure that that small percentage of their production which is sold in Canada is kept at as reasonably low a price as is commensurate with the health of the industries. But their export prices and the increases that they will receive from an increasing export market, in many cases, will only bring them back to the break-even point.

[Senator van Roggen.]

I apologize to honourable senators for speaking without prepared notes, and for not having my remarks better marshalled, but I did not want this particular point raised by Senator Lamontagne in his excellent address to go unchallenged by somebody who has a concern for the resource industries.

Hon. A. E. Haddon Bell: Honourable senators, I concur in the remarks Senator van Roggen has just made. I found Senator Lamontagne's explanation extremely interesting, but as it related to the resource industries of Canada, the export levy, as Senator van Roggen explained so clearly, would simply not have worked.

I should like to add just two small points. One is that we have a desperate need for foreign exchange in our balance of payments. One company in British Columbia, a forest products company, earns $1 million a day in foreign exchange just from the American market. That company also exports to Australia and other countries in Southeast Asia. This is very important to us right now. And yet that company, according to its last annual report, was in a loss position for the first time in its corporate history. It was in serious condition, and the export levy would have made life very difficult for it.

Just by the way, it is of interest to note with respect to our mining industry that there is only one so-called mineral which is not mainly exported, and that is gravel. Mining is a very important money earner for Canada.

The other point I should like to add is with respect to our employment situation. The president of the western segment of the International Woodworkers of America—who is, I suppose, one of the most powerful of our labour leaders—came out immediately and complimented the government for withdrawing the export levy because it meant so much to the employment of people in the forest industries.

Senator Lamontagne: Honourable senators, I have quite a number of questions to put to Senator van Roggen, but I will restrict myself to one, having disrupted the agenda for this afternoon too much already. I should like to ask Senator van Roggen to what extent the export levy would have affected the liquidity of the export industries.

Senator van Roggen: Senator Lamontagne, like you, I do not wish to take up an undue amount of the time of honourable senators this afternoon by dealing with such matters when I am not adequately prepared. I can give you one example, and that is, the provision in the export proposal that 90 per cent could be drawn back if put into new plant. Why the 10 per cent should be stolen on the way is a question we have never had answered. One hundred per cent could have been taken back, and I am sure we would all agree with that. The problem was that that could only come back if and when it went into new plant. There are many other examples I could give you, having regard for the state of the industry in British Columbia today.

Senator Lamontagne: Excuse me for interjecting, but it was not restricted to new plants.

Senator van Roggen: New plants and equipment. If I am wrong in that, you can correct me. There are many instances of companies, particularly in the forest industry, which need that money for liquidity purposes; not for new plans.

On motion of Senator Macdonald, for Senator Asselin, debate adjourned.

TRANSPORTATION

BRITISH NORTH AMERICA ACT—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the inquiry of Senator Bonnell calling the attention of the Senate to the British North America Act as it pertains to transportation.

Hon. James Duggan: Honourable senators, I am pleased and happy to have the opportunity to take part in this debate dealing with transportation as set out in the British North America Act, and as it pertains to the province of Newfoundland. Transportation is essential to the existence and well-being of the limited economy of Newfoundland and its people. The position of Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland is comparable in many, if not all, viewpoints.

Honourable senators, I sincerely trust you would not label me as vain if I were to think out loud that the question I asked on March 10, and the answer I received, prompted Senator Bonnell to ask a supplementary question. The answers to both questions glittered with exuberance of evasion, dealing not with the questions and making it apparent that the shadow was dealt with instead of the substance. The apparent evasion aroused and inspired my friend and colleague Senator Bonnell to take the action he took to get this important subject on the Senate Order Paper in the form of an inquiry, and he accomplished this in a forceful and convincing manner.

● (1450)

Senator Bonnell said:

It is my hope to bring to the attention of the Senate the terms of the British North America Act as they affect transportation in Canada with special emphasis on the province of Prince Edward Island.

It is also my sincere hope to bring to the attention of the Senate the Terms of Union between the Dominion of Canada and the Dominion of Newfoundland which became effective on April 1, 1949. As in the case of Prince Edward Island's entry into union, with a number of other provinces, the British North America Act was the basis of the terms which were negotiated between the Dominion of Canada and the Dominion of Newfoundland for union of the two dominions. Needless to say, the aforementioned terms of union became an amendment to, and they form part of, the British North America Act and are, therefore, embraced within the orbit of this debate on transportation in Canada.

Term 31 spells out what the Government of Canada was prepared to do, and it commences as follows:

At the date of Union, or as soon thereafter as practicable, Canada will take over the following services and will as from the date of Union relieve the Province of Newfoundland of the public costs incurred in respect of each service taken over, namely,

(a) The Newfoundland Railway, including steamship and other marine services—

And it goes on to specify the services to be taken over.

I submit, honourable senators, that it was the unvarnished belief, not only of the members of the Newfoundland delegation who negotiated and signed the document, but also of every Newfoundlander who supported it, that the phraseology of that document meant what it said, and was above reproach.

The former Minister of Transport, the Honourable Jean Marchand, in announcing a new national transportation policy on June 16, 1975, stated that the Department of Transport was in a mess. It is my opinion that any knowledgeable person would be on safe ground in saying that transportation in the province of Newfoundland defies description at this time.

Just what has caused such a state of affairs? It would appear that the Government of Canada, following the date of union, entrusted to Canadian National Railways the operation, maintenance et cetera, of what was formerly known as the Newfoundland Railway and Steamship Services. I have to say here that I would feel ungrateful if I did not harbour some semblance of sympathy and understanding for Canadian National. It was obliged to take over a batch of worn-out passenger and freight equipment, and a railroad bed in a sick and dilapidated condition, brought on by overload handling of war equipment, armed forces personnel, and lack of maintenance. It must, therefore, be written off as just another of Newfoundland's contributions to the battle of the Atlantic and the allied war effort.

I submit, honourable senators, that the management of Canadian National reluctantly—very reluctantly—adopted this strange and complicated relative, and never did endeavour to establish a proper relationship. Not too many years elapsed before it became evident to Newfoundlanders in general, and to railwaymen in particular, that the seeds of phase-out were being planted, and would be carefully cultivated and grown in time. It would seem to suggest that while roadbed improvements consistent with safety were being executed, little, if any, new passenger train equipment was to be placed in service, notwithstanding the fact that a booming rail passenger business was in evidence on a daily basis but with a limited "train consist", with apparent administration by remote control from across the continent—Moncton and/or Montreal.

The limited "train consist" is the make-up of the train and, on a daily basis, was generally as follows: three sleeping cars; three day coaches; one dining car; one baggage car; one express car; and one mail car—a 10-car train in total. Little, if any, consideration for change in this "train consist" was to be entertained without consultation, even when a backlog of passengers was becoming evident. If additional cars were to be added, this move, if executed, in some instances was not begun until within minutes of the departure time of the train.

It would appear that the yardstick by which the regular "train consist" was measured was the number of passengers standing in the aisles of the three regular day coaches, and the number of applicants on the waiting list for sleeping-car accommodation, over and above the regular quota for the three regular sleeping cars. When the regular aisles began to show signs of clearing of standees and the waiting list began to decline, to give any indication that every passenger may get a seat, the third day coach and the third sleeping car were removed from the "train consist", and this game was skilfully played until the needed evidence to show a falling-off in passenger traffic came forth—the patrons actually being driven away through apparent neglect and poor service—and then a reduction in the number of trains per week immediately followed.

Having served on a joint union committee—and, by the way, that word "joint" is spelled j-o-i-n-t, not g-i-a-n-t—which was made up of representatives of the nine or ten standard railroad labour unions in Newfoundland to oppose the reduction in the number of daily passenger trains across the province and making mainland connections, I shared the distinction with the others of being sarcastically referred to as "protectors of jobs" for our memberships and creating additional expense. "Job protectors" was a dirty title in those days, but in today's world a more deserving appellation would be "heroes."

I regret to say we received very little outside support for our endeavours to preserve the continuation of a daily passenger train service across the province of Newfoundland. Those Newfoundlanders who could render some worthwhile assistance were flying high by air at the time and did not have any spare time, preferring to utilize the time they had on producing their adverse writings and local ridicule.

Those whose assignment it was to execute what we may call Phase One—abandonment of Newfoundland's passenger train service—must be feeling exceedingly happy with the introduction of the fashionable and attractive name "road cruiser service," commonly referred to as a "bus service."

One may almost be prompted at this juncture to wonder how the purchase of the buses and the disposal of Newfoundland's rail passenger car equipment were transacted. Were the buses purchased through tender? Was the passenger car equipment advertised and disposed of to the highest bidder? Now this question raises its ugly head: From where, or from whom, did the proposal to abandon the rail passenger system and substitute a bus system in the province of Newfoundland originate? It was common knowledge that a deficit had been accumulating over the years under Newfoundland Railway administration, and was thus far continuing. It may be safe to suggest that this continuing deficit was a strong reason for consideration of abandonment of the rail passenger service, but who was to take care of the deficit which may follow a bus service operation? Surely it was not someone's absurd idea, in order to absolve the Canadian National Railways and/or the Government of Canada, that the puzzle be juggled in such a manner as to allow one or the other to place the taxpayers of the province of Newfoundland in the ridiculous, despicable, unacceptable and discriminatory position of having to pick up the tab.

I wish at this juncture to refer to the struggle which was experienced during preparation of the contents of the ballot to be used in the 1949 referendum—responsible government, commission government. The long and bitter struggle as to whether or not union with Canada should be given a ringside seat created some warm exchanges. Then too, economic union with the United States was also receiving no mean attention for a place on the ballot, and the United States' evaluation of Newfoundland's geographical position, guarding the gateway to the St. Lawrence River and the Great Lakes as it does, was not going unnoticed. At one point in the conflict it was found necessary for the advocates of confederation to term economic union with the United States as "comic union." Some Newfoundlanders now are beginning to wonder if Newfoundland did not end up with "comic union" after all.

● (1500)

Subsequent to the abandonment of Newfoundland's rail passenger service, Phase Two, the elimination of rail freight services in the province of Newfoundland, began to work off its growing pains and swing into second gear. The situation appears to be that no one knows exactly what is transpiring, notwithstanding the efforts of union officials to pry information from railway management pertaining to the jobs of the men they represent and the service the people are to receive. Only quite recently one railway union officer, General Chairman Butt of the Transportation-Communications Employees Union, formerly the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, gave some vent to the frustration he is experiencing, but at the same time stated he could not lay any blame with local railway officials for the lack of information because they were unable to secure it for themselves. No doubt the push-button experts only release sufficient information to keep the multitude relaxed. While it seems there never has been much open conflict, neither has there been an honest release of information and cooperation between management and unions.

In General Chairman Butt's comment recently in the Evening Telegram, he makes mention, among other things, of a reduction in, and/or elimination of, 21 freight train runs over a given period. This information indicates to me, at least, that the so-called Phase Two delaying service tactics are slowly but surely bearing fruit, but CN's public relations officer counters by saying there is a reduction in traffic movement but the lay-offs are just temporary.

Here is an example of what I am endeavouring to get across to you, honourable senators, in respect of Phase Two. Beginning some two years ago, on July 8, 1974, a shipment consisting of 14 cartons of merchandise was accepted at Toronto, Ontario, destined for an eastern Newfoundland railroad point. It arrived on August 26, or 49 days later. A second shipment from Toronto on July 17, 1974, arrived at an eastern Newfoundland railroad point on August 28, or 42 days later. Of a third shipment from Toronto on September 4, 35 cartons of merchandise, approximately half or 18 cartons, arrived at its eastern Newfoundland railroad point on October 2, and the balance, 17 cartons, arrived at its destination on October 19.

Now for a brief run-down of west-moving traffic—that is to say, from St. John's to and between Port aux Basques. L.C.L. (less than carload) and express shipments from St. John's to, say, points such as Port Blandford, Alexander Bay, Gambo and Glenwood are moved from St. John's to Grand Falls, 275 miles, unloaded from railroad cars at Grand Falls and loaded on CNR trucks for distribution over the trans-Canada highway, in a reverse movement of approximately 120 miles. It takes a period of approximately one week to dispatch goods a couple of hundred miles. With this kind of service, how does Canadian National Railways expect to keep the old, and solicit new, business? There is another situation that causes frustration between railway patrons and station employees, and that is the arrival of goods without bills of lading and/or the arrival of bills of lading without the goods.

In addition to the aforementioned trivial matters, patrons of Canadian National Railways, Newfoundland Services, were subjected to an overcharge, to the tune of millions of dollars, for three to five years, due to increased freight charges, through a so-called oversight of not receiving the benefit of the Maritime Freight Rates Act. I wonder if there were ever any refunds, and who received them.

Not only are the shortcomings of the Newfoundland Road Cruiser Service now beginning to emerge, but the revenue needed to satisfy the creditors is failing to come forth. Canadian National Railways has, I presume, turned to the government for financing of the deficit in its passenger service in accordance with the Railway Act, just as it would with respect to its rail passenger service operations on the remainder of the system. That remainder embraces all other Canadian provinces, with the exception now, I presume, of Prince Edward Island. The government has declined to grant financial assistance, as this assistance only applies to rail passenger equipment, and the Supreme Court of Canada has so ruled.

Newfoundland's passenger train equipment has been confiscated. Road cruiser or bus service equipment has been forced upon Newfoundland. Canadian National Railways or the Canadian Government anticipates passing the buck in such a way that the bus passengers will in time absorb the deficit, notwithstanding the fact that the people of Newfoundland are the highest taxed people in all of Canada, and, in addition, pay the highest bus fares. This apparent lack of concern for the needs of the people of the province is beginning to foster contempt, not only for Canadian National Railways but also for government as well. Such lack of concern is the primary reason for the abandonment of our rail passenger train service. Newfoundland is now left without any rail passenger equipment, a depreciating road cruiser supply, an apparent lack of desire to handle less than carload freight shipments, and one great big need to increase passenger rates to save Canadian National Railways from a dilemma conceived by its own lack of interest and knowledge of railroad and steamship operations in Newfoundland.

Honourable senators, I wish to call your attention to that part of the Terms of Union which, in my humble opinion, reinforces the belief instilled in us by Term 31. I refer to paragraph (2) of Term 32, which reads as follows:

For the purpose of railway rate regulation the Island of Newfoundland will be included in the Maritime region of Canada, and through-traffic moving between North Sydney and Port aux Basques will be treated as all-rail traffic.

Paragraph (3) of Term 32 is sufficient in itself to bring moral pressure, if not legal pressure, on the government to restore passenger rail service. The contention is that Canada still generally provides a rail passenger service in all other provinces with the exception of the other island province, Prince Edward Island.

Another of the Terms of Union which reinforces the belief instilled in us by Term 31 is Term 36, which reads:

Without prejudice to the legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada under the British North America Acts 1867 to 1946, any works, property or services taken over by Canada pursuant to these Terms shall thereupon be subject to the legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada.

It is common knowledge now that Canadian National Railways has sought and received permission to increase bus fares in Newfoundland to the tune of 30 per cent. In view of Term 36, part of which reads, "any works, property or services taken over by Canada pursuant to these Terms shall thereupon be subject to the legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada," I am of the opinion, together with many other Newfoundlanders, that at this time the people of Newfoundland should be enjoying a reasonably up-to-date passenger rail service, with feeder line bus services in operation from off-line points operated by private carriers giving service to the people.

● (1510)

In an earlier speech in this chamber, I proposed that the stretch of water extending from Port aux Basques, Newfoundland, to North Sydney, Nova Scotia, be considered, for more reasons than one, an extension of Canadian National Railways and the trans-Canada highway. It would provide free movement among and between all provinces, and wipe out the deterrent that now applies to Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland—pay your way or stay at home. It may not be too late, even at this late date, to work out a plan suitable to all interested parties, and to the people who are expecting some recognition in their transportation needs, which will keep Canadian National Railways off the highway and out of competition with private operators.

With a plan of this kind, at this stage, practically out of the picture, the only thing now which may help to heal the chasm which has been allowed to open would be the construction of a four-lane highway extending (a) from Port aux Basques to Deer Lake, (b) from Grand Falls to Gander, and (c) from Clarenville to St. John's, and a well maintained two-lane highway where the four-lane service is not immediately available. This may sound like a large order entailing, as it no doubt will, a large layout of money, but indifference, neglect and lack of knowledge of Newfoundland's actual requirements commands a price, and that price could very well mean the restoration of confidence and goodwill which seem to be going by the wayside.

I wish to reiterate, in no unmistakable terms, that the greater number of people in the province of Newfoundland are diametrically opposed to any increase in bus fares and ferry rates on the following grounds:

(a) Cabot Strait should be designated a continuation of Canadian National Railways and the trans-Canada highway;

(b) They are now paying the highest bus fares in Canada; and

(c) They are already the highest taxed people in Canada.

The application for bus fare increases has been made by Canadian National Railways to the Newfoundland Public Utilities Commission. I submit with respect, honourable senators, that the provincial utilities commission has no jurisdiction in this matter in view of Term 36, which reads:

Without prejudice to the legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada under the British North America Acts 1867 to 1946, any works, property or services taken over by Canada pursuant to these Terms shall thereupon be subject to the legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada.

My contention in this respect is further supported by Paragraph (2) of Term 32, which reads:

For the purpose of railway rate regulation the Island of Newfoundland will be included in the Maritime region of Canada, and through-traffic moving between North Sydney and Port aux Basques will be treated as all-rail traffic.

It has always been my belief and understanding that one of the many roles of the Senate is to protect and defend the rights of the minorities, whether they be people or provinces. Here we have the two smaller provinces of Canada, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland, crying out for that protection and defence right now. Therefore, I join with and support Senator Bonnell and other senators in their suggestion that this inquiry should be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Transportation and Communications for further study and exploration.

In conclusion, I have one suggestion for the Transportation and Communications Committee, and it is that, among other matters, they give some thought to submitting a recommendation to the government that early steps be taken to give back the operation of railways in Canada, and in Newfoundland in particular, to railwaymen, thereby taking it out of the control of the campus push-button experts.

I thank you, honourable senators, for bearing with me for the past 20 minutes.

On motion of Senator Macdonald, debate adjourned.

INTERNAL ECONOMY

REGULATIONS RESPECTING ATTENDANCE OF SENATORS— MOTION FOR ADOPTION OF REPORT OF COMMITTEE—MOTION IN AMENDMENT NEGATIVED AND REPORT ADOPTED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Laird, seconded by the Honourable Senator Petten, for the adoption of the Report of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration to which was referred the subject-matter of a motion containing proposed regulations entitled: "Regulations of the Senate respecting attendance of Senators at sittings of the Senate and deductions to be made from the sessional allowance", and

On the motion in amendment thereto of the Honourable Senator Côté, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Robichaud, P.C., that the Report be not now adopted, but that it be referred back to the Committee with instructions to study the possibility of modifying the formula proposed in the Report to record and control the absences of Senators and of adopting a procedure similar to that of the other House in this regard.—(Honourable Senator Petten).

Senator Petten: Honourable senators, I defer to Senator Laird.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Hon. Keith Laird: Honourable senators, we have now had ample opportunity to think about this Order. Therefore, I respectfully suggest that we reject the amendment, and then adopt the report.

We do not need the amendment, for the simple reason that the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration is willing to consider any suggestion regarding this problem from any member of this house at any time. Therefore, there is no object in referring the report back to the committee.

Secondly, it should not be forgotten that this report results from a motion made by Senator Godfrey, which suggested an increase in the monetary penalty for absence. After full consideration the committee, I remind you, decided that was not the solution to the problem; that the correct solution is what is contained in the report, namely, when a senator writes an excuse for absence on public business, he or she should state what the public business is. It is as simple as that, and no problem should arise.

Finally, the report also takes the matter out of the hands of any members of the staff, who really should not have to shoulder that responsibility. It puts the final responsibility on the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, which means that every one of you, my colleagues, is put on an equal basis. Everyone is treated equally, and is judged by his or her peers.

Therefore, it is my respectful suggestion that we reject the amendment, and adopt the report.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Laird, seconded by the Honourable Senator Petten, that the report of the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration be now adopted.

In amendment, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Côté, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Robichaud, P.C., that the report be not now adopted, but that it be referred back to the committee with instructions to study the possibility of modifying the formula proposed in the report to record and control the absences of senators and of adopting a procedure similar to that of the other house in this regard.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

An Hon. Senator: Yes.

Some Hon. Senators: No.

The Hon. the Speaker: Those in favour of the motion in amendment will please say "yea".

An Hon. Senator: Yea.

The Hon. the Speaker: Those who are against the motion in amendment will please say "nay".

Some Hon. Senators: Nay.

The Hon. the Speaker: In my opinion, the "nays" have it, and I declare the amendment lost. Shall the main motion carry?

Senator Greene: On division.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, May 13, 1976

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Langlois tabled:

Copies of Ordinances, Chapters 1 to 14 inclusive, passed by the Council of the Northwest Territories during its 1974 First (51 consecutive) Session and assented to February 8, 1974, pursuant to section 16(1) of the Northwest Territories Act, Chapter N-22, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1976-906, dated April 13, 1976.

Copy of Ordinance passed by the Council of the Yukon Territory at its 1976 First Session and assented to March 1, 1976, pursuant to section 20(1) of the Yukon Act, Chapter Y-2, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1976-847, dated April 6, 1976.

National Capital Fund Budget of the National Capital Commission for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, as approved by Order in Council P.C. 1976-996, dated April 27, 1976.

INTERNAL ECONOMY

COMMITTEE ON NATIONAL FINANCE—SUPPLEMENTARY BUDGET TABLED

Senator Laird, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, tabled the committee's report approving the supplementary budget presented to it by the Chairman of the Standing Committee on National Finance for the proposed expenditures of the said committee with regard to its examination and consideration of such legislation and other matters as may be referred to it, authorized by the Senate on December 5, 1974.

COMMITTEE ON BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE—
SUPPLEMENTARY BUDGET TABLED

Senator Laird, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, tabled the committee's report approving the supplementary budget presented to it by the Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce for the proposed expenditures of the said committee for the purposes of its examination and consideration of such legislation and other matters as may be referred to it, authorized by the Senate on November 19, 1975.

COMMITTEE ON SCIENCE POLICY—SUPPLEMENTARY BUDGET
TABLED

Senator Laird, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, tabled the committee's report approving the supplementary budget presented to it by the Chairman of the Special Senate Committee on Science Policy with respect to its consideration of Canadian Government and other expenditures on scientific activities and matters related thereto, as authorized by the Senate on July 24, 1975.

CRIMINAL LAW

INTERIM REPORT OF LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS COMMITTEE TABLED AND PRINTED AS AN APPENDIX

Senator Goldenberg: Honourable senators, I have the honour to table an interim report of the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs on the subject matter of Bill C-83, for the better protection of Canadian society against perpetrators of violent and other crimes.

I would ask that this report be printed as an appendix to the Debates of the Senate and to the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate of this day and form part of the permanent records of this house.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(For text of report see appendix, pp. 2127-2128)

Senator Goldenberg: With the permission of honourable senators, I should like to make a brief explanation of the report I have just tabled.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Goldenberg: This is an interim report. The committee did not make a clause-by-clause study of the bill. We have deferred that until the bill comes before the committee after passing the other house, if it is passed in the other house. The report does not make specific recommendations. It deals with a number of principal points raised, and the committee recommends reconsideration of some of the clauses in the bill with suggested changes.

The report, I believe, speaks for itself, and I will not take the time of the Senate to summarize the views of the committee on the particular points.

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West): May I ask if it is the intention of the chairman or of the committee to refer the report to a committee of the other place which might be studying the bill in detail?

Senator Goldenberg: In reply to that question, the Minister of Justice has asked me to make certain that he receives a copy of this report immediately for consideration by himself and the committee of the other place. That was one of the main reasons why the committee made an interim report.

Senator Molson: Does the honourable senator propose to move that the report be taken into consideration here at a future date, or does he feel that tabling is sufficient?

Senator Goldenberg: I feel that tabling is sufficient. As I said, it is an interim report. If honourable senators want it to be considered, it could be done. In my view it would be more appropriate to do that when and if we report on the bill as such, after a clause-by-clause study when it is before the Senate.

Senator Molson: If I am not mistaken, there is nothing that precludes it from being taken into consideration.

Senator Goldenberg: Not at all.

● (1410)

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce have power to sit while the Senate is sitting on Wednesday next, May 19, 1976, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators have heard the motion. Is there unanimous consent?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, May 18, 1976, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

As honourable senators will recall, in moving the adjournment of the Senate on Thursday last, I indicated it would probably be necessary for the Senate to sit on Monday evening of next week. However, I have now been informed that no bills will likely reach the Senate from the other place either this week or early next week. That being so, I think it would be advisable for the Senate to adjourn until Tuesday evening.

In giving my usual brief summary of the work for the coming week, I shall deal first with the committees. On Tuesday the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs will meet at 9.30 a.m. to consider further Bill C-20, respecting citizenship. The National Finance Committee has scheduled a meeting for 2 p.m. to consider its report on manpower. The Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs will hold an in camera meeting at 2.30 p.m. on conflict of interest. The Special Joint Committee on the National Capital Region will meet at 3.30 p.m., and the [Senator Connolly (Ottawa West).]

Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments will meet at 8.30 p.m. on the same day.

On Wednesday the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee will meet at 9.30 a.m. and again at 2.30 p.m. If Bill C-89, to amend the Anti-Inflation Act, has by then been referred to that committee, it will deal first with it and then proceed to hear witnesses on Bill C-58. The Special Senate Committee on Science Policy will meet at 3.30 p.m. on Wednesday.

On Thursday the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee will meet at 9.30 a.m. to hear further witnesses on Bill C-58. The National Finance Committee will meet at the same time to consider the main estimates. The Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments has scheduled a meeting for 11 a.m., and the Special Joint Committee on the National Capital Region will meet at 3.30 p.m. on the same date.

In the Senate we shall continue with second reading debate on Bill C-89, to amend the Anti-Inflation Act; Bill S-34, to amend the Aeronautics Act; Bill S-35, to amend an act to repeal the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act and to amend the Trade Marks Act, and other items on the Order Paper.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask the Deputy Leader of the Government a question. Did I understand him to say that a committee will sit at 8.30 p.m. on Tuesday?

Senator Langlois: Yes, the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments has scheduled a meeting for 8.30 p.m. on Tuesday.

Senator Grosart: Does that committee have permission to sit while the Senate is sitting?

Senator Langlois: Since it is a joint committee, I do not think permission is required.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, if I may venture—I fear it is a transgression of the rules—if I may venture, I can assure the Honourable the Acting Leader of the Opposition that in fact the committee has that power. It was settled a long time ago. There is no doubt about it at all.

Senator Langlois: It is a joint committee.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, perhaps I can point out that we seem to be in a state of utter confusion once again about this so-called block system of committees. My understanding was that there was a general understanding that we would sit on Monday nights. I am not necessarily saying that we on this side are in favour of that, but now we are in the position where certain committees have elected to take Tuesday as their day of sitting. This would apply, of course, to the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs, which now meets at 9.30 on Tuesday morning, clearly on the understanding that the Senate would be sitting on Monday, which was part of the background of this new arrangement. It seems to me that we are now back to an utter ad hoc set of decisions as to whether we will sit on Monday night or Tuesday night, thus apparently destroying the whole concept to which so much time was given by the committee chaired by Senator Bourget.

I recall that the Leader of the Opposition made the suggestion that it would make more sense for us to have a standard arrangement by which the Senate would meet on Tuesday morning. This would suit the convenience of many senators, and would get us over this impossible position where, as in this case, a committee has given up its right—if that is the proper word—to sit on Thursday or some other day and has decided to sit every Tuesday at 9.30 on the understanding that senators would be here because they would have been called for a Senate sitting on Monday night.

I would ask the Deputy Leader of the Government if there is some intention to standardize this. I quite appreciate that there are serious practical objections to the Senate always sitting on Monday night, and I would ask him if consideration will be given to the suggestion of the Leader of the Opposition that Tuesday morning would be a much more sensible time, and have the matter standardized so that committees would be able to make their arrangements on a much better basis than at present. I do not know how many senators will be here for the meeting of the Foreign Affairs Committee or any other committee sitting early that day.

I would also call attention to the fact that we are now back into the old bad habit of permitting committees to sit while the Senate is sitting. For the next two weeks the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce has requested, quite understandably, permission to sit on Wednesday while the Senate is sitting. We will also have a joint committee sitting on Tuesday night. This again raises the problem of whether senators will not be faced with the decision whether to attend a committee or be in their places in the Senate. I hope these new changes, which appear to have been made on a completely ad hoc basis, will not destroy the whole system that was set up after so much care and consideration by the special committee.

Senator Argue: Honourable senators, I do not necessarily object to the principle that Senator Grosart has enunciated, but I do think we can get ourselves into a strait-jacket. If this committee feels it needs to meet at 8.30 o'clock next Tuesday night and the Senate feels it should meet at the same time, it seems to me that with our membership of that joint committee, I believe of some six senators, there is really no reason why we cannot man the Senate chamber and man that committee as well. I know it is fine to have a block system, and it is all right to get things as orderly as possible, but sometimes we have to do things that are practical, and if this is a practical thing I would think it should be done.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, perhaps I might be allowed to answer this question to the best of my ability. As the honourable Acting Leader of the Opposition knows, I have nothing to do with co-ordinating committee sittings. There is a subcommittee in charge of that, composed of Senators Bourget, Macdonald, Cook and Asselin.

● (1420)

They have been doing a very good job, and I do not think I should interfere with what they have been doing. I wish to remark to my honourable friend that the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments has the power to sit when the Senate is sitting. This committee does not come under the jurisdiction or competence of our co-ordinating committee. Since the Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments is a joint committee, there is very little to say about its sittings. I believe Senator Forsey will support me in this respect. Therefore, I do not think that I can add anything further with respect to the Monday night sittings.

We had Monday night sittings on a trial basis for about a month and a half before the Easter recess. We have come to the conclusion that we should carry on now with Monday night sittings until the end of the session. There will be exceptions to that. We have no legislation coming from the other place for next Monday, and we have been able to arrange our committee sittings within the three days that the Senate will be sitting next week. I do not think we should come back Monday night when we have nothing new coming before the Senate.

Such an exception will take place again the following week because Monday, the 24th of May, is the Queen's birthday. The House of Commons and the Senate will not be sitting that day, and we will have to schedule our committee work for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of that week. From then on, as far as possible we will stick to the plan of sitting from Monday to Thursday each week if the work before the Senate so requires.

If Senator Bourget, who is more knowledgeable than I about the workings of the so-called block system, would care to add a further explanation, he may do so and I would appreciate very much his doing so.

Senator Bourget: Honourable senators, as Senator Grosart said, there is some confusion about the sittings of committees. I quite agree with him. This unfortunate situation has arisen because many bills are coming to us at the same time.

The day before yesterday the chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee told me that he was being pressed to start the committee's study on Bill C-20. I tried to arrange matters to accommodate him, and I told him he probably could sit on Tuesday next. I consulted the Acting Director of Committees and was informed that only one other committee was sitting on that day and there would be no conflict in membership.

It should also be realized that when Senator Cook, Senator Macdonald and Senator Asselin worked on the block system, it was with the understanding that we would be sitting Monday evenings. But next week our first sitting will be Tuesday evening. So what am I to do? There are only three sitting days, and I can't accommodate all committee chairmen. It just so happens, as I said, that sometimes too many bills come to us at once. I am trying to do my best, but if someone else can do better, okay, I will give him the job.

Senator Grosart was right in stating that there is some confusion, but I hope that with the cooperation of all committee chairmen we will be able to solve the problem. As far as the two joint committees are concerned—the Joint Committee on the National Capital Region and the Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments—we cannot do much because we have to work with the other place.

Once again, I just ask for the cooperation of all committee chairmen in trying to solve the problem of scheduling committee hearings.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, if I may just add a footnote to what the Deputy Leader of the Government and Senator Bourget have said: as far as the committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments is concerned, this is, as has been pointed out, a joint committee and we have to consider to some extent the arrangements in the other place, which also has a block system.

It has been the practice now for some time for the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments to meet regularly every Tuesday evening at 8.30. There is nothing novel about this. It has been quite standard and it has been provided for by a long-standing report adopted by the Senate that we have power to sit during the time when the Senate is sitting.

Senator Beaubien: Honourable senators, I should just like to tell you what I told the Acting Leader of the Opposition a moment ago. It is all very well for senators who will be here Monday night in any event to suggest sitting Tuesday morning, but what of those senators who live far away? I am not complaining so much for myself, because after all I live in Montreal, which is not all that far, but there are many senators whose homes are a long distance from Ottawa.

Of course, if a senator has reached the point where he does not do anything in his office any more anyway, and has then moved from some other place in Canada 3,000 miles away and lives here because the tax advantages are better, and all that sort of thing, that is fine. To such people it does not matter. Senators who live in Ottawa can come in at any time. However, in my opinion, unless there is something to do here I see no sense in having a sitting every second Tuesday morning.

As honourable senators are aware, we have had nothing special to do in the house in the last few weeks. There has been no heavy amount of work to handle, although we have had quite a bit of committee work. I think some thought should be given to the matter before a decision is made to change the practice of sitting Tuesday night and Wednesday and Thursday afternoons. If it is necessary to come at other times, we will come. There is no question about that—unless we write in, of course, to say that we are away on public business!

Senator Macdonald: I think it is time you took your place, Senator Beaubien.

Senator Beaubien: No, I think I will just go.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, if I may, I will just say that I merely asked if consideration had been given to the suggestion made by the Leader of the Opposition.

Senator Langlois: We always do.

Senator Rowe: Honourable senators, I have just a few points to make relating to Senator Beaubien's remarks. As Senator Beaubien intimated, there are two classes of senators: those who live within reasonable travelling distance of this chamber and those who do not. The former would include Toronto, Montreal and Quebec as well as this general area, while the latter would include those of us who live at the periphery, or the extreme ends of the country.

[Senator Bourget.]

With summer and the tourist season coming on we will be faced with difficulties in making reservations. Indeed, I had a good example of that only today when making a reservation at the Chateau Laurier for next Tuesday. I was told that everything was booked up and that no room was available. When I said, "Are you telling me that, after 25 years of staying here periodically and for the last four or five years living here off and on, there is no room available for me?" I was dealing with a new clerk and as it happened I was able to book my room. But that experience is indicative of the situation which will face us in respect of both reserving rooms in hotels and, more particularly, travelling by aircraft. It should be remembered that during the tourist season, accommodation and transportation are often booked up two to three weeks ahead.

Another point I should like to make, and I hope I am not out of order in doing so, is that I agree entirely with what Senator Beaubien had to say about Monday night sittings. I do not see the necessity or the relevancy of them. I think the needs of committees can be met without Monday night sittings. For example, I am sure that if the Foreign Affairs Committee were to sit on a Tuesday afternoon it would have a quorum, even though the first sitting of the Senate chamber was not until Tuesday evening. Most senators on the Foreign Affairs Committee who would be coming in for the Tuesday night sitting could be here for a Tuesday afternoon meeting of this committee, of which I happen to be a member. I think the same could be said about the other committees. We should not have what is in my view a totally unnecessary Monday night sitting, to the great inconvenience of many senators, particularly those living in British Columbia or Newfoundland or Nova Scotia.

● (1430)

Motion agreed to.

[Translation]

Senator Asselin: I would like to put a question to the Deputy Leader of the Government. Since the current session will possibly end in the near future, namely at the end of June, in order to help the opposition in its work, we would like to know the government's priorities in terms of matters to be dealt with by Parliament before the end of the session. Could the Deputy Leader of the Government supply us next week with a list to help us in our work?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I am grateful to Senator Asselin for leaving me at least until next week to answer the question. I certainly will try to get an answer at the beginning of next week.

[English]

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

CANADIAN DEFENCE SPENDING—REMARKS BY UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR TO CANADA—QUESTION

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Acting Leader of the Government with reference to a report in today's Globe and Mail of a speech by the American ambassador.

It would appear that General Norstad, of happy memory, now has a successor. The report says—and this is leading up to the question I shall ask—that the ambassador said that a satisfactory level of Canadian military spending has become critical to the defence of North America, adding that the United States is having difficulty footing the bills so that it can match aggressive Russian military spending in Europe and the North Atlantic. He also said that one of the major irritants in Canadian-U.S. relations has developed because many Americans believe that Canada gives too low a priority to defence spending. Then comes a direct quotation from the ambassador:

The United States is close to the margin point when it comes to mounting an effective defence over Europe and the North Atlantic... So Canadian contributions to this effort have now become critical.

The report adds:

Mr. Enders said he has been heartened by Canada's decision to increase its defence spending by 12 per cent annually over the next 10 years.

Then the direct quotation of the ambassador's words resumes:

Ottawa, by deciding to purchase long-range patrol planes, will improve our defence capability in the North Atlantic and I anticipate that the Canadian government will proceed soon to other re-equipment decisions.

Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Acting Leader of the Government whether it is the intention of the government to make any comment on what seems to me to be a gross breach of international decorum by the United States ambassador in Canada in the expressions I have just quoted. I strongly suspect that if the Canadian ambassador in Washington undertook to make a speech down there, telling the Americans that they were spending too much on defence, the roof would blow off, and his recall would be asked for.

I wonder if the Acting Leader of the Government can give us any indication of the government's position on this very dubious statement—to put it mildly—by the American ambassador?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, as I am a very casual reader of the Globe and Mail, I have not read the article in question, and since the question is to some degree argumentative, I hope the honourable senator will give me the opportunity to read the article and to digest this lengthy question. I hope also that my honourable friend will give me the time to get the necessary reaction from governmental authorities before I answer his question. I am therefore taking the question as notice.

Senator Forsey: Thank you very much.

[Translation]

INTERNAL ECONOMY

REGULATIONS RESPECTING ATTENDANCE OF SENATORS— ADOPTION OF REPORT OF COMMITTEE—QUESTION

Senator Côté: Honourable senators, I have a question for the deputy government leader. Would it be possible to organize some procedure so that when a senator has a motion, or an amendment to a motion, standing in his name on the order of business, he be informed in advance when that motion is to be disposed of?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, it is very difficult to answer that question categorically. If my honourable friend is asking us, since we are responsible for preparing the order of business of the house, to ascertain in advance when a senator has an item standing in his name on the Order Paper if that senator will be present when his motion is called, then I think that the business of the Senate would be enormously perturbed, if not made difficult to carry out, because I think it is up to the senator who has a motion on the Order Paper to make sure that he is here when his item may be discussed in this house. To ask the leader or deputy leader or any other person in charge of preparing the Orders of the Day of the Senate to ascertain in advance if such senator will be here, is nearly impossible, and would make the job excessively difficult.

I will try to see if it would be possible to do something to accommodate my honourable friend but right now I think he has very little hope of it being possible.

Senator Côté: The thing is that a motion standing in my name was voted on yesterday. I was present in this House for the greater part of the debates. However, I had to leave and almost immediately afterwards a vote was taken on a motion standing in my name. I feel I should have been told in advance.

Senator Langlois: I regret what happened to my honourable friend yesterday. However, I think it is rather difficult to prevent such things. I do not know if the honourable senator looked at the Orders of the Day, what we call the "scroll", but had he done so he would have seen that that motion would be called that day. I do not think anyone else can be blamed for the fact that Senator Côté was not present when that motion was called.

Senator Côté: When a motion is called some one always says "Stand, stand" when the honourable senator concerned is not present.

[English]

Senator Argue: Honourable senators, I might say with reference to the point which is being discussed that I had stated to the Whip that Senator Hays wished to have this motion adjourned in his name, because he wished to speak on it. Now, I cannot speak for Senator Hays; he has to speak for himself. But I was under the impression that this motion would not be dealt with until at least Senator Hays was apprised of its coming to a vote.

Senator Petten: Honourable senators, to answer the question specifically, I had spoken to Senator Hays, not about this particular motion but he had seen me that day and the day before and he never mentioned it to me in any way.

Senator Argue: I understood that that was his intention.

Senator Petten: Well, he never indicated to me that he wished to speak.

Senator Argue: I am sure he can speak for himself, but that was my understanding.

ANTI-INFLATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—ORDER STANDS

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Stanbury, seconded by the Honourable Senator Greene, P.C., for the second reading of the Bill

C-89, intituled: "An Act to amend the Anti-Inflation Act".—(Honourable Senator Asselin, P.C.).

[Translation]

Senator Asselin: Honourable senators, I had intended to take part in today's debate. I know that several speakers have already done so. Unfortunately, I was unable to prepare myself adequately for a very important reason, the fact that Senator Flynn and I accompanied the future Prime Minister of Canada on his visit to Quebec City. I was therefore unable to prepare my speech for the Senate today. With leave, I move that the debate—

Senator Denis: Was it Mr. Trudeau?

Senator Asselin: No, it was not Mr. Trudeau, but the future Prime Minister of Canada. You do not know him? You soon will.

Senator Denis: Who was it?

Senator Asselin: It was Joe Clark.

With leave, I shall ask for the adjournment of this debate. Does Senator Côté wish to ask a question?

Senator Côté: Why do you laugh when you say that it was Joe Clark?

Senator Asselin: I say that Joe Clark is the future Prime Minister of Canada, and I was very happy to accompany him to Quebec City.

Therefore, I ask that this order stand until next Tuesday night.

● (1440)

Order stands.

[English]

AERONAUTICS ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Andrew Thompson moved the second reading of Bill S-34, to amend the Aeronautics Act.

He said: Honourable senators, Bill S-34 proposes an amendment to Part V of the Aeronautics Act with respect to the provision of security measures for civil aircraft of foreign air carriers operating to and from airports in Canada. By way of background I would remind honourable senators that on July 27, 1973 the Aeronautics Act was amended by Bill C-128, to provide for security measures to be taken at airports, including the search of persons and property for the protection of passengers, crews and aircraft. Regulations were enacted on April 2, 1974 imposing the application of security measures on owners and operators of aircraft registered in Canada. I would emphasize those words "the application of security measures on owners and operators of aircraft registered in Canada".

Allow me to point out that Canada has been among those countries taking a particular interest in national, bilateral and multilateral efforts to combat the serious dangers and inconveniences imposed by acts of unlawful interference with civil aviation. Canada's contributions have been significant to the negotiation, under the auspices of the International Civil Aviation Organization, of three important international conventions, and to which Canada has become a party. These are the 1963 Tokyo Convention on Offences and Certain Other Acts Committed on Board Aircraft; the 1970 Hague Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft; and the 1971 Montreal Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts Against the Safety of Civil Aviation. The conventions have not, however, been ratified by more than half of the member nations of the International Civil Aviation Organization.

In view of the world-wide criminal and terrorist activities against international civil aviation, the International Civil Aviation Organization continues to direct its efforts toward the establishment of international standards and recommended practices. On March 22, 1974 the Council of the International Civil Aviation Organization adopted Annex 17 to the Chicago Convention on International Civil Aviation entitled: "Safeguarding International Civil Aviation against Acts of Unlawful Interference". This sets out standards and recommended practices for the protection of civil aviation. Canada has implemented the requirements of Annex 17, but not all countries have done so.

I return now to the principle of the Aeronautics Act, which incorporates Annex 17. It authorizes the Governor in Council to make regulations requiring the owners or operators of aircraft registered in Canada—I wish to emphasize that—the owners or operators of aircraft registered in Canada to establish, maintain and carry out such security measures as may be prescribed by the regulations. Pursuant thereto regulations have been made imposing the obligation of security measures on the owners and operators of aircraft registered in Canada. The act, however, does not authorize regulations which would impose the obligation of establishing and carrying out similar security measures on foreign air carriers operating into and out of airports in Canada.

Under the present wording of the act, security measures in respect of flights by foreign air carriers from airports in Canada can only be established and carried out by the Ministry of Transport. The result is that Canadian air carriers are burdened with the expense of establishing and carrying out security measures, whereas the Ministry of Transport must bear the burden of establishing, and the expense of carrying out, security measures in respect of passengers departing from Canada with foreign air carriers. This is discriminatory.

In addition, the absence of security measures by foreign air carriers transporting passengers into airports in Canada is of considerable importance, as many European countries which do not subscribe to Annex 17 do not screen passengers or goods leaving by aircraft. The coming Olympic Games and other international events, including Habitat, to be held in Canada point up the necessity of requiring foreign air carriers operating to airports in Canada to adopt a security program in respect of all passengers and goods intended to be carried into Canada.

This brings me to the amendments to section 5(1). They clarify the authority to require all owners and operators of aircraft, whether registered in Canada or otherwise, to comply with security regulations in respect of flights into or out of Canadian airports. The foreign air carriers would be required to use security measures equivalent to those now followed by Canadian air carriers. The operators of Canadian registered aircraft are now required to comply with security regulations at their own expense, whereas foreign air carriers are not so required. The amendments would correct that situation.

The amendments also authorize the department to institute on its own security measures at airports applicable to all carriers, both domestic and foreign. This would enable the department to impose charges for any such security services provided. If this service had to be provided without charge to the carriers the cost to the department is estimated at approximately $200,000 annually. This latter provision, however, would only be used on the failure, particularly of foreign air carriers, to adopt a security system equivalent to that used by Canadian air carriers.

The amendments also make it an offence for foreign registered aircraft to land at an airport in Canada without being subject to security measures equivalent to those followed by Canadian operators. This provision will provide a measure of enforcement. Perhaps I should also add that it is the intention and hope of the department that the responsible foreign air carriers will comply with this without need of any type of enforcement, and their approach will be that of consulting with the foreign air carriers.

I should also add that approximately six months ago the United States introduced similar legislation. I notice that Senator Forsey is not here; he might feel, perhaps, that that is not an argument which should be used in support of a measure such as this. However, there is obviously need for this type of legislation in Canada, particularly in view of the anxiety there is in connection with international events in Canada, such as Habitat and the Olympic Games.

● (1450)

Senator Buckwold: I wonder if I might ask the honourable senator a question. Do other countries that prescribe to the arrangements, and where thorough security measures are taken, have similar enactments for Canadian airlines? When Air Canada leaves Paris or London, and security is carried out by officials there, is there a charge to Air Canada for that service, such as we would make for foreign airlines under this bill?

Senator Thompson: In some countries they do not have this type of security which we are proposing, and in some they do. One of the problems which our air carriers will have to face is that this type of security will be applied more and more in Europe. The International Civil Aviation Organization has proposed that security measures be enacted by every country. Presumably, there will be a situation where Air Canada will have to pay the same charges as the foreign carriers. But at this point, a number of countries are not imposing the same restriction.

Senator Buckwold: Apart from the United States, are there any countries that are charging Canadian airlines for that service?

Senator Thompson: I understand that the only country which has this type of policy for security at this time is the United States. Other countries, however, would be recovering their security costs through other means, such as higher landing fees and terminal service charges.

Senator McDonald: As I understand it, all security checks on airlines are performed during the boarding process. They are not performed when people are departing from aircraft. Many nations have refused to recognize the conventions signed at Montreal and other cities. How will Canada be assured or guaranteed, in respect of a flight leaving a certain country and coming to Canada—I am not talking about Air Canada, but foreign airlines—that this check will be made, when that particular country has refused in the past to sign international agreements? Will we have our security check force at some foreign airport? How can we be assured that the security check will take place?

Senator Thompson: With regard to signatories to conventions, the Tokyo convention was signed by 81 countries. I asked the experts at the department if that number included most of the major industrialized countries and the major airlines, and they told me that it did. There were 72 signatories to the Hague convention, and 64 to the Montreal convention. So I do not want to give the impression that there is not a trend by industrialized countries to become signatories.

However, in reply to the honourable senator, the very basis of this amendment is in order that the department, through the minister, will have authority to request that the airlines which are coming from other countries should meet ICAO standards of inspection and security requirements. If they do not, if they fall short of that, there are penalties which the department can impose. I should point out that in the United States they are even tougher in that they say to foreign airlines coming in, "If you do not meet these security requirements, and have not signed all the conventions, we may consider negating the air agreement we have with you."

Our people believe that they can work through consultation and negotiation with the foreign airlines and countries concerned. One of the reasons for the delay in the introduction of this bill is that feelers have been put out through the embassies to obtain the reaction of various countries, and I gather that there is now a fairly positive approach. It is felt that we will get cooperation. The responsible airlines, certainly, are deeply concerned about international incidents which cause havoc to the travelling public.

On motion of Senator Macdonald, for Senator Grosart, debate adjourned.

AN ACT TO REPEAL THE PROPRIETARY OR PATENT MEDICINE ACT AND TO AMEND THE TRADE MARKS ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Ernest G. Côtteau moved the second reading of Bill S-35, to amend an act to repeal the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act and to amend the Trade Marks Act.

He said: Honourable senators, approximately a year and a half ago, Bill S-9 was introduced in this chamber. That legislation, which received royal assent on April 24, 1975, repealed the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act effective July 1 of this year.

The legislation now before us seeks to change the date of repeal from July 1, 1976, to April 1, 1977. In addition, it extends the annual licence granted for proprietary medicines for 1976 to April 1, 1977.

During the next few minutes I will outline the various reasons which made it necessary to introduce this bill.

Without going into the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act and the regulations replacing it under the Food and Drugs Act, permit me to explain the government's policy on self-medication.

As the Honourable Marc Lalonde, Minister of National Health and Welfare, stated in consideration of Bill S-9 in Committee of the Whole in the other place, the government's policy is to recognize the importance of self-medication in the total health care system. Indeed, such a policy is intended to ease the pressure of services on health care professionals.

This objective is currently achieved through the federal legislation in the form of the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act and its eventual replacement by division 10, the Proprietary Medicine Division under the Food and Drugs Act. The legislation is intended to permit access to products by the general public for the relief of symptoms of minor ailments such as headache or indigestion.

Provincial governments also recognize that such products should be available to the general public. The federal government, based on assurances from deputy ministers' conferences and meetings with provincial officials, has every reason to believe that this policy will continue after the repeal of the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act.

Most importantly, the government is concerned that the policy I have just outlined be maintained during the transition period from the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act to proprietary medicine regulations under the Food and Drugs Act. To achieve this, provincial pharmacy legislation must be amended. To date, only two provinces have a mechanism in place which will permit proprietary medicines registered under the Food and Drugs Act to be sold in non-pharmacy outlets.

● (1500)

As I said earlier, consultations between federal and provincial officials indicate that there is every reason to believe that, barring unforeseen circumstances, the necessary legislation will be in place by April 1, 1977.

Perhaps an explanation of the relationship between federal and provincial legislation in respect of drugs would be in order. For that, I refer honourable senators to House of Commons Debates of Friday, April 11, 1975, where the Honourable Marc Lalonde put the situation in a nutshell. I quote from page 4730, as follows:

Now I would like to outline briefly the conditions under which various drug products can be sold, and to indicate the concern of my department that we do not disrupt this established pattern unnecessarily. As hon. members know, prescription drugs can be sold on the authorization of a prescription issued by a practitioner. Non-prescription drugs can be sold without such authorization. By virtue of provincial legislation, prescription drugs and those non-prescription drugs not presently registered under the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act can be sold only in drug stores or pharmacies. In general, also by virtue of provincial laws, only proprietary medicines presently registered under the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act are available outside pharmacies. Thus, in a pharmacy one can obtain all types of drugs, while in a non-pharmacy outlet one may obtain only proprietary medicines.

For various reasons, including material shortages and the uncertainty of scheduling of provincial legislation, proprietary medicine manufacturers would be unable to meet the July 1 deadline. In addition, reformulation of products because of the new legislation, as well as additional regulatory requirements under the Food and Drugs Act and regulations thereto, requires additional time to be implemented.

As all honourable senators undoubtedly are aware, the regulations governing proprietary medicines under the Food and Drugs Act were passed last year by the Governor in Council. The Health Protection Branch is now in the process of examining proprietary medicines to see that they are in compliance with the new legislation. I am informed that of the approximately 2,000 proprietary or patent medicines now registered under the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act, perhaps as few as 600 or 700 will be registered under the new legislation.

In conclusion, I think the main purpose of this legislation is to ensure that there is an appropriate transition period from the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act to the proprietary medicine regulations under the Food and Drugs Act. I have outlined the various reasons for the government's position to change the date of repeal of the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act, and I submit that the various related matters surrounding the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act were thoroughly dealt with during the passage of Bill S-9 through the Senate and the House of Commons last year.

Honourable senators, should this bill receive second reading, I am prepared to move, should it be the wish of the Senate, that it be referred to the appropriate committee, which would be the Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science. Personally, I do not see any need for it to be referred to committee.

On motion of Senator Macdonald, for Senator Phillips, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, May 18, at 8 p.m.

APPENDIX

(See p. 2119)

CRIMINAL LAW

INTERIM REPORT OF STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE ON LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Thursday, May 13, 1976

The Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs to which was referred the subject matter of Bill C-83, intituled "An Act for the better protection of Canadian society against perpetrators of violent and other crime," has, in obedience to the Order of Reference of Thursday, March 4, 1976, undertaken a preliminary examination of the said subject matter and now presents an interim report as follows:

1. FIREARMS AND OTHER OFFENSIVE WEAPONS
(Clause 3, pages 2-37)

In its preliminary examination of Bill C-83, your Committee notes that the proposed new Part II.1 of the Criminal Code, in clause 3 of the Bill, which would replace all the provisions of the Criminal Code under the heading "Offensive Weapons", would add to the Criminal Code provisions that are regulatory and administrative rather than provisions of a criminal law nature, for example, the establishment of a licensing system and provisions relating to the carriage, handling and storage of firearms. Your Committee questions whether such provisions properly belong in the Criminal Code.

In this connection, your Committee draws attention to the following statement in a recent report, issued by the Law Reform Commission of Canada, entitled "Our Criminal Law":

"If criminal law's function is to reaffirm fundamental values, then it must concern itself with "real crimes" only and not with the plethora of "regulatory offences" found throughout our laws. Our Criminal Code should contain only such acts as are not only punishable but also wrong—acts contravening fundamental values. All other offences must remain outside the Code.

Nor is this classification a mere formality. It is not just calling some offences "crimes" and putting them in the Code and calling others "violations" or some other name and putting them somewhere else. Rather, it means dealing with the two under two distinct régimes. Real crimes need a criminal régime, violations a non-criminal régime."

2. USE OF WEAPON DURING COMMISSION OF OFFENCE
(Clause 3, page 11)

Your Committee notes that the use of a weapon during the commission of an offence will be an offence under the proposed legislation, but your Committee is also concerned with the possibility that serious consequences may occur when a person is in possession of a weapon during the commission of an offence, whether or not he intends to use it.

It is, therefore, recommended that consideration be given to amending the proposed new section 98, in clause 3 of the Bill, by adding thereto a provision that anyone who has upon his person an offensive weapon while committing or attempting to commit an indictable offence or during his flight after committing or attempting to commit an indictable offence, whether or not he intends to use it to cause bodily harm to any person, is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for five years or is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction.

Your Committee also recommends that it be further provided in the proposed new section 98 that where one of two or more persons, with the knowledge and consent of the rest, has an offensive weapon upon his person while committing or attempting to commit an indictable offence or during his flight after committing or attempting to commit an indictable offence, it shall be deemed to be upon the person of each and all of them.

3. DANGEROUS USE OF FIREARMS
(Clause 3, page 12)

Your Committee recognizes that the practice of using and storing firearms varies greatly in different regions of the country. In those areas where firearms are part of the everyday life of the residents, the use of firearms is accompanied by a knowledge of, and respect for, their dangers. In such regions it may be both difficult and unnecessary to take the precautions that in other regions, particularly in urban areas, would be reasonable and desirable.

It is, therefore, recommended that consideration be given to amending the proposed new subsection 99(2), in clause 3 of the Bill, by adding thereto a requirement that local circumstances, traditions and practices be taken into consideration by the courts when determining whether a firearm or ammunition has been used or stored in a careless manner or without taking reasonable precautions for the safety of other persons.

4. NOTIFICATION OF INTERCEPTED COMMUNICATION
(Clause 10, page 40)

Your Committee is of the opinion that the provision in the present legislation requiring notification to a person who has been the object of an intercepted communication should not simply be repealed, but should be replaced by a provision that would ensure that the required notification does not interfere with proper investigation by law enforcement authorities of the activities of organized crime and professional criminals.

It is, therefore, recommended that consideration be given to a provision that would amend the proposed new section 178.23, in clause 10 of the Bill, to permit a judge to grant one extension not exceeding 90 days of the period within which notification is required and to permit two judges to grant any additional extensions of that period or to eliminate entirely the requirement for notification.

5. REVIEW FOR PAROLE (Clause 11, page 46)

Your Committee draws attention to the proposed new section 695.1, in clause 11 of the Bill, which provides that, where a person has been found to be a dangerous offender and has been sentenced for an indeterminate period, the case will be reviewed by the National Parole Board within three years after the person was taken into custody and, thereafter, not later than every two years for the purpose of determining whether the person should be granted parole.

Under this provision, where a sentence has been imposed for an offence and the minimum period that must be served before eligibility for parole is longer than three years, it is possible for the person who was convicted of the offence and who was found to be a dangerous offender to be released sooner than another person who was convicted of the same offence but who was not found to be a dangerous offender.

Your Committee, therefore, suggests that consideration be given to an amendment to the Bill that would provide that where a person has been convicted of an offence and has been found by the Court to be a dangerous offender the person would be required to serve a determinate sentence for the offence followed by an indeterminate sentence as a dangerous offender.

Your Committee also recommends that the Bill be further amended to provide that where a person has been sentenced for an indeterminate period as a dangerous offender, the National Parole Board shall, for the purpose of determining whether the person should be granted parole under the Parole Act, review the case not later than the end of the period required to be served for the offence for which the person has been sentenced before becoming eligible for parole, or three years, whichever is longer.

6. TRANSITIONAL (Clause 12, page 47)

Your Committee is of the opinion that because of the significant differences between the present law in respect of habitual offenders and dangerous sexual offenders and the provisions in Bill C-83 in respect of dangerous offenders a review should be carried out with respect to all such offenders who are at the present time in custody under sentences of detention to determine which inmates do not fall within the terms of the description of a dangerous offender in paragraphs 688(a) and (b) in clause 23 of the Bill. Such inmates should be released if they have served a reasonable period of time in prison for the offences they committed.

7. SPECIAL APPLICATION OF REGULATIONS (Clause 23, page 60)

Your Committee understands that the proposed new subsection 9(2) of the Parole Act, added by clause 23 of the Bill, is a transitional provision intended to provide for the application of regulations in various provinces as and when the parole boards in those provinces are appointed and become operative, pursuant to the proposed new section 5.1 of the Parole Act in clause 20 of the Bill. Your Committee, however, is concerned that the transitional nature of this provision is not reflected in the Bill.

Your Committee, therefore, would like to see the proposed new subsection 9(2) of the Parole Act amended so that its effect would be limited to the period of time and the circumstances for which it is intended since your Committee considers that it would be undesirable and could be discriminatory if a regulation governing parole were to be applied, after the transitional period, to inmates in certain regions of the country and not to inmates generally in all parts of the country.

8. PERSONAL INTERVIEW FOR PAROLE (Clause 25, page 61)

Your Committee is of the opinion that consideration should be given to amending clause 25 of the Bill by adding a provision that would give an inmate the right to a personal interview following his application for parole to the National Parole Board at the time that he first becomes eligible for parole.

9. PAROLE BY EXCEPTION

Your Committee notes that the National Parole Board will no longer be permitted, where special circumstances exist, to grant parole by exception to an inmate before the inmate's eligibility date has been reached, as is now provided for by regulation.

Your Committee is of the opinion that the National Parole Board should retain this right, which, although exercised infrequently, permits flexibility in those situations where parole by exception is warranted.

Respectfully submitted,

H. Carl Goldenberg,
Chairman.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, May 18, 1976

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

SPORTS

MESSAGE OF CONGRATULATIONS TO MONTREAL CANADIENS ON WINNING THE STANLEY CUP

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, together with Canadians from coast to coast, members of this chamber of all parties are always proud and gratified when Canadian athletes, amateur or professional, excel themselves, and, from time to time, motions of congratulation have gone forward when these achievements have occurred. So it is that all of us were very proud of the achievement last weekend of the Canadiens Hockey Club.

Honourable senators, rule 46(s) of the Rules of the Senate provides that no notice is required of motions of a merely formal or uncontentious character. In that spirit and observing the letter of our rules:

[Translation]

I move, seconded by Senator Flynn, P.C., that congratulations be conveyed to the members of the Canadiens Hockey Club on their brilliant performance during the hockey season and during the finals, and for the honour that will be shared by Canada on their winning once again the Stanley Cup and bringing it back to this country.

[English]

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I, of course, second the motion with pleasure. I agree with the Leader of the Government that no notice is required, but I am left wondering if notice would not have been required had Les Canadiens defeated the Vancouver Canucks.

[Translation]

Senator Perrault: This is a weighty question.

Motion agreed to.

[English]

[Later:]

Senator Greene: Honourable senators, I was very much taken by the words of the Honourable Leader of the Government vis-à-vis the magnificent victory of our Canadian hockey team in the Stanley Cup play offs. While it was a victory for Canada, and particularly so—first, for the French-speaking hockey players, who are the most important group in Les Canadiens team—

[Translation]

[English]

I would like to remind this honourable Senate that there was on the team a fellow by the name of Mahovlich, who is of neither founding peoples, who played a great part in that victory.

Senator Flynn: I hope Senator Greene does not forget all those hockey players with the Flyers who also come from Quebec, who are Francophones and who would not be as happy as he is.

Senator Sullivan: Honourable senators, perhaps you would like to hear from a former hockey player. I take this opportunity to say, because I know Senator Molson cannot get on his feet and say it—

Senator Flynn: Why not?

Senator Sullivan: Because he would be too embarrassed, although he should say it. One of the greatest hockey teams this country has ever produced is the Montreal Canadiens.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Sullivan: They demonstrated something that is most essential in present day hockey, and that is that they can play it either way. They demonstrated to the public at large, and particularly to the American public, that hockey as the Canadiens play it is the way we want it to be played, and the way we hope it will be played in future. Let us trust that the Philadelphia group and Kate Smith have learned a lesson.

[Translation]

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): If you would permit me, honourable senators—

Senator Côté: Is it as a former player?

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): No—except as a former player on the left wing, and very left-handed at that, during my college years, long long ago, but that is beside the point.

If Senator Greene wants to make a racial issue of this, I am very glad, since we have seen in the Canadiens' victory the perfect combination of Anglo-Saxons with French Canadians to win the great victory, the Stanley Cup, and deserve the title of world's best hockey team.

[English]

REGULATIONS AND OTHER STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS

JOINT COMMITTEE—CHANGE IN COMMONS MEMBERSHIP

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons to acquaint the Senate that the name of Mr. Allard had been substituted for that of Mr. Laprise on the list of members appointed to serve on the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Copies of Agreement between the Government of Canada and the Government of Spain for Co-operation in the Development and Application of Atomic Energy for Peaceful Purposes. Done at Madrid, July 7, 1975. In force April 21, 1976.

Report on the Operation of Agreements with the Provinces under the Hospital Insurance and Diagnostic Services Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1975, pursuant to section 9 of the said Act, Chapter H-8, R. S. C., 1970.

GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES RESTRAINT BILL

DATE OF INTRODUCTION IN SENATE—QUESTION

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I rise to ask a question of the Leader of the Government on the subject of Bill C-87. I wonder if he can give us any information about when that is likely to be brought forward to this chamber. As far as I know, it has not even got second reading yet in the House of Commons. At any rate, it certainly does not show any sign of coming here yet, and it contains a large number of important provisions which are retroactive to January 1.

● (2010)

I am inclined to be dubious about this business of retroactive legislation at the best of times, and when it is a matter of the rate of family allowances, which have been paid, I think, since January 1 at the old rate, or at the rate which will become payable under this retroactive legislation, I think this practice becomes even more dubious. I wonder if the Leader of the Government can give us any idea when this legislation is likely to come before this house, where some of the important principles involved can be adequately discussed.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senator, I will take that question as notice. An inquiry will proceed forthwith.

CANADIAN LABOUR CONGRESS

POSSIBILITY OF GENERAL STRIKE—QUESTION

Senator Austin: I should like to put a question to the Leader of the Government. Since this chamber last met we have read in the newspapers of the most interesting and, undoubtedly, important meeting of the Canadian Labour Congress. I wonder whether the Leader of the Government has any comments to make to us at this time about the possibility of a general strike in Canada, and whether he has any additional comments about the proposals for liberal corporatism by Mr. Morris.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, when available, the resolutions and statements made by the Canadian Labour Congress in convention will be studied by the government, and thus it would be inappropriate for me to comment at this time.

However, the government has taken the position since the inception of the anti-inflation program last Thanksgiving Day that we welcome the constructive input, not only from the CLC and from other labour organizations in this country but from management, from cooperatives, from credit unions, from those in agriculture and, indeed, from those in the entire spectrum of society. The determination is to make the anti-inflation program an effective, just program operating in the interests of all Canadians.

[Senator Perrault.]

Senator Flynn: May I ask a supplementary question? Is the Leader of the Government in accord with the comments made by the Minister of Labour, Mr. Munro, about the same occasion?

Senator Perrault: Because I do not have the exact text of the Minister of Labour's statement before me, it would be unfair for me to comment on that statement at this time.

Senator Flynn: For him.

AERONAUTICS ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from Thursday, May 13, the debate on the motion of Senator Thompson for the second reading of Bill S-34, to amend the Aeronautics Act.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, as you are aware, this is a bill to amend the Aeronautics Act. It was well explained by Senator Thompson last Thursday, and I congratulate him on his explanation and answers he gave to the questions asked. However, I am going to suggest that the bill go to committee.

This is a bill that originates in the Senate, and it seems to me there are some questions to which we should have more complete answers than we have had so far, or would normally expect to have on second reading.

On the surface, the purpose of the amendments appears to be fairly simple. The intention, of course, is to extend the jurisdiction of the Government of Canada by substantive law or regulations by order in council to apply to foreign-owned and foreign-originating aircraft landing in Canada. As Senator Thompson explained, at the present time the act applies almost entirely to aircraft registered in Canada. The extension would add any aircraft.

The second amendment specifically prohibits the landing of a foreign aircraft unless there is evidence that the security safeguard measures required by existing Canadian regulations have been carried out in the country of origin. A problem arises, of course, as to how these regulations can be enforced.

I was a bit disappointed to read in Senator Thompson's explanation, which was no doubt the official explanation, that the minister will have authority to "request" that aircraft coming from other countries meet ICAO standards of inspection. One would hope that the Government of Canada would have authority to do more than request. The problem of enforcement of regulations in respect of aircraft originating in another country is a difficult one. The question immediately arises as to why it took the Olympic Games and Habitat for Canada to wake up to the fact that under our existing legislation we appear to have no protection whatsoever from the lack of security regulations applicable to aircraft originating outside Canada.

It is true that we may have relied on certain international conventions—conventions such as the Tokyo Convention, the Hague Convention, the recent Montreal Convention and others more recently concluded. However, the facts are as Senator Thompson pointed out, that a great many nations have not ratified these conventions. Perhaps the most important convention is the famous Annex 77, and, as Senator Thompson told us, that has been ratified, or agreed to, by only about 50 per cent of countries. In committee we should be told what countries have not ratified this important convention, because the assumption has to be that they have a good reason for not ratifying it. Surely, we should know why certain countries say they will not agree to the generally recognized rules for the safeguarding of passengers, goods and ports of landing.

● (2020)

Senator Thompson gave us figures for some of the conventions. In the case of the Tokyo convention 81 countries signed; 72 countries signed the Hague convention, and 64 signed the Montreal convention. Apparently there is a declining number of countries prepared to enter into some kind of guarantee that passengers and cargo arriving on these aircraft will be subject to regulations respecting their safety.

I do not know how it is possible to enforce inspection at a foreign port of exit. Certainly, it will not be enough merely for the Government of Canada to make requests of these countries. We should be told what airlines are operating into Canada from countries which have not signed these conventions, although that in itself will not solve the problem. The kind of people who travel on these aircraft, together with the kind of things they carry with them, will constitute a most serious problem if safeguards are not somehow assured.

One of the amendments to section 5.1 of the Aeronautics Act is to the effect that no aircraft can land in Canada unless it has been subjected to the same type of security measures that we insist upon in Canada in respect of aircraft departing from and landing at Canadian airports. But is that enough? It appears from the information we have at the moment that we will merely say, "Well, if you don't provide us with these safeguards, you can be fined or you can go to jail." The amendment speaks of "every person". Well, who is the person? Is it the captain of the ship; is it the owner? Even if it can be tied down to an individual, surely the problem is that these are restrictions after the offence.

If an undesirable person with an undesirable cargo, a bomb, comes into the country, what sense does it make to say, "We will fine you; we will put you in jail"? How can this be enforced? Are there any plans to enforce this? I do not know. There is nothing in the bill, and nothing in the explanation we have been given, to indicate what we are doing. Are we saying to every one of these airlines, "Give us your assurance in advance." What sanctions will be attached to that assurance?

I suggest to honourable senators that these are questions we must have answers to. The amendments in this bill, as I see them, do not appear to be adequate to handle the kind of situation that is anticipated—that is, the entry into Canada of undesirable people and cargoes.

I think we should be told in committee how the cost of these security measures is to be apportioned. Senator Thompson indicated quite clearly that the present arrangements are far from satisfactory. The Minister of Transport has the prime responsibility for these security arrangements, and is apparently passing them on to the carriers—generally, to Canadian carriers. In committee I think it will be important for us to be told what are the costs involved, and how effective these security arrangements are.

I think most honourable senators will agree with me when I say that when one goes through a security check anywhere in Canada one is not greatly impressed with the effectiveness of it. I, like many senators, have been through these checks many times. I am not convinced they are adequate. Perhaps in committee we could be told just how effective they are. Have we some kind of assurance that in relation to the Olympic Games and Habitat Canada is not inviting another Munich? Yet this is, from all the indications, a real possibility. We have heard rumours, most of them denied—although I do not think any honourable senator could fail to be concerned about the possibility of such an eventuality—of deliberate plans now being made in certain countries, which may not be signatories to any of these international agreements, to disrupt, and possibly to tragically disrupt, these two great international events which are to take place in Canada.

Of course, this legislation applies not merely to these two events. We have to wonder why, as I said earlier, we have suddenly awakened to the fact that during all the time up to now we have had no safeguard whatsoever in the way of security measures being taken in respect of foreign aircraft landing at a Canadian airport. I hope that we can have a complete list of those countries which have not ratified these international agreements. I hope that we will be given some kind of satisfaction as to what measures we are taking to prevent a recurrence of the tragedy I have alluded to, rather than the mere imposition of fines or sentences of imprisonment on some undefined person after it has taken place.

Hon. Andrew Thompson: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I wish to inform the Senate that if Senator Thompson speaks now, his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on the motion for second reading of this bill.

Senator Thompson: Honourable senators, I appreciate the very pertinent questions that Senator Grosart has raised, although, quite frankly, I do not think I can give adequate answers to all of them. There was, for example, the recurring theme of concern about knowing beforehand just what security measures have been taken by foreign carriers. I raised this question with the administration, and I was informed that the air carriers themselves can find out and report on what the situation is. The air carriers are concerned about their reputation vis-à-vis their competitors, and also with the safety of the whole travelling public, and the ministry can get information from them. Secondly, the Minister of Transport has an inspection agency which goes abroad to see that these security measures are being carried out by the foreign carriers. Thirdly, our own Department of External Affairs, as I mentioned in my introduction, has been making inquiries and, I assume, is carrying out some type of investigation in some of these countries to see what the security measures are. Fourthly, members of the RCMP are stationed in many of these countries. From these various sources the Ministry of Transport is able to ascertain to a large extent just what the security is. As Senator Grosart mentioned, the minister does have some power to ensure that there will be security measures by foreign carriers. These measures are in section 5.1(11) with respect to violation.

● (2030)

Now, just what does "every person" mean? I raised this question myself, and I think it should be clarified. Do you just get to the pilot or do you get to the company? I am not a lawyer and I cannot answer that. I would hope that this and other questions could be answered in committee, and if the bill receives second reading I shall move that it be referred to the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Thompson moved that the bill be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications.

Motion agreed to.

AN ACT TO REPEAL THE PROPRIETARY OR PATENT MEDICINE ACT AND TO AMEND THE TRADE MARKS ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from Thursday, May 13, the debate on the motion of Senator Côtteau for the second reading of Bill S-35, to amend an act to repeal the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act and to amend the Trade Marks Act.

Hon. Orville H. Phillips: Honourable senators, Bill S-35 is not a lengthy or a wordy one. However, it has the same effect as those which contain a great deal more print, and that is very little. The sponsor of the bill, Senator Côtteau, is ordinarily a very quiet individual; in fact, we can almost say he is a shy individual. But he excelled himself in that he was able to take a one-line amendment and stretch it to a full page of Hansard.

However, I find that he made several questionable statements in his remarks, and the first of these is that he was going to attempt to explain the government's policy on self-medication. I don't feel he did a very adequate job of explaining the government's policy, but then I would really hate to be in the position of explaining any policy of this government; in fact, my complaint is usually to the effect that the government does not have a policy. In the next paragraph he states that the policy is intended to erase the pressure of services on health care professionals. It is interesting to know that the sponsor of the bill represents an area of Nova Scotia that is famous for a particular brand of liniment. It was manufactured in Nova Scotia and sold in that province and, indeed, in parts of eastern North America long before the present Minister of Health assumed his portfolio. The reason that a patent medicine such as this particular brand of liniment became popular was that professional health care was not available in many parts of Canada. That is why patent medicines became so popular.

Senator Perrault: What did it cure?

[Senator Thompson.]

Senator Phillips: It was advertised, Senator Perrault, as being good for both man and beast. Usually those who used the liniment were confined to the barn with the animals.

Then Senator Côtteau went on to state that the government is rather concerned that patent medicines will be available for the relief of minor ailments such as headaches and indigestion. Honourable senators, we have had no trouble getting aspirin in this country. I have bought them in small country stores and restaurants. I recall buying them in a television and radio shop, and the proprietor was happy to sell them because his great grandfather had sold them in the same store. I tell this story to illustrate that we have been selling patent medicines for a long time. In fact, recently I was able to buy aspirins and Tums at an international airport. I didn't even have to go to the duty-free shop. I point out that they seem to be keeping up with the practice in this country.

It is interesting to note that Canadians use several million aspirins daily, and if we took into account the use of entrophin, the total would be much greater.

Senator Côtteau went on to state that there had been a federal-provincial conference of deputy ministers to ensure that the provinces knew how to sell patent medicines. I cannot think of anything more ridiculous than holding a conference on the selling of aspirins and Tums. I consider it a complete waste of high-priced help.

The real reason for the introduction of Bill S-35 was explained by the sponsor, perhaps a little bit unwittingly, but he did give us the reason when he stated that the Drugs Directorate of the Department of National Health and Welfare will not complete its classification of patent drugs until next year. Honourable senators, all we are doing is extending the expiry date of the present act from December 31, 1976, until April 1, 1977. If the officials in the Department of National Health and Welfare need more time to complete their work, I see no reason why we should not give it to them. We have already passed a bill to repeal the act passed in 1947, to which there was no objection, and in my opinion we can give the officials another three months' time.

Senator Sullivan: Honourable senators, may I ask the sponsor of the bill a question? I spoke rather fully on this subject on October 22, 1974, and I wonder if the sponsor referred to the debate which took place at that time.

Senator Côtteau: I did not mention the speeches of Senator Bonnell and Senator Sullivan, but I took time to read them carefully before I prepared my explanation of this amendment.

● (2040)

Senator Sullivan: Honourable senators, I see no reason whatever why this legislation should be sent to a committee.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Côtteau moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

ANTI-INFLATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from Wednesday, May 12, the debate on the motion of Senator Stanbury for second reading of Bill C-89, to amend the Anti-Inflation Act.

[Translation]

Hon. Martial Asselin: Honourable senators, the bill before us brings only minor amendments to the Anti-Inflation Act, Bill C-73, passed a few months ago. In fact, this piece of legislation only corrects the weak points in the general legislation, which we have singled out ourselves in our debates and in the study we made in committee. However, we are happy to see that in the proposed amendment to clause 11 of this bill the government recognized that Parliament is made of two chambers, the House of Commons and the Senate. Besides, when the time comes to repeal the Anti-Inflation Act, the House of Commons, the other place, will be able to benefit from the wise advice our House will give them. We could discuss at length the aspects of this bill concerning the implementation of the legislation with respect to those employed in building companies of 20 people or more, or wonder whether the payments made to the provinces to fight inflation are really in compliance with the Canadian Constitution. I leave it to the committee which will be responsible for a detailed study of this bill to give its opinion on those controversial issues.

At present, I think it is time to wonder whether the Anti-Inflation Act has been a success and has given the anticipated results or whether we are not witnessing a real fiasco.

Besides, my colleague Senator Phillips proved it when he answered the speech made by the bill's sponsor, and other senators on this side as well as on the other side wonder about the same things.

I will try tonight to prove with the arguments I will present to you that Bill C-73, with the amendment now under study, is not the one expected by Canadians. In my opinion it is a real flop for the Canadian economy. The Conference Board of Canada recently reviewed the situation since the implementation of the program. Here is what it had to say:

The moderation in the rate of advance of the consumer price index in December and January was due almost entirely to the decline in the food component of the index reflecting a softening in the prices of agricultural commodities. Since the latter are exempt from controls of the federal government's anti-inflationary program, it would be erroneous to attribute the better over-all performance of consumer prices to the control measures.

You may recall that when statistics were given about the decline in prices of products, much propaganda was made on the side of the government, saying: "These are the results of our anti-inflation program". However, they forgot to tell Canadians that farm products were not included in the program.

A similar view is expressed in the March issue of the Wood Gundy economic report, where the same review is quoted and given as was reported by the Conference Board of Canada to which I have just referred. I think all honourable senators will agree that Canadians are living through an economic experiment. We are the guinea pigs of the anti-inflation legislation adopted by the government while the present administration follows a "touch and feel" system in running the economy. They are playing it by ear. And this is just what I intend to prove to you.

The year before Mr. Turner became Minister of Finance in 1971, real growth in the economy was 6.9 per cent, inflation was 2.9 per cent, unemployment was 6.4 per cent, and the budget roughly balanced, as did our exports with imports. But in the year Mr. Turner left office—last year—real growth had declined to 0.2 per cent, inflation was running at 10.8 per cent, unemployment stood at 7.1 per cent, the budget was more than $5 billion in deficit, and so was our trade balance. Under Mr. Turner, the federal budget grew from $14.8 billion to $30.8 billion, an increase of 108 per cent in four years or 27 per cent a year.

The main estimates for 1977 are up by 20 per cent compared with those for 1976. Moreover, when the government now in office speaks of restraint, when the ministers turn to Canadians to sell them the benefits of this anti-inflation legislation, no wonder people start to laugh. This is what is called restraint, whereas all economists feel that the government is the main factor, by failing to curb its own expenses, I repeat, the main factor contributing to the inflationary thrust that Canada has known until now.

Let us look at the money supply. It increased between December 1973 and December 1974, by 16.7 per cent.

We were told that the money supply increased by 23 per cent between December 1974 and December 1975. As any economist knows, expansion of the money supply is at a rate faster than real economic growth and that, in my opinion, is one of the prime causes of inflation. In short, the more money you print, the less it buys. Last year our money system grew on average by 13.8 per cent with real growth at .2 per cent only. So is it any wonder, honourable senators, we had 10.8 per cent average inflation for the year? Not only is the money supply continuing to expand faster than real economic growth, but the rate of increase is escalating in relation to that real growth. Let us look at the government's own figures. Last February 23, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Trudel) gave the following reply to a written question, as repeated by Mr. Stevens on page 11917 of Hansard.

The annual percentage increases between 1968 and 1975 in currency and demand deposits was as follows: 1968, 4.4 per cent; 1969, 7.4 per cent; 1970, 2.3 per cent; 1971, 12.8 per cent; 1972, 14 per cent; 1973, 14.4 per cent; 1974, 9.7 per cent; 1975, 13.8 per cent. Real growth in the economy for the same years was as follows: 1968, 4.9 per cent; 1969, 5 per cent; 1970, 3.4 per cent; 1971, 6.9 per cent; 1972, 5.8 per cent; 1973, 6.7 per cent; 1974, 2.8 per cent; 1975, 0.2 per cent. As the increases in our money system have grown, our real growth has fallen. Inflation has been the result.

In the past four years the average increase in our money supply has been 13 per cent per year, while our real growth has been only 3.8 per cent.

• (2050)

You will recall that the Governor of the Bank of Canada, backed up by the Minister of Finance, has said that it intends to restrain the money supply from 10 to 15 per cent this year. But in the last four years we have had an average increase of 13 per cent. So the Governor of the Bank of Canada is really saying we are to get more of the same and, in my opinion, that is exactly the principal reason we have been having such high inflation.

What must we think of the failure of the government to get unions to cooperate in the fight against inflation? I do not say that the government did not do its best. It did meet the unions but has it proposed major arguments to convince them that if they do not cooperate with the government in its struggle against inflation, it is the economic future of the country that is in jeopardy?

It remains that a great number of unionized Canadian workers have refused to this day to give the government the necessary and needed cooperation—I emphasize the words necessary and needed—for this fight against inflation to be relatively successful.

Honourable senators, most economists agree that without greater monetary and fiscal restraint, no price and wage control program has any chance of being successful. We must be honest with ourselves and the Canadian people and stop pretending that this is not so, like the ministers are doing. I would like to draw the attention of honourable senators to an article by Lawrence B. Smith, professor of economics at the University of Toronto, which is entitled "Canada's Incomes Policy: An Economic Assessment", appearing in the Canadian Tax Journal of January-February 1976, in which the author reviews the anti-inflation program in some detail.

I know that it is always bothersome to read quotations from newspapers. However, this is not very long, and if honourable senators give me leave to add to my speech this quotation from the article of Lawrence B. Smith, I would like this quotation to be inserted in my speech. Do I have leave of the Senate?

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it so agreed?

Some Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Asselin: I shall therefore quote parts of the speech made by Mr. Sinclair Stevens in the House of Commons in which he refers to the article by Mr. Smith:

I have already referred to an article by Lawrence B. Smith, professor of economics at the University of Toronto. In the article entitled "Canada's Incomes Policy: An Economic Assessment" appearing in the Canadian Tax Journal for January-February 1976 he reviews the program in some detail. On page 72, he asks:

Will the incomes policy succeed?

He goes on to say:

As mentioned above, the success of the incomes policy ultimately hinges on the implementation of the correct demand restraining monetary and fiscal policies. If the government is serious about combatting inflation then it must reduce its rate of monetary expansion and it should significantly restrain its expenditures. Consequently, we should expect the incomes policies to be accompanied by considerable monetary and fiscal stringency.

Professor Smith goes on to state:

However, it is not clear that this will occur. First, in its policy statement "Attack on Inflation", the government quotes from its June 23, 1975 budget that "in its present cost-push form, inflation threatens" to create serious problems. But our inflation is not a cost-push inflation; rather it is a demand-pull inflation in its second stage created by excessive monetary and fiscal ease. If the government persists in incorrectly diagnosing the problem there is little likelihood it will introduce the necessary demand-restraining policies. Second, the government claims in its policy paper that it is setting in motion "monetary policies aimed at increasing total demand and production at a rate consistent with declining inflation", yet for the three months ending November 30, 1975 the money supply broadly defined rose 21.9 per cent, up from 8.8 per cent in the second quarter and approximately double the rate consistent with its own target rate of inflation for 1976.

I mentioned earlier that in our standing committee, this morning, Mr. Hood, the Deputy Minister of Finance, stated that from December, 1974, to December last the increase in the money supply in this country was 23 per cent.

Professor Smith goes on to say:

If this is the result when the government perceives itself to be acting, the outlook is bleak. Third, the government states in its policy paper that government expenditure policies will be "aimed at limiting the growth of public expenditures and the rate of increase in public service employment". The policy paper then adds that a "very large proportion of the federal government's expenditures are made under statutory programs, and other arrangements where there is little flexibility". Thus, it appears the government is only paying lip service to the issue and is more concerned with justifying inaction than in taking action on the expenditure side. Fourth, the government in its policy paper refers to structural policies to combat inflation. But structural problems, while important because of their effect on relative prices, do not significantly affect the rate of inflation and hence concern with them deflects from the main problem. Fifth, there is a very great danger that the government will deceive itself into believing it has taken action to curb inflation by introducing an incomes policy and thus feel it less urgent to implement the appropriate monetary and fiscal restraint. For all these reasons there is a very great danger that the incomes policy will fail and worsen our economic problems.

What I am saying is that the whole success and credibility of controls depends upon what the Canadian people think. The government cannot be paternalistic as it is now without full cooperation of the Canadian financial institutions. How does the average Canadian, who will never read the AIB regulations, view the anti-inflation program? Do the Canadian people trust the government to check inflation? If we refer to recent Gallup polls on the popularity of the Canadian government and of the Prime Minister, the answer is no, because the program is too confusing and complicated. It is directed against one particular segment of the Canadian society. It is a selective control program which penalizes only certain sectors of the Canadian industry while others may benefit from it with impunity.

After a trial period of several months, the Canadian people have not accepted the Anti-Inflation Act, perhaps because they do not understand it. To say the least, this legislation did not bring the expected results.

As I said during the debate on Bill C-73, the main cause of inflation is the government's extravagant spending. The federal government alone, honourable senators, now spends more than $30 billion a year. It is budgeting a 15 per cent increase, or another $4.5 billion during the next fiscal year. I find it incredible that somewhere in that $30 billion, somewhere in that $4.5 billion increase, there is not ample opportunity to make some hard pruning of government spending.

It is obvious that immediate action must be taken to increase our exports and increase our productivity. This is the exact antithesis of being told that your reward will be limited to an increase of 2 per cent for productivity. Now, our friends opposite have very often criticized our program, the program which we advocated in 1974 to control inflation. It will be remembered that the present government won the election on precisely that electoral platform. They told us that the Conservative program would never work. The salaries of low-wage earners would be frozen. With that Liberal propaganda, we know the results of the 1974 election. Of course, they did not want to copy exactly our electoral program as far as controlling inflation was concerned. They said, "We will try something a little different, we will try to apply selective controls."

Under our program, we would have imposed a 60- to 90-day total freeze. By this we would have gained two very important advantages: we would have avoided all the confusion that is rampant today where one group is allowed more, and another less. We would also have had the time to examine the economy in its frozen state with much more clarity than is possible today.

Secondly, and more important, our program would have been limited to 18 months at the most. This was not the straitjacket for life now envisaged menacingly, at least by the leader of the Liberal Party and the current government. We wanted to solve over a period of 18 months the basic distortions in order to stabilize the economy, and we would have provided incentives and concrete support to put back the economy on the upswing. When this government introduced the anti-inflation program, we were told it would not be a top-heavy program, there would not be too many bureaucrats involved. There would be a commission. There would be an appeal tribunal. There would be an administrator to make inquiries. There would not be a lot of employees. But they were going to attempt monitoring some 1500 industries; only 1500 industries would be affected. That is what we were told when the wage and price controls were announced by the government.

● (2100)

The supposedly Anti-Inflation Commission was to employ 200 officials, so we were told. We now learn controls will affect 20,000 industries, about 20,000; that the number of people to implement controls will be in the vicinity of 600. Mention should also be made, of course, of the director's staff, the appeal tribunal, and other government departments such as National Revenue, and also of course the provincial commissions to be set up. To date, my impression is that the government-established commission has not met the basic aspirations and principles the government originally had in mind. Let us take wage settlements, for instance. Wages were to be controlled. Well, the increases provided by wage settlements once reviewed by the commission averaged 16.2 per cent. This is much higher than the commission's original target of 8 per cent plus 2 per cent to represent productivity gains. So while the objective was 8 per cent plus 2 per cent, they went as far as finding 16.2 per cent wage increases acceptable.

As far as I am concerned, the controls program drew public attention away from those really responsible for inflation, namely the Bank of Canada, a government body, and their own expenditures, focussing attention on the private sector and labour-management struggle, in an attempt to keep their own share of the pie. Over the last three months, food price increases slowed down to a 6.5 per cent yearly rate while other items in the consumer price index went up by 10.7 per cent. During the six months' period before controls were established, the cost of living had increased at a yearly rate of 10.4 per cent. In other words, if you exclude the food component, there is more inflation today than existed prior to the introduction of the government anti-inflation program.

There is presently a backlog of 3,000 applications for price or wage review in the AIB. According to the findings of a Gallup poll released recently, 67 per cent of those questioned thought the program was unfair with regard to prices and 65 per cent felt it was unfair with regard to incomes.

I, for one, suggest that the administration has made three important mistakes in setting up the Anti-Inflation Board and the anti-inflation program itself.

First, they did not provide, as we suggested, for a total freeze during an initial 90-day period to allow for the forming of definitive rules which could be more easily understood. And we were criticized during the 1974 campaign, and we were criticized again. The government had criticized our anti-inflation program. It was said that it was not realistic to put a total freeze on incomes and wages during a 90-day period. But as a result of the shortcomings encountered in the legislation, the board is presently doing indirectly what was done directly by way of the controls they are applying through the amendment to the legislation now before us. I wonder who was acting in good faith. At that time, in 1974, our party was acting in good faith. What happens today is that we must now question the present government's good faith.

Secondly, the board seems to follow a highly discretionary approach in its decisions, with little consistency, since some wage and price decisions appear to be excessive as compared to the increase of 8 to 10 per cent provided for by the government.

Thirdly, I suggest that unlike the American approach where about 3,000 firms were covered by the program, the board has kept expanding their jurisdiction so that they will be reviewing about 100,000 concerns in the near future.

These past few months, the United States has been able to limit from 5 to 7.5 per cent the increase in its money supply, exactly half of what is forecast by Mr. Bouey,

Governor of the Bank of Canada. The United States is therefore fighting inflation while we hesitate, we do not know where we are going. Initially, as I pointed out, the board was supposed to have a staff of 200. According to the latest reports they had more than 583 employees, and six months later that figure comes close to the 600 mark. Will there be 1,000 by the end of the year?

The U.S. anti-inflation program has a comparable mechanism. The control board had at its peak—Phase II—a staff of 700 out of 220 million people whereas we have 22 million in Canada. In the United States inflation this year reached a rate of 6 per cent compared with 9 per cent in Canada. William Simons, the Secretary of the U.S. Treasury, forecast that the rate of inflation in the U.S. would drop to 2 per cent within a few years. In Canada, on the other hand, the government talks of a rate of inflation of 8 per cent for this year and 6 per cent for next year and 4 per cent afterwards, a rate considerably higher than in the United States. The Americans in Phase II of their program, which spread from November 15, 1971 to January 11, 1973, a period of 13 months, took an approach quite different from ours. Their regulation program was threefold. The first, which included 1,100 businesses with sales figures of $100 million, affected 55 per cent of gross sales in that country. The second included 1,500 businesses with sales figures between $50 million and $100 million and affected 11 per cent of gross sales in the United States. And the third, applicable to businesses with sales figures under $50 million, affected only certain businesses. In all, the United States did not try to regulate more than 3,000 businesses, which is a far cry from the current approach of the Anti-Inflation Board.

● (2110)

The Conservative Party has always been against the three-year period set by the government, as Senator Phillips pointed out so well, for the application of the anti-inflation legislation. And we brought in amendments in the other place asking that that regulation period be made shorter, for an extremely important reason. It is that the Parliament of Canada, both the House of Commons and the Senate, must from time to time review, scrutinize the data of the Canadian economy. It would seem because the government is in power it is running the show, but it is accountable to Parliament. If the anti-inflation legislation is to end only in three years, how do you expect the Parliament of Canada, the House of Commons and the Senate, to be able to make an in-depth study of the problems of the Canadian economy? How do you expect them to tell the government what would be the solutions likely to remedy the situation for the government and set the Canadian economy on another course?

That is why we objected and we still object to that three-year limit. We do not know if it will be three years because Mr. Pepin alleged recently in a conference that this period might be extended. The Minister of Finance is not sure either that the three-year period will enable the board and this government to check inflation. As I said, the government reports to Parliament, and by May 1, 1977, as our party suggested, it should come back before Parliament to report the results of the fight it waged against inflation with the board it created and ask the people's representatives, and also the Senate, if this Parliament has any suggestion to get the economy going again. That is why our party objects in principle to the three-year mandate given to the government. That is why we introduced amendments in the other place asking the government to shorten this period for the reasons I just gave. We shall see.

This bill will go to the committee. Of course, witnesses will be heard. We will ask them questions in order to justify our objections to the principle of the bill. I hope that we shall have the opportunity in the Senate to propose an amendment to restrict the mandate of the Anti-Inflation Board to May 1, 1977. In fact, honourable senators, the end result of a restraint program should be economic growth, and not a planned and controlled economy. Recently in Quebec City, we met with businessmen and they asked those present about the state of the Canadian economy. The main objection of businessmen is that the present government is adopting a highly disquieting paternalistic attitude. Through its economic policies, I would even say socialist policies, it tends to control private enterprise. In my humble opinion, the economic survival of Canada depends on private enterprise, and businessmen are concerned about the actions and statements of the Prime Minister and members of his cabinet about a new Canadian economy that they would like to establish. They would like the federal government to be more paternalistic, to exercise more control generally over private enterprise, while I believe that the state should interfere with private enterprise only by virtue of its complementary function. If private enterprise is unable to meet the needs of its industry and to operate it, the state must act only in the last resort and make a financial contribution. At the present time, Canadian businessmen are much concerned about this.

So, in my opinion, a 39-month period is too long. Moreover, with respect to a restraint program, it is no joking matter in Canada to try to convince Canadians that we are in a period of austerity and then restrict and freeze the salaries and salary increases of members of Parliament and senators. When certain people tried to use this legislation to make the people believe that we were tightening our belt, Canadian taxpayers found it very funny. How completely ridiculous to say: "We are going to preach austerity; we are going to freeze the salaries of MPs and senators. Then, you will have to do the same." How senseless, ridiculous, foolish! Those are the terms I use. The government thought it was going to make an extraordinary political capital out of that. We are going to show you that we are tightening our belts; we are going to limit to 7 per cent the increases of members of Parliament and senators. Then, we will say: "We have set the example; now, you do the same." How utterly ridiculous! If the government sought to make political capital out of that legislation, it was greatly mistaken. We were made the laughing stock of the Canadian people; 7 per cent, how pitiful!

I say, therefore, honourable senators, that the restraints I have just listed will not restore the faith of all the Canadian people. They want one thing only, to avoid a depression, an economic bankruptcy, which we are actually in the process of creating by supporting the government legislation now before us.

Senator Greene: Honourable senators, first of all, I should like to congratulate Senator Asselin on his speech, but I do not agree with everything he said.

Senator Asselin: I am not surprised at all.

Senator Greene: But I congratulate him on his ability, his eloquence, in making such a good case out of a poor one. When I sat with him in the House of Commons, he was one of the most eloquent and able speakers. The Canadian people are lucky to have such a talent working for them in this house.

Senator Bourget: This is generous. Very good.

Senator Flynn: Now wait and see what is coming.

● (2120)

[English]

Senator Greene: Ironically, I wish to take exception to the remarks of a colleague of mine on this side, Senator van Roggen, who apologized the other day for not preparing and sufficiently researching the remarks he made to this house. With respect, I disagree with that. Parliament should be a forum of debate, not of prepared speeches. But then Senator van Roggen proceeded to make one of the finest presentations to this house that I have heard. While I cannot emulate his success, I take the liberty of mentioning two simple points.

First, I think that controls of any kind should be limited to the greatest possible degree, and the government has made its intention clear in that regard.

Senator Flynn: Hah!

Senator Greene: And by some ironic twist of history the Senate is the guardian of individual liberties more than any other aspect of our body politic. I do not think that Sir John A. or the Fathers, God bless their souls, intended that function for us, but I think that has become our most important function. Therefore, we would be remiss if we did not have on Hansard, even from such a humble voice as mine, the fact that the Senate is on record as speaking strongly for the fact that controls of any kind, under any auspices, should be limited to the greatest possible degree, and that individual freedom of choice is what we in the Senate are here to respect and protect.

In some way we who believe in the free system have been remiss in failing to state to the people of Canada that there is a price for freedom. Ours is an inefficient system by definition, because it says that anyone can work where and when and on what terms he or she desires. It is easy to have full employment and limited inflation in a country which tells you where you work, on what terms you work and at what rate you work, and in which you have no individual freedom to make those choices.

The price of freedom is possibly that from time to time we have inefficiencies and inadequacies, and programs such as this are meant to cope with those over the short term. I do not think we should kid the Canadian public that they can have all the benefits of the statist society and still be free. Karl Marx's argument was surely that freedom is meaningless unless there is full employment, and control of the total economy can only be achieved by a statist system. Our premise has surely always been that it is better to be free, whatever the price may be, which includes economic inefficiencies from time to time which we bridge as best we can by the shortest possible interferences of coercion by the state. I think it should be on the record of the Senate that controls, even though they are necessary at this time, must be of the shortest possible duration.

I wish to make only one other point in these inadequate, ill-prepared and completely non-researched remarks, for which I make no apology because of the fact that I believe in debate in Parliament, and that is that the manifesto of the Canadian Labour Congress is completely contrary to any understanding of the parliamentary system. I do not think the Canadian Labour Congress can have a voice per se at the decision-making table. That voice is represented, as are all aspects of our society, by Parliament—the elected representatives in the other place, and us in this house. It is Parliament that speaks for the people in Canada—not the Canadian Labour Congress, not the Chamber of Congress, and not any other body.

I am satisfied that the voice of labour is adequately and honestly represented in both Houses of Parliament, and it does not need any manifesto from the Canadian Labour Congress that “we have to sit at the table,” or that “the decisions are not going to be abided by us.” As one who has strongly supported the cause of the working man, I deprecate the fact that apparently the leaders of labour in Canada have so little understanding of the processes of the free system that they issued that completely inadequate and—

Senator Lang: And scandalous.

Senator Greene: —that inadequate manifesto which is a negation of the parliamentary government which has been the basis of all our freedoms, including that of labour, in Canada.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Hon. Richard J. Stanbury: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I wish to inform the Senate that if the Honourable Senator Stanbury speaks now, his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on the motion for second reading of this bill.

Senator Stanbury: Honourable senators, I find myself in a rather strange position. I do not have any difficulty in answering any of the points made, or the questions put, about this particular bill because, while I agree with Senator Greene that it was a particularly eloquent debate with excellent speeches, none of them had very much to do with this bill. They were all really pointed at Bill C-73, which we debated ad nauseam some time ago and on which we have made our decision.

It is always interesting to have this whole question of the anti-inflation struggle elucidated by such eminent members of the Senate, but, as I say, it is pretty easy to deal with the questions which were raised in terms of this particular bill. Therefore, it is not difficult to move the reference of this bill to the committee. But I really must not stop there, because if there are going to be opportunities to take whacks at the government's anti-inflation legislation with the broad brush that was used this evening, then it is necessary that there be some whacks taken against the other side, and I wish to take a moment—not a long time, because the hour is late—to do just that.

● (2130)

Senator Greene has said there is a price to be paid for freedom. All of us agree that that is true, but I am not sure that all of us understand the importance of inflation in our economy and society today, and I am not sure that all of us are prepared to pay the price which we must pay, because this disaster has come upon us through our own selfishness and our own unwillingness to discipline ourselves.

The Prime Minister worked with might and main to obtain agreement, a consensus, among the various elements of our society. He fought an election, as Senator Asselin has said, against the idea of controls. Liberalism does not include the principle, the philosophy, of controls. That is a Tory, an NDP or socialist kind of idea.

Senator Asselin: You should be ashamed!

Senator Stanbury: It was the Tories who wanted controls.

Senator Flynn: But you always do what you say you do not want to do.

Senator Stanbury: And it was only after it was found impossible to find a consensus among the parties—

Senator Flynn: Because you destroyed the possibility. Shame!

Senator Asselin: Shame!

Senator Stanbury: —and only after the domestic causes of inflation began to be felt, that it was necessary for the government to take steps to bring in anti-inflation legislation.

Senator Flynn: Oh no, that is a lie!

Senator Perrault: Unparliamentary! Withdraw!

Senator Stanbury: Madam Speaker, I am not sure that I am prepared to accept that kind of comment from the Leader of the Opposition.

Senator Perrault: Withdraw!

Senator Flynn: I say it is a lie because it is a lie.

Senator Greene: Unparliamentary!

Senator Flynn: Certainly not. I did not say he was lying. I meant that he was pronouncing a lie. There is a difference.

Senator Bourget: That is a Conservative philosophy if there ever was one. That is Conservative, all right!

Senator Perrault: Typical Tory tactics!

Senator Flynn: No, no, no!

Senator Asselin: You should be ashamed of speaking like that.

Senator Stanbury: I am ashamed that the Leader of the Opposition can make that kind of remark in this house and get away with it.

Senator Flynn: If my honourable friend will listen to me—

Senator Stanbury: I am in the middle of my speech.

Senator Flynn: Are you asking me to retract?

Senator Stanbury: No, I am not asking that.

Senator Flynn: You are not? Then do not say it. If you accept it, I will sit down.

[Senator Stanbury.]

Senator Stanbury: I simply say to you that controls were Tory policy, for whatever reason, so let us accept the catcalls from the other side. For whatever reason, the government finally accepted the policy which the other side originally insisted upon.

Senator Asselin: It is not the same.

Senator Stanbury: And now we have this kind of nit-picking and propaganda. It was Senator Asselin who talked about propaganda, as a matter of fact. Well, I tell you that the nonsense we have heard from the other side is propaganda. It is the kind of propaganda that we have not heard since the days of the tax review legislation, when the same vested interests had that same knee-jerk reaction, the same reaction as they are having now, the same reaction they always have as soon as anybody makes any kind of attempt to govern selfishness and the automatic desire of people to—

Senator Flynn: You are getting puffed up there.

Senator Stanbury: I always do.

Senator Flynn: The former President of the Liberal Federation of Canada is playing his role again.

Senator Langlois: Order! Order!

Senator Flynn: There is no need to call for order. I can interrupt as often as I like.

Senator Stanbury: Honourable senators, my point is that there is a price to be paid for freedom, and that price is something quite different from this kind of attack on legislation against inflation which we all know must succeed. Certainly the CLC knows it must succeed, and it does not have any alternative, just as the Conservative Party has no alternative.

Senator Flynn: The government has no alternative, either!

Senator Stanbury: We must make this legislation succeed.

The worst thing is that the opposition keeps saying it is not succeeding. There was an article recently by the publisher of the Globe and Mail saying that Canada is the worst managed country in the world.

Senator Flynn: That is right!

Senator Stanbury: If he did not know that that was false it would be different, but he does know it is false. We have been told by the OECD that Canada has one of the best managed economies in the world, and that in fact our rate of inflation has gone down during the life of these measures so far from 10.6 to 8.9 per cent.

Senator Perrault: Hear, hear!

Senator Stanbury: We have been hearing all about the great United States. The fact is that until two years ago the rate of unemployment was never lower in Canada than it was in the United States. For the last two years it has been lower than it has been in the United States. The great anti-inflation policy of the United States plunged that country into the greatest depression they have had since the thirties; it put more people out of work and caused greater degradation and individual difficulty than anything else in all that time. The policies of the Government of Canada, on the other hand, kept that depression from occurring in Canada, and maintained our economic growth.

Senator Asselin talked about Canada having only .02 per cent of real growth in the GNP last year. In fact, however, it was one of the only two countries in the OECD that had any growth; all of the others had negative growth.

Senator Greene: As did the Leader of the Opposition.

Senator Asselin: Wait till the next election. You will see about that.

Senator Flynn: There is no parliamentary word to describe that kind of speech.

Senator Stanbury: Canada is one of the only two countries in the OECD in which the real income of the workers has continued to go up over the last ten years. We are one of the only two countries in the OECD in which that is the case.

Senator Choquette: Why do you not leave well enough alone?

Senator Stanbury: Another delightful little story that Mr. Malone told us—and it comes out of the mouths we have been listening to tonight—was to the effect that Canada has gone from the second highest standard of living to the seventh or eighth highest. The fact is that in real terms not only has Canada maintained its position as second in the world—and second only to the United States—but has closed the gap between its living standard and that of the United States to .4 per cent.

Senator Flynn: Yes, I am sure we are all in Paradise. There is no doubt about it.

Senator Smith (Colchester): You should have done the research that Joe Greene did not do!

Senator Stanbury: Honourable senators, this bill, which, as I say, has not been debated, makes the Anti-Inflation Act more workable and more just. There are legitimate questions to be asked, such as the one that Senator Lamontagne raised the other night, and they will be asked, I am sure, in committee. This bill will improve the working of the legislation. Goodness knows—

Senator Smith (Colchester):—it can stand it!

Senator Stanbury:—it will be helpful to have it work better. We all agree with that. There is nothing I hate worse than to have to live under controls of any kind, but if I have to then that is the price I am prepared to pay.

Honourable senators, I now move that the bill be read a second time.

Senator Flynn: You are closing the debate? Thank God!

• (2140)

Senator Lawson: Will the honourable senator permit a question?

What provision do you propose to make in this amendment that will cure the very real problem that we, who are practitioners under the measure, are faced with every week and every month? As you know, under the legislation the employer is responsible for filing with the AIB two reports. He makes no copies of the information he files available to the trade union he does business with. He gives no indication whether he has filed within any required time limit, and in some cases he delays for weeks—in some cases that we have recently been involved with he delays for months—while we are waiting and demanding, and the workers are frustrated while waiting for a reply. We contact Jean Luc Pepin and ask, "Why the delay?" and he says, "Well, the employer has failed to file," or, "One of a group has failed to file, and we cannot act." As one who said, "Let us give the controls a chance; let us try to make them work; let us try to assume our share of the sacrifice," I now say that if something is not done, and if you do not make some provision, this whole program is going to collapse under the sheer weight of its own bureaucracy.

So my question is this: What provision do you have to guarantee (1) that there will be speedy presentation by the employer of the reports; (2) penalties if they fail to do so; and (3) that the information will be made available to the trade unions so that they can respond as to whether it is accurate or not?

Senator Stanbury: Honourable senators, it is an excellent speech and an excellent question, and I suggest that it be asked in committee.

Senator Asselin: That is no answer.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time, on division.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Stanbury moved that the bill be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce.

Motion agreed to.

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

NOTICE OF COMMITTEE MEETING

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, before the motion for adjournment is put, I should like to make an announcement. A meeting of the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications has been scheduled for tomorrow morning at 10.30 to consider Bill S-34. Notices will be on honourable senators' desks in the morning.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, May 19, 1976

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

INCOME TAX ACT

NEWSPAPER ACCOUNT OF COMMENTS BY PRESIDENT OF TIME CANADA LIMITED BEFORE STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE ON BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

Senator Davey: Honourable senators, before the Orders of the Day are called, I want to draw the attention of the Senate to what I consider to be an important matter.

On Thursday, May 13, Stephen S. LaRue, the President of Time Canada Limited, appeared as a witness before the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce.

The Ottawa Journal of Friday, May 14, carried a reasonably accurate Canadian Press account of that appearance. However, the cut line on the story as it appeared in the Ottawa Journal did a great disservice to Mr. LaRue and to the Senate. The heading of the story reads: "Race Bias Charged by Time Canada Chief." There is absolutely nothing in the article which justifies such a heading.

I should like to quote from page 40 of issue No. 85 of the proceedings of the committee, where the following exchange took place between Senator Walker and Mr. LaRue:

SENATOR WALKER: I guess the difference between you and Reader's Digest is that Reader's Digest had a French-Canadian edition, and when the Frenchmen in Quebec go to work, they really have quite an influence on the government, have they not?

MR. LARUE: I suppose it has a political effect.

SENATOR WALKER: And you have not?

MR. LARUE: Time is English.

Honourable senators, this in no way constitutes a charge of race bias by Mr. LaRue, and I feel certain that if, as and when Mr. LaRue sees this story in the Ottawa Journal he will be as offended as I am and as are, I am sure, all honourable senators.

I draw this matter to the attention of honourable senators in the expectation that the Ottawa Journal will want to apologize to both Mr. LaRue and the Senate.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have the honour to table:

Copies of document entitled "Proposals to correct certain anomalies, inconsistencies, archaisms, errors and other matters of a non-controversial and uncomplicated nature in the Revised Statutes of Canada 1970 and other Acts subsequent to 1970," issued by the Department of Justice.

Senator Asselin: Explain.

Senator Perrault: If honourable senators will permit, I should like to give an explanation of the document I have tabled, copies of which, I understand, are in the process of being distributed to honourable senators today.

The proposals contained in this document are in the form of a draft bill which the Minister of Justice described yesterday, in tabling the document in the other place, as a "housekeeping" bill. Honourable senators who received, or are about to receive, copies of this document will note that it is marked "confidential." This is an error. The document need not in fact be treated as confidential.

There are a number of unique features in both the nature of the proposed bill and the method by which it is proposed to develop its content. Because of its unique nature, with the indulgence of honourable senators, I should like to provide a general explanation, without arguing for or against any of its content.

Senator Flynn: How can you do that?

Senator Perrault: I should like to start by pointing to some of the reasons for such a bill. In the view of the government and the Minister of Justice, it is possible for law reform to proceed on a number of levels. Law reform can occur simply by the modification of procedures used in administering laws; it can also occur through judicial decisions. It is important that law reform not proceed in a narrow and short-sighted way, but that its broadest ramifications be kept constantly in view. It is important that appropriate policies, responsive to the needs of our citizens, be embodied in legislation, and much of our discussion in this chamber revolves around the appropriateness of various policies in meeting these needs.

It is the opinion of the Minister of Justice that law reform should proceed on all of these planes simultaneously. Naturally, it will proceed at varying rates at these different levels, since each has its own mechanism of acceleration and restraint. But it is also important that law reform proceed at another level. It is important that our legislation be constantly pruned and trimmed, shorn of anachronisms and inconsistencies and changes in areas of obvious inadequacy, where there can be no disagreement amongst reasonable persons about the need for modification or the form that such modification should take.

Surprisingly enough, it is this kind of law reform that has, in some ways, fallen behind. One reason is that pressures upon the time of Parliament often preclude amendments to a bill from being introduced until major amendments occur. The housekeeping changes for a particular statute are then included in a larger bill. When the bill is debated, the so-called housekeeping changes usually receive quick approval from all parties. Meanwhile, desirable housekeeping changes for other statutes, which would, in all likelihood, also receive quick approval from all parties, must remain dormant for a number of years until the particular statute is ripe for amendments of a major nature.

I am advised that it is proposed, therefore, to provide a vehicle for proceeding with legislation of a non-controversial nature. The phrase "non-controversial" is stressed, since it will be the main criterion by which proposals for inclusion in the bill will be assessed. Determination of the criterion will not be difficult to establish.

● (1410)

In other words, these bills will only include provisions about which we can reach quick and easy agreement. Proposals for inclusion in the bill were invited from every member of this house and the other place, and all of these were given careful consideration. In addition, a comprehensive examination of federal statutes was made and members of the Bar, judges and others who are directly affected by federal legislation were invited to offer proposals for inclusion in the bill.

A completely "open" process is envisaged in developing the bill. Department of Justice officials will be fully available in due course to provide such explanation as may be necessary.

Honourable senators, in a news release and statement which has now been tabled by the Minister of Justice he has indicated that because of the heavy workload on the Justice and Legal Affairs Committee of the House of Commons, the draft bill will be referred to the Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, and after that committee reports the bill may be introduced for first reading.

ANTI-INFLATION ACT

REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Senator Hayden, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, reported that the committee had considered Bill C-89, to amend the Anti-Inflation Act, and had directed that the bill be reported without amendment.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Hayden: Honourable senators, I move that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

Senator Flynn: As you wish. Where is the sponsor of the bill? We did not see him in committee this morning. After his speech of yesterday evening, I thought he would have attended the meeting this morning.

Senator Croll: He was very busy.

Motion agreed to.

AERONAUTICS ACT

REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Senator Haig, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications, reported that the Committee had considered Bill S-34, to amend the Aeronautics Act, and had directed that the bill be reported without amendment.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Thompson: With leave, I move that the bill be read the third time now.

Senator Flynn: Does the bill have to have Royal Assent immediately?

Senator Thompson: I beg your pardon?

Senator Flynn: Would it help to proceed with this bill now, so that it may receive royal assent tonight or tomorrow?

Senator Thompson: It would be very much appreciated.

The Hon. the Speaker: The house has heard the motion. Is there unanimous consent?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

ENERGY

OFFSHORE OIL AND GAS RESOURCES IN ATLANTIC PROVINCES—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on April 29 Senator Greene asked me the following question:

Could the Leader of the Government inform the house as to the progress being made between the federal government and the governments of the Atlantic provinces with respect to the development of offshore oil and gas resources in those provinces?

I should now like to answer that question. Negotiations are currently in progress between the federal government and the three Maritime provinces, that is, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, with respect to the administration of offshore mineral rights. They have agreed to set aside the matter of ownership for the time being in order not to hamper and delay exploration for and development of strategic offshore oil and gas resources.

A meeting was scheduled for May 12 in Halifax at which officials of the four governments were to have discussed proposals for implementing a system of joint administration for the offshore in preparation for ministerial level discussions at a later date. I have no report as yet on that meeting.

You have read in the press that Petro-Canada is now providing a catalyst for new drilling activity on the continental shelf of Nova Scotia and, together with industry partners, will spend approximately $25 million over the next year in an effort to discover much needed energy supplies, with more projects contemplated for the years following. Without that catalyst it is unlikely that there would be much activity at all in this offshore region.

Negotiations with Newfoundland on the administration of offshore mineral rights have ceased for the time being owing to the insistence of that government that it administer these independently. This impasse, if not soon resolved, may have an effect on the level of expenditure which industry is willing to put into exploration in this region, even if the best discoveries so far have been made here off the Labrador coast.

DEVELOPMENT OF TIDAL POWER IN BAY OF FUNDY— QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, Senator Smith (Colchester) also directed a question on April 29. He asked: "In view of the increasing importance of energy supplies, what is the present status of studies with reference to the development of tidal power in the Bay of Fundy."

The Bay of Fundy Tidal Power Review Board recently announced the initiation of studies as recommended under the recently concluded federal-provincial agreement between Canada and the provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

A study budget of $2,145,000 has been approved for the first phase of the study program which is expected to be complete by February, 1977. These studies are expected to provide definitive answers regarding the economic viability of tidal power from the Bay of Fundy and the potential capability and mode of integration with the Maritime Power Pool as well as the most appropriate timing of any developments considered economically viable.

The major tasks which are to be undertaken in this initial phase are the following:

1. Tidal power plant design
2. Power generation optimization
3. Market and system analysis and transmission studies.

● (1420)

Other aspects of the first phase studies include consideration of socio-economic and environmental aspects which will be carried on concurrently with the foregoing major task studies.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

SALE OF NUCLEAR REACTORS—SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on March 30 Senator Manning asked a question regarding the sale of nuclear reactors to foreign countries, referring specifically to Argentina.

In reply, under international legal practice, intergovernmental treaties are binding not only the particular governments that sign them but on future governments as well. Argentina has honoured its international treaty obligations in spite of changes of government historically and there is no doubt that it will do so now, in the view of the Government of Canada. Of course, no nuclear cooperation could proceed without adequate intergovernmental guarantees being in place.

ENERGY

OFFSHORE OIL AND GAS RESOURCES IN ATLANTIC PROVINCES—SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTION

Senator Austin: The answer which the Leader of the Government gave to the question asked by Senator Greene on the offshore resources constitutional issue has a disturbing element in it. I understood the leader to say that it was estimated that exploration off the coast of Labrador might slow down or possibly even cease because the constitutional question has not yet been resolved in negotiation.

[Senator Perrault.]

The honourable leader will remember that the federal government, in the mid-1960s, sent a reference to the Supreme Court of Canada in terms of the jurisdiction of the Province of British Columbia off the coasts of Canada, and that decision was rendered in favour of the federal jurisdiction.

Is the federal government now considering the necessity of unilaterally, or by agreement if possible, making a reference to the Supreme Court of Canada on the Newfoundland constitutional issue in order to avoid hindering the search for badly needed natural gas and oil resources in Canada?

Senator Perrault: The Government of Canada naturally is very concerned about the impasse, the situation which exists, and various courses of action are under consideration. Apart from that, I would like to take the question as notice and make a further statement to the Senate at a later date.

DEVELOPMENT OF TIDAL POWER IN BAY OF FUNDY— SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTION

Senator Riley: Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the Leader of the Government, based on the answer he gave Senator Smith with respect to the present status of studies regarding the economic viability of tidal power from the Bay of Fundy. Will the study apply to the whole of the Bay of Fundy, including the Passamaquoddy and Cobscook Bay area, or only the Minas Basin area? Studies have been made in the past on both these areas of the Bay of Fundy.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the reply I gave does not contain a great deal of technical detail, but it does make reference to the economic viability of tidal power from the Bay of Fundy, and one would assume that there would be a comprehensive study of the situation. However, a further inquiry will be directed to the appropriate sources and I shall obtain the information required.

SETTING OF PRICES FOR CRUDE OIL AND NATURAL GAS— QUESTION

Senator Phillips: Honourable senators, last evening the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources made an announcement in the House of Commons concerning increases in the price of crude oil and natural gas. The members of that place were provided an opportunity to ask questions of the government. Is it the intention of the Leader of the Government to honour this chamber with his explanation and permit us to ask questions here?

Senator Perrault: I appreciate the importance of the question raised by the honourable senator. The intention will be to table the statement by the minister tomorrow afternoon, and, of course, on the basis of its contents, honourable senators may wish to pose certain questions.

Senator Flynn: May I ask a supplementary question? Why is it not possible for the government to make the same announcement in the Senate as is made in the House of Commons and make it at the same time?

Senator Perrault: Where possible, we endeavour to have this procedure followed. It is a suggestion with a great deal of merit and certainly it has full support on this side.

OFFSHORE OIL AND GAS RESOURCES IN ATLANTIC PROVINCES—SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTIONS

Senator Rowe: Honourable senators, the Leader of the Government, when answering a question raised by Senator Austin with respect to the Newfoundland constitutional issue, said that he will make a statement on this matter at a later date. I have a supplementary question. I am sure that we all heard with some perturbation the inference in the leader's answer to the effect that, because of the absence of any resolution of the claims of the Newfoundland government and those of the federal government in the matter of offshore oil rights, there will be some decrease in the amount of exploration off Newfoundland and Labrador. It has also been rumoured in the various media that there will be a decrease in exploration activities off the Labrador coast this year. This is a very serious matter because, as I am sure honourable senators are aware, the most encouraging signs for oil discovery are being found off Labrador.

Would the Leader of the Government indicate to us, if he has the information, whether or not the oil companies have stated categorically that the reason for cutting down on exploration in that region is the fact that there has been no resolution of the two conflicting claims?

May I say, apropos of that claim, that the Government of Newfoundland, on the best constitutional legal advice obtainable across Canada, has consistently claimed that its situation vis-à-vis that of the federal government in this matter of oil rights is different from that of other provinces, including British Columbia.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, that specific information will be sought. However, may I say that business and industry traditionally find it very difficult to expand and to grow and do advanced planning in a climate of uncertainty. There appears at this time to be a certain degree of uncertainty with respect to the ownership of the offshore oil resources in Newfoundland and Labrador.

Senator Rowe: In fairness to the leader, perhaps I should have said that in respect of those rumours and statements which have been made by the companies to the Newfoundland people, that at no time, insofar as my recollection goes—and I have been listening very intently to what has been said about this matter—have the companies indicated that that is the reason for their cutting back. I should have added that comment when I asked for the information.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Perhaps I may be permitted to ask the Leader of the Government a supplementary question along the same lines. Is it not correct that these same companies, or very nearly the same companies, have done all their drilling off the coast of the Atlantic provinces under exactly the same situation which is now termed "uncertainty"?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, there appear to be, as Senator Rowe said, differences between the legal claims entered by Newfoundland and the legal claims entered by some of the other provinces with respect to the ownership of offshore resources. Admittedly, however, there has been a degree of uncertainty for a number of years with respect to ownership of offshore resources in all of Canada's provinces which border the oceans. Hopefully, this matter can be resolved in the near future. I would point out that the same uncertainty existed in the United States until an agreement was achieved with certain coastal states to split 50-50 with the federal government of that country the returns from those offshore resources.

● (1430)

In preliminary references to the courts, it has been ascertained, certainly in the case of British Columbia, that there is federal jurisdiction over these offshore resources. That does not preclude, ultimately, an agreement being achieved between the provinces and the federal government regardless of the legal opinions which are obtained from the courts.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I do not disagree with what the leader has said. Perhaps I did not make the purport of my question clear. As I understood his answer, it contained the suggestion that drilling was not proceeding as it might otherwise off the coasts of Newfoundland and Labrador because of uncertainties regarding jurisdiction in the coastal areas as between the federal and provincial governments.

The purport of my question was to demonstrate that in fact all the drilling which has taken place so far off the Atlantic coast has been undertaken in exactly the same circumstance of uncertainty, agreeing and admitting that there is a difference in the basis of the Newfoundland claim vis-à-vis the claims of other provinces. To me, this conveys the feeling that there must be some other reason than that of uncertainty, if there is a decline in the rate of drilling off the coasts of Newfoundland and Labrador.

Senator Perrault: There has been a degree of uncertainty, but in the case of New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia, agreement has been reached with the federal government to set aside the matter of ownership for the time being so as not to hamper or delay exploration for, and development of, strategic offshore oil and gas resources.

There could be an additional difficulty in the case of Newfoundland. I can only state at this time that I will endeavour to obtain additional information.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I thank the Leader of the Government and I draw his attention to the fact that drilling has been going on off those coasts for many years and it is only recently that agreement between the federal government and the three Maritime provinces mentioned has taken place.

Senator Riley: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might be permitted a question. Is it not true that in recent years, when this dispute originally arose, the exploration companies sought and obtained rights from the three Maritime provinces, irrespective of what might be the outcome as to which government had jurisdiction over the coastal areas? Did the Province of Nova Scotia not give these exploration companies the rights for offshore drilling?

Senator Smith (Colchester): Yes, it licensed them.

Senator Riley: And did they not also obtain those rights from the federal government?

Senator Smith (Colchester): Certainly. That is my point.

Senator Riley: So, the question now to be resolved is: Who has the rights to the benefits of any resources that might be found?

Senator Smith (Colchester): Yes.

Senator Riley: I am not arguing. I just wanted to get that clear in my mind.

AN ACT TO REPEAL THE PROPRIETARY OR PATENT MEDICINE ACT AND TO AMEND THE TRADE MARKS ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING

Senator Croteau moved the third reading of Bill S-35, to amend an act to repeal the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act and to amend the Trade Marks Act.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

SOCIAL WELFARE

DISTRIBUTION OF INCOME—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. David A. Croll rose pursuant to notice:

That he will call the attention of the Senate to the sums of money mentioned in Bill C-91, intituled: "An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1977", given Royal Assent on March 30th, 1976.

He said: Honourable senators, I am going to deal for a while today with the estimates of the Department of National Health and Welfare, more particularly with those concerning welfare, and, even more particularly, with distribution and redistribution of incomes.

Senator Flynn: Transfer payments.

Senator Croll: Let me first say a word about welfare. There is a great deal of talk today about welfare and about workfare; that is, making people work for the welfare they receive. Some suggestions are far-fetched. There has even been a suggestion recently that they ought not to make welfare payments in cash but rather in kind. I do not think much attention is being paid to such suggestions, but it is amazing that the first thought that comes to the minds of people when considering welfare recipients is how to whittle welfare payments down.

We are now in a period of economic restraint, and from all the speeches and suggestions one hears it appears that the economic elite are ready once again to sacrifice the poor. All of a sudden, persons who should know better, including some politicians, want to run against what they call the overindulgence of social engineering. We have to resist that sort of thing. What some view as a popular appeal, in far too many instances is an attempt to whittle down, to whittle away at, the social security system.

Senator Flynn: The welfare state.

[Senator Smith (Colchester).]

Senator Croll: We must challenge the prevailing thinking that we are allocating too much of our resources to social services and not enough to productive investments, and that is what I am going to deal with for the next little while.

Senator Flynn: I do not have to ask which side you are on.

Senator Croll: Our social security system has permanently changed the life of the Canadian working people for the better. In my view, it has saved the system. I cannot picture Canada without our present social security system. For whatever part I have had, along with others, in helping to build the present social mosaic, I do not feel guilty. My view is that our social security and welfare system is our proudest achievement, and the achievement through which we assert our moral strength and our greatness.

We should ask ourselves from time to time whether it is true what people are saying about welfare. In the early days, it was loose; it was lacking expert administration. It was never easy. There grew up the "welfare bum" myth; the myth that all welfare recipients are freeloaders; the myth of the "pie in the sky" people. You heard it all the time, and you still hear that the poor are poor because they do not want to work; the poor are lazy; the poor are illiterate, stupid. Those who say that are wrong, dead wrong, on every count.

Senator Flynn: If you say so.

Senator Croll: Dead wrong.

Senator Flynn: If you say so.

Senator Croll: Well, I say so because I know so. I know there are one million Canadians working at the minimum wage level who, in most instances, could get far more on welfare. Yet they continue to work!

Senator Flynn: I thought you were speaking of social welfare.

Senator Croll: I am speaking of social welfare. People thought it was easy to get on welfare. Let me tell you, it is not easy to get on welfare at all. I have in my hand the standard five forms that one fills in when making application for welfare in Toronto. With permission of the house, I would like these forms printed as an appendix to the Debates of the Senate of today.

• (1440)

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Croll: Honourable senators, I shall not read them to you, but will tell you that a person could spend a day on them, and even if he were a Philadelphia lawyer I am not sure that he could answer all the questions. The application for assistance consists of two pages; another application for welfare consists of four pages—

Senator Flynn: Those are the forms used in Ontario?

Senator Croll: Yes, the first four are the standard forms used in Ontario, but I think they are generally the forms used throughout the country. In addition, there is the consent to inspect assets, and the medical certificate. In any event, these are the forms which are used in Ontario and, from my knowledge, similar types of forms are used in many other parts of the country.

(For text of forms see Appendix.)

Senator Croll: Today welfare and unemployment insurance are being twinned, and everyone calls them the great rip-off. We must understand, however, that welfare today is not what it was years ago. The administrators are very capable and have had much experience, their staffs are highly competent, and the costs are carefully watched. It has been my experience that it is easier to get an unsecured loan of $100 from a hard-nosed and hard-hearted bank manager than to obtain $10 from a bleeding heart social worker. The reference to rip-off in welfare is mistaken. I will agree that rip-offs occur in connection with unemployment insurance at the present time. I regret them, as we must all regret them, but to compare welfare with unemployment insurance is to give welfare a bad name when it has been trying to live one down for a long time.

Senator Flynn: And also vice versa—you give unemployment insurance a bad name when you speak of welfare.

Senator Croll: I beg your pardon?

Senator Flynn: If you say that unemployment insurance is welfare, you give it a bad name.

Senator Croll: I did not say that.

Senator Flynn: Some people do say it, though.

Senator Croll: But I did not. Let me say, insofar as welfare is concerned, that if you wish to draw comparisons it is the cleanest game in town today.

Senator Flynn: Welfare?

Senator Croll: Welfare. I have often thought that if we are to compare it with some of the undertakings that take place—

Senator Grosart: Be careful, now.

Senator Flynn: You are on thin ice.

Senator Croll: Yes; perhaps I will leave it at that.

However, I have asked myself time and time again why, in the face of the large expenditures that have been made for welfare, we have not had any attributable distribution of income? I have searched my mind, as I am sure others have, but have not been able to come up with an answer for some time. For almost 25 years there has really been no change in the distribution. I ask myself: Who is getting the money, and how much? I have not been able to arrive at the answers. I searched personally for them, and think I had some luck. I will indicate my views—

Senator Flynn: I do not doubt that for a moment, that you have had some luck.

Senator Croll: I raise the matter to indicate that we cannot rely on social welfare alone to redistribute wealth. I said I have asked myself the same questions that you have asked yourselves, without being able to come up with an answer. I have in my hand, and will ask that it be included in my speech, a copy of a table headed "Distribution of Income By Quintiles," the source being Statistics Canada. The table covers the years from 1965 to 1973, and shows the distribution of family income by quintiles, five groups each of 20 per cent. This table would seem to indicate that between 1965 and 1973 the distribution of income by families has not changed significantly, with the lowest 20 per cent of families actually having their income share reduced from 6.2 per cent to 6.1 per cent.

(The table follows:)

DISTRIBUTION OF INCOME BY QUINTILES

Share of total income reached by:

	Lowest quintile	Second quintile	Middle quintile Per cent	Fourth quintile	Highest quintile
Families
1965	6.2	13.1	18.0	23.6	39.0
1969	6.2	12.6	17.9	23.5	39.7
1971	5.6	12.6	18.0	23.7	40.0
1973	6.1	12.9	18.1	23.9	38.9
Unattached individuals
1973	3.2	8.6	15.2	24.9	48.1
All family units
1973	3.9	10.7	17.6	25.1	42.7

Source: Statistics Canada.

I have another table, which is headed "Income Redistribution Through Government Intervention, 1970." The source of this table is a government department, and the figures appeared in an article entitled: "Impact of Tax, Transfer, and Expenditure Policies of Government on the Distribution of Personal Income in Canada," which I obtained from the Provincial Bank of Canada.

Senator Asselin: That is a good bank.

Senator Croll: It is a model constructed to try to determine the redistributive effect on income through government taxation and expenditure redistribution policies. The first column under the heading "Distribution of Incomes" shows distribution of income before government intervention; the second column shows those figures adjusted to reflect government tax and expenditure policies in 1970; and the third column shows the results simulated in 1970 for changes in government programs made between 1970 and 1973. Although this model may have limitations, it would seem that all the government redistribution programs since 1970 have had very little effect on income redistribution, increasing in the lowest quintile from 8.8 to 9.1 per cent of total income.

Senator Flynn: Are you trying to tell us that this policy of payments has served no purpose?

Senator Croll: No, but not very much.

Senator Flynn: Have they served nothing? I thought that you were saying it is a great policy but now you are trying to prove the contrary.

Senator Croll: I am saying that it—

Senator Flynn: —that it does not help.

Senator Croll: Of course it is helping the individual, but it is not having the distributive effect that it ought to have and which we thought it would have in the early days. As a matter of fact, in the first five years after social security was introduced there was a distributive effect.

Senator Flynn: And now it does not have that effect.

Senator Croll: At the present time it does not have that effect, and I will indicate the reason why I think that is so.

Senator Flynn: Are you suggesting an increase?

Senator Croll: At the conclusion of my remarks I will probably have convinced you also that there is a good reason.

(The table follows:)

INCOME REDISTRIBUTION
THROUGH GOVERNMENT INTERVENTION, 1970

Quintile	Money income range $	Distribu- tion of families %	Distribution of Incomes non adopted (1) %	adjusted (2) %	simulated (3) %
Highest	12,000 and over	22.9	48.6	41.5	41.2
Fourth	9,000-11,999	17.9	21.5	20.9	20.9
Third	7,000- 8,999	14.5	13.3	14.0	14.0
Second	4,000- 6,999	20.8	12.3	14.8	14.8
Lowest	Less than 4,000	23.8	4.4	8.8	9.1

Notes: (1) Before government intervention

(2) Adjusted to government tax and expenditure policy according to 1970 programs

(3) Simulated in 1970 for government tax and expenditure policy according to the changes made in the programs between 1970 and 1973

Source: Dodge, D.A..

Impact of Tax, Transfer, and Expenditure Policies of Government on the Distribution of Personal Income in Canada. The Review of Income and Wealth, Vol. 21. No. 1, March 1975, p. 1 to 52.

Broadly speaking, the role of the government in economic affairs may seem to have two purposes. The first is to ensure full employment. By this term we mean the maximum utilization of all resources, both human and non-human, with the most beneficial effect possible. In doing so, the government attempts to bring the actual wealth of a country, the gross national product, as close as possible to the country's maximum potential, the potential gross national product.

● (1450)

The second role of government may be that of redistribution of income or wealth, as the maximization of income or wealth alone does not ensure an equitable distribution. This redistribution can be brought about through the government's powers of taxation and expenditure. My purpose here is to examine the federal government's expenditure programs to see whether in fact they represent an attempt to bring about a more equitable distribution of income, and in so doing I will try to make a distinction between what can be called "social welfare" programs and "welfare" programs.

I take the term "social welfare program" to mean any government program which has a direct contribution and benefit, such as the old age pension, the family allowance, the Canada Pension Plan and unemployment insurance, all of which are universal in scope. We refer to them as "demogrants" and as "universal." The definition of "demogrants" is an equal cash transfer made to all members of the demographic group regardless of income. We refer to them today as universal demogrants, but I will use the term "universal."

A prime example of this is the old age security fund. Here a set percentage of income, both personal and corporate, as well as sales tax is directly credited to the fund. The basic old age security pension is universal. Everyone over 65 receives it regardless of income. There is a direct benefit each month in the form of a pension cheque. A supplementary pension under this program, however, cannot be considered a social welfare program, because it is based on need, income stipulations, and is not universal. It is welfare, and I make that distinction which I am sure the Senate appreciates.

Another example of such a program is family allowance payments. The contribution by government from consolidated revenue is fixed, although it is indexed for inflation, and the benefit is directed to all parents of children. However, the key concept here is universality. All children qualify, and their parents receive these payments regardless of their financial needs.

From these examples it should be obvious that these programs are ineffectual in bringing about any basic or fundamental change in the income distribution that has been established by the market economy. The prime reason for this is the concept common to all of them—that of universality. For instance, assuming that the income distribution of all people over 65 is similar to that of the country as a whole—and that is a reasonable assumption—there would be no fundamental shift in income. The rich will receive as much in benefits as they have contributed, and the same holds true for the poor.

Senator Flynn: That is income tax.

Senator Croll: You've got it!

In terms of unemployment insurance, because of its universality, the well-paid executive who is unemployed will receive benefits equal to or better than those received by a poor labourer, because benefits are based on past income up to a certain level. Because there is no restriction on income or wealth, a person who has great wealth but who is unemployed, and who could live quite extravagantly off his wealth, will receive benefits equal to or better than a person who is unemployed but has no wealth or savings to draw on. And these same arguments are true of family allowance payments as well.

Senator Everett: May I ask the honourable senator a question? Perhaps I am anticipating his remarks, but will he take into account the effect of taxation on the individual? Does he intend to come to that point because, surely, it is an essential portion of the argument he is making?

[Senator Flynn.]

Senator Croll: No, I will not deal with the taxation portion of it. I am dealing only with the expenditure aspect.

Senator Flynn: Well, you are making sweeping statements. For example, you say that family allowances benefit everybody in the same way, but that is not true.

Senator Croll: Well—

Senator Everett: The honourable senator will agree, I think, that family allowances and unemployment insurance and standard pension benefits are taxable.

Senator Croll: Certainly.

Senator Everett: And that we do have a graduated system of taxation in Canada.

Senator Croll: Certainly.

Senator Grosart: Is the honourable senator arguing in favour of a means test now?

Senator Croll: A means test?

Senator Grosart: Or are you against it?

Senator Croll: I have not even mentioned a means test.

Senator Grosart: In his remarks, the honourable senator seems to be complaining that there is no means test and that these are universal programs, which is the exact opposite of a means test. The usual alternative to universality is a means test. I wonder if that is what he is favouring.

Senator Croll: No. I thoroughly approve of universality. What I am saying is that it has not the distributive effect. That is what I am saying. I will come to that, though. That is part of my argument.

Senator Flynn: Up to now it has not been too clear.

Senator Croll: I am having a hard time with you, but I will try to make it clearer. I am not saying that these programs are totally ineffectual in income redistribution. Because of the progressive nature of the personal income tax, it is obvious that, on an individual basis, the rich will contribute more than the poor to these programs. Assuming equal benefits to both, there certainly will be some redistribution. However, the effectiveness of this redistribution is reduced considerably because of universality.

Having made these observations, I think it is fair to say that these are all essential programs. It is obvious that there is no guarantee to the government that these programs will bring about a more equitable distribution of income. In fact, they may only perpetuate the existing distribution.

Now, I have not presented these arguments to suggest that the government should stop, reduce or fail to promote social welfare programs with universality. Certainly, the government must present programs to benefit all sections of society. All I have stated here is that, as a means of redistributing income, these programs are not very effective.

Senator Flynn: Will you be reconciling what you have just said with your first proposal, that the prime objective would be to use to the utmost the potential of the working people?

Senator Croll: You are an impatient man.

Senator Flynn: Up to now I have been trying to be patient.

Senator Croll: Just sit and listen and enjoy this, will you?

Senator Flynn: I am trying to enjoy it, but I must confess I'm having some difficulty.

Senator Croll: Just listen and I guarantee that you will enjoy it, because I notice you are following me closely and quite clearly.

Senator Flynn: Yes, indeed. I have not missed a word.

Senator Croll: Then you have already benefited somewhat.

Senator Denis: He won't learn anything.

Senator Perrault: It is a treat; not a treatment.

Senator Croll: I have taken the term "welfare program" to mean any government program which, although it may or may not have direct contributions, is based upon some criterion of need. A good example of that is the old age security fund's supplementary pension, which is based upon an income qualification. Here the contribution from consolidated revenue is paid by everyone. However, the benefits are restricted to those on the lower income scale. Since there is no universality, these programs represent an effective means of income redistribution.

● (1500)

There are other such programs as experimental guaranteed income plans, benefits under the Canada Assistance Plan, bursaries, scholarships, and so on. However, these "pure welfare" programs are few in number compared to "social" welfare programs, as we are about to see. Welfare programs represent the best and really the only effectual way to achieve a fundamental income redistribution.

During the 1970s there has been a large growth in federal government expenditures on social welfare. In a recent study of government expenditures, figures for social welfare expenditures were calculated and compared with subsidies given to business, industry, agriculture and fishing, which represented both cash subsidies and unpaid taxes because of preferential income treatment given corporations and others. These are, in fact, not only private welfare but hidden welfare, because they are hard to locate and it would be hard to find them in the blue book. They include taxation exemptions, capital cost allowance, depletion allowance, deductions for registered retirement plan contributions, and deductions of up to $10,000 under the registered home ownership plan. At the present time, under the heading of services for business there are 22 acts of Parliament, and under the heading of tax incentives there are 10 more, for a total of 32 acts of Parliament. In respect of social welfare there are 16 acts of Parliament.

Senator Flynn: The number of acts does not prove much.

Senator Croll: The findings of the recent study of government expenditures, to which I have just referred, are as follows:

	1972-73 ($ billions)	1973-74 ($ billions)
Social welfare expenditures	4.4	6.3
Subsidies and unpaid taxes to business, industry, agriculture and fishing	2.7	3.0

In this study, social welfare was taken to mean any grant or contribution for the economic, social, physical and mental health of specific groups within society.

From 1973 to 1974 social welfare increased by $1.9 billion, and this increase was broken down as follows:

	$ billions
Increased Family Allowance payments	0.4
Increased basic Old Age Secu- rity payments	0.5
New, direct government funding of UIC	0.8
Increases in other welfare pro- grams	0.2
Total increase	1.9

This analysis clearly shows that of the increase of $1.9 billion in social program expenditures, $1.7 billion came in the form of what we have previously defined as "social welfare" programs.

Senator Flynn: Are you including provincial programs?

Senator Croll: No. I shall deal with those in a moment.

"Pure welfare" programs during this period have increased by only $0.2 billion. Therefore, despite the government's claim of large increases in government social programs, almost all of this money has gone into programs that are ineffectual in bringing about a fundamental change in income redistribution. Furthermore, many of these "social welfare" programs are being indexed to inflation so that they will continue to play a very large part in future government expenditure; and indexing is not true of welfare.

Senator Flynn: There has been a change with regard to old age pensions. There is no indexing any more. You know that.

Senator Croll: Your comments are not contributing anything.

Another interesting observation is that while "pure welfare" programs increased by only $0.2 billion, subsidies to business, industry, agriculture and fishing increased by $0.3 billion during the same period, thus further reducing the effectiveness of income redistribution.

Senator Flynn: No.

Senator Croll: What about other forms of government expenditure? First there are unconditional grants to the provinces. However, they are of no concern to us in this context, as we are only interested in federal expenditures. The provinces are another matter.

[Senator Croll.]

Next, there are transfers to the provinces for hospital, medical and post-secondary education. In terms of hospital and medical benefits, there is little income redistribution brought about through the provision of free or subsidized services, as benefits once again are universal, although progressive taxation will cause the rich to pay more in contributions and will have some effect. As for post-secondary education, although everyone will make a contribution, only those who go to university or college will benefit. Studies have shown that the majority of those attending post-secondary institutions are from the middle and upper income classes, and for these reasons income distribution may become even more unequal.

Finally, there are government administrative and capital expenditures which provide society with organization, services and social infrastructure. However, once again the benefits of such expenditures are universal, and provide no concrete redistribution of income.

Let me return to the concept of social welfare expenditures versus subsidies for business and industry. I made it clear that these subsidies are made under laws passed by Parliament, and I gave the number. I shall not trouble honourable senators by naming them. There is nothing illegal. Everything is proper, as is the expenditure for social welfare. As we have seen previously, social welfare expenditures outnumber subsidies by a ratio of two to one.

Senator Flynn: In amounts?

Senator Croll: Yes. If we eliminate the universal programs and deal only with welfare—if we eliminate the basic old age security pension, government funding for UIC, family allowances—this is what we have:

Insert table folio No 78

	1972-73 ($ billions)	1973-74 ($ billions)
Original social welfare expendi- tures	4.4	6.3
Minus—basic old age security pensions	-1.8	-2.3
Minus—government funding of UIC	-0.0	-0.9
Minus—family allowance pay- ments	-0.6	-1.0
Total—pure welfare expen- ditures	2.0	2.1
Subsidies to business, industry, agriculture and fishing includ- ing estimated tax avoidance due to preferential treatment of income	2.7	3.0

• (1510)

From this analysis, we can see that welfare programs—

Senator Flynn: Federal welfare programs?

Senator Croll: I am only talking about federal programs.

Senator Flynn: You have to be precise.

Senator Croll: From this analysis, we can see that welfare programs only account for about one-third of all social welfare expenditures. The majority of expenditures go into "social welfare programs."

Senator Flynn: Surely the honourable senator realizes that welfare is, first, a provincial responsibility. He should put that in context.

Senator Croll: On the other hand, there are benefits that could be placed against welfare. The provincial story is very similar.

Senator Asselin: Is there any great difference between the two levels of government?

Senator Croll: There may be a difference. I do not know about that. I am dealing with the federal government because that is the one I know about. I was able to get the federal government's figures. If some other honourable senator can obtain figures in respect of the provinces, I would invite him to do so.

Senator Flynn: The provincial figures will be necessary in order to put your speech in its proper perspective.

Senator Croll: Of course, and I hope my speech attracts attention to the point where someone will go to the trouble of obtaining the provincial figures and putting them before the Senate. That is the purpose of my speech.

These programs, because of their universality, have only a limited effect on income redistribution. At the same time, subsidies and tax advantages given to business and industry exceed, by about 50 per cent, the amount spent on "pure welfare" programs.

Senator Flynn: Pure?

Senator Croll: I have not taken into account an amount of $250 million paid to the CNR and CPR that I noticed a few days ago. That $250 million item relates to road losses.

What this indicates is that private welfare, hidden welfare, draws out of the public treasury $1 billion more than public welfare. Those are the figures. If any honourable senator disagrees with them, I am ready to hear what he or she has to say.

Senator Flynn: Of course, you realize that the transfer of payments in respect of welfare depends upon the economic activity in the country.

Senator Croll: Not entirely.

Senator Flynn: That is the first objective, if you want to equalize payments. Productivity is of the essence.

Senator Croll: Of course. The working people in this country contribute in the same way. One has to look at both sides. All I am saying is that it is time to look at both sides of the ledger. People are always being told that welfare recipients are ripping off the system; that welfare programs are taking all the money. Let's look on the other side of the ledger. I am putting forward the other side, and somebody is not enjoying it.

Clearly, the second goal of government, to provide a more equitable distribution of income, has, so far, failed. More comprehensive studies seem to indicate this to be true, with the distribution of income not shifting throughout the years, despite increases in federal government social welfare spending. Perhaps the prime reason for this has been the emphasis placed upon, and preponderance of, "social welfare" programs which are universal in scope and, for that reason, limited in their effectiveness to redistribute income. That is not true in the case of "welfare" programs.

It is obvious that programs based on need can have a decisive redistributive effect. The present hope is that some form of negative income tax or guaranteed annual income will be implemented, thereby bringing about a fundamental change in income distribution in Canada.

The story that has been peddled around this country that welfare is robbing the till is simply not true. Welfare programs are not even getting their proper proportion, as is obvious when one looks at both sides of the ledger. It is not often that both sides are looked at. When the division is made, it is obvious that people on welfare are short-changed. As I have indicated, I do not disagree with private or hidden welfare, but the public should know. It should not be hidden. It should be brought out into the open.

Honourable senators, the matter is now before the house. I took some pains in presenting it in the manner I have. As a matter of fact, it took a good deal of extra work to do so. I suggest that we view it in the manner I have set out, balancing it rather than always viewing it as being one-sided. That is the purpose of my presentation, and I hope that others will follow in a similar manner.

On motion of Senator Petten, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

(See p. 2145)

APPLICATION FOR

FORM 1

Assistance under the General Welfare Assistance Act
An Allowance under the Family Benefits Act

Name of Applicant (Surname)		(First Name)		(Second Name)
Address: (Number)		(Street)		(City, Town, etc.)
				(Postal Code)
(Township)		(County)		(Municipality)
Maiden name if applicable				Municipal Code
				R.O.
				Tel. No.
				FWA

Has the applicant previously applied for assistance under the General Welfare Assistance Act or an allowance under the Family Benefits Act

Yes ☐

No ☐ If 'yes', give particulars in narrative.

2 PERSONAL DATA		Name	Birthdate D/M/Y	Education Last Grade Completed	Birthplace	Proof	Health
(a) Applicant
Spouse

(b) Next of Kin:

Name _____

Address

Relationship

(c) Marital Status of Applicant:

Single ☐Married ☐Widowed ☐

Divorced ☐

Separated ☐Deserted ☐

Date:

Place:

If applicant or spouse previously married please provide details

Does applicant or spouse have OHIP coverage? _____ If so, are premiums paid directly; through pension deductions or otherwise?
Give details: _____

1) Applicant: OHIP No. _____ Social Ins. No. _____

2) Spouse: OHIP No. _____ Social Ins. No. _____

Are special diets required by applicant, spouse or dependent children? Yes _____ No _____

3 DEPENDENT CHILDREN

[illegible]

4 STATE IN DETAIL REASONS WHY AID IS REQUIRED

5 RESIDENCE IN ONTARIO IMMEDIATELY PRIOR TO THE DATE OF THIS APPLICATION

Details of previous residence: _____ Years _____ Months

6 INCOME

A. Past and present employment. (List employment of applicant and all members of household: include part-time and irregular employment, casual and odd jobs.)

(Give record of past employment of all employable members of household, cover a sufficient period for each person to indicate period of last regular employment.)

Employee	Employer (Name of Person Firm or Corporation)	Employer's Address	Number of hours Monthly	Weekly Wgs.		Period of Employment
				Gross	* Net	From Mo.	Yr.	To Mo.	Yr.

Reason for leaving

* Net amount actually received

B. Rental Revenue Yes ☐ No ☐

Name	Relationship	Type of rental	Rate: weekly or monthly	Date commenced	Date ceased

C. Roomers (R) or Boarders (B) Yes ☐ No ☐

Name	R/B	Relationship	Date of birth	Rate: weekly or monthly	Date commenced	Date ceased

Is any roomer or boarder a child of the applicant and a beneficiary of Family Benefits, a student, or in receipt of General Welfare Assistance?

Yes ☐No ☐

If yes, provide details

Is there any other person living in the home? Yes ☐ No ☐ if yes, provide detailsD. Other income of any beneficiary Yes ☐ No ☐

Description	Reference #	Applicant		Spouse or Dependent
		Date Commenced	Monthly Amount	Date Commenced	Monthly Amount
Old Age Security and G.I.S.
Annuities Superannuation Pensions
Insurance Benefits (Details)
Farm or Business (Details)
Alimony or Separation Payment
Maintenance from putative father or deserting husband
Mortgage Receivable - Loan Agreement
Training Allowances (Detail Expenses)
The Pension Act (Canada)
Unemployment Insurance Act (Canada)
War Veterans Allowance Act (Canada)
Civilian War Pensions Allowance Act (Canada)
Official Guardian
Canada Pension Plan (Canada)
Quebec Pension Plan (Quebec)
Workmen's Compensation Act
General Welfare Assistance Act
Compensation for Victims of Crime Act, 1971
Other (Specify)

Is applicant, spouse or dependent child in receipt of any regular or periodic contribution from relatives or other sources? Yes ☐ No ☐

If yes, provide details in narrative.

Is applicant, spouse or dependent child in receipt of Public Assistance other than for which the application is being made? Yes ☐ No ☐

If yes, give rate $ _____ and date commenced _____

Has applicant, spouse or dependent child received a student award? Yes ☐ No ☐ If yes, provide details in narrative.Has application been made for any of the above types of income? Yes ☐ No ☐ If yes, provide details _____Is any future income expected from any source? Yes ☐ No ☐ If yes, provide details _____

Means of subsistence of applicant and/or spouse _____

Did applicant and/or spouse serve in allied armed forces? Yes ☐ No ☐ If yes, dates and particulars _____

7 ASSETS

A. Check for each item held by applicant, spouse or dependent children at the time of application

Type	Yes	No	Description	A	S	C	Amount
1. Cash on hand
2. Bank accounts
3. Credit unions
4. Safety deposit box
5. Bonds, stock shares and other securities
6. Mortgage receivable
Type	Yes	No	Description	A	S	C	Amount
7. Loans, notes
8. Accounts collectable
9. Official guardian or public trustee (money in trust)
10. Interest in Automobile or Truck
11. Interest in business
12. Other

(ii) Are any future assets expected? (such as unadjusted claims, insurance, an inheritance, or lawsuit pending)
Yes ☐ No ☐ If yes, describe fully in narrativeB. REAL PROPERTY Yes ☐ No ☐

Description and Location	Township and County or Street Address and City or Town	Applicant Spouse Dependent Children	Owned or Life Lease	Rented Vacant Occupied	Year Purchased	Assessed Value	Market Value	Balance of Mortgages
Lot	Plan or Concession

Transfer of property -- real or personal --

Has any property or assets been transferred by applicant, spouse or dependent children within three years prior to this application?
Yes ☐ No ☐ If yes, give details in narrative.

C. ESTATE OF DECEASED SPOUSE

1. Was there any estate? Yes ☐ No ☐ 2. Was there a will? Yes ☐ No ☐
 3. Have letters probate or letters of administration been applied for? Yes ☐ No ☐

D. LIFE INSURANCE (On Life of Applicants and Dependents)

Policy No.	Applicant Spouse Dependent Children	Name and Address of Company	Beneficiary	Face Value	Cash Surrender Value	Monthly Premiums

8 DEBTS

Name of Creditor	Details	Verified	Amount
		Yes No

9 LIVING CONDITIONS

A. Is person in hospital, nursing home or other institution?

	Yes	No
Applicant
Spouse

1. If yes, give date entered _____

2. Name, address and type of institution _____

3. Rate paid by: GWA ☐ OHIP ☐ Other ☐ (specify) _____

B. Is applicant boarding? Yes _____ No _____ If so, with whom? _____

Effective date _____ Monthly rate _____ Relationship _____

C. Other living arrangements: - Expenses must be verified

Type of accommodation	Owned <input type="checkbox"/> Rented <input type="checkbox"/>	Rent	Weekly	Monthly	Yearly
Number of rooms	Attached <input type="checkbox"/> Detached <input type="checkbox"/>	Mortgage, principal and interest
Fuel: _____ paid by applicant <input type="checkbox"/> or included in rent <input type="checkbox"/>		Taxes (gross)
Are any costs shared? Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No <input type="checkbox"/> If yes, give applicant's share _____		Fire insurance (building and contents)
Condition of property _____		Present mortgage balance
Utilities (Hydro, water, phone) _____		Tax arrears
Give additional details of mortgage if necessary _____		Fuel
Name and address of landlord _____		Yearly

10. DECLARATION

I, _____ do certify that:
(Full name)

1. I am the applicant named in the foregoing application (or the person making application on behalf of the applicant).
2. All the statements in the foregoing application are true to the best of my knowledge and belief and no information required to be given has been concealed or omitted.

SHOULD AN ALLOWANCE OR ASSISTANCE BE GRANTED TO ME/TO THE APPLICANT ON THE BASIS OF THE FOREGOING INFORMATION, I UNDERTAKE TO NOTIFY THE DIRECTOR OR HIS REPRESENTATIVE OF ANY CHANGES IN MY/HIS CIRCUMSTANCES, ESPECIALLY THOSE PERTAINING TO ASSETS, INCOME AND LIVING ARRANGEMENTS.

_____
Witnessed by (signature of welfare administrator or representative, or intake authority)

_____
Signature of applicant or signature of person making application on behalf of applicant

_____
Witnessed by (signature of welfare administrator or representative, or intake authority)

_____
(Signature of spouse
if applicable)

---

TO BE COMPLETED BY WELFARE ADMINISTRATOR OR REPRESENTATIVE OR INTAKE AUTHORITY

---

Is applicant capable of managing the allowance or assistance? Yes ☐ No ☐

If "no", provide details and recommendations

Do you recommend a mail out report? Yes ☐ No ☐

The following forms, documents, certificates are attached: _____

_____

To follow _____

_____

_____

_____

_____

Ministry of Community and
Social Services

The General Welfare Assistance Act

APPLICATION FOR ASSISTANCE

FORM 1A

PART 1

TO THE _____ WELFARE ADMINISTRATOR OF _____ (MUNICIPAL, BAND OR REGIONAL) (NAME OF MUNICIPALITY, INDIAN BAND OR DISTRICT)

I APPLY FOR _____ UNDER THE GENERAL WELFARE ASSISTANCE ACT AND (STATE CLASS OF ASSISTANCE APPLIED FOR)

IN SUPPORT OF MY APPLICATION I MAKE THE FOLLOWING STATEMENTS:

1. NAME _____
(SURNAME) (GIVEN NAMES)
ADDRESS _____
(NUMBER, STREET OR RURAL ROUTE) (MUNICIPALITY OR POST OFFICE) TELEPHONE NO. _____
DATE OF BIRTH _____ MARITAL STATUS _____ AGE _____
(DAY) (MONTH) (YEAR)

2. RESIDENCE FOR LAST 3 YEARS:

ADDRESS	MUNICIPALITY	PROVINCE	FROM (DAY, MONTH, YEAR)	TO (DAY, MONTH, YEAR)

3. PREVIOUS EMPLOYMENT:

DATE LAST EMPLOYED: FROM _____ TO _____

EMPLOYED BY _____ ADDRESS _____

NORMAL OCCUPATION: _____

4. DEPENDANTS AND OTHER PERSONS LIVING WITH APPLICANT: (IF SPACE INSUFFICIENT, USE REVERSE SIDE)

GIVEN NAMES AND SURNAME, IF DIFFERENT	SEX	AGE	RELATIONSHIP TO APPLICANT	PAYMENTS INTO HOUSEHOLD
				YES	NO
SPOUSE _____
CHILDREN AND OTHER DEPENDANTS:
OTHER PERSONS LIVING IN HOUSEHOLD (RELATIVES, BOARDERS, ROOMERS):

5. INCOME AND ASSETS (LIST ALL INCOME AND ASSETS OF APPLICANT AND ALL DEPENDANTS LIVING IN THE HOUSEHOLD, SUCH AS PUBLIC ASSISTANCE OF ANY KIND, WAGES, FULL OR PART-TIME EARNINGS, BOARDER OR ROOMER INCOME, RENTALS, CONTRIBUTION OR PAYMENTS FROM ANY SOURCE, PENSIONS, ANNUITIES, BANK OR SAVINGS ACCOUNTS, BONDS, STOCKS, MONEY IN TRUST, INSURANCE POLICIES, REAL ESTATE, ETC.):

NAME OF PERSON HAVING INCOME OR ASSETS	TYPE OF INCOME OR ASSET	AMOUNT OF INCOME OR VALUE OF ASSET (PER WEEK, MONTH OR YEAR)

6. NAME OF NEXT OF KIN (WHERE APPLICANT INCAPACITATED OR RESIDENT IN A NURSING HOME)

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

RELATIONSHIP _____

CONTRIBUTION _____

7. STATE IN DETAIL REASONS WHY ASSISTANCE IS REQUIRED:

_____
_____
_____
_____
_____

DATE: _____ 19 _____ (SIGNATURE OF APPLICANT) _____

PART 11

TO BE COMPLETED BY THE WELFARE ADMINISTRATOR OR REGIONAL WELFARE ADMINISTRATOR WHERE APPLICANT IS RESIDENT OF A NURSING HOME

NAME OF NURSING HOME: _____

ADDRESS: _____

DATE LICENCE ISSUED: _____ LICENCE NO. _____

DATE OF ADMISSION OF APPLICANT: _____

RATE: $ _____ : $ _____
(DAILY) (MONTHLY)

I CERTIFY THAT THE ABOVE NURSING HOME IS LICENSED UNDER THE NURSING HOMES ACT AND I RECOMMEND PAYMENT OF AN ALLOWANCE FOR THE NURSING HOME CARE OF THE APPLICANT IN THE AMOUNT OF $ _____ PER MONTH.

DATE: _____ 19 _____ (SIGNATURE OF WELFARE ADMINISTRATOR) _____

Ministry of Community and Social Services

Form 3

Consent to Inspect Assets
The General Welfare Assistance Act

I, _____, an applicant under The General Welfare Assistance Act, and I, _____, spouse of the above-named (complete only where applicable)

applicant, consent that:

1. Any person authorized by the Minister may inspect and have access to information and records, relating to any account, safety deposit box, stocks, bonds or other assets held by me or on my behalf alone or jointly with any other person, in any bank, trust company or other financial institution; and
2. Any person authorized by the Minister may secure information in respect to any life or accident insurance policy on my late spouse.

_____
(name of spouse)

Dated at _____, this _____ day of _____, 19 _____

Witness: _____ Signature of Applicant _____

Address: _____

Dated at _____, this _____ day of _____, 19 _____

Witness: _____ Signature of Spouse _____
(where applicable)

Address if different _____

Ministry of Community and Social Services

Ontario

MEDICAL REPORT
IN RESPECT OF IMPAIRMENT

FORM 4

☐ General Welfare Assistance; ☐ Homemakers & Nurses Services; ☐ Family Benefits.

NOTE - KINDLY COMPLETE BOTH SIDES OF THIS FORM

NAME OF PERSON EXAMINED	SEX M <input type="checkbox"/> F <input type="checkbox"/>	DATE OF BIRTH D. /M. /Y.
ADDRESS

1. a) COMPLAINTS AND HISTORY OF PRESENT IMPAIRMENT

_____

_____

_____

b) DATE IMPAIRMENT COMMENCED: _____

2. EXAMINATION: (i) Mental Alertness _____ (iv) Pulse _____
- (ii) Height _____ (v) Blood Pressure _____
- (iii) Weight _____ (vi) Other Findings _____

Urinalysis: _____

3. DIAGNOSIS: _____

_____

4. PROGNOSIS: _____

_____

_____

5. PRESENT TREATMENT: _____

_____

6. LIMITATIONS IMPOSED BY THE IMPAIRMENT: _____

_____

_____

7. WITH OR WITHOUT TREATMENT WOULD YOU EXPECT SUFFICIENT RECOVERY TO TAKE PLACE IN THE MENTAL

OR PHYSICAL CONDITION OF THIS PERSON AT ANY TIME IN THE FUTURE TO RENDER THIS PERSON

EMPLOYABLE? YES ☐ ; NO ☐

8. DOES PERSON REQUIRE NURSING HOME CARE? YES ☐ NO ☐

IF 'YES', PROBABLE LENGTH OF TIME _____

9. DOES PERSON REQUIRE THE SERVICES OF A REGISTERED NURSE? YES ☐ NO ☐

a) IF 'YES', - VISITS RECOMMENDED: ☐ DAILY; NUMBER PER WEEK _____

NUMBER PER MONTH _____

b) VISITS REQUIRED FOR A PERIOD OF _____ DAYS; _____ WEEKS; _____ MONTHS.

10. DOES PERSON REQUIRE THE USE OF A WHEELCHAIR? YES ☐ NO ☐

11. RECOMMENDATIONS REGARDING SPECIAL DIETS: _____

12. OTHER RECOMMENDATIONS: _____

In your opinion would you consider this person to be:

1) Medically employable ..... ☐

2) Temporarily unemployable for medical reasons but likely able to resume employment after:

less than six months ..... ☐

six months ..... ☐

one year ..... ☐

two years ..... ☐

3) Permanently unemployable for medical reasons and unlikely to be able to commence remunerative employment ..... ☐

4) Disabled to the extent that the person is severely limited in the activities pertaining to normal living such as self - care, communication, or motor activities, and this disability is likely to continue for a prolonged period of time

PLEASE PRINT

CERTIFICATE OF DOCTOR

I, _____ am a legally qualified medical practitioner and have examined the above-named person at _____ on _____ (DATE) and this report contains my findings and considered opinion at that time.

SIGNATURE	DATE
ADDRESS

FORM 55107, 3/75

THE SENATE

Thursday, May 20, 1976

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

BUDGET SPEECH

ACCOMMODATION FOR SENATORS IN SENATE GALLERY OF
HOUSE OF COMMONS

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, as previously announced, the Minister of Finance will deliver his budget speech in the other place on Tuesday next, May 25, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

May I be permitted to remind honourable senators that none but senators will be admitted to the Senate gallery of the House of Commons on that occasion. This step is being taken for the purpose of providing accommodation in the gallery for as many senators as possible. In this manner, senators will not be excluded from the gallery on account of many of the places being occupied by relatives and friends of senators.

May I add that such instructions were first issued in 1931 by the then Speaker of the Senate, the Honourable P. E. Blondin, and that this practice has been followed ever since by succeeding Speakers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Langlois tabled:

Auditor General's Report to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration on the examination of the accounts and financial statements of the Unemployment Insurance Commission for the year ended December 31, 1975, pursuant to section 138 of the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, Chapter 48, Statutes of Canada, 1970-71-72.

Report, dated March 1976, of the Law Reform Commission of Canada entitled "Sunday Observance," pursuant to section 18 of the Law Reform Commission Act, Chapter 23 (1st Supplement), R.S.C., 1970, together with explanatory notes.

"Statement of Policy, Proposed Petroleum and Natural Gas Act and New Canada Oil and Gas Land Regulations," dated May 1976.

ENERGY

STATEMENT OF POLICY RE OIL AND GAS—NOTICE OF INQUIRY

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, on behalf of the Honourable Senator Perrault, I give notice that on Wednesday next, May 26, 1976, he will call the attention of the Senate to the "Statement of Policy, Proposed Petroleum and Natural Gas Act and New Canada Oil and Gas Land Regulations" dated May 1976, tabled in this house today.

Senator Phillips: Is the honourable senator going to make any comment on the new oil and gas policy announced in the House of Commons by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources?

Senator Langlois: I have just given notice on behalf of the Leader of the Government that he will speak on that subject on an inquiry next week.

Senator Phillips: There will be a statement?

Senator Langlois: Yes.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I beg leave to revert to Notices of Motions after the Orders of the Day have been dealt with.

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

ANTI-INFLATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING

Senator Hayden moved third reading of Bill C-89, to amend the Anti-Inflation Act.

MOTION IN AMENDMENT NEGATIVED

Hon. Martial Asselin: Honourable senators, I mentioned Tuesday last, when discussing the principle of this bill, that it was unacceptable. Bill C-73, and the amendment in Bill C-89, can establish a permanent system of control over prices and income—I repeat, a permanent system of control. I feel that a period of 39 months, as mentioned in the law, is too long a period. I would strongly urge that this bill be submitted to Parliament for a complete review after 18 months.

In my view, Parliament must, from time to time, look after the evolution of our economy. It is the role and responsibility of Parliament to study, to examine and to scrutinize the economic and financial policies of government. As you know, our suggestion to have the controls for a period of 18 months only has always been rejected by the government. I would again, at this stage, stress our views on this bill.

Therefore, I move, seconded by Senator Phillips, that Bill C-89 be amended as follows:

Page 7: Strike out lines 10 to 23 and substitute therefor the following:

"(2) This Act expires on May 1, 1977, or on such earlier date as may be fixed by proclamation or a motion taken up and considered by the House of Commons that is adopted by the House and concurred in by the Senate pursuant to subsections (8) and (9) unless, before May 1, 1977, or any earlier date fixed by proclamation or any such motion that is so adopted by the House and concurred in by the Senate, an Order in Council is made to the effect that this Act shall continue in force for such period of time as may be set out in the Order in Council."

GOVERNMENT HOUSE
OTTAWA

May 20, 1976

Madam,

I have the honour to inform you that the Honourable Louis-Philippe de Grandpré, C.C., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber today, the 20th day of May, at 5.45 p.m. for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to a bill.

I have the honour to be,
Madam,

Your obedient servant,
Edmond Joly de Lotbinière,
Administrative Secretary to the Governor General.

The Honourable
The Speaker of the Senate,
Ottawa.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, May 25, 1976, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

In giving the usual brief summary of the work for the coming week I shall deal first with the committees.

On Tuesday at 2.30 p.m. the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee will meet in camera to consider its report on conflict of interest. At 3 p.m. the Foreign Affairs Committee will continue its study of Canada's relations with the United States, and at 3.30 p.m. the Special Joint Committee on the National Capital Region will also meet.

On Wednesday the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee is scheduled to meet at 9.30 a.m. to hear witnesses on Bill C-58, the Science Policy Committee will meet at 3.30 p.m., and the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee will meet in camera at 3.30 p.m. to consider its report on conflict of interest.

On Thursday at 9.30 a.m. the Foreign Affairs Committee will meet again on Canada-United States relations. The Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee will hear witnesses on Bill C-58 at the same hour, and the Special Joint Committee on the National Capital Region will meet at 3.30 p.m.

In the Senate on Tuesday evening, Senator Austin will speak on Senator Croll's inquiry with respect to the state of the working poor in Canada. On Wednesday Senator Goldenberg will call the attention of the Senate to the interim report of the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs on the subject matter of Bill C-83, intituled "An Act for the better protection of Canadian society against perpetrators of violent and other crime," which he tabled in the Senate on May 13. Senator Forsey will call the attention of the Senate to the proposed incorporation of Loto Canada.

On Thursday Senator Perrault will call the attention of the Senate to the "Statement of Policy, Proposed Petroleum and Natural Gas Act and New Canada Oil and Gas Land Regulations," which I tabled today. In addition,

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Hayden, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Bourget, P.C., that Bill C-89, to amend the Anti-Inflation Act, be read the third time.

In amendment, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Asselin, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Phillips, that the bill be not now read the third time but that it be amended as follows:

Page 7: Strike out lines 10 to 23 and substitute therefor the following:

"(2) This Act expires on May 1, 1977, or on such earlier date as may be fixed by proclamation or a motion taken up and considered by the House of Commons that is adopted by the House and concurred in by the Senate pursuant to subsections (8) and (9) unless, before May 1, 1977, or any earlier date fixed by proclamation or any such motion that is so adopted by the House and concurred in by the Senate, an Order in Council is made to the effect that this Act shall continue in force for such period of time as may be set out in the Order in Council."

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

Some Hon. Senators: Yes.

Some Hon. Senators: No.

The Hon. the Speaker: Those in favour of the motion in amendment will please say "yea".

Some Hon. Senators: Yea.

The Hon. the Speaker: Those who are against the motion in amendment will please say "nay".

Some Hon. Senators: Nay.

The Hon. the Speaker: In my opinion, the "nays" have it and I declare the motion in amendment lost, on division. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the main motion?

Senator Grosart: On division.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed, on division.

● (1410)

ROYAL ASSENT

NOTICE

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that the following communication had been received:

we can expect to have Bill C-81, to amend the Senate and House of Commons Act and the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act with respect to the escalation of certain payments thereunder, from the Commons.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

---

At 5.45 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

---

ROYAL ASSENT

The Honourable Louis-Philippe de Grandpré, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, having come and being seated at the foot of the Throne, and the House of Commons having been summoned, and being come with their Speaker, the Honourable the Speaker of the Senate said:

Honourable members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

I have the honour to inform you that His Excellency the Governor General has been pleased to cause Letters Patent to be issued under his Sign Manual and Signet constituting the Honourable Louis-Philippe de Grandpré, C.C., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, his Deputy, to do in His Excellency's name all acts on his part necessary to be done during His Excellency's pleasure.

The Commission was read by the Clerk Assistant.

The Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to give Royal Assent to the following bill:

An Act to amend the Anti-Inflation Act.

The House of Commons withdrew.

The Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to retire.

---

The sitting of the Senate was resumed.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, May 25, at 8 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, May 25, 1976

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Copies of Order in Council P.C. 1976-1023, dated May 6, 1976, amending Part I of the Schedule to the Hazardous Products Act, pursuant to section 8(3) of the said Act, Chapter H-3, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Unemployment Insurance Advisory Committee on the Appeal System, dated February 13, 1976, pursuant to section 109(5) of the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, Chapter 48, Statutes of Canada, 1970-71-72, together with a letter from the Minister to the Chairman to the Committee.

Report of the Asbestosis Working Group, Subcommittee on Environmental Health, Department of National Health and Welfare, dated February 15, 1976.

Report of the Canadian National Railways for the year ended December 31, 1975, pursuant to section 40 of the Canadian National Railways Act, Chapter C-10, R.S.C., 1970.

Auditors' report to Parliament on the accounts of the Canadian National Railway System for the year ended December 31, 1975, pursuant to section 40 of the Canadian National Railways Act, Chapter C-10, R.S.C., 1970.

CANADIAN LABOUR CONGRESS

POLITICAL AFFILIATION—QUESTION

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, on May 18 I addressed a question to the Leader of the Government concerning the position taken by the Canadian Labour Congress at its convention in Quebec City, held over the last weekend. I asked in particular about the announced objective of the Canadian Labour Congress to take part in the decision-making process relating to government policy development. The Canadian Labour Congress is a direct supporter, sponsor and political affiliate of the New Democratic Party, which by its popular support represents less than 20 per cent of the Canadian political opinion.

Does the Leader of the Government not agree that the political affiliation of the Canadian Labour Congress is a total bar to their credibility to play the role in a democratic political process they are now claiming?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, without making any comment about the role of the New Democratic Party in relation to the Canadian Labour Congress, it may be said that the government seeks every opportunity to acquire input, information and the views of not only the organized labour sector of society but also the views of business, agriculture and the other sectors.

The announcement by the Canadian Labour Congress over the past few days that they seek to play a more important role in the decision-making process does not alter the view of the government that those who must make the final determination of government policy are those who serve in Parliament and are here because of the democratic parliamentary process.

● (2010)

I can announce to the chamber, however, that there will be a meeting in mid-June involving representation from the Canadian Labour Congress, the Prime Minister, the Minister of Labour and other officials, to compare more comprehensively the views which the CLC and the government hold regarding the policy input of organized labour and some of the views having been expressed in the CLC policy document issued as a result of that body's convention last week.

The government, as I said at the outset, always seeks ways to improve the consultative process with labour and to have a greater degree of participation by organized labour and other sectors in society in the development of sound policy.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I rise on a question of privilege. As a former official for many years of the Canadian Congress of Labour and its successor the Canadian Labour Congress, I think I am in a position to say at once that the Canadian Labour Congress has never been affiliated with the New Democratic Party and that only less than 300,000 of its two million affiliated members in the affiliated and chartered unions are in unions affiliated with the New Democratic Party. Unless some development has taken place very recently to change this, I can assert with perfect confidence that no such affiliation has ever existed.

Senator Flynn: I am not too sure it is on a question of privilege, but I am happy to accept the statement made by Senator Forsey. I do not agree, however, that it has been entirely proven up to now. I should like it to be, though.

Senator Forsey: Surely, the ones who should have to prove their statements are the people who make such allegations.

Senator Flynn: May I ask the Leader of the Government if this announcement of the meeting set for mid-June between the government and the Canadian Labour Congress is the first announcement made? Are we privileged in this instance?

Senator Perrault: May I say that just before eight o'clock this evening I was in conversation with the Minister of Labour who told me that in his view there would be no objection to having a statement made in this chamber tonight. I do not know whether another announcement was made in the other place this afternoon.

With respect to Senator Forsey's statement that the CLC is not affiliated officially with the New Democratic Party, it may be that the Honourable Senator Austin may wish to clarify his original statement, but I believe there is a long record of the participation by the leaders of the CLC in activities on behalf of the New Democratic Party. Certainly, during my political career I have always been quite aware at every election of not only the financial but the working opposition of certain members of the CLC to any Liberal, Conservative or non-NDP candidate.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Forsey: It depends on the union. It depends on the particular union, honourable senators. It depends on the particular union: some particular unions, some local unions, some district unions, some national unions are affiliated. Most of them are not. The last figure I saw only a few days ago was 287,000 people in CLC unions affiliated with the New Democratic Party. There has never been, I repeat, unless somebody can produce proof of some recent change, there has never been any affiliation with the New Democratic Party by the Congress as such. Nor has there ever been one single copper contributed to the New Democratic Party by the Congress since the founding convention in 1961, which led to my withdrawal from that party.

Senator Austin: Honourable senators may wish to look into the accuracy of my statement, but I have had the impression that the CLC supported the New Democratic Party de facto if not de jure.

Senator Forsey: That is not an affiliation.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, be that as it may, the government is always open to constructive representations from whatever the source and regardless of the political affiliation, if any, of that source. It is not a bar to speaking to the Government of Canada merely because certain affiliates of the CLC may choose to have the New Democratic Party as their political wing. So we welcome conversations with the CLC.

Senator Flynn: For what they are worth!

NATIONAL DEFENCE ACT AND CRIMINAL CODE (TOTAL ABOLITION OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT)

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—ORDER STANDS

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Argue, seconded by the Honourable Senator O'Leary, for the second reading of the Bill S-23, intituled: "An Act to amend the National Defence Act and the Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment)".—(Honourable Senator Prowse.)

Senator Perrault: This order stands until Tuesday, June 22.

LABOUR

THE WORKING POOR—DEBATE ADJOURNED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the inquiry of the Honourable Senator Croll calling the attention of the Senate to the state of the working poor in Canada.—(Honourable Senator Petten).

[Senator Perrault.]

Senator Petten: Honourable senators, I defer to Senator Austin.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Hon. Jack Austin: Honourable senators, our colleague, Senator Croll, gave notice to this house earlier this year that he would call our attention, and that of the Canadian public, to the state of the working poor in Canada. Pursuant to that notice he rose in the Senate on April 5 last and set forth in his usual articulate, cogent and decisive way, a statement of the affairs of the working poor that not only demands our continuing public concern and attention, but raises for Canadians a need for an inner review of both our social conscience and our economic self-interest.

Senator Croll has asked some of us to participate in this debate in order to emphasize to the Canadian people and other parliamentarians that this problem of the working poor is overdue for attention. I am happy to respond both because I believe him to be right in his concern, and because his work in the Senate, while doing credit to Senator Croll's wisdom and humanitarianism, has also enhanced the reputation of this chamber for relevance and for compassion.

This debate is one of many that Senator Croll has raised in this chamber and elsewhere on behalf of those in our Canadian society who are "on their own" in life in a real and basic way which would frighten the more comfortable Canadian majority, if they were ever to have even a tiny glimpse of how it feels, or might feel, from inside that social stratum. They are not important members of a corporate or trade union entity with economic and political leverage in society. They are not organized in ways that give them particular political attention in their own communities. They are people who are giving every ounce of their energy and those of their families to attain the basic needs of human beings, as understood in this country, and have little leisure time to consider the whys and wherefores of their circumstances. To repeat a well coined phrase, it is hard to remember that you came to drain the swamp when you are up to your neck in alligators.

What better purpose has the Senate than to speak on behalf of those in our society whose voice is weak or inaudible above the clamour of others? What more important work is there for us than to aid in achieving recognition and a place in the national priorities list for those who deserve it, but who need a policy and legislative ombudsman to overview and assist in the attainment of their requirements and proper entitlements as members of Canadian society?

Let me repeat my admiration and respect for Senator Croll in leading the way in developing this role for the Senate, and in using his public trust and office to represent a group in the Canadian community who require to be understood and heard by us all. No less a reason for my participation in this debate is to be able to honour him as one of our most senior colleagues, and to urge him to continue this cause without flagging, for many years to come or until poverty is eliminated. I say this with sympathy for the poor, but because of our association with Senator Croll I am happy that it will keep him active for many years yet.

As a result of Senator Croll's work and that of the Special Senate Committee on Poverty, many here are familiar with the basic story and statistics relating to the working poor. Senator Croll brought us up to date with the facts set out in his address in the Senate on April 5, and he gave us further useful insights as a result of his participation in the Senate on May 19 last.

To the basic information which senators have and understand, I would like to add to the Senate record a brief report on the belief and conclusions of our fellow Canadians. In a Gallup poll of opinion, reported in the Citizen on May 22, 1976, it was concluded by 1,068 adults from a representative sample of income groups that the least amount of money a family of four needs to get along on is $200 a week. Senators will instantly recognize that the view, based as it is on current empirical data, is $1,800 more a year than even the Senate committee view of the poverty line in 1975, shown on page 2020 of the Senate Debates as $7,871.00 per annum.

The stark fact that jumps from all the collected statistics is that one family out of every five in Canada lives in poverty, or struggles daily with insecurity of income and employment. This continues at a time in the life of Canadians generally when we are enjoying an affluence never before known; yet we have close to 2 million people at or below the poverty line, including over 1 million in the category of the working poor.

● (2020)

At least today we have no need to argue with the dominant philosophy of the Social Darwinists of the 19th century, that poverty removes misfits from society. The great depression, along with the Keynesian revolution in social and economic thinking, has convinced us of the need of society to use the institution of government to modify the excesses of the private enterprise economic system, even if we have not yet discovered how to succeed at it, as shown by our current problems with economic growth, inflation and unemployment.

Today, we understand clearly that the ability of our society to continue its economic growth within a more rational context for the use of natural resources and the environment depends more on our investment in human capital than it does on physical capital. The existence of poverty is a factor that retards our economic growth as well as our social growth and political stability.

One of the phenomena of our time is that we can experience an excess of demand for skilled labour at the same time as the poor go unemployed or underemployed. This proves so clearly how we have misallocated our human and physical resources. The relative yield on investment in human capital is very high, and yet we go on underinvesting. The poor are our nation's most underutilized asset, and by leaving them poor we keep at a lower level the potential per capita output of our society, and we diminish the prospects for economic growth.

Notwithstanding the fact that many in society know this to be true, it is fashionable to argue that the source of funding for investment in human capital could be based only on the fact of a growing economy, one that created a "fiscal dividend", or new capital from which the investment allocation could be made. In the midst of the great depression, when poverty was the concern of the many, this was not thought to be the sine qua non of our philosophy. Then government began its programs with public spending, based on an expansion of the money supply and, as Lord Keynes foresaw, the initial redistribution of then vested resources quickly led to an expansion of the whole economy through enhanced demand. Those who had capital and saw it placed in human investment were afraid to object at the time. The cities were full of poor, and the railway box cars were full of poor; the factories were empty. People with capital feared to object, and yet in less than a year the economy was on the march instead of the poor. Investment capital achieved a security and a rate of return in the years following that it did not know how to acquire on its own.

Today, as I have said, the argument that has become fashionable is that the economic pie must grow continuously to provide an adequate slice for social welfare. We have no concept in this country today of what social policy can, or should, be without economic growth. No doubt politicians of every stripe walk in fear of the political crunch that comes with a no-economic-growth situation. But can they mean that there can be no social development program in the absence of substantial economic growth; that the rich will stay where they are and the poor will stay where they are?

I admit it is a conundrum for society, and for ourselves as politicians. Our country is struggling with severe economic problems, so severe that we have had to impose controls on prices and incomes to restrain the excesses of demand on our economy that come, in particular, from the economically powerful sectors of our society. Yet, I cannot forget that this new-found requirement for restraint of the relatively affluent is nothing new for the poor. They have always lived under economic restraint. Nor should any of us forget that our cause is the protection of the weak from the exploitation, however well intended, of the strong. And no group is more seriously ravaged by today's inflation and unemployment than the working poor.

I wonder if some senators have seen a musical play in the last few years called Fiddler on the Roof. In it, the milkman, Tevye, customarily gives two kopeks to a beggar. But Tevye this time has had a poor day, and feels he can only afford to give the beggar one kopek. The beggar complains, "Just because you've had a bad day, why should I suffer?"

Of course, the audience laughs. The truth of it seems simple on the surface. But is it so? As poor as Tevye was, he had a house, a cow, four daughters and a strong-willed wife. The beggar had nothing, and two kopeks were his poverty line. How much should the poor suffer because our economy is having a bad day? Is it wise that they should suffer more?

I am certain all of us agreed with Senator Croll when he said on May 19 last that we should not allow the current economic situation to be fought by the economic elite of this country on the backs of the poor. That, of course, is on the one hand. As everyone who saw Fiddler on the Roof knows, there is always the other hand. The beggar may need help, but Tevye has every right to expect that the beggar will do everything he can to help himself as well. Government may be a provider of needs, but the notion of obligation must also be well understood.

We have seen increasing and justifiable concern in society that those who work not be ripped off by those who do not. Society is perfectly capable and willing to look after those who for medical reasons cannot do so themselves. There are specific programs for aged persons; survivors, including widows and orphans; children with parents; and the injured and disabled. What society rebels against supporting are those on welfare who can do more for themselves. I have looked hard for information about this group, and the only statistics I can find are estimates that in Canada and in the United States they comprise not more than two per cent of those on welfare. And clearly, those who rip off the system are not the working poor. As I have said, too often the contrary is the case for them.

Let me be clear that I entirely believe that the duties of citizens and the responsibilities of government must be in balance. The basic posture of federal social policy should be to maintain the viability of the concept of responsibility to work and to contribute on the part of the citizen as the fundamental tenet of the provision by the state of income and security.

This country's approach has been to provide some notion of basic standards of well-being for people as the goal of its social security system. We have never adopted, nor can I see any likelihood we will adopt, for Canadians the goal of imposing some measure of absolute equality of income between persons. I am satisfied that the basic standards approach is humanistic, realistic and substantively feasible. There is a base below which we will not allow Canadians to fall. The base must, however, be adequate to provide conditions of life that give encouragement to efforts for improved mobility in society. The working poor must be aided to become the working secure, or beyond if they have the ability. The welfare poor must be encouraged to become the working secure, or beyond if they have the ability.

I am fully prepared to concede that the elimination of poverty depends very crucially on the maintenance of a high and growing level of aggregate demand. That is to say, we must create new employment opportunities to make use of newly acquired skills. Policies to reduce the level of poverty require at the same time policies that bring about both economic stabilization and increased aggregate output. While we need to know a great deal more about poverty and the working poor, we can at least be certain that the unregulated market system of setting prices and values has not been successful in bringing into the system at an early enough time the investment in human capital which I have argued is so significant for our growth and stability.

Should there be any doubt raised by my words of concern for the poor, including the working poor, I say without qualification that Canada has assembled a social welfare system that stands with the best in the world. But nothing is proved by that alone—not so long as the National Council on Welfare, from the 1971 census, can tell us that 24.5 per cent of all children in Canada under 16 years are living in poverty; not as long as it appears that due to inadequate nourishment, health care and social environment these children are almost guaranteed to underperform in society and to continue on the enlistment rolls of the poor. Apart from compassion, which should in our Judeo-Christian society be our prime basis for action, as modern economic man can we afford the costs in welfare and lost productivity that come from such an underutilization of such a large part of our future population?

[Senator Austin.]

● (2030)

I must, for balance, assure the Senate that the federal government and the provinces are maintaining their momentum in social policy, and much may be accomplished. Some, at least, of Senator Croll's concerns of last April 5 and May 19 are being dealt with.

In 1973 the federal government, in cooperation with the ten provinces, launched the social security review, which adopted as its foci five basic strategies—an employment strategy to provide for those who experience chronic difficulty in finding and maintaining employment; a social insurance strategy to protect Canadians against loss of employment income in case of retirement, sickness, disability, accident or maternity; an income supplementation strategy to ensure an acceptable minimum income for the working poor; a social services strategy to ensure that, over time, services would be available to facilitate the development of an individual's full potential; and, finally, a federal-provincial strategy to guarantee the harmonization of federal and provincial social security programs, while at the same time providing to the provinces the necessary flexibility to adapt social security measures to the needs of their citizens.

Two of the major accomplishments have been to improve the basic incomes of families with children, and of the aged. The new family allowance program, implemented in January 1974, provided an important supplement to the incomes of over 3.6 million Canadian families. Moreover, these payments now go to families on behalf of all children whether or not they attend school. This definitely benefits lower income working families where there is a higher risk of school dropout. The new program effectively tripled the benefits, which were in effect prior to the social security review, from an average of $7 per child per month to a current monthly average of $22.08. What is more, the allowance may be adjusted periodically to offset increases in the consumer price index.

Many of the advances in income security have taken place in programs for the aged, who at present number approximately two million of the Canadian population. In 1965 a retired couple was assured an annual income, at age 70, of $1,800. As of April of this year, the amount a retired couple is eligible to receive under Old Age Security/Guaranteed Income Supplement is $5,270—well above the 1975 poverty lines established by the Economic Council, Statistics Canada, and the Canadian Council on Social Development. Moreover, OAS/GIS payments are now escalated quarterly to reflect changes in the consumer price index.

A more recent development to alleviate financial hardship in families where one spouse is below retirement age—those aged from 60 to 64—is the spouse's allowance under the Old Age Security Act. This provision supplies an amount equal to the OAS and maximum GIS payments where the spouse has no income, and where the income of the head of the household is the OAS and maximum GIS payments.

Another improvement is an amendment allowing those over 65 who are able to work to continue to do so, and receive their pensions under the Canada Pension Plan. There has also been an easing of provisions requiring collection of overpayment benefits to low income, aged persons.

Further changes have taken place in the Canada Pension Plan since the social security review commenced. These include a provision for equal benefits for male and female contributors to the plan, a formula to bring contributions and benefits more in line with rising wages, and a provision for annual adjustment of benefits to reflect increases in the cost of living.

I would not want to leave the impression that younger families are being neglected. Thus in 1973 the estimated amounts of federal, and, in some cases, provincial dollars going to families where the head of the household was under 65 years were: $1.85 billion for unemployment insurance benefits, $325 million for veterans' pensions and allowances, $300 million for workmen's compensation, and $136 million for CPP/QPP survivors' and disability benefits. A further sum of $768 million was expended on social assistance by federal and provincial governments under the Canada Assistance Plan. All of these programs are targeted to assist those who most need our help.

I am hopeful for the new developments which have been signalled. The government's proposed income support and supplementation program should serve as a valuable weapon in the fight against poverty. In fact, the income supplementation component of the program is geared specifically to the working poor and will provide assistance at a rate of something like $1 for every $3 earned. The concept behind this dual approach will meet a most important criterion—the provision of a strong incentive to economic and social betterment, together with adequate guarantees for those who cannot work. The approach currently under detailed consideration will ensure maximum efficiency and, hence, the least possible cost to others.

A further development emanating from the social security review has been the complete restructuring of the social service components of the Canada Assistance Plan. In the near future the Minister of National Health and Welfare hopes to introduce in the House of Commons a completely new social services act which will contain strong incentives to provide better rehabilitation and counselling services and encourage community-based alternatives to institutional care. His hope is to provide better service to the users of social services and at lower costs to government.

All this represents an impressive list of government attempts to eliminate poverty. Unfortunately, as Senator Croll has so ably pointed out, the total effort has not succeeded in eradicating poverty. As he has said, the pattern of income distribution has scarcely changed in the last 25 years. We still need to know to what extent all the various income transfer programs have actually kept families from skidding into poverty and enabled them to maintain their living standards. Research must be carried out to examine to what extent people in the lowest quintile are the same population or a changing one. We do know that the aged within the poor have gained ground by virtue of the guaranteed income directed towards them; unfortunately, similar information does not exist for the disabled, the handicapped or the infirm of all ages, or for marginal workers in the secondary labour market. As I have said, these are areas that must be further investigated and where we can look forward to continually improving policies.

Senator Croll has raised a very important issue concerning women in the labour force. On April 5 he stated:

The income of the number of women in the work force has effectively helped to keep the basic wage low, while at the very same time boosting family incomes.

If I might comment further on this point, it may be suggested that traditionally women in the labour force have occupied low paying positions, not because of a lack of skills or capability but due to a built-in bias against female participation in the regular employment market. A special survey in the autumn of 1973 indicated that there were approximately 1.1 million working mothers in the labour force. Two-thirds of those mothers had husbands who earned less than $10,000 a year, and two-thirds of the mothers earned less than $5,000. The average annual earnings for women was less than $3,480 at the time when the average male earnings totalled $9,060. That difference cannot be fully explained by wage differential, because only 36 per cent of mothers worked full time. The question one asks is why? Was it personal choice? Was it their insecurity in the segregated labour market? Were they placed by agencies in short-term employment which could not be refused? Was it lack of adequate day care facilities? It was probably a combination of all of these. These are topics which require more detailed analysis in order to provide a true picture of the low income earner, many of whom are women.

The critical concern for all programs to assist the working poor is that in providing assistance to income, the incentive to participate as fully as possible in the working world is not discouraged. A proposal that has been gaining considerable ground in Canada is that of the guaranteed annual income. Simply put, the federal and provincial governments would, where necessary, pay a certain amount of money to every adult who qualifies so as to bring their annual income up to a minimum guaranteed level.

The key advantage of this plan is that it is selective. It puts money where it is needed, unlike the demogrant programs such as old age assistance and family allowances. Obviously, the administrative problems of using the tax system are complex, but the concept is intriguing and well worth developing.

● (2040)

According to a background paper issued by the federal government to the Federal-Provincial Conference of Ministers of Welfare earlier this year, the shortfall between private incomes and the updated 1974 Senate poverty lines for young family units—that is, where all family members are under the age of 65—is approximately $5.5 billion. Yet in the estimates for the fiscal year 1974-75, over $7 billion is provided for programs directed to people under 65. There are, no doubt, many reasons for the apparent paradox. One may be that income supplementation such as unemployment insurance or family allowances are not aimed exclusively at the poor. Yet what is demonstrated is that we have much of the funds necessary to deal with poverty, but we apparently cannot yet solve the qualitative problems.

In the adult lifetime of Senator Croll and many other senators here, their highest priority has been to provide a basic level of social security to Canadians, without which the word "freedom" and its ideal would have no real meaning to the Canada which Canadians in this last quarter of the twentieth century enjoy. The social security system Canadians now have in place has strengthened our society in its democracy, and has helped make us a free society envied by most countries of the world.

Prime Minister Lester Pearson launched an aggressive war on poverty in the mid-1960s. Were he here today, I am certain he would not object to my charging him with launching an "aggressive war," because, though he was a notable and Nobel Prize peacemaker, he never accepted the injustices and immorality of any part of our population living in poverty, ill-health or debilitating circumstances, and his successors are no less committed to achieving the goals which Mr. Pearson's initiative and that of his colleagues, including Senator Croll, demanded.

Spending on health, welfare and old age pensions has quadrupled, from $2.4 billion in 1966 to a projected $10.9 billion in 1976. These programs amounted to 27.6 per cent of federal expenditures in 1966, and will be a projected 37.1 per cent in this fiscal year. I wish I knew the story well enough to tell Canadians more about the individual lives which have benefited from this effort, because the dollar amounts tell nothing of the human story, but I know, and I believe every adult Canadian knows, of many people whose lives have been uplifted by such concern on the part of their fellow Canadians.

In spite of our good record in the field of social services, in spite of the fact that we have reached a level of prosperity that promises the means to deal with poverty, in spite of the fact that it can be demonstrated over and over again that poverty is both an intolerable social cost and an intolerable economic cost, we still have people in our society who are doubtful that any more should be done, or who even claim that too much has been done already. The onset of a period of slow economic growth increases the courage of those who, for one reason or another, have never really accepted their responsibility to their fellow Canadians.

As people see their spending power diminish they become less concerned with the needs of others and more critical of having their earnings taxed away to help the disadvantaged. Government spending becomes more criticized, of course, by the high income earners, because the inarticulate premise is that government spending will be slanted to low income groups, and because with less growth there is less room to satisfy the expectations of both high and low income earners. The same is true when the relatively affluent labour unions denounce controls as interference with collective bargaining, or affluent business complains of interference with the free market.

Yet, despite such feelings, we cannot afford to leave the process of income distribution as it stands. It must continue to move in favour of the disadvantaged in our society. They must see and believe they are not abandoned and beached where they are. They must hope and care to change. We must provide the basis for that hope, and the encouragement for that change.

I will conclude with a quotation from an address by the Prime Minister of Canada, the Right Honourable Pierre Elliot Trudeau, to the Canadiana Conference in Toronto on April 2, 1976. He says it all when he says:

For a Liberal, the only role of government is to create the conditions for, and to remove obstacles to, individual and collective freedoms. Laws and leadership are our weapons. Poverty, ignorance, inequality and the exploitation of the weak by the strong have always been our enemies.

Senator Flynn: Would the honourable senator tell me why he destroyed all the meaning of his speech by that last quotation?

Senator Austin: I cannot believe that Senator Flynn can think that last quotation does not apply equally to Canadians of all political persuasions.

Senator Flynn: That is not what Mr. Trudeau said. He claimed that only Liberals could think that way.

Senator Austin: No, he did not say, "Only," he simply said, "For a Liberal."

On motion of Senator Petten, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, May 26, 1976

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Capital Budgets of the Atlantic Pilotage Authority, the Laurentian Pilotage Authority, the Great Lakes Pilotage Authority, Ltd., and the Pacific Pilotage Authority for the fiscal year 1976, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1976-986, dated April 27, 1976, approving same.

Copies of report of the Canada Pension Plan Advisory Committee entitled "Analysis of Certain Proposals for Amending the Canada Pension Plan," dated April 1, 1976.

Budget Papers, dated May 25, 1976, as follows:

(1) Notice of Ways and Means Motion to amend the Customs Tariff.

(2) Notice of Ways and Means Motion to amend the Income Tax Act.

(3) Notice of Ways and Means Motion to amend the Income Tax Application Rules, 1971.

(4) Notice of Ways and Means Motion to amend the Excise Tax Act.

(5) Statement of Financial Transactions for 1975-76.

(6) Capital Cost Allowances.

(7) Charities under the Income Tax Act.

(8) Supplementary information on Compensation Aspects of the Anti-Inflation Program, small business deductions, air transportation tax, et cetera.

(9) Supplementary information on Government of Canada Accounts, Tables 1 to 7.

(10) Document entitled "Outlines of Proposed Modifications in Price and Profit Guidelines under the Anti-Inflation Act," dated May 25, 1976.

GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES RESTRAINT BILL

DATE OF INTRODUCTION IN SENATE—FURTHER QUESTION

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, has the Leader of the Government any information about the question I asked the other day concerning the prospects of our getting Bill C-87 some time before the summer recess?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, a meeting with the house leader in the other place was held this morning. As yet the number and nature of the bills to come before this house prior to prorogation is not known. I hope to have further information later.

CANADIAN LABOUR CONGRESS

SALARY INCREASES FOR OFFICERS—QUESTION

Senator Phillips: Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the Leader of the Government in the Senate. Last week the President and Vice-President of the Canadian Labour Congress voted themselves a $10,000 per annum pay raise. Is it the intention of the government to refer that 40 per cent pay increase to the Anti-Inflation Board?

Senator Croll: It is a non-profit organization.

Senator Flynn: Are you serious? I don't buy that.

Senator Perrault: I have noted with interest the alleged one-third increase voted to certain top officers of the CLC according to news reports. As yet I have no information that the matter will be referred to the Anti-Inflation Board to determine whether it conforms with the guidelines. I shall take the question as notice in the hope of providing more complete information later.

GRAIN

SUBSIDIES PAID ON SHIPMENTS OF GRAIN TO EASTERN CANADIAN PORTS FOR EXPORT—QUESTION

Senator Smith (Colchester): I should like to address a question to the Leader of the Government in the Senate, and perhaps in doing so I should apologize for not having given him notice. I realize it is not a question he would be expected to answer right off the bat. The question is: In view of the apparent decision of the government to do away with the subsidies paid in respect of shipments of grain to eastern Canadian ports for export, what was the capacity in the calendar year 1975 of those ports to handle grain for export? How much was paid in subsidies, and how much is it expected that this capacity will be utilized after the withdrawal of the subsidies?

● (1410)

Senator Perrault: As much as I would like to say I have that information at my fingertips, I must, because of its detailed nature, take the question as notice.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Yes. I should have given you notice.

Senator Perrault: Thank you very much. It is an important question.

ENERGY

GOVERNMENT POLICY RE CANADIAN OWNERSHIP OF COMPANIES DEVELOPING OIL AND GAS ON CROWN LANDS—QUESTION

Senator Manning: Honourable senators, a short time ago an honourable minister in the other place indicated it was the government's intention that companies developing oil and gas on crown lands should be at least 25 per cent owned by Canadians, and that the requirement of Canadian ownership would probably be increased to 50 per cent at a later date. I ask the Leader of the Government: First, is this fixed government policy as at this date; and secondly, if it is, has a time frame been decided upon within which the Canadian ownership requirement will be increased to 50 per cent?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I must take that question as notice.

Senator Flynn: That is a much better idea than listening to your neighbour on your left.

NATIONAL LOTTERY

PROPOSED INCORPORATION OF LOTO-CANADA—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Eugene A. Forsey rose pursuant to notice:

That he will call the attention of the Senate to the proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada.

He said: Honourable senators, this inquiry arises out of a question which I asked the Acting Leader of the Government some days ago about the government's intentions in regard to bringing the matter of this new lottery before this house. I was unable to secure what seemed to me a clear or satisfactory reply, and so, having been the beneficiary of a suggestion by a distinguished colleague in this house—

Senator Flynn: Senator Croll, no doubt.

Senator Forsey:—I decided to bring the matter forward as an inquiry.

My question—it might perhaps be well to recall it to the recollection of the house. It was not a very earth-shaking one, and I do not expect honourable senators have kept it firmly in their minds, if, indeed, they have kept it in their minds at all. My question was, very simply, whether the matter was going to be brought before this house.

I turn to page 2103 of the Senate Hansard of May 11. I said:

I should like to ask the Acting Leader of the Government whether it is the intention of the government to present a bill in this chamber or the other chamber, as seems to me to be the proper procedure, or whether it is going to proceed in some other way, as I rather gathered from the statement in the other place that it might—

The reply is to be found at page 2111 of our Hansard of the next day. In effect, the reply consisted of reading what the President of the Treasury Board had said in his statement in the other place. I read it, I read it again, and I could not find in that statement—and I still cannot find—any reference whatever to bringing this matter before the Senate.

I then looked again, carefully, at what had been said by the President of the Treasury Board in the other place, and I found on May 10, at page 13334 of the House of Commons Hansard, first of all, this:

A new Crown corporation will soon be incorporated, pursuant to the provisions of the Canadian Commercial Corporation Act.

[Senator Manning.]

That last, of course, is a misprint which was subsequently corrected. It is the Canada Corporations Act that was referred to. Then that was supplemented by the statement that it would cost nothing to the Canadian taxpayer. The exact words at page 13335 are:

Therefore, it will not cost anything to the Canadian taxpayers.

I am reciting these various statements in detail because they all have some bearing on the matter I want to deal with shortly. That looks as if there would be no appeal to Parliament to provide any money. This is not altogether consistent with what comes a little later.

Then I found also on page 13334:

The House—

Presumably, therefore, the House of Commons because the minister was speaking in the House of Commons.

The House will be given the opportunity before the end of June to express its opinion on the government's decision.

Then at page 13337 the minister said:

—I would rather submit to the House a motion which would be debated during one day, and then we could have a vote.

And there had been some discussion of the possibility of a bill.

This raised certain objections in certain quarters in the other place, and on May 14, at page 13514 of House of Commons Debates, the President of the Privy Council, the Leader of the House of Commons, took a hand in the proceedings and his intervention does not seem to me to have clarified the matter very much. He said that he had —put before the House leaders the possibility of dealing with this matter through a supplementary estimate.

This pops up for the first time. He continued:

Of course, this supplementary estimate would be referred to a standing committee where it could be discussed in detail. Members of the opposition could, if they wished, bring that supplementary estimate before the committee of the whole on an opposition day and cross examine the minister in whatever way they wanted. For example, we are prepared to have a day when the appropriation bill is before the House—

Senator Molson: Does my honourable friend not think it is out of order to discuss in this chamber matters that are currently being debated in the other place?

Senator Forsey: As I understand it, Senator Molson, we are allowed to quote from ministerial statements. These were ministerial statements, as I understand it, by the minister on this matter. I am sorry if I am transgressing the rules, but I certainly thought it was part of the ministerial statement. However, the point is—and I shall cease to quote from this at all—the point is that in all this there was not the slightest reference to the Senate and if the matter is to be brought in by way of a supplementary estimate in the other place, how we shall be able to deal with it effectively here is beyond me. A mere supplementary estimate presented there, there may be opportunities to debate there in the way in which the President of the Privy Council suggested, but I don't know how we can effectively debate a supplementary estimate item like this here. I speak subject to correction. It is possible that some senator, learned in the rules and with longer experience and greater knowledge than I, can provide a solution to this problem, although I am heartened to know that the Leader of the Opposition appears to agree with me that it would be at least very difficult to deal with the matter here in that way. I think it would be quite impossible.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, on a question of privilege, I do not think that the honourable senator should interpret my gesture as meaning that. On the contrary, I would say that it is very easy to have some reservations, such as those of Senator Molson, as to the propriety of the manner in which this matter is brought before us. In any event, I always enjoy Senator Forsey's speeches so much that I will not raise a formal point of order.

● (1420)

Senator Greene: Honourable senators, might I suggest that the view of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition would be of very small weight in its authority.

Senator Flynn: Quite so; especially if you add yours to mine.

Senator Forsey: If the gladiators have finished, perhaps I might be able to go on.

In effect, it seems to me that we got basically nothing in the way of any assurance from the Deputy Leader of the Government in this house the other day, or from ministers in the other place, that this matter will be brought before the Senate in any form whatsoever on which we can pronounce effectively. There is, of course, the bare possibility of a bill, but the discussion in the other place seemed to make it quite clear that this was exceedingly unlikely.

I noticed in the remarks of the Deputy Leader of the Government on May 12 at page 2111 of our Hansard what seemed to me a very, very curious observation. First of all, he said:

If it is a mere motion—

That is, a mere motion in the other place.

—I doubt that that should come to this place. However, the matter is still open to discussion in the other place—

A little farther down the column he said:

So it all depends on the method adopted by the House of Commons. Apparently there will be a meeting of the leaders of the other house and then the government will make its decision. Whatever that decision is, the government will have to abide by the rules of Parliament.

That is what Punch used to call another glimpse of the obvious. The deputy leader continued:

Obviously, therefore, if the measure needs the approval of the Senate it will surely come to the Senate. If it is a mere motion, then I doubt that such a motion will have to come to this place.

Well, of course, it would not have to come to this place and that is one reason why I asked the question. If there is to be a mere motion in the other place, it would not have to come here. I wanted to find out whether we would have an opportunity in this place, and apparently the answer is that it all depends on the other house. Well, that strikes me as a very curious attitude to take up with regard to the procedure in this place. Does the House of Commons decide what the government will present in the Senate? That is a novel doctrine to me and I do not think it is a very flattering doctrine to this house.

Before I go further, I want to say that if I can get now a plain, firm, unequivocal assurance that if there is no bill brought in to deal with this matter the government will present a resolution in the Senate which will give us the chance of pronouncing our views on this matter well before the end of June, then I am quite prepared to withdraw this inquiry. What I want is to have the Senate get a chance to pronounce on this subject. If it is not going to be given by the government the proper chance to pronounce on the subject, then I propose to go on and discuss it now, because I think it is a most important subject and I think there ought to be some means of at least ventilating the opinions of some senators, myself at any rate, on this subject before the whole business crystallizes, or gels, or takes a firm form, or this extraordinary new departure in fiscal policy becomes a settled part of our national financial system.

So, if now the leader or the Deputy Leader of the Government is prepared to give a firm, clear, plain, unequivocal assurance that the matter will come before the Senate in a form in which the Senate can discuss and pronounce on, I will sit down with great satisfaction and allow the house to proceed with business which, in principle perhaps, is of more importance. But if that assurance is not forthcoming, and I see no sign of the government leader or his deputy rising to give the assurance, then I want to go on and say something about this. This is an important question in my judgment.

Senator Perrault: Would the honourable senator allow me, just by way of reply, to suggest that there is no inclination on the part of the government here to prevent him from proceeding with his inquiry? If he wants to speak at length on this subject, that is the honourable senator's right. As soon as the method by which the government intends to proceed is made known in the other place, that information will be duly communicated.

Senator Forsey: I thank the Honourable Leader of the Government, but I don't know that that adds very much to my calm of mind, shall I say, or my enlightenment. It seems to me—of course he doesn't want to prevent me from discussing it; I never suggested that; he can't prevent me from discussing it; he can't prevent any honourable senator from discussing anything that he sees fit, as long as we keep within the rules—but the point is—

Senator Perrault: The honourable senator said he would be prepared to withdraw his inquiry. There is no need for him to withdraw his inquiry.

Senator Forsey: No, no. I was giving the government an opportunity to say something that would make it unnecessary for me to proceed. The government doesn't see fit to do that. All right, that's fine. All these interruptions, I might add, are prolonging my observations quite considerably and I should be grateful if I might be able to go on without too many more of them.

It seems to me a matter of great importance, a matter on which we should be able to pronounce, not merely express ourselves. I can express myself, and any other honourable senator who feels as I do about it, or who feels the opposite way about it, can also express himself. But what there ought to be is a chance for the Senate to pronounce its views on this new departure on fiscal policy.

I am almost inclined to call it a revolutionary new departure in fiscal policy, because the proposal is not simply for a temporary lottery, though certain remarks in the other house at certain points seemed to suggest that. But it is perfectly clear, if you read the ministerial statement, that this is an open-end lottery. It is to go on indefinitely. For the first three years the proceeds will be divided in such and such a way. After that, well, there will be discussions with the provinces to see how the further proceeds will be divided.

This is a permanent proposal. This is to be a permanent feature of our fiscal system. If it were simply a matter of picking up the pieces after the Olympic Games, or even looking after the Commonwealth Games, and the whole thing were to come to an end in 1979, I shouldn't like it, I should think it was a bad proposal, but I would be prepared to stomach it under the special conditions which exist. But a permanent proposal of this sort is something else again. For one thing, as has been pointed out elsewhere, it may very easily embarrass the provinces which have themselves embarked in a number of instances on this very dubious method of financing.

For another thing, a lottery, as my old assistant at the Canadian Labour Congress used to say, is a method of skinning the poor. It is regressive taxation, and it is worse than regressive taxation: it is an attack, you might say, upon the gullibility of the poor.

A colleague has handed me a most delightful set of verses written by Henry Fielding in 1732, which pretty well sums it up:

A lottery is a taxation
Upon all the fools in creation;
And heaven be praised,
It is easily raised,
Credulity's always in fashion,
For folly's fund will never lose ground
While fools are so rife in the nation.

This is a new departure in our fiscal policy. This is a proposal for a permanent lottery which could then be used for any kind of proposition, any kind of project, any kind of expense which the government of the day, of whatever party it may be, sees fit. It might even be used to provide the armed forces with aeroplanes. It might be used for all sorts of things, and without any kind of proper decision by the two Houses of Parliament.

I might add also that the whole idea of this lottery, this permanent lottery, sits very ill with the new society which the Prime Minister has spoken about and which I ardently support. It seeks to raise money by a method which excites all the appetites, which the new society presumably wants to restrain.

[Senator Forsey.]

● (1430)

Well, I shall conclude simply by saying that the end of this policy is bad and the means are worse. The means are an affront to Parliament, a defiance of Parliament; a defiance and an affront, at all events, to this house, unless we get some kind of undertaking that whatever they do in the other house, it will be brought before us. If a proposal is brought to us for our approval, I shall vote against it, and do my best to persuade all my friends in this house to do the same.

Hon. J. J. Greene: Honourable senators, I rise merely to commend Senator Forsey for the strong stand he has taken in this matter. Since my arrival in this place, I have found a tendency in far too many honourable senators towards self-immolation which, in the Buddhist faith, may be a sure and quick way to heaven, but not so in a parliamentary democracy. We whittle away at our own rights and privileges, almost apologizing for existing. Thank goodness Senator Forsey has risen in his place to demonstrate clearly that we have a parliamentary representative government and a bicameral parliament, of which this place is an integral part, and that no government, however right it may be, should achieve its purposes, however necessary they may be, without considering the rights and responsibilities of this part of the legislative process.

On the subject matter itself, I have some sympathy with Senator Forsey's views. It was one of my earliest chores in the other place to speak, during private members' hour, on the subject of lotteries. At a time when a private member on the government side had very little other opportunity to practice his parliamentary skills, private members' hour was a refuge for those of us who were attempting to become parliamentarians. Incidentally, a private member's bill was proposed by a member of the New Democratic Party, one of those noble souls who is always with the angels, and as a result of my research into the subject matter, on which I worked very hard, my conclusion was that lotteries constituted the most inefficient and regressive manner of collecting taxes.

I certainly hope and believe that the government, in its wisdom, will see to it that both parliamentary halves of our body politic will have every opportunity to debate the subject. I commend Senator Forsey for his stick-to-itiveness in bringing this matter forward so forcefully and seeing to it that this house is not treated as a mere rubber stamp, or not considered at all, in proceeding with so important a matter as this.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, there is no intention on the part of the government to treat this august chamber as a rubber stamp. I can only reiterate that as soon as the method by which the government intends to proceed is known, that information will be communicated to honourable senators and an opportunity will be given for the kind of fair and complete debate which is usually undertaken in this chamber in connection with measures of all kinds.

I remind honourable senators once again of the statement made by the President of the Treasury Board, as reported at page 13337 of House of Commons Debates of May 10, in which he said:

Mr. Speaker, it depends on the formula the leaders of all parties would endorse to have a debate on that motion. Substantially, it is the same bill that we had in the past, except that for the next three years, it will be under federal government control and that under the Corporations Act and the Criminal Code, we could create a Crown corporation without having to pass legislation.

However, there are many ways to put forward this project for the approval of the House and I am sure the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Sharp) will have discussions with his counterparts of other parties. We could even proceed by a budget item, if needed, but I would rather submit to the House a motion which would be debated during one day, and then we could have a vote. Or we could accept the suggestion that the opposition leader (Mr. Clark) kindly put to us, that is adopt a bill after all stages in two days.

Well, if that final course of action is followed, then necessarily the measure would come to this place.

Senator Forsey: If!

Senator Perrault: As Leader of the Government in the Senate, I want to give the commitment that I will make every representation to ensure that our traditional right to duly consider and adjudge all such proposals is respected. There has not been any suggestion in this entire discussion about the merits or demerits of Loto-Canada that the Senate not be allowed to participate in the dialogue.

Senator Grosart: Does the Leader of the Government know whether a decision has been made or announced to the press or Parliament about the method that will be adopted by the government in seeking the authority of Parliament to proceed with this lottery?

Senator Perrault: I can only say again that discussions are apparently under way with the leaders of the other parties. A method is being evolved, and as soon as information is available I shall, as I have said, make a statement in this chamber, if honourable senators would have me do so. I have checked as recently as half an hour ago to find out the latest information on how discussions and negotiations are proceeding, I may say that there is no change from the position taken on May 10 last, as expressed in the quotation I have given honourable senators from what was said by the Honourable Jean Chrétien. However, as soon as information is available I shall on that very day make known to honourable senators the method by which the government intends to proceed.

Senator Forsey: I hope I may be allowed to thank the Leader of the Government for giving the assurance he just has, that the matter will be brought before the Senate in some form or other for the expression of our opinion on it. If that had been said a little earlier it might have spared the chamber a considerable amount of second-rate eloquence.

Senator Perrault: I certainly did not express an assurance of that kind. I simply said that there will be an opportunity for a full discussion of this matter. Until I know how the government intends to proceed I can give no assurances at all.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I think what alarmed Senator Forsey was the answer he was given when he asked his original question. Perhaps his question was not understood. In essence what he was asking, as I understood it, was: If the government proceeds in a certain manner in the House of Commons, will it proceed in the same manner in the Senate? The reference here, of course, is to the authority that the government seeks to implement this new policy.

The President of the Treasury Board said he might proceed by way of a budget item, which would, of course, be by way of a supplementary estimate. I would point out, if the Leader of the Government is giving advice on this matter, that the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance has recommended over and over again that this is not a proper way to introduce government policy—that is, by a vote or a $1 item in the supplementary estimates. There are times, in emergencies, when it appears to be necessary, but if there are other alternatives I hope the government would not seek to proceed by this back-door method of implementing government policy.

Obviously it is the authority that Senator Forsey and others are concerned about. Is it to be the authority of a mere resolution in the House of Commons? Is this to be the authority for a major change in government policy? I think the answer Senator Forsey would have liked, and which I would like, is that if the authority is sought by the government from the House of Commons by a resolution then similar authority will be sought from the Senate by a similar resolution. If the government decides to proceed by way of a bill then, of course, there is no problem. The bill will automatically come to us.

• (1440)

It is true that if the government decides to proceed by way of a supplementary estimate, that matter will come before us, but it is not customary for us to examine supplementary estimates item by item in the chamber. We are all aware that supplementary estimates are referred to the National Finance Committee, and the committee makes its report. It might or might not report on an item such as this. However, I would agree with the Leader of the Government that regardless of whether that is so or not, when the report of the National Finance Committee and the particular appropriation bill are before us there will then be an opportunity to debate the matter.

The point is an important one, that whatever authority is sought by the government, it should in the clearest possible terms also seek the authority of the Senate.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I shall undertake to make a statement about this matter at the earliest possible opportunity after analyzing the entire subject and the questions posed by honourable senators. However, I have given the latest report according to the information I have, and that is all I can say at the present time.

On motion of Senator Hicks, debate adjourned.

CRIMINAL LAW

INTERIM REPORT OF THE STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE ON LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. H. Carl Goldenberg rose pursuant to notice:

That he will call the attention of the Senate to the Interim Report of the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs on the subject matter of the Bill C-83, intitled: "An Act for the better protection of Canadian society against perpetrators of violent and other crime," tabled in the Senate on 13th May, 1976.

He said: Honourable senators, in tabling the report of the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs on May 13, I suggested that we might defer consideration of the report until the bill reaches the Senate, after passage in the other place. It has been suggested to me, however, that it would be wise to consider it at this stage even though the report is an interim report.

I want to emphasize that the Senate referred to committee for study the subject matter of Bill C-83, entitled "An Act for the better protection of Canadian society against perpetrators of violent and other crime." The committee made a preliminary study of the bill. It did not make a clause-by-clause study because it will do so in due course, if and when the bill comes before the Senate. The committee, therefore, confined itself to a number of particular points.

I would point out that we are dealing with a bill which covers a good deal of ground. It deals with such matters as firearms and other offensive weapons, invasion of privacy through the interception of communications, dangerous offenders, special crime inquiries, amendments to the Parole Act, and so on. The committee did not cover all this ground but dealt with a number of items on which we thought our opinion would be of interest. The Minister of Justice, as a matter of fact, asked me to send him a copy of the recommendations of the committee as soon as possible.

It will be of interest to honourable senators to know that the house committee, which is still studying this bill, has published the report of the Senate committee as an appendix to its proceedings of Tuesday, May 18.

In fairness to the members of the committee, I should also say that while we make this interim report, it does not mean that the committee has approved or disapproved the bill. Honourable senators should bear in mind that what we are recommending is further consideration or re-examination of some items in the bill.

The bill deals, first, to a large extent with firearms and other offensive weapons. The committee notes that some parts of the bill dealing with firearms would add to the Criminal Code provisions that are regulatory and administrative rather than provisions of a criminal law nature, for example, the establishment of a licensing system and provisions relating to such matters as the carriage, the handling and the storage of firearms. The committee questioned whether such provisions properly belong in the Criminal Code.

In this connection the committee relied upon a recent report of the Law Reform Commission of Canada in which it says:

If criminal law's function is to reaffirm fundamental values, then it must concern itself with "real crimes" only and not with the plethora of "regulatory offences" found throughout our laws. Our Criminal Code should contain only such acts as are not only punishable but also wrong—acts contravening fundamental values. All other offences must remain outside the Code.

We preface our report with this quotation and question the desirability of including some of the provisions relating to firearms in the Criminal Code.

We then deal with use of a weapon during the commission of an offence. It will be an offence under the bill to use a weapon during the commission of a crime. The committee was also concerned, however, with the possibility that serious consequences may result when a person is in possession of a weapon during the commission of an offence, whether or not he intends to use it. Therefore, we recommend that consideration be given to amending the proposed new section of the law by adding the provision:

—that anyone who has upon his person an offensive weapon while committing or attempting to commit an indictable offence or during his flight after committing or attempting to commit an indictable offence, whether or not he intends to use it to cause bodily harm to any person, is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for five years or is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction.

The committee also recommended that it be further provided in the proposed new section 98:

—that where one of two or more persons, with the knowledge and consent of the rest, has an offensive weapon upon his person while committing or attempting to commit an indictable offence or during his flight after committing or attempting to commit an indictable offence, it shall be deemed to be upon the person of each and all of them.

[Translation]

We also considered the use of weapons and the best I can do is to read our recommendation:

Your Committee recognizes that the practice of using and storing firearms varies greatly in different regions of the country. In those areas where firearms are part of the everyday life of the residents, the use of firearms is accompanied by a knowledge of, and respect for, their dangers. In such regions it may be both difficult and unnecessary to take the precautions that in other regions, particularly in urban areas, would be reasonable and desirable.

It is, therefore, recommended that consideration be given to amending the proposed new subsection 99(2), in clause 3 of the Bill, by adding thereto a requirement that local circumstances, traditions and practices be taken into consideration by the courts when determining whether a firearm or ammunition has been used or stored in a careless manner or without taking reasonable precautions for the safety of other persons.

[English]

● (1450)

The committee also dealt with a highly controversial provision of the law, which brings us back to an earlier debate in the Senate and to a controversy between the Senate and the House of Commons. There is a provision in the law now requiring notification to a person who has been the object of an intercepted communication within 90 days following the period for which authorization to intercept was given.

Honourable senators will recall that the Senate rejected such a provision in the protection of privacy legislation which was introduced and passed just over two years ago. But we were overruled; the other house refused to accept our amendment. Now the bill before us, curiously enough, proposes what the Senate wanted at that time. The bill proposes the elimination of the requirement of notification to someone who has been wiretapped.

Well, our committee has modified its position this time, and, considering the experience with authorization for wiretapping and related factors, the report says that the provision requiring notification should not simply be repealed but proposes instead that it be replaced by a provision that would ensure that the required notification does not interfere with proper investigation by law enforcement authorities of the activities of organized crime and professional criminals. We were told when we first studied this matter some two years ago that such notification hinders the police in their investigation of organized crime because they are not necessarily able to complete such an investigation within 90 days, or, for that matter, sometimes within 180 days or within months or even longer than that.

As a compromise—and I think the members of the committee will agree with me that that is what it is—the committee recommends that consideration be given to a provision that would amend the clause of the bill to which I am referring to permit a judge to grant one extension not exceeding 90 days of the period within which notification is required, and to permit two judges to grant any additional extensions of that period or to eliminate entirely the requirement for notification. This introduces a novel idea. We felt that it would protect both the interests of the public vis-à-vis organized crime and the rights of the citizens.

I have told you that the bill also deals with dangerous offenders. That is a new term which will replace the terms previously used, "habitual criminals" and "dangerous sexual offenders." The committee draws attention in its report to a new section which provides that where a person has been found to be a dangerous offender and has been sentenced for an indeterminate period, the case will be reviewed by the National Parole Board within three years after the person was taken into custody and thereafter not later than every two years in order to determine whether the person should be granted parole. In its preliminary study the committee saw that under this provision, where a sentence has been imposed for an offence and the minimum period that must be served before eligibility for parole is longer than three years, it is possible for the person who was convicted of the offence and who was found to be a dangerous offender to be released sooner than another person who was convicted of the same offence but who was not found to be a dangerous offender. The committee therefore suggests in its report that consideration be given to an amendment to the bill that would provide that where a person has been convicted of an offence and has been found by the court to be a dangerous offender, that person would be required to serve a determinate sentence for the offence followed by an indeterminate sentence as a dangerous offender.

The committee also recommends a further amendment to provide that where a person has been sentenced to an indeterminate period as a dangerous offender the National Parole Board shall, for the purpose of determining whether such person should be granted parole under the Parole Act, review the case not later than the end of the period required to be served for the offence for which the person has been sentenced before becoming eligible for parole, or three years, whichever is the longer. This is to prevent a person convicted of an offence but not found to be a dangerous offender from serving a longer term before he is eligible for parole than a person who has been convicted of the same offence and found to be a dangerous offender. I think this is an important correction that should, and I hope will, be made in the bill.

[Translation]

There are also transitional provisions in the bill.

Your Committee is of the opinion that because of the significant differences between the present law in respect of habitual offenders and dangerous sexual offenders and the provisions in Bill C-83 in respect of dangerous offenders, a review should be carried out with respect to all such offenders who are at the present time in custody under sentences of detention to determine which inmates do not fall within the terms of the description of a dangerous offender in paragraphs 688(a) and (b) in clause 23 of the Bill. Such inmates should be released if they have served a reasonable period of time in prison for the offences they committed.

[English]

● (1500)

The committee also noticed that a transitional provision in a proposed new section of the Parole Act is intended to provide for the application of regulations at different times in various provinces, as and when those provinces set up, or appoint, provincial parole boards, as provided for in the act.

The committee was rather concerned about the discriminatory effects of this, in that persons in different provinces would be treated differently, because in one case a provincial parole board would have been set up, while in another such a board would not yet have been set up or would not yet be functioning. The committee therefore proposed that the new subsection dealing with this be amended so that its effect would be limited to the period of time, and the circumstances, for which it is intended. The committee added that it would be undesirable, and could be discriminatory, if a regulation governing parole were to be applied after the transitional period to inmates in certain regions of the country, and not to inmates generally in all parts of the country.

We have two further points in this report, both dealing with parole. Clause 25 of the bill says:

11. Subject to such regulations as the Governor in Council may make in that behalf, the Board is not required, in considering whether parole should be granted or revoked, to personally interview the inmate or any person on his behalf.

The board, however, could make regulations prescribing the circumstances in which an inmate is entitled to a hearing upon any review of his case for parole. Your committee came to the conclusion that consideration should be given to amending this clause by adding a provision that would give an inmate the right to a personal interview following his application for parole to the National Parole Board at the time that he first becomes eligible for parole.

Finally, the committee noted that the National Parole Board will no longer be permitted, where special circumstances exist, to grant parole by exception to an inmate before the inmate's eligibility date has been reached. By regulation the board can now grant parole by exception. It has done so only in a very small proportion of the cases, but an example cited to us was that of an inmate who has qualified for admission to university. If the term of that university opened in October, and he would not qualify for parole until November, the board could, in those circumstances, grant parole by exception. It is now proposed to eliminate this. The committee, however, expressed the opinion that the National Parole Board should retain this right, which, although exercised infrequently, permits flexibility in those situations where parole by exception is warranted.

This, in summary, is the report of the committee. I repeat, it is an interim report following a preliminary study. The committee did not hear outside witnesses. The only witnesses heard by the committee were officials of the Department of Justice, of the Solicitor General's department, and of the National Parole Board. We did not think that at this stage we should hear witnesses who are appearing before the committee in the other place. When the bill comes before us, if it comes before us, we shall reserve our right to hear the same and other witnesses.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, in a moment I shall move the adjournment of this debate. I should just like to say that I was a member of the committee and concurred in the report, so that I am not likely to take any position in opposition to it. There may, however, be a few points that I should like to draw to the attention of the Senate. With those few remarks I now move that this debate be adjourned.

On motion of Senator Smith (Colchester), debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, May 27, 1976

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

CLERK'S ACCOUNTS

STATEMENT TABLED PURSUANT TO RULE 112

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that, in conformity with rule 112, the Clerk of the Senate had laid on the Table a detailed statement of his receipts and disbursements for the fiscal year 1975-76.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I move:

That the Clerk's accounts be referred to the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report of the Minister of Finance respecting Olympic coins for the six months ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to sections 13(1) and 13(3) of the Olympic (1976) Act, Chapter 31, Statutes of Canada, 1973-74.

THE ESTIMATES

REPORT OF NATIONAL FINANCE COMMITTEE PRESENTED AND PRINTED AS APPENDIX

Senator Sparrow, Deputy Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance, presented the report of the committee, to which was referred the Estimates laid before Parliament for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1977, and asked that the report be printed as an appendix to the Debates of the Senate and to the Minutes of the Proceedings of today and form part of the permanent record of this house.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is it agreed?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(For text of report, see appendix pp. 2173-2175).

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Senator Sparrow moved that the report be taken into consideration at the next sitting of the Senate.

Motion agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1) (g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, June 8, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Honourable senators, I should like to give a brief explanation of the adjournment motion. In moving the adjournment of the Senate to June 8, it has been taken into consideration that there is no legislation at present before the Senate and it is unlikely that we will receive any bills from the other place before the end of next week. However, several committees will be sitting next week.

On Tuesday the Foreign Affairs Committee will meet at 10 a. m. on Bill C-20, respecting citizenship. The Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee will hold an in camera meeting at 2.30 p.m. to consider its report on conflict of interest. The Special Joint Committee on the National Capital Region has called a meeting for 3.30 p.m., and the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments will meet at 8.30 p.m.

On Wednesday the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee will meet at 9.30 a.m. to hear witnesses on Canadian textile problems. If necessary, the committee will sit again at 2.30 p.m.

On Thursday the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee will have another meeting on Canadian textile problems at 9.30 p.m., the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments will meet at 11 a.m., and the Special Joint Committee on the National Capital Region will meet at 3.30 p.m.

We hope that when we return on June 8 we will have received one and possibly two bills from the other place. We will be debating a number of items on the Order Paper, including the report presented today on the estimates by the Deputy Chairman of the National Finance Committee.

Motion agreed to.

● (1410)

THE SENATE

TAILORING SERVICES—QUESTION

Senator Argue: Honourable senators, I should like to ask a question of the Whip, if I may.

Senator Flynn: The Whip?

Senator Argue: The Whip.

Senator Flynn: Do you mean the government Whip?

Senator Argue: Yes, one of the two Whips.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Argue: I might preface my question by saying that for many years there has been a long-standing service available to senators, namely, the use of the tailor on a joint basis with the House of Commons for pressing suits and making minor repairs, and so on. Yesterday I sent a couple of suits to the tailor to have them pressed. They were brought back by a messenger who said, "He doesn't have the time." So I sent them back and said, "I have lots of time; he can take his time; there is no hurry." Again the messenger came back and said, "Oh, the tailor says he is no longer doing anything for senators."

This is a service that has been available to senators for many years, as I have already said, and I do not think we should agree to be elbowed out of this service. I think it is of some benefit to the Senate. We pay for the cost of the service so we are not on the taxpayers' back. I wonder if the Whip might inquire into this to see if this service can be continued.

Senator Flynn: I am sorry I gave leave. There is no doubt whatever that this subject does not concern the Whip and it should not concern the Senate.

Senator Perrault: It is a pressing issue just the same.

Hon. Senators: Oh, oh!

Senator Petten: Honourable senators, while it may not be my particular job to look into this question, I shall nevertheless endeavour to find out what the situation is and give a satisfactory answer.

Senator Argue: You can check with the Whip on the other side.

Senator Flynn: It has nothing to do with the Whips.

Senator Grosart: It is just a hang-up.

Senator Perrault: Well, as my honourable colleague indicated, we hope that the situation can be ironed out very shortly.

AIR TRANSPORT

FLIGHT DELAYS DUE TO LABOUR DISPUTE—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, recently I was asked by the Honourable Senator Phillips a question about wage settlements with personnel of the Ministry of Transport. Senator Phillips stated in part:

I refer, in particular, to inspectors who are responsible for aircraft maintenance and renewal of pilots' licences. Can the leader tell us how many flights, both national and international, have been delayed or cancelled because of invalidated pilots' licences?

Secondly, it has been the normal custom of airlines to protect scheduled passengers who have had their flights either delayed or cancelled, by giving them priority on the next flight two or three hours later. Are the airlines following this practice during this labour dispute?

In reply to the first question, one national flight has been delayed at Winnipeg, Manitoba—I can attest personally to the accuracy of that statement—but no international flights have been delayed and no national or international flights have been cancelled because of actions taken by inspectors of Transport Canada concerning pilots with invalid licences.

In reply to the second question, Transport Canada does not have the information as to how under these circumstances airlines protect scheduled passengers who have had their flights either delayed or cancelled. I should imagine that that information would be available from the individual airlines which serve the Canadian interests. If the honourable senator would like me to do so, and if it is possible, I shall undertake to contact the airlines individually in order to ascertain the policy.

Senator Phillips: Thank you.

NATIONAL LOTTERY

PROPOSED INCORPORATION OF LOTO-CANADA—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the inquiry of Senator Forsey calling the attention of the Senate to the proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada.

Hon. Henry D. Hicks: Honourable senators, at the outset I should like to express my virtually complete agreement with the position taken in respect to Loto-Canada by the Honourable Senator Forsey, who introduced this inquiry, and by the Honourable Senator Greene, who spoke to it during yesterday's sitting. There are, as Senator Forsey pointed out, two aspects of this problem of concern to the Senate. The first is the method or device by which the Government of Canada intends to perpetuate the lottery which we all felt was initiated as a means of helping to support the Olympic Games being held this year in Montreal. It now appears that we could be embarked upon establishing what would be a national lottery which would go on indefinitely. As I say, the first issue has to do with the method the government proposes to use in order to do this. There may be some devices available to the government by way of incorporation of a company, by way of adding items to the budget, and so on. However, it seems to me that this does constitute such a major change in policy, if not an actual change in the law of the land, that it ought to be embodied in a bill which both Houses of Parliament should have the opportunity of debating and adjudicating. I hope, therefore, that this will be done.

I noted carefully the reply of the Leader of the Government in the Senate to Senator Forsey's invitation to give some assurance that the issue would be brought before this house. His reply was merely to the effect that he would, as soon as he could, report to this house on the decision which the government had made. Of course, if that is a decision to proceed in some way other than by a bill or other than by some device that brings the issue before this chamber, then we will not have another opportunity to speak upon it or to vote for or against the proposal. I hope, therefore, that the government leader will use his influence to see that this matter is handled in such a way that members of this house may have the opportunity of debating the issue and voting on the feasibility and the terms under which an extension of the Olympic lottery may be agreed upon and perhaps, as I say, grow into a continuing national lottery.

The other issue, of course, has to do with the merits of lotteries generally. I must say that I am not very enthusiastic about these devices at all, myself. I am not very enthusiastic about the holding of lotteries generally and I am certainly not enthusiastic about the use of a lottery to raise revenue by governments, into which this could very rapidly grow.

It seems to me, as has been pointed out by others, that this is, indeed, a regressive mode of taxation, that it takes advantage of the gullible and, very often, of those who can least afford to pay. It is not really a dignified or stable method of raising revenue in a country such as Canada. Indeed, I am afraid that I myself feel that there is something inherently immoral about a lottery, because it tends to make people feel that the way to succeed is by luck rather than by hard work or application, and so on. I suppose it is unpopular today to refer to the Protestant work ethic, but I happen to have been brought up in a background in which this was highly valued and I still think that it has some value, even within the standards of the society in which we live today. It seems to me that we should not as a nation and as a national government encourage people to think that the way to success is by luck rather than by hard work or application or by the intelligent use of the talents that God has given to each and every one of us.

Therefore, I suppose I have disclosed my position now and said, in effect, that I would vote against legislation that would establish a continuing national lottery. I hope, honourable senators, that I may have the opportunity of doing just that.

● (1420)

Hon. Frederick William Rowe: Honourable senators, Senator Hicks has expressed very cogently and eloquently my own views and, I imagine, those of a good many of my colleagues. I shall summarize my approach to the subject very briefly.

Let me say, first, that I am not sure, and I suppose no one else in the Senate is, what exactly is envisaged in the proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada. If, as Senator Forsey suggests, it is possible that the lottery could go on indefinitely, that gambling would become part of our national policy, then I suggest we should approach this matter very cautiously. There should be no back door approach. It should not be done without full resort to the parliamentary process, which means complete and full debate in the Parliament of Canada, including the Senate. Since we have reason to believe that significant numbers of Canadians are opposed on principle to gambling, we would be well advised not to rush into this matter. We should have a full and complete expression of public opinion on it.

As Senator Hicks said, there are some fundamental religious beliefs involved here. I have always opposed, and will continue to oppose so long as I live, any attempt on the part of religious groups, large or small, to force their particular views down the throats of people on any subject, whether it be pornography, the use of alcohol, birth control, abortion, or any other important issue. However, we should recognize that in all religious groups in Canada there are adherents who have very strong views on gambling.

No matter how much sympathy and concern we might have for the predicament brought about by our involvement in the Olympics—I use the word “our” deliberately—we should not allow ourselves to be stampeded or seduced into some fundamental change in national policy. Therefore, I completely support the demand—not merely a suggestion—made by Senator Hicks and by Senator Forsey, as members of the Senate of Canada, that the whole matter be debated openly and that sufficient time be allowed for full expression of the views of Canadians.

Senator Deschatelets: Honourable senators, since this is a place for debate, we might hear some other views on this matter—views which might be considered those of a gambler. That is why I move the adjournment of this debate.

On motion of Senator Deschatelets, debate adjourned.

ENERGY

STATEMENT OF POLICY RE OIL AND GAS—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Raymond J. Perrault rose pursuant to notice:

That he will call the attention of the Senate to the Statement of Policy, Proposed Petroleum and Natural Gas Act and New Canada Oil and Gas Land Regulations, dated May 1976, tabled in the Senate on 20th May, 1976.

He said: Honourable senators, I promised some days ago to make a statement with respect to the proposed Petroleum and Natural Gas Act and New Canada Oil and Gas Land Regulations, and allied matters. I should like to do so this afternoon.

The federal government has taken significant initiatives in the energy field to prepare Canada for possible shortages and other unforeseen contingencies as they arise. These steps have involved much planning and consultation with the provinces and other interested parties, and were taken to ensure that the economic stability of Canada and the comfort of its citizens will not be disturbed unduly by the drastic changes in the world's energy fortunes since 1973 and the OPEC shock waves.

As honourable senators will recall, the world price of oil was $2.20 a barrel in 1973, and shortly after the fall crisis it began to escalate to the point where it now stands in the area of $12 a barrel. The impact of this economic event has been dramatic, to say the least, and has affected, as honourable senators are aware, the economies of all nations throughout the world.

On April 27 last, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources announced a national energy strategy for Canada. It is a strategy that is, in the view of the government, consistent and comprehensive. It consists of three well-defined parts, those being, first, an objective, which is energy self-reliance; second, a series of specific energy targets; and, finally, in support of the objective and targets, nine policy elements.

The national energy strategy for self-reliance is directed through the next 10 years at minimizing the risks of growing dependence on imported oil. Self-reliance in energy means reducing our vulnerability to unanticipated changes in price or prolonged interruptions in supply. It means supplying Canadian requirements from Canadian resources to the greatest extent practicable, but it is not a strategy of self-reliance at any cost. It recognizes that we will have to rely on imported oil, at least to a certain degree. An important policy element is emergency preparedness to ensure that Canadians using imported oil will be adequately protected should supplies be curtailed.

Above all, it is a strategy that we believe is both balanced and flexible. It is balanced in the sense that it recognizes that the policies we adopt will have costs as well as benefits, and that a choice that provides the maximum advantage to Canadians must be found. It is flexible in the sense that many aspects of the international oil market and our own domestic energy situation are uncertain and are continuing to evolve. The approach adopted will be, we hope, dynamic enough to adapt quickly to changing circumstances.

The first target is to move domestic oil prices toward international levels, and the domestic price for natural gas to an appropriate competitive relationship with oil over the next two to four years.

Domestic energy prices must continue to increase to reinforce efficiency and restraint of energy use, to encourage the development of additional Canadian supplies, to reduce the magnitude of the transfer of real wealth from Canadians to oil-exporting countries, and to reduce the subsidization of oil consumers by the general taxpayer. They need not move to international oil prices if it is clear that new Canadian resources can be found and delivered to markets at prices that are lower.

● (1430)

The second target is to reduce the average rate of growth of energy use in Canada over the next ten years to less than 3.5 per cent per year. The government believes this can be attained by appropriate pricing measures and energy conservation initiatives. It represents a reduction in the historically observed growth rate of over one-third. It is a reduction which the government believes to be technically feasible with a minimal impact on our standard of living and quality of life. It is a reduction that is essential if we are to be able to plan our energy future in the most appropriate way.

The third target is to reduce our net dependence on imported oil in 1985 to one-third of our total oil demands—that is, to approximately 800,000 barrels a day.

The fourth target is to maintain our self-reliance in natural gas until such time as northern resources can be brought to market under acceptable conditions.

Finally, the fifth target is to double, at a minimum, from $350 million to $700 million, exploration and development activity in the frontier regions of Canada over the next three years under acceptable social and environmental conditions. This is a minimal target that will facilitate the development of the information necessary to make appropriate decisions about our energy options.

In support of the objective of energy self-reliance, the government proposes nine major policy elements, and these are: (1) appropriate energy pricing; (2) energy conservation; (3) increased exploration and development; (4) increased resource information; (5) inter-fuel substitution; (6) new delivery systems; (7) emergency preparedness; (8) increased research and development; and (9) greater Canadian content and participation.

This is a tough challenge for all of us, wherever we live in this country, but the strategy which has been adopted will, we hope, meet it positively and effectively. It is a strategy that is directed primarily at the problems of the next ten years. It is recognized that further policy initiatives directed at the problems of transition from oil- and gas-based energy systems to alternative energy sources are going to be required to prepare for the longer term future, but the next ten years are critical.

With the constructive cooperation of provincial governments and industry, and with the support of Canadians in all regions of the country, Canada can achieve the objective of energy self-reliance. Success in this endeavour will increase both the confidence and the options with which we can plan for the years beyond 1985.

More specifically, the federal government last week reached certain major decisions concerning crude oil and natural gas prices. In discussions with the provinces, it has been natural for the producing provinces which own the resources to press for higher prices for oil and gas to ensure themselves the best possible revenues to compensate them for the loss of their depleting assets. At the same time, they have recognized the effects of price increases on the economy of all of Canada. Governments of consuming provinces have naturally been mindful of the effects the price increase would have on their consumers. At the same time, they have had to consider the claims of producing provinces for recognition of their rights as owners of the oil and gas.

The Government of Canada meanwhile has had to keep all of these factors in mind—particularly that most difficult dilemma, the fact that price increases in these major commodities would add to inflation—and at the same time the fact that if we did not increase prices we would jeopardize our future energy supply.

In the light of all these considerations, the government has now reached the following conclusions:

1. There should be a standard "freeze" period on petroleum product prices of 60 days across Canada, which would run from the date of any increase in the price of crude oil at the well-head. Prices to consumers would not, therefore, rise until 60 days from the date of the authorized increase in the prices producers receive for crude oil.

2. The price of crude oil in Canada should rise by $1.05—that is to say, from $8 to $9.05—on July 1, 1976, and by a further 70 cents to $9.75 on January 1, 1977. Consumers would not begin to feel the effects until after 60 days from these dates.

3. The price of natural gas should rise by 15.5 cents at City Gate Toronto—that is, from 125 to 140.5 cents—per million BTUs on July 1, 1976, and by a further 10 cents to 150.5 cents on January 1, 1977. With these price increases, natural gas will continue for an additional year to retain its approximately 85 per cent commodity price relationship with crude oil.

4. Export prices on natural gas will also increase. The government is now reviewing a report on this subject from the National Energy Board, and is discussing the situation with representatives of the Government of the United States of America with hopes of being able to make an announcement concerning the amount and timing of the increase within a month.

[Senator Perrault.]

A further policy initiative, supportive of the federal government's strategy for dealing with the energy issues of the next 15 years, was announced by the federal government last week as well. It is contained in the document entitled: "Statement of Policy, Proposed Petroleum and Natural Gas Act and New Canada Oil and Gas Land Regulations." The existing Canada Oil and Gas Land Regulations, governing the disposition and administration of oil and gas rights in the north and in the offshore, were promulgated in 1961. Since that time, 15 years ago, there have been major changes in the petroleum situation both nationally and internationally, and technological advances have greatly changed the capability to explore for and to develop oil and gas reserves. It is necessary to update the regulations pertaining to Canada's frontier areas so as to provide increased public controls over exploration and production, to modernize the system for collecting economic rent and, at the same time, to continue to encourage exploration for new reserves. As emphasized by the strategy report, all of this must be done under acceptable environmental and social conditions.

The great bulk of Canada's frontier areas that can be considered as prospective for exploration with current technology is already held under permits issued in accordance with the existing regulations. Thus, in order to institute meaningful changes in the existing system, it is necessary to amend substantially the terms and conditions of these permits, which currently contain commitments to lease and royalty conditions extending for periods exceeding 50 years. This necessitates the adoption of appropriate legislation designed to impact on present contractual obligations.

However, it cannot be over-emphasized that the continued involvement of industry is essential, not only from the standpoint of providing investment capital but for the source and flow of exploration concepts as the discovery of new reserves is a function of the input of new ideas engendered by the competitive nature of business. A discovery, as honourable senators are aware, may be the result of several successive waves of exploration based on different methods of collecting and utilizing information.

The legislation involved is quite complicated. It will come before the Senate where we, of course, will have a full opportunity to discuss it and consider it, and refer it to an appropriate committee.

The legislation falls under six headings: (1) period of tenure; (2) new work obligations; (3) new fiscal systems; (4) preferences for Petro-Canada; (5) production orders; and (6) Canadian participation and content.

The discretionary powers envisaged under the new regulations will be far more extensive than those under the current regulations. There are many decisions to be made with respect to existing exploration permits; in particular, those with respect to the need to establish new requirements for widely differing areas as increasing numbers of permits reach the ends of their normal life over the next few years.

● (1440)

With regard to future oil and gas rights there are the basic decisions as to where and on what terms and conditions such rights should be made available by way of public tender or, in some cases, issued directly by order in council. In the former case, choosing successful applicants in the future will not be a matter of simply picking the highest bidder. There will be a number of factors to be considered in the best interests of Canada. Equally important and difficult will be decisions involved after the discovery of producible oil and gas. The new rental collection system will require the determination of a number of factors involving far more than normal accounting procedures; indeed, requiring a high degree of oil and gas expertise.

The development of the necessary administrative organization and personnel should, therefore, be ideally within one group, and the government proposes to set up a new unified resource management agency. That new agency will at the same time provide the vehicle through which preferential treatment for Canada lands will be effected for Petro-Canada, and it will maintain an objective balance between Petro-Canada on the one hand and industry on the other in the implementation of matters under the new regulations.

In summary, honourable senators, this new policy, which will be presented for parliamentary consideration this fall—and I know that all honourable senators will greet the debate of this matter with real interest—is designed to meet equally important but sometimes conflicting objectives, such as increased exploration and discovery, and greater control over the activities of the industry which must carry the lion's share of the exploration risk. Following extensive discussions with that industry, as well as with the provinces involved, we are confident that we have reached a fine balance which will prove to be in the national interest.

It will be apparent from the remarks I have made today on behalf of the government that Canada is entering a critical stage in terms of its energy problems, and the government is meeting them head-on with constructive legislation and strategies, some of which have already been outlined. These are just the first steps in meeting the challenges ahead, challenges which will require the commitment of all Canadians if we are to continue to meet our economic goals and enhance our quality of life.

On motion of Senator Phillips, debate adjourned.

COMMITTEES

AUTHORIZATION TO MEET DURING ADJOURNMENT OF THE SENATE

Leave having been given to revert to Notices of Motion:

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, in view of the adjournment motion which was agreed to earlier today, and in view also of the wording of rule 76 of our rules, which may give rise to various interpretations, I move, with leave of the Senate and seconded by the Honourable Senator Perrault, P.C., that the following committees mentioned in my statement, which have scheduled meetings for next week, be empowered to sit when the Senate is not sitting, to wit: the Committee on Foreign Affairs, the Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, the Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, among others, and also the Special Joint Committee on the National Capital Region and the Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, which, to my own satisfaction, already have permission to sit while the Senate is not sitting.

In moving this motion I commend it to the favourable consideration of the house.

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, June 8, at 8 p.m.

APPENDIX

(See p. 2167)

THE ESTIMATES

REPORT OF STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE ON NATIONAL FINANCE ON THE ESTIMATES LAID BEFORE PARLIAMENT FOR FISCAL YEAR ENDING MARCH 31, 1977

Thursday, May 27, 1976.

during recent years compared to earlier in the decade when it was on average about 10 per cent.

The Standing Senate Committee on National Finance to which the Estimates laid before Parliament for the fiscal year ending the 31st of March 1977 were referred, has in obedience to the order of reference of Thursday, the 19th of February 1976, examined the said Estimates and reports as follows:

1. Your committee was authorized by the Senate as recorded in the Minutes of Proceedings of the Senate of the 19th of February 1976 "to examine and report upon the expenditures proposed by the Estimates laid before Parliament for the fiscal year ending the 31st of March 1977, in advance of bills based upon the said Estimates reaching the Senate."

2. In obedience to the foregoing your committee made a general examination of the Estimates and heard evidence from the Honourable J. Chrétien, President of Treasury Board, and Mr. B. A. MacDonald, Deputy Secretary, Treasury Board.

3. The Main Estimates for 1976-77 in total amount to $39,545 million. Budgetary estimates account for $38,417 million and non-budgetary estimates (loans, investments and advances) account for $1,128 million. The Old Age Security Fund ceased to exist in June 1975, and these payments and those for the Guaranteed Income Supplement are included in the 1976-77 Estimates for the first time. Statutory payments make up 56.9 per cent of the total budgetary estimates, $21,847 million. The remaining $16,570 million represents funds for which Parliament is asked to provide new authority. In the 1975-76 fiscal year the Main Estimates, which did not include Old Age Security and Guaranteed Income Supplement payments, amounted to $29,585 million. This sum was increased to $32,257 million by two supplementary estimates. The budgetary estimates accounted for $30,755 million, which provided $15,010 million to meet statutory obligations, and $15,745 million for proposed new expenditures. Non-budgetary items totaled $1,502 million.

4. As will be apparent from the table which follows, the Main Budgetary Estimates 1976-77 ($38,417 million) are $6,207 million or 19.3 per cent higher than the Main Budgetary Estimates 1975-76. This increase does compare favourably with the percentage increase of 26.5 per cent requested in the Main Estimates 1975-76 over Main Estimates 1974-75. Your committee, however, continues to be concerned by the size of increase

BUDGETARY ESTIMATES

(including OAS and GIS)

(millions of dollars)

Fiscal Year Ending	Main Estimates	%Increase Over Previous Year
	$
March 31, 1969	12,212	—
March 31, 1970	13,588	11.3
March 31, 1971	14,817	9.0
March 31, 1972	16,557	11.1
March 31, 1973	18,273	10.4
March 31, 1974	21,427	17.3
March 31, 1975	25,467	18.9
March 31, 1976	32,210	26.5
March 31, 1977	38,417	19.3

5. The new summary table in the Blue Book of Estimates, table 7 (page 1-62) has been introduced largely in response to comments in previous reports of your committee. This table classifies Budgetary Estimates and Forecast Expenditures by type of payments. The principal headings of this table with the relevant amounts and percentage distribution are:

Estimates by Type of Payment
(millions of dollars)
	Estimates	Forecast Expenditures	Percentage Distribution of total 1976-77 Estimates %
	1976-77	1975-76*
	$	$
Payments to persons	9,077.4	7,722.0	23.6
Payments to other levels of government	8,108.8	7,131.5	21.1
Operating and Capital expenditures of departments and agencies, non-defence	8,095.7	6,879.7	21.1
Public Debt	4,650.0	3,775.0	12.1

Estimates by Type of Payment

(millions of dollars)

	Forecast		Percentage Distribution of total 1976-77 Estimates %
	Estimates 1976-77 $	Expenditures 1975-76* $
Subsidies and other transfer payments	4,160.1	4,558.8	10.8
Department of National Defence	3,371.1	2,976.6	8.8
Payments to cer- tain agency and proprie- tary corpora- tions	954.0	795.9	2.5
TOTAL	38,417.1	33,839.5	100.0

*Total 1975-76 Expenditures forecast as at December 31, 1975.

6. The fact that statutory payments now make up 56.9 per cent of the total Estimates effectively limits the effort of the Treasury Board to control expenditures. Entrenched acts should be regularly reviewed. The Minister assured the committee that many programs are being reviewed and where a change in legislation is indicated it will be undertaken.

7. Your committee is equally concerned about the continued growth in the Public Service. The number of continuing employees on strength on September 30, 1975 was 305,470. The number of planned continuing employees on March 31, 1976 was 322,507. For 1976-77 authority is requested for a total of 349,345 man-years, which is an increase of 4,007 man-years or 1.3 per cent. This modest net-growth in man-years was achieved by reducing staff in many departments to compensate for increases considered to be essential, chiefly in four departments, Post Office, National Revenue, Manpower and Immigration (including the Unemployment Insurance Commission) and Solicitor-General.

8. Three other major subjects of concern were discussed with the President of the Treasury Board and his officials.

(a) The recommendation that the annual increase in federal government expenditures should not exceed the annual increase in the Gross National Product has been repeatedly made by this committee. The Minister pointed out that if the transfer payment for the stabilization of the price of oil, an amount of $1,410 million (Oil Compensation Payments) was excluded from the Main Estimates 1976-77, the increase for the year would be almost exactly the same as the anticipated increase in the Gross National Product. The effect of many actions taken to slow the accelerating rate of federal expenditures should be more evident next year. The committee was assured that the anticipated over-all increase in 1977-78 should be substantially lower than 16 per cent.

(b) On many occasions in the past your committee has expressed dissatisfaction with the continuation of the practice of providing authority through the Appropriation Act which negates the provision of the Financial Administration Act that spending authority should lapse at year-end. Officials of the Treasury Board told the committee that the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) is the only remaining significant expenditure program for which such authority is given. Improved planning and management of CIDA programs has reduced the accumulated amount for which prior expenditure authority existed. It is expected that this 'aid pipeline' will be exhausted this year. Future planning for CIDA will be based more reliably on cash flow needs and appropriations will be made accordingly. Other smaller non-lapsing expenditure authorities include the National Capital Fund and the purchase accounts of the museums. The total unliquidated expenditure authority for these is in the order of a very few millions. Non-lapsing authority was most frequently related to loan programs, particularly loans to Crown corporations. To promote realistic planning there has been concerted action by the Treasury Board to cut out this type of loan provision.

(c) The Treasury Board plans to include in the Blue Book of Estimates for the fiscal year 1977-78 a more informative presentation of non-budgetary expenditures. Loans to all Crown corporations will be shown. The present practice is to show only those loans for which other authorization does not exist. This change reflects a concern which the committee has expressed many times in the past.

9. In comparing the Main Estimates for 1976-77 with the final authorization shown for 1975-76, some of the major increases are as follows:

Increases in Statutory Items	($ in millions)
Public Debt	875.
Unemployment Insurance Contributions	810.
Old Age Security Payments	377.
Hospital Insurance Contributions	325.
Canada Assistance Plan Payments	172.
Fiscal Transfer Payments	169.
Medical Care Contributions	160.
Payments in connection with the
Two-Price Wheat Program	105.

Increases in Items to be Voted	($ in millions)	Increases in Non-Budgetary Items	($ in millions)
Defence Services	395.
Post Office	204.	Energy Mines and Resources	89.
Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation	89.
Veterans Affairs	88.	Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation	60.
Royal Canadian Mounted Police	65.
Northern Affairs	57.		Respectfully submitted.
Statistics Canada	53.
Marine Transportation Program	53.
Air Transportation Program	51.		H. Sparrow,
Surface Transportation Program	42.		Deputy Chairman.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, June 8, 1976

The Senate met at 8 p.m., Honourable Maurice Bourget, P.C., Speaker pro tem, in the Chair.

Prayers.

THE LATE HON. W. ROSS MACDONALD, P.C.,

TRIBUTES

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, since we were last assembled here one of our former colleagues, the Honourable W. Ross Macdonald, died at his home in Brantford. The date of his death was May 28 last.

Senator Macdonald was in his eighty-fifth year, and it would be difficult to think of another person who devoted himself so exclusively to the affairs of the public in such a devoted way as did Ross Macdonald throughout his many years in public life. He had a distinguished career, first in the armed forces in World War I, during which he was wounded, and then as a lawyer in Brantford, where he practised as a member of the Bar of the Province of Ontario. At a subsequent time in his career he became Solicitor General of Canada. This is an ambition that is worthy of a good lawyer, and Ross Macdonald was a good lawyer. He was 18 years in the House of Commons, having been elected to that body in 1935. He was Speaker of the House of Commons from 1949 to 1953, and 23 years ago this week he was appointed to this chamber.

Ross Macdonald came to the Senate as Leader of the Government. His was not an easy task, and he not only carried it off but he carried it off with distinction. He was Leader of the Opposition in this house from 1957 to 1963, and again became Leader of the Government in 1963, which office he retained until his resignation from the Cabinet in 1964. He resigned from the Senate on his birthday, which was Christmas, in 1967, and the following year he was appointed Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, a post in which he served, again with his customary distinction, for six years.

I cannot really speak about the fine career of Ross Macdonald in the public service of this country without mentioning his devoted wife, Muriel, who died many years ago but after he had become leader in this house. His two daughters have supported him throughout the years since then.

Ross Macdonald, as I am sure all who knew him will agree, was a great gentleman. When Senator Aseltine was leading this house, he did not have an easy time for many reasons. One of his great problems was that there was an overwhelming Opposition, but he never had a moment's worry and he said this often about Ross Macdonald's threatening him with the great majority of the Senate on the Opposition side in those days. Senator Macdonald understood the problems which Senator Aseltine faced; he understood the difficulties of the government leader in this house. I think all of us who were here during those days will agree that Ross Macdonald performed with a balanced judgment and, indeed, with the instincts of a very gentle man.

The Honourable W. Ross Macdonald had a fine career in the public service of his country, and it seems to me to be highly appropriate that this chamber, in which he spent so many years with such distinction, should mark his passing with sorrow.

Hon. David J. Walker: Honourable senators, on behalf of my leader and on behalf of the Opposition, may I say a word of tribute, which I am sure is the tribute of all of us, on the passing of Ross Macdonald. I knew him for 45 years. I remember an occasion when he shared with me words of real wisdom. They were "Lose your temper, lose your case." This was at a time when we were acting for very hostile branches of a family; I was acting for one and he for the other. We sat in a middle room, with one branch of the family in a room to one side, and the other branch in another room on the other side. They wouldn't talk to each other; they hated each other. We worked all day, and always good-naturedly. It was a great lesson for me, and we finally got the problems ironed out. Ross could always iron things out. He was a kindly, erudite and sensible man.

He was a really outstanding lawyer before he ever went into politics, and I knew him in the days when he was such a good lawyer. His career could not have been more brilliant, as Senator Connolly has pointed out, in the House of Commons where he became Speaker. Following that he was appointed Leader of the Government in the Senate. He was a very good leader, as so many will well remember, particularly Senator Croll and Senator Hayden. He had that smooth way of making everything go beautifully. It was a great lesson to many of us just to be able to watch him operate.

Then he became tired and fretful. His wife had died and he was no longer leader in the Senate. He went home to Brantford. Senator Connolly arranged a dinner party for him, which we were all to attend, but he was not going to be there. It was nothing against you, Senator Connolly; he was so depressed. However, we finally got him up here, and Senator Connolly organized the greatest dinner we have ever had in the Senate. I remember it well. Ross Macdonald attended, and became cheered again. The following morning Senator Connolly arranged a meeting with the Prime Minister, the Right Honourable Lester B. Pearson. Senator Macdonald was there, and he emerged as Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Ontario. He had had no intimation of that appointment; no one had ever mentioned it to him before. I believe it was hatched up during that visit. It is odd how things sometimes work out. Ross Macdonald became one of the most distinguished lieutenant governors.

I remember what a great help he was to me in my first election in Rosedale. Two of his children lived in my riding. One of them, Molly, was married to Doug Haldenby, now a famous architect but then an officer in the 48th Highlanders and, for me, a subdivision captain. Ross gave the couple his blessing and said he would not mind if they voted Tory that time. He was very broadminded, you know, to allow them to vote for me.

It is sad to know that Ross Macdonald has passed on. However, we are certain that wherever he is right now he will carry on in just the way he did during his lifetime.

A week ago I was at Wilfrid Laurier University. Of course, that doesn't sound very Tory. Ross was the chancellor of that university up until very recently. It was an inspiration to see and hear 4,000 people pay their tribute to him. I would only hope that all of us will endeavour to emulate him. If we can pass away with half the good will that he had, we shall all be very fortunate. Ross Macdonald was a great man.

● (2010)

Hon. David A. Croll: Honourable senators, I associate myself with the words of Senator Connolly and Senator Walker. Senator Ross Macdonald and I shared a special friendship over a period of 50 years. I participated in each of the parliamentary elections in which he participated. We served together in the House of Commons. He was very active when we were drafting the veterans' charter. He had been seriously wounded in the First World War and he always looked out for the veterans. The aged and the handicapped were also of special concern to him.

As a Speaker, he was outstanding. Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent said of him that no speaker had been greater and few had been his peer.

He came to the Senate in 1953 and served until 1967. We must not forget that he was responsible for redirecting the energies of the Senate into an investigatory role, which we have followed in many fields. He later served as Lieutenant Governor of Ontario. A gentle and amiable man, graceful and warm. I recall a Cabinet colleague once describing him as being a charming and comfortable colleague.

Ross Macdonald was a well-rounded Canadian who delighted in service to his country. Eighty-four years—soldier, lawyer, Member of Parliament, Speaker of the House of Commons, Senator, Leader of the Government in the Senate, Lieutenant Governor. His was a full life. None of it was wasted, and we are thankful for it.

We extend to his family our condolences, and our appreciation of having shared with them part of his life.

REGULATIONS AND OTHER STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS

STANDING JOINT COMMITTEE—CHANGE IN COMMONS MEMBERSHIP

The Hon. the Speaker *pro tem informed the Senate that messages had been received from the House of Commons to acquaint the Senate that the name of Mr. Laprise had been substituted for that of Mr. Allard and that the name of Mr. Allard had been substituted for that of Mr. Laprise on the list of members appointed to serve on the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments.

SENATE AND HOUSE OF COMMONS ACT SUPPLEMENTARY RETIREMENT BENEFITS ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker *pro tem informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-81, to amend the Senate and House of Commons Act and the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act with respect to the escalation of certain payments thereunder.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate, moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Langlois tabled:

Report of the Postmaster General respecting Olympic coins for the period ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to sections 13(2) and 13(3) of the Olympic (1976) Act, Chapter 31, Statutes of Canada, 1973-74.

Copies of letters, dated May 12, 1976, from the Secretary of State of Canada to the ten provincial Ministers of Education respecting the financing of post-secondary education under the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act, 1972.

Supplementary Estimates (A) for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1977.

Report on the operations of the Exchange Fund Account, together with the Auditor General's report on the audit of the Account, for the year ended December 31, 1975, pursuant to sections 17 and 18(2) of the Currency and Exchange Act, Chapter C-39, R.S.C., 1970.

Report relating to the administration of the Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 41(2) of the said Act, Chapter F-5, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of Order in Council P.C. 1976-1151, dated May 18, 1976, amending Part I of the Schedule to the Hazardous Products Act, pursuant to section 8(3) of the said Act, Chapter H-3, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of Report, dated April 1, 1976, of the Task Force on Polychlorinated Biphenyls to the Environmental Contaminants Committee of Environment Canada and Health and Welfare Canada entitled "Background to the Regulation of Polychlorinated Biphenyls (PCB) in Canada" (English), together with a Summary (English and French).

THE ESTIMATES

SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES (A) REFERRED TO NATIONAL FINANCE COMMITTEE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(e), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance be authorized to examine and report upon the expenditures set out in the supplementary estimates (A) laid before Parliament for the fiscal year ending the 31st March, 1977.

Motion agreed to.

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce have power to sit while the Senate is sitting tomorrow, June 9, 1976, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

Motion agreed to.

PROVINCE OF NOVA SCOTIA

DESTRUCTION OF FORESTS AND RESIDENTIAL PROPERTY BY FIRE

Senator Graham: Honourable senators, before the Orders of the Day are called, with leave I should like to draw a serious situation to the attention of the Senate.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Graham: Honourable senators, I want to draw to the attention of the Senate the unfortunate circumstances surrounding the tragic forest fire which destroyed church and residential property in the small village of Main-à-Dieu on Cape Breton Island over the weekend. I personally visited the site yesterday, discussed the matter with officials in the office of the Minister of Urban Affairs, and last night met with the provincial ministers of housing and health, the County Warden of the County of Cape Breton, as well as residents of the affected area.

● (2020)

At last count, 18 homes were destroyed, along with a number of trailers, motor vehicles and fishing boats. Affected residents escaped only with the clothes on their backs. As well, the community lost its historic Catholic church and Glebe House. The church, of magnificent Gothic architecture, was built on the shores of Main-à-Dieu in 1885, and for almost a century its tall white steeple was used as a landmark for returning village fishermen. Most of the private dwellings that were destroyed were located on the fringe of a wooded area along the highway at the outer section of the village. Fortunately, there was no loss of life.

Temperatures in Cape Breton during the weekend were in their usual high eighties, and the flames were driven by unusually high winds. Hundreds of firemen were at the scene, and they were aided by militiamen as well as provincial lands and forests employees. At one time it was estimated that 2,000 volunteers fought the blaze.

[Senator Langlois.]

As a matter of interest, another nearby major fire came within five miles of the town of Louisburg, forcing the temporary closure of Fortress Louisburg as a precautionary measure.

There were other forest fires in Nova Scotia on the weekend, and in all some 33,000 acres of woodland were destroyed. Rain showers yesterday helped to contain all fires. It should be pointed out that the origin of these fires is not yet known, but the provincial Minister of Lands and Forests has promised a complete investigation.

Officials of both CMHC and the Nova Scotia Housing Commission visited the site immediately after the disaster. All individuals who lost their homes are now safely housed with friends and neighbours, thanks to the warm hospitality and community spirit, which, as the senior senator for Cape Breton, the Honourable John M. Macdonald, and others will attest, is always prevalent and available to natives on and visitors to Cape Breton Island. All levels of government are now personally interviewing the families involved to determine their needs in terms of rental or ownership, size of home needed, financial status, and other factors.

I can assure honourable senators that both CMHC and the Nova Scotia Housing Commission are committed to speedy action, eliminating or totally bypassing red tape, getting the families housed and working out the details later. Both levels of government are reviewing all of their programs at the present time to attempt to adapt them to the situation at hand. I should report that several options are being considered, including a rapid program of new construction and the transfer of partially built manufactured homes from nearby areas.

I am confident that the spirit of cooperation shown by CMHC, the Nova Scotia Housing Commission, the municipality of the County of Cape Breton and many individual citizens and agencies, will result in these unfortunate individuals being comfortably housed in a very short period of time.

I would ask the Leader of the Government in the Senate, through the deputy leader, to urge upon his Cabinet colleagues immediate and sympathetic cooperation with respect to any requests for special assistance which may come before the Government of Canada.

Senator Macdonald: Honourable senators, I should like to associate myself with the remarks of Senator Graham and hope that speedy action will be taken to assist these good people. I suppose most people have never heard of the village of Main-à-Dieu. However, it is most unusual that a forest fire would come that close to a village. We have forest fires elsewhere in Nova Scotia but it is most unusual for homes to be destroyed by them. The people of this village are good people. They are what we call God-fearing people.

An Hon. Senator: Scotch.

Senator Macdonald: Not Scotch, French people. They have always got along well. They are a happy, self-reliant people. This has been a disaster to them. I do hope that the various governments and agencies will be able to assist them, and, as Senator Graham said, without all the red tape that is usually involved in these circumstances.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I am sure we are all indebted to our colleagues for having brought to our attention the circumstances of this disastrous fire which occurred recently and struck the hard-working population of Main-à-Dieu in Cape Breton, although we have had some coverage of this tragedy through the media. I shall be pleased to pass the message which has been conveyed to us on to my leader as soon as he returns to Ottawa sometime this week. I hope every consideration will be given to the request which was made of the government this evening.

PROVINCE OF SASKATCHEWAN

SAFETY OF GARDINER DAM—QUESTION

Senator Greene: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Leader of the Government in the Senate. In light of the great disaster in Idaho caused by the failure of the earth-filled dam, and in light of the fact that Canada has one of the largest earth-filled dams in the world, that being the Gardiner Dam, could the leader inform this house, and through us the public of Canada, what steps are being taken by the government to ensure that the Gardiner Dam is safe, and that the pent-up waters of Diefenbaker Lake are being held back by the Gardiner Dam and will not wreak similar havoc in the lands abutting that great earth-filled dam?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I thank Senator Greene for having brought to our attention what happened recently in Idaho. I should like to comment, regarding the expertise of Canada in building earth dams, that another dam, which is also a tremendous earth dam, was built in recent years on the Outardes River in the province of Quebec.

I shall have to take the honourable senator's question as notice. I do not know that Canada's expertise in this regard would be welcomed by our neighbours to the south, but I am sure that the Government of Canada and our various provincial governments would be pleased to provide any information in this respect that may be required by our American neighbours.

ENERGY

STATEMENT OF POLICY RE OIL AND GAS—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from Thursday, May 27, the debate on the inquiry of Senator Perrault calling the attention of the Senate to the Statement of Policy, Proposed Petroleum and Natural Gas Act and New Canada Oil and Gas Land Regulations, dated May 1976, tabled in the Senate on May 20, 1976.

Hon. Orville H. Phillips: Honourable senators, the Leader of the Government in the Senate, in initiating this inquiry on energy matters, has opened up a broad field for discussion. I am pleased to congratulate him on his initiative, and at the same time I would inform him that we in the Opposition have nominated his remarks for the Governor General's award for fiction. The second paragraph alone should merit the award. It would be described by literary critics as a masterpiece in creative imagination.

I have reviewed the government's action on energy matters and I find it difficult to discover any effective initiative that the government has taken on energy matters. If there were any significant consultations, they were certainly not with Parliament. Obviously, it is the attitude of this government that the federal Parliament is not interested in energy matters.

● (2030)

Surely Senator Perrault does not believe that Canadian citizens have not been unduly disturbed by the change in the oil prices? Many people believe that our so-called energy crisis began with the increase in oil prices in 1973. This is not the case, however. We had a great deal of warning, first, when the OPEC countries began demanding a greater share of the profits from the sale of oil produced in their countries, and secondly, when those countries began demanding a share in the oil companies operating within their territories. The warnings, honourable senators, were as obvious as those of a thunderstorm on the Prairies in July or August, yet the Canadian government continued to ignore them.

A former Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources—admittedly a rather "green" one—developed the so-called "Colorado doctrine"; that is, that we had enough oil and natural gas to last us for our lifetime, and the government continued to maintain this attitude.

A very few years ago the Prime Minister of this country was complaining to the President of the United States that that country was not acting as a very good neighbour in that they did not purchase enough crude oil from Canada. Today the situation has changed. We are reducing our sales of crude oil to the United States, and the Americans are referring to us as "the Arabs of the North."

Senator Perrault's remarks were divided into three distinct categories: first, the objective of self-reliance; secondly, a series of specific energy targets; and thirdly, nine policy elements. I am intrigued, honourable senators, by the fact that the government, in dealing with these three categories, used the word "strategy" rather than "policy." Perhaps this is due to the fact that this government has an aversion to establishing a definite policy on anything. In the Maritimes we say, "The wind changes with the tide." In Ottawa the policy changes with the particular mood of the day.

The first target of the government is to move domestic oil prices toward international levels. I believe this policy to be unnecessary. The government policy of increased oil prices has only one objective, and that is increased revenue. Later on in my remarks I shall have more to say about the government's policy of obtaining increased revenues by increasing oil prices.

It is unfortunate that the government has failed to recognize that it is the rate of return on investment, not the price of oil, that encourages oil exploration. Oil companies, honourable senators, are no different from banks, mortgage companies or labour unions. All of these seek a return for their labour and investment.

The objective of reducing energy consumption in Canada may be a very worthwhile one. However, I believe the term should refer to a reduction in the use of gas and oil. It is impossible to reduce energy consumption without lowering our standard of living. Very few housewives would be willing to dispense with their electric stoves and revert to wood or coal-burning ones. Certainly very few of us are willing to walk up five flights of stairs instead of using the elevator. It is interesting to note that the federal government is the worst offender with respect to the excess consumption of energy. All you have to do is look at the various office buildings in Ottawa that remain lighted 24 hours a day.

While I am mentioning energy conservation, I should point out that various provinces export a great deal of energy. Quebec exports a large amount of energy to the United States, and I believe New Brunswick does the same, yet the Maritime provinces are short of electrical power.

During the past week the present Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources made certain statements at Chatham, Massachusetts, indicating that the federal government would move into the field of hydroelectric power generation. I do not have full details of this—all I know about it is what I have heard on radio news broadcasts—but I would like to say that there seems to be something strange or odd about our Ministers of Energy, Mines and Resources who, when they have a statement to make, must go south of the border to do so. Surely, honourable senators, they can make their statements in Canada.

The government proposes to reduce our dependence on imported oil to a level of approximately 800,000 barrels a day, yet last year we granted 175 permits for the export of oil east of the Ottawa Valley line. The total amount of oil exported east of the Ottawa Valley line was 24.5 million barrels. Most of this went to the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, where it was sold to foreign fishing vessels which, in turn, competed with our fishing vessels on the Atlantic coast.

Three years ago the Government of the United States set the year 1980 as their target for self-reliance in the field of oil consumption. Three years later we in Canada are setting the year 1985 as the target. Honourable senators, this government only reaches its objective in one area, and that is higher taxation. Therefore, I predict that we will more likely have reached the year 1995 before we can depend totally upon oil produced within this country.

The fourth target outlined by Senator Perrault is that of maintaining our self-reliance in natural gas until we can use the natural gas from northern Canada. We must bear in mind, honourable senators, that as yet no method has been developed to bring the gas in northern Canada to southern Canada, where it is so urgently needed and can be utilized. The Berger inquiry will not report for several months and, if the usual pattern is followed, it will be at least two years before the government completes its study of the Berger report. After that a pipeline, or some other method, must be used to bring the natural gas to southern Canada.

It is essential that we achieve the objective of doubling exploration and development activities in Canada over the next three years.

● (2040)

Last year $332 million was spent on the development of frontier resources. This amount is less in real terms than the expenditure in 1972. Canada cannot afford to waste time while other countries are expanding their exploration activities. We must face the fact that it is far more profitable for Canadian oil companies to explore for and to bring into production oil fields in foreign countries than it is to do so in Canada. We have the ridiculous situation of Canadian oil companies bringing into production oil wells in the North Sea, and the unfortunate migration of Canadian drilling companies to the United States. Canadian companies have moved to foreign countries for one reason only—it is more profitable to operate in those countries.

[Senator Phillips.]

In addition, oil companies drilling in other countries do so under very clear and concise regulations. They know that the regulations in effect when a drilling is commenced will be in effect when the drilling is finished; and that when oil is brought into production the same regulations will be in effect. In Canada we change our regulations, not by act of Parliament but by order in council.

Senator Perrault stated it will be necessary for us to look at alternative energy sources for the long-term future. In Canada, a country rich in uranium, the most logical alternative would be nuclear energy. Despite the large expenditures we have made on Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, we satisfy a very small percentage of our energy requirements by nuclear means. In fact, honourable senators, it amounts to less than one per cent.

In its brochure, Atomic Energy of Canada Limited shows pictures of nuclear plants installed in Korea and Japan. However, in Canada we can boast of very little success in the production of nuclear energy. This is partly due to the fact that although the federal government has the authority for conducting research and development in the field of nuclear energy, it passes the responsibility for production to the provinces. When a nuclear plant is proposed, the environmentalists scream and proceed to organize a protest movement against its construction. The fears and protests are due to the fact that Atomic Energy of Canada Limited has not assured the Canadian public that it has achieved a safe method of disposing of nuclear waste.

The State of California, in its election primary, places a number of questions on the ballot. One of those questions this year concerns the production of nuclear energy. An advertising program was carried out on TV and radio, and in the newspapers, in the state, and the citizens have had the opportunity to consider the pros and cons before voting on the subject. I am not advocating a plebiscite in Canada, honourable senators, because I do not think the decision should be made by, or based on, a plebiscite; it should be made by those who are experts and qualified to make such a decision.

The American Atlantic Council last week produced a report in which they urged the United States to turn to greater production of nuclear energy. I can recall being a member of the Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group when it visited Oak Ridge. At that time we were assured that about 75 per cent of the energy requirements of the United States would be provided by nuclear power. The United States has not achieved that objective, and we in Canada are lagging still further behind. I would like to see Atomic Energy of Canada Limited introduce an educational program on nuclear energy to allay the fears of those environmentalists who raise protests, and I hope that the government will give greater consideration to this energy source in the future.

Earlier in my remarks, honourable senators, I said that the federal government was happy to have increased oil prices. It is most unfortunate that at a time when we should be fighting inflation the federal government should take unilateral action to increase oil prices. This ravenous, greedy government views oil prices as a desirable source of tax revenue. The increased oil prices came about at a time when the members of OPEC refused to increase their prices because they recognized the effects on inflation. Probably we can find a desert nomad who could give a lesson in economics to the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance. The consumer in Canada has been skewered like so many pieces of meat, green peppers, tomatoes in preparation for a shishkabob, but before it can be tasted the Prime Minister turns to him and says, "We want increased fuel prices before we can complete the barbecue."

The increase of $1.75 per barrel for crude oil will cost the Canadian consumer $1.5 billion per year, and will add 2.5 points to our rate of inflation. The federal government will receive 27 per cent of the $1.75. Honourable senators, 27 per cent of that increase on every barrel of oil sold in Canada is a lot of revenue to be wasted. When we combine this with the excise tax of 10 cents a gallon, plus the federal sales tax of 3.9 cents per gallon, we find that the federal government gets 15½ cents on every gallon of gasoline sold in Canada. The service station operator, in turn, gets 7.9 cents per gallon. I hope that the consumers of Canada will wake up and begin to realize that they are paying Mr. Trudeau twice as much as they are paying the service station operator. Recently some Liberals have suggested that the provinces should remove their tax on gasoline. Most provinces have a limited tax base, and they need the tax on gasoline for their road construction and other programs within the provinces. I do not intend to go further into that argument, except to say that I would be perfectly happy if both the federal government and the provincial governments vacated this particular tax field.

● (2050)

As a result of the increase in oil prices, the consumers in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island will be extremely hard hit in the cost of their electricity. During 1975 the price of electricity increased by 80 per cent in Nova Scotia, and by an even greater amount in Prince Edward Island. The new increase will add an additional 20 per cent to these costs. Several years ago the Atlantic provinces approached the federal government and proposed the construction of the Fundy tidal project. A number of feasibility studies were carried out on this project, and the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources rejected the idea. They said that the cost of electricity would be too high. The Colorado doctrine prevailed; oil was plentiful and cheap. They said, "Use oil to generate electricity." Today the Atlantic provinces are paying the price for the error made by the federal government, and the federal government refuses any responsibility in this regard.

The recent announcement of new regulations concerning exploration permits and leases will not accomplish a great deal, except that they will create confusion, but that is not unusual for this government. The emphasis placed on government participation and supervision reflects the Prime Minister's ambition of remodeling our economy. Again we see the government requesting increased discretionary powers with no explanation or reason being given. There is no indication as to who would use the powers—the bureaucrats or cabinet ministers. Oil executives are very efficient people, honourable senators, and I cannot imagine their wishing to deal with either one of the two evils mentioned.

The new strategy suggests that oil exploration off the Nova Scotia shelf and the Grand Banks will increase threefold. I am curious to know how this will happen. I have read and studied the strategy, and can find no indication that the new regulations will increase exploration. Shell Oil, two weeks after the proposed regulations were announced, stated that it was reducing its exploration and drilling activities on the Atlantic coast. During the past year Shell turned over a large percentage of its leased areas to Petro-Canada. I wonder what Petro-Canada did with those leases in the past year? What future plans have they for the leases returned by Shell? The regulations contain a number of changes dealing with existing leases. Care must be exercised in these cases. Small oil companies have only one asset for raising funds, and that is acreage with the potential of oil production. If that asset is removed it is impossible to raise the necessary financing. Interference of this nature will affect the small Canadian companies; not the international corporations.

Senator Perrault stated that future gas and oil rights will not be a matter of simply picking the highest bidder. One wonders what criteria will be followed? Personally, I would interpret a high bid as a sincere intention of carrying out exploration. Apparently, in the new economic order a very low tender is considered more desirable than a high one. It is even more frightening when we consider the possibility of political interference. Instead of tendering on oil rights, oil companies could possibly be referred to Liberal bagmen, and I believe honourable senators know how those individuals operate.

The government has emphasized that it is essential to have the oil industry involved in future developments. At the same time, it makes every effort to assume control and direction of their activities. One method is to demand greater information. Do we have anyone in the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources capable of analyzing the information? Certainly the past performance of that department leaves a great deal to be desired. The minister may, on a need-to-know basis, order a permit holder to carry out an exploratory drilling program within the company's permit acreage. Imagine bureaucrats telling an oil company that it is known that there is oil in one corner of its lease, but they want information about the other corner and therefore the company will drill in that corner. This will not reduce our dependency upon imported oil. The government has not explained who will provide the financing for the drilling of the government-directed dry holes. I see a lot of tax money being wasted in this regard.

The new strategy provides preferential treatment for Petro-Canada with respect to exploration lands. The position of an oil company in relation to Petro-Canada has become very precarious. An oil company must obtain a permit and a lease from its competitor, the federal government. It must follow regulations which may be altered in the government's favour at any time, and if oil is brought into production the federal government can, through Petro-Canada, demand a slice of the action. This is like playing ball, with the umpire taking a turn at bat on behalf of Petro-Canada.

• (2100)

It is proposed to establish a new agency to unify resource management. We already have enough agencies and crown corporations interfering in oil production. The establishment of Panarctic Oil, Syncrude, Petro-Canada, and the Canadian Development Corporation has so far failed to produce a single barrel of oil. It will be several years before we can hope for any results.

Honourable senators, does the Prime Minister have that many unemployed friends that we must create a new crown agency for them? We have five agencies, and five too many. We can conclude from Senator Perrault's remarks that the government has failed to develop a policy on gas and oil conservation, or on exploration and development. The matter is too urgent for further delay.

Senator Greene: Would the honourable senator permit a question?

Senator Phillips: Certainly.

Senator Greene: I would preface my question by thanking the honourable senator for the fine recipe he gave us for shishkabob. I commend to him that the next time he speaks on energy he study the energy facts as assiduously as he studied the gourmet cook book. Possibly he could enlighten us greatly by so doing.

The honourable senator complains about the increase in the price of oil. As the greater part of the increase is caused by the demands of his colleague, the Premier of Alberta, do I then take it that the honourable senator infers that the federal government should set oil prices irrespective of the demands and wishes of the Province of Alberta?

Senator Asselin: He didn't say that.

Senator Phillips: Honourable senators, it is too bad that Senator Greene, when Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, did not study the cook book. We would probably have been better off, because he was not very accurate in his study of energy, mines and resources.

In reply to his question, I would point out that I am not the only one to object to increased oil prices. Concerning his suggestion that the federal government use unilateral action, I would like to know what else they used if it were not unilateral action? I do not know of a single province which agreed to their action, and that includes Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

Senator Langlois: If no other honourable senator wishes to speak on this inquiry at this time, I move the adjournment of the debate.

On motion of Senator Langlois, debate adjourned.

THE ESTIMATES

REPORT OF NATIONAL FINANCE COMMITTEE—DEBATE ADJOURNED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on the estimates laid before Parliament for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1977, which was presented on Thursday, May 27, 1976.

[Senator Phillips.]

Hon. Chesley W. Carter: Honourable senators, on behalf of Senator Sparrow, I move the adoption of the report.

In so doing, I should like to mention that the President of the Treasury Board, the Honourable J. Chrétien with his officials, in particular Mr. B. A. MacDonald, Deputy Secretary, Program Branch, appeared before the committee. In my opinion, we had a very interesting and productive session. All questions were answered forthrightly and, I believe, to the satisfaction of the committee members present.

As the report indicates, the total proposed expenditures for the current fiscal year amount to $39,545 million. This amount can be broken down into statutory items amounting to $21,847 million; items to be voted amounting to $16,570 million; and $1,128 million of non-budgetary items for loans, investments, advances and activities of that kind. The expenditures that can be classified as purely budgetary items total $38,417 million. I should point out that the Old Age Security Fund ceased to exist in June 1975, and consequently Old Age Security payments and Guaranteed Income Supplement payments are included for the first time in the estimates for 1976-77.

The total budgetary estimates including OAS and GIS payments for the year ending March 31, 1976, amounted to $34,723 million. To this sum must be added $1,502 million for non-budgetary items, making a grand total of $36,225 million; that is, $36.2 billion as compared with $39.5 billion for the current fiscal year 1976-77. The bulk of the increase of $3.3 billion is accounted for by the increase in expenditures as shown in item 9 of the report. The largest of these increases are:

	($ millions)
Public Debt	875
Unemployment Insurance Contributions	810
Defence Services	395
Old Age Security Payments	377
Hospital Insurance Contributions	325
Post Office	204
Canada Assistance Plan Payments	172
Fiscal Transfer Payments	169
Medical Care Contributions	160

These increases are offset by decreases in the blue book, which give the net increase of $3.3 billion.

The President of the Treasury Board emphasized the fact that 56.9 per cent of the estimates comprise statutory payments which limit the flexibility of the Treasury Board in trying to reduce expenditures. Nevertheless, he informed us that programs are under constant review with a view to controlling expenditures as much as possible.

I feel that I should draw the attention of honourable senators to item 5 of the report, which breaks down under principal headings the budgetary estimates by type of payments. This information was taken from a new table this year in the blue book of estimates which provides information which your committee has often suggested would be a useful and edifying addition to the estimates.

I should like also to draw your attention to three other items contained in the report, which are particularly gratifying to your committee as they have been the subject of representations by your committee to the Treasury Board during their consideration of the estimates over the years. First, there is a possibility that this year the increase in expenditures will not exceed the increase in the gross national product; secondly, a concerted effort is being made to curtail and virtually eliminate the policy of allowing some authorities to have non-lapsing funds; and, thirdly, Treasury Board plans in the fiscal year 1977-78 to show in the blue book of estimates all loans made to Crown corporations.

On motion of Senator Grosart, debate adjourned.

● (2110)

CRIMINAL LAW

INTERIM REPORT OF THE STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE ON LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS—DEBATE CONCLUDED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the inquiry of the Honourable Senator Goldenberg calling the attention of the Senate to the Interim Report of the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs on the subject-matter of the Bill C-83, intitled: "An Act for the better protection of Canadian society against perpetrators of violent and other crime", tabled in the Senate on 13th May, 1976.—(Honourable Senator Smith (Colchester)).

Senator Macdonald: Honourable senators, I have been asked by Senator Smith (Colchester), in whose name this order is standing, to inform the Senate that he is unable to be present in the chamber this week. Consequently, rather than having the order stand in his name, he requests the consent of the Senate to have his adjournment of this debate rescinded and, if the Senate is agreeable and no other senator wishes to speak on this debate, to have the inquiry considered as having been debated.

Senator Goldenberg: Honourable senators, bearing in mind that some 40 amendments have been proposed to Bill C-83 in the other place within the past few days, and the government's announcement that it does not intend to proceed with passage of the bill before the summer recess, I believe we should consider the debate terminated, and I so propose.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: As no other honourable senator wishes to participate in this debate, this inquiry is considered as having been debated.

CHRISTIAN EVANGELICAL CENTRE OF CANADA

ACTION OF DEPARTMENT OF NATIONAL REVENUE—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Eugene A. Forsey rose pursuant to notice:

That he will call the attention of the Senate to the action of the Department of National Revenue in the case of the Christian Evangelical Centre of Canada.

He said: Honourable senators, I can be very brief on this. It is merely that I should like to deliver what I might call an admonition to the government on the subject that I have put down for consideration.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: I apologize for interrupting the honourable senator, but I must inform the Senate that should Senator Forsey speak now—

Some Hon. Senators: No.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: I am in error. I apologize, Senator Forsey.

Senator Forsey: I was a little taken aback by that intervention, honourable senators. I hope it has not thrown me completely out of my stride. I began to wonder whether I had been dreaming and this matter had actually been discussed during the time that I was away and I was now at the end of my tether.

The point I want to raise is simply that some time about the middle of last month the question arose of the cancellation of a proposed demonstration which the Christian Evangelical Centre of Canada had attempted to arrange. To the best of my belief, the Christian Evangelical Centre is an organization of Baptists, the Baptist denomination, and it was proposing to have a peaceful demonstration before the Soviet Embassy and to present a petition to the Soviet Embassy for the release of a Baptist minister in Russia, in the Soviet Union, or for a mitigation of the treatment he is receiving in prison. I am not quite sure which was involved. At any rate, it was proposed to make representations on behalf of this gentleman, who is what is sometimes described as a prisoner of conscience.

It appears that the Christian Evangelical Centre had formerly enjoyed the status of a charitable organization under the Income Tax Act; that it had, by inadvertence, apparently, lost its status—I suppose it had not made the proper returns—it was seeking to have itself reinstated as a charitable organization; and it was warned by the Department of National Revenue that if it proceeded with this demonstration it might risk not getting the reinstatement as a charitable organization which it was seeking.

This raised a certain amount of comment and criticism, and the minister, in the other place, I understand, stated that this was merely a courtesy on the part of his officials, a kindly act, a chivalrous act, as the late Mr. Mackenzie King might have called it, intended to prevent the centre from getting into difficulties which it might wish to avoid and which might otherwise fall upon it.

He pointed out that there are four criteria for a charitable organization, in which, of course, he is perfectly correct, and intimated that a charitable or religious organization was not entitled to go beyond the activities described in those criteria.

I think this raises a very serious question of principle—very serious, particularly in view of the fact that now a great many organizations which are classified, officially, as religious, charitable or educational, feel called upon from time to time to engage in petitions or peaceful demonstrations on behalf of prisoners of conscience, or other people who they feel are being oppressed. This is something that touches, I think, a very large number of such organizations. It could easily touch the churches. Anyone who has read some of the pronouncements of the various churches, and perhaps notably of the Conference of Catholic Bishops, will recognize that the churches, which are, undoubtedly, religious organizations according to the law, are more and more taking up active stands on behalf of prisoners of conscience, on behalf of various disadvantaged groups in society, and are not content simply to alleviate the sufferings of these people by making donations of money to them or simply expressing general views in print about the plight of such people. I think it would be found on examination that a very large number of religious, educational and charitable organizations are engaging in activities of this kind and, to my mind, perfectly properly so.

I suppose the word "charity" can have various meanings. It has come, perhaps, to have a rather narrow meaning nowadays, meaning the doling out of money in a sort of lady bountiful fashion. In fact, its original meaning was certainly much wider than that. Those of us who were brought up on the King James' version of the English Bible will remember that St. Paul's famous chapter, the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians, uses the word "charity" where more modern translations use the word "love," both being perhaps rather inadequate translations of the original Greek.

Charity, I think, had originally, in the English language, a much wider meaning than that of simply doling out funds to people in distress. It seems to me perfectly proper that organizations which are charitable, educational or religious should engage in the kinds of activities which the Christian Evangelical Centre was proposing to engage in, a perfectly peaceful demonstration, a perfectly orderly petition to the Soviet Embassy. I think it is a very serious matter if this sort of activity is to be considered something which will debar the organizations concerned from enjoying the status of charitable, religious or educational organizations under the Income Tax Act. This is a restrictive interpretation of the act which I think is not justified in law and which is certainly not justified, in my judgment, in common sense, or in, shall I say, charity towards these organizations on the part of the Government of Canada.

I therefore should like to appeal very strongly to the Government of Canada to reconsider the attitude which the Department of National Revenue appears to have taken up in this case. Whether it wants to call it a generous, a kindly, a considerate bit of courtesy and advice, chivalry to the organization in question, or whether it doesn't, is immaterial. The effect of the thing is restrictive. I very much hope that the government may be induced by the remonstrances which I think it has received from a number of quarters, and to which I now add my humble contribution, to take a different line altogether and recognize that a charitable or religious organization which engages in this kind of activity is not in fact going beyond the bounds it should properly observe, but is in fact engaging in activities which are a most legitimate part of its proper functions.

• (2120)

On motion of Senator Macdonald, debate adjourned.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS IN GALLERY

DELEGATION OF PARLIAMENTARIANS FROM ICELAND

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, I should like to draw your attention to the fact that we are honoured this evening to have in our gallery, as guests of Madam Speaker, a distinguished delegation of parliamentarians from Iceland. On your behalf, I extend to them a most hearty welcome, and our hope that they will enjoy their stay in Canada.

[Translation]

Honourable senators, I am pleased to draw your attention to the presence in the gallery this evening of a distinguished delegation of parliamentarians from Iceland. On behalf of my colleagues I want to extend to them a most hearty welcome. We all hope that you will find your stay in Canada most enjoyable and interesting.

[English]

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, June 9, 1976

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS ACCOMMODATION IN EAST BLOCK

The Hon. the Speaker tabled:

Copy of a letter dated March 18, 1976, from the Speaker of the House of Commons to the Prime Minister of Canada recommending that the East Block become a Parliamentary building.

She said: Honourable senators will have read in House of Commons Debates of June 1, 1976, an announcement by Mr. Speaker Jerome, of a decision to bring the East Block under the jurisdiction of Parliament. This decision arises from the deliberations of the Advisory Commission on Parliamentary Accommodation. It had been my intention to make a similar statement in the Senate on the same day that the announcement was made in the House of Commons but, since the Senate was adjourned last week, I am making the statement now.

The Advisory Commission on Parliamentary Accommodation was appointed in the spring of 1974 and is chaired by the Honourable Douglas C. Abbott, P.C. It is composed of members of both houses as well as former parliamentarians. The Speakers of both houses are ex officio members of the commission. The Senate is represented on the commission by the Honourable Senator Deschatelets, P.C. and the Honourable Senator McIlraith, P.C.

On December 15, 1975, the Honourable Senator Laird, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, appeared before the commission and provided the commissioners with a very comprehensive and detailed picture of the acute space shortage in the Senate and of the requirements for immediate and future needs. In his presentation before the commission, Senator Laird stressed, forcefully and eloquently, that the primary desire of all senators is to have adequate space allocated for their use in the Centre Block. He also formally requested that consideration be given to the allocation of sufficient additional space for the use of the Senate in the East Block.

I am pleased to report to the Senate that since the presentation of the report by Senator Laird consultation has taken place between the two Speakers, and the question of the availability of the East Block for parliamentarians was subsequently raised by Mr. Speaker Jerome in a letter to the Prime Minister, dated March 18, 1976, a copy of which I have tabled. As stated in the House of Commons on June 1, the Prime Minister, in a letter dated May 15, indicated his agreement with the suggestion, subject to certain reservations, the most significant of which were listed by Mr. Speaker Jerome in his June 1 statement to the House of Commons.

I am sure that all honourable senators will welcome this announcement, and, in conclusion, I might say that when the time comes to allocate space in the East Block consultation will take place between the two Speakers and between officials of both houses. Direction will, of course, be sought beforehand from the Senate Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration.

[Later:]

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, in view of the tabling by Madam Speaker of the letter from the Speaker of the House of Commons to the Prime Minister recommending that the East Block become a parliamentary building, is it the intention of the Leader of the Government or his deputy to ask that these documents be referred to the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration in an endeavour to ensure that the Senate shall at least have a priority in the East Block, which may become a third parliamentary building?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, as I understood the statement made by Madam Speaker a short while ago, this intention was mentioned, namely, that the matter will be referred to the Internal Economy Committee.

Senator Flynn: But my point is that Madam Speaker said that consultations will take place between the Speaker of the House of Commons and the Speaker of the Senate, and it seems to me that we should be prepared in those consultations not to allow ourselves to be deprived, as we have been on previous occasions, of necessary space for senators.

Senator Langlois: I agree with this suggestion.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Langlois tabled:

Report of the number and amount of loans to Indians made under section 70(1) of the Indian Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 70(6) of the said Act, Chapter I-6, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of a Study prepared by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, dated April 12, 1976, entitled "Television Coverage of Parliamentary Proceedings—Technical and Cost Profile".

[Translation]

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

COSTS OF CONSTRUCTION OF TOWER IN TORONTO—QUESTION

Senator Denis: Honourable senators, may I put a question to the Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate?

Senator Langlois: Certainly.

Senator Denis: I should like to know when the decision was made to build the CN tower in Toronto. What was the estimated cost of its construction initially, and what is its present cost?

Senator Asselin: That tower was inaugurated a long time ago.

Senator Denis: Yes, I know, but I should like to know how much it was supposed to cost, and how much it did, in fact, cost.

Senator Langlois: In view of the complexity of the question, and especially of the specific facts—

Senator Flynn: And the answer.

Senator Langlois: In view, as I said, of the complexity of the question and especially of the specific data requested, I shall take the question as notice.

Senator Denis: You will find out at the same time as I will.

● (1410)

[English]

SENATE AND HOUSE OF COMMONS ACT SUPPLEMENTARY RETIREMENT BENEFITS ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Chesley W. Carter moved the second reading of Bill C-81, to amend the Senate and House of Commons Act and the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act with respect to the escalation of certain payments thereunder.

He said: Honourable senators, this is not the most glorious day of my career.

Senator Flynn: Who knows?

Senator Carter: Bill C-81 requires very little explanation because the required explanation is already included in the title of the bill.

To deal a little with the background to Bill C-81, honourable senators will remember that on December 18, 1975, the President of the Treasury Board announced expenditure reductions totalling $1.5 billion for the fiscal year 1976-77. These reductions were part of the government's continuing campaign to bring inflation under control. Included in the list of reductions were measures:

- (1) to terminate certain programs;
- (2) to eliminate the indexation of family allowances;
- (3) to reduce loans to crown corporations; and
- (4) to freeze the salaries of members of the Senate and the House of Commons as well as the salaries of public servants and officers of crown corporations in higher-salaried positions.

The bill now before us relates to the last reduction enumerated—that is, item (4)—and is one of two bills required to enable the expenditure reductions to be effected. The level of pay of the senior executive categories in the public service and in the crown corporations is being held at the same level for one year through administrative action. The purpose of this bill, then, is:

- (1) to defer until the beginning of 1977 the increases in the sessional and expense allowance of members of the Senate and the House of Commons which would have been automatically provided at the end of 1975;

[Senator Langlois.]

- (2) to defer until 1977 the escalation of the extra salaries and allowances payable to ministers, parliamentary secretaries and other members of the Senate and the House of Commons receiving remuneration over and above their sessional allowances; and

- (3) for 1976 to limit to $200 the portion of the monthly increase in the supplementary retirement benefit that is attributable to the 11.3 per cent rise in the benefit index during the 12 months ending September 30, 1975.

According to a recent estimate, the freezing of sessional expense and other allowances will result in savings of $750,000. The significance of this bill lies in the measure of leadership it provides in the battle against inflation—a leadership which, I might say, other legislatures in Canada, labour unions, journalists and broadcasters have been very reluctant to follow.

The amendments to the Senate and House of Commons Act which were passed in the spring of 1975 fixed the sessional allowance at the rate of $24,000 per annum for the period from July 8, 1974, the date of the general election, to December 31, 1975. Thereafter the level of the sessional allowance was to be increased in accordance with annual percentage changes in the average weekly wages and salaries of the industrial composite index in Canada, as determined by Statistics Canada. A similar provision was included in respect of the adjustment of remuneration which certain members, such as the Speakers and ministers, receive for the performance of additional duties, and the corresponding expense allowances.

Subclause 1(1) of the bill amends subsection 34(1) of the Senate and House of Commons Act by continuing the $24,000 level for another year—that is, to December 31, 1976. Subclause 1(2) amends subsection 34(3) of the act, and provides that the new system for adjustment will commence on January 1, 1977. Subclause 1(3) amends subsection 34(5) of the act which, as originally drafted on first reading, was the cause of controversy among certain members of the Opposition and in the news media. As a result, the President of the Privy Council announced on April 29 that an amendment would be introduced which would also freeze the expense allowances for the period January 1, 1976 to January 1, 1977. This was done in the House of Commons committee after second reading of the bill. The new subsection 34(5) of the act postpones until January 1977 the commencement of the new system of adjusting the extra remuneration of members mentioned in the background explanation referred to earlier.

● (1420)

Clause 2 amends the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act. This amendment limits to $200 the monthly increase in pensions payable during 1976, which results from the 11.3 per cent increase in the average consumer price index for each of the 12 months ending in September, 1975 over the corresponding 12 month-period ending in September 1974. In practice this will limit the amount of pension increase payable to some 50 to 100 pensioners, including the former Governor General and several retired federal judges, with the balance being made up largely of retired senior long-service Public Service employees, and officers of the Canadian Armed Forces and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

This amendment could provoke a debate, since it is the first time that the federal government has proposed to withdraw an unconditional statutory right to a portion of such a benefit which is already in payment. While the Department of Justice has advised that it is within Parliament's right to pass legislation of this type, the staff relations implications of the introduction of this principle are such that a prolonged debate would be most unfortunate.

Senator Flynn: What do you mean by that?

Senator Grosart: You were not supposed to read that. That was for your own information only.

Senator Carter: Well, we can have a debate in this house, too, you know. This is second reading.

The effective date of these amendments is December 31, 1975. No increase was made in the amount of the January payments under the Senate and House of Commons Act in respect of sessional allowances or remuneration for additional duties of Members of Parliament. As Bill C-81 did not come into force in January, payment of the full amount of the statutory pension increases has been made for the month of January. Recovery of the amount of these payments in excess of $200 will have to be made from subsequent payments. The same will be true of the expense allowances paid at the increased rates since January 1, 1976.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I am not exactly aware of the reasons Senator Carter was chosen, or offered his services, to sponsor this bill. I thought the motion would have been seconded by Senator Forsey, since he was the first to speak about voluntary restraints.

Senator Forsey: Or Senator Lang.

Senator Flynn: Perhaps Senator Lang, yes. I just want to say now that I find myself provoked into moving the adjournment of the debate because of Senator Carter's references to the last part of the bill concerning the freezing of certain pensions or, at least, controlling the increases in certain pensions to $200 a year. I think it is worth adjourning the debate until tomorrow on at least that aspect of the bill.

Senator Hicks: Honourable senators, is the restriction to $200 a year? It seemed to me, as I read it, that it was a restriction to an increase not exceeding $200 a month.

Senator Flynn: No, no; you should never assume there is anything logical in the government's policy.

On motion of Senator Flynn, debate adjourned.

THE ESTIMATES

REPORT OF NATIONAL FINANCE COMMITTEE—DEBATE ADJOURNED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Carter for the adoption of the report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on the estimates laid before Parliament for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1977.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, we have before us the annual report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on the estimates. It has been before the Senate for some days now so I presume it has been well read. Senator Carter explained it to us yesterday. I do not propose to go through it in a detailed way, but rather to make some general comments on the most important item in the estimates, namely, the fact that once again the projected government expenditures are startlingly increased and are out of all proportion to the ability of the economy to provide the money for them.

The main budget estimates, compared with the main budget estimates of a year ago, show an increase of 19.3 per cent—that is to say, some $6.2 billion. When you compare that with the increases in government expenditures over the last four years, you will see that all of them have been beyond the productive capacity of the Canadian economy to pay. In the last four years the increases in federal government expenditures have been 17.3 per cent, 18.9 per cent, 26.5 per cent, and 19.3 per cent. All of those have been in excess of—and far in excess of—the increase in the GNP or the GNE, whichever one you like to take. They are also far in excess of the increase in the price deflator, or the consumer price index.

Honourable senators will not be surprised to learn that this has happened again, but I suggest the fact that the government has not yet decided to restrain its expenditures is surprising. There is overwhelming evidence that these excesses in government expenditure are a major factor in the problem of inflation. Economists, academics, businessmen, and leaders of the economy have all pointed out, without contradiction, that excessive government expenditure is one of the major causes of inflation.

A second factor, and perhaps more serious, is that excessive government expenditures restrain the productivity of the country, and it is only from that productivity that the money can come to meet those expenditures. This is caused by the steadily increasing encroachment of all governments on the potential of the economy to produce. That increase in government encroachment is well over 40 per cent now, and we do not know where it will end. In spite of the well-known fact that spending in the public sector does not produce productivity to the same extent that spending in the private sector does, nevertheless, this government continues to increase its expenditures. This encroachment by the federal government, I might say, is greater than that of the provincial governments.

At the present time and measured from 1973, the result is that we are some $7 billion below our potential. That is $7 billion lost to Canada. There is no question but that this excessive government expenditure has greatly added to that alarming figure.

Let us consider the last two years during which there have been fantastic increases in federal government expenditure—the 26.5 per cent increase last year, and the 19.3 per cent increase this year. What was the increase in real GNP? The year before last it was 2.8 per cent and last year it was 0.2 per cent. I recognize at once that these figures are not exactly comparative, because one represents a nominal increase, and the other a real increase.

● (1430)

The effect on unemployment has been drastic, and appears to be getting more drastic. It is a fact that, in terms of workers, unemployment in manufacturing in Canada, which is where potential productivity must come from, has actually been lower, time and time again, than it was in 1973. At a time when the population of Canada is increasing, there are less people employed in manufacturing than in 1973. These are facts that appear to be ignored completely in government planning. In the committee, and in the numerous press releases that we receive from the government, we are given excuses and explanations. Not one of them, in my opinion, stands up to the facts. We have heard the Leader of the Government and Cabinet ministers say, over and over again, "It is not really our fault; the provinces are the ones who are escalating their expenditures." The fact is that in the last fiscal year federal government expenditures increased by 16 per cent, and those of all provincial governments increased by only 11 per cent, so that old excuse is no longer available to those who would apologize for and defend these excessive expenditures.

We have had the oil equalization payments. It is quite true that oil equalization payments have added, in a book-keeping sense, to the total expenditures of the government, but it does not appear to have occurred to anyone that there is another way to equalize oil prices to consumers across Canada. As Senator Phillips said yesterday, the only thing that ever occurs to this government is to raise taxes. Why were not some of the available alternatives adopted? I do not know, and there certainly has never been any explanation.

Another excuse that we get—it is mentioned in the committee's report, although not as an excuse because the report is a statement of fact—is that slightly more than 56 per cent of the budgetary items in the main estimates are statutory. That, in the past, has been very useful statistically, because it broke down the total expenditures of the federal government into statutory items—that is, items which are required to be paid under existing statutes—into new votes, which amount to something like 30 per cent of the total; and then, finally, into the non-budgetary items, such as loans, investments and advances. This has been useful statistically, but in the last few years the government has started to use it as an excuse to say, "We cannot do anything about them; these are statutory requirements." Of course they can do something about them. It is no excuse whatever to say, because a statute that is 10, 20 or 30 years old requires certain expenditures to be made, that we cannot look at the statute and amend it. Surely the job of the government is to look at all causes of expenditures and ask, "Can we save?"

It is true that Mr. Chrétien, the President of the Treasury Board, did say that they are now doing this. But this announcement was made as if it were something novel; it was to the effect that this year the government is, for the first time, going to look at all the expenditures made under the various statutes and ask themselves, "Do we have to spend this money?" However, I must say there is evidence that the government is already doing this.

The final excuse, and one that used to be made quite frequently by the Leader of the Government, was, "Where do we cut? There is no place we can cut. We are down to the bone; we have looked at everything." Fortunately, or unfortunately, this excuse has been blown up, because when the pressure was on—last December, for example—the President of the Treasury Board announced, "Oh, yes, we have found that we can cut $1.5 billion." That is a substantial cut, but it was two or three days before it got through to the public, as a result of the remarks of various commentators, that this was not a cut at all in current expenditures, but a cut in spending intentions. The government had intended to spend another $1.5 billion, and would have spent it had there not been pressure from the public and other quarters to do something about it. About half of that sum was to be spent on the expansion of existing programs, and the other half on new programs.

We have other evidence that when the pressure is on—and I hope it will continue to be on this government—they can find places to cut. A good example is the unemployment insurance fund. The Economic Council of Canada has pointed out that at least 10 per cent of unemployment is a direct result of the disincentives to work created by the present unemployment insurance regulations. Again it is true that the government has announced plans for, and has moved in the direction of, tightening up some of the waste and loss in this area. I would suggest that there is a long way to go before the unemployment insurance fund, a good thing in itself, ceases to be a major disincentive to some Canadians to work. Their work adds to the productivity, and it is only from productivity that unemployment insurance benefits can be paid—unless we continue to borrow money and run up the public debt, as we are doing.

I think there is a better answer than the excuses and explanations we are continually given. The answer, I would suggest, honourable senators, is for the government to suit their actions to their words. They should restrain their rhetoric for a while, and start to do something positive. To what rhetoric do I refer? I refer to a clear statement of government policy. Those who have attended the meetings of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance will recall that it is the stated policy of this government to contain increases in federal government expenditures at or below the level of the increase in the GNP. That was a clear statement of policy two years ago, and it was made again last year. In spite of this, nothing has been done to make the policy a reality. This year again the increase in government expenditures will be at least double, or very close to double, the increase in the GNP. I say that as an approximate figure, because we do not know what the GNP will be for the current fiscal year.

One of the aspects of inflation discovered only in this last round of it is that among its major ingredients is the expectation of inflation. It is the expectation of inflation that causes great increases in wage settlements. In Canada today our average wage is 5 per cent higher than the average wage in the United States, in spite of the fact that our productivity per worker is running consistently behind the productivity per worker in the United States. I am not against workers receiving a fair wage, a higher wage, or an adequate wage; but I am concerned about the influence of government spending on creating this expectation, on maintaining it, and, therefore, on forcing labour and others, a year in advance—even two years, and sometimes three years, in advance—to insist on wage settlements that will meet the anticipated increase in the cost of living, because the government itself continues to outstrip everyone else in its increased demands on the economy. No segment of the whole economy, apart from the government, is increasing its demands at the rate of 19 per cent.

● (1440)

The federal government used to say, "Well, we are giving leadership to the provinces". But at the moment, honourable senators, the leadership they are giving to the provinces is leadership of the wrong kind. I say that because the evidence is quite clear that the governments of the provinces have tackled this problem, and have done more than just hand out rhetoric. The governments of the provinces, as I mentioned a moment ago, have been able to contain the rate of increase in their expenditures to about the level of the inflation rate, whereas the federal government has achieved about twice that rate. I have said that these are explanations and excuses—and, of course, they are—but, as I have indicated, I do not think any of them will wash with anybody who approaches this problem from the point of view of common sense, or of the danger to the economy from this continuing increase in federal government expenditure, when we have evidence from the government itself that it can do something if it has the will to do it. The evidence is that it does not appear to have the will to do anything but make announcements.

Yesterday Senator Phillips, when speaking on energy policy, made the interesting observation that the government's first approach to the energy problem in 1973 was called "An Energy Policy for Canada." Very recently—this year, in fact—that title was changed. The latest ministerial statement is called "An Energy Strategy for Canada". This is the same type of problem that we are facing in respect of government spending. We have had policies and strategies, and I suggest to the Senate that what we need now is government action. We have no need of further policies and strategies; we need a clear statement by the federal government that they will implement this announced policy of maintaining the rate of increase in federal government expenditures at or below the rate of increase in the gross national product, and that they will do it this year. This would solve problems for everybody. In addition, it would solve the problem created by the expectation of rising inflation rates. The solution lies in the government's own policies. The government simply has to say, "We do not announce this merely for the future; we really mean it. This is the policy of the Government of Canada, and therefore that is all the money that is available".

Honourable senators, it is easy to anticipate the level of growth in GNP. The projections are never more than a percentage of a point or so out. All the government has to say is, "That is our policy, and we are going to implement it". Whatever demands are made, they can say, "Sorry, there is no more money." This is what business does; this is what individuals do. Even charitable organizations have to do it this way. They say quite simply, "We do not have the money, so we cannot give you any." But in such a case what does this government say? It simply says, "We will tax the people to get the money". That is the essence of the problem, honourable senators. I suggest that an easy way for the government to avoid this problem is for them to say, "That is our policy and we will implement it," and then to inform their own departments, suppliers, and demanders, that that is the policy. If they then want to increase their spending, the government simply says, "Sorry, we announced our policy two or three years ago, and this year we are going to implement it; this time we really mean it".

Does anyone think that will happen? I cannot see why not. As I have said before, this is how it is done by business, by individuals, and even by charitable organizations. So why would it not be done this way by government?

Furthermore, honourable senators, I suggest that in this area much can be done by the National Finance Committee. The remarks I have made may appear on the surface to be partisan. I do not intend them to be partisan. It does not matter which government is in power—no matter what its political stripe—if it is in this type of situation, then it has to take steps to correct it. The deliberations and inquiries over the years by the National Finance Committee have generally been non-partisan. We have not engaged in witch-hunts, although in another place there has been some witch-hunting—and probably with some justification, because there are plenty of witches to hunt in that big blue book of main estimates and in the supplementary estimates.

I myself have reached the conclusion that we do not spend enough time in committee study of the main estimates. We have had them before us since February, and we are now bringing in our report. Obviously it is not a matter of calendar time; it is a matter of the time the committee is prepared to spend. I shall not go into detail now as to how that might be done, but I believe that the committee can make a useful contribution in this area that I have been discussing. It has a role to play in the control of government expenditures, particularly insofar as it concerns the increase in government expenditures year by year.

Honourable senators, in spite of the criticisms I have made of policy, I am very much inclined to compliment the Treasury Board, and also its president, the Honourable Mr. Chrétien, first of all for his frankness—which has been greater than that of any other minister I have questioned before. I also compliment him because he has proved to be receptive to ideas, and so has the Treasury Board. The report mentions some of the improvements made in the presentation of the main estimates, and these are a direct result of suggestions made by the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance. There have been several others in addition to those mentioned in the report. So, honourable senators, I believe there is evidence that our National Finance Committee can make a greater contribution. I intend to pursue that somewhat further with the chairman, the deputy chairman, Senator Carter, and others.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Carter: Would the honourable senator clarify a point made in the course of his remarks? I understood him to make a comparison between the rate of increase in the expenditures of provincial governments and the rate of increase in the expenditures of the federal government. We know from the figures available that the provincial expenditures have been rising at a rate which is rather higher than that of the federal government expenditures. But if I understood him correctly, he stated that the increase in expenditures by the provincial governments for this year amounted to approximately 11 per cent while the increase in federal government expenditures was of the order of 16 per cent.

Senator Grosart: Or 19 per cent.

Senator Carter: In calculating these percentages, has he taken into account the fact that for the first time we are now including old age security and guaranteed income supplement payments in the budgetary items? Do they form a part of the 19 per cent?

Senator Grosart: Yes, but of course this is another of these explanations or excuses I referred to. That money was spent. The federal government taxed to obtain that money for the old age security fund. It is still there. It is a mere bookkeeping entry. They have taken that 2 per cent, which is about what it is, and included it in the main estimates. But it still constitutes an element of increase in government spending because it is there.

The same thing can be said of the unemployment insurance fund. The unemployment insurance fund anticipated costs for this year to amount to $1 billion, and they certainly will amount to $700 or $800 million, but these are not in the main estimates at all. These things cancel themselves out.

● (1450)

I am saying that the total anticipated expenditures of the two levels of government are in that position. I say 16 to 19 per cent for the federal increase, because it depends on just what figures are taken. Certainly the base figures to indicate the difference between the federal and provincial expenditure increases are 16 and 11. That is an analysis of their budgets or spending intentions for the year—11 per cent for the provincial and 16 per cent, perhaps 19 per cent, depending on the base, for the federal. If the figures 11 and 16 are selected, they give a reasonable comparison.

Senator Lamontagne: Do these estimates include also the transfer payments to the provinces?

Senator Grosart: Of course. I did not mention that as one of the excuses. The excuse that the federal government transfers some of this money to the provinces is the daddy of them all. It transfers money to individuals; it transfers money every time it pays it out. We get this comparison every now and again, and someone says that the federal government transferred these moneys to the provinces. Of course it did, but it was a federal government decision to raise the taxes to spend that money. It is an entirely different question, if anyone wishes to discuss it, as to whether they should have spent some of that money on transfers. I believe transfers to the provinces run at about 20 per cent. Those comparatives are comparatives in spending by the two levels of government.

Senator Molgat: Would the honourable senator permit a question? Does the federal government budget figure include the oil revenue transfer or subsidy to Eastern provinces?

Senator Grosart: Yes, of course; it amounts to about $1.5 billion this year. As Senator Phillips pointed out yesterday, here again the federal government said it would tax for this purpose. It may be a good purpose. I do not say that all spending by the government is for unnecessary purposes. All I say is that there was a decision of the federal government, for one reason or another, to take this large amount of money, this percentage of money, out of the economy by taxation. That is all I say. We could spend all day going through the items which have been discussed already in committee.

[Senator Grosart.]

Senator Molgat: I have a supplementary question. Is it not correct to say that in this particular case a good deal of the tax is not levied on Canadians, but is, in fact, the export tax, and hence paid by the Americans?

Senator Grosart: That is right. That is quite true, but it will not show in the main estimates as a tax of that nature, of course. It was revenue received and spent.

Hon. Hartland de M. Molson: Honourable senators, I had not intended to speak on this report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance. However, after I had looked at it and thought about it a little, I decided that I do not want this report to be dealt with and adopted without making a few comments which, I may say, will be extraordinarily brief.

In my opinion, the report itself is quite factual, and I have no criticism of the members of the committee for the quality of the report. It is certainly very brief, considering the figures involved. I do wish to say, however, a word about the contents of the report. I think back on the problems created by inflation and the steps taken by the government in an attempt to cope with it, such as the establishment of the anti-inflation program. Looking at it today, one would say that the public generally accepts the steps being taken to offset the high rate of inflation. Business—much maligned business, incidentally—has shown itself as being in favour of this effort to slow down the expectations of inflation. The only disappointing factor, perhaps, is that labour has categorically denied that it has any application to our problem today. In my personal opinion they are wrong, and it is most unfortunate that that large and important segment of the economy is not wholeheartedly with the public, with business and with the government, in support of the medicine needed to cure the problems of inflation.

My own feeling, in looking at the 1976-77 estimates, as brought into focus by the report of the National Finance Committee, is one of great disappointment. I thought that the government, when it started to cope with our number one problem, would undoubtedly set the example and the pace. Since then I have really been discouraged, I could almost say that I do not believe there has been any sincere effort on the part of the government to cut its expenditures. I made this remark earlier, when speaking on the subject of inflation. I believe that when we consider the roll-back in wages, the efforts to control prices and margins and all other elements, and then examine the figures as shown in the Senate committee's report, they cannot be otherwise than disappointing to all of us. I think we would be remiss in the Senate if, in dealing with this report, some of us did not express disappointment in this respect. It is in no sense a political criticism. As far as I am concerned, I do not mind a bit the colour of the government. I believe the government started to cope with inflation and made some very imposing statements and showed a great deal of activity; but it is just terrible to see the record of the government expenditures.

If we refer to paragraph 4 of the report of the committee, which includes a table, we see that the main budgetary estimates for 1976-77 are $6,207 million, or 19.3 per cent, higher than the main budgetary estimates of the year before. Then the paragraph continues:

This increase does compare favourably with the percentage increase of 26.5 per cent requested in the Main Estimates 1975-76 over Main Estimates 1974-75.

We are talking of the crisis inflation of about 15 per cent; we are talking of coping with it; we are talking of wage rate increases limited to 10 per cent. How can we reconcile that with these figures of government expenditure?

The table contained in paragraph 4 of the committee's report indicates that in this fiscal year, 1976-77, the proposed increase is 19.3 per cent. Last year, 1975-76, the increase was 26.5 per cent; the year before that, 1974-75, it was 18.9 per cent; and the year before that, 1973-74, it was 17.3 per cent. Do we honestly wonder that we have inflation? What do those figures mean to us?

A few years ago when we were frightened by the spectre of inflation we used to say that if we could only achieve a quiet rate of inflation of 2 or 3 per cent per year it would be quite acceptable, and we could go on ad infinitum. I do not believe that some economists ever agreed with that. They thought that the ideal would be no inflation factor. But whatever rate is accepted, is it reasonable for the federal government to increase its spending by 17 per cent, by 26 per cent, and then by 19 per cent in three years, and yet tell people that their wages must not increase, prices must be held, margins must be watched, and bank charges and insurance premiums must all be held? How can we have this sort of double standard? Surely the buck stops right here at the federal government level with regard to impact on inflation. I do not think the federal government can pass the buck to the provinces or to the unions, and I do not think they can pass it to business.

● (1500)

The promise of future improvement on the part of the government was encouraging, but it was halfhearted and it did not have the desired effect. People are wondering today why the anti-inflation measures do not seem to have reduced future inflation expectations on the part of the public. I think the primary reason is that the credibility of the government, and with it the credibility of Parliament, has been affected by this lack of leadership. I think it is safe to say that some disappointment has been reflected in recent figures from the Gallup poll. I do not say that government spending has had too much to do with it, but, on the other hand, government spending is a factor in credibility, and credibility must be a factor, surely, in Gallup polls.

In our examination here we should not busy ourselves too much with the actions of provincial governments. It is quite true that their rates of budget increase have also been rapid, but at the moment it looks as though the federal government has taken a quite comfortable lead.

I merely wish to say in closing, honourable senators, that I for one am disappointed in the performance of the Government of Canada in dealing with inflation. I am disappointed that it did not have, if I may use the term, the guts to cut $1 billion or $1.5 billion out of the figures we have in that report.

On motion of Senator Langlois, debate adjourned.

NATIONAL LOTTERY

PROPOSED INCORPORATION OF LOTO-CANADA—ORDER DISCHARGED AND INQUIRY WITHDRAWN

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the inquiry of the Honourable Senator Forsey calling the attention of the Senate to the proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada.—(Honourable Senator Deschatelets, P.C.).

Senator Deschatelets: Honourable senators, is my understanding correct that the Senate has to rise at 3.30 this afternoon?

Senator Langlois: There is an Order of the Senate that on Wednesdays we do adjourn at 3.30 p.m.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I was about to raise a point of order with respect to this particular matter. Since the supplementary estimates (A) referring to this matter were tabled yesterday, it seems to me that the Senate is seized of the same problem on two fronts. Is it now proper to keep this inquiry on the Order Paper? In respect of this particular matter, it would seem more appropriate to wait for the report of the National Finance Committee, because it is open to speculation whether that committee will deal with the matter in the same manner as that in which it has been presented to us by Senator Forsey.

In order to have an orderly debate, I suggest that the inquiry be withdrawn from the Order Paper, and that the matter be discussed when we consider the report of the National Finance Committee on supplementary estimates (A).

Senator Deschatelets: That is pretty well what I had in mind myself, honourable senators. We shall certainly have an opportunity to deal with the matter when we receive the report of the National Finance Committee. I am not sure whether Senator Forsey agrees to the withdrawal of his inquiry.

Senator Forsey: D'accord.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators, that this inquiry be withdrawn?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Order discharged and inquiry withdrawn.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, June 10, 1976

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Langlois tabled:

Report of operations under the Crop Insurance Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1975, pursuant to section 13 of the said Act, Chapter C-36, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of Treaty between Canada and Sweden concerning extradition, dated February 25, 1976.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, June 15, 1976, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Honourable senators, in advising you of the business before the Senate next week, I shall deal first with the committees.

On Tuesday at 2 p.m. there will be an in camera meeting of the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee on conflict of interest. The National Finance Committee will meet also at 2 p.m. to consider further its report on Canada Manpower. The Special Joint Committee on the National Capital Region will meet at 3.30 p.m. and the Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments at 8 p.m. In addition, the Foreign Affairs Committee is expected to meet on Tuesday to complete its consideration of Bill C-20, respecting citizenship. The time of the meeting has not yet been set.

On Wednesday, a meeting of the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee is called for 9.30 a.m. to consider certain briefs submitted on Bill C-58. This meeting will probably continue in the afternoon. The Agriculture Committee will meet at 10 a.m. for further consideration of its report on Kent County, New Brunswick, and the Special Committee on Science Policy has scheduled a meeting for 3.30 p.m.

On Thursday, the National Finance Committee will meet again to consider its report on Canada Manpower. The Health, Welfare and Science Committee will meet at 10 a.m. to consider the feasibility of setting up a special committee to study crime and violence in Canadian society.

Supplementary estimates (A) for the present fiscal year have been referred to the National Finance Committee, and should be dealt with by that committee next week, but the date and time of such consideration have not yet been decided upon. I am informed that the National Finance Committee is endeavouring to arrange a meeting for Wednesday morning to consider supplementary estimates (A), if it is possible for the minister to be in attendance.

It would appear that no legislation will be coming to us from the other place next week. However, with the committee work, the items on the Order Paper and Bills C-20 and C-58 still with us, I think we can anticipate a busy week.

Senator Grosart: I wonder if the Deputy Leader of the Government would consider including in these advance notices also notices of meetings of subcommittees and steering committees? I suggest that because it might have the effect of convincing chairmen and others to give more notice than some give at the present time.

• (1410)

Senator Langlois: I have no objection to accepting this suggestion, which to my mind is a good one.

Motion agreed to.

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce have power to sit while the Senate is sitting on Wednesday next, June 16, 1976, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators have heard the motion. Is there unanimous consent?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

NEWSPAPER ARTICLE—COMMUNICATIONS BETWEEN CANADA AND UNITED STATES—QUESTION

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Leader of the Government in the Senate. It relates to remarks attributed to Senator Davey by the Globe and Mail this morning, referring to the Ambassador of the United States, Mr. Enders, as having made a regrettable intrusion in Canadian domestic affairs. I should like to ask the government leader what state practice is between Canada and the United States in terms of the communication of the positions of each of the two governments to the other, and to the legislative process in those respective countries. I can see, by way of comment—

Senator Flynn: No comment. A question is a question.

Senator Austin: I make it in order that I might ask a further question while I am on my feet.

Senator Grosart: Ask your question.

Senator Austin: I can see that there is an advantage to each of the two countries in having this kind of information—

An Hon. Senator: Order!

Senator Austin: I wonder if the government leader can tell us whether the government thinks it appropriate to its position that a foreign government be able to make representations to people in a legislative process in Parliament in a case where that representation is contrary to the government's domestic policy?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I had but a casual look at the news item in question before I came into the house this afternoon. I would like to take the question as notice. However, I would add that I have been informed it is very likely the Minister for External Affairs will make a statement this afternoon in the other place on this very matter.

Senator Flynn: I rise on a point of order. I suggest the premise of Senator Austin's question is not entirely accurate, because the position of the United States was conveyed to the Senate committee by the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Senator Austin: I would ask the government leader, following Senator Flynn's point, to take into account that particular procedural technique, which I do not believe makes any substantive difference to the first question I asked.

Senator Flynn: The government has already answered your question by doing what it did.

Senator Grosart: I wonder if I might ask a supplementary. If it is not the function of a foreign ambassador in Canada to convey the views of his government to the Government of Canada, what is his function?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I shall take the question put to me this afternoon as notice, and endeavour to cover all the points embraced by the question and supplementary remarks.

SENATE AND HOUSE OF COMMONS ACT SUPPLEMENTARY RETIREMENT BENEFITS ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Carter for second reading of Bill C-81, to amend the Senate and House of Commons Act and the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act with respect to the escalation of certain payments thereunder.

[Translation]

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, Bill C-81 raises a question which cannot be answered negatively even if it is unwarranted or theoretically wrong. We know that the main object of the bill is to freeze the sessional and expense allowances for members of Parliament—that is, members of the Commons and of the Senate.

It evidently proceeds from a statement made by the Prime Minister on October 13, 1975 concerning the application of price and wage controls and more directly from the Prime Minister's televised statement on December 18, 1975 when he explained what practical steps he intended to take to enforce the legislation passed by Parliament to that effect.

I quote from the Prime Minister's statement:

The government, with the support of the Liberal caucus—

I find that quite suave.

The government, with the support of the Liberal caucus, will ask Parliament tomorrow to cancel the 7 per cent salary increase which members of Parliament, senators and cabinet ministers are scheduled to receive on January first. I am confident that the opposition parties will support this salary freeze as an example of personal restraint.

I find that the statement has quite interesting overtones and connotations since it was first necessary to obtain the support of the Liberal caucus. But it was rumoured at the time that the caucus was not unanimous on this matter. As for getting the opposition parties' support, well, that was not very difficult. What position can the opposition parties take on such a legislation other than to accept it?

I recall that some time later Senator Forsey had reiterated the idea that parliamentarians had to set an example, an example of personal restraint. Again I recall telling him that if that was all that was needed in order that Canadian people accept the control program the government had just had passed by Parliament, I fully agreed. I still fully agree with this measure passed by parliament if its result will be to convince people in general, manufacturers and consumers alike as well as labour unions, that we have to restrain ourselves.

But I am far from being certain that this example really is or has had this effect since it was announced, for in fact the freeze was implemented before the legislation had been passed, as everybody knows, except for expense allowances; we will be forced to reimburse a few dollars, but that is not very serious. However, let me say that if we had the guarantee that this decision could have the effect of setting an example, I would be enthusiastic about this measure.

I doubt it very much, and this for several reasons. First of all, the government has applied those measures in a different manner to various groups. The government's objective is mostly to convince people that members of Parliament, senators and ministers, on the matter of compensation, should set an example; he even mentioned the salaries of senior public servants, and I quote:

The salaries of senior civil servants will be frozen for the next fifteen months, together with the salaries of federal and provincial supreme court judges, senior officers of the armed forces, etc.

I have already mentioned here in the Senate that this statement by the Prime Minister was mostly a matter of public relations to try to gain more credibility from the people for his control program, and that the Prime Minister had gone much too far when mentioning the freezing of the salaries of federally appointed judges since, a short while before, we had passed a law granting judges a 33 per cent salary increase, if I remember well, or something like that. It was clearly understood, and this had been emphasized in Parliament, that the judges would receive that salary for at least three years and that no other bill providing for further increases would come before Parliament until 1978.

So, when the Prime Minister told the Canadian people that the salaries of judges would be frozen, he was not saying anything new, since they were already frozen for three years, as was mentioned when the bill came under study.

● (1420)

I suggest that Bill C-81, like the Prime Minister's statement, is also part of the government public relations program to get a little more credibility from Canadian people.

However, what I especially want to point out is that the idea of "setting the example" has not convinced many people. First it did not convince the legislators at the provincial level, because nearly half the provincial legislative assemblies—from the moment the Prime Minister announced the control scheme, the enforcement of guidelines on wage increases—voted themselves higher salaries, if not at the maximum permitted by the guidelines, at least close to it.

In the case of Manitoba, for instance, the increases were geared to the rise in the cost-of-living index. In New Brunswick, they allowed themselves increases of 10 per cent. In Quebec, they wanted to go for 13 per cent but the Quebec Anti-Inflation Board ruled that it would be limited to $2,400. The final decision is not made, but it is certain that the National Assembly members will allow themselves an increase of at least $1,800 a year and that their compensation will be higher than that of the members of the House of Commons and senators. In Saskatchewan, they approved a 12 per cent increase in May 1976, retroactive to the month of July 1975. In Alberta, the bill was passed in October and they ended up with 9 per cent more. In Prince Edward Island, a 75 per cent increase was enacted at the beginning of 1975. In Ontario, nothing has been done yet. In British Columbia—and I say this in the interest of justice to clear up the situation and shed complete light—a 10 per cent decrease was voted. Of course the mistakes made by the Barrett administration had to be corrected. Until then, British Columbia parliamentarians had been treated with extreme generosity. I have not been able to determine the situation in Newfoundland or in Nova Scotia. But what I want to demonstrate by these figures is that the example that the Prime Minister wants the Canadian Parliament to give is not an example that other legislatures deem fit to follow.

Second, by giving this example alone, with all the publicity made about provincial legislature increases, we are running the risk that our sacrifice will go unnoticed. We are the scapegoats. Nobody will give us credit for our gesture.

I know that in a number of cases here this sacrifice will not really be very great. But for several others, the freeze on the 7 per cent increase—and note that it is only an increase of 7 per cent, while the guidelines allow up to 12 per cent—will mean real sacrifice, while in several other areas of the legislative system in Canada, as I pointed out, they have awarded themselves increases.

[Senator Flynn.]

Third, it remains that the policy of the government as regards wages, which provides as a general rule, say, increases not exceeding 12 per cent, except when there is need for catching up or for historical relationships, well, these guidelines have now become not maxima but minima, as was seen during negotiations. At the present time, negotiations start from a minimum, which is the maximum set in the guidelines. In that regard, I say that the policy of the government has not had the results we were entitled to expect. Before those measures, it was possible in many cases—and I have personally seen certain cases—to start negotiations on a basis of an 8 or 9 per cent increase. But since the guidelines set a maximum of 10 and 12 per cent, perhaps a bit more according to circumstances, these maxima have become minima and that is why, for all practical purposes, the inflation rate has not changed much since October 1975 as regards wages.

Anyway, I am prepared to set an example. I regret that the other legislative bodies in Canada did not see fit to do the same, and especially that we should do so without taking any credit for it and by sacrificing the security of many among our own. But this is one situation where we have no choice.

I shall simply add one word on the clause of the bill dealing with the freeze on supplementary benefits, to which Senator Carter alluded yesterday evening. I read and reread this clause, but I am not quite sure of its significance. I think I was wrong yesterday when I suggested that the increased ceiling was only $200 a year; I think it is $200 a month, as mentioned by Senator Hicks and Senator Carter. But it is his statement which captured my attention, as well as the attention of the members of the Senate who listened carefully to Senator Carter yesterday, which appears on page 2187 of yesterday's Hansard. [English]

This amendment could provoke a debate, since it is the first time that the federal government has proposed to withdraw an unconditional statutory right to a portion of such a benefit which is already in payment. While the Department of Justice has advised that it is within Parliament's right to pass legislation of this type, the staff relations implications of the introduction of this principle are such that a prolonged debate would be most unfortunate.

There was some intervention which reads:

SENATOR FLYNN: What do you mean by that?

SENATOR GROSART: You were not supposed to read that. That was for your own information only.

I am quite sure that was the case. It was for Senator Carter's information only. But I commend him for having conveyed this information to the Senate, and I still want to know exactly what the problem is behind this. I think it is the duty of the Senate to dig into this. So, unless Senator Carter is able to give me more satisfactory information as far as this section only is concerned—the rest is no problem; we know exactly what it is and there is no dispute about it—I think this bill should be referred to committee. We will find out there whether some people are by this provision going to be denied something to which they are entitled. Not only is it important, but it is the duty of the Senate to do that, and I thank Senator Carter for having given us the opportunity, by his disclosure of this rather valuable information, to render yet another valuable service to our country.

● (1430)

Hon. Hazen Argue: Honourable senators, this bill will, I am sure, receive the support of the Senate, because we are always prepared to go along with those who say that a sacrifice should be made and we should forego any benefits we may have as of right.

There is one thing which disturbs me about the general climate in the country with regard to this kind of action. It seems, no matter what it does with respect to its pay, that Parliament is criticized vehemently by the press. We were criticized when it was proposed that our indemnity and allowances be increased by 7 per cent, even though the 7 per cent was much lower than the 12 or 13 per cent which the country in general expected to receive. From what I know of the labour movement in the country, I can say that if its spokesmen and officials had been in the same position as we were in they would never have agreed to relinquish 7 per cent when someone else was receiving 12 per cent. If that 7 per cent is too high now, then, of course, we were wrong in taking it in the first place. It calls into question the whole procedure of arriving at the increases provided by Parliament for members of the Commons and the Senate in the past.

But then in making that kind of error in relation to this labour principle I have been referring to—if one can call it that—the government or powers that be, the caucuses, the people who made the decision, did not go first class. They did not say, "We will take off the 7 per cent and that will be it." They said, "We will take off the 7 per cent on the indemnity, but we will leave the expense allowance increase alone." That caused another furore in the press across the country, and we were damned again. We were damned for the 7 per cent; we are damned for taking off part of the 7 per cent; we will probably be damned even if we take the full 7 per cent off everything, because then the press will say, "That just proves they were getting too much in the first place. They are agreeing that they have been overpaid, so now they are going to cut their increase by this amount."

You know, politics always enters into it. It has to. Your opponents are always against what you are doing; your supporters are sometimes in favour of what you are doing.

I was in Saskatchewan when the newspaper headlines said that the legislature was not increasing its pay by 12 per cent, but, over the period of time it was dealing with the matter, was increasing its pay by 56 per cent. I thought, "Oh, my gosh! What a howl will go up in Saskatchewan. Everybody will be up in arms. The members of Parliament in the Senate and House of Commons asked for 7 per cent and the roof fell in, and even though they are now willing to forego part of it there is still some grief." But the public in Saskatchewan scarcely made little mention of it; there was scarcely a ripple. Then I heard one of those phone-in shows on the radio, and I said to myself, "Now they are really going to be in trouble." They were asking the man on the street in Saskatchewan for his opinion. Well, in Saskatchewan there is a different set of political circumstances. More than half of the people interviewed said, "Well, you know, our MLAs do a pretty good job. The cost of living is going up, and those guys in the federal Parliament have been getting these huge increases. So we think it is okay if our fellows go along." That is exactly what they were saying about a 56 per cent increase in the indemnities of the members of the legislature.

I doubt if my contribution to this discussion has been particularly valuable, honourable senators, but I wanted to say that I think members of Parliament in both houses are concerned about this problem. They are in a difficult position in dealing with something like this. We are now going first class in one direction by foregoing any increase, but we have to decide sooner or later what we are worth in the functions we perform. I think we will then have to decide that we are entitled to a reasonable increase, if everyone else is getting a reasonable increase. I, for one, am quite happy to take the lowest of any of the increases that are around, but I happen to think that a member of the House of Commons or a senator who is doing his or her work is entitled to reasonable remuneration for a job well done. We should not expect any credit for passing this bill unanimously—as we probably shall—because I do not think we will get it. But at some time in the future we are just going to have to decide that we will support what is fair and reasonable by way of a return to ourselves.

I raised a matter in the house a couple of weeks ago on another item of cost to senators, namely, tailoring services. I was not complaining that I had to pay for them. I was happy to pay for them. The newspaper reports of what I said omitted the sentence in which I said that I was glad not to be on the taxpayers' back, and was prepared to pay my own way, which I still am.

Personally, I am not at all concerned about whether we get less pay by a moderate amount, or more pay by a moderate amount. At one time, when my family was small, our circumstances were very difficult. At this stage in life, when I no longer have dependants, my circumstances and level of living are such that I have no financial problems, and about that I am pleased. However, I think that the country should recognize that members of the Senate and the House of Commons are entitled to reasonable pay for a job well done.

[Translation]

Hon. Azellus Denis: Honourable senators, let me say just a few words. I think that our sacrifice is more important than one might think, because 7 per cent of $24,000 is about $1,600. I am—speaking only for myself—a young man, but if some honourable senators must retire and receive two-thirds of their pensions, according to that law, they will have to do without $1,100.

I am proud to collaborate and make this sacrifice.

[English]

Hon. Chesley W. Carter: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I wish to inform the Senate that if the Honourable Senator Carter speaks now, his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on the motion for second reading of this bill.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I wonder if, before Senator Carter closes the debate, I could ask him if he would be kind enough to clear up this matter of the actual amount under clause 2, because it looks to me, as it apparently looked to Senator Hicks and the Leader of the Opposition, as if it were $200 a month, whereas the announcement we got, I think, was that it was to be $200 a year; so I hope that in his reply Senator Carter will clear that point up for us.

Senator Carter: Honourable senators, I want to thank all honourable senators who have participated in this debate for the contributions they have made.

Yesterday Senator Flynn wondered why I had been selected for this assignment. I should tell him that I was not exactly selected, but there did not seem to be any stampede on the part of honourable senators to sponsor this bill, and since it is something that had to be done, and I have had my fair share of pleasant duties in this chamber, I thought it only fair to even the situation up a bit by taking on something that would not give me quite so much pleasure. The last bill I introduced in the house gave me not merely pleasure but joy, because it had to do with extending benefits to the Hong Kong prisoners. This one is in a very different category, but on thinking it over, my natural inclination to spare honourable senators from unpleasantness whenever I can prompted me to take on this assignment.

Senator Flynn raised a point at the end of his speech which I had hoped he would forget. I did get a little bit ahead of myself yesterday, and by the time I caught up with myself I was too far advanced to retreat, so I had to carry on. The words that Senator Flynn mentioned did not, to my mind, bear that significance which he seemed to assign to them. When I read that statement I thought it applied to the recovery of statutory payments already made, legally, under the law prior to the passage of this bill. I did not think there was anything more than that in it, but if there should be, and if Senator Flynn is not satisfied, then I shall be quite happy, if this bill receives second reading, to move that it be referred to committee.

● (1440)

As to the point raised by Senator Forsey, my understanding is that the amount is $200 per month; it is not $200 per year. I think Senator Flynn corrected that in his speech earlier today.

Honourable senators, this is a bill which affects us personally, as it affects members of the other house personally, in that we are all members of Parliament. It is, in a sense, a delicate matter. Since our colleagues in the other place, our fellow parliamentarians, have passed this bill, I do not think we can do very much more than complete the process and pass it in this house. It is true that the measure will impose a certain amount of hardship on some members of the other place—there is no doubt about that. Senator Argue has pointed out that we are not going to get any public relations gain out of this bill, and Senator Flynn has demonstrated that no other legislature is following our leadership. So far as giving leadership is concerned, even if it is not followed I suppose we can always point to it and say, "Well, we tried, but perhaps we did not try soon enough or in the right way."

There is no doubt, honourable senators, that there are some aspects of the principle of this bill which give rise to doubts. I have doubts particularly about the blurring of the distinction between expense allowances and salaries. I think that is a bad precedent, and one that will bedevil us in the future. We are admitting in this bill that there is really no distinction between expense allowances and salaries and that, as far as members of Parliament are concerned, they can both be counted as one and the same. It is a bad thing and it is something I do not like, but, since our fellow parliamentarians in the other house have already passed this bill, we do not have much choice but to follow suit and pass it here.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Carter: At the next sitting.

Senator Flynn: No. I think we should have some explanation. This can be done on Tuesday next without in any way delaying passage of the bill. Anyway, the provisions are, in fact, already in force.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I have looked at the rules, and it seems that there is no clearly established committee to which a bill such as this should be referred.

Senator Greene: Foreign Affairs!

Senator Langlois: I wonder if we could not achieve the purpose we have in mind by referring this bill to Committee of the Whole, possibly with the minister in attendance, on Tuesday.

Senator Carter moved that the bill be referred to Committee of the Whole at the next sitting of the Senate.

Motion agreed to.

TRANSPORTATION

BRITISH NORTH AMERICA ACT—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from Wednesday, May 12, the debate on the inquiry of Senator Bonnell calling the attention of the Senate to the British North America Act as it pertains to transportation.

Hon. John M. Macdonald: Honourable senators, I do not propose to keep you for any length of time this afternoon, but I thought I would like to say a few words on Senator Bonnell's inquiry calling the attention of the Senate to the British North America Act as it pertains to transportation, because we have followed the debate with considerable interest.

Both Senator Bonnell and Senator Phillips restricted their discussion to transportation on Prince Edward Island, and to transportation between the Island and the mainland. Of course, the problem is not confined to Prince Edward Island; it is one which is of vital concern to all the Atlantic provinces. Yet I think those senators were wise to restrict their discussion, as by so doing they were able to focus attention on the transportation problems and the difficulties of the Island in a special and a very definite way, which would not have been possible in a wider debate on transportation in the whole Atlantic region. Both senators dealt with the subject in a very knowledgeable way, and showed the close relationship which exists between transportation and the economic health of Prince Edward Island. They made powerful and informative speeches, and the historical review of transportation between Prince Edward Island and the mainland given by Senator Bonnell will serve as an authoritative reference work for anyone who wishes to examine it in the future.

Senator Bonnell and Senator Phillips performed a very valuable service in bringing once again to the attention of the government, and to the attention of the public in general, the need for an improved transportation system both on the Island itself and between the Island and the mainland. For their stand they have strong provincial support, because I understand that the Minister of Highways and the Minister of Agriculture of Prince Edward Island have both indicated that there has been a serious deterioration of the Canadian National transportation system on the Island. I believe that on two occasions in the last session of the legislature the Minister of Highways indicated that the ability of the Island railroad to function effectively was being seriously impaired by a lack of effective roadbed maintenance, and lack of adequate rolling stock. The Minister of Agriculture suggested that the Prince Edward Island farmers have been handicapped by the transportation system.

● (1450)

These two honourable senators from Prince Edward Island deserve all the support and encouragement we can give them in their efforts to obtain for the people of that province the advantage of a good transportation system, something which they should have as a result of Prince Edward Island becoming part of the Canadian confederation.

Then, Senator Rowe and Senator Duggan took advantage of the opportunity presented by Senator Bonnell's inquiry to discuss transportation in Newfoundland. Both of these senators have spoken before on the matter, and it is obvious that both have an expert knowledge of the subject. They, too, restricted their discussion to transportation within Newfoundland, and between that province and Nova Scotia. It is on the matter of transportation between the ports of Port aux Basques in Newfoundland and North Sydney in Nova Scotia that I wish to direct a few remarks. I realize, of course, that transportation is a matter of great concern to all the Atlantic region. It is a matter of life and death so far as the economic life of the Atlantic region is concerned. While I do not propose to discuss transportation as it affects the Atlantic region at this time, I do wish to support the position taken by Senator Rowe and Senator Duggan, and to encourage them in their efforts to obtain an improved system in Newfoundland and between Newfoundland and Nova Scotia.

Senator Rowe pointed out that term 32 of the Terms of Union, which are now part of the British North America Act, deals with this matter, and quoted term 32(1), which is as follows:

Canada will maintain in accordance with the traffic offering a freight and passenger steamship service between North Sydney and Port aux Basques, which, on completion of a motor highway between Corner Brook and Port aux Basques, will include suitable provision for the carriage of motor vehicles.

Honourable senators will note that the term does not say that while Canada will provide the service the people of Newfoundland will have to pay for it.

I interject here to say that the people of the town of North Sydney, where I live, will always be grateful to the delegates from Newfoundland for insisting upon having this provision written into the Terms of Union. There was a ferry service between those two ports for many years, but the tremendous development of the service since 1949 has made it a major industry of the two as far as employment is concerned. I am sure the same is true of Port aux Basques. Consequently, anything which has an adverse effect on the employment is a matter of grave concern to the people of those two towns.

Senator Rowe pointed out that this ferry service is the lifeline of Newfoundland, and anything which might affect that lifeline is a real danger to that province. In my opinion, he proved this not only during this debate, but in previous ones in which he has participated. However, I must say at this time that I believe he has taken an extreme position with regard to the interpretation of term 32(1). He feels that the term means exactly what it says when it says Canada will maintain a freight and passenger service. He feels it means that this service must be maintained at all times, although he accepts, of course, temporary dislocations of the service on account of events beyond human control such as ice conditions, violent storms and the like.

Personally, I believe we must go a step further. I think we have to add a legal strike to the list of events which would justify an interruption of the service. As Senator Duggan mentioned, we live in a free country where free men can legally exercise their right to withdraw their services. When employees have the legal right to strike, I do not think the wording of term 32(1) should deprive them of that right. Let us be realistic about it. Apart from the principle involved, I know of no way under our system whereby service could be maintained if there should be a legal strike by the crews of the ships, the railway workers, the stevedores, or even the office workers. I think, also, that it should be realized and acknowledged that since 1949 labour relations on that service have been very good. I believe the only serious and prolonged strike was the one to which Senator Rowe has referred at various times. While it is admitted that that strike caused hardship, distress and inconvenience, it must also be admitted, in my opinion, that one strike in 25 years is a pretty good record.

Honourable senators, it is a constant worry that there will be a loss of employment if changes are made in that ferry service, either through mechanization, larger ships, or loss of traffic to other carriers and the like. These things have happened. I should add that it is difficult for people who live in areas in which there are many opportunities for employment to appreciate what the loss of even a few jobs means in an area in which there is no other available employment.

I have mentioned that the ferry service gave good employment to the two ports involved, but that employment has been severely restricted and a good many, too many, jobs have been lost. They have been lost for two reasons, one being the ever-increasing mechanization of the freight handling. Larger ships are being used and fewer men are employed. For example, at one time on that ferry service there were seven ships in operation owned by the Department of Transport. On May 3 of this year only four of these were still in operation, the others being tied up and perhaps more are tied up by now. However, two large ships, the Marine Nautica and the Marine Atlantica, were operating on the service under charter, the charter rate being $7,750 each per day. A third ship, the Stena Nordica, has been chartered for 120 days a year for the next five years. I do not know what the charter rate is, but it will not be less than that of her two sister ships. It is difficult for people to understand why the Department of Transport ships are not being used while the chartered vessels are. I realize that there may be many good reasons, or at least some kind of reasons, but I realize also the effect this is having on employment, both with respect to the ships' crews and the dock workers.

We all know that change is inevitable and must be accepted, and certainly many changes have been made in the operation of the ferry service between Port aux Basques and North Sydney. There was the introduction of the large containers, the freight-car transfer by ferry, and the increasing popularity of trailer-trucking as against freight-car haulage. All these have had and are having an adverse effect so far as employment is concerned. Then, with the introduction of the large chartered ships, that adverse effect on employment has been intensified. Let me give you an example: I do not have the tonnage of the freight handled this year to compare with the tonnage handled in the same period last year, but I expect there would not be much difference. Yet the number of stevedores working in the town of North Sydney one year ago was approximately 800, whereas only 214 were so employed last week. We are all familiar with the arguments that costs must be reduced, and there must be more efficiency, but that always seems to bring about a reduction in the work force. Perhaps there is greater efficiency; perhaps costs are lower now than they have been. I do not know. I expect Senator Rowe and Senator Duggan would know whether the people of Newfoundland are now getting better service. They will also know whether transportation costs have been reduced and, if so, whether that reduction has been passed on to the people of Newfoundland in the form of lower prices for the goods they must buy.

Honourable senators, when changes are being made in a service such as this, consideration should be given to the effect of such changes on employment, and to whether the good effects of the changes outweigh the bad. Will the lower cost compensate for the loss of a major source of employment, with the consequent ill effects on the whole region concerned—particularly a region where alternative employment is not available? I consider that in these cases a deliberate judgment must be made and a balance struck, as it were, between the various factors involved. The cost factor should not be the only consideration. A sense of proportion must be kept in mind and a decision made as to whether the advantages outweigh the disadvantages, and unless it can be clearly shown that the changes are beneficial they should not be made. Personally, I do not believe the latest changes made in the ferry service between Newfoundland and Cape Breton have yet proved advantageous to the regions directly concerned.

• (1500)

Honourable senators, I mentioned also the concern felt for present and future employment arising from the competition of other carriers. There can be no objection, of course, if other steamship companies wish to compete with the government-owned service. That is their business. But I do believe that objection can well be taken to the government's providing a subsidy to its competitors. I understand, for example, that Clark's Steamship Limited receives a subsidy from the federal government on the freight it carries from Montreal to St. John's. I cannot quite understand why the government should subsidize a competitor of its own service.

Some further alarm was felt recently when an advertisement appeared from a new company called The Newfoundland and Ontario Steamship Limited, announcing a new direct service from the Great Lakes to St. John's. I am informed that this company does not receive a subsidy and has not applied for one. However, knowing the history of that kind of company, I expect it will not be too long before it does apply. If it does, I hope the government will give a firm refusal, and also a firm refusal to any other company seeking a subsidy in order that it might compete with the government-owned service to Newfoundland.

Honourable senators, in my opinion the speeches of Senator Rowe and Senator Duggan are worthy of much consideration, and I hope that notice of them will be taken by the proper people in the proper places. I must say that I liked Senator Duggan's idea that the Port aux Basques to North Sydney ferry service be considered as part of the trans-Canada highway, as indeed it is in fact, if not in name. The cost of operating the service should not be a major consideration. The main consideration should be that the Newfoundland lifeline be maintained as a service—as the service it was meant to be under the Terms of Union. As I mentioned earlier, there is nothing in term 32 to indicate that the service was to be paid for by the people of Newfoundland, yet over the years they have paid a very substantial part of the cost through the higher prices they pay for everything they must import and use.

All the Atlantic provinces face a major transportation problem. I have not discussed the general problem of transportation as it affects Nova Scotia, but at some future time I hope to do so. I wish to support the positions taken by the senators from Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland, and to encourage them to continue their efforts to obtain that justice to which their provinces are entitled under the terms of the Constitution.

Honourable senators, I know there is an operating deficit on the Port aux Basques to North Sydney ferry service, but I have no time for those who complain about such deficits. Let us face facts. Whatever the cost of maintaining that service, that lifeline, it is a small price to pay for having Newfoundland a part of Canada.

On motion of Senator Petten, for Senator Norrie, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, June 15, at 8 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, June 15, 1976

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

ROYAL ASSENT

NOTICE

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that the following communication had been received:

GOVERNMENT HOUSE
OTTAWA

June 15, 1976

Madam,

I have the honour to inform you that the Hon. Jean Beetz, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber today, the 15th day of June, at 9.45 p.m. for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to certain bills.

I have the honour to be,
Madam,
Your obedient servant.
Edmond Joly de Lotbinière
Administrative Secretary to the Governor General.

The Honourable

The Speaker of the Senate,
Ottawa.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Copies of Environment Canada Surveillance Report, dated September 1975, entitled "Characterization of Wastewaters from the Great Canadian Oil Sands Bitumen Extraction and Upgrading Plant". (English text).

Copies of Environment Canada Surveillance Report, dated April 1976, entitled "Atmospheric Asbestos Fibre Concentrations in the Baie Verte Area, Newfoundland". (English text).

Copies of Report of the Anti-Inflation Board to the Governor General in Council reporting its reference to the Administrator of the Anti-Inflation Act of the collective agreement between the International Nickel Company of Canada, Limited, Manitoba Division, and the employees represented by the United Steelworkers of America, Local 6166.

Report of the Department of Public Works for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1975, pursuant to section 34 of the Public Works Act, Chapter P-38, R.S.C., 1970.

Report on the administration of the Canada Pension Plan for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1975, pursuant to section 118, Chapter C-5, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Canadian National Railways Securities Trust for the year ended December 31, 1975, pursuant to section 17 of the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act, Chapter 311, R.S.C., 1952.

Copies of a Statement by the Prime Minister of Canada to the Conference of Federal and Provincial First Ministers held at Ottawa, June 14 and 15, 1976 entitled "Established Program Financing: A Proposal regarding the Major Shared-cost Programs in the fields of Health and Post-secondary Education".

HABITAT

UNITED NATIONS CONFERENCE ON HUMAN SETTLEMENTS

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, may I take this opportunity to say how good it is to be back from the Conference on Human Settlements which took place in Vancouver during the past two weeks.

I had the honour to serve as chairman of one of our Canadian committees at the conference. In this regard, it was a particular pleasure for me to be associated with one of our distinguished colleagues, Senator Buckwold, who over many months and at the conference itself made a most significant and useful contribution to the success of Habitat.

It may be of interest to honourable senators if those of us associated with the Habitat Conference were to present a more formal report to the Senate at some later and more appropriate time.

However, let me say that it was an honour and pleasure to be associated with a group of fine Canadians from all political parties, including those with whom we worked from the loyal Opposition, and those who serve the people of this country at the municipal and provincial levels of government. It was a privilege to work with such a representative group of Canadians in efforts to advance what we felt were some useful initiatives not only on behalf of our own nation but on behalf of the people of the world.

I have never felt more proud of being a Canadian, in having this opportunity to work on a non-partisan, non-political basis with men and women from all parts of this country and from all sectors of Canadian life.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I should like to thank the Leader of the Government for his short statement. I was going to ask him to make one had he not risen at this time. We are happy to see him back with us and I congratulate him and Senator Buckwold, as well as all the other members of Parliament who participated in the conference.

When he reports more fully to the Senate, I, and I am sure other honourable senators, will be interested in knowing whether the press reports on the frustrations suffered by the Canadian delegation, and other delegations of the Western countries, were justified and should be taken seriously.

I had occasion, when in London attending the IPU conference in September of last year, to feel that a certain group of nations was using these conferences for promoting ideas that were not necessarily relevant to the purpose of such conferences, or of meetings like those of the Inter-parliamentary Union. I should like the Leader of the Government to tell us of his reactions to this climate, and his views on whether it is practical and useful for Canada to continue to participate in such conferences, or whether some effort should be made to change the pattern to bring about, if not absolute relevancy, at least substantial relevancy in the debates which take place on those occasions.

Senator Buckwold: Honourable senators, it is not my purpose to report on the conference. As the distinguished Leader of the Government in the Senate has said, there will be an opportunity to give a more detailed report to honourable senators on what transpired at this very important meeting of the nations of the world.

At the outset, I want to thank Senator Perrault for his kind references to me. I can tell you that I was never as proud of a leader, or a member of a delegation, as I was of Senator Perrault who, with little previous exposure to the whole work of the Habitat Conference—I personally had been involved in it for some years; he became involved only recently—showed, almost immediately, a tremendous grasp of this very complex subject, and was able to assume his responsibilities with great dignity. In so doing, he earned the respect of the entire delegation. I want all honourable senators to know that he performed in an admirable way.

My purpose in rising at this time is to make one general statement while the subject of the Habitat Conference is still newsworthy. I should think it is still in the news arena at this time; two or three days from now, it might not be.

I am asked fairly often, "Was it all worthwhile? Was the conference a success? Really, wasn't it a wasteful effort to go through years of preparation and the spending of millions of dollars to end up with a day or two of political harangue at the plenary session of the conference which really did not contribute very much to the conference itself?" Honourable senators, my reaction is that it was worth every bit of the effort put into it and every dollar spent. It is true that there was not the unanimous acceptance of the Declaration of Principles, which would have been desirable. Nevertheless, at least 98 per cent of the principles were agreed to by all nations of the world. It was only a few unworthy amendments to that document that broke down the conference towards the end when it moved into the political arena with subjects which quite rightly should have been discussed before the General Assembly or the Security Council. But when we think of the importance for the future of the issues that were agreed to, of the climate that has now been established for action on the national front and cooperation on the international front in this whole field of human settlements, as to where we will live and how we will live, I would suggest to the house that it was all worthwhile.

I feel that the objectives that have been adopted—I say "adopted" because they were agreed to in the various committees in which they were studied and proposed—will lead to a better life for the great majority of humanity now and in years to come. I look forward, along with the Leader of the Government, to going into more detail as to what transpired at the conference. For the time being, let me say, if only for the press, that the conference was a great success insofar as achieving its basic objectives for an improvement in the attitude and climate for better human settlements in the future.

● (2010)

PENITENTIARIES

ACTION TAKEN TO IMPLEMENT PRINCIPAL RECOMMENDATIONS OF REPORT OF SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—QUESTION

Senator Croll: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Leader of the Government. On April 8 I placed Inquiry No. 1 on the Order Paper. My question is: How soon can I expect an answer, and what has the leader to report at the present time?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I will endeavour to obtain an answer to that inquiry as quickly as possible. Perhaps we can work toward a reply in the latter part of this week, although the question is very detailed.

COPYRIGHT ACT

CROWN COPYRIGHT—MINISTER OF SUPPLY AND SERVICES— QUESTIONS

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I have four related questions I should like to put to the Leader of the Government. I gave him notice of them, I am sorry to say, rather late this afternoon; circumstances prevented my doing it sooner. I presume, therefore, he will want to take them as notice.

The questions are:

1. Who is responsible for replacing, in the Economic Review, April 1976, the customary, and legal, "Crown copyright reserved," by "Copyright Minister of Supply and Services?"
2. By what authority was this change, which appears to be a plain violation of section 11 of the Copyright Act, made?
3. Has the Minister of Supply and Services been created a corporation sole?

That is s-o-l-e, I may observe in passing.

4. If so, when, and by what instrument?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I appreciate the fact that Senator Forsey has given notice of this question. I am not able to provide an answer at the present time, but I will seek to provide an adequate reply at the earliest possible opportunity.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

CANADIAN DEFENCE SPENDING—REMARKS BY UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR TO CANADA—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have replies to questions asked at earlier dates, beginning specifically with a question posed by Senator Forsey on Thursday, May 13. The question is to be found on page 2122 of Debates of the Senate. It related to a reported allegation that Canada's level of defence spending is a major irritant in current Canada-United States relations. Honourable senators will recall that question. I think it arose out of a report in the Globe and Mail.

From the information made available to me it would seem that the comments by the United States ambassador to Canada on this matter in Winnipeg were seriously misinterpreted. I understand that what he actually said was that defence was a promising element of our overall relationship and not an irritant.

I think most of us would agree with this latter interpretation of the situation. It is unfortunate that any other interpretation should be attributed to the remarks of Ambassador Enders, since this is a point on which there does not appear to be any difference of perception.

GRAIN

SUBSIDIES PAID ON SHIPMENTS OF GRAIN TO EASTERN CANADIAN PORTS FOR EXPORT—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I refer to a question asked by Senator Smith (Colchester) on May 26. Senator Smith was good enough to state at the time that he did not expect an answer immediately because of the detailed nature of his inquiry, which was:

In view of the apparent decision of the government to do away with the subsidies paid in respect of shipments of grain to eastern Canadian ports for export, what was the capacity in the calendar year 1975 of those ports to handle grain for export? How much was paid in subsidies, and how much is it expected that this capacity will be utilized after the withdrawal of the subsidies?

Honourable senators, I have here a rather long table indicating the relevant elevator capacity of eastern Canadian ports and the corresponding subsidy payment for grain in 1975. If it is satisfactory to Senator Smith, I would be pleased to ask that this be printed in today's Debates—that is, unless he wishes me to read it to the house.

Senator Smith (Colchester): It would be very satisfactory to have it printed in the record.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

CAPACITY/SUBSIDY PAID ON SHIPMENTS OF GRAIN
FOR EXPORT TO EASTERN CANADIAN PORTS
1975

Location	Railway	Capacity Manager	No. of Elev.	Capacity Bushels
QUEBEC
Montreal	CP-CN*	National Harbours Board No. 1		4,000,000
	CP-CN*	National Harbours Board No. 3		5,000,000
	CP-CN*	National Harbours Board No. 4		5,500,000
	CP-CN*	National Harbours Board No. 5		5,100,000
Quebec	CP-CN*	Bunge of Canada Ltd.		8,000,000
Sorel	CN	Sorel Elevators Ltd.		5,230,000
Trois-Rivières	CP	Three Rivers Elevator Ltd.		5,880,000
			7	38,710,000
NEW BRUNSWICK
Saint John	CN	Canadian National Railways		500,000
West Saint John	CP	Marathon Realty Co. Ltd. "B"		1,000,000
	CP	Marathon Realty Co. Ltd. "H"		1,576,800
			3	3,076,800
NOVA SCOTIA
Halifax	CN	National Harbours Board		5,152,500
			1	5,152,500
		TOTAL	11	46,939,300

*also served by N.H.B. railways

SUBSIDY PAID:

(Grain) $8,603,157

Senator Perrault: It can be said as well that the federal government has been holding discussions with the provinces, railways, port commissions and the National Harbours Board on ways and means of moving grain down in unit trains to east coast ports. Initial volumes anticipated would sustain the throughput at current levels. An extension of this principle would have a significant effect on the pattern of grain movements through eastern ports.

ENERGY

OFFSHORE OIL AND GAS RESOURCES IN ATLANTIC PROVINCES—SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators will recall that on May 19 Senator Austin asked a question related to the offshore resources constitutional issue. In essence, the question was:

Is the federal government now considering the necessity of unilaterally, or by agreement if possible, making a reference to the Supreme Court of Canada on the Newfoundland constitutional issue in order to avoid hindering the search for badly needed natural gas and oil resources in Canada?

I am prepared on behalf of the government to make the following statement: On the 19th of May, in response to a question from Senator Greene, I informed the Senate that officials' discussions were under way between the federal government and the governments of the three Maritime provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. I am pleased to report further that these discussions are continuing and that prospects appear more favourable now than at any time in the past several years for an agreement between the parties on an arrangement respecting administration and management of mineral resources offshore the provinces involved.

In responding to Senator Greene's question, which is linked with the question put by Senator Austin—and honourable senators may wish to refer to the question originally asked on May 19 in order to ascertain the interrelationship—in responding to Senator Greene's question, I further noted that negotiations with the province of Newfoundland on offshore minerals had ceased, and I expressed the view that if this impasse were not soon resolved it might have an effect on the level of exploration expenditures off the Labrador coast.

Senator Austin expressed some disquietude at the possibility that exploration off Labrador might be slowed down or possibly even cease, because of failure to resolve the Newfoundland constitutional issue. He inquired whether the federal government was considering referring this issue to the Supreme Court of Canada.

With respect to the latter question, I am pleased to inform honourable senators that very recently there have been developments that have raised hopes that in the near future the two governments involved will be taking action designed to settle whatever doubts there may be as regards the legal status of mineral resources in areas offshore

Newfoundland. I am pleased to bring this information to the house this evening.

As to any possible decrease in the pace of exploration for oil and gas off Labrador, a matter upon which not only Senator Austin but also a number of other honourable senators expressed concern, I am happy to inform the house that it does not appear that there will be any slowing down in the rate of exploration off Labrador during the coming season. As honourable senators are aware, the drilling season off Labrador does not commence until late in the season, very late in June or early in July, as a rule, and companies sometimes cannot make all the final decisions as to their exploration programs until shortly before their drilling ships and semi-submersibles are ready to leave for location. However, prospects now are that there will probably be four units drilling off the Labrador coast during the coming season, two drillships and two semi-submersibles. If these plans materialize, there will be one more unit drilling off Labrador this season than during the previous peak drilling season of 1975. Besides this drilling activity, there are excellent prospects that some 10,000 miles of seismic surveys will be carried out off Labrador during the coming season, as much as or more than during 1975.

● (2020)

Honourable senators may be interested in a resumé of drilling activities off the east coast to date. Up to the present, there have been 115 wells drilled in this region: 59 in the Scotian Shelf area, 40 on the Grand Banks, nine off Labrador, four in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, two off north east Newfoundland, and one in the Bay of Fundy.

As I noted during my remarks on May 19, the most promising discoveries so far have been made off the Labrador coast. Two significant gas discoveries have been confirmed by testing, and another two wells in which hydrocarbons were reported will be further evaluated this year.

By contrast, none of the 42 wells drilled on the Grand Banks and off northeast Newfoundland encountered hydrocarbons of any significance. Of the four wells drilled in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, one was tested but the gas accumulation encountered is believed to be too small to have commercial significance. To our knowledge, no further drilling is planned for these areas during 1976.

On the Scotian Shelf, however, six small hydrocarbon discoveries have been made. About half of these might, with further delineation drilling, prove to be of commercial interest. As I mentioned in my statement on May 19, Petro-Canada is now providing a catalyst for renewed drilling activity on the continental shelf off Nova Scotia. It is expected that one semi-submersible will be drilling on the Scotian Shelf throughout 1976.

Honourable senators, I realize this is a rather overlengthy reply to this question, but I know that there is intense interest, particularly in the Atlantic provinces, in the state of drilling off the east coast, and so I have taken the liberty of providing as complete and current a summary as possible.

Senator Smith (Colchester): It is much appreciated.

SENATE AND HOUSE OF COMMONS ACT
SUPPLEMENTARY RETIREMENT BENEFITS ACT
BILL TO AMEND—CONSIDERATION IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Pursuant to an Order of the Day, the Senate was adjourned during pleasure and put into Committee of the Whole on Bill C-81, to amend the Senate and House of Commons Act and the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act with respect to the escalation of certain payments thereunder, the Honourable Senator Macnaughton, P.C. in the Chair.

The Chairman: Honourable senators, the Senate is in Committee of the Whole on Bill C-81, intitled: "An Act to amend the Senate and House of Commons Act and the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act with respect to the escalation of certain payments thereunder."

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, before we proceed with the study of this bill in Committee of the Whole, I would like to remind you that when the suggestion was made last Thursday that this bill be referred to this committee today the hope was expressed that the minister, the Honourable Mr. Chrétien, would be present. We are informed, however, that he is detained in connection with the work of the House of Commons, and we have in his absence asked Mr. H. D. Clark, Director of the Pensions and Insurance Division of the Treasury Board, to make himself available.

I now move that Mr. Clark be invited to take a seat in front of my desk.

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Chairman: Shall discussion of the title of the bill be postponed?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Chairman: Honourable senators, we will proceed to consideration of clause 1. Shall clause 1 carry?

Senator Flynn: Mr. Chairman, I think we should have some explanation from the deputy leader or from Mr. Clark, although I think clause 1 is not in his special province.

I see that there is a side-note "1974-75, c.44, s.2" in the bill. I do not think the statutes enacted in the present session have yet been published, so I presume that here we are referring to section 2 of what was Bill C-44, which means that in this same session we are already amending an act that we passed sometime last year. Assuming that what I say is correct, the description here is rather misleading. I have seen the statutes of the present session referred to somewhere else as "Statutes, 1974-75-76", which in itself points to a record, showing that this is the longest session in the history of Parliament. That may explain why we are amending acts passed in the same session.

The second point I want the deputy leader to explain to me is the situation now in comparison with the situation under the act we passed previously. If I remember correctly, the indemnities were to be increased as of January 1 of this year by 7 per cent or, if the cost-of-living index was less than that, then by some other appropriate amount, but I am not too sure about that. What is the consequence for next year and the following years of clause 1 of this bill? I have been able to procure a first reading copy of Bill C-44, but not of the version as passed by the House of Commons and the Senate. It seems to me that this bill, in the form in which it was introduced, dealt with the indemnities only with respect to this 30th Parliament, and that it was contemplated that something else would have to be done for the 31st Parliament. I should like some clarification of these points.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, at the outset I should confirm that the assumption made by the Leader of the Opposition with respect to the act this bill amends is quite correct. This is one of the problems which we are faced with in a session which has lasted as long as the present one, now almost two years.

In respect to the latter question I shall limit myself to giving a comparison as between the present indemnities for members of the Senate and the House of Commons and their expenses, and what they would be if the bill were not amended.

The indemnity of members of both the House of Commons and the Senate, as we all know, is $24,000. The expense allowance for senators is $5,300, and for members of the House of Commons the allowances are $13,175, $14,475 and $10,660, depending on the constituency. If the act is not amended as contemplated by this legislation, then the indemnity for senators and members of the House of Commons would be $25,600, and the expense allowance for senators would rise to $5,600 from $5,300. The expense allowances for members of the other place would be increased from $13,275 to $14,200; from $14,475 to $15,400; and from $10,660 to $11,300.

Senator Flynn: I am not too clear about that.

Senator Langlois: As you know, in the other place the allowance varies with different constituencies. Here I am giving the information for the three classes of constituency.

● (2030)

Senator Flynn: We should concern ourselves only with the basic allowance.

Senator Langlois: The basic allowance for the larger constituency would be $14,200 rather than $13,275.

Senator Flynn: Let us speak of the minimum.

Senator Langlois: Shall we leave it at that, or do you want the minimum?

Senator Flynn: The minimum.

Senator Langlois: The minimum is presently $10,660. Without the amendment it would be $11,300. Is that clear enough?

Senator Flynn: Yes, but my question is really with respect to what will happen next year and the following year if we do not pass further amendments to this legislation?

Senator Langlois: If there are no further amendments to the present law, the indemnities and allowances will increase by the percentage of the wage index.

Senator Haig: It is the consumer price index.

Senator Langlois: No, it is not the consumer price index. It is the industrial wage index, and to a maximum of 7 per cent. This is the Industrial Composite.

Senator Flynn: For each year?

Senator Langlois: For each year, yes.

Senator Flynn: Of this Parliament?

Senator Langlois: Forever, until there is another amendment.

Senator Flynn: In other words, there was a change from the original proposal, which made these indemnities applicable only to the 30th Parliament. Now, as a result of the amendment made by this bill, the indemnities would apply to a new Parliament; is that correct?

Senator Langlois: Yes, that is correct, but not as a result of this bill. To add to what I have said with respect to the 7 per cent maximum increase, the Industrial Composite is defined as follows in the act:

the "Industrial Composite" for an adjustment year is the average weekly wages and salaries of the Industrial Composite in Canada for that year as published by Statistics Canada under the authority of the Statistics Act.

Senator Flynn: Then if the reply is correct—I am speaking only from memory, because I was unable to review the whole situation—I believe that when the first bill, Bill C-44, was presented the idea was that we were providing for a scale of indemnities and expense allowances for the 30th Parliament, and that following that there would be some type of review by a commission and we would not necessarily be governed at all times by the increase in the Industrial Composite. I wonder whether this idea of carrying out a review at the beginning of a new Parliament has been abandoned?

Senator Langlois: I am informed that the statement of the honourable senator is correct. However, this was amended after the bill was introduced in the other place. The increase is now limited forever to a maximum of 7 per cent unless further amendments are introduced.

Senator Flynn: So it is limited forever on the basis of the increase in the Industrial Composite?

Senator Langlois: Yes.

Senator Flynn: So we are still faced with the same problem of having to review the indemnities every now and again.

Senator Argue: Mr. Chairman, may I ask a question? Do I take it that the effect of this amendment is, first of all, that in the present calendar year senators, along with members of the House of Commons, will forego an increase of 7 per cent? I do not understand why these are round figures, but those given in the case of the Senate add up to our foregoing some $1,900. However, this is not just a one-shot affair. We forego something close to $2,000 this year, and it is never recovered under this legislation. Next year, unless some other action is taken, presumably there will be a 7 per cent increase, but that increase will be this year's increase which we are foregoing. So the effect of this legislation, I take it, is that we lose $2,000 this year, to which I do not object—I support the measure—but we lose $2,000 next year, $2,000 the year following, and so on. Therefore, we are putting ourselves in a position in which we set an example this year, and we continue to set an example in each subsequent year.

[Senator Flynn.]

I do not know if it is a good example but, as I understand it, when trade union negotiators go for a two-year contract, and if they obtain 7 per cent the first year, they probably get 14 per cent the following year, and they have short contracts. Therefore, something that is contributed one year is taken into consideration at a later date. I take it that we are setting an example in perpetuity. We say that we refuse $2,000 this year and another $2,000 the following year, so if there is no change for 10 years our contribution by this action will be $20,000.

When I apprised the Senate of the fact that I was no longer being allowed to pay for having my suits pressed there was great publicity—tremendous publicity. I wonder if parliamentarians will get any publicity for the fact that, as I see it, we make a contribution this year and in every succeeding year until this legislation is changed.

Senator Langlois: The interpretation of the honourable senator is correct, except that we would also be losing in respect of pension. The pension is based on the indemnity, and on account of what we lose this year, which is lost for good, our pension will be affected.

With regard to the publicity, the honourable senator has done a good job on that tonight, and I hope his remarks will be reproduced in the newspapers.

Senator Greene: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the witness this question?

Senator Flynn: No, you may not ask the witness.

Senator Argue: Ask your question through the deputy leader.

Senator Greene: Hard decisions make bad law. I think that is a fairly trite and true criticism of the common law system. Now, accepting that this is a good decision in the present case and it sets an example of martyrdom for all the country to admire and follow, accepting that premise I see a danger in the precedent and I wonder if I could get an answer to this question: Has there been any other occasion on which statutory increments of pay were cut out at a future date for any particular purpose? If not, I can see a very dangerous precedent here in view of the fact that we set pay for judges, officials and various sectors of our Public Service. If those statutory payments to accrue in the future can be cut out at the whim of any Parliament then, in my opinion, we are creating a very dangerous precedent, quite apart from the obvious virtues of our self-sacrifice at this particular time.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, in answer to this I am informed that during the depression years there was a 10 per cent cut of Civil Service salaries. Although I am not in a position to confirm this, I believe this also applied to members of Parliament. I will endeavour to confirm that. This is in all likelihood a precedent so far as members of Parliament are concerned.

Senator Flynn: Oh, yes; there is no doubt about that.

Senator Manning: I should like to ask one question in clarification of a point, but may I first state that I can certainly confirm the statement of the deputy government leader because I happened to be involved in government in Alberta during those depression years. There was a statutory provision, of course, for indemnities, and by a voluntary arrangement worked out with the Public Service a 10 per cent cut was made in both indemnities and salaries of public servants right across the board, and it was preserved during the entire years of the depression period.

● (2040)

I am raising a point of clarification. Getting back to this annual adjustment, which is geared to the Industrial Composite with a ceiling of 7 per cent, did that envisage at the time the original statute came into being a 7 per cent increase of the basic salary, or was it a compounded adjustment? In other words, is it 7 per cent of $24,000 each year, or is it 7 per cent of $24,000 the first year, and then 7 per cent of $25,600 the second year and so on? It makes a big difference if it is compounded; it would double the indemnity in about 13 years.

Senator Langlois: The answer is that it is a compound adjustment.

The Chairman: Shall clause 1 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 2.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, the real purpose of having this bill in Committee of the Whole is to obtain information as to the exact meaning and consequences of clause 2. Possibly the Deputy Leader of the Government has a statement to make at this time.

Senator Langlois: I can only repeat the explanation given by the sponsor, Senator Carter, last week, when he said that the Department of Justice had advised that it was within Parliament's right to pass such legislation. That is the only explanation I can give. It is the official answer we have received from the department.

Senator Flynn: Certainly the Deputy Leader of the Government must have something else to say. If I understood correctly the implication of what Senator Carter said—perhaps he should not have said it—it was that under clause 2 of the bill we are refusing to give to pensioners an increase which is part of their contract.

I would like to know who is going to be affected by this because, after all, pensioners have contributed to their pensions, and they are now told "You will not get the amount that you would otherwise have received." This is the point on which I want clarification. In my view, that is the reason why Senator Carter said it would be unfortunate if we had a debate, because we would be doing something which would be going against a contract.

Our indemnity is not a contract, but a pension to which we contribute is a contract, and if we do not give to the pensioner the amount he is supposed to receive, we are breaking that contract. That is the implication of the statement made by Senator Carter, and it is on this point that I want some explanation.

I am not satisfied with the idea that it is within the power of the government. Of course the government or the legislature can be unfair, unjust, and can break a contract; but it should never do that.

Senator Langlois: My information is that this will affect roughly 75 pensioners whose pensions will be in the order of $22,000 a year. I am informed also that there is no precedent for this type of legislation, but that it is, as I have said, within the power of Parliament to pass.

When my honourable friend says that we are violating the terms of a contract, he is apparently losing sight of the fact that we are dealing with legislation. These pensions are established by legislation, and I cannot see how Parliament could be in breach of contract when it amends its own legislation. That is all it is presently doing.

Senator Hicks: Mr. Chairman, I wish to pursue another aspect of this clause, about which I questioned Senator Carter at the last sitting.

As I read this clause, it limits the increase in the supplementary retirement benefits to $200 per month. But Senator Carter replied most distinctly to me that the limitation was $200 per year. I cannot possibly get that reading from it, and I would like the Leader of the Government to comment once again on this.

Senator Langlois: The amount of $200 a month is the correct amount.

Senator Hicks: It is not an increase of $200 a year, but an increase of $200 per month or $2,400 a year.

Senator Flynn: The Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act provides for a contribution in order to adjust the pensions according to, let us say, the increase in the cost-of-living index or whatever index is used.

Would not the deputy leader agree that it is the kind of contract which provides that if one contributes so much he will receive so much? But by this legislation we are saying, "Despite the fact that you have contributed so much, you will not get what we promised you when we first passed the legislation."

Whether it is legislation or a contract with a company, it is the same thing. Would not the deputy leader agree that Parliament is, in fact, changing the relations between itself and the public servants involved that were established when the act was passed?

Senator Langlois: The Leader of the Opposition, in his reasoning, apparently omits the important fact that this involves members of Parliament. We cannot say there was such a contract, because the pensions were not based on that same basis before the law we are amending was made. My honourable friend assumes that these pension rights have been the same from the inception of the employment period of public servants. That is not the situation. The rates of pension were increased from time to time during the course of employment, so one cannot complain if the rate of his pension for the first years of his employment was lower than it is today.

Senator Grosart: Would the Deputy Leader of the Government explain what was meant by Senator Carter's statement that this is a proposal to "withdraw an unconditional statutory right"? Those were the words used.

Senator Langlois: I must repeat what I said earlier, that we are dealing not with a contract but with legislation, of which Parliament is the only master. It can change it at any time, and anyone in the employ of the government knows that.

Senator Grosart: With respect, I was not asking whether Parliament had the right. I was asking what was meant by the statement that this is a proposed withdrawal of an "unconditional statutory right". "Unconditional"—therefore, what are the un-conditions? "Statutory"—therefore, what is the statute? "Right"—therefore, what is the nature of the right, the unconditional statutory right, that is being withdrawn?

Senator Langlois: If my honourable friend is asking me to interpret what someone else said in this house, unfortunately I cannot do that. I do not think I have the authority to do so. I do not know what he had in mind when he said that.

Senator Grosart: That would seem to indicate that the Deputy Leader of the Government is not aware of, and cannot explain, what was meant by the statement made by the sponsor of the bill. Surely he has considered the fact that that was the statement made, and that the Senate is entitled to an explanation of that statement which was read at the time from a prepared document.

If the Deputy Leader of the Government is not prepared to answer that question, perhaps he will answer a second one. In the same statement, what was meant by the remark that this would have "staff relations implications"? What are the staff relations implications? We are not talking about Parliament.

● (2050)

Senator Langlois: My honourable friend again is insisting on my interpreting what someone else has said. He can apply whatever interpretation he wishes to what was said by the honourable senator. Speaking for myself, I would read it as Senator Carter read it. I cannot read it otherwise.

I am informed that there are staff implications. Staff will be affected in the same way as members of this house will be affected, as all members of Parliament will be affected, but I am told also that there has been no reaction or protest whatsoever from the personnel involved.

Senator Flynn: They do not understand it any better than you do.

Senator Argue: Perhaps they are not losing any money.

Senator Walker: You are doing very well, Senator Langlois. We have all been in the "hot seat." It is especially difficult when you have to depend on someone sitting in front of you. He is a very good man, but it is very difficult.

Senator Grosart: Is the deputy leader saying that there are staff relations implications?

Senator Langlois: No—or rather, yes, in the same way as we are affected.

Senator Grosart: Well now, which is it? I am not sure whether the answer is yes or no.

[Senator Grosart.]

Senator Langlois: I think my honourable friend is just trying to confuse the issue. I said that the staff will be affected in the same way as we will be affected. I went on to point out that there has been no protest from the staff who will be affected.

Senator Grosart: Perhaps I should say that I was not asking whether there had been a protest.

Senator Langlois: Don't twist my words.

Senator Grosart: I was not twisting your words. I was merely asking you to make it quite clear what your answer was. I take it that there are staff relations implications.

Senator Langlois: Of course.

Senator Grosart: Would you be good enough to tell us what staff this involves? We are dealing with an amendment to a statute which, we are told, will have staff implications. What are these staff implications? The staff is entitled to know, and I suggest to the Deputy Leader of the Government that the Senate is entitled to know, and certainly the Senate is entitled to raise the question and have it answered.

Senator Langlois: I am informed that the staff implications of this bill were fully explained to representatives of the staff associations and there were no protests made. As to the various groups which will be affected, I have answered that, in a very general way, by saying that we are dealing with about 75 persons who will be in receipt of pensions in the neighbourhood of $20,000 and $22,000 per year.

Senator Grosart: I take it the Deputy Leader of the Government is saying that the staff relations implications referred to by the sponsor of the bill will affect only about 75 public servants. Is that correct?

Senator Langlois: That is correct.

Senator Flynn: I would suggest that this is the first time that legislation of this type has been proposed to Parliament, changing a contract respecting pensions by decreasing the amount payable under the conditions originally set for payment.

Senator Langlois: Except for what took place during the depression years, of course. During the depression years there was a reduction of 10 per cent.

Senator Grosart: Not in pensions.

Senator Langlois: In salaries and, consequently, in pensions.

Senator Grosart: No.

Senator Flynn: Let us forget about those who come under the ceiling of $2,400. I think Senator Denis put a question the other day with regard to pensions of members of Parliament, including honourable senators.

Since the indemnities are not going to increase this year, the pension payable to a member who retires, either by reason of age or health, will not increase, as otherwise would have been the case, as I understand it. I further understand that pensions presently being paid will not increase, and some of those pensions are not very high. Does the Deputy Leader of the Government consider that to be fair?

Senator Langlois: If my honourable friend is referring to former members of Parliament who are already in receipt of pensions, those individuals will not be affected by this bill.

Senator Flynn: But those who might retire this year will lose in the way of pensions?

Senator Langlois: Of course. That is set out in clause 1.

Senator Flynn: Do you consider that to be fair?

The Chairman: Clause 2. Shall clause 2 carry?

Senator Flynn: Is that a reply to my question, Mr. Chairman?

The Chairman: It is not for me to say, but the matter has been discussed for some time. Shall clause 2 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

Senator Flynn: On division.

The Chairman: Clause 3. Shall clause 3 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall the title of the bill carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Honourable senators, shall I report the bill without amendment?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Flynn: On division.

---

The Hon. the Speaker: The sitting is resumed.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Senator Macnaughton: Madam Speaker, the Committee of the Whole, to which was referred Bill C-81, to amend the Senate and House of Commons Act and the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act with respect to the escalation of certain payments thereunder, has considered the said bill and has the honour to report the same without amendment.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Langlois: With leave of the Senate, now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators have heard the motion. Is leave granted?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Langlois, seconded by the Honourable Senator Perrault, P.C., that this bill be now read the third time.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Flynn: Without debate and without publicity.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

---

At 9.45 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

ROYAL ASSENT

The Honourable Jean Beetz, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, having come and being seated at the foot of the Throne, and the House of Commons having been summoned, and being come with their Speaker, the Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to give Royal Assent to the following bills:

An Act to amend the Senate and House of Commons Act and the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act with respect to the escalation of certain payments thereunder.

An Act to amend the Aeronautics Act.

An Act to amend an Act to repeal the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act and to amend the Trade Marks Act.

An Act respecting United Grain Growers Limited.

The House of Commons withdrew.

The Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to retire.

---

The sitting of the Senate was resumed.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, June 16, 1976

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report of Telesat Canada for the year ended December 31, 1975, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditors, pursuant to section 37 of the Telesat Canada Act, Chapter T-4, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Textile and Clothing Board, dated May 26, 1976, on an inquiry respecting leather outerwear.

Copies of Order in Council P.C. 1976-1284, dated June 1, 1976, amending Part I of the Schedule to the Hazardous Products Act, pursuant to section 8(3) of the said Act, Chapter H-3, R.S.C., 1970.

NATIONAL FINANCE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO PUBLISH AND DISTRIBUTE ITS REPORT ON THE ESTIMATES OF THE MANPOWER DIVISION OF THE DEPARTMENT OF MANPOWER AND IMMIGRATION

Senator Everett, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(i), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance be authorized to publish and distribute its report on the estimates of the Manpower Division of the Department of Manpower and Immigration for the fiscal year ended the 31st March, 1975, as soon as it becomes available, even though the Senate may not then be sitting.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Senator Flynn: I am wondering if the sponsor would care to put some explanation on the record.

Senator Everett: Honourable senators, the report of the committee on Canada Manpower, which it has prepared following its examination of the estimates, was approved yesterday by committee and is now ready for translation and printing. I am informed that translation will take upwards of a month, and then the printing some time beyond that. Therefore, it is unlikely that the report will be ready for publication before the Senate adjourns.

Of course, I give the undertaking that if the report is ready prior to adjournment it will be tabled in the Senate. The adoption of this motion will facilitate the publication of the report in the event we cannot get it out before the Senate adjourns.

Senator Flynn: I was wondering whether the honourable senator had any inside information as to when the Senate is going to adjourn.

An Hon. Senator: It is up to you.

Senator Flynn: I do not consider it is up to us. Can he give us any assurance that the Senate will adjourn in one month's time?

An Hon. Senator: Ask Stanley Knowles.
Motion agreed to.

FISHERIES

EXTENSION OF COASTAL JURISDICTION—QUESTION

Senator Molson: Honourable senators, if I may, I would ask two questions of the Leader of the Government.

First, has the government any assurance that in proclaiming the 200-mile coastal jurisdiction the provisions of the ICNAF Agreement covering fishing for salmon on the high seas will be respected by the signatory nations?

I might say for general information that ICNAF is the International Commission for Northwest Atlantic Fisheries.

• (1410)

Senator Flynn: Thank you.

Senator Molson: You are welcome.

Senator Argue: You knew the meaning of that acronym?

Senator Perrault: Because of its technical nature, I will take the question as notice.

RIGHTS OF MICMAC INDIANS OF CROSS POINT RESERVE TO FISH ATLANTIC SALMON—QUESTION

Senator Molson: Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Leader of the Government whether any consultations have taken place with the MicMac Indians of Cross Point Reserve to ensure that they can freely fish salmon for need, but that netting on a large scale for sale on the market is constrained? I might say that I realize the leader was spawned on the west coast and, therefore, I emphasize that I am speaking about Atlantic salmon.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, both Atlantic and Pacific salmon have a good deal of merit. This question is also of a technical nature, and I shall take it as notice as well.

I will certainly undertake to provide an early reply to your questions, Senator Molson.

ENERGY

CONSERVATION OF FUEL—QUESTION

Senator Argue: Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the Leader of the Government on a small matter but one which might be of some significance. Last night when the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was performing his duties—I happened to be outside the chamber before the Royal Assent ceremony began—I noticed that the motor of the car awaiting him was running. I inquired why the motor should be kept running during that time. No one seemed to know, but this morning I was informed by one of the constables that it is the practice to keep the motor running in case it should not start after the ceremony was over, and also to keep up the air conditioning in the car.

Senator Flynn: Well, that is reasonable.

Senator Argue: At this time, when the country is endeavouring to conserve energy and when the policy of the government is to conserve energy, the mood should be to conserve energy whenever and wherever it is possible to do so. The amount of fuel used up in that hour or hour and a half might well be enough to take an ambulance to the hospital. It occurs to me to ask whether government policy is such that the motors of these Cadillac cars might be shut off while the vehicles are awaiting the dignitaries who are performing their necessary functions.

Senator Perrault: As a general practice the government has endeavoured to conserve as much energy as possible, in the broad sense of the word—that is, the use of electricity and various types of fuel—but so far as this specific matter is concerned I have no direct knowledge.

Senator Flynn: Does the government leader know whether the new tax of $100 has been paid on that air conditioning system?

Senator Argue: I wonder if the government leader might make some inquiries to see whether the policy of the government is to conserve energy in the use of its automobiles and all automobiles within its control.

THE SENATE

TAILORING SERVICES—FURTHER QUESTION

Senator Choquette: Honourable senators, I should like to ask the leader what was the result of the inquiry regarding the pressing matter which was raised last week by Senator Argue about the tailor, and the fact that things were going to be ironed out. I was surprised at the press coverage that matter received. I am a great punster myself, but there were very few people in the gallery on that day to appreciate the puns made by the Leader of the Government, yet they received front page publicity. I think we should follow that up. I am wondering as to the result of the inquiry which was to be carried on.

Senator Flynn: There is no pressing need any more.

Senator Perrault: We are pressing on with our research, honourable senators. As yet we do not have a final report from the tailor. However, I do not think there is a total prohibition on the services which are paid for by members of both chambers.

Senator Argue: Hear, hear.

Senator Perrault: There may have been a temporary overload of work involved. Beyond that I have nothing further to report. It should be made clear to the media, however, that this is a paid-for service. It is not a free service.

Senator Argue: I thank the honourable leader for his excellent report. I was certainly not looking for any free-load. I am always happy to pay for any services performed. I thought the Treasury should have the benefit of my money by maintaining such a service.

Senator Choquette: I do not want to prolong this controversy, but I should like to mention that someone remarked to me that he does not remember seeing Senator Argue with a pressed suit.

Senator Perrault: Obviously, in the view of your friend, there has been no undue exploitation of the service by Senator Argue.

Senator Argue: Is this an undercover inquiry?

Senator Perrault: No. They do not take blankets, Senator Argue.

Senator Forsey: As a supplementary, might I ask the Leader of the Government whether he could arrange some kind of trade-off between the energy used in running the Deputy Governor General's car and the energy used for pressing Senator Argue's suits?

Senator Perrault: All constructive ideas will be gratefully received.

NATIONAL MUSEUMS

STORAGE OF CANADIANA—QUESTION

Senator Riley: Honourable senators, I would like to direct a question to the Leader of the Government, and ask him whether it is the intention of the government to do anything to protect the priceless items of Canadiana that are stored in a warehouse on Laperrière Avenue. That warehouse has no sprinkler system, and indeed no protection whatsoever. This is only a tinderbox warehouse. I believe these items are under the aegis of the new system of national museums, and are specifically associated with the National Museum of Man.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have no direct knowledge of that situation. However, if Senator Riley has some information available to him I would be glad to assist him in communicating it to the proper authorities. If the situation outlined by the honourable senator exists, then it is a serious one, indeed.

CANADIAN LABOUR CONGRESS

SALARY INCREASES FOR OFFICERS—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, may I take this opportunity to reply to a question asked by Senator Phillips on May 26, concerning the President and Vice-President of the Canadian Labour Congress. He alleged that these two gentlemen had voted themselves a $10,000 per annum raise. This question was:

Is it the intention of the government to refer that 40 per cent pay increase to the Anti-Inflation Board?

As honourable senators are undoubtedly aware, the Canadian Labour Congress is not a business corporation employing 500 or more employees. In addition, it is considered to be a non-profit organization. For both these reasons the CLC is not subject to the anti-inflation guidelines. Furthermore, there has been no voluntary referral by the CLC of this increase to the Anti-Inflation Board. In these circumstances there will be no adjudication by the Anti-Inflation Board with respect to the alleged increases in salary for these two executive officers of the CLC.

ENERGY

GOVERNMENT POLICY RE CANADIAN OWNERSHIP OF COMPANIES DEVELOPING OIL AND GAS ON CROWN LANDS— QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: A question was asked by Senator Manning on May 26. He said in part:

—a short time ago an honourable minister in the other place indicated it was the government's intention that companies developing oil and gas on crown lands should be at least 25 per cent owned by Canadians, and that the requirement of Canadian ownership would probably be increased to 50 per cent at a later date.

The question he asked was:

First, is this fixed government policy as at this date; and secondly, if it is, has a time frame been decided upon within which the Canadian ownership requirement will be increased to 50 per cent?

The Prime Minister, before the 1974 election, had referred to the government's long-term policy goal of increasing the Canadian presence in our resource industries, and eventually to reach, or exceed, 50 per cent ownership. The 25 per cent requirement incorporated in the new land regulations seems now to be a feasible target. While Canadian ownership in excess of 25 per cent would be, of course, a welcome development, and would be promoted by the government, there are no legislative proposals contemplated at the present time which would increase Canadian ownership requirements beyond the above-mentioned 25 per cent level.

● (1420)

DEVELOPMENT OF TIDAL POWER IN BAY OF FUNDY— SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the final question for which I have an answer today is one asked on May 19 by Senator Riley regarding tidal power in the Bay of Fundy. The answer as given to me is rather lengthy since it is made up of a short technical report entitled "Tidal Power Studies in the Bay of Fundy," a press release and a report which is of such length that it would be very difficult to incorporate it in the records of the Senate. I propose to provide this material directly to Senator Riley for his perusal, and then after he has reviewed it perhaps there will be other specific questions arising out of it.

By way of summary I can say that the report of the Atlantic Tidal Power Programming Board dated October 31, 1969 described the results of extensive studies undertaken jointly by the federal government and the Governments of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. This work was initiated and completed primarily in the years 1968 and 1969. The board examined tidal power development in approximately 20 locations ranging from St. Mary's Bay to Chignecto Bay and the Minas Basin. From this initial selection five sites were examined in detail, and three sites were selected for further investigation as being the most likely to support economic development.

[Senator Perrault.]

The conclusions and recommendations of the board, which are to be found in the report which I propose to make available to Senator Riley, indicate that "economic development of Tidal power in Bay of Fundy is not feasible under prevailing conditions," although conditions have changed considerably with respect to energy, prices and costs between 1968-69 and the present time.

Reference is also made in this report to previous investigations, including those undertaken by the United States, and jointly by the United States and Canada, in the Passamaquoddy and Cobscook Bay areas. These studies concluded that:

The Tidal project . . . will not permit power to be produced at a price which is competitive with the price of power from alternative available resources.

Since the rise and fall of the tides at Passamaquoddy is much lower than at locations in the Bay of Fundy, it can be expected that Tidal developments within the Bay of Fundy will be relatively more attractive than those in the Passamaquoddy area. For this reason an earlier study that I have made reference to gave consideration only to the Canadian developments within the Bay of Fundy.

A recommendation for re-examination of Tidal power development was contained in the report of the Bay of Fundy Tidal Power Review Board dated September 1974. A copy of this report is also going to be made available to the honourable senator, and it will be seen to recommend an investigation program as a review, updating an extension of the Atlantic Tidal Power Programming Board study.

The work recommended by the review committee is now under way and contracts have been placed for the initial phase of the work as described in the press release. If honourable senators wish to have a copy of this release, I shall be glad to have copies made.

The reply prepared earlier was in response to the question of Senator Smith (Colchester), which appeared to be concerned with the present status of these studies. The documentation is quite lengthy and with the agreement of the chamber I shall make this available in the first instance to the honourable senator who made the inquiry.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Riley: Honourable senators, as a supplementary question, I should like to ask the Leader of the Government if incorporated in that report there is a report from the United States Corps of Engineers on the Passamaquoddy-Cobscook Bay area?

Senator Perrault: There are references to United States studies, but the entire United States report does not appear to be included in these documents. If after examination of the report the honourable senator would like to have it tabled, I am sure other honourable senators and certainly the government will be cooperative in that regard.

GRAIN

SUBSIDIES PAID ON SHIPMENT OF GRAIN TO EASTERN CANADIAN PORTS FOR EXPORT—SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTIONS

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask the Leader of the Government a question or two arising out of the very detailed answer he was kind enough to provide last evening to a question I had asked earlier. If the honourable leader wishes to follow the questions by referring to the Debates of the Senate, of yesterday, his answer appears at pages 2201 and 2202.

Detailed figures are given relating to all the elevators in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia and break down the capacity of each elevator. The total subsidy paid, as indicated at the bottom of page 2201, is $8,603,157.

My first question is as to whether it would be possible in due course—I realize that the leader would not have the answer with him—to relate that to each of the provinces given in the answer?

The Leader of the Government said, as reported at page 2202, that certain discussions have been going on with reference to ways and means of moving grain down in unit trains to east coast ports. My second question is: Is it expected that the movement of grain in unit trains will be achieved soon?

In the next sentence the leader said:

Initial volumes anticipated would sustain the throughput at current levels.

As far as I can tell from examining the detail, no indication is given of the current levels, unless it is meant that the capacity in the year with reference to which I inquired was fully utilized. So my third question is: What was that throughput which will be sustained at the current levels?

Senator Perrault: I shall take those questions as notice, honourable senators, and attempt to obtain an early reply for Senator Smith.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Thank you very much.

TRANSPORTATION

BRITISH NORTH AMERICA ACT—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from Thursday, June 10, the debate on the inquiry of Senator Bonnell calling the attention of the Senate to the British North America Act as it pertains to transportation.

Hon. Margaret Norrie: Honourable senators, I wish to bring to the attention of the Senate the importance of transportation in Canada as emphasized by the terms of the British North America Act, 1867 as compared to its importance today, with special emphasis on the situation in the province of Nova Scotia and the Atlantic area. Senator Bonnell has ably presented his views and sharply criticized federal governments through all the period since Confederation for their harsh and often unfair handling of railroad and ferry services to and from Prince Edward Island. This can be verified by reference to Hansard of April 8, 1976, page 2049.

Transportation in the Atlantic provinces is so interlinked by the various types commonly known to us all that it is a very complex problem. Of course, soon after 1867, the vital connecting link in Canada was the Intercolonial Railway and the several ferries to and from Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland. The great importance of transportation to all the Atlantic region was recognized by each of the provinces in the discussions that led up to Confederation, and the terms of union which officially brought the provinces into union one after another. Transportation today, as at the time of Confederation, is the lifeline enabling the various regions in Canada to participate with some reasonable degree of equality in the economic growth and development of the nation.

● (1430)

In Atlantic Canada transportation had at the time of Confederation, and has today, a role to play in enabling the manufacturing firms and processors of the region to reach the small and scattered population of the region at reasonable transportation costs and, just as important, to reach markets outside the region by efficient, reliable carriers. The federal government has always assisted the Atlantic areas by subsidies, thereby trying to equalize the heavier burdens of paying higher transportation costs due to a longer haul than in other parts of Canada. These distant markets must be accessible at competitive costs for Atlantic manufacturers if industries in the region are to achieve the necessary economies of scale. The future of the Atlantic provinces still revolves around a transportation policy where imports and exports to and from local and foreign markets can be handled quickly and efficiently.

At the present time we seem to have a new era of trade springing up in the Atlantic area if we act wisely and quickly to make adequate facilities available. A new name is frequently being used for the ports of Halifax, Nova Scotia and Saint John, New Brunswick, namely, "Gateway to Eastern North America," and even, "Gateway to North America."

The reasons why these ports are so outstanding are, first, they are the most easterly commercial ports on mainland North America and the closest to Europe, not only in distance but in time; second, problems of congestion, ice, limited draft waterways, and political uncertainties are plaguing transportation developments in other parts of the continent; third, the St. Lawrence Seaway, because of climatic and geographic conditions, is beginning to lose its appeal to sophisticated shippers interested in moving goods to markets as quickly as possible; fourth, the port of New York, congested and not served at harbourside by railways, cannot offer the advantages of Halifax and Saint John; and fifth, major airports across North America are shackled by encroaching residential and industrial development, with consequent political problems, while Halifax International Airport offers the potential for virtually unlimited growth.

New York is an extra day away for European shippers, and the port is not blessed with the deep water and uncongested harbour and railway that Halifax possesses. Containers shipped to New York for mid-west destinations must be trucked from dockside and then loaded on rail cars for shipment, usually in a "piggy-back" fashion. Despite attempts, at substantial cost, to lengthen the St. Lawrence Seaway season, the river network remains closed for the winter. Other natural impediments, such as river depths and currents, further act against the St. Lawrence.

In the air, major terminals, such as New York and Toronto, are heavily congested. Conditions have become so bad at Toronto's Malton Airport that a ban has been placed on additional foreign airlines using the airport until at least 1980. The minister, the Honourable Otto Lang, said this month that congestion will rapidly become worse if restrictions are not imposed.

The Halifax container pier is the country's busiest, handling one-third of all Canadian traffic four years after its opening. The port is also recognized for its grain handling ability, with a potential for loading 72,000 bushels an hour and unloading 36,000 bushels an hour.

A sophisticated Air Canada air cargo business, Sea-Wings, has begun operations at Halifax International Airport for air shipment of high priority goods, brought to Halifax via container ships, to about a dozen points including Los Angeles. Operational at Halifax since September, the service has accommodated just under one million tons of cargo, with the potential for multifold increase, using airports at Halifax and Saint John.

Vitally urgent to the well-being of the whole Atlantic area is the expansion of the container port of Halifax. Rail freight rates cannot be increased and highways must be strengthened to bear the burden of heavy trucking to load our cars and transport our goods. The trucking industry in Atlantic Canada is unhappy. They feel the time is long past when they should be treated more fairly and gain the respect of the country for the huge task they are performing.

According to Atlantic Transport Review, the industry is now recognized as being the largest single employer in Canada, and it probably pays the highest total amount of taxes of any other industry. Despite its growth in size and importance to the whole economy, the trucking industry stresses the need for uniformity in many areas. One need is for uniform rules on vehicle weights, for uniformity in load weights. All four Atlantic provinces allow different load weights at the present time. I am sure there are more problems that must be "ironed out." The trucking industry is a vital part of our economy, and we should see that it gets a fair deal and understanding.

In the report of Transport Canada, passenger rail service between Montreal and Halifax, despite being classified as uneconomical, was ordered to continue at a substantial loss due to the following rationale:

Given the actual losses incurred and the demands and traffic patterns, the Committee is of the opinion that it is possible through imaginative improvements to develop a Maritimes passenger train system which will satisfy the needs of the travelling public and, at the same time, justify whatever cost there may be to the federal treasury.

There are many problems facing the economy of the Atlantic area, but if we can clarify and promote some of the transportation issues which are now being discussed, I am confident that we can accomplish great things. I hear remarks from other parts of Canada about the burden of equalization payments to the Maritimes, and it is not pleasant for us Maritimers to hear them.

[Senator Norrie.]

Honourable senators, with hard work and cooperation in dealing with day-to-day issues, I hope that the loyalty between the Atlantic provinces and the rest of Canada will remain firm and true. Let us continue what the Fathers of Confederation began, and, as John Ruskin said:

—when we build, let us think that we build for ever. Let it not be for present delight, not for present use alone; let it be such work as our descendants will thank us for, and let us think, as we lay stone on stone, that a time is to come when those stones will be held sacred.

On motion of Senator Forsey, debate adjourned.

THE ESTIMATES

REPORT OF NATIONAL FINANCE COMMITTEE ADOPTED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Carter, seconded by the Honourable Senator Croll, for the adoption of the Report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on the estimates laid before Parliament for the fiscal year ending the 31st March, 1977.—(Honourable Senator Langlois).

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I wish to yield to Senator Carter.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Hon. Chesley W. Carter: Honourable senators, I should like to begin by expressing my thanks to Senator Grosart and Senator Molson for their interesting analysis of the committee's report, and their valuable contributions to the debate. Both senators urged the government to restrict the increases in expenditures to increases in the gross national product. I am very happy to say that the President of the Treasury Board has assured the committee—this has also been confirmed by the Prime Minister himself—that this is the goal the government is trying to achieve.

● (1440)

In my earlier address I sought to make two points, first, that the committee was reporting on the main estimates only; and secondly, that for the first time the main estimates included expenditures for old age security and guaranteed income supplement payments. Both Senator Grosart and Senator Molson called attention to the increases in expenditures for the fiscal years ending March 31, 1974, March 31, 1975, March 31, 1976, and March 31, 1977, which were 17.3 per cent, 18.9 per cent, 26.5 per cent and 19.3 per cent respectively.

Since the estimates examined by the committee contained, for the first time, expenditures for old age security and guaranteed income supplement payments, I thought it would be useful, and perhaps make it easier to compare expenditures in previous years, if we compiled a table going back over the years and showing what the total expenditures were including OAS and GIS payments. I would like to put this table on the record at this time. It goes back to 1969.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

[The table follows:]

BUDGETARY ESTIMATES
(including OAS and GIS)
(millions of dollars)

Fiscal Year Ending	Main Estimates	% Increase Over Previous Year	Total Estimates for Year	% Increase Over Previous Year
March 31/69	$12,212	—	$12,364	—
March 31/70	$13,588	11.3	$13,871	12.1
March 31/71	$14,817	9.0	$15,378	10.9
March 31/72	$16,557	11.1	$17,400	13.1
March 31/73	$18,273	10.4	$19,072	9.6
March 31/74	$21,427	17.3	$23,508	23.4
March 31/75	$25,467	18.9	$29,974	27.5
March 31/76	$32,210	26.5	$34,763	16.0
March 31/77	$38,417	19.3	—	—

I now come to the years referred to by Senator Grosart and Senator Molson. For the year ending March 31, 1974 the main estimates were $21,427 million, an increase of 17.3 per cent over the previous year, and the total estimates for the year were $23,508 million, an increase of 23.4 per cent over the previous year.

For the year ending March 31, 1975 the main estimates were $25,467 million, an increase of 18.9 per cent over the previous year, while the total estimates were $29,974 million, an increase of 27.5 per cent.

For the year ending March 31, 1976 the main estimates were $32,210 million, an increase of 26.5 per cent over the previous year, while the total estimates were $34,763 million, an increase of 16 per cent. For the current fiscal year to date the main estimates are only $38,417 million, an increase of 19.3 per cent. If you compare the total federal expenditures of the last fiscal year with those of the previous year, you will see that there has been, in the percentage increase, a decrease from 27.5 per cent in 1974-75 to 16 per cent in 1975-76, which is a considerable decrease. I am sure honourable senators realize that it is quite easy for the government to turn on the tap with respect to expenditures but it is very difficult to turn the tap off suddenly and completely without disrupting the national economy as a whole and causing severe hardships to the weaker parts of our economy, such as the Maritime provinces.

The real comparison which shows the government's effort in cutting expenditures is contained in the figures showing a decrease from 27.5 per cent in 1974-75 down to 16 per cent in 1975-76.

The President of the Treasury Board has informed us that he is aiming at reducing it even further next year, to 14 per cent, and perhaps further still. This is still considerably above the rate of inflation, and nobody will disagree with any honourable senator who urges even further efforts along this line.

In the course of his address, Senator Grosart made a statement which caught me by surprise. I was very surprised to hear him say, as recorded on page 2188 of the Debates of the Senate of June 9, 1976, as follows:

The fact is that in the last fiscal year federal government expenditures increased by 16 per cent, and those of all provincial governments increased by only 11 per cent—

I found it very difficult to understand how the provincial governments could cut the increase in their expenditures so drastically from 20 per cent in the previous year to 11 per cent in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1976. I asked the Treasury Board if they could provide me with figures to account for this drastic decrease. They, frankly, were unable to do it. The figures they gave me are as follows: For the fiscal year 1973-74 the estimated total expenditures of all provincial governments were $21.4 billion, and for the year 1974-75 the estimated total expenditures were $25.8 billion, which was an increase of 20.7 per cent over the previous year. For the year 1975-76 the total estimated expenditures were $32.7 billion, an increase of 26 per cent. According to the figures I received from the Treasury Board, therefore, instead of reducing the increase in their total expenditures from 20 per cent to 11 per cent, the provincial governments actually increased it from 20.7 per cent to 26 per cent.

● (1450)

I realize that when we come to make comparisons about rates of increase in government expenditures we come up against a problem inherent in transfer payments. Senator Grosart made the point that all of the money comes out of the same taxpayer's pocket, and that it does not matter too much to the taxpayer who spends it. But when we come to make comparisons of this nature we do come up against the problem of who spends what. If the federal government transfers money to the provincial governments, that is charged up as a federal expenditure, but the actual spending of the money is done by the provincial governments. It is therefore difficult to have two different bodies spending the same money. Once one body has spent it, it certainly seems to be disposed of. But that is the problem we come up against, and it does cause considerable difficulty in getting accurate comparisons of increases in expenditures by the provincial governments with those of federal government expenditures.

I should like to conclude by joining with Senator Grosart in paying tribute to the President of the Treasury Board, the Honourable Jean Chrétien, for his full cooperation with our committee, for his complete frankness in answering our questions, his willingness to accept suggestions from the committee and for his efforts generally. I am sure all honourable senators will join with me in expressing those sentiments.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

SCIENCE POLICY

NOTICE OF COMMITTEE MEETING

Senator Lamontagne: Before the Senate adjourns, may I suggest to the members of the Special Senate Committee on Science Policy that, although the committee would normally meet at 3.30 p.m., we might as well meet as soon as the Senate adjourns.

Senator Choquette: Does that committee still exist?
The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, June 17, 1976

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today, it do stand adjourned until Monday next, June 21, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Honourable senators, contrary to what I had anticipated, it will be necessary for the Senate to meet on Monday evening next because we shall not be sitting on Thursday, June 24, St. Jean Baptiste Day, which is a parliamentary holiday.

Although there is no legislation presently on the Order Paper, we know there are two important bills, Bills C-20 and C-58, in committee. It is expected that Bill C-68, to amend the Medicare Act, will reach us from the Commons by Monday. In addition, there will be consideration of the report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on supplementary estimates (A) for the present fiscal year, which will be presented today. The supply bill covering the balance of the main estimates and supplementary estimates (A) will probably pass the Commons on Tuesday, and we will have it on Wednesday next.

On Tuesday, a meeting of the Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments has been called for 9.30 a.m. The Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce will meet at the same hour on Tuesday on Bill C-58. In the afternoon at 3 o'clock there will be a meeting of the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs on Bill C-20, respecting citizenship. The Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs will also meet on Tuesday afternoon; the time has not as yet been set, but very likely it will be at 2 p.m.

On Wednesday, the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce has scheduled a meeting for 9.30 a.m. on Bill C-58. The Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science will meet at 3.30 p.m. to consider the feasibility of the appointment of a special committee on crime and violence in Canada, and the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture will also meet at 3.30 p.m. for further consideration of its report on Kent County, New Brunswick.

Senator Beaubien: May I ask the Deputy Leader if there is any chance that the Senate will sit on Tuesday night?

Senator Langlois: Yes, the Senate will be sitting on Tuesday night.

Senator McLraith: I would draw the attention of the deputy leader to the fact that there are other committees sitting next week as well. The Joint Committee on the National Capital Commission will meet, but I do not have before me the date or the hour. The Advisory Commission on Parliamentary Accommodation is also meeting on Tuesday morning at ten o'clock for what may well be the whole day.

Senator Langlois: That may be so, but unfortunately I can give only the list of committee meetings as reported to me.

Senator Choquette: May I ask the deputy leader a further question? If the Senate sits Wednesday but not Thursday, is it the understanding that on Wednesday the Senate will adjourn until the following week?

Senator Langlois: Yes, the Senate will very likely adjourn to the following Tuesday, depending on legislation coming from the other place.

Motion agreed to.

BROADCASTING

REFERENCES TO NEWFOUNDLAND BY CTV—QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE

Senator Greene: Honourable senators, I rise, pursuant to rules 33 and 34, on a point of parliamentary privilege. The CTV station here in Ottawa—and I am directed by rule 34 to refer specifically to the complaint I have with it—almost inevitably in its nightly report on the weather qua news refers to the weather in Newfoundland as “the weather on the Rock.”

This may seem trivial, but I do not consider it trivial in the slightest. For those souls more gentle than I in this honourable chamber who are not familiar with the appellation, I will say that the Rock used to be the maximum security penitentiary on an island off San Francisco. So this cheap allusion and this petty humour are to me an insult to the good people of Newfoundland.

We have spent a great deal of money in making this city the capital of all the people of Canada.

[Translation]

Our program is bilingual so that our French-speaking fellow citizens can run their businesses, in their capital, in their mother tongue.

We English-speaking people used to call the city of Trois-Rivières “Three Rivers”. Now, in all public documents, either in Parliament or in the various departments, we call this city “Trois-Rivières” because that is its proper name.

[English]

All of us as Canadians, and particularly those of us in Parliament, must always be alert in seeing to it that disrespect is not shown to the sensibilities of people all over this great country by anything done in the capital region, which is the capital of all of us. It seems to me that particularly an agency holding a right, via a CRTC licence, which is a right in the public domain belonging to all of the people of Canada, must handle the responsibility that accompanies that right in accord with what is clear national policy. The national policy is to see to it that all parts of our country are treated with respect and dignity, not only in Parliament, but by those agencies which hold licences from and through the public domain.

• (1410)

You may deem it singular when a mere Upper Canadian rises to speak of the privileges of the people of Newfoundland, when there are so many senators here more competent to do that, but I feel sure that all of them, if they were aware of this point of privilege, must have felt that for them to complain might appear petulant, petty or small, and I think it particularly important that someone not specifically from Newfoundland should raise the point.

We have striven for unity in this country, and we will have unity when the problems and sensibilities of the people of one part of the country are just as jealously guarded by parliamentarians, in particular, from other parts of the country as they are by their local representatives. We will then have a clear understanding of all of Canada.

[Translation]

For my part, even if it were a privilege belonging to the province of Quebec, or to primarily francophone interests, I feel that it would be imperative for all those of us who are, first of all, Anglophones, to plead their case.

[English]

Fortunately, honourable senators, CRTC licences are now periodically reviewed, and I respectfully suggest, on this point of privilege, that TV station CJOH should apologize to Parliament and to the people of Newfoundland for this completely unwarranted breach of what I consider to be their privileges, and should undertake through its top management to treat its responsibility to all of the regions of Canada in this national capital with respect and dignity. And unless it does so, I propose to move a vote of censure, which surely the CRTC will consider in dealing with the renewal application, whenever it comes, of this station, which I respectfully submit has breached the privileges of Parliament through its insensitivity and rudeness to the people of the great province of Newfoundland.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs have power to sit while the Senate is sitting on Tuesday next, June 22, 1976, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

He said: Before the motion is put I would like to add a comment. Although it is not expected that the Senate will sit on Tuesday next until 8 o'clock in the evening, rule 7(1) states that:

Unless otherwise previously ordered, the Senate shall meet for the transaction of business at two o'clock in the afternoon of each sitting day.

[Senator Greene.]

Therefore it is necessary for a committee wishing to sit in the afternoon of Tuesday next to obtain permission to sit while the Senate is sitting in order to have notice of any meeting published in the Debates of the Senate and the Minutes of Proceedings of the Senate of today.

Senator Grosart: I presume there are the usual good reasons for the request that the rule be suspended in respect of the sitting of this committee?

Senator Langlois: Of course, honourable senators. I am introducing this motion, and others in respect of other committees, at the request of the chairmen who claim that they have sufficient business at hand to sit while the Senate is sitting. As I have just said in referring to the rules of the Senate, there might not be a sitting on Tuesday afternoon. This is just to allow notice of this meeting to be printed in the Debates and the Minutes of the Proceedings of today.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is there unanimous consent?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs have power to sit while the Senate is sitting on Tuesday next, June 22, 1976, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is there unanimous consent?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTINGS OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce have power to sit while the Senate is sitting on Monday and Tuesday next, June 21 and 22, 1976, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators have heard the motion. Is there unanimous consent?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

NATIONAL MUSEUMS

STORAGE OF CANADIANA—FURTHER QUESTION

Senator Riley: Honourable senators, yesterday I directed a question to the Leader of the Government in respect to the Canadiana stored in a barn or warehouse on Laperrière Avenue. At that time I should have gone further and said that when I went out there I did so with the express purpose of seeing a particular piece of artisanship, a piece of handicraft, by a master craftsman from my own city which was given to the National Museum by his daughter, Miss Belle Howe. The name of the craftsman was John D. Howe. I now realize that the New Brunswick Museum is associated in some way with the National Museum, because they recently contributed heavily to the building of a new wing. When I went to this barn-like warehouse, as I said yesterday, I found that there was no fire protection. There was protection in respect of a protective service in that one had to get a tag to go in.

Senator Grosart: Question.

Senator Riley: My question is: Why cannot that particular piece of handiwork or artisanship be transferred back to New Brunswick rather than being left in this barn-like warehouse which has no fire protection whatever? I meant to pursue this matter yesterday. I am sure that if honourable senators from other parts of Canada could see the Canadiana from all provinces, with various articles piled one on top of the other, they would rebel as I am rebelling against this type of policy.

● (1420)

Senator Grosart: Question.

Senator Riley: I just wonder if that can be returned to New Brunswick. The lady gave it as the masterpiece of her father's artisanship, for which he is very famous. Why does it repose in a barn-like warehouse without fire protection? I would like an answer to this. I do not wish to be—

Hon. Senators: Question.

Senator Riley: Question yourself. I have asked the question, and I would like an answer. Why can that not be returned to New Brunswick? The woman who donated it intended it to be available to be viewed by the people of Canada, and now it is reposing in a barn.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, while I know the honourable senator's concern may be shared by his colleagues in this chamber, including Senator Grosart, the Acting Leader of the Opposition, I can only suggest that, while inquiries can go forward to the appropriate sources in government, it may be appropriate also for the honourable senator to direct personal inquiries to National Museums of Canada with respect to his plan to return these treasures to New Brunswick. It may be appropriate also for the New Brunswick Government, if it so desires, to indicate its wish for a restoration of this piece of "Canadiana."

TRANSPORTATION

BRITISH NORTH AMERICA ACT—MOTION TO REFER SUBJECT MATTER TO TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS
COMMITTEE—DEBATE ADJOURNED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the inquiry of Senator Bonnell calling the attention of the Senate to the British North America Act as it pertains to transportation.

[Translation]

Hon. Eugene A. Forsey: Honourable senators, first of all, I should like to congratulate from the bottom of my heart all the honourable senators who have already taken part in this debate on a matter which, to my mind, is of prime importance, not only for the Atlantic provinces but also for the country as a whole and for its unity.

Some may wonder why a senator from Ontario should get mixed up in this matter, but I must remind honourable senators that I was born in Newfoundland, that I am a fifth generation Newfoundlander. So I am specially interested in this matter and I dare take part in this debate both as a born Newfoundlander and as a Canadian and citizen of the province of Ontario.

[English]

I think, honourable senators, that our Constitution is unique in including, and by no means as a minor part, I might add, in its text a series of provisions with regard to transportation. Those provisions began, of course, with the inclusion in the British North America Act of 1867 itself of the section dealing with the construction of the Intercolonial Railway. That was an absolute condition, a sine qua non of the original Confederation. Honourable senators will recall that the resolutions adopted in Quebec in October 1864 encountered some difficulties, notably in the province of New Brunswick where they were turned down in a general election and also in the province of Nova Scotia where there was very strong opposition to them. The only way in which it turned out to be possible to proceed further in the matter was to procure the passage in the legislatures of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia of resolutions authorizing delegates to go to a further conference to arrange terms of Confederation on conditions just and equitable to the provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia; but in the case of New Brunswick, if my memory serves, there was the explicit condition, "including an intercolonial railway." There is no question at all that without the provision of the British North America Act for an intercolonial railway the provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick would never have entered Confederation.

I should like to add at this point that there is a widespread impression sometimes in central and western Canada that the intercolonial railway was merely a sop to the Maritime provinces, that it was a condition of their entry, and that was the whole story. That, honourable senators, was not the whole story. It was not only that an intercolonial railway was indispensable to the entry of the Maritime provinces into Confederation, but also that it was really indispensable for what was then the province of Canada, now the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, because of the conditions which prevailed at the time.

At that time, as I am sure I need hardly recall to honourable senators, central Canada, the province of Canada as it then was, was very heavily dependent on imports of manufactured goods from the United Kingdom, and for about six months of the year the St. Lawrence was frozen solid. During those six months it was possible to procure these imports from the United Kingdom only by bringing them in through the ports of Boston, New York, Portland and other ports in the United States, and there was, of course, an agreement to bring them through in bond. But thanks to the annoyance in the United States with Great Britain, and to some extent with the British North American colonies as well, because of the attitude of Great Britain and some of the colonies during the American Civil War, there was grave danger that the bonding privilege might be cancelled; and this would have meant that central Canada, the province of Canada, would have been at the mercy of the United States. It could have been economically throttled for half of every year.

So quite apart from the defence aspects of the thing, which were also very important, there was the necessity of making sure that the province of Canada, if the Americans cut up rough, as they showed every sign of doing, would be able to bring in those indispensable imports from the United Kingdom, massive imports from the United Kingdom, through the ice-free ports of Saint John and Halifax.

So let no one suppose that this provision for an inter-colonial railway in the original act was merely something thrown out as bribe, shall I say, to the Maritime provinces to come into Confederation. It was also a matter of insurance, military insurance and economic insurance, for the province of Canada. That is often overlooked.

Not only was that provision put in the original British North America Act for an intercolonial railway between the province of Canada, as it then was, and the provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, but subsequently when British Columbia came in there were included in the terms of union, if my memory serves me, not only one but two clauses referring to communication between the mainland of the province of British Columbia and Vancouver Island, and connections with the American west coast ports as well.

So that you had written into that supplement, as I might call it, to the British North America Act for the entry of British Columbia terms which provided for the guarantee of certain transportation services.

When the province of Prince Edward Island decided to come in, once again—as honourable senators have already been reminded by the eloquent discourses which have preceded my contribution to the debate—when the province of Prince Edward Island came in, again there was an explicit term included in the arrangements for union; and, of course, when my own native province of Newfoundland came in, the same thing happened. I don't need to go over that ground again, because it has been very fully and thoroughly covered by those who have spoken before me.

I merely want to emphasize, however, that there is probably no constitution in the world except ours which has provisions for transportation written into it in such hard and fast terms, such explicit terms, as at least they were thought to be at the time they were inserted. There is, I think, some ground for thinking that they have been treated in a rather lighthearted and cavalier fashion sometimes since.

● (1430)

I wanted, first of all to emphasize this essential factor of transportation in our Constitution, without which you simply would not have the Maritime provinces or Newfoundland or, for that matter, British Columbia—the condition there was not only for the connection between the mainland and Vancouver Island, but also for the building of a transcontinental railway—you simply would not have got these provinces into the union, into Confederation, into the Dominion, without these provisions regarding transportation. So this is a matter that concerns, essentially, not only the Atlantic provinces, though very specially the Atlantic provinces, but it is a matter of fundamental national importance; it is a matter of a fundamental undertaking that was given to the peoples of these provinces when they came into the union.

It does, however, of course, affect, especially at the moment, the two island provinces of Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland. I want to say that I subscribe entirely to everything that has been said by the representatives of those provinces in this house on the subject of the guarantees for transportation services which were supposed to have been given to those provinces in what we thought explicit terms by the terms of union in each case. I do not need to go into any detail on that. It seems to me that in fact anything that I can say today, after the speeches we have listened to, is really setting off squibs after a shower of meteors. The subject was covered not only in great scope and great depth, but with incomparable brilliance by one senator after another.

I simply think it is not good enough to say, "Well, if the traffic is there, and subject to this and subject to that, and let the people of the provinces, if they happen to be unlucky enough to live in an island province, let them pay, let them pay through the nose." This is not the way in which a solemn undertaking given by a great nation to its constituent parts should be treated.

I simply therefore wish to say that I endorse completely what has been said on this subject. I should be prepared, if the Senate were patient enough, to repeat in detail all the claims that were made on behalf of the two island provinces by my colleagues who have already spoken.

I would like to say, also, that I was impressed by the fact that in this discussion so far there has been a complete absence of any partisan spirit. There have been contributions from both sides of the house, and with a singular unanimity. If ever there was an occasion when the Senate displayed its independence, its relative lack of partisanship, I think this is that occasion. Indeed, there has been a complete and absolute absence of partisanship in the representations which have been made.

I am a little disappointed that we have had no comment from the leader of the house or the deputy leader. I think this is a matter on which it would be highly desirable to have some statement, if not of government policy—this is perhaps too much to hope for—at least of government sympathy with some of the contentions which have been advanced, with equal fervour by members of the Liberal Party and members of the Conservative Party in this house. I hope that before the debate is concluded, we may have some indication from the government, officially, of serious concern with this matter, which is a matter of vital importance, incomparable importance, to the two island provinces.

I have one other observation of a minor kind to make, and that is on the point that was raised by the Honourable Senator Macdonald about the right of the ferry employees to strike. As an old trade unionist and trade union official for many years, I endorse fully the general position Senator Macdonald takes about the right to strike, but I am not persuaded that it passes the wit of man to devise some means by which the employees of these ferries connecting the two islands with the mainland could not secure the benefits of whatever strike action may be taken by their unions, without an actual interruption of the ferry services. I do not think that the right to strike is an absolute one, and I think there are instances in which a particular small category of employees, engaged in an absolutely essential service like this, could be provided for by some other means than merely giving them the right to take part in a nationwide strike of a large body of employees of which they happen to form a portion. I am not persuaded, therefore, that the right of these employees to strike would in fact really be seriously interfered with if an arrangement were made by which they could secure the benefits of any strike that took place by their organizations without the essential ferry services being disrupted.

Perhaps Senator Macdonald is right about this. I am not prepared to go to the mat on the subject with him. I have far too much respect both for him and for his forensic ability to attempt anything of the sort. But I do feel that the matter is worth a little further consideration than perhaps he was prepared to give it.

Finally, I should like very much to see this whole question that has been raised by this inquiry referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications. Honourable senators will perhaps recall that a couple of sessions ago the Honourable Senator Cameron proposed that the whole question of rail transportation—and I think for the purposes of this inquiry, that includes motor transport, really, in the provinces of Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island—that this whole question should be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications. For various reasons, that was not proceeded with, much to my regret. The subject has not been renewed, the motion has not been renewed either by the Honourable Senator Cameron or by anyone else. I was inclined myself to leave it to the Honourable Senator Cameron, whose speech on the subject was encyclopedic and whose knowledge of the subject was clearly equally encyclopedic. I must confess that the government's recently announced policy on the whole general subject of transportation seems to me to leave certain questions, at least certain doubts, seems to leave room for a thorough inquiry into the whole matter by a standing committee of the Senate and that particularly, perhaps, the aspects of that policy which concern the Atlantic provinces deserve a very thorough inquiry by the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications.

There are a variety of aspects of this whole question, not only the ferries which we have been talking about particularly, but a variety of aspects of this question of transportation in the Atlantic provinces which are raised by the government's announced policy and which, I think I may venture to say, have caused a good deal of uneasiness in the Atlantic provinces. I doubt if I should be accused of what is sometimes considered by some people my besetting sin, exaggeration, if I say that there has been a good deal of uneasiness about some of the changes which are apparently being proposed.

I therefore should like to conclude, honourable senators, by moving, seconded by the Honourable Senator Bonnell, that the subject matter of this inquiry be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications.

Senator Greene: Would the honourable senator permit a question?

Senator Forsey: Certainly.

Senator Greene: In that he has so effectively and accurately covered the undertakings at the time of Confederation, and in that the honourable senator is recognized, I think, nationally, as one of our great constitutional experts, I wonder if he could help me with the answer to this question. I have often heard it alleged that there were undertakings, either explicit or implicit, at the time of Confederation that a canal system would be made available in the province of New Brunswick to make the interior regions more accessible to world and Canadian traffic.

Was there in fact any consideration of a canal system in New Brunswick, or is this mythology that has grown up since?

Senator Forsey: I am afraid that the Honourable Senator Greene, like other people who make flattering remarks about my supposed expertise on the Constitution, is in for a disappointment. I don't know of anything of the sort, though there may well have been something of the sort, except possibly in relation to the proposed Chignecto Ship Canal across the Isthmus of Chignecto. That is perhaps what Senator Greene was referring to.

● (1440)

I do not know that there is anything explicit or even an implicit undertaking on this. There was a lot of discussion on it but this is a subject on which honourable senators from Nova Scotia or New Brunswick—especially New Brunswick perhaps—would be far better informed than I.

I know it is one of those perennial subjects which keep cropping up in the Maritime provinces. I think on a variety of occasions the matter has been gone into in some depth. It has looked as if the scheme for the Chignecto Ship Canal was pretty much of a dead duck. It would be difficult to construct, and costly, and the benefits of it were rather dubious.

I yield to any honourable senator from New Brunswick or Nova Scotia who would like to offer Senator Greene the enlightenment which he seeks and which I am incapable of giving.

Senator Buckwold: May I direct a question to the honourable senator? Did his motion refer to the transportation situation in the Maritimes, or to transportation generally across the country?

Senator Forsey: It referred to the subject matter of this inquiry, which I think is down here in the Minutes of the Proceedings, is it not?

I have forgotten the precise term but it is the whole question of transportation as involved in the British North America Act. Now, that would be enough to bring British Columbia, I suppose, into the picture too but it would refer primarily, I think, to the situation in the Atlantic provinces.

Senator Buckwold: I just wanted to have that clarified because certainly transportation is a major concern right across the nation. In my province, Saskatchewan, right now there is a major transportation inquiry, chaired by Mr. Justice Emmett Hall, doing a thorough review of rail line abandonment, and a whole series of other transportation problems connected with that matter.

I am presuming that in your motion you are referring basically to the Atlantic provinces. The reason I ask is that if it is a cross-country reference, I would like to be able to prepare for it.

Senator Forsey: The only answer I can give is that as I recall the terms of the inquiry, it says "... the British North America Act as it pertains to transportation," or words to that effect.

Senator McDonald is shaking his head. Perhaps he can correct me. What does it actually say? I have not got the text in front of me.

Senator McDonald: Honourable senators, as I recall, Senator Bonnell's inquiry refers to transportation in the Atlantic provinces under the British North America Act. I am sure that if it referred to Canada not only Senator Buckwold but many other people from Western Canada would be on their feet for some considerable time.

Senator Forsey: Senator McNamara has handed me the Orders of the Day and it appears to say "... calling the attention of the Senate to the British North America Act as it pertains to transportation."

I am sorry, Senator McDonald. If you can correct me, and if the Orders of the Day are not correct, all right, but that is what the Orders of the Day have. That means it would be confined, as I understand it, to the portions of the country where the British North America Act mentions transportation; namely, the Atlantic provinces, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, in the act itself, and Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland in the terms of union of those two provinces with the Dominion, and British Columbia—which has not been discussed but it would clearly be covered because it was part of the terms of union with British Columbia likewise.

I cannot see that it would refer to the rest of the country because as far as I know there is nothing in the British North America Act specifically on transportation dealing with any but these parts of the Dominion.

Senator McDonald: Honourable senators, I am trying to locate the original motion in the Minutes of the Proceedings, but I am unable to do so. I am as confident as one can be that the original motion, as placed on the Order Paper, referred to transportation in the Atlantic provinces only. If I had a moment, I am sure I could find that by going back in the Minutes of the Proceedings.

Senator Forsey: Perhaps we could ask the Clerk to produce the record so we could have it beyond question or cavil.

Senator Phillips: Honourable senators, I remind Senator McDonald that in my rather indefinite remarks I ranged beyond the Atlantic provinces, and he may recall he asked me a question which I felt dealt with western provinces. Therefore, I feel that the inquiry deals with transportation in general.

[Senator Forsey.]

Senator McDonald: In general?

Senator Phillips: In general, yes.

Senator Forsey: The words "the British North America Act" clearly came into the thing. I am absolutely certain of that. If it is a question of transportation in the British North America Act, then you find it in one particular section of that act, in the terms of union with the provinces of Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and British Columbia. I do not think you will find anything in it about transportation, in any section of the British North America Act dealing with Manitoba or with the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Senator McDonald: Honourable senators, I must apologize. I have just been handed the Minutes of the Proceedings of April 7, 1976 and it reads as follows:

By the Honourable Senator Bonnell: 25th March—That he will call the attention of the Senate to the British North America Act as it pertains to transportation.

Therefore, I am in error and I apologize for that. If Senator Forsey has finished his remarks, I beg leave to adjourn the debate.

Senator Carter: Before the debate is adjourned, I wonder if Senator Forsey would permit one other question?

I want to say first how much I appreciated his very interesting historic account of how railways came to be an absolute necessity to prevent the essential provinces, Upper and Lower Canada—Upper Canada particularly—from being completely dependent upon American ports and from being at the mercy of the American government.

It is my understanding though that when it came to constructing the railway itself, or choosing the route of the railway, economic considerations gave way to military considerations. I am wondering if he would confirm that and, if so, say what impact that has had, in his opinion, on the economies of the Atlantic provinces.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, in answer to that question, I did make a parenthetical reference, I think, to the question of defence, which of course was immensely important at the time. Very few people perhaps now realize that right down to the end of the century we lived in fear of an American invasion. The last time, I think, was 1895, the Venezuelan affair. But certainly all through the first 20 years, at least, after Confederation, or 25 years, the idea of an American invasion could not be absent from the minds of the statesmen who ruled this country.

My recollection is that during the War of 1812, in order to try to get British troops up to Quebec in the midst of winter, they had to make a tremendous, epoch-making, forced march through the snows of New Brunswick to get them up there from the Maritime provinces. So it was highly necessary that there should be an intercolonial railway, simply for defence purposes, quite apart from economic considerations.

It was highly necessary also that it should be put as far as possible from the American frontier, which it was. Instead of taking it down through the middle of New Brunswick or, as economic considerations would have dictated, taking it through the State of Maine as they eventually did with the CPR, they put it away up in the north. This, of course, added considerably to the length of the line and, accordingly, to the expense of both construction and maintenance. So, the military factor did come into this thing.

As so often is the case in our history, a variety of factors operated and the purely economic factor was, to some extent, overridden by others and in this case, a military factor, the factor of defence of the "new nationality," as D'Arcy McGee called it, the necessity of protecting the country from American invasion.

I am very glad Senator Carter asked that question because it has enabled me to emphasize this other, immensely and fundamentally important aspect of the building of the Intercolonial and the extra cost which it placed upon the country and, of course, notably upon the Maritime provinces.

Senator Riley: Would the honourable senator permit another question? The Intercolonial Railway did not go all over New Brunswick; it ran from, as I think Senator Burchill will confirm, St. Leonard to Dalhousie Junction.

Senator Forsey: This is new to me. I travelled over the Intercolonial a great many times as a boy. My recollection is that it eventually ran from Ste. Rosalie Junction in Quebec clear down to Halifax, with branches to Sydney, and in the province of Prince Edward Island. My recollection is also that originally it began at Rivière-du-Loup and that the government subsequently purchased the Grand Trunk Line between Ste. Rosalie Junction and Rivière-du-Loup. I apologize for pronouncing it in that English way, but that is the way I was brought up to say the name when I was talking English. I am perfectly prepared to correct myself and say Rivière-du-Loup.

● (1450)

The Intercolonial originally ran from Rivière-du-Loup down to Halifax. It took some time to finish the line, of course, and it took in various local lines which had been built in the provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick before Confederation.

But it is news to me that the Intercolonial was originally from St. Leonard to Dalhousie. Perhaps so. I should defer to the expert knowledge of the senators from New Brunswick, but I confess my surprise at hearing that it was as limited as all that.

Senator Burchill: Honourable senators, may I just say that the subject of transportation has been a perennial one in the years that I have been in Parliament. I think it has been the subject of debate every year. It is interesting for me to sit here and listen to the contributions being made this year to a debate on a subject of such vital importance to the Maritime provinces.

With respect to the particular aspect we are referring to now, I should just like to point out that it was the subject of a great political battle in days gone by between those who advocated having the route down the valley of the Saint John River and those who wanted it around that very north country to which my honourable friend has referred, and which I have the honour to represent in this house.

Senator Forsey: Hear, hear.

Senator Burchill: I refer to the north shore of New Brunswick. The battle was a bitter one at the time, and the north shore always honoured the name of the Honourable Peter Mitchell, who was the representative of Northumberland County in the first Cabinet, for his influence in at last persuading them to build the railway around the north shore. For that we who live there have always been most grateful to his memory. The railway may have been built for military purposes, but I think there was some politics in it, too.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Forsey, seconded by the Honourable Senator Norrie, that the subject matter of the inquiry re the British North America Act as it pertains to transportation be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Senator McDonald: No. Honourable senators, I have no objection to this matter going to committee, but I should like the opportunity to examine the BNA Act to see if there is anything in it pertaining to the Prairie provinces and, in particular, Saskatchewan. If so, I should like to speak to it. If there is nothing in the Constitution pertaining to the Prairie provinces, I may never speak on the subject, but I should like the opportunity to find out. Therefore, I should very much like to have the opportunity to adjourn the debate.

Senator Forsey: If I may say so, honourable senators, I would ordinarily speak to the motion, but I have already said all I want to say about it. Therefore, it seems to me that it is open to any other senator to take part in the debate if he sees fit to adjourn it. If I may venture to say so, Senator McDonald is on very strong ground.

On motion of Senator McDonald, debate adjourned.

CANADA-UNITED STATES INTER-PARLIAMENTARY GROUP

SEVENTEENTH MEETING

Hon. Alan A. Macnaughton rose pursuant to notice:

That he will call the attention of the Senate to the Seventeenth Meeting of the Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, held at Key Biscayne, Florida, U.S.A., from 29th January to 2nd February, 1976.

He said: Honourable senators, it is not my intention to keep you too long this afternoon, particularly as I have had the privilege on several occasions in the past to speak about the same subject and it would be reiterating my firm belief in the necessity for good relations between Canada and the United States merely to make the same argument once more, important as it is. I should like, however, to give you a brief report on the Seventeenth Meeting of the Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group which took place in Key Biscayne, Florida, from January 29 to February 2, 1976.

The United States delegation was led jointly by Senator Gale W. McGee of Wyoming and Congressman Thomas E. Morgan of Pennsylvania. The Canadian delegation was led jointly by the Honourable Martin O'Connell and myself as co-chairmen.

The Honourable Renaude Lapointe accompanied the delegation in her capacity as Honorary President of the Canadian section. Needless to say, her presence throughout our meetings and her active participation in all of our activities contributed greatly to the success of the Canadian delegation.

For the record, the senators on the delegation, all of whom were charged with special duties were: Senator Benidickson, Senator Godfrey, Senator Lafond, Senator van Roggen, Senator Asselin, Senator Flynn and Senator Grosart.

From the detailed report which I hope, with the consent of honourable senators, to table today, it will be seen that all senators were made responsible for the discussion of particular subjects on the agreed agenda. In particular, Senator Grosart, Vice-Chairman of the Canadian delegation, acted as Co-chairman of Committee III, dealing with energy questions—gas and oil exports, pipeline routes, and tanker routes—agricultural questions, and the Seventh Special Session of the United Nations. The Honourable Martin O'Connell and I acted as co-chairmen of Committees I and II respectively.

Established in 1959 by joint legislative action, this group, the Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, is without doubt the most important inter-legislative contact which Canada has.

In view of the growing importance and relevance of Congressional action in many Canadian-American issues, an importance which was recently underlined by the report of the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs on Canada-United States Relations, the Canadian section has sought to improve these legislative encounters by making the discussions more substantive, more relevant to the current bilateral problems. In this objective we met with willing cooperation from our United States counterparts.

My opinion is that this meeting in Florida was the best such meeting that I have attended, an opinion which was endorsed by several American congressmen who have been long-term participants. Among those congressmen I would like to mention particularly the American co-chairman of the House of Representatives Committee on Foreign Affairs, who, over the years, has made a great contribution to these meetings. He is a good friend of Canada, perhaps somewhat influenced by the fact that he has a Canadian wife—who is from Winnipeg, by the way. As he is retiring from Congress, this was his last meeting of the Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group. All Canadian delegates joined with me in thanking him for his contribution to the meetings and, as a token of the Canadian Parliament's esteem, I, as Canadian co-chairman, presented Representative Morgan with the Bronze Parliamentary Medallion.

● (1500)

With the consent of honourable senators, I will later on propose that the summary report of the discussions be printed in today's Debates as an appendix.

For the meetings, the delegates were divided, as last year, into three committees. Committee I concentrated mainly on environmental problems along the border and off the coasts. Committee II discussed mainly bilateral trade issues. Both Committee I and Committee II discussed also the issue of Canadian cultural legislation and regulations. Committee III dealt with bilateral energy questions, agricultural issues and the United Nations Special Session on International Development.

With Congressman Morgan, I had the honour to co-chair the discussions of Committee I. There were, within that committee, some lively exchanges, particularly on the Garrison Diversion Unit, west coast pollution, law of the sea questions, and the deletion of commercials on cable TV.

Honourable senators might find it interesting to read in more detail the summary of these discussions and those of the other two committees, which I hope will be printed in the Debates of the Senate.

At the plenary session, the rapporteur in each committee reported his committee's discussions. This was followed by a wide-ranging discussion on the general state of Canadian-American relations. There was wide participation by both delegations, which focused in a valuable way, I think, on the dangers of misunderstanding by Americans of measures which Canada has found it necessary to take in order to protect its identity.

Over all, I can say that the discussions throughout were of a high quality. Delegates from both sides had been briefed on details of the issues under discussion and were well prepared. I might add that copies of the recent report of the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs were distributed among the American delegation. Co-Chairman Morgan remarked particularly on the report's recommendation for improved Canadian contacts with Congress.

I should like to say a few words about the setting for the meeting. Last year, for the first time, the entire meeting of the group was held outside a capital city—that is, Washington or Ottawa—when we chose Quebec City, and I think it worked well. The reason for moving out of the capitals was to provide both groups of busy legislators with a period of time when they would not be interrupted by legislative duties, and votes, bells and telephones, as would be the case if they were in one capital or the other. In such a setting, away from a capital, delegates are able to give committee discussions their undivided attention. This year the American side responded to this idea and chose Key Biscayne, Florida, as the site for the meetings. This proved a very pleasant choice from the point of view of the Canadians, particularly in the months of January and February.

Successful meetings are the result of careful planning. Congressman Fascell and Congressman Pepper of Florida should be especially congratulated on their personal efforts on behalf of the Canadian delegation.

I might also mention the Canadian gift of Centennial coins to each United States delegate, together with the Centennial calendar depicting in historical terms the Centennial contact between our two peoples. This was very favourably received.

It will come as no surprise to honourable senators when I give special thanks to Mr. Ian Imrie and his assistants, and to Mr. Peter Dobell and Mrs. Carol Seaborn, for the briefing and staffing arrangements made prior to the meeting.

In closing, may I report that at the recent annual meeting of the Canadian Section of the Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Senator Lang was elected co-chairman and Senator Jacques Flynn vice-chairman of our organization.

With leave of honourable senators, I now table the report of the Canadian Section on the Seventeenth Meeting of the Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, in English and French, and ask that it be printed as an appendix to the Debates of the Senate of this day.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(For text of report, see Appendix "A", p. 2224.)

THE ESTIMATES

REPORT OF NATIONAL FINANCE COMMITTEE ON SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES (A) PRESENTED AND PRINTED AS APPENDIX

Leave having been given to revert to Reports of Committees:

Senator Everett: Honourable senators, I have the honour to present the report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on supplementary estimates (A) for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1977. I would ask that the report be printed as an appendix to the Debates of the Senate and the Minutes of the Proceedings of today and form part of the permanent records of this house.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(For text of report see Appendix "B", p. 2234.)

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Senator Everett moved that the report be placed on the Orders of the Day for consideration at the next sitting of the Senate.

Motion agreed to.

HEALTH, WELFARE AND SCIENCE

ANNOUNCEMENT OF COMMITTEE MEETING

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, may I have leave to make a brief announcement?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, when making my statement on the adjournment motion, I did not know that the Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science had a meeting scheduled for Tuesday next, June 22. I have since been informed by the chairman that this committee will meet at 5.30 p.m. on Tuesday.

Senator Grosart: With permission.

The Senate adjourned until Monday, June 21, at 8 p.m.

APPENDIX "A"

(See p. 2223)

REPORT OF THE CANADIAN SECTION
ON THE SEVENTEENTH MEETING OF THE
CANADA-UNITED STATES INTER-PARLIAMENTARY GROUP

The Seventeenth Meeting of the Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group took place in Key Biscayne, Florida, January 29 to February 2, 1976.

The United States delegation was led jointly by Senator Gale W. McGee (Wyoming) and Congressman Thomas E. Morgan (Pennsylvania). In addition to the two Co-Chairmen, the delegation consisted of the following members:

Senate

Hon. Carl T. Curtis (Nebraska)
Hon. Quentin N. Burdick (N. Dakota)
Hon. Ted Stevens (Alaska)
Hon. Mike Gravel (Alaska)
Hon. William D. Hathaway (Maine)
Hon. Ernest F. Hollings (S. Carolina)

House of Representatives

Hon. Harold T. Johnson (California)
Hon. William D. Randall (Missouri)
Hon. Lloyd Meeds (Washington)
Hon. Dante B. Fascell (Florida)
Hon. Sam M. Gibbons (Florida)
Hon. John J. LaFalce (New York)
Hon. Max Baucus (Montana)
Hon. Claude Pepper (Florida)
Hon. Pierre S. du Pont (Delaware)
Hon. Robert C. McEwen (New York)
Hon. Philip E. Ruppe (Michigan)
Hon. Jack Kemp (New York)

The Canadian delegation was led jointly by the Honourable Alan A. Macnaughton, P.C., of the Senate and the Honourable Martin O'Connell, P.C., M.P., of the House of Commons. The Speaker of the Senate, the Honourable Renaude Lapointe, accompanied the delegation in her capacity as an Honorary President of the Canadian Section.

The other members were:

Senate

Hon. W. Benidickson, P.C. (Ontario)
Hon. J. Godfrey (Ontario)
Hon. P. Lafond (Quebec)
Hon. George van Roggen (British Columbia)
Hon. M. Asselin, P.C. (Quebec)
Hon. Jacques Flynn, P.C. (Quebec)
Hon. Allister Grosart (Ontario)

House of Commons

Miss Coline Campbell, M.P. (Nova Scotia)
Mr. Jacques Guilbault, M.P. (Quebec)
Mr. Ed. Lumley, M.P. (Ontario)
Mr. John Roberts, M.P. (Ontario)
Mr. W. K. Robinson, M.P. (Ontario)
Mr. Jacques Trudel, M.P. (Quebec)
Mr. Roger Young, M.P. (Ontario)

Mr. L. Alexander, M.P. (Ontario)
Mr. P. Bawden, M.P. (Alberta)
Mr. David MacDonald, M.P. (Prince Edward Island)
Mr. Jack Marshall, M.P. (Newfoundland)
Mr. Jack Murta, M.P. (Manitoba)
Mr. Frank Oberle, M.P. (British Columbia)
Mr. Andrew Brewin, M.P. (Ontario)
Mr. Gilbert Rondeau, M.P. (Quebec)

Summaries prepared by the Canadian Section of the discussions held in the three Committees and the closing plenary discussion are attached herewith.

Respectfully submitted,

Alan A. Macnaughton
Co-Chairman.

Martin O'Connell
Co-Chairman.

AGENDA

COMMITTEE I

Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement
Trans-boundary river pollution problems
(1) Garrison Diversion Unit
(2) Flathead River
(3) Richelieu and Lake Champlain
(4) Skagit River
Coastal pollution problems—tankers and refineries
(1) West Coast
(2) Eastport
Salt water boundary issues off Maine and the West Coast
Law of the Sea
Canadian cultural legislation and regulations

COMMITTEE II

Canada-U.S. Automotive Agreement
U.S. Dumping Charges and Countervailing Duties
Multi-National Corporations
(1) U.S. application of controls on trade with Cuba
(2) Canadian Foreign Investment Review Act
(3) Extension to Canada of U.S. restrictions on political contributions
(4) Potash
Canadian anti-inflation programme
Canadian cultural legislation and regulations
Multilateral trade negotiations

COMMITTEE III

Energy
(1) Gas and oil exports
(2) Pipeline routes
(3) Pipeline treaty
(4) Tanker routes
Agricultural Questions
(1) Egg and beef quotas

- (2) Grain—national marketing systems
—international perspective

7th Special Session of U.N.

COMMITTEE I

THE GREAT LAKES WATER QUALITY AGREEMENT

Opening discussions dealt with progress toward the objectives laid down in the Agreement. The Canadian spokesman pointed out that by the end of 1975 Canada had 97% of targetted projects completed or in process of implementation, while the United States had only 60%. American delegates spoke of the Talmadge-Nunn amendment in the Senate, which would have imposed further delay in the appropriation of U.S. sewage treatment funds. Assurances were given the Canadian delegates that, while this amendment had been popular in the House, the final result of the Congressional legislative conference would not be detrimental to the Great Lakes clean-up projects. By the end of 1976 when the Detroit plants are completed the U.S. side's percentage will rise from 60% to 80% and by 1978 it will rise still higher.

It was recognized that Lake Erie was still a problem due mainly to the phosphates' discharge which is not controlled on the American side. Lake Ontario's problem appears to involve the discharge of chemicals, including PCB's, which may be transmitted by air as well as by direct discharge. The Canadian side drew the Committee's attention to the recent Environmental Contaminants Act which requires industry to inform government of the likely environmental impact of any new or expanded activities as an example of legislation which merited attention. It was argued by both sides that air pollution of the lakes should be looked at more carefully. Vessel pollution from both commercial and pleasure craft were cited as an additional problem. Remedial controls varied between the two countries, Canada preferring a requirement for holding tanks and the U.S. satisfied with treated flow-throttling systems.

While admitting that U.S. states bordering on the lakes were more concerned about Great Lakes pollution than was the U.S. federal government, an American spokesman stated that Congress should again make this vast clean-up programme a top priority.

GARRISON DIVERSION

On the Garrison Diversion project, a lively discussion took place mainly between legislators from closely involved areas on both sides of the Manitoba/North Dakota border. The American spokesman contended that

- (a) the project was not in violation of the treaty,
- (b) the project might even result in an improvement to the quality of the Souris River
- (c) the possibilities for irrigation would be improved as would flood control.

In particular this spokesman stressed that the Souris River was dry more than 40% of the time—often up to six months in a year in recent decades. Although the mock-up done by the American authorities showed there might be some increase in salinity, he disputed that the large increased flow resulting from the project would detrimentally affect the growing season in the area.

The Canadian spokesman stated that the Canadian and Manitoba concerns centred on three aspects:

- (a) the increased frequency and duration of flooding particularly in the Souris River
- (b) the possible degradation of the water due to leaching of sulphates, chlorates, nutrients or pesticides etc. through the soil into the water
- (c) the introduction of previously unknown fish, parasites or fish diseases into the Souris-Assiniboine-Red River system from the Missouri system.

Canada and Manitoba presented formal objections to the project to the IJC. Stressing Canadian concern over possible degradation of a system stretching right up to Hudson's Bay, the Canadian delegates asked about the Souris loop alternative and also whether the work might have gone ahead so far that the IJC report would be merely academic when it was issued.

The American spokesman stated that, while work was continuing, nothing would be completed which would irrevocably affect Canada. There was still a long way to go before completion. The alternative of the Souris loop was still possible. In concluding discussion, it was clear that the United States recognized Canada's serious concern and that further scrutiny would be given the project in Congress. Both sides are prepared to await the results of the IJC report which it was hoped would be completed before the end of the year.

RICHELIEU-LAKE CHAMPLAIN

Discussion on the Richelieu-Lake Champlain issue revealed that while farmers on both sides of the border would welcome a flood control structure on the Richelieu, a large number of environmentalists on the United States' side were concerned that the environmentally important wetlands would be detrimentally affected and opposed any regulation of the outflow of Lake Champlain without further studies. Although Canada had recently made application to the IJC for approval to construct a new submerged weir which it was thought would have no adverse effects, the United States side urged that Canada should not go ahead with this project until further IJC environmental studies have been made, even if the Canadian application were to be approved by the IJC.

FLATHEAD RIVER

In discussing the potential pollution to the Flathead River in Montana if projected coal mining by Rio Algom was to proceed in the Cabin Creek area of British Columbia, the American spokesman emphasized the completely unspoiled beauty and clarity of the river. Business, government and environment interests in Montana were united in wanting to keep it that way. They were anxious to have a reference to the IJC on the question, although the State Department appeared reluctant to do so at this point.

In view of the fact that 85 percent of the river's watershed area is in British Columbia there was Canadian understanding of Montana's concern. It was pointed out, however, that a minimal degradation or darkening of the water would not necessarily hurt the fish; in fact the contrary had been observed in some rivers where fish had doubled in size. In any case the company's feasibility and environmental studies were not yet complete and Canada had undertaken to consult closely with British Columbia and would ensure there was no violation of the Boundary Waters Treaty.

It was questioned whether Article IV of the Boundary Waters Treaty was sufficiently strict and whether it adequately reflected the present level of concern for the environment and quality of life. The suggestion was made by an American spokesman that the Treaty should be revised and amended to tighten it up.

SKAGIT

Although not on the Committee's agenda, problems related to flooding of the Skagit valley were briefly discussed. Delegates agreed that because a new British Columbia government was now in power there was a fresh opportunity for the two parties directly involved, namely Seattle and British Columbia, to discuss alternatives to flooding of the valley and settle the question between them. A Canadian delegate offered to take the initiative to bring the two sides together and this idea was readily endorsed by the American spokesman.

EASTPORT

Discussion on the Pittston Company's proposal for an oil refinery at Eastport, Maine, revealed that general public reaction in Maine is overwhelmingly against the project. Even pressure from the oil company and the people of Eastport itself has lessened in the past year. Further, no approach has been made to seek Canadian approval for tanker traffic through Canadian waters, a pre-condition to Pittston proceeding with the project.

It was pointed out that one undeveloped and alternative source of energy for the east coast was tidal power. The suggestion was made that there might be a joint Canada-U.S. approach to updating a feasibility study for a Fundy Basin tidal project with the possibility of joint development of this energy source.

WATER BOUNDARIES

On the east coast water boundary issue there was recognition that the Canadian espousal of the median line theory differed substantially from the American contention that Georges Bank is a natural prolongation of U.S. territory. The delegates agreed that the various water boundary disputes between Canada and the United States would each have to be settled on their own merits, not related to one another. American spokesmen assured Canada that bilateral water boundary disputes would not be affected by recent Law of the Sea legislation passed in the U.S. Congress.

WEST COAST POLLUTION

Discussion revealed that two new factors have emerged in the past year in relation to the problem of west coast tanker pollution. First, there is a growing realization that the State of Washington may have to serve as a major transshipment point for supplying oil to the northern mid-west states. This would involve supertankers bringing in 1,300,000 barrels a day instead of the earlier estimated 300,000 barrels a day and probably require two or three new refineries. Secondly and related directly to the first, there is the developing concern and opposition by the general public in the state to supertankers coming into Puget Sound to off-load oil. The State legislature has recently passed legislation modelled closely on a Congressional bill which prevents a tanker over 100,000 tons entering Puget Sound. Although an oil company is challenging the law's validity, the legislation is likely to be upheld. Another important impact has been made by a recent State of Washington study which assessed the pollution risks of alternative areas for petroleum off-loading. It concluded that the Port Angeles location offered two or three times less risk than that for the Cherry Point-Anacortes alternative in Puget Sound. A Canadian participant agreed that Port Angeles was a more desirable terminal point in the Canadian view, than Puget Sound, but said Canada wished it could be off-shore. It was pointed out, however, by the U.S. side that Gray's Harbour was not feasible for many reasons.

The American spokesman explained the problem of oil supply for the Pacific Northwest and the mid-west. By 1983, with Canadian cutbacks and projected needs, 50% of supply would have to be brought in. He stated that Prince Rupert as an off-loading point would cope only with the Pacific Northwest and not with the mid-west. In any case there were some doubts in the Pacific Northwest about doing business with Canada in view of the recent gas export supply and price problems. As for the alternative possible Mackenzie Valley line to supply mid-west markets, an American participant stated a delay in settling Canadian native rights claims should be taken into consideration.

In respect to measures to prevent oil spills, it was acknowledged that American vessel traffic management measures especially in the Straits of Juan de Fuca were inadequate. Increased effort and funds should be forthcoming to provide an effective system of controlling incoming and outgoing tanker traffic in the area particularly in view of the projected increase in size and number of tankers involved.

The problem of containing huge oil spills and the techniques used for clean-up were also discussed. Both sides agreed that more research was urgently needed in this area and there was also recognition that it would be costly.

LAW OF THE SEA

On this subject, the discussions centered on the U.S. Senate bill establishing a 200-mile fishing limit off U.S. coasts which had been passed by the Senate two days before the meeting. U.S. delegates emphasized that the legislation established an interim conservation zone and that the main aim of the bill was to protect certain species until the Law of the Sea Conference could agree on conservation measures. The law also was designed to encourage ground fishing for the U.S. It would not take effect until July 1977. U.S. delegates expressed the opinion that the Senate version would probably prevail in Conference and the President would probably not veto it.

American participants explained that the delay in the Law of the Sea negotiations in reaching a successful conclusion had pushed the Congress into this unilateral action. It was designed to obtain some regime for the living resources before it was too late. Opinion was sharply divided among the U.S. delegates as to whether such unilateral action would trigger other nations to follow suit with unilateral action of their own. A Canadian delegate expressed the view that there would be a resulting political pressure on the Canadian government to take similar action.

Concern was expressed by delegates on both sides that the developing nations in particular would find it hard to understand this action as anything but selfish when taken by such a wealthy country as the United States. It was, said an American, only a matter of $950 million in a trillion dollar economy. The unilateral grabbing of 200 miles, he said, might endanger future American relations with the developing countries. He urged Canada to intervene in multilateral conferences on the U.S.'s behalf to mitigate the negative reaction among the developing nations.

It was questioned whether the U.S. action would prejudice the chances of agreement at the upcoming March and July sessions of the Law of the Sea Conference. The American side explained that the delay in the effective date of the legislation, to July 1977, should circumvent this difficulty and might, in effect, act as a stimulant to a successful settlement.

One Canadian participant stated that Canada was unlikely to move unilaterally even in view of the U.S. move because not only a regime for the living resources was involved. All aspects of Law of the Sea questions had to be included, such as questions related to the deep sea bed, pollution and international straits. One American delegate stated that the key to the multilateral negotiations was the deep sea bed and another U.S. participant spoke of the strength of the U.S. mining lobby.

The Canadian approach, explained several delegates, was to obtain a breathing space in the critical fisheries problem. One Canadian thought the U.S. unilateral move might make this more complicated for Canada. Canada's objective was to protect the species and fishing rights by concluding a series of bilateral agreements limiting fishing off Canada's coasts with countries which had traditionally fished off Canadian coasts. This technique had already had considerable success and agreements or negotiations had already been entered into with Norway, Spain, Poland and Portugal.

The American side assured Canadian delegates that neither the House nor the Senate bill would overtake agreements or abrogate treaties and that Canadian-American arrangements or negotiations in these areas would not be affected.

CANADIAN CULTURAL LEGISLATION AND REGULATION

In Committee I's discussion of this question,* the American side contended that the Canadian regulations and legislation regarding cable commercial deletion and the status of Canadian advertisers on U.S. stations constituted a violation of GATT by putting an imported good or service in a disadvantageous position. Further they also contravened Section 306 of the U.S. Trade Reform Act. The U.S. spokesman said that United States' interests were ready to sit down and work out some agreement on the problem. Otherwise he said there was a real possibility of American retaliation. Jamming was specifically mentioned. Why, asked the American spokesman, does not Canada cut out the whole programme, why only the commercial signal?

It was clear from the discussions that there were differing Canadian viewpoints on this issue as there had been among American delegates in regard to the Law of the Sea questions discussed earlier. The Canadian regulations were explained in terms of the need to protect Canada's cultural integrity with all the difficulties entailed in a vast country, a small scattered population, two official languages and indigenous Indian and Eskimo groups. The extent and effect of the spillover of U.S. programmes on Canada was set forth and it was stressed that 34% of Canadian programmes are purchased from U.S. producers. The amount, about $20 million, spent by Canadian advertisers on U.S. television stations amounted to 10% of the income of the entire Canadian television industry and this money was needed to support the expansion of the industry into additional parts of Canada. In addition there was advertising by U.S. multinationals which spilled over into Canada and removed further substantial additional advertising revenue to Canadian television. An American T.V. station had admitted before a Canadian legislative committee that the major portion of its profits were secured on the Canadian market, but it recognized it was not licensed for Canada. It was revealed during discussions that passage of Bill C-58 would have a delayed impact on Canadian advertisers and U.S. stations in view of the fact that advance two-year advertising packages had been sold to Canadian advertisers in anticipation of the Canadian regulations. Both sides agreed that it was a positive step that representatives of the two governments had finally met on this issue, but the American side expressed the hope that there would be a parity in the level of participants at the next meeting on this subject.

COMMITTEE II

TRANS-BORDER ECONOMIC ISSUES

The American chairman opened the meeting with a general statement on Canada-U.S. relations. It was his view that if the United States took Canada for granted, it was because the friendship between the two countries was that of two life-long friends whose relationship was unquestioned unless some extraordinary event occurred. Such a friendship was never seriously impaired by small irritants. If Congress appeared to be disinterested in Canadian affairs, he attributed this to its preoccupations with other problems around the world. The Canadian chairman agreed that the mutual friendship between Canada and the U.S. lent itself to the resolution of disagreements in a reasonable way.

CANADA-U.S. AUTOMOTIVE AGREEMENT

The discussion of the auto pact was introduced by two American participants who dismissed the current call for renegotiation in the media in the United States as not representative of the true view of Congress. The auto pact was a landmark agreement which might need a general review after 11 years but did not require renegotiation, was working well and had substantially benefitted both countries. The protest in the United States had arisen as a result of increased unemployment in the auto industry and the automatic move toward a more protectionist posture following a downswing in the economic cycle. Statistics did represent something of a problem on the American side. Most countries, including Canada, add the cost of transport and insurance to their import figures, while the United States' statistics are based on FOB figures. However, when U.S. figures were reconciled with those of Canada, the U.S. surplus on the auto pact was 'gargantuan'.

*This issue was also discussed in Committee II.

The Canadian spokesman welcomed these observations, observing that neither the report to the U.S. Senate Finance Committee or public comment from the U.A.W. had actually expressed the need for a complete renegotiation of the pact. Canada was concerned about the present situation where 25% of its current trade deficit of about $5 billion could be directly attributed to a deficit in automotive trade.

The Canadian Auto Parts Association were particularly alarmed by their share of the deficit. To emphasize the size of Canada's current trade deficit, he suggested that American participants multiply the figures by 10 and ask how they would feel in such a situation. His main concern, however, was that the auto pact should help make the industry more viable as a North American industry able to withstand the increasing threat of foreign imports. At present 13 percent of auto sales in Canada were non-North American manufacture and he felt a joint effort was needed to strengthen the competitive position of this major North American industry.

The U.S. side raised the question of the continuation of safeguards, asking if the Canadians viewed them as permanent. Several Canadians participated in this discussion. The need for safeguards was supported by the fact that in only three of the 11 years of the pact's existence had there been a surplus in Canada's favour. The industry was almost 100 percent controlled by American companies. There was no disposition in Canada to forego the safeguards.

Another American raised the subject of transfer pricing, to which the Canadian side responded that the impetus in Canada was toward retail price parity. The price differential was currently 5.1 percent, but it should be noted that one third of the profit to American manufacturers resulted from their sales in Canada. Another Canadian felt that the trade in farm machinery should be contrasted with the auto trade. There has been no pressure in Canada to reverse that situation, even though there had been a deficit of $2½ billion in farm machinery trade during the 11 years of the auto pact and this situation has been accepted in Canada.

The concluding statement by an American participant set the auto pact in context, suggesting that it should serve as a model for other areas of trade and that Americans should understand it as a part of Canada's overall effort to build up its industrial base.

ANTI-INFLATION PROGRAMME

The discussion moved directly on to the Canadian anti-inflation programme as the result of a question from the American side about the potential effect of the new wage and price controls on the auto industry. In general terms he wished Canada the best of luck with its programme. The mistakes made by the United States in maintaining price and wage control for an extended period would be judged by history. It was already clear that the control system in the U.S. had only masked inflation, that inflation had been delayed but not prevented by the Administration's action. In his opinion the U.S. economy was so complicated that a control system could not have worked anyway. It was his hope that the U.S. would never again attempt such action except in time of war.

A Canadian participant described phases of the Canadian programme of restraint and the penalties established in the legislation. He acknowledged that there was concern in Canada that the programme would not work and noted that the Canadian labour movement had established a $500,000 fund to work against the programme. He wondered if the lower rate of inflation in the U.S., 2 percent less than in Canada, could be attributed to the earlier control programme.

In general the American side was pessimistic about the prospect for success, to which the Canadian side responded that the Canadian government realized that there were pitfalls and that the Canadian programme involved only limited interference in the market dictated by the necessity to check the impetus of high wage settlements and to maintain Canada's competitiveness in the U.S. market. The American side accepted assurances that the excess profits levy on export sales would have no effect on the American market and that the programme imposed no control on the price of imports.

U.S. DUMPING CHARGES AND COUNTERVAILING DUTIES

A Canadian participant introduced this topic by noting that these two actions long authorized by U.S. legislation have been applied against Canada. He raised the case of the American action against Michelin Tire, a company which had received assistance from the Department of Regional Economic Expansion in order to locate in Nova Scotia. The United States had imposed countervailing duties, claiming the assistance had been a form of export subsidy. An American acknowledged that subsidies were suspect and called for the automatic application of duties. He agreed that in fairness the U.S. should perhaps look more at the impact and make a deeper analysis of the injury imputed. The American legislation was the result of an historical accident and would be reviewed to bring it into line with practise of other countries, possibly in the multi-lateral trade negotiations. There remained, however, a residual concern that subsidies should not replace tariffs as a new form of trade barriers. If a solution to this Canada-U.S. bilateral misunderstanding can be found, it would have a favourable impact on the multilateral trade talks.

SASKATCHEWAN TAKE-OVER OF POTASH COMPANIES

The Canadian who led off this discussion hoped that his remarks would be reassuring to the American side. He gave the background to the action recently taken by the Saskatchewan government in preparing legislation to enable it to assume control of part of the production of potash in that province either by purchase or expropriation. He stressed that the province had the full right constitutionally to take this action. It was in part a response to a dispute between the provincial government and the companies about production expansion. There was provision for adequate compensation for any take-overs including a system of arbitration. The province wished to see production expanded, not held back, and therefore it was extremely unlikely that the province would take any action which might endanger this important market. Saskatchewan knew that the U.S. had alternative sources of supply and this would hold the price down. He described the trip made by the Premier of Saskatchewan to New York to raise the funds needed to proceed on this matter. As a personal note the Canadian participant re-assured the Americans that the premier, while the head of a socialist government was moderate and reasonable, and American agriculture could be confident that Canadian exports would be maintained.

One American participant felt that the Canadian federal government ought to make it clear to Saskatchewan that it did not approve of the proposed take-over. This provincial action could reduce Canada's attractiveness to American investors. Canadians responded to these comments by pointing out that the federal Minister of Finance had told the province it would be liable to pay federal taxes on the mining operations. Otherwise, the province was constitutionally entitled to take this action to protect a resource under its jurisdiction. Canada had long had a mixed economy and public ownership of natural resources existed in several fields. In response to an American question a Canadian replied that the possibility of a federal veto of the Saskatchewan legislation was thought to be remote since this action had not been taken in Canada for nearly forty years. Canadians would, however, be concerned if U.S. investment in Canada was discouraged. An American participant was sanguine that Saskatchewan would act primarily to protect its sales, and that this would dictate fair treatment.

FOREIGN INVESTMENT REVIEW ACT

A Canadian participant introduced the discussion of this Act, which he felt was no longer controversial. He explained that the Review Board gave advice to Cabinet which accepted or rejected it. Phase I had been in operation successfully since April 1974. Phase II which establishes the rules for the review of the establishment of new business by foreign enterprises has only been in operation since October 13, 1975. One question which might create a problem for the Review Agency concerned intellectual property, a foreign company for example might wish to sell a trade mark which would be considered the property of the Canadian subsidiary. Any new controls would require changes in the present legislation which was not now foreseen.

The responses from the American participants manifested a lack of concern. In the long term capital would flow where it was needed and wanted and U.S. capital would find other outlets if rejected in Canada. In other countries U.S. capital had experienced many difficulties ranging from excess taxation to expropriation. On the whole the U.S. trade philosophy tended to prefer the freer flow of capital, but there was an understanding in the U.S. of the reasons for this legislation in Canada, particularly now as foreign capital was beginning to flow into the United States. A Canadian participant said that the legislation had not been meant to hinder the flow of capital. Canada has in fact required more investment in resource development and other fields. Another Canadian concluded the discussion by pointing out that there had been side benefits as a result of the F.I.R.A. legislation. American subsidiaries had become sensitive to Canadian interests and were now better corporate citizens.

CONTROLS ON TRADE WITH CUBA

The American participant who opened this brief discussion began by applauding the statement of the Canadian Prime Minister upon his arrival in Cuba emphasizing Canada's disapprobation of the deployment of Cuban troops in Angola. A Canadian countered by describing the concern aroused in Canada when U.S. laws restricting trade with Cuba led American parent firms to cancel contracts made by their Canadian subsidiaries. American sensitiveness on the subject of Angola was demonstrated by the welcome to the assurances given by Canadian participants that neither Canadian trade nor Canadian aid programmes were in any way assisting the Angolan airlift. An American explained that before this crisis arose the U.S. had been moving in the direction of a more liberal trade policy with Cuba, a shift which had developed alongside of a renewed U.S. interest in the organization of American states. Current American concerns about the participation of Cubans in the Angolan conflict were elaborated as well as the implications of the growth of Russian influence in Africa in terms of the threat to the United States.

CANADIAN CULTURAL LEGISLATION AND REGULATIONS

The most extensive discussion of the day centred on this topic. Differing Canadian viewpoints emerged on this issue during the discussion. It was introduced by a Canadian participant, who dealt first with the T.V. cable deletion regulations, explaining that concern in Canada on this subject arose from our desire to protect ourselves from cultural domination. The action which was viewed by some in the U.S. as piracy could be viewed in Canada as protection against an invasion of Canadian air space. American programmes were licensed in the U.S. for American stations only. He acknowledged, however, that there were Canadians who shared American indignation about the deletion of commercials from U.S. programmes relayed by cable. He stressed that the Canadian regulations were needed to support the integrity of the Canadian broadcasting system.

The first American respondent began by quoting an editorial in the Toronto Globe and Mail which condemned the deletion of advertising from U.S. signals in emotive terms. It was a "shabby, sleazy" action. He quoted other instances of objections by prominent Canadians. He found it hard to believe that the concern was entirely cultural. He saw it as Canadian companies taking commercial advantage of a property which was not theirs. While retaliation was a repugnant prospect he foresaw the possibility of jamming of signals by U.S. border broadcasting companies or the withdrawal of the privileges accorded to Canadian networks of purchasing pre-screening rights to American series programmes. Another U.S. participant asserted that jamming was an anathema to the freedom of speech and therefore was an unpalatable solution. It would be difficult to carry out politically. He felt it was hypocritical at least to delete the commercial but allow the programme to be broadcast.

It was pointed out in the response from the Canadian participants that the property right to Canadian audiences is in the purview of the Canadian licensing authority. The present regulations are part of their protection of Canadian rights. Canadians can receive 60% of American programming directly without use of cable. The international jurisprudence regarding broadcasting had established that the signal was not owned by the broadcasting station once it was in the air. Copyright laws did not apply unless the broadcast were relayed in a public place. There was no property in these commercials in Canadian law. This was established long before the current dispute. It was further suggested that producers of U.S. series programmes would undoubtedly resist any attempt to interfere with their sales to Canada which constituted the largest part of their secondary market and represents a large proportion of the profits returned on production.

An American participant said it had been unfortunate in his view that some U.S. border stations had built their business in areas where they had become dependent on Canadian audiences. However, this was a dispute that should not be allowed to remain unsettled. Another U.S. participant noted how rapidly the situation was moving. A year ago it has been thought impossible that the FCC would give its approval to jam broadcasts to Canada. Now, jamming was being actively promoted. A Canadian replied that technically jamming would be possible, but this was an unlikely solution and discussions were now underway at the official level to seek an understanding and solution of this issue. Another Canadian pointed out that the development of program reception through satellite was going ahead very quickly and might overtake the present cable problem.

A U.S. participant suggested that there should be some action from Canadian authorities as evidence of good faith, that the rules of deletion should be suspended while the percentage of the Canadians viewing U.S. programmes carried by cable was established. It would be easier, he added, to work toward a resolution if the mandatory aspect of the regulations were withdrawn. Canadian participants elaborated on the need to bring the advertising revenue back to Canada where it would assist in the development of Canadian talent and facilities.

The discussions of the Income Tax regulations amended by Bill C-58 as they affected advertising in U.S. media formed an addendum to the cable deletion discussion. A Canadian participant explained the intention of the amendments as they related to Time and Readers Digest and television advertising. The U.S. participants accepted that Time and Readers Digest was a Canadian problem which was not a concern in the United States. A Canadian suggested that there was no assurance that the advertising money spent by Canadians in the U.S. which was affected by the income tax changes would necessarily be spent instead in Canada. There were indications that U.S. stations would reduce their rates to Canadian advertisers.

In bringing into perspective the whole subject of the irritations which had been engendered by the Canadian regulations regarding cable deletion and the withdrawal of the tax concessions, an American participant said that it would in his opinion be most unfortunate if the dispute over them was allowed to exacerbate other border problems. It was largely a matter of perception. If the U.S. thought that Canadians are anti-American it would affect perceptions of other border issues. The final comment from the Canadian side was first that the tax bill was about to become law and was not likely to be altered. On the deletion problem discussion was still possible and was in fact now under way. It was suggested that these discussions should be encouraged and that an effort should be made to resolve the problem. It was important that minor infections should not spread to affect the whole relationship.

EXTENSION TO CANADA OF U.S. RESTRICTIONS ON POLITICAL CONTRIBUTIONS

Canadian objections to the extension by some U.S. parent companies of the U.S. law prohibiting corporate contributions to political parties were explained. In Canada such contributions were entirely legal and in fact it was stated that 25% of election contributions come from corporations. It was recognized that since Watergate, U.S. parent firms are 'gun-shy'.

MULTI-LATERAL TRADE NEGOTIATIONS

The afternoon session concluded with a brief discussion of these negotiations introduced by a Canadian participant who felt that the most important mutual concerns related to sector negotiations. Commodity agreements were acceptable if not one-sided in favour of the producers. Canada was also concerned that the objectives of third world countries be accommodated. There was a sense of urgency about this round of talks. They would set the future of trading patterns until well into the 1980's. An American participant responded that it would benefit all countries if trade barriers could be lowered. He agreed that there was an urgent need to complete these talks. He was less enthusiastic about special preferences for underdeveloped countries. They might create road-blocks to future negotiations to lower trade barriers. A final comment from a Canadian participant was that Canada's concern in the GATT talks arose from our dependence on exports; fifty percent of our manufactured goods and forty percent of our agricultural products were exported.

COMMITTEE III

Committee III had three major items on its agenda—energy issues; agricultural questions; and the Seventh Special Session of the United Nations. Energy was clearly the main preoccupation of the delegates on both sides who participated in Committee III, and about 5/6 of the time at the disposal of the Committee was committed to a discussion of energy related issues.

ENERGY

Although some time was spent discussing past developments relating to oil and gas exports from Canada and the price of these exports, it was evident that for the delegates the major choice facing the two countries at this time was whether Prudhoe Bay gas would be brought south by the El Paso route through Alaska and down the west coast of the U.S. by liquid natural gas (LNG) tanker or by pipeline down the Mackenzie Valley.

The Canadian delegates urged delaying a decision until the regulatory bodies on both sides of the border—the National Energy Board in Canada and the Federal Power Commission in the U.S.—had reported on the alternative proposals and the conflicting claims regarding price and supply of the three proposals being considered by these two bodies, namely, the El Paso route, the Arctic Gas Line and the Foothills Line. The Canadians stressed that large sums of money were involved; there were conflicting claims as to savings which might be secured by using one route as against another amounting in their aggregate to differences of over a half a billion dollars a year. In view of the enormous expense of energy development and transmission in the next decade, they argued that it was only prudent to wait until expert bodies capable of assessing contested figures had reached their conclusions. The Canadians felt that a delay of fifteen months would give the regulatory bodies and the respective governments time to reach well-informed decisions.

On the U.S. side, it was clear that the debate between the protagonists of the El Paso route and the advocates of the Mackenzie Valley route involves an assessment of Canadian intentions. Therefore, American participants had a number of questions. They wished to know whether Canadians and the Canadian Government in particular were actually interested in the construction of a jointly owned pipeline. They asked whether Americans could rely on the Canadian authorities not to change the basis for any agreement which might be reached and cited at various times, to explain their concern, the increases in price and the cut-backs in deliveries of gas to the American North West and recent action by the Government of Saskatchewan regarding the possibility of nationalizing the potash industry. They also wanted to know whether the actions of provincial governments could be controlled by the federal government. Finally, they were interested to have information on the timetable for Canadian decision-making on issues relating to a gas line from Prudhoe Bay across Canada to the United States.

Several Americans interested in the Arctic Gas Line said that they needed "signals" from the Canadian side as to Canadian intentions. In this connection there were a couple of references in the Committee to uncertainty about Canada's intentions arising out of statements made in the course of the Prime Minister's recent visits to Mexico and Cuba. From all these questions, it was apparent that there is a mood of uncertainty in the U.S. Congress on this question.

As a result of this situation, much of the discussion on past developments assumed importance as a guide to Canadian reliability and future intentions. The Canadian side reported on the rationale for the export levy on oil. This exposition went unchallenged by the United States side, other than for a passing remark by one American participant that Canada had in the 1960s received a price higher for its oil exported to the United States than that then prevailing in world markets. A Canadian also expressed a willingness to consider limited swapping arrangements, but this offer was not discussed.

American participants expressed concern that the National Energy Board had changed its regulations in mid-contract to justify Canadian cut-backs. The Canadians denied this impression, pointing out that the early calculations made by the National Energy Board on which exports had been approved, had been based on figures supplied in the main by Canadian subsidiaries of American oil companies and had proven inaccurate in that new discoveries had not materialized at the expected rate. With rising consumption, the reserve position had deteriorated substantially, and accordingly the National Energy Board had been obliged by its regulations, which had not changed, to reassess its calculations. Each side held to its position on this issue. American participants noted that the export prices for gas had risen proportionately more than the domestic price. The Canadians defended this position by pointing out that the present Canadian export price was still not as high as some prices for gas sold across state lines in the United States, and that the original export price for gas in the North West had been substantially below the Canadian internal price.

The shortfall of gas production in British Columbia and the consequent cut-back in exports to the U.S. North West was the subject of considerable discussion. U.S. participants wondered why in the circumstances there had been no pro-rating of the shortfall. Canadian participants claimed that the political situation in British Columbia had been special. They expected there might be a more cooperative approach in future and they did not expect the same policy to be applied to gas exports east of British Columbia. Although they were not in a position to make promises, they suggested that there was more likelihood of these gas exports being maintained—as distinct from oil exports—since contracts were long term and alternative sources of supply were not readily available. For these reasons, they believed that many Canadians were prepared for some form of prorating should the gas supply situation in Canada deteriorate.

In summing up this section of the discussion, the Canadians pointed out that there was no prospect of an increase of gas exports to the United States, that oil had already been cut back and that further cut-backs could be expected. The price for oil exports would be close to that prevailing on the world market, but Canada would not take any action itself to drive up the price of oil.

There was considerable discussion of the proposed treaty on pipelines, which had only a couple of days before been initiated by officials. Canadian participants explained why the proposed treaty did not require provincial approval of the text. However, the federal government would be prepared, if United States interests decided to proceed with the pipeline across Canada between Alaska and the states lying south of Canada, to seek written agreement from any province through which the pipeline passed to be confirmed in a protocol to be attached to the treaty. Apart from the legal obligations that this would create, Canadians also pointed out that there would be a mutuality of interest. There were several pipelines crossing the United States to Canada and the continued through-flow of this oil was essential for daily life in Canada. They also felt that Canadian concerns would be different from that on oil exports because a line down the Mackenzie Valley would be carrying American oil rather than exporting Canadian oil. However, the Canadians recognized that the Americans had a concern and one Canadian suggested that it would be appropriate for the United States to seek an advance commitment from the federal government to use its powers of disallowance if a province tried to revise its treatment of a pipeline.

AGRICULTURE

A Canadian participant spoke generally on agricultural relations between the two countries, which he described as having recently returned to the cordiality which had been the pattern most of the time. It should be noted, however, that the two governments were following somewhat different philosophies, with Canada favouring a degree of state involvement in order to maintain a stable market, whereas the United States was stressing free market mechanisms. This difference in approach was at the root of some difficulties in the egg market. Canada was trying to establish an equitable market, and this required some control of imports. The GATT decision had established the legality of the Canadian approach, but the size of the quota was still in dispute. Fortunately, the two countries had settled their differences in the meat and cattle trade, which should benefit producers in both countries. There was a new problem represented by the identification of blue tongue carried by cattle in the United States; this could lead to new controls on cattle exports to Canada. The Canadian spokesman also raised a special problem for Canada, namely, a doubling of the tariff applied to potatoes exported from Canada to the United States beyond a specified quota.

The American chairman expressed agreement with the Canadian survey, observing that there was a relatively good relationship in this field.

NEW ECONOMIC ORDER

An American participant opened discussion in this item by pointing out the role of some Congressmen in pressing for a new approach by the United States to the opportunities offered by the Seventh Special Session of the General Assembly. They had found a willing response in the Secretary of State. The approach adopted by the United States at the Seventh Special Session had achieved an important break-through. A Canadian delegate observed that the Seventh Special Session represented an important turning point, and he paid tribute to the role of advocate played by the United States Congressional delegation attending the Special Session. He was happy to see this move toward cooperation rather than confrontation at the United Nations. The New Economic Order was a process, not a single step, and he looked forward to cooperation between interested members of Parliament and Congressmen in pressing for the necessary public support in both countries.

These introductory statements aroused some sceptical comment from other delegates, who questioned whether a "turn-around" had actually occurred as a result of the Special Session. There was agreement, however, that this was a field where further cooperation between interested members of the two legislatures would be beneficial.

PLENARY MEETING

One of the American Co-Chairmen, Representative Morgan, opened the plenary session by commending the Canadian Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs for its first report on Canada-United States relations. He drew particular attention to the recommendations regarding the need for improved Canadian contacts with Congress and emphasized the importance of the Canada-U.S. Inter-Parliamentary Group meeting as a contact point between the two countries.

The principal Canadian spokesman at the plenary presented a broad picture, couched initially in historical terms, of Canada's "obstinate decision" not to be part of the United States. There have always been many points of common interest and shared viewpoints between the two countries, and this remained true. There were also difficulties, however, of which probably the foremost today was related to the Canadian perception of the danger of U.S. cultural penetration in all its many forms. It seemed possible, in view of the emphasis which the American constitution and people put on freedom of expression, that there could be a serious misunderstanding of Canadian measures taken with the view to protecting Canada's cultural identity. Other problem areas noted related to the extraterritorial application of U.S. legislation in Canada, the trade ramifications of regional incentives or the imbalance of auto pact trade and employment patterns. This speaker noted the dangerous possibility that many of the bilateral problems or irritants could together be perceived in their ensemble by Americans as a manifestation of Canadian nationalism. He concluded that he hoped the present relationship, which it was said had succeeded the earlier and "special" relationship, was still something above and beyond a "mature" relationship between two countries.

A number of comments related to the Prime Minister's trip to Cuba which was taking place concurrently. Several American delegates, particularly those from Florida, spoke of the danger of public misunderstanding which such a visit could arouse. They suggested that it could be dangerous to the relationship if such a visit were to be perceived in the United States as a sign of an overall change in the direction of Canadian policy toward the United States.

Subsequent speakers brought out some of the following points:

- the fact that each country is each other's best trading partner and that their interdependence acts as a salutary constraining factor in policy decisions
- the desirability of more extensive information about Canada being provided in the United States' education system
- the need for increased awareness of Canadian concerns in the United States as a prerequisite for better Canadian-American relations
- the advisability of developing better machinery and techniques for contact including closer consultation procedures

-
- the desirability from time to time of joint studies of specific issues to supplement the annual meetings of the Inter-Parliamentary Group
  - the importance of the disparity of power between the two countries in explaining the Canadian preoccupation with its identity
  - the useful contact between the delegations of the two countries at multilateral conferences
  - the fact that Canadian relations would inevitably continue to be close with the United States. There was no realistic alternative.
-

APPENDIX "B"

(See p. 2223)

THE ESTIMATES

REPORT OF STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE ON NATIONAL FINANCE
ON SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES (A)

Thursday, June 17, 1976

The Standing Senate Committee on National Finance to which the Supplementary Estimates (A) laid before Parliament for the fiscal year ending 31st of March 1977 were referred, has in obedience to the order of reference of Tuesday, June 8, 1976 examined the said Estimates and reports as follows:

1. In obedience to the foregoing the Committee made an examination of the Supplementary Estimates (A) and heard evidence from the Honourable Jean Chrétien, President of the Treasury Board, Mr. L. Francis, Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Treasury Board, Mr. M. J. A. Lafontaine, Deputy Secretary, Administrative Policy Branch of the Treasury Board, Mr. Guy Cousineau, Special Adviser for Loto Canada Inc. to the President of the Treasury Board and Mr. Bruce MacDonald, Deputy Secretary, Program Branch of the Treasury Board.

2. Supplementary Estimates (A) total $5 million in respect of:

- (a) The purchase for $1 of the shares of Loto Canada Inc.;
- (b) Working capital advance not exceeding $5 million to the said Loto Canada Inc.

3. Loto Canada Inc. will be incorporated under the Canada Corporation Act and all the shares therein will be held by the Government of Canada.

4. Loto Canada Inc. will conduct a national lottery along the lines of the Olympic Lottery, with a first draw following the final draw in the Olympic Lottery which is to take place on August 29th, 1976.

5. Mr. G. Cousineau, formerly Chairman of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, will be Chairman of the Board of Directors of Loto Canada and he has indicated to the Committee that while the lottery will be operated on a similar basis to the Olympic Lottery, there will be a specific review of the distribution system and the amount of commission paid.

6. The net revenues of Loto Canada Inc. will be credited to the National Lottery Account in the accounts of Canada and the monies paid to the Receiver General of Canada. The Receiver General is authorized to divide the net revenues as follows:

- (a) in the current fiscal year up to 5% for Physical Fitness, Amateur Sports and Recreation programmes in accordance with regulations to be established;
- (b) until the 31st day of December, 1979, up to 12½% to the government of each province in the proportion to the number of tickets sold by Loto Canada Inc. in each province;
- (c) up to 82½% to Régie des installations olympiques to assist in the financing of the deficit of the 1976 Olympic Games and the XI Commonwealth Games Canada (1978) Foundation to assist in the financing of the 1978 Commonwealth Games.

7. The Committee noted that the payments of the 82½% and the 12½% are subject to the 5% to be directed to Physical Fitness, Amateur Sport and Recreation programmes. However, the 82½% and 12½% are set for three years while the 5% is set for the current fiscal year. Under the terms of the Supplementary Estimates, it would therefore be possible for the government to vary the 82½% and 12½% by varying the 5%. The witnesses assured the Committee that if this were done, it would require an item in the Estimates.

8. The Minister stated that it was his intention that the Annual Report of Loto Canada Inc. be tabled in the Senate, and that the 5% of the net revenues to be directed to physical Fitness, Amateur Sport and Recreation programmes will be shown each year in the estimates of the Department of Health and Welfare. The witnesses assured the Committee that the regulations to be established in respect of Loto Canada Inc. will restrict the number of draws to thirteen, being four draws per year and ending with the last draw prior to December 31st, 1979. Based on the experience of the Olympic Lottery, it is estimated that the gross ticket sales would be approximately $700,000,000 and if this revenue is realized, the amount available for the deficit of the 1976 Olympic Games and the financing of the 1978 Commonwealth Games will be approximately $300,000,000. The witnesses estimated that the present deficit of the Olympic Games is in the neighbourhood of $900,000,000.

9. The witnesses assured the Committee that following the 13th draw, no further draws will take place unless the regulations are changed by the government. The Minister indicated to the Committee that it is his intention to bring the matter to Parliament prior to the change of those regulations.

10. The Committee expressed its concern to the Minister and his officials about proceeding to establish Loto Canada Inc. and a national Canadian lottery by way of a Supplementary Estimate. It has been the view of this Committee for some time that Supplementary Estimates should not be used for this purpose and therefore Loto Canada Inc. should have been established by the introduction of a Bill in Parliament. The Minister explained that the Olympic Lottery is to come to an end on August 29th, 1976. Officials of the Olympic Lottery and COJO were unable to obtain the co-operation of certain other provinces in Canada to continue the Olympic Lottery beyond August 1976 on its present basis, whereby the bulk of the net revenues goes to finance the Olympic Games. The Federal Government decided to continue the lottery for three years to assist in the financing of the deficit of the Games. So as not to lose momentum and facing the adjournment of Parliament, the Government sought to bring in legislation in the other place with agreement from the opposition parties that it would be dealt with in an expeditious manner. The Government was unable to achieve such an agreement and while it could have proceeded to incorporate and fund Loto Canada Inc., without reference to Parliament (as has been done in the case of other crown corporations, e.g. Atomic Energy), the Government decided to proceed by way of Supplementary Estimates. This meant that the matter was referred to the Miscellaneous Estimates Committee in the other place and to the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance in the Senate, whose report is subject to debate in the Senate. While your Committee is concerned with this method of procedure, in these particular circumstances it feels there is justification although this should not be viewed as a precedent for proceeding in this way in the future.

11. Questions were asked about the consultations that have been undertaken by the Federal Government with the Provincial Governments in respect to the establishment of Loto Canada Inc. The witnesses indicated that a very limited consultation had taken place but that it is expected that detailed consultations on the continuation of Loto Canada Inc. after December 31st, 1979 will take place at a Federal—Provincial Meeting on the subject in September, 1976. Witnesses were not forthcoming about the conditions of agreements with the provinces that will be required to effectively continue a Canadian lottery with the co-operation of the provinces.

12. The witnesses assured the Committee that while some three years ago the Federal Government had amended the Criminal Code to permit provinces to conduct their own lotteries, this did not mean that the Federal Government had vacated the field. The witnesses were of the opinion that the Federal Government had the power to conduct a national lottery and to sell the tickets throughout Canada without the consent of the provinces.

13. While the amount to be paid from the net revenues of Loto Canada Inc. to assist in the financing of the deficit of the 1976 Olympic Games is to bear no relationship to the actual deficit suffered, nevertheless the contribution is to be made from revenues to be received by the Federal Government from the people of Canada without the Federal Government having had any control over the expenditures that resulted in the deficit. The Committee is in agreement that the Federal Government should give such assistance to the 1976 Olympic Games. However, the Committee cautions the Federal Government that it should not use revenues derived from the people of Canada to cover provincial or municipal expenditures without having had adequate controls imposed on them by the Federal Government.

Respectfully submitted,

D. D. Everett,
Chairman.

THE SENATE

Monday, June 21, 1976

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

NATIONAL CAPITAL REGION

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—CHANGE IN COMMONS MEMBERSHIP

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons to acquaint the Senate that the name of Mr. Smith (Churchill) had been substituted for that of Mr. La Salle, and the name of Mr. La Salle had been substituted for that of Mr. Oberle, on the list of members appointed to serve on the Special Joint Committee on the National Capital Region.

INCOME TAX CONVENTIONS BILL

COMMONS AMENDMENTS

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons returning Bill S-32, to implement conventions for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax between Canada and France, Canada and Belgium and Canada and Israel, and acquainting the Senate that they have passed the bill with the following amendments to which they desire the concurrence of the Senate:

1. Page 3: Strike out lines 41 and 42 and substitute therefor the following:

"of the Governor in Council published, with the text of such supplementary agreement, in the Canada Gazette."

2. Page 4: Strike out lines 4 to 16 and substitute therefor the following:

"(2) An order referred to in subsection (1) shall come into force on the 30th sitting day after it has been laid before Parliament pursuant to that subsection unless before the 20th sitting day after the order has been laid before Parliament a motion for the consideration of either House, to the effect that the order be revoked, signed by not less than fifty members of the House of Commons in the case of a motion for the consideration of that House and by not less than twenty members of the Senate in the case of a motion for the consideration of the Senate, is filed with the Speaker of the appropriate House.

(3) Where a motion for the consideration of the House of Commons or Senate is filed as provided in subsection (2) with respect to a particular order referred to in subsection (1), that House shall, not later than the sixth sitting day of that House following the filing of the motion, in accordance with the rules of that House, unless a motion to the like effect has earlier been taken up and considered in the other House, take up and consider the motion.

(4) A motion taken up and considered in accordance with subsection (3) shall be debated without interruption for not more than five hours and, on the conclusion of such debate or at the expiry of the fifth such hour, the Speaker of the House of Commons or the Senate, as the case may be, shall forthwith put, without further debate or amendment, every question necessary for the disposal of the motion.

(5) If a motion taken up and considered in accordance with subsection (3) is adopted, with or without amendments, a message shall be sent from the House adopting the motion informing the other House that the motion has been so adopted and requesting that the motion be concurred in by that other House.

(6) Within the first fifteen days next after receipt by it of a request pursuant to subsection (5) that the House receiving the request is sitting, that House shall, in accordance with the Rules thereof, take up and consider the motion that is the subject of the request and all questions in connection therewith shall be debated without interruption for not more than five hours and, on the conclusion of such debate or at the expiry of the fifth such hour, the Speaker of the House of Commons or the Senate, as the case may be, shall forthwith put, without further debate or amendment, every question necessary to determine whether or not the motion in question is concurred in.

(7) Where a motion taken up and considered in accordance with this section is adopted by the House in which it was introduced and is concurred in by the other House, the particular order to which the motion relates shall stand revoked but without prejudice to the making of a further order of a like nature to implement a subsequent supplementary agreement between the Government of Canada and the Government of the French Republic, Belgium or the State of Israel, as the case may be.

(8) Where a motion taken up and considered in accordance with this section is not adopted by the House in which it was introduced or is adopted, with or without amendments, by that House but is not concurred in by the other House, the particular order to which the motion relates comes into force immediately upon the failure to adopt the motion or concur therein, as the case may be.

(9) For the purpose of subsection (2), a day on which either House of Parliament sits shall be deemed to be a sitting day."

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall these amendments be taken into consideration?

Senator Langlois: I move that these amendments be taken into consideration at the next sitting of the Senate.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Langlois tabled:

Report of expenditures and administration in connection with the Unemployment Assistance Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1975, pursuant to section 8 of the said Act, Chapter U-1, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Unemployment Insurance Commission for the year ended December 31, 1975, pursuant to section 130(2) of the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, Chapter 48, Statutes of Canada, 1970-71-72.

Report of the Commission of Inquiry into the Marketing of Beef and Veal, dated April 13, 1976 (Mr. Maxwell W. Mackenzie, Chairman), established on the recommendation of the Prime Minister of Canada, pursuant to Order in Council P.C. 1975-1, dated January 6, 1975.

ADJOURNMENT

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until tomorrow, June 22, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Motion agreed to.

● (2010)

TRANSPORTATION

DISRUPTION OF AIRLINE SERVICES IN CANADA—QUESTION

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, having been able to fly here from Montreal tonight on a regular flight of Air Canada, it occurred to me to wonder, since so many senators are absent, whether the deputy leader could report on the situation concerning air travel in Canada tonight.

Senator Langlois: I am afraid I know little more than my honourable friend, having spent the whole afternoon driving from Quebec City to Ottawa in order to be here on time tonight—and I might say that I arrived just a few minutes before the sitting began. I know what was broadcast on the radio this afternoon, particularly the statement of the Honourable Mr. Chrétien to the effect that court actions will be taken against those persisting in an illegal strike. I am afraid I have nothing more to add. I will try to keep abreast of developments, and as soon as I have any information I will pass it on to honourable senators.

Senator Flynn: Is the absence of the Leader of the Government in the Senate caused by the strike?

Senator Langlois: The leader is on his way to Ottawa now. I understand he has been delayed because the aircraft he is on has been picking up other honourable senators and members of the other house. He is expected in Ottawa later this evening.

Senator Flynn: I must say he is most unlucky with these flights.

LABOUR

DEFIANCE BY UNIONS OF COURT ORDERS—QUESTIONS

Senator Cameron: Honourable senators, apropos the current illegal strike of air traffic controllers, I should like to ask the Deputy Leader of the Government the following questions:

1. In how many instances in the past five years have labour unions defied court orders?
2. On previous occasions where such defiance took place, what disciplinary action, if any, was taken against the participants in illegal strikes?
3. Is the government contemplating action designed to force the strikers back to work, and, if so, by what deadline?

Senator Langlois: I shall have to take your question as notice, Senator Cameron. In doing so, am I correct in understanding that it relates not only to air pilots and air controllers but to other groups of public servants as well?

Senator Cameron: Yes.

Senator Croll: Honourable senators, as I understood Senator Cameron's question, it concerned illegal strikes in Canada regardless of where they took place and regardless of what unions were involved. In other words, it was not directed only at public servants.

Senator Cameron: The point of the question is as to where court orders have been defied, and that applies to any illegal strike.

Senator Croll: That is what I thought.

Senator Flynn: The point is that the strikes are in defiance of court orders.

Senator Croll: Wherever that takes place.

Senator Flynn: In my opinion, that is a good question.

Senator Langlois: It is a good question, and I will do everything in my power to obtain the statistics as soon as possible.

THE ESTIMATES

REPORT OF NATIONAL FINANCE COMMITTEE ON SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES (A)—DEBATE ADJOURNED

On the Order:

Consideration of the report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on the Supplementary Estimates (A) laid before Parliament for the fiscal year ending the 31st March, 1977—(Honourable Senator Everett).

Hon. Chesley W. Carter: Honourable senators, on behalf of Senator Everett, I move the adoption of the report.

As can be seen from page 2234 of the Debates of the Senate, where it appears as an appendix, the report itself is quite detailed and requires very little explanation. However, in moving its adoption, I should like to mention that the President of the Treasury Board, the Honourable Jean Chrétien, along with his parliamentary secretary, Mr. Lloyd Francis, appeared before the committee accompanied by Treasury Board officials in the persons of Mr. M. J. A. Lafontaine, Deputy Secretary, Administrative Policy

Branch, and Mr. Bruce MacDonald, Deputy Secretary, Program Branch, as well as Mr. Guy Cousineau, who will be the chairman of the board of directors of Loto Canada.

As the report indicates, these supplementary estimates total $5 million and seek authority to provide for the purchase of $1 shares of Loto Canada Incorporated and for a working capital advance, not exceeding $5 million, to the said company on terms and conditions approved by the Governor in Council.

The net revenues of Loto Canada Incorporated will be credited to the national lottery account in the accounts of Canada, and the moneys paid to the Receiver General of Canada. The Receiver General is authorized to divide the net revenues as follows:

(a) in the current fiscal year up to 5 per cent for physical fitness, amateur sports and recreation programs, in accordance with regulations to be established;

(b) until the 31st day of December 1979, up to 12½ per cent to the government of each province in proportion to the number of tickets sold by Loto Canada Incorporated in each province; and up to 82½ per cent towards the financing of the deficit of the 1976 Olympic Games and assisting in the financing of the 1978 Commonwealth Games.

One aspect of supplementary estimates (A) which concerns your committee is the establishment of a national lottery by way of supplementary estimates, particularly as it has been the view of your committee for some time that supplementary estimates should not be used for this purpose, and, therefore, that Loto Canada Incorporated should have been established by the passing of a bill by Parliament. However, it was explained by the minister that it had not been possible to continue the Olympic Lottery on its present basis beyond August 1976, because of lack of cooperation of certain provinces, nor had the government been able to reach an agreement with the opposition parties in the other place regarding the passing of the requisite legislation in an expeditious manner. In view of the limited time frame, therefore, the government decided to proceed by way of supplementary estimates. Though your committee is concerned about this procedure, in these particular circumstances we feel there is justification but point out that this procedure should not be viewed as a precedent for the future.

● (2020)

I should like also to call attention to three other points contained in the report. First, your committee was assured by the witnesses that regulations will be established in respect of Loto Canada Incorporated, which will restrict the number of draws to thirteen ending with the last draw prior to December 31, 1979, and that no further draws will take place unless the regulations are changed by the government. The President of the Treasury Board stated that it was his intention to bring the matter before Parliament prior to changing these regulations.

Secondly, it was brought out during the hearing that very limited consultation had taken place between the federal and the provincial governments in respect to the establishment of Loto Canada Incorporated, but that it is expected detailed consultation will take place at a federal-provincial meeting on this subject in September 1976.

[Senator Carter.]

Thirdly, your committee observes that the revenues received from Loto Canada Incorporated will be a contribution to help defray a deficit over which the federal government had no control and, though your committee agrees that the federal government should give this assistance to the 1976 Olympic Games, it cautions the government that it should not use revenues derived from the people of Canada to cover provincial or municipal expenditures without adequate controls imposed on them by the federal government.

Honourable senators, Loto Canada is in effect an extension of the Olympic Lottery which expires at the end of August of this year. The Olympic Lottery has been successful beyond all expectations, having produced a revenue of some $250 million as compared with an estimated revenue of $90 million. If Loto Canada achieves a similar success, it is estimated that it will contribute some $300 million towards the Olympic Games deficit of $900 million. I therefore recommend that the report be adopted.

On motion of Senator Flynn, debate adjourned.

CONSUMER CREDIT AND COST OF LIVING

ACTION TAKEN TO IMPLEMENT PRINCIPAL RECOMMENDATIONS OF FIFTH REPORT OF SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—INQUIRY ANSWERED

Senator Croll inquired of the government, pursuant to notice:

What specific action, if any, has been taken in implementation of each of the following principal recommendations contained in the Fifth Report of the Special Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons on Consumer Credit and Cost of Living, tabled in the Senate February 16, 1967?

(a) That every person, firm or corporation, including every chartered bank, carrying on the business of extending consumer credit, shall be required by law to disclose to the consumer the total cost of that credit, expressed both as a lump sum and in terms of simple annual interest.

(b) That all advertisements which offer credit or lending should be required to set out in annual percentage rates as well as in dollars and cents the added cost to the consumer for the use of the money.

(c) That the federal government make available, through the regular banking system, guaranteed consumer loans under specified conditions to all with annual family incomes of $4,000 or less. The loans would be repayable over an extended period, and would bear a low rate of interest. They would be made only for provident and productive purposes related to the preservation of home and family. The maximum size of such a loan would be $1,500.

(d) That the Parliament of Canada extend the protection accorded to borrowers under the Small Loans Act so as to include loans up to $5,000 rather than loans up to $1,500, with appropriate interest ceilings.

(e) Parliament has expressed, in the Combines Investigation Act, its desire to encourage the regulation of industry by free competition. However, the Act does not at present apply generally in respect of service industries. The committee recommends that the scope of the legislation be enlarged, so as to ensure that such free competition will obtain, at least in the sales finance industry, by providing for the regulation of so-called "captive sales financing"; that is, of the operations in that field of manufacturers, distributors, dealers and others not principally engaged in sales finance.

(f) Consumers are sometimes compelled to pay for faulty or defective goods, or even for goods they never receive. This is particularly hard on the consumer when, as occasionally happens, the purchaser of his obligation to pay has no knowledge of the original transaction. To prevent situations of that kind, we recommend that every bill or note given in connection with a retail credit transaction be required to be so marked on its face.

(g) That a cooling-off period of three days should be allowed for the reconsideration by the buyer of purchases made on credit, off store premises, during which the purchaser may without penalty return the goods and recover back any monies paid by him.

(h) An appropriate government agency should prepare and distribute to dealers and retailers a standard form of agreement applicable to all sales of goods on credit. A copy of the agreement should be given to every person who assumes an obligation under it.

(i) Every retail credit sale should contain a clause giving the purchaser the right to prepay before the normal term without penalty and with a proportionate rebate of prepaid charges.

(j) That collection agencies be prohibited from obtaining wage assignments from debtors and that wage assignments in favor of credit grantors be permitted only if the assignment is contained in a separate self-contained document.

(k)(1) We urge the implementation in all parts of Canada of the new Part X of the federal Bankruptcy Act, which provides a procedure for the orderly payment of debts under court supervision. Part X may be brought into force in any province on the request of its Lieutenant Governor in Council.

(k)(2) Your committee fully endorses the principle embodied in existing legislation providing relief from unconscionable transactions, and recommends its extension to all parts of Canada.

(l) Information and education—sometimes called money management budget advice and counselling—would not solve all consumer credit problems, but we believe that their institution would constitute a step in the right direction. Objective and authoritative general information would be prepared and widely distributed. This would explain in clear and understandable language what all potential credit-buyers should know, including:

(1) Interest costs, with tables in both percentage and dollar terms, particularly illustrating the effect on costs of refinancing and consolidation of debts.

(2) The kinds of outlays for which it is not unreasonable even for lower-income individuals to incur debts.

(3) The minimum net or disposable income which safely permits credit buying, and for those above that level, what percentage can reasonably be pledged for future payments.

(4) The nature and extent of the protection and assistance available to consumers under existing law.

(m) A minority of Canadians require personal financial advice and counselling on an individual basis. Consideration might be given to making government grants to family agencies and to credit unions and caisses populaires to enable them to employ for this purpose persons with a specialized knowledge of financial matters.

(n) We believe that the financing of used cars has become a social problem. We therefore recommend, in the public interest, that:

(1) In order that prospective purchasers may ascertain the history of used cars before committing themselves to purchase, a central registry of all cars should be set up in each province, with the same number associated with a car throughout its lifetime.

(2) A maximum rate that may be charged for financing used cars should be fixed by law. This would of course include all charges.

(o) Although we have not decided on any specific annual interest rate in respect of credit transactions which would in all circumstances be considered exorbitant, it would appear to be in the public interest to fix some such upper limit. Because of the tremendous increase in recent years in the use of open-end accounts of various types—sometimes called revolving accounts, cyclical accounts, easy-payment or budget accounts—with no statement to the customer of the annual interest rate at the time the purchase is made, and with a minimum effective annual interest rate of some 18 per cent, but no effective ceiling, we urge that immediate consideration be given to this important matter.

(p) In order to work towards uniformity in legislation, and to ensure that legislation is developed to complement appropriate federal legislation, and to eliminate abuses and loopholes as far as possible, we recommend that a continuing federal-provincial committee on consumer credit be set up on the technical level.

Senator Langlois: Answered.

(a) It is the intention of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs to introduce at an early date a Borrowers' and Depositors' Protection Act. It is anticipated that provisions in this legislation will deal with this question.

(b) Same as (a).

(c) The entire question of government guaranteed loans to low-income consumers is under consideration within the Consumer Research Branch of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

(d) See answer to (a).

(e) The most important change effected by Bill C-2, was to widen the scope of the Combines Investigation Act to apply to all services, including the services provided by the sales finance industry. Apart from changes in the law requiring disclosure of the effective rate of interest, no other regulation of captive sales financing, has been undertaken.

(f) This recommendation has been fulfilled in two ways: In 1970, the federal Bills of Exchange Act was amended. Under the revisions, the consumer who had signed a promissory note was given a legal defence if a third party holder of the note sued for non-payment but the original seller of the goods had defaulted on his part of the bargain. This applies to all promissory notes or cheques postdated more than 30 days. In addition, promissory notes or postdated cheques must now bear the words Consumer Purchase prominently and clearly. (R.S.C. 1970, (1st Supp) C. 4, S.I.).

Provincial legislation complementary to the revised Bills of Exchange Act has been passed. "In British Columbia, Nova Scotia, Ontario, Prince Edward Island, Saskatchewan and Quebec, the assignee of any rights of a lender or credit grantor has no rights than, and is subject to, the same obligations, liabilities, and duties as the assignor" (quote from CCH Sales and Credit Law Guide).

(g) All provinces now have statutes providing for a "cooling-off" period. In general terms, the appropriate provisions relate to executory contracts entered into by the consumer at a place other than the seller's normal place of business. To be rescindable, the contract in most cases must be for a minimum value specified in the statute, and the time within which the contract can be rescinded is also specified (ranging from 48 hours in Ontario to 10 days in Newfoundland). When the contract is rescinded, the consumer is entitled to a refund of the money paid under the contract.

(h) There is to the knowledge of officials of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs no general statutory requirement that a standard form be used for all credit transactions. However, the federal Bank Act and specific statutes in each province require that certain information be disclosed in writing to the consumer, before the credit is given. This information generally includes at least the following: the amount of the loan or the value of goods/services being sold on credit; the amount of down-payment (if any); the balance owing after crediting of the down-payment; the dollar cost of the credit; and the interest rate. The consumer is entitled to a true copy of the contract.

(i) Provisions to this effect are included in statutes in each province. The acts provide that lenders may, when a contract is prepaid, retain their share of the credit charges, plus an amount equal to one-half of the reduction in credit charges, or an amount specified by statute, whichever is the lesser. (This amount is, according to province, $10.00, $15.00 or $20.00).

(j) Wage assignments, garnishees and the operations of collection agencies are subject to the statutes of individual provinces. To the knowledge of officials of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, there is no national pattern which meets this recommendation.

(k)(1) Part X of the present Bankruptcy Act, which relates only to arrangements by way of extension, has been brought into force only in six provinces; Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Newfoundland have not exercised their power under the Bankruptcy Act to bring Part X into force in their respective jurisdictions.

In order to ensure that all Canadians have access to relief under the Bankruptcy Act, Part III of the proposed Bankruptcy Act, 1975, which was tabled in the House of Commons on 5 May 1975 as Bill C-60, not only extends the nature of the relief granted to include arrangements by way of composition as well as arrangements by extension but also empowers the federal government to offer these services to the public either directly or indirectly through provincial agencies, where a province opts to cooperate to administer the consumer debtor arrangements program.

In December 1975 the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce considered the proposed Bankruptcy Act, 1975 (Bill C-60). On 10 December 1975 that committee issued a report that strongly supported in principle the provisions of the bill concerning consumer debtor arrangements but suggested a number of technical amendments better to adjust the respective rights of the parties involved and to improve administration.

(k)(2) Exercising their jurisdiction over property and civil rights, all of the provinces have enacted some legislation to furnish relief to contracting parties in respect of unconscionable transactions. Federal jurisdiction in this area is limited. Parliament does, however, have jurisdiction for example in respect of interest rates and this question will be dealt with in the forthcoming legislation.

(l) From time to time the Department puts out information that relates to credit and currently has the matter under very active review in anticipation of the introduction of new legislation. There have been a number of meetings between the former Minister and his officials and the provincial Ministers within whose jurisdiction certain aspects of credit and regulation of the credit field falls. (See also 2 (h), (i) and (m).)

(m) In recognition of the need for money management education and credit and debt counselling, the Department has made funds available for such purposes.

The Consumer Assistance Grants program provides funds to local, provincial and national voluntary organizations offering consumer information, education and assistance services. In recent months, several grants have been awarded to organizations providing money management and/or credit/debt counselling services. The following is a list of these organizations, the amount of the grant, and a summary of the service provided.

1. Calgary Family Service Bureau, $7,000—This organization provides a range of social services to the community. The grant was awarded specifically to support money management courses, seminars, workshops and individual counselling services.

2. Community Income Tax Service, Winnipeg, $12,000—This organization provides an income tax service for low-income people which helps them avoid tax rebate discounters and loan sharks. C.I.T.S. applied for and received a grant to expand their services to include budget and debt counselling.

3. Association Coopérative d'économie familiale, $55,000—This organization has 12 offices in Quebec. ACEF's main activity is providing budget and debt counselling services, some research and advocacy activities are undertaken in the area of consumer credit, debt problems, legislation etc. Of the total grant awarded, $40,000 was allocated for debt/credit counselling and information programs, $10,000 was allocated for research, and $5,000 was allocated to cover operating expenses and administration costs.

Other grants have been awarded to various voluntary consumer groups whose focus is to provide consumer information and assistance on a variety of marketplace problems. Some of these organizations have done information projects concerning credit, budgeting, debt, etc. An example is the Quinte Information and Assistance Centre in Belleville which organized 2 public lectures on credit and budgeting and also did a television show for the local cable channel on these subjects.

(n) To the knowledge of officials of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, there exists no central registry, federal or provincial, which lists for public information the history of motor vehicles. (N.B. This assumes that "history" includes such things as mileage(s) at time of previous sale; details of any accidents or major repairs to the vehicle—that is, a complete documenting of the life of a used car). It is possible in all provinces for a consumer to obtain details as to the previous owner(s) of a particular vehicle, by consulting the provincial Registrar of Motor Vehicles or equivalent: there is a fee for this service. In Ontario, the consumer can also obtain the mileage of a used car; this will soon be available in Prince Edward Island.

(o) See answer to (a).

(p) A committee of Deputy Ministers was established at the 16 February 1976 meeting of Ministers of Consumer Affairs. This Committee has the power to strike technical subcommittees on any specific subject. A technical subcommittee on Borrowers' and Depositors' Protection Act has been so established and has met once so far.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 8 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, June 22, 1976

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Copies of Communiqué issued following the Federal-Provincial Conference of Attorneys General held at Vancouver, June 17-18, 1976.

CITIZENSHIP BILL

REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Senator van Roggen, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported that the committee had considered Bill C-20, an act respecting citizenship, and had directed that the bill be reported without amendment.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading on Monday next.

Motion agreed to.

CRIME AND VIOLENCE

REPORT OF STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE ON HEALTH, WELFARE AND SCIENCE PRESENTED

Senator Carter, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science, to which was referred the subject matter of a motion by Senator McGrand to inquire into and report upon crime and violence in contemporary Canadian society, presented the following report:

Tuesday, June 22, 1976.

The Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science, in obedience to its Order of Reference of December 18, 1975, has the honour to present the following report:

On May 14, 1975, the Honourable Senator McGrand moved "that the Senate considers it advisable that a special committee of the Senate be established at an early date to inquire into and report upon crime and violence in contemporary Canadian society".

On December 18, 1975, the Senate referred the subject matter of Senator McGrand's motion to the Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science and instructed the committee "to look into and report upon the feasibility of a Senate committee's inquiring into and reporting upon crime and violence in contemporary Canadian society and that, if the committee decides that such a study is feasible and warranted, it be further instructed to set down clearly how, by whom, and under what precise terms of reference such a study should be undertaken".

The committee's task was threefold:

(1) to determine the feasibility of the study contemplated;

(2) if feasible, to determine whether such a study is warranted;

(3) if feasible and warranted, to outline how the study should be conducted.

It will be seen, therefore, that the key word is "feasibility". If the committee decides the study is not feasible, then tasks (2) and (3) are eliminated.

The word "feasibility", however, embodies a number of variable factors. Thus a study that would not be feasible under one set of conditions and circumstances might prove feasible under a different set of conditions and circumstances.

In considering feasibility, your committee took into consideration the nature of the subject to be considered as well as the time available, the facilities required (space accommodation, staff, etc.) and the present workload of Senate committees.

Your committee held six meetings and was fortunate to secure the services of Mr. Hugh Finsten and Mr. Gary Tait, two research officers on the staff of the Library of Parliament.

It soon became evident from the work of the research officers that the common factors influencing crime—poverty, broken homes, unemployment, drugs, the penal system, lack of education and vocational training, etc.—are already well known and well documented. Consequently, a wide-open inquiry into the causes of crime in Canada is neither feasible nor warranted.

However, in the course of the inquiry the committee became aware that there is one area related to the causes of crime about which very little is known and which is now engaging the attention of research specialists in several countries, including the United States and France, where extensive work has been going on for several years. This area includes influences experienced in early childhood which may lead to violent and criminal behaviour later on.

This involves a more detailed account of the mother's health and condition during pregnancy, including the blood supply to the brain of the fetus, together with a more detailed account of the birth itself, as well as physical or psychological injuries sustained after birth.

Your committee heard the following witnesses: Dr. Michael Langley and Professor Bryan MacKay, from the Department of Criminology, University of Ottawa; Dr. P. G. Banister, Bureau of Surveillance Services, Department of National Health and Welfare; Lorne Rowebottom, Household and Institutional Statistics Field, Mr. Marcel Préfontaine, and Mr. Paul Reed, Justice Statistics Division, Statistics Canada; and Dr. E. T. Barker, Consultant, Mental Health Center (Oak Ridge), Penetanguishene, Ontario.

For the most part, their evidence indicated strong support for a restricted inquiry as outlined above, and their opinions were greatly reinforced by a number of letters and submissions addressed to Senator McGrand from Gordon E. Warme, M.D., F.R.C.P.(C); Granville A. daCosta, M.D., F.R.C.P.(C); J.D. Atcheson, M.D., F.R.C.P.(C) (three psychiatrists from the University of Toronto); from Dr. B. A. Boyd, F.R.C.P.(C), Medical Director, Mental Health Center, Penetanguishene, Ontario; R. E. Stokes, M.D., D. Psych, F.R.C.P.(C), Director of Bracebridge Community Mental Health Service; C.K. McKnight, M.D., Chief of Service, Forensic, Clarke Institute of Psychiatry; Dr. John T. O'Manique, Professor of Philosophy at Carleton University and member of the Third Research Team for the Club of Rome; Dr. Eileen S. Whitlock, Executive Secretary, The National Association for the Advancement of Humane Education, University of Tulsa, Oklahoma, and Mr. Arthur Maloney, Q.C., Ombudsman for Ontario.

Your committee was convinced that such a restricted inquiry should not be undertaken by the Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science, nor by any other Senate Standing Committee, but rather by a very small special committee composed of not less than 6 nor more than 10 members who have a special interest in this problem.

The committee suggests the following terms of reference:

THAT a special committee of the Senate, consisting of 8 senators, be appointed to inquire into and report upon what is being done, and what further avenues of research are required, to detect factors occurring before or during the first three years of life which may lead to personality difficulties or violent criminal behaviour in later life;

THAT the committee have power to send for persons, papers and records and to print such papers and evidence from day to day as may be ordered by the committee; and

THAT the committee have power to engage the services of such counsel, technical and clerical personnel as may be required for the purpose of the inquiry.

It is envisaged that the committee would utilize the services of the research staff of the Library of Parliament to write to specialists of world reputation in this field and related areas and to analyse their replies. From this analysis the committee would select 6 to 8 witnesses so that the expenses involved would be kept to a minimum.

Your committee feels that such a special committee is feasible and that it is warranted by the necessity to focus attention on this gap in our knowledge of the causes of crime and violence and by the interest and stimulation of research that would result.

Respectfully submitted,

Chesley W. Carter,

Chairman.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Senator Carter moved that the report be placed on the Orders of the Day for consideration at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

TRANSPORTATION

DISRUPTION OF AIRLINE SERVICES IN CANADA—QUESTION

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I should like the Leader of the Government to tell us what the situation is today with regard to air travel in Canada.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I had hoped to have a report available by this time. It has not reached me yet, but I hope to receive it imminently. I am endeavouring to obtain an up-to-date report with respect to the air transportation situation in this country. I have undertaken to obtain that information.

● (2010)

PUBLIC WORKS

RENOVATION OF LANGEVIN BUILDING—QUESTION

Senator Molson: Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Leader of the Government how much the cost of renovating the Langevin Building will be, under the headings: structural, mechanical, decoration, and communications.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I will take that question as notice.

NATIONAL DEFENCE ACT AND CRIMINAL CODE (TOTAL ABOLITION OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT)

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—ORDER STANDS

On the order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Argue, seconded by the Honourable Senator O'Leary, for the second reading of the Bill S-23, intituled: "An Act to amend the National Defence Act and the Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment)".—(Honourable Senator Prowse).

Senator Petten: Honourable senators, I ask that this order stand until Tuesday, June 29, 1976.

Senator Flynn: Why?

Senator Petten: The sponsor is not here. I think, in all fairness, we should give him the opportunity to decide what he wants to do with his bill.

Senator Flynn: You are referring to Senator Argue?

Senator Langlois: He is not here either.

Senator Flynn: Who is the sponsor of the bill?

Senator Petten: The bill is standing in the name of Senator Prowse. I am aware of that.

Senator Flynn: He is not the sponsor of the bill.

Senator Petten: Senator Argue is the sponsor of the bill, but he is not here, and he is the one I was referring to.

Senator Flynn: What difference does it make?

Senator Petten: Senator Prowse may want to close the debate.

Senator Flynn: Close the debate? The sponsor will have to close the debate. I think your signals are a little mixed up.

Order stands.

INCOME TAX CONVENTIONS BILL

COMMONS AMENDMENTS CONCURRED IN

On the order:

Consideration of the amendments made by the House of Commons to the Bill S-32, intituled: "An Act to implement conventions for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax between Canada and France, Canada and Belgium and Canada and Israel".—(Honourable Senator Langlois).

Hon. Daniel A. Lang: Honourable senators, in the name of Senator Langlois I move concurrence in the amendments made by the House of Commons to Bill S-32.

It will be recalled that Bill S-32 was passed by this house on March 11 last. The purpose of the bill is to implement certain income tax conventions between Canada on the one hand, and France, Belgium and Israel on the other. The Senate passed the bill without amendment, and then sent it to the other place where some questions of a procedural nature were raised.

Honourable senators will also recall that under the bill as passed here provision was made for the coming into force of amendments negotiated between Canada and these other countries subsequent to the coming into force of the convention itself. It was provided in the bill that these amendments would be proclaimed by order in council, and that the order in council would not take effect until certain conditions had been met. Those conditions were outlined in subclause (2) of clause 11 of the bill as it was before us, and it provided, in essence, that these orders would not come into effect until 30 sitting days after they had been laid before Parliament unless, before that time, a resolution negating the orders had been made by both houses of Parliament.

The concern in the other place was as to how subclause 11(2), to which I have referred, would, or could, be implemented—that is, in the absence of a motion by the government itself. In other words, could it be implemented, or implemented effectively, or brought to the attention of the house by a private member? Concern was also expressed that the language of subclause 11(2) envisaged the parallel passage of resolutions negating the order, whereas the preference seemed to be to adhere more closely to our present procedure—that is, a sequential order of things in terms of which a resolution originates in, and is passed by, one house and is concurred in by the other.

[Senator Flynn.]

These concerns having been raised, the matter was referred by the minister to the Department of Justice for examination insofar as it might impinge upon the rules of this house or the rules of the House of Commons. Subsequently, the department came up with the amended section which appears in the copy of the bill that is on our desks this evening.

Instead of just one subclause, honourable senators, the amendment involves nine clauses, and it is quite a complicated piece of draftsmanship, but it does indeed spell out everything that might occur in the event that such a resolution were introduced in either this house or the House of Commons. It also makes provision for the initiation of the resolution on a petition by 50 members of the other place, and in this house by a petition of 20 senators.

Insofar as the rights and privileges of the Senate are concerned, in my opinion they are fully met in the proposed amendments. In fact the position of the Senate, its rights, privileges and responsibilities, in this area are far more clearly delineated now than they were in the original clause. These amendments as they stand will, of course, only affect a situation where there is an amendment agreed to between Canada and Israel, Canada and France or Canada and Belgium, and such amendments have to be made operative. As in the original clause, the procedure is by way of a resolution rejecting the order in council. If such negating resolution is not forthcoming in both Houses of Parliament, then the order in council automatically comes into force after the expiration of 30 sitting days. The amendment also makes clear what "a sitting day" means in this bill. All in all, honourable senators, I can assure you that the bill as amended by the House of Commons is an improvement over the bill as originally drafted.

There is one other minor amendment and that is to subclause 10(4), namely, an insertion to the effect that the notice of proclamation of the order in council in the Canada Gazette must set out the terms of the supplementary agreement. This amendment requires the publication of the details of the supplementary agreement. Obviously, that is for the purpose of obtaining the maximum exposure to public scrutiny before that agreement can become law.

● (2020)

Honourable senators, as I mentioned a few moments ago, I believe these amendments to be beneficial in terms of procedure in the other place, but they are certainly beneficial in defining the procedures that are to be followed here. I would, therefore, recommend your concurrence in these amendments.

Motion agreed to and Commons amendments concurred in.

THE ESTIMATES

REPORT OF NATIONAL FINANCE COMMITTEE ON SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES (A)—DEBATE CONTINUED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Carter, seconded by the Honourable Senator Lang, for the adoption of the Report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on the Supplementary Estimates (A) laid before Parliament for the fiscal year ending the 31st March, 1977.—
(Honourable Senator Flynn, P.C.).

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I yield to Senator Asselin.

The Hon. the Speaker: Has the Honourable Senator Asselin permission to proceed instead of the Honourable Senator Flynn?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

[Translation]

Hon. Martial Asselin: Honourable senators, as you see, the Opposition is always willing to participate in the debates of the Senate.

I read attentively Senator Carter's presentation of that item in the supplementary estimates now before us. His statement was brief. I would like to make a few remarks before we adopt it.

I deplore of course, as my party did in the other place, that the government decided to create Loto Canada through supplementary estimates. I say this is sort of a camouflage of the true data of the requests for supplementary supplies that the government wanted to introduce through this legislation, as if they somehow wanted to gloss over the facts. They said we are going to include Loto Canada in the supplementary estimates. I think they should have introduced a bill that would have allowed us to discuss only the creation of Loto Canada. I believe without going into details that the reservations we made were sound because in acting that way I think the government created a dangerous precedent that is unacceptable in our present parliamentary system.

However, I hope that in so doing the government had no intention of establishing a precedent, and that our objections to the form of creating Loto Canada by an item in the supplementary estimates will not recur from now on, so that all members of both houses can discuss as usual the particular subjects introduced as bills.

I support the government when they want to help meet the Olympic deficit through Loto Canada. We were told that program will be implemented for 3 years only. When the $300 million will have been collected and paid to the Olympic Games authorities, Loto Canada will cease to exist. The minister in charge told the house that if Loto Canada were to be extended, he would have the decency to come before the house to obtain additional authority. We welcome that attitude by the government. I would say this is in a way another about-face by the government, because they repeatedly suggested, especially during these last months, that there was no way the federal government would ever contribute to the Olympic Games' deficit. This was often repeated. We were told they had the commitment of the Quebec premier and the Montreal mayor, when the decision was taken to hold the Olympic Games, that the project would be self-financing.

[English]

Does Senator Croll want to ask a question?

Senator Croll: I was merely indicating to the Leader of the Government that I recall your standing up and recommending that by all means we as a government should do something.

Senator Asselin: I am coming to that. The government said before that they would never pay anything toward the deficit of the Olympics, and I said they had changed their ideas on that. I agree with the government. Wait a bit.

[Translation]

I am saying that the government had decided not to help cover the Olympic deficit because it had had the assurance of the mayor of Montreal, the Quebec premier and the Quebec government that the Olympic Games would finance themselves. We know the rest of the story. We now face the creation of a Canadian lottery which will indirectly allow the government to cover the deficit of the Olympic Games to a maximum of $300 million. I say "indirectly" because the government could have taken other action. But of course the government did not want to go back on its decision that quickly. The government could have taken this $300 million from the public funds and handed it over directly to the Olympic Games. But indirectly, it wanted the deficit to be covered by Canadians in general.

I say, and I repeat to help Senator Croll understand, that I have always said in this house that the government should help cover the Olympic Games deficit because I believe that the Olympic Games are not only for Quebecers. This is a national event. I believe that all Canadians will benefit from the holding of these Olympics in Canada. In my opinion, this will stimulate young Canadians who will be enriched by this experience which will take place on Canadian soil.

In short, I believe that the organization and the success of the Olympics depend on the reputation not only of Quebec but of all Canada. Ours is the country that will host the athletes, whether the Games are held in Quebec or in Ontario—actually, I believe that some of the events will be held in Ontario. I believe that the pride and the interest of Canadians will ensure that these Olympics will be an unprecedented success.

Of course, some people find this formula not quite acceptable. We have even heard senators who object to the Loto Canada formula. Maybe they object because of religious and moral convictions. They have told us that this lottery is an indirect and additional tax for poor Canadians because they will want to try their luck by buying Olympic lottery tickets. I believe that this sort of thinking comes from a misunderstanding of human nature because we all like gambling and want to try our luck. This is human nature. We should not be surprised that even small wage-earners who do not have the means to buy Olympic lottery tickets for every draw will still want to have a go at it. In my opinion, this way of thinking should be abandoned. I think it is time in 1976 to follow the evolution of society and reject some anachronisms that are out of place in a modern society. Obviously, I respect the religious and moral principles expressed by some honourable senators and I think that we should not put those principles aside as they are very important for those who defend them, but we should not apply them as a general rule to object to the basic principle of Loto Canada.

● (2030)

I object to this government showing an overly paternalistic attitude in that the legislator should legislate on everything that concerns the freedom of individuals. We should let the individual act according to his own conscience. Parliament is not an instrument to pass legislation to restrict all kinds of freedoms which do not go against public morality. I think the bill before us to incorporate a Canadian lottery does not go against public morality. It would be wrong to believe that according to some principles, which I consider obsolete, we should always legislate to restrict individual freedoms as if people would not make their own decisions.

I think that this Loto Canada would help our youth to take an active part in physical fitness programs, amateur sports and recreational activities. In Senator Carter's presentation, I noticed that in the present fiscal year we could appropriate up to 5 per cent of the net revenue for physical fitness, amateur sports and recreational programs, under the regulations that will be made. It will also help the provinces that will receive a percentage to promote amateur sports in Canada.

We know that in this field we are behind the youth of other countries which have physical fitness, sport and recreation programs which are more advanced than ours. Today, our youth understand that to be in good health they have to practise sports and physical fitness. Unfortunately, we do not have the means to finance the facilities needed by our youth to participate in physical fitness programs and amateur sports. I think that this still contains an excellent formula providing the provinces with a certain percentage which will enable them to develop amateur sport and physical fitness for their youth. I am very pleased that the bill contains this clause to help the provinces develop among their youth a taste for sports so that they can be in better physical condition and enjoy good health.

Of course, like some parliamentarians, we deplore, on this side of the house, the extravagant Olympic spending. The cost of the Olympic Games and facilities could certainly have been lower. But the mayor of Montreal told us that inflation was the culprit, so that today we are faced with a deficit of about $1 billion or $900 million. It is not fair that only Quebecers should bear this financial burden. Recently, I read an article saying that after the Olympics the Montreal taxpayers will experience extremely severe economic hardships. The city of Montreal, I mean the taxpayers of Montreal, will have to pay one-third of the Olympic deficit, or about $300 million.

The Hon. the Speaker: $200 million.

Senator Asselin: I thank the Speaker for correcting me. She said that we will have to pay $200 million. It is still too much. It is still too much for the Montreal taxpayers. As I said earlier, I think this is a national event from which all Canadians will benefit. Therefore, it would be only fair that the Montreal taxpayers should not have to pay alone such a high amount, $200 million. I repeat, I read last week that according to some economists, the city of Montreal will experience extremely severe economic hardships after the Olympics. This is because both foreign investments and provincial investments will dry up. After spending considerable amounts for the Olympic Games, the province will have to diversify its future investments in order to look after other sectors in the city of Montreal. They will also have to look after the rural districts that had been neglected for some time in order to spend all the funds available on the facilities for the Olympic Games.

As for myself, I am in favour of that bill. In addition, and this may reassure the Canadian people, the mayor of Montreal as well as the province of Quebec and the officials responsible for the Olympic Games have agreed to launch, after the Games, an investigation into the management for the construction of facilities at the Montreal Olympics. A parliamentary inquiry could be held. I think that it is only fair to the Canadian people who will spend money to make up the deficit. We must make sure that the Olympic facilities were properly built. The mayor of Montreal has renewed his promise to submit to Parliament all the data involved if an investigation is conducted by a parliamentary committee and he eagerly endorsed that suggestion. I think that this assurance will help Canadians to better understand the problems now facing COJO.

In short, we support the principle of the bill. We repeat that we object to the fact that the bill was introduced by way of supplementary estimates. We would have preferred a bill entitled Loto Canada Incorporated, but we have been assured that it will not be a precedent. In short, we endorse the formula and approve its principle.

● (2040)

Hon. Léopold Langlois: Honourable senators, I merely wish to add a few comments following the remarks made by my friend, Senator Asselin.

The senator first deplored that a separate bill was not introduced instead of an item in the supplementary estimates. The reason for this decision was clearly explained by the Honourable Jean Chrétien. He first noted the generous offer made by the Leader of the Opposition in the other place to support such a bill, but this offer was made on the condition that the bill would receive quick approval by the house, and that it was necessary. As honourable senators know, the Olympic lottery will come to an end next August and since no agreements had been made with the other provinces, it was necessary for the government to step in immediately in order to extend this means of funding the Olympic Games. Unfortunately, it was not possible to get the other party leaders to agree in the other place. Because of this, it was necessary to proceed by means of an item in the supplementary estimates and that is why this procedure was followed. However, there is more than that. A crown corporation has been incorporated by letters patent, and this corporation will be subject to the provisions of the Financial Administration Act and will have to table every year an annual report which will be examined by both houses of Parliament. In addition, there will be every year an item in the estimates of the Department of National Health and Welfare under the physical fitness, amateur sport and recreation programs, and this item will also be subject to discussion in both houses by way of the estimates tabled every year.

So there is a possibility of review every year, a possibility of consideration and discussion of Loto Canada operations. I believe this is a most interesting guarantee. As some honourable senators have explained in this house, as well as members in the other place, this will be a guarantee that every year the government will have to give an account of Loto Canada operations. That explains why we are proceeding by way of estimates.

On the other hand, Senator Asselin has also made a remark I cannot ignore when he said that there will be a $300 million shortfall. It is far from being proved. This is an estimate established before the Games have taken place, and without even knowing what total revenues and expenses will be. It is simply an estimate and in spite of that estimate, the mayor of Montreal remains unfailingly optimistic. In fact, he has gone a little far, the mayor. I do not blame him nor do I think he made such a big mistake as some would have us believe, but he was the victim of extraordinary circumstances. I do not want to come to his defence by saying this, but we must not forget that work conditions have been extremely difficult, the work being done during the most difficult period the province of Quebec has ever known as regards labour relations. In addition, there was inflation, which was unpredictable. There was also the date fixed for the end of the work. When they have to terminate some work before a fixed date, or otherwise jeopardize the success of such an important event as the Olympic Games, continuous pressure is put upon the promoters of such a project, since they have to make decisions rapidly to prevent a delay which could be disastrous. When you are working under such pressure, I think you cannot freely take advantage of all the opportunities which could present themselves.

Be that as it may, whatever the Olympic deficit, the Government of Canada has never said it would not participate in absorbing that deficit. The statements of the Prime Minister have always been conditional upon the fact that he would not ask the taxpayers of the country to contribute directly to making up the Games' deficit.

Senator Asselin: Does—

Senator Langlois: Let me finish, my honourable friend. I was kind enough not to interrupt you; try to do as much for me.

The Prime Minister has always said he would not ask the Canadian taxpayers to contribute directly to paying off the Olympic deficit. The means used today, by instituting Loto Canada, is not a direct way of paying off the deficit but an indirect one. The Consolidated Revenue Fund is not being dipped into for an amount of $300 million to make up the deficit. A lottery is merely resorted to, a lottery similar to that which has existed for almost two years and still exists today: the Olympic lottery, which indeed was set up as a means of avoiding an eventual deficit. It was part of overall organization of the Olympics. When Mayor Drapeau and other responsible authorities in our province discussed the possibility of hosting the Games without going into debt, they foresaw means of financing them other than by the Olympics themselves. I have never heard anyone in my province say that the Olympic Games would pay for themselves. Other means of financing were discussed such as the Olympic coins, the Olympic stamps, the Olympic lottery and, in addition, to provide for extra income, Loto Canada. I think it was in the minds of those who promoted the Olympic Games to include that in the organization of these international games.

I now turn to the remarks made by my honourable friend when he talked about the morality of lotteries. I agree with him. I know that for a long time there has been some reluctance to use gambling for financing any operation or project, though we always allowed the Irish Sweepstakes to come into this country to get some financing or income. Then, if we accepted it for other countries, why not for ourselves? I think this is a change of opinion in the right direction, and on that ground I agree with my honourable friend.

Now, with respect to the cost-sharing of the deficit, estimated at $900 million, it is far from being a real figure. It is purely an estimate. I hope it will remain within this estimate. My honourable friend says that Montreal ratepayers will pay $200 million. As rate-payers of Montreal, that is right, but as taxpayers of the province of Quebec in general, they will pay more than $200 million. Indeed they will share with other Quebec taxpayers the rest of the deficit. But if it is about $900 million, with $300 million coming from Loto Canada and $200 million from the city of Montreal, there will be $400 million left, of which rate-payers from Montreal, as general taxpayers of the province of Quebec, will have to pay their own share. I think this is one point one should not forget to mention at this stage.

I will probably have the opportunity to come back to this matter when the supply bill will be before this house within a few days. So my comments tonight will be limited to these few remarks. My honourable friend presumably realizes I did not say that in any way to criticize his fine speech, but to restore some facts.

● (2050)

[English]

Hon. Raymond J. Perrault: Honourable senators, I had not planned to participate in this useful discussion, but I feel that it may contribute to the national dialogue if I do. I do so not in a critical way, because I have listened with interest to the distinguished senator's comments on Loto Canada, but in order to offset a good deal of unwarranted criticism of the Olympic Games in certain parts of Canada, as well as misconceptions about the Canadian government's role. I wish to express my enthusiasm for the government's efforts to provide additional financing to make up for the unprecedented deficit.

Beginning on July 17, the finest amateur athletes from every province of Canada—and I emphasize "from every province of Canada"; they are not just from Quebec, but from British Columbia, the Prairies, Ontario and the Atlantic provinces—together with the finest amateur athletes from around the world, will be vying for Olympic honours in this country. There is no doubt that all of the people of this country will be caught up in the excitement of this great spectacle, and much of the bickering we have heard in the past four or five years will go by the board as Canadians join together in general enthusiasm for the Games. They will be watching the Olympic events in Montreal and in Kingston, Ontario, which is one of the Olympic sites. They will be glued to radios and television sets in Moncton, St. John's, Halifax and Charlottetown, as well as in Prince Rupert, Toronto, Calgary, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

We all know that since their inception the modern Olympics have always had their triumphs and their tragedies, their bickering and their good will. Indeed, their history has been one of great disputation as the various facilities have been brought into existence. That is one aspect of the history of the Games, but a tremendous amount of good has come out of them as well.

All of us know the tremendous financial costs of staging the 1976 Games, not the least factor of which being an unprecedented world inflation. The federal government has always been an enthusiastic backer of the Olympics, although it was made clear from Day One that it was not picking up any deficit that might be incurred. That message to Montreal was exactly the same as the message which was delivered to those who at one time wanted to have the Winter Olympics in British Columbia. Many of the people in western Canada, the area where I come from, do not understand that the federal government offered British Columbia the same financial deal with respect to the Winter Olympics as it offered Montreal with respect to the Summer Olympics. The bids were on the same basis, but the Province of British Columbia declined to provide its support. That should be put on the record. Incidentally, the same support is also being given to the 1978 Commonwealth Games to be held in Edmonton. This government does not discriminate, and it should be noted that it provided financing for the Canada Summer Games in British Columbia, in the Atlantic provinces and, more recently, I believe, in the Prairie provinces. The various ways in which federal support was given were exactly the same in all cases. There was no discrimination. This talk that somehow the federal government favours one part of Canada against another is simply baseless. That kind of allegation is simply not true.

The federal government is a major promoter of amateur sport and fitness in this country through the Department of National Health and Welfare, and it is a major source of funds to many athletic organizations, as honourable senators are aware.

In 1969 the Prime Minister wrote to the International Olympic Committee expressing the support of the Canadian government for Montreal's bid for the 1976 Olympics. Although Ottawa predicted the financial deficit which it said all the taxpayers of Canada could not be expected to share, it did introduce early on two bills establishing self-financing programs—stamps, coins and the Olympic lottery which are expected to produce a total net revenue in excess of $360 million. The government also agreed to provide services under federal jurisdiction in the areas of security and customs and immigration, in addition to authorizing the expenses incurred by the CBC for additional equipment and other facilities which are necessary to bring the Games to all Canadians and to the world. The expenditures of some 35 federal departments and agencies in meeting the needs of the Games are estimated at approximately $155 million. By late February of this year, almost $28 million had already been laid out.

The federal government is also involved in such facets of this huge undertaking as foreign visitors, protocol, facilities at both Montreal and Kingston, postal services and the cultural program, which will be enjoyed by hundreds of thousands of people from across this country and from around the world who will flock to the Games this summer. And I know that many senators have purchased tickets. Those tickets have not been given out.

[Senator Perrault.]

For many reasons the anticipated deficit of the 1976 Olympics will be much larger than anyone predicted a few years ago. But this is not a time for recriminations. To help offset this cost, and because of the resounding success of the Olympic lottery, we have before us the proposal for a national lottery, Loto Canada, a proposal which has been fully discussed by the Opposition, my colleague the Deputy Leader of the Government and others in this chamber. Part of the proposal is that Loto Canada be permitted to run until late 1979. This action, through voluntary financing, will help to meet the deficit. But it is voluntary. People do not have to buy tickets, if they do not want to. If people wish to adopt the view that it is all right for athletes in their province to compete in the Games but they will not give one red cent to the Games, they can be right at home with their own narrow viewpoint. However, most Canadians will want to pay a share voluntarily in order to indicate that they are proud to have athletes from their home provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario, Quebec, or the Atlantic provinces participate in the Games, and because they know that such participation costs money. So people can voluntarily buy these tickets, and thus help to meet the deficit, and also provide funds to meet any deficit which might be incurred in the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton in 1978.

Honourable senators, I realize these facts are known to you, but I wish to put them on record again. Under the plan, 82.5 per cent of the net revenue will be used for meeting deficits; 12.5 per cent will be distributed to the provinces according to the number of tickets sold within their borders; and the remaining 5 per cent will be used by Ottawa to finance physical fitness, amateur sport, recreation programs, and various sports events to be held throughout Canada in the future. I think we all support that objective. Those events could include the 1977 Canada Summer Games in Newfoundland as well as the 1979 Winter Games in Brandon, Manitoba, and the Arctic Games.

That is an indication of where some of this money is going. It is not just a cynical bail-out operation, as some professional crepe drapers across the country have suggested. On the contrary, the government is perfectly entitled by law to continue this national lottery, and it is obvious that the moneys will go to help every part of Canada by various means.

The extended lottery will be run by a crown corporation answerable to Parliament and subject to a compulsory annual audit by the Auditor General. It will also be required to publish an annual report and to make any other report requested by the government.

All of these moves, which I have outlined, clearly illustrate that the government is behind the Olympics, and behind all the other major meets which will be held in Canada, and it hopes for their overwhelming success. The government has carried out all its obligations and has not involved the Canadian taxpayer in any costs other than those originally agreed to.

● (2100)

It is now but a few days before the Olympic torch will be lit. It will be carried to Montreal, and this great event will begin. I know that honourable senators and most Canadians, even the critics who have been predicting that the deadline would never be met and that the Olympic Games were going to be a colossal failure, now join in wishing the Games every success. This event, to which we have all made some contribution, will bring us closer together as our young Canadians from every province compete on an international basis. But in the end it is the people of Quebec, because these great permanent facilities will remain primarily theirs, who are going to bear by far the major burden of the costs of staging this spectacle which more and more promises to be the greatest Olympic Games in history. Let us all get behind them.

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): I suggest that this debate be adjourned until the Olympic Games are over. Then we will be more at ease in saying what we have in our minds.

On motion of Senator Grosart, debate adjourned.

PENITENTIARIES

ACTION TAKEN TO IMPLEMENT PRINCIPAL RECOMMENDATIONS OF SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE— INQUIRY ANSWERED

Senator Croll inquired of the government, pursuant to notice:

What specific action, if any, has been taken in implementation of each of the following principal recommendations contained in the Report of the Special Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons on Penitentiaries, tabled in both Houses of Parliament, April 26, 1967:

"That the Committee approve the decision to construct a second maximum security institution on the standard design proposed by the Canadian Penitentiary Service, subject to the following recommendations:

(1) That the specific modifications to the Canadian Penitentiary Service standard design recommended in the text of this Committee's Report be implemented.

(2) That no additional maximum security institutions be built on this design without allowing for a period of experience with the one institution under construction and the one contemplated; and without a basic review of the standard design in the light of developing correctional philosophy.

(3) Moreover, before any further consideration is given to the construction of additional maximum security institutions, the Canadian Penitentiary Service should prepare a detailed statement of the program that it proposes to conduct in such institutions, with particular reference to programming directed to behavioural change, and that every effort be made to relate requirements, in terms of space, classification and architectural design, to the best knowledge available concerning programming for behavioural change in the correctional context."

Senator Perrault: Answered.

The following modifications to the Canadian Penitentiary Service standard design recommended in the text of this Committee's Report were implemented in the construction of the Millhaven Maximum Security Institution:

(1) The control points were reduced to a strict minimum and the fencing separating inmates from the staff was removed in all corridors.

(2) Additional space was provided for classrooms and the number of day rooms was increased.

(3) Library space has been expanded and reading space was made available to inmates to allow them to have access to the library.

No additional maximum security institution of the type of construction used for the Archambault and the Millhaven Institutions was built since.

In 1971, the Working Group on Federal Maximum Security Institutions Design Committee appointed by the then Solicitor General, submitted its report (copy attached). This report and its recommendations form the basis of the planning of future maximum security institutions, one of which is at present in planning for construction in Agassiz, B.C. These new institutions will accommodate a population of less than 200 inmates, will provide more space for social development, educational and recreational programs, will include within its confines kitchen and dining facilities and will be operated on the Living Unit concept referred to in the above-mentioned report. In addition, the emphasis on security was placed on perimeter security and lessened within the confines of the physical accommodation.

The decision to build new institutions to accommodate less than 200 inmates but more than 150, as recommended in the report, was made on the basis that it would be uneconomical to construct such facilities for 150 inmates from the point of view of capital cost and space and staff utilization.

The recommendations of the Joint Senate and House of Commons Committee of 1967 also received due consideration in the planning of these new smaller institutions.

TRANSPORTATION

DISRUPTION OF AIRLINE SERVICES IN CANADA—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, at the outset of this evening's proceedings I promised to make every effort to obtain further information about the current airline situation. I am now able to report that the Minister of Transport has officially notified the airlines that the air traffic control system in Canada is fully operational once again.

The airlines today were granted an interim injunction against the pilots. A full hearing on this matter will take place in court on Thursday. Despite that, the pilots have not shown any inclination to return to work. Air Canada has commenced legal proceedings against the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association. The Minister of Transport is presently endeavouring to name a new commissioner or commissioners to the independent commission investigating the problems which have beset the air traffic control group and the pilots with respect to the bilingual policy. This is in terms of a negotiated agreement with the air traffic controllers. It is quite possible that an announcement on the new appointee or appointees will be made tomorrow.

I have been informed that all Quebecair flights are now fully operational, and that all Nordair flights are operational in Canada with the exception of one flight from Montreal to Hamilton to Ottawa.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

---

THE SENATE

Wednesday, June 23, 1976

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Honourable Maurice Bourget, P.C., Speaker pro tem, in the Chair.
Prayers.

THE LATE HONOURABLE WILLIAM A. BOUCHER

TRIBUTES

Hon. Raymond J. Perrault: Honourable senators, it is with regret that we have learned of the death today of an esteemed member of this chamber, the Honourable William Albert Boucher. Senator Boucher was born, raised and educated in Saskatchewan. He was for many years reeve of the rural municipality of St. Louis in the province of Saskatchewan where he was a successful farmer and merchant. Senator Boucher was elected to the House of Commons in October 1948, and re-elected in 1949. He was the Liberal whip in the Commons from 1949 to 1953, and in January of 1957 he was summoned to the Senate.

Senator Boucher had a long career of service to his municipality, to his province and to his country, and until his health failed he was, as honourable senators know, a faithful attendant in this chamber. Although he has been absent for some time, Senator Boucher will be greatly missed by his colleagues here who will remember him as a friendly and sincere man who made a lasting impression on this house and, indeed, on all parts of Parliament.

I know that all honourable senators will join with me in extending to his son and to his daughter our deepest and most heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement.

Honourable senators, it was with a great deal of sadness that the news was received yesterday of the tragic and untimely death of Jean-Claude Robichaud, eldest son of the Honourable Louis Robichaud. He died in Ottawa after a long illness. I know that all senators join me in extending our deepest sympathy to our colleague and his wife, Mrs. Robichaud, as well as other members of the family, in their hour of bereavement.

[Translation]

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, even if we knew that Senator Boucher's health had been failing for some time, the news of his death has deeply moved us.

The government leader recalled his parliamentary career of over 30 years; he was elected to the House of Commons in 1948 and appointed to the Senate in 1957. Senator Boucher was a gentleman of the old school, very tactful, exuding a social charm recognized by all. His departure deeply pains us. I join the government leader in expressing to his family the sympathy of the opposition.

I also extend the sympathy of the Opposition to Senator Robichaud, his wife and his family in their very cruel mourning for their eldest son. He had been ill for some time, it is true, but it is always a very hard blow to lose a child.

I know that I am the spokesman for every senator and more especially the Opposition when I tell him that we understand his grief and share it.

Hon. J. Eugène LeFrançois: Honourable senators, I wish to join the previous speakers in deploring the death of our colleague and friend Senator Boucher. We became acquainted between 1949-53 when we sat together in the House of Commons. We were both called to the Senate the same year, in 1957, he in January and I in April; since then we have always been deskmates so I have learned to know and appreciate him. He was a perfect gentleman.

To the members of his family, his daughter and his son, I extend my deep sympathy.

● (1400)

[English]

Hon. A. Hamilton McDonald: Honourable senators, I should like to associate my remarks with those of my colleagues who expressed their condolences to the Boucher family. The only thing I want to add is that most of us from Western Canada referred to Senator Boucher as "Boss" Boucher. There is a reason for that. I am sure that all honourable senators are aware of the difficult circumstances that prevailed in the Prairie provinces in the early days of the settlement of Western Canada. The late Senator Boucher played an important role in that development, especially in the Province of Saskatchewan, in that he was actively engaged in the retail business and the construction business. He employed so many native people in construction in public works, provincially and federally, that he got the name "Boss"—because he was the boss. He provided employment and opportunities for people to make a gainful living through his development efforts, particularly in Saskatchewan.

There are probably few people who completely understand the part that he and many like him played in that development. I want to say particularly on behalf of the native people of Saskatchewan a special word of thanks for the opportunities that Senator Boucher provided for people to be gainfully employed and for his efforts in providing facilities so badly needed at that time. I join with my colleagues in expressing my condolences to his family.

Honourable senators, I cannot resume my seat without referring to the death of Senator Robichaud's eldest son, Jean-Claude. I am sure we are all aware of the problems encountered by Senator Robichaud's son and the fight that Senator Robichaud and his son put up to sustain his life. Unfortunately, Jean-Claude was not able to carry on the struggle any longer. I should like to associate myself with my colleagues' remarks and to extend my condolences to the Robichaud family.

APPROPRIATION BILL NO. 3, 1976

FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-93, for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1977.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read a second time?

Senator Perrault, with leave of the Senate, moved that the bill be read a second time later this day.

Motion agreed to.

● (1410)

APPROPRIATION BILL NO. 4, 1976

FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-94, for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1977.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Senator Perrault, with leave of the Senate, moved that the bill be read a second time later this day.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report on proceedings under the Canada Labour Code, Part III (Labour Standards), for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 75 of the said Code, Chapter L-1, R.S.C., 1970.

INCOME TAX ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE PRESENTED

Senator Hayden, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, to which was referred Bill C-58, to amend the Income Tax Act, presented the following report:

Tuesday, June 22, 1976.

The Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, to which was referred Bill C-58, intituled: "An Act to amend the Income Tax Act", has, in obedience to the order of reference of Tuesday, April 6, 1976, examined the said bill and, for the reasons hereinafter mentioned, now reports the same with amendments.

Bill C-58 is an example of use of the Income Tax Act to achieve purposes unrelated to fiscal policy.

In 1965, the act was amended<sup>1</sup> to exclude as deductible for tax purposes expenses of an advertiser for space in an issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical as defined in the Act.<sup>2</sup> An important exception<sup>3</sup> to this rule was made in the case of newspapers or periodicals edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada prior to April 26, 1965. The principal beneficiaries of this exemption were Time Canada and Reader's Digest.

Bill C-58 would remove this exemption so that in order for advertising expenses to qualify as deductions, a periodical must meet the criteria set forth in the act requiring, amongst other things, that a newspaper or periodical be 75 per cent owned by Canadians and that it be edited, printed and published in Canada. The most important requirement, however, is that the newspaper or periodical cannot be "substantially the same" as a periodical that is printed, edited or published outside Canada.<sup>4</sup>

Bill C-58 would also remove the exemption in the act in respect of advertisements in catalogues and publications the function of which is to promote the fine arts, letters, scholarship or religion<sup>5</sup> under which publications such as MD magazine have heretofore qualified.

Finally, the bill would introduce non-deductibility for expenses for advertisements directed primarily to Canadians by a foreign broadcasting undertaking.

While your committee supports what has been stated to be the objective of the bill, namely, the promotion of stronger publishing and broadcasting industries in Canada, it has reservations both as to whether the Income Tax Act is the proper vehicle for accomplishing these objectives and as to whether the measures proposed are likely to achieve the degree of effectiveness contemplated by the government ministers supporting the bill who testified before your committee.

There are, however, several areas where your committee considers amendments to the bill are required. One concerns the interpretation of the words "substantially the same" referred to above and results in part from the actions and statements of the Minister of National Revenue arising out of Time Canada's attempt to clarify its status under the act following introduction of the bill. Another concerns the manner in which the decision to bring into force the provisions relating to the broadcasting industry is to be made.

In the last analysis, the meaning of words in statutes is something to be decided by the courts. Ordinarily, however, judicial interpretations of provisions of the

<sup>1</sup> s. 19

<sup>2</sup> sub-s. 19(5)

<sup>3</sup> sub-s. 19(2)

<sup>4</sup> clause 19(5)(a)(ii)(F)

<sup>5</sup> sub-s. 19(4)

Income Tax Act only result from the taxpayer having done something which is disputed by the Minister of National Revenue. However, the department has adopted a policy which has been in effect for some years whereby a taxpayer may obtain an advance ruling on a question of interpretation.<sup>6</sup> These rulings, which are stated to be binding on the minister, are obviously of great assistance to a taxpayer in that he is able to ascertain in advance how a proposed course of action may be dealt with under the act. The alternative is to proceed without a ruling and risk an adverse determination by the courts after the fact.

It must be assumed that, in giving rulings of this nature, departmental officials should attempt to place themselves in the position of a court faced with the same question. In other words, the arguments on both sides should be weighed and an objective decision reached in the light of reason and existing jurisprudence. The purpose is not, on an application for a ruling, to give a decision which is in effect an assertion of the position which would be most favourable to the minister.

In the case of the desire of the affected periodicals to obtain an interpretation of the words "substantially the same" it could be argued that, although the periodicals were themselves Canadian taxpayers, an application for a ruling could only be made by a taxpayer in whose direct interest it was to have a decision, i.e., a taxpayer who was an advertiser in that periodical. Discussions between the periodicals and the department as to the interpretation of the words may, therefore, have proceeded on a basis outside the normal ruling application procedure. However, in your committee's opinion, the approach of the minister and his officials in that case should have been no different from their approach in dealing with a formal ruling application by a taxpayer directly affected.

On October 23, 1975, after several meetings with Time Canada, the Minister of National Revenue announced in a press release that at least 80 per cent of an issue of a periodical published in Canada, excluding advertising, had to be different from the contents of an issue published outside Canada. He also announced that, should this interpretation be successfully challenged in the courts, he would introduce legislation to reinstate his interpretation.

From the evidence before it, and in the light of existing jurisprudence, your committee has regretfully concluded that in developing the "at least 80 per cent rule" it seems apparent that, far from attempting to give an impartial interpretation, the minister was attempting to amend clause 19(5)(a)(ii)(F) of the act to conform with the views of the government. Amendments, in your committee's opinion, are a matter for Parliament, not the executive branch of government.

The rule of law and the supremacy of Parliament are surely two of our most cherished institutions. They should not be allowed to give way to ministerial zeal.

Your committee is of the view that, should any periodical at any future time wish to attempt to qualify as a Canadian periodical, it should have the benefit of a fair and impartial means of obtaining a decision in keeping with judicial traditions in this country. Your committee therefore recommends that the bill be amended so as to oblige the Minister of National Revenue to submit the issue to the courts for determination.

A side issue which has developed as a result of delays in passage of the bill is that the proposed effective date of the provisions affecting periodicals (January 1, 1976) has now passed. In order to remove any suggestion of retroactivity, a fundamentally repugnant notion which should be resorted to only in cases of extreme need, your committee recommends that the effective date be changed to January 1, 1977.

Dealing with your committee's second principal objection, in connection with the bringing into force of the broadcasting provisions, your committee notes that the Secretary of State in an announcement in the House of Commons on January 23, 1975<sup>7</sup>, stated that, before bringing in provisions to discourage Canadian advertisers from advertising in U.S. border stations, it would be necessary to make sure that sufficient advertising time was available on Canadian stations. Bill C-58 provides that these provisions shall be brought into force on proclamation, thus leaving the timing to the executive branch of the government. Another method of proceeding might have been to defer introduction of the legislation until it was clear that all the factors, including availability of time on Canadian stations, indicated that the provisions were warranted. The government has chosen a course whereby the provisions should be enacted now but brought into effect at a later date. Your committee has no objection to this procedure provided that the timing of the provisions is decided by Parliament. It accordingly recommends that the bill be amended so that the broadcasting provisions shall be brought into effect by a resolution of the House of Commons concurred in by the Senate.

Your committee is not convinced that removal of the exemption in respect of publications such as MD magazine will assist the objectives of the bill and it therefore recommends partial restoration of the provisions of the act in that regard which the bill would have removed.

For the foregoing reasons, your committee recommends the following amendments to Bill C-58:

1. Page 1: Strike out line 12 and substitute therefor the following:

<sup>6</sup> See Information Circular, Department of Revenue, Taxation, No. 70/6, September 14, 1970.

<sup>7</sup> Commons Debates, January 23, 1975, page 2527

"after December 31, 1976 for an advertise—".

2. Page 1: Strike out line 16 and substitute therefor the following:

"repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"(4) Subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an advertisement in any publication the principal function of which is the encouragement, promotion or development of the fine arts, letters, scholarship or religion."

3. Page 1: Strike out line 17 and substitute therefor the following:

"3. (1) The said Act is further amended by".

4. Page 1: Strike out line 20 and substitute therefor the following:

"19.1 (1) In this section, "publisher" means a person who has or proposes to have the exclusive right to produce and publish issues of a newspaper or periodical.

(2) For the purposes of this section, the word "taxpayer" in section 173 shall be deemed to include a publisher.

(3) The Minister, at the request of a publisher, shall enter into an agreement with that publisher pursuant to section 173 for the purpose of having determined by the Court the interpretation of clause 19(5)(a)(ii)(F) in relation to one or more issues of proposed issues of a newspaper or periodical that that publisher has or proposes to have the exclusive right to produce and publish in Canada."

(2) The said Act is further amended by adding thereto immediately after section 19.1, added by subsection (1), the following:

"19.2 (1) Subject to subsection (2), in" "

5. Page 2: Strike out lines 32 to 34 inclusive and substitute therefor the following:

"on the first day of January, 1977.

(2) Subsection 3(2) shall come into force on such day as may be fixed by a motion taken up and considered by the House of Commons that is adopted by the House and concurred in by the Senate pursuant to subsections (3) and (4).

(3) If a motion taken up and considered by the House of Commons pursuant to subsection (2) is adopted by the House, with or without amendments, a message shall be sent to the Senate informing the Senate that the motion has been so adopted and requesting that the motion be concurred in by the Senate.

(4) The Senate shall, within the first fifteen days next after receipt by it of a request from the House of Commons pursuant to subsection (3) that the Senate is sitting, in accordance with the Rules of the Senate, take up and consider the motion adopted by the House of Commons that is the subject of the request.

(5) If the Senate, pursuant to a request from the House of Commons, concurs in a motion adopted by the House as provided in this section, subsection 3(2) shall come into force on the day that is specified in the motion or on the day on which the Senate concurs in the motion, whichever is the later."

During the course of your committee's hearings a question arose as to the effect of Bill C-58 and the "commercial deletion" policy of the CRTC on relations with the United States. While your committee considers that the strain on Canada-U.S. relations which has arisen is not an area which is within its terms of reference on this bill, it believes that it cannot let the matter pass without directing the attention of the government to the evidence before the committee on these points.

Attached as an appendix to this report is a list of parties who submitted briefs, including those who also appeared before your committee in the course of its examination of Bill C-58.

Respectfully submitted,

SALTER A. HAYDEN,
Chairman.

(Appendix)

List of submissions received with regard to Bill C-58, "An Act to amend the Income Tax Act".

SUBMITTED BRIEFS AND APPEARED	Date of Appearance
1. MD Publications (Canada) Limited	May 6, 1976
2. Maclean-Hunter Limited	May 12, 1976
3. Graphic Arts Industries Association	May 12, 1976
4. Canadian Periodical Publishers' Association	May 12, 1976
5. Time Canada	May 13, 1976
6. Saturday Night	May 19, 1976
7. Canadian Association of Broadcasters	May 19, 1976
8. Institute of Canadian Advertising	May 20, 1976
9. WBEN, Inc.; Capital Cities Communications Inc.; and Taft Broadcasting Company	June 9, 1976
10. Channel Seventy Nine Limited, (CITY-TV)	June 9, 1976
11. KVOS-TV (B.C.) Limited, Vancouver	June 9, 1976
12. Advertising Agency Association of British Columbia	June 9, 1976
13. Association of Canadian Advertisers	June 10, 1976
14. Canadian Radio-Television Commission	June 16, 1976

Number of witnesses in support of the above: 47

SUBMITTED BRIEFS BUT DID NOT APPEAR

Andy McDermott Sales Ltd.

Catton Buckham Advertising Agency Ltd.

CKCO-TV Kitchener

Hyland Radio-TV Limited

Stovin-Byles Television Limited

Okanagan Valley Television Company Limited

Monarch Broadcasting Co. Ltd. (CHAT Radio-TV, Alberta)

Tele-Capital Ltd. of Quebec City

CKSO-TV and Radio of Sudbury

Council of Forest Industries of B.C.

British Columbia Television Broadcasting System Ltd.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Senator Hayden moved that the report be placed on the Orders of the Day for consideration on Monday next.

Motion agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today, it do stand adjourned until Monday next, June 28, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Honourable senators, in deciding to move the adjournment of the Senate until Monday evening at 8 o'clock, we had to consider the transportation difficulties now being experienced in this country and the difficulty some senators might find in trying to reach Ottawa for a sitting on Monday afternoon. There is much work for the Senate to do next week and under ordinary circumstances it would have been preferable to sit Monday afternoon. It may therefore be necessary for us to sit late on Monday evening and to extend the sitting hours on Tuesday and Wednesday.

On Monday we shall proceed with third reading of Bill C-20, respecting citizenship; with consideration of the report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on Bill C-58, to amend the Income Tax Act, which was presented today; and we shall continue the second reading debate on Bills C-93 and C-94.

Bill C-68, to amend the Medical Care Act, and Bill C-88, to amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act (No. 2), will probably pass the Commons today and we shall therefore have to deal with those two bills early next week. In addition, it is possible that Bill C-84, which was given second reading and referred to committee in the House of Commons yesterday, could come to us by Wednesday next.

The committee schedule for next week is as follows: on Tuesday the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture will meet at 10 a.m. to further consider the question of crop insurance; the Special Joint Committee on the National Capital Region will meet at 3.30 p.m., and the Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments has called a meeting for 8.30 p.m. On Wednesday the Special Committee on Science Policy has scheduled a meeting for 3.30 p.m.

Senator Flynn: Would the Deputy Leader of the Government explain whether, in view of all those bills which are likely to reach us, or which pass the other place, it is foreseen that the session will be prorogued if not officially at least unofficially until the fall.

Senator Perrault: No position has yet been taken with respect to when parliamentary activities may safely be predicted to resume in the fall. Indeed, it is impossible at this time to give an estimate of the prorogation date or the summer adjournment date. As honourable senators are aware, a number of key bills are now in discussion in committees of the House of Commons and it is not possible to estimate when they will be available in the other place for third reading. Consequently, it is difficult to establish a schedule here.

Senator Flynn: We can expect to receive Bills C-68 and C-88, and Bill C-84 is the only other bill which requires, from the government's viewpoint, passage before prorogation.

Senator Perrault: It is unlikely that it will be possible to complete our work by the end of next week.

Motion agreed to.

TRANSPORTATION

DISRUPTION OF AIRLINE SERVICES IN CANADA—QUESTION

Senator Flynn: Has the Leader of the Government anything new to report on the air travel situation in Canada?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, a number of conversations have been held in recent hours and it is very likely that a statement will be made by the Minister of Transport in the other place within the hour. The text of that statement will also be read in this chamber. Honourable senators will then have a better idea of the initiatives which are presently under way. Indeed, the text of that statement should be here in approximately 25 minutes.

Senator Flynn: Would the leader say whether the government contemplates any special legislation?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the situation is extremely important to all parts of Canada and it is hoped that legislation will not be necessary in order to resolve the problem and get the planes flying again. It is hoped that the statement to be made today will go a fair distance toward a solution.

● (1420)

THE ESTIMATES

REPORT OF NATIONAL FINANCE COMMITTEE ON SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES (A) ADOPTED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Carter for the adoption of the report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on the Supplementary Estimates (A) laid before Parliament for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1977.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, we are considering a report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on what is probably the most extraordinary supplementary estimate in Canadian history. I say that because the estimate looks to the appropriation bill which is now before us on first reading, which will provide for implementation of a major innovation in Canadian policy by a loan item in supplementary estimates.

To the best of my knowledge this device, this devious device, has never been used before. The National Finance Committee has objected before to minor uses of this principle of legislation by supplementary estimates but never, I am sure, did the committee anticipate it would be faced with a suggestion that major government policy should in future be made by a loan item in supplementary estimates. This is a case of where estimates are placed before us so carelessly that the normal courtesies of relating the amounts to previous estimates are not observed. To my mind this is another example of the attitude of this government towards the rights of Parliament. It is an attitude of erosion, by almost any device that can be thought of, of the basic rights of the Parliament of Canada in respect of discussions upon major policy decisions.

I say it is a major policy decision. It is not that I object to the policy, but it is a major policy decision when the Government of Canada decides to raise revenues by a national lottery. This is something that has not happened in our history before. It is a matter which raises issues of deep emotional concern to many Canadians. I do not share all those emotional concerns. Indeed, I might say that I have a good deal of sympathy with the basic principle of raising public revenues to assist in paying off the deficit for the Olympic Games because I have been impressed by the arguments put forward that the benefits of the Olympic Games will extend far beyond Montreal, the province of Quebec and Kingston. They will extend to all Canadians. I agree with that. I agree fully with the concept that all Canadians should help to pay off that deficit.

The government decided that it would not take that approach. The government made a clear statement that it would not, out of public funds, help to pay off this deficit. It has changed its mind. I see no objection to the government changing its mind, yet in the discussions we heard in defence of these supplementary estimates yesterday from Senator Langlois and Senator Perrault we had what I regard as the supreme example of defenders of an indefensible principle protesting too much. A principle we generally recognize is that when an argument is weak, rhetoric usually becomes louder, longer and more irrelevant. Certainly in listening to the defence of this government policy last night, I was convinced that this was a clear case of that.

For example, one of the arguments put forward so strongly was that this is not a reversal of government policy. Well, of course it is. The argument was needless. If the government has changed its mind, there is nothing wrong with the government's saying so. The government had decided earlier, for its own reasons—perhaps in an attempt to hold down the expenditures—that it would not raise revenues to pay the deficit. So, it has changed its mind, and there is nothing wrong with that. Yet the fact of the matter is that the foolish statement made by the government at the start is the cause of many of the problems that have arisen. If the government at the start had said "If a benefit can be shown for the whole of Canada as the result of the Olympics, then it would appear to make sense for the public of Canada generally to support the Olympics by helping with the deficit or otherwise", I would have no objection to that. That would have been the sensible thing to do. However, the government made this foolish statement, and it trapped itself and the Olympics into an impossible position.

It may very well be argued that many of the problems which have arisen at the Olympic site are due substantially to that foolish government decision. The delays, the pressures from various unions and contractors, and the doubts that arose in the minds of the public and all over the world as to whether the Olympic site would be finished on time, were substantially due to the government's statement, "We are not going to bail you out." The Government of Canada indicated they would let the Olympics be delayed. The Government of Canada indicated they would let them go broke. That impression got around the world that this was the policy of the Government of Canada, which it was. Thankfully, the government has now changed its mind.

Instead of being faced with a clear declaration that the government has changed its mind for very good reasons, we are faced with this piece of utter hypocrisy which is Bill C-44, the subject of the report now before the house. I say "hypocrisy" because the purpose of the supplementary estimates is almost entirely to assist in relieving the pressure of the deficit on the City of Montreal and the Province of Quebec. Again, I say I approve of that, but why this device? Why are we tacking on to the 82.5 per cent, which is going to this purpose, these peripheral sweeteners of 12.5 per cent going to the provinces—if the provinces say they will take it—and 5 per cent going into a federal government fund? If it were not hypocrisy, surely the government would have said, "We are creating this new corporation for the sole purpose of helping defray the Olympics deficit". These amounts of 12 per cent and 5 per cent on the periphery are clear evidence of the utter hypocrisy of the whole approach.

We then had a stirring defence of the legality of this bill. It is almost certainly legal. When I heard the rhetoric, I began to wonder when emphasis on the legality of an action, public or private, became a major criterion in deciding whether that action is right or wrong.

There was some question raised about constitutionality, and understandably so. Here again it was the government's muddling which caused this. Honourable senators will remember that at the time when the Criminal Code was amended to permit lotteries, it was clearly understood that it was permission to the provinces to conduct lotteries under certain circumstances. The main proviso is that no province conducting such a lottery would be able to sell tickets in another province, without the permission of that province—a very wise proviso.

● (1430)

The assumption then arose that the government had transferred this whole field of lotteries to the provinces. It was merely an assumption. I completely agree that the assumption had no apparent base in constitutional law. But what has happened is that the government now says, "In spite of the fact that we honoured the right of any given province to deny to another province the right to sell tickets for a lottery for any purpose in the given province, we, the government, will now impose a total lottery on all provinces." In other words, the government now says that in spite of what the President of the Treasury Board, the Honourable Mr. Chrétien, called the liberal generosity of the government, the government is withdrawing its so-called generosity and under the conditions indicated in the supplementary estimates (A) the federal government will now, as I have said, impose a total lottery on all provinces. This means that no province will any longer have the right to refuse to sell tickets for a federal lottery which appears to have a specific purpose related to some other province or for any other reason.

That is why the constitutional issue has been raised, although, as I have said, it does not appear to have substance. And yet we had this rhetoric on the subject, which indicates to me that possibly the defenders of the government's position are protesting just a little too, too much.

Naturally, we have had the old excuse given that the type of legislation which this will be is necessary. All that need be said on that score is what has been said over and over again: namely, that there has never been an occasion that anybody can recall of the rights of an individual or the rights of Parliament being impinged upon by an executive when the reason given was not "necessity."

There is no necessity here whatsoever. The minister himself was asked if he looked at some of the alternatives. In one breath he said, "We made certain tries. We tried to get the opposition parties to agree first of all to a bill going through in two or three days. We also tried to get agreements from the provinces, but were not able to. So the government decided to go this way." On the other hand, the President of the Treasury Board, when asked if he had looked at other alternatives, said, "No, we did not look at any other alternatives." The excuse was that this was a last-minute situation and that, as the summer recess came along, they were suddenly faced with this great problem. Well, the government was not suddenly faced with the problem at all. It has been there for months. The government has been fully aware of it. The government hesitated to make the decision because of the earlier foolish decision, and it spent months in trying to backtrack out of an impossible position with the result that it has arrived at a point which would appear to be an insult to the intelligence of members of Parliament—this excuse that "We are so close to the deadline that we have to resort to a device never resorted to before in Canadian history."

Another reason given for the legislation is a principle of the bill which has received great support: the assistance it will give to amateur sport. I simply mention that that is merely a sweetener.

The fact of the matter is that every single excuse given for the government's reversal of its decision could have been used to make the first decision the sensible one. One of the reasons given is the national benefits which will accrue. Well, that aspect has always been there. If the government was not aware that the holding of the Olympics in one part of Canada would benefit all of Canada, it was not thinking very hard. We were told that the labour problem was one of the reasons for the crisis. Well, the labour problem was there at the time the statement was made that the government would not fund this deficit. Another reason we were given was "this dreadful inflation." Inflation was galloping at the time the government announced its decision not to fund this deficit. And, just to reiterate, the needs of amateur sport have been there for a long, long time.

So every one of the arguments produced now in support of this new decision, and this irresponsible way of implementing it, were there at the time; so that the problem must be laid right at the door of the government's incompetence, bad planning and its assumption that no matter how many mistakes it made, no matter how badly it messed up the situation, the officials, or somebody, would find a way or a device which would force Parliament to accept this method at the last minute.

Well, some provinces object; they do so on very good ground. They object on the ground that they do not know what will happen. Here we have a major government policy extending over at least three years, and perhaps perpetually. Nobody knows. There is nothing here at all so far to tell us, except one personal assurance by the President of the Treasury Board, that this is not a policy which will go on forever, that Loto Canada will not continue indefinitely whether the provinces agree or not. It is fair to say that the minister has emphasized over and over again that he is calling a meeting of the appropriate ministers in September to discuss the matter. But he has made it quite clear that this is a field in which the federal government regards itself as having complete competence; and once again we have from the government the arrogant statement, which has broken up every federal-provincial conference, the arrogant statement, "This is the way we will do it. This is the way we can do it. We are merely consulting you and, regardless of what you may feel about it, we will do what we think we want to do." I say that this has been the approach over and over again, and as anyone who has read the history of federal-provincial conferences will agree, it is this approach which has caused the dangerous confrontation in our federal system today between the central power and the provinces.

The bill before us, when it is passed and given royal assent, will be an Act of Parliament. It will be argued, of course, that "this is an Act of Parliament," but I think anybody who has attended the meetings of our National Finance Committee, or similar committees elsewhere, must agree that it is a dangerous and devious device to use supplementary estimates at any time to introduce major government policy without the normal safeguards that are present in a bill in which policy is spelled out in detail and can be discussed in detail. I say it is dangerous and I say it is devious when ministers or their officials can come before a committee—as they came before the Miscellaneous Estimates Committee of the Commons, and as they came before our National Finance Committee—and merely say what their intentions are. But when Parliament has a proper bill before it, then Parliament is in a position to say, "We are now deciding to pass a law the substance of which is as follows."

The appropriation bill, as it comes before us, gives extraordinary powers to the government to make regulations by order in council. There is no indication of that in the report of the committee. We are asked to approve the report of the committee to the effect that the government is prepared to lend, on a loan vote, $5 million, and that provision is to be made:

● (1440)

for the establishment of an account in the Accounts of Canada to be known as the National Lottery Account to which shall be credited the net revenues of Loto Canada Inc. paid to the Receiver General for Canada; and to authorize payment out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund—and so on. There is not a word here or in the bill to say what this crown corporation will consist of, or how many directors it will have.

As a purely incidental side issue, in committee the minister said, "I would like to introduce Mr. Cousineau. He is going to be the president of the new corporation." However, there is not even provision here for the office of president.

The minister also stated, "Oh, the order in council has been approved." This statement was made to the committee in the other place. What was he talking about? He was talking about the order in council under the legislation that is only before us at this moment. The order in council had been approved and passed. But what is in the order? We do not know.

Honourable senators, we are asked to approve the report of the committee which, I am glad to say, did raise doubts on some of these matters, particularly on the ground of methodology, of which this whole bill provides another devious example.

We have, I suppose, no alternative. There is nothing—nothing at all—that we can do at this stage, just as there was nothing the committee of the other place could do since, under the rules, it could not change the regulations. It did make one amendment but, not having the regulations before it, the committee of the other place said, "We recommend that you do not carry this thing on beyond three years until you bring in new regulations." Surely nothing could indicate more clearly the affront to Parliament of this kind of device, and the absurdity of it, than the history of the matter given in the report that is before us.

Hon. Chesley W. Carter: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: I must inform honourable senators that if the Honourable Senator Carter speaks now, his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on the motion for adoption of this report.

Senator Carter: Honourable senators, we have had a very wide-ranging debate on supplementary estimates (A) in general, and on Loto Canada in particular. I think that everything that needed to be said, or that was worth saying, has already been said, and so I rise now only to reply briefly to two or three points.

One of the main criticisms voiced was with regard to the method chosen by the government to deal with this matter—that is, by way of supplementary estimates, rather than a bill. While the method chosen is certainly not acceptable to the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance, nor even to this chamber, I think it is fair to point out that it is a method for which there are a number of precedents, it having been used on some 25 previous occasions. I should also point out that the government could have proceeded without referring the matter to Parliament at all. I think the government would have preferred to introduce a bill on this matter, but in view of the fact that the time available was limited, and of the fact that there was no agreement on the time to be allotted for debating the measure in the other place, the government was left with the only alternative available to it that would give Parliament a chance to pronounce on this question. That is why proceeding by way of supplementary estimates was chosen.

Certainly it is the duty of the Opposition to criticize government policy, and, to some extent, it is the duty of every one of us; but when we criticize government policy I think we should do so in the context of the times and conditions prevailing when a policy decision is made.

[Senator Grosart.]

When this particular policy decision was made several years ago, honourable senators will recall that there was reason to believe that widespread opposition existed among the public of Canada at large to any contribution to the Olympic Games from the federal treasury. In addition, there were a number of assurances given to the government that the Olympic Games would be self-financing. In the light of these assurances and these conditions, therefore, the government embarked upon methods and devices for assisting in voluntary ways, as a result of which we have the Olympic coins and Olympic stamps programs, and a number of other measures adopted by the government with the object of avoiding a charge upon the public treasury. In the interval views changed, and today there is a swing in public opinion which would seem to favour a direct contribution from the federal treasury.

I might say in passing that Loto Canada is an extension of the self-financing methods embarked upon by the government in the first place, and the minister himself gave a commitment when he appeared before the committee, within the limits of how far he is able to go in committing a successor or a new government, to bring the matter before Parliament when a change in policy is proposed.

Honourable senators, as I said earlier, I think everything useful has been said on this matter, and I see no merit in repeating arguments that have already been made. Therefore, I would like to conclude the debate by thanking all honourable senators who have participated for their interesting and valuable contributions.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

TRANSPORTATION

DISRUPTION OF AIRLINE SERVICES IN CANADA

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate, I should like to make a short statement about the safety aspects of bilingual air traffic control.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Perrault: The Honourable the Minister of Transport has just announced the appointment of Mr. Justice W. R. Sinclair, of Edmonton, and Mr. Justice Julien Chouinard, of Quebec City, to head the commission of inquiry into safety-related and other aspects of bilingualism in air traffic control in the province of Quebec.

Mr. Justice Sinclair is a judge of the appellate division of the Supreme Court of Alberta. He was admitted to the Bar of Alberta in 1949 and was in private practice until 1954 when he joined the law department of Canadian Gulf Oil in Calgary. From 1959 to 1968 he was a partner in the Edmonton law firm of Emery, Jamieson and Company. In 1968 he was appointed a judge of the trial division of the Supreme Court of Alberta, and received his present appointment in 1973.

● (1450)

Mr. Justice Chouinard is a judge of the Superior Court of Quebec. He was admitted to the Bar of Quebec in 1953 and practised law in Quebec City before being appointed deputy minister of justice of the province. He was later appointed secretary-general of the executive committee of the provincial government. He was named to the Bench last year. Mr. Justice Chouinard is a member of the council in the faculty of law at Laval University.

The new commissioners were named to replace John Keenan of Montreal who resigned on June 7 when he became the subject of controversy and felt he could not carry out his mandate.

The Honourable Mr. Lang, Minister of Transport, as honourable senators will recall, first announced the appointment of a commission of inquiry on May 12 last.

I can advise the chamber that the minister is presently contacting the presidents of CALPA and CATCA—the Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association and the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association—to invite them to meet with him on this subject later this day.

APPROPRIATION BILL NO. 4, 1976

SECOND READING

Senator Langlois moved second reading of Bill C-94, for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1977.

He said: Honourable senators, the bill before us today, Appropriation Bill No. 4, 1976, provides for the release of the whole of supplementary estimates (A) for 1976 of $5 million. These supplementary estimates were tabled on June 8, and discussed in committee on June 17 with the President of Treasury Board and his officials.

These supplementary estimates propose the creation of Loto Canada and provide a loan of up to $5 million from the Minister of Finance as a working capital advance. It is intended that this loan be repaid by December 31, 1976. This new crown corporation will commence operations in August of 1976 and will create, manage and operate a national lottery.

If honourable senators wish any further explanations concerning this bill, I shall be glad to supply them.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I think it will be obvious that any comments I might wish to make on the bill now before us have already been made. I deliberately made my comments during consideration of the report of the National Finance Committee, so that that report could be adopted, according to our rules, before the bill itself was presented. I therefore ask that my comments previously made be taken as applying to this bill, and add that I have not changed my mind in any way since seeing the bill.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

On motion of Senator Langlois, bill placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

APPROPRIATION BILL NO. 3, 1976

SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Senator Langlois moved second reading of Bill C-93, for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1977.

He said: Honourable senators, the bill before us now, Appropriation Bill No. 3, 1976, provides for the release of the balance of the main estimates for 1976-77 amounting to $12,727 million.

These estimates were tabled on February 19, and referred to the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance the same day. Interim supply for 1976-77 was approved by Appropriation Act, No. 2, 1976. The bill which provided for the expenditures for the month of April, May and June, released a general proportion of three-twelfths for all votes plus additional proportions for some 35 votes.

The main estimates were discussed with the President of Treasury Board and his officials on May 20 in the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance.

The previous appropriation acts passed in respect of these estimates for 1976-77 were Appropriation Act No. 2, 1976, which granted interim supply, as I have already said, for April, May and June, including the 35 additional proportions based on the main estimates for 1976-77, amounting to $4,970,732,370.57, and Appropriation Act No. 3, 1976, which would grant full supply for the balance of the main estimates for 1976-77 amounting to, as has already been mentioned, $12,727,771,390.43. In addition, honourable senators, there is the appropriation bill to which we have just given second reading, and which is based on supplementary estimates (A) for 1976-77, in the sum of $5 million, making the total estimates to be voted to date $17,703,503,761.00.

The form of the bill is the same as that passed in previous years, and it contains no additional borrowing authority.

Honourable senators, I think I have covered the important features of this bill, and if you wish further explanation on any matter it can be supplied on request.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I take it that there is no dire necessity for this supply bill to be passed immediately. Will next week do?

Senator Langlois: Yes.

Senator Grosart: Therefore, I move that the debate be adjourned.

On motion of Senator Grosart, debate adjourned.

[Translation]

ST. JOHN THE BAPTIST DAY

Senator Perrault: I am pleased to greet our French-Canadian fellow citizens on the occasion of St. John the Baptist Day.

[English]

The Senate adjourned until Monday, June 28, at 8 p.m.

THE SENATE

Monday, June 28, 1976

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD ACT

BILL TO AMEND (NO.2)—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-88, to amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act (No. 2).

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read a second time?

Senator Perrault, with leave of the Senate, moved that the bill be read a second time at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Copies of Order of the Administrator under the Anti-Inflation Act, pursuant to section 17(3) of the said Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada 1974-75-76, dated June 22, 1976, regarding the reference of the collective agreement between the International Nickel Company of Canada, Manitoba Division, and the employees represented by the United Steelworkers of America, Local 6166, and letter thereon from the Administrator to the Minister of National Revenue.

Copies of Reports of the Anti-Inflation Board to His Excellency the Governor General in Council reporting its reference to the Administrator of the Anti-Inflation Act of—

(1) Collective agreement between the Sudbury District Roman Catholic Separate School Board and the employees represented by the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 1369;

(2) Collective agreement between the Wentworth County Board of Education, Hamilton, Ontario and the employees in the secretarial, clerical group;

(3) Certain proposed increases in compensation between the Prescott and Russell County Roman Catholic Separate School Board and its executive employees.

Copies of Order in Council P.C. 1976-1576, dated June 23, 1976, appointing the Honourable W. R. Sinclair and the Honourable Julien Chouinard, Co-Commissioners, under Part I of the Inquiries Act, for the purpose of inquiring into the safety of the introduction of bilingual IFR Air Traffic Services in the Province of Quebec.

Report of the Auditor General on the examination of the accounts and financial statements of the National Battlefields Commission for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1975, pursuant to section 12 of An Act respecting the National Battlefields at Quebec, Chapter 57, Statutes of Canada, 1907-08, and sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

Capital Budget of the National Battlefields Commission for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1977, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1976-1089, dated May 11, 1976, approving same.

Report of Uranium Canada, Limited, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the year ended December 31, 1975, pursuant to sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the President of the National Research Council of Canada for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 16 of the National Research Council Act, Chapter N-14, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Science Council of Canada for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 19 of the Science Council of Canada Act, Chapter S-5, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Unemployment Insurance Advisory Committee for the year ended December 31, 1975, pursuant to section 109(3) of the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, Chapter 48, Statutes of Canada, 1970-71-72.

Capital Budget of the National Harbours Board for the year ended December 31, 1975, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1976-988, dated April 27, 1976 approving same.

Copies of Order in Council P.C. 1976-1588, dated June 28, 1976, appointing the Honourable W. R. Sinclair of Edmonton, the Honourable Julien Chouinard of Quebec City, and the Honourable D. V. Heald of Ottawa, Co-Commissioners, under Part I of the Inquiries Act, for the purpose of inquiring into the safety of the introduction of bilingual IFR Air Traffic Services in the Province of Quebec, together with Memorandum of Understanding between The Minister of Transport and The Canadian Air Traffic Control Association (CATCA) and The Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association (CALPA), signed at Ottawa, on the 28th day of June, 1976.

INTERNAL ECONOMY

REPORT APPROVING SALARY REVISIONS TABLED

Senator Laird: Honourable senators, I have the honour to table a schedule of authorized salary revisions for certain Senate positions, effective April 1, 1976, as approved by the Standing Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, at its meeting of Thursday, June 17, 1976.

TRANSPORTATION

RESUMPTION OF AIRLINE SERVICES IN CANADA— APPOINTMENT OF COMMISSION OF INQUIRY

Senator Flynn: Would the government leader elaborate a little more on the memorandum of understanding or agreement reached between the Minister of Transport and the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association and the Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association, which he tabled?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the document is rather lengthy, but if I am permitted perhaps I can touch on three or four of the highlights of the memorandum of understanding. I promise not to be too lengthy.

It has been agreed that the public commission of inquiry which has been announced should be composed of three judicial appointees, the third being acceptable to CATCA—that is, the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association—that a prerequisite to the expansion or introduction of any bilingual air traffic service be a unanimous report of the commission declaring the purported expansion or introduction to be consistent with the maintenance of current safety standards in Canadian air operations.

Senator Flynn: A unanimous decision?

Senator Perrault: A unanimous decision of the three commissioners. Further, that the terms of reference now contained in Order in Council P.C. 1976-1576 should include a provision to the effect that "the commissioners shall append to their reports any statement on the aspects of the inquiry reported upon, received from CATCA or CALPA within a specified period of time designated by the commission"; that the terms of reference shall include a further provision to the effect that "the commissioners shall not in any of their reports indicate that safety has been demonstrated unless they can justify beyond a reasonable doubt why any contrary view expressed by CATCA or CALPA should not prevail."

And then, insofar as the specially appointed professional advisers are concerned, Transport Canada and CATCA will submit a joint list of appropriate controller advisers to the commission; Transport Canada will submit before July 1 a recommendation to the Privy Council which the government will process expeditiously and publish in the Canada Gazette at the earliest possible date as an air navigation order with regard to the use of language in the air, and Transport Canada undertakes to pursue the enforcement thereof; and that following the tabling of the final report of the commission in Parliament, the government will present a resolution to the House of Commons seeking concurrence therein in a free vote.

● (2010)

The document is signed by the Honourable Otto Lang, Minister of Transport; J. M. Livingston, President, Canadian an Air Traffic Control Association; and K. A. Maley, President, Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association.

Senator Flynn: Would the Leader of the Government explain the consequences of a non-unanimous decision by the commissioners?

Senator Perrault: It is my understanding that if the report is not unanimous no action would be taken to introduce bilingualism at the main airports in the Montreal area.

Senator Flynn: In other words, you are giving a veto to any one of the commissioners.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, that may be the honourable senator's interpretation. I have not had time to adequately digest all the supporting documentation. Honourable senators may feel free to draw their own conclusions at this point as to the ramifications of the memorandum of understanding which has been achieved.

Senator Flynn: I respect the opinion of the Leader of the Government, but I do not see what else it can mean. Furthermore, do I understand that the Senate and the House of Commons will have to give this approval, or will it be only the House of Commons?

Senator Perrault: The memorandum of understanding, as it exists at the present time, makes reference only to a free vote in the House of Commons.

Senator Flynn: What is a free vote?

Senator Perrault: I hope to be in a position shortly to clarify the position of the Senate in the proposed process.

Senator Flynn: What is the understanding of the Leader of the Government as to what a free vote in the House of Commons would be?

Senator Perrault: I assume that the house leaders there would make known to their followers the fact that party discipline and usual party voting procedures would not apply with respect to this particular vote.

Senator Flynn: Would the Leader of the Government agree that the minister might have said that he has negotiated this agreement with a knife at his throat?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the past two weeks have not been easy for the air travellers of Canada, and they have not been easy for those in government. The paramount concern of the government in this entire dispute has been for the safety of air travellers in Canada. That has been, and must remain, the paramount consideration.

Senator Flynn: Of the government.

Senator Perrault: It is my personal view that there have been regrettable statements made by a number of people across the country on this subject and I think a number of these statements have been very unfortunate. Surely the question is not basically a matter of language, but a matter of the safety of air travellers in Canada. The number one concern must be air safety and if, as many proponents of bilingualism at the Montreal airport state, the present high standards of air traffic safety can be maintained and even enhanced by the introduction of the French language under certain circumstances in Montreal, then, of course, the Government of Canada is interested in supporting the concept. The government is concerned with improving air safety standards in this country but the idea, which has been propagated by some, that even the study of the subject must be rejected, has no support at all on the part of the government.

Senator Flynn: Would the Leader of the Government agree that this is the first time the government has been forced to negotiate in the face of an illegal strike and that such a weapon should never have been allowed to be used? This is a precedent. I am not criticizing the government. I am very happy that some kind of agreement has been reached to resume air services for Canadians, but will not the government leader agree that it is a very sad situation when illegality is allowed to be used to force this type of agreement?

Senator Perrault: In reply to the Leader of the Opposition, there are precedents in the history of Canada—

Senator Flynn: I don't remember.

Senator Perrault: And let me state also—

Senator Croll: The Post Office.

Senator Perrault: Let us all be aware of the fact that the ultimate disposition of the illegality or legality of certain actions and possible penalties has yet to be determined. At the present time efforts are being made to get the aircraft flying and the travelling public's inconvenience ended.

Senator Flynn: When is air service to start?

Senator Perrault: There may be other statements made later on this matter about the legality or illegality of certain actions taken.

Senator Flynn: When are the air services to resume?

Senator Perrault: It is my understanding that the air services are now operating once again—perhaps not fully operational on all routes in Canada, but the airlines are in the process of resuming flights across Canada.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, as a supplementary, could I ask the leader of the government whether I am to understand that the memorandum of agreement will be attached to today's proceedings? I think it would be very useful if it could be.

Senator Perrault: In reply, it was my intention to merely table this document. However, if honourable senators would like the memorandum of understanding as an appendix to today's proceedings, there is certainly no objection from the government.

Senator Forsey: I think it would be useful.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(For text of memorandum of understanding, see appendix p. 2276.)

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I wonder if I could ask the Leader of the Government about a clause which, it seems to me, has some bearing on something being proved beyond a reasonable doubt, but in the reading of it I was not quite able to comprehend exactly what it meant. I wonder if the Leader of the

[Senator Perrault.]

Government would be kind enough to elaborate on that particular paragraph.

Senator Perrault: The honourable senator may be referring to the following paragraph which demonstrates some rather interesting phraseology:

That the terms of reference should include a further provision to the effect that "the Commissioners shall not in any of their reports—

Is this the paragraph?

Senator Smith: It sounds like it.

Senator Perrault:

—"the Commissioners shall not in any of their reports indicate that safety has been demonstrated unless they can justify beyond a reasonable doubt—

Whatever that may be.

Senator Walker: A murder case!

Senator Perrault:

—why any contrary view expressed by CATCA—

The controllers.

—or CALPA—

The pilots.

—should not prevail".

Senator Flynn: With regard to resumption of air services, have those pilots who fly to Paris, or any other place in the world where the language of the country is not English, decided to resume flying?

Senator Perrault: There is no indication that the pilots will refuse to land at Paris, where French is employed as a local language; in Belgium, where Dutch, French and some Spanish are permitted as local languages; in Switzerland, where Italian, French and some German are permitted as local languages; or Tel-Aviv, where Hebrew and English are permitted in air traffic control.

Honourable senators, in saying that, there could be notable differences between flying conditions in Europe and those which exist in North America. Surely that is for the commission of inquiry to determine.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

RESTRICTIONS ON SPECIAL PASSPORTS—QUESTIONS

Senator Lang: I would like to direct a question to the Leader of the Government. My question arises out of a report in the Globe and Mail of June 23, which reads:

New passport stamp bans travel by MPs. in unrecognized lands.

The Government has adopted a policy of stamping certain passports as being invalid for use for travel to Taiwan, Rhodesia, North Korea and Namibia, an External Affairs spokesman said yesterday.

The spokesman said the diplomatic and special passports—those given to MPs. when travelling on government business—are stamped to make sure there is no impression given that Canada recognizes the existing governments in those areas.

● (2020)

I was in South-West Africa last year. I do not know how many honourable senators might be considering travelling in Taiwan, Rhodesia or North Korea, but if that report contains any semblance of truth it has an ominous tone, the kind of tone one would expect out of a police state and not Canada.

I ask the Leader of the Government: Is it government policy as expressed in this news report and, if so, does it prevent members of Parliament holding the green special passports from travelling in Taiwan, Rhodesia, North Korea or South-West Africa? If so, can a member of Parliament surrender his green special passport and obtain the blue passport which is issued to all Canadians, thereby enabling himself to travel in those countries?

I think it is important to find out whether there is some type of limitation being placed, or attempted to be placed, upon us as members of Parliament. When I use the term "members of Parliament" I include, of course, honourable senators.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, first of all, I thank Senator Lang for giving me prior notice of his question. He asked first if this policy means that senators and members of Parliament holding green special passports can no longer travel in Rhodesia, Taiwan, North Korea, and South-West Africa.

I have made inquiries of the Department of External Affairs, and am informed that under the present regulations of the department diplomatic and special passports are issued valid for travel to all countries with the exception of Rhodesia, Taiwan, North Korea and Namibia, which are not recognized by the Canadian government.

Secondly, Senator Lang asked whether a senator or member of Parliament can surrender his green special passport for the regular blue passport, and travel in these countries.

Regular blue passports are valid for travel to all countries without geographical restriction. All members of Parliament, whether they serve in the Senate or the House of Commons, can apply for an ordinary passport in the same way as any other private Canadian citizen, although their special passports would have to be surrendered temporarily to the Department of External Affairs while they are in possession of an ordinary passport.

Senator Grosart: I wonder if the government leader would inform the Senate as to the authority of the Department of External Affairs to make special regulations in respect of passports held by members of Parliament. Under what authority does the Department of External Affairs do this?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I can only undertake to seek further clarification from the Secretary of State for External Affairs in respect of that question. That information is not available to me this evening. However, it is understood that all nations have the sovereign right to determine where their citizens shall travel under official auspices, and with government passport documentation. Surely, this is a right held by most countries of the world.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, as a supplementary may I ask the Leader of the Government if he is aware that the passport regulations, or certain of them, at all events, and the authority by which they are established or passed, that this question has been before the Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments and that there have been some acerbic comments by counsel to that committee and by the committee itself on the form in which the regulations are drafted? We are, I think, awaiting a reply from the department on this matter, because it seems to members of the committee, I think I may say, very dubious whether the form is in fact valid.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the Government of Canada is responsible for the safety of its citizens abroad, and perhaps there are areas and circumstances where it is not appropriate for members of Parliament to travel with special passports. As I say, I can only promise to seek clarification from the minister on this particular point. I do not have the information immediately available. I shall attempt to obtain it.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I wonder if, while doing that, the Leader of the Government would be good enough to find out just what the rationale is for such a restriction.

Senator Perrault: Yes, I shall most certainly undertake to do that.

Senator Grosart: Would the Leader of the Government also clarify, when he gives an answer, if the reason for the withdrawal of the validity of these passports to Taiwan has something to do with the safety of Canadians rather than with the fact that Canada revoked, went back on, its solemn promise that it would not take the action it did in respect of recognition of Taiwan?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, perhaps it may be appropriate to schedule a full-scale debate on foreign policy one of these days. It seems to me that we are rapidly moving into that area.

Senator Grosart: Why not?

Senator Perrault: Yes, why not? It may be a useful exercise to schedule a debate on this subject. I do not believe we have had a discussion of foreign policy for some time in this chamber.

Senator Croll: Make it early in August.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

COST OF CONSTRUCTION OF TOWER IN TORONTO—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on June 9 a question was asked by Senator Denis on the subject of the CN tower in Toronto. The question related to the cost.

The Canadian National approved the construction of the tower in late 1972 and construction began in February 1973. The initial cost estimate had been set at $24 million, but the final cost edged above that figure to $57 million.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Some edge!

Senator Perrault: It has been pointed out by CN officials that, although the cost increased beyond their expectations, the revenues also are projected as being substantially beyond original estimates, and the return on the investment remains the same.

Senator Flynn: Inflation!

Senator Perrault: I understand that there is further detail available suggesting that there have been substantially greater costs in the CN tower. I understand that there are "mitigating circumstances."

Senator Phillips: Why are they mitigating?

[Later:]

Senator Denis: May I address a supplementary question to the Leader of the Government with respect to the CN tower? I wonder if the minister involved would be in a position to comment on the expectations of there being a surplus or a deficit, as far as the administration of this tower is concerned; and in the event of there being a deficit, is it going to be paid by the taxpayers of Canada or is it going to be paid through a lottery?

Senator Phillips: Why not a lottery?

Senator Perrault: In view of the fact the Deputy Leader of the Government was asked this question originally, perhaps he may wish to enlighten us further.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, Mr. Robert Bandeen, President of the Canadian National Railways, last week made a full report to the press. At that time he dealt with the costs and expected profits of this project. First of all, he explained that the site at Metro Centre was cancelled and consequently the original design of the CN tower had to be completely changed to provide for a larger and a higher tower to accommodate facilities such as a fast food restaurant and an additional platform for radio and TV antennas, and thereby achieve a more profitable venture. These additions were carried out and this was one of the reasons given for the increase in costs. The original design had to be altered, and was carried out at a time of high inflation rates and labour troubles.

As to the project's being a profitable venture, Mr. Bandeen added that the CN tower would provide a net operational profit of 10 to 12 per cent per year, or in the neighbourhood of some $6 million. This profit would come from the operation of the fast food restaurant, the radio and TV stations accommodated on two broadcast floors, and from visitors interested in viewing the highest free-standing structure in the world. He considers this to be quite an attraction for Toronto.

For your additional information, may I at this time take the liberty to refer all senators to the statement made by Mr. Bandeen, as reported in the Report on Business of the Globe and Mail of last week—I do not remember the exact date of the publication of this report but it was in the middle of the week—where Mr. Bandeen gave a full account of the costs of this tower and of its future.

GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES RESTRAINT BILL

DATE OF INTRODUCTION IN SENATE—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on May 18, 1976, the Honourable Senator Forsey asked a question with respect to government restraint. The question was: What is the fate or status of Bill C-87?

[Senator Perrault.]

The Honourable Mitchell Sharp stated in the other place on June 7, 1976—and this must be my reply:

The government is now in a position to agree not to insist on proceeding with Bill C-87, regarding expenditure restraints, before the summer adjournment. If it is not approved in the fall before prorogation it will, however, be brought back in the next session for passage before the end of the year.

FISHERIES

RIGHTS OF MICMAC INDIANS OF CROSS POINT RESERVE TO FISH ATLANTIC SALMON—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on June 16 the Honourable Senator Molson asked whether any consultations have taken place with the MicMac Indians of Cross Point Reserve to ensure that they can freely fish salmon for need, but that netting on a large scale for sale on the market would be constrained.

As honourable senators may know, management of the fisheries in the province of Quebec has been made by arrangement a provincial responsibility, and for Atlantic salmon the Quebec Department of Tourism, Fish and Game is the responsible agency. Earlier this month the minister of that department is understood to have entered into an agreement with the Restigouche band council, Cross Point Reserve, to permit band members to take salmon for food purposes solely for the Restigouche band members living in full-time occupancy on the reserve and for no other purpose.

● (2030)

In the agreement various conditions were set out defining the fishing area; the type, location and making of nets; the fishing time; a quota of 10,000 pounds of salmon for 1976; and a prohibition on selling, attempting to sell, barter or otherwise attempt to dispose of the salmon.

CITIZENSHIP BILL

MOTION FOR THIRD READING

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) moved the third reading of Bill C-20, an act respecting citizenship.

Senator Laird: Honourable senators, I propose to move an amendment to this bill.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I wonder if the sponsor of the bill would give an explanation to the Senate about the long time this bill has been in committee and why it is now being reported without amendment. Would he comment on what was or was not accomplished in the committee, as the case may be?

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, I am happy to make a short comment on that, and I understand that Senator Laird has an amendment to move. I did not come armed with the precise dates of the committee hearings, and I notice the chairman is not here to fortify me on that point. However, I can say that we heard officials from the Department of the Secretary of State, under which the citizenship branch falls; we also heard officials from the Department of Justice with reference to some of the legal technicalities of the bill. It is fair to say that with respect to the citizenship aspect of the bill, with the exception of one or two discussions in connection with specific points which were not of substance, the committee was unanimously in favour of reporting those clauses concerned with that aspect of the bill.

The one clause of the bill which gave the committee pause was clause 33. As Senator Flynn is aware, that is an unusual clause which was put there as a result of certain discussions which had gone on at the federal-provincial table. Those discussions had to do with restrictions upon the ownership of land arising from certain provincial enactments. The question of the meaning and purpose of clause 33 led to a considerable amount of discussion in committee. Some voices were strongly opposed to the proposals contained in clause 33. Ultimately, the committee decided to hear the Minister of Justice, who appeared at the last meeting of the committee. Together with the minister and his officials the committee carefully investigated clause 33, as a result of which a motion was made and carried that the bill be passed without amendment. That is the stage we reached at the termination of the committee meetings. We have now reported such to the Senate from the committee, and the motion I speak on now, honourable senators, is for third reading.

I may say to Senator Flynn that after I have heard Senator Laird's proposals, I should like to say a word on the amendment as well.

MOTION IN AMENDMENT—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Senator Laird: Honourable senators, now that the main motion has been made I wish to move, in amendment, that Bill C-20 be not now read the third time but that it be amended as follows:

On page 17 of the bill strike out clause 33 and substitute therefor the following:

"33. (1) Subject to subsection (2),

(a) real and personal property of every description may be taken, acquired, held and disposed of by a person who is not a Canadian citizen in the same manner in all respects as by a Canadian citizen; and

(b) a title to real and personal property of every description may be derived through, from or in succession to a person who is not a Canadian citizen in the same manner in all respects as though through, from or in succession to a Canadian citizen.

(2) Subsection (1) does not operate so as to

(a) qualify any person for any office or for any municipal, parliamentary or other franchise;

(b) qualify any person to be the owner of a Canadian ship;

(c) qualify any person to take, acquire, hold or dispose of any property that under or pursuant to any Act of the Parliament of Canada may be taken, acquired, held or disposed of only by Canadian citizens;

(d) entitle any person to any right or privilege as a Canadian citizen except such rights and privileges in respect of property as are hereby expressly given to him; or

(e) affect any estate or interest in real or personal property to which a person has or may become entitled, either mediately or immediately, in possession or expectancy, in pursuance of any disposition made before the 4th day of July, 1883, or in pursuance of any devolution by law on the death of any person dying before that day."

● (2040)

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Connolly (Ottawa West), seconded by the Honourable Senator Macnaughton, that this bill be now read the third time.

In amendment, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Laird, seconded by the Honourable Senator Michaud, that this bill be not now read a third time but that it be amended as follows—

Some Hon. Senators: Dispense.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

Senator Hicks: May I ask a question which seems to me to be relevant at this stage? You said, Senator Laird, that the portion you read to us was subclause (2). Does that mean that it replaces the existing subclause (2)?

Senator Laird: Yes. Honourable senators, I perhaps read this so quickly that you missed what I did. I moved that the bill be not now read the third time but that it be amended as follows:

On page 17 of the bill strike out clause 33 and substitute therefor the following:

Then I read off two subclauses. It so happens—and this will help honourable senators to understand—that the proposed amendment, subclause (1), followed the wording of the same subclause that appears in Bill C-20, and it so happens that subclause (2) is exactly the same as subclause (8) in the proposed bill. That makes it easier to follow. Of course, you will want to know what the import of this amendment is, and it is very simple.

Some Hon. Senators: Oh! Oh!

Senator Laird: The explanation, in few words, is that the bill as reported by the committee, without amendment, contained this new provision that any province could legislate to the effect that for any person to acquire or succeed to real property in that province, such person must be a Canadian citizen. You may say, as a starter, that that is only enabling legislation, and that it is up to the provinces whether or not they want to pass such legislation. Of course, I only lately was able for the first time to glance over—and that is about all it amounted to—the unrevised proceedings of the meeting of the committee which was held last Tuesday. Unfortunately, due to transportation problems that you are only too well aware of, I missed that meeting, when after discussion, as Senator Connolly says—and quite a discussion it was, too—the bill was subsequently reported without amendment.

This makes me most unhappy, because I feel that this is very, very outrageous legislation. It enables a province to do something which it could not do, of course, unless we enabled it to do so, for the very simple reason that we have sole jurisdiction over citizenship. The provinces can do other things under the British North America Act, but they cannot legislate with regard to citizenship unless we enable them to do so by this clause 33.

In the course of the discussions in committee it was apparent that not too many provinces would do something like this. Furthermore, it was brought out that some provinces indicated they did not want to be restricted to excluding ownership of real property to non-residents, that they wanted to have wider scope. But if they had wider enabling legislation, it was argued by the minister that this, in effect, would restrict it. To me that was a facetious argument. To me that means only one thing: if you pass legislation enabling a province to do something, it could not do otherwise than take advantage of the situation. The temptation is overwhelming to take advantage of it.

Just think this through. Supposing a province passes legislation to the effect that if you acquire property, presumably by deed, or by some such means, or if you are left property by succession, as in the case of a will, if you are not a Canadian citizen, you cannot take it. I am sure that unless you are lawyers you might be completely puzzled by this, so to presuppose what might be asked of me by way of a question, let me suggest that people might say, "Well, what happens?" Who knows? Who knows what the province might put in its legislation? It might provide that in a case, for example, where property is left in a will to a citizen of some country other than Canada, the property would be dealt with as it would be if there were an intestacy; that is, as if no will had been made. On the other hand, the province could provide that it could be escheated to the Crown. The potentialities are tremendous, and two things worry me, the most important of which is the personal element.

Let us suppose, for example, that a Canadian residing in Ontario is married to an American, and the Canadian dies. Let us suppose for the purposes of argument that the American spouse is the wife, and she is a landed immigrant in terms of another subsection which appears later on in the bill. In that case, none of this applies. Supposing, however, that the Canadian husband dies in the interim. Then what is the picture going to be? This brings me to the second important consideration which I noted with interest was brought into the discussion by Senator Macnaughton in committee. What effect is this going to have on the matter of titles, and the certification of titles by lawyers, without which no loan company is going to advance money? This worries me a great deal. The potential is there to completely foul up a title to the point where there are potential flaws and difficulties facing any lawyer who is trying to certify that there is really good title.

I am not going to go into all the details that were gone into in committee regarding what would happen, for example, if a mortgage was foreclosed and the mortgagee was an American citizen, and so on, all of which could include an American-controlled company. If you want to conjure up all the situations that could arise, it is not difficult to imagine the sort of thing that could happen.

Senator Grosart: Could I ask the senator a question? Is he now describing the original bill or the bill as amended?

[Senator Laird.]

Senator Laird: I am describing the original bill that was given unanimous approval in committee.

Senator Grosart: Is the honourable senator now speaking against the amendment?

Senator Laird: No. I am making an amendment. In effect, I am disagreeing with the report.

Senator Flynn: As reported to the house.

Senator Laird: That is correct. That is precisely the situation. I am in disagreement with it. If I had been in that committee the result might have been the same, but I can assure you that there would have been one frightful outcry. All of this was brought out in the committee meetings prior to the one I missed. I was present at the prior meetings and cross-examined on all these matters.

At the final meeting, as Senator Connolly says, the minister present was the Honourable Ron Basford, who was concerned with the one section, the balance of the bill being the responsibility of the Honourable Hugh Faulkner. The clause I refer to was said to involve a legal problem, and therefore it was a proper one for the Minister of Justice to be responsible for. He was best able to explain why the clause was in the bill. The Citizenship Act is a strange place to have a clause of this kind. If a title was to be searched, who would think of checking in the Citizenship Act for a flaw or potential flaw in the title?

● (2050)

That is the sort of thing that worries me, and while I do not like to be disagreeable, particularly at this late point in the session, I simply cannot let this pass without drawing to your attention the results which could ensue unless this bill is amended along the lines I have proposed, and which uses appropriate language already appearing in the bill, but eliminates from the bill subclauses (2) to (7) inclusive.

That is what my amendment is, honourable senators, and that is the total explanation. I could speak for an hour on this matter because I view with great alarm the existence of this particular clause in its present form, so much so that I could not let it pass in spite of the committee's having approved it and so reported to this house.

I hope that honourable senators will think this thing over very carefully before they vote. It is not as readily apparent, I think, to persons not trained in the law, but to any person trained in the law this is a most unfortunate suggestion in this particular bill. So, honourable senators, I am asking you to vote for the amendment so as to clear up this point.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, it seems to me that the point raised by Senator Laird is worthy of serious consideration. I have read clause 33 and it seems to me to pose many, many problems. The first question is whether the federal Parliament can delegate that power to the provinces, especially in this case, as I read it, to the lieutenant governor in council and not to the legislature.

The second point is the substantive effect of this. I know that Prince Edward Island adopted legislation concerning this, and I know that in its last budget Quebec provided for a tax payable on the acquisition of property by non-residents.

Senator Laird: And Ontario as well.

Senator Flynn: So, as Senator Laird has said, this creates a great deal of complication with regard to the operation of the lawyer or the notary in Quebec insofar as the search of titles and things like that are concerned. I think the amendment might have been to strike out entirely clause 33. That is my first reaction. But I have not read the amendment proposed by Senator Laird, and I would like to read it very carefully because I think it is doubtful that we could have a useful discussion of the amendment, which is designed to substitute something in the bill for what already is there, without having read it carefully. So if it is agreeable to the Senate, I move the adjournment of the debate at this time so that we may have a chance to look at the amendment before we continue the discussion.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is the Honourable Senator Flynn moving the adjournment?

Senator Flynn: Yes.

On motion of Senator Flynn, debate adjourned.

APPROPRIATION BILL NO. 4, 1976

THIRD READING

Senator Langlois moved the third reading of Bill C-94, for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1977.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by Senator Langlois that this bill be now read the third time.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I am sorry that the transportation difficulties to which various people have already made allusion prevented me from being here when second reading was carried. I was unavoidably detained in my native province of Newfoundland.

Senator Flynn: By fog?

Senator Forsey: No, not by fog. We had beautiful sunny weather, but the fog existed elsewhere—it was of a legal and spiritual kind, shall I say.

Had I been here I should have made on that occasion the remarks which I intend to make tonight. Had I been here I should have expressed my strong dissent from the passing of second reading of this bill, and should have done my best not only to indicate my dissent but to divide the house on it and secure such support as I could for rejecting the bill.

I am thankful that the question has at least—and at last—been brought before us, even in this most unsatisfactory form, and I subscribe to all that the honourable Senator Grosart said on that head. I would add also something that I think has escaped the notice of honourable senators and which was drawn to my attention by an honourable member of the other house. Some considerable time ago, in 1950, to be exact, the then Auditor General of Canada, Mr. Watson Sellar, submitted a report, a memorandum on estimates and the various issues that arise in dealing with them in this house, and he said, and here I think most honourable senators will agree, and I quote directly:

Legislating by means of an Appropriation Act is a convenience when a need is transitory. Furthermore, it avoids cluttering the statute books with expired legislation. But from the constitutional viewpoint, it is open to the objection that it is, in fact, incomplete legislation—

And this particular bill contains a great deal in the way of substantive legislation. That last, of course, is not part of the quotation; it is my own comment. Mr. Watson Sellar went on that if the Senate is sent a supply bill which has in it matters which are legislative, it should ask that those legislative sentences be struck out and be put in another bill. Here are his exact words:

If other matters are inserted in the bill or "tacked to it" these should be struck out and be made into a separate bill or bills.

This to my mind is a conspicuous example of "tacking" to a supply bill something that is in fact substantive legislation. It is a glaring example of that nefarious practice.

Now if this Loto Canada had been set up for a limited period, for the limited purpose of cleaning up the Olympic deficit, I could have swallowed it—just—with some gagging. But that is not the case. This is a permanent institution which has been set up by virtue of the provisions of the Canada Corporations Act. It is true that we have had certain assurances in the other place from the President of the Treasury Board, but ministers can change and governments are not immortal. And judging by what I read of the remarks of the Honourable Senator Grosart the other night, and I read the whole lot, but judging by the impression I got from those remarks, if a Conservative government were to take office it would put this monster into proper legislative form, but it would be quite prepared to go ahead with this as a permanent institution—a permanent part of our fiscal machinery, and that to my mind is not good enough.

This I think is a bad proposal, a bad innovation in our fiscal procedures. It is a device for skinning the poor, a highly regressive means of taxation. It is an encouragement to gambling generally and hence indirectly to organized crime. It is a discouragement to honest work.

● (2100)

In my judgment we may not be able to stop gambling, but we should not erect it into a major method of raising revenue. I may observe parenthetically that one honourable senator said we all like to gamble. I repudiate that statement, not only on my own behalf but on the behalf of thousands of people in this country who do not believe in gambling and will have nothing whatever to do with it. I simply refuse to believe that I am unique in that respect and I think that the suggestion that everyone holds the same views as the honourable senator in question on this is, as far as I am concerned, verging on the libellous.

I am astonished and dismayed—we should not erect this into a major method of raising revenue—that on second reading there should have been so little opposition and that there should not have been reported even a modest "on division".

To conclude, honourable senators, if I can divide the house on this, I will. If not, I shall record my dissent by a loud and clear "On division".

Senator Hicks: Honourable senators, in speaking on an inquiry dealing with this subject earlier, I expressed my views and need not repeat them tonight other than to say that I join in the position which Senator Forsey has put forth.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, Senator Forsey has referred to the remarks I made previously with respect to this particular subject. I am glad to see, because I expected it, that on the matter of principle he agrees with me as to the impropriety of this method of raising revenue. It is a device which should not be used and which the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance has reported against in much milder uses in the past. We have heard the argument, of course, in this case that this would not be a precedent. On the other hand, those supporting it cited other precedents of various kinds, including the formation of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited. Of course it will be a precedent; it will be a precedent for the further galloping erosion of the rights of Parliament. Senator Forsey suggested that I had indicated what a Conservative government might do if this situation arose, or if this temptation came before it. I do not know where Senator Forsey has obtained the information as to my influence on a Conservative government policy in the future. However, I assure him that I have not the faintest idea of what a Conservative government might do in a similar case. I rather suspect that it would receive the same type of advice from the officials as that which was given to the present government in this case, that there is an easy way out and why not take it, no one will object, Parliament will go along with it and the Senate will do nothing about it, of course, and will pass it quietly, as usual. For that reason, if Senator Forsey wishes at the appropriate time to divide the house, he will have my support.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, if I may comment on the addresses made by the preceding speakers, I should like to draw the attention of the Senate to the fact that those who object to lotteries being created and operated in Canada are a little late in making their objections known tonight. This system of operating lotteries was created not by this bill but years ago when the Criminal Code was amended to allow the creation and operation of lotteries in Canada. We are not called upon to decide upon the propriety of having lotteries in Canada. This has been on our statute books, namely, in the Criminal Code of Canada, for three or four years, if memory serves me well. By means of this bill we are doing a few simple things. First, we are authorizing Loto Canada shares to be bought for one dollar. We are providing working capital advances of $5 million to allow the company to operate Loto Canada under letters patent. We are also providing the establishment of an account in the Accounts of Canada to be known as the National Lottery Account, to which shall be credited the net revenues of Loto Canada Inc. paid to the Receiver General for Canada and, continuing with the words of vote L27a:

... to authorize payment out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund and to charge to the said Account

[Senator Forsey.]

(d) in the current fiscal year, for the purpose of physical fitness, amateur sport and recreation programs in accordance with terms and conditions prescribed by order of the Governor in Council, of an amount not to exceed 5% of the amount credited to the said Account in the current fiscal year; and

(e) subject to the amounts that may be paid pursuant to paragraph (d), in the fiscal years 1976-77, 1977-78 and 1978-79 on the last day of March, June, September and December of each such year, until the 31st day of December 1979—

Therefore the termination of this operation is December 1979.

Reference was made to a promise made in the other place. It was more than a promise; it was a resolution adopted, if my information is correct, by the Miscellaneous Estimates Committee of that house to the effect that the regulations covering the operations of Loto Canada should be amended to close the lottery after the completion of the thirteenth draw. That is a limitation, not a promise, but a limitation imposed in consequence of a motion of a committee of the other place.

Senator Forsey: Would the honourable senator allow a question?

Senator Langlois: If the honourable senator would allow me to complete my explanation of this I would appreciate it; I will not be very long. That is all we are doing by means of this bill. We are not amending the Criminal Code; it was amended years ago. We are not incorporating in the fund-raising structure of this country a new system of raising money. This was done years ago when authority was given to the Government of Canada to operate lotteries. As a matter of fact, this authority was given also to provincial governments, provided they operate under the regulations passed by the Governor in Council. This was done in the case of the province of Quebec for the last two years with regard to the Olympic lottery. Therefore, we are simply carrying into effect the decision of Parliament which was made, as I said, three or four years ago when the Criminal Code of Canada was amended to allow the operation of lotteries in this country.

Senator Forsey: Will the honourable senator now permit a question?

Senator Langlois: Yes.

Senator Forsey: Is there anything in the charter of this corporation under the Canada Corporations Act which limits its operations to the years 1977, 1978 and 1979?

Senator Langlois: No, but if my honourable friend will read vote L27a in the supplementary estimates (A) he will see that the national lottery account is limited to fiscal years 1976-77, 1977-78 and 1978-79. There was a resolution passed by the committee of the other place, as I mentioned, limiting, through an amendment to the regulations, the operation to thirteen draws. Therefore, after the thirteenth drawing has been carried out the company must discontinue its operations because it will not be allowed to operate under the regulations as amended by the said resolution.

Senator Forsey: Is there anything to prevent the Governor in Council in 1979 passing fresh regulations? The situation will still exist. Is there anything in the resolution to prevent the Governor in Council from passing fresh regulations which would allow this corporation to go on doing this ad infinitum?

• (2110)

Senator Langlois: If my honourable friend is asking me to say that the authority of the Governor General is going to be limited by this supply bill, I would say no. It is not a promise; it is a resolution of a committee of the other place, to which house the minister and all the other ministers are accountable.

Senator Forsey: Surely the honourable gentleman will admit that resolutions can be changed, that what has been passed by one Parliament can be unpassed and done away with by another Parliament. Does he not agree that so long as the institution is there, a subsequent Parliament or government can change the thing and can pass new regulations and continue the operations of this affair?

Senator Langlois: If my honourable friend is asking me if this bill limits any future Parliament of Canada in its acts, I would say that is an impossibility. This is quite elementary.

Senator Forsey: Quite; precisely. So this is a permanent thing.

Senator Langlois: What are we talking about, then?

Senator Grosart: Would the deputy leader admit that the purpose of this bill is to create for the first time in Canadian history a federal lottery?

Senator Langlois: We are not creating a company which is going to operate a lottery. This corporation has been incorporated by letters patent. We are not changing that. We are providing the means for this company to operate, and, as I explained the other day, the corporation will have to report to the Minister of National Health and Welfare, and through him to Parliament, each year, and the Auditor General will be auditing the accounts of the corporation. We are providing for that, and it is also provided for under the Financial Administration Act.

Every year Parliament will be informed completely of the operations of Loto Canada Incorporated. In addition, as I said the other day, there will be in the estimates of the Department of National Health and Welfare each year an item covering the operations of this crown company, and such item will be debatable in both houses of Parliament.

Senator Grosart: With respect, I do not think the Deputy Leader of the Government has answered my question. I asked: Does this bill create—because that is what the Minister said—for the first time in Canadian history a federal lottery? That is all I am asking. Yes or no.

Senator Langlois: No; for the simple reason that, as I have explained, this lottery will be operated by a corporation which has been incorporated by letters patent. We are not incorporating this new entity. It has been created by letters patent.

Senator Hicks: You are just financing it.

Senator Grosart: The minister's statement was very clear, that the purpose is to create a federal lottery. Obviously this is what has been done. It does not matter how it is done, whether it is done by letters patent or any other way. For the first time in Canadian history the federal government is in the lottery business—

Senator Forsey: Yes.

Senator Grosart: And the objection we have made is on that point—not that it might not be good policy. I am not arguing that point. I am not arguing the morals or anything else. The point which some of us have raised is that a major change in government policy, which is objected to by many people—I am not saying I am one of them—should not be made by a loan vote in supplementary estimates.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I repeat that this decision was made by Parliament years ago when the Criminal Code was amended to permit the Government of Canada to operate lotteries. Today, by this bill, we have merely provided the means by which that can be achieved.

Senator Grosart: You have created it.

Senator Forsey: Would not the Deputy Leader of the Government admit there is a difference between permitting something and actually doing it? You pass an act, surely, to permit something, but it does not follow that you are actually going to do it. Permission is there, but the actual doing of the thing is, surely, something different.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Langlois, seconded by the Honourable Senator Perrault, that this bill be now read a third time.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Senator Forsey: On division.

Senator Bourget: On a small division.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed, on division.

INCOME TAX ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE—DEBATE
ADJOURNED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on Bill C-58, to amend the Income Tax Act.

Senator Hayden moved that the report be adopted.

He said: Honourable senators, before I embark on an explanation of the substance of the report I would ask if it is the wish of the Senate that I should proceed now. I am perfectly prepared to do so, but, no matter how I may try, it will take me more than a few minutes. However, I am in the hands of the Senate. I am ready to proceed, but I would not like to divide my remarks into two parts.

I propose to explain first the purposes and objectives of Bill C-58. It is over two months since we debated the bill in the Senate, and it may well be that in view of all the other matters which have come before us, and which have occupied our time during that period, the important and particular details of bill C-58 may not be clear in the minds of some honourable senators. For that reason I propose to take a few minutes to explain the purposes and objectives of the bill.

The bill proposes a change in the existing law in relation to Canadian and non-Canadian newspapers and periodicals, and also the repeal of an exemption which the law, up until now and until the bill becomes law, allows—that is, the exemption provided by amendments which were made in 1965.

In 1965, by amendments to section 19 of the Income Tax Act, the provision was imposed for the first time that no deduction shall be allowed for the expense of advertising in a non-Canadian newspaper, periodical or magazine. An exemption was then provided that to the extent that there were such non-Canadian periodicals and newspapers operating in April 1965, and with the limitation that so long as thereafter they maintained without interruption their operations, they shall be deemed not to be non-Canadian newspapers and periodicals. So that constituted an exemption from the otherwise non-deductibility of the expense of advertising by Canadian advertisers in such publications.

● (2120)

A second feature has been added for the first time, and that feature has to do with broadcasting. Bill C-58 provides that no deduction shall be allowed for advertising expenses incurred in connection with the broadcasting of advertising material primarily directed to the Canadian market by a broadcast undertaking outside of Canada. I may hereafter refer to broadcast undertakings outside of Canada as border stations. If so, it means stations that operate outside of Canada. They are known in the trade as border stations.

Those are the two essential principles of Bill C-58. The Senate, in adopting the motion for the second reading of Bill C-58, approved, by a substantial majority, the principle of the bill, following which it was referred to the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee. The committee heard numerous witnesses. It received approximately 16 briefs from substantial interests in the fields of pictorials, magazines, broadcasting and advertising, and many more briefs from people who were interested in presenting their views but who did not wish to be heard. In all, we heard about 47 witnesses while sitting, I would say, about two days a week starting from May 5 and going through beyond the middle of June. The result is this report.

I want honourable senators to understand clearly that this report does not propose any change in the principles of the bill, the essential principles which I have enumerated. It does not erode in any way the principle in relation to broadcasting.

The ministers appeared before the committee on May 5 and 6 and were very clear in their language as to the objectives of the bill. The Secretary of State said:

These changes in the income tax law affecting advertising in periodicals are regarded as a very important factor in terms of developing and nurturing a distinctly Canadian culture and identity. This is the intent of one part of Bill C-58—

The part which refers to Canadian newspapers and Canadian periodicals and magazines.

—to develop a distinctly Canadian culture and identity through a Canadian periodical press by affording it access to a fair share of advertising revenue in the Canadian market.

[Senator Hayden.]

The effect of disallowing the deduction of advertising costs in non-Canadian magazines and periodicals would subject the Canadian advertiser to a tax on his net income from which he could not deduct these expenses before calculation of his tax.

I should point out also that in the original amendments that were passed in 1965 there was a standard set as to the requirements that any pictorial or newspaper proposing to operate in Canada had to meet, one being that 75 per cent of the voting shares had to be held by Canadians, and 75 per cent of the board of directors and the presiding officer of the company had to be Canadians. Secondly, and most importantly—and this was in the 1965 legislation—that the contents of the magazine, pictorial or newspaper containing this advertising “must not be substantially the same” as the contents of a counterpart magazine published outside of Canada. The test was that those magazines which were located in Canada, by virtue of the exemption in the 1965 legislation, lost their statutory exemption, and if they were going to continue in operation in Canada thereafter they had to meet the requirements of the 1965 legislation, which were 75 per cent Canadian ownership of the voting shares, 75 per cent of the board of directors being Canadian and the presiding officer of the company being Canadian. In addition, they had to meet the test that the magazine or pictorial was not substantially the same as a counterpart magazine or pictorial published outside of Canada.

As it developed in fact, and as it developed before us in committee, there were really two magazines in Canada in 1965 that enjoyed this exemption. They were the only ones that met the test of the exemption, and that test was that throughout the period of 12 months ending April 26, 1965, issues or editions of issues of that publication were being edited, in whole or in part, in Canada, and printed and published in Canada at the usual intervals for issues of that publication, and have since that date continued to be so edited, printed and published without interruption, except for a reason other than the cessation of the business of publishing that publication.

As I indicated, only Reader's Digest and Time Canada qualified for entitlement to have that exemption in 1965. Since that date there have been no new magazines or periodicals that have sought to come into Canada and to qualify under those provisions.

Then we look at the situation as it developed in evidence before us. Both Reader's Digest and Time Canada appeared to be caught under this repeal of the exemption provisions. Time indicated to us that it had interested potential purchasers in the purchase of a controlling interest, a 75 per cent interest, in Time Canada, and therefore had to ascertain from Ottawa the interpretation of the words “substantially the same” to be imposed. They got in touch with the Department of National Revenue—or Revenue Canada, as it is called now—and attempted to ascertain the interpretation that was going to be put upon the words “substantially the same.”

Since 1965 there has not been any interpretation of those words. There has been no occasion to interpret those words because no person, no magazine, no periodical from outside Canada has sought to qualify as a Canadian periodical, magazine or newspaper. So Time had discussions with officials in Ottawa in the month of March. They had discussions in May with the then minister, the Honourable Mr. Basford. Mr. Basford referred them to his departmental officials, and they had a very useful discussion with them.

● (2130)

A memorandum was produced, which the departmental officials indicated had been prepared to indicate their thinking to date on this question of "substantially the same." It had on it an indication that it had been prepared by the deputy minister for purposes of discussion with the minister. However, the then minister indicated that he was not prepared to discuss it with them until he had first made a statement to the committee that was going to consider the bill in the Commons.

The debate in the Commons was protracted—so much so that there was a change in portfolios, and the Honourable Mr. Cullen became the Minister of National Revenue. There was a request by Time that the minister refer this matter of interpretation to the Federal Court under section 173 of the Income Tax Act, and he refused. I am going to read you the memorandum in a few minutes.

The next step was that on October 23 the new Minister of National Revenue issued a press release in which he announced that "substantially the same" meant that you had to determine the degree of difference between the Canadian publication and the publication outside of Canada, and the difference between the Canadian publication and the outside publication had to be at least 80 per cent. In other words, you could only incorporate in the Canadian edition up to 20 per cent of the content that was being generated from outside Canada by the counterpart magazine.

On October 23, with this bill coming into force on January 1, 1976, and being told you had to meet this test of at least 80 per cent difference in content, the time for being able to maintain the continued interest of your proposed purchasers of course disappeared. It is perfectly easy to understand why any investors in the circumstances, and in the state of the law, would want to know that this magazine, of which they were buying 75 per cent of the shares, could operate under the law in Canada.

The end of the year came and this bill went on its course in Parliament. It eventually got to us some time during April—and it is still not law. In the meantime, the expenses of Time were mounting very greatly, so they dropped their Canadian edition and to that extent left Canada, although the American edition is still circulated in Canada. Advertising revenues, of course, dropped.

Let me tell you what this memorandum said, to show the basis for our thinking, in one of our amendments, that interpretation of the words "substantially the same" should not in the circumstances be left to the Executive, but rather should be left to the courts. If we are going to have the rule of law prevail, as we think it should, that is where a taxpayer or a person contemplating coming into Canada should be able to go. He should be able to find out what the courts say is the meaning of the legislation; it should not be left to the discretion of the Executive. In other words, our proposed amendment elevates the responsibility of the source of the interpretation. We take from the Minister of National Revenue the responsibility of giving interpretations. There is nothing in the Income Tax Act which provides for those interpretations, unless you say that the minister has broad powers to make regulations under the act, and I think it would be stretching it too far to include interpretations.

Just to show you the course, the memorandum reads in this fashion:

The literary contents of a Canadian issue of a periodical need neither be written by Canadians nor be on essentially Canadian subjects.

The requirement is that at least half the contents be new, fresh, original material which has not appeared in any periodical outside Canada. A topic may be the same as one covered in a foreign publication; but, the writing must be sufficiently different so that there can be no infringement of the rights usually associated with the original article and the original author.

Minor additions or deletions to Canadianize a composition does not create substantially different content. Photographs and illustrations will be viewed as supporting the literary compositions in the periodical. Photographs which have been cropped, blown up, rearranged on a page, or replaced by a similar view of the same subject will not be viewed as a different content.

That was as far, in the matter of interpretation, as they were able to get until October 23. The percentage had been discussed as being 50 per cent, 60 per cent, and then it was suggested perhaps 80 per cent.

When we asked the minister, the Honourable Mr. Cullen, why they picked the qualification of at least 80 per cent, his answer, in the words that he used, seemed fairly simple. It was that, of course, at least 80 per cent substantially the same was so clear, and so clearly to be interpreted, that there could be no confusion whether it was 79 or 78 per cent. I remember I asked, "What if you disallow a qualification because the difference was only 60 per cent, and the person against whom you made the disallowance went to court and said that 60 per cent difference was not substantially the same as the edition published outside of Canada?" He replied: "Well, we would contest it, and if the court gave a different interpretation to our rule or interpretation we would change the law."

Senator Walker: By legislation.

Senator Hayden: This was the situation for any prospective purchaser, or for any person contemplating disposing of his publication or meeting the requirement of remaining in Canada, and it is understandable why in those circumstances Time Canada moved out.

● (2140)

I am not saying this in an attempt to present any brief for Time Canada. I am only telling you what the course of events was to give you an appreciation of why one of the amendments in our report is an amendment that provides that any publisher who is proposing to acquire and to operate a Canadian magazine or periodical in Canada may go to the Minister of National Revenue and request that the matter of interpretation be referred to the courts, and the minister must refer that matter for interpretation to the courts. You can see that that amendment does not interfere with the principle of the bill at all. All we do is change from the minister to the court. We say in the circumstances, and with the background which I have related to you, it is a justifiable change.

Another amendment is under the heading of retroactivity. Bill C-58 provided that the sections dealing with Canadian newspapers, pictorials and magazines would come into force on January 1, 1976. This is now June 28, 1976 and the bill as yet has not become law. Therefore, there is even now a substantial retroactive effect to this legislation.

For instance, take Canadian advertisers who may have had advertising contracts outstanding for the first four months of 1976 with Time Canada, and Time Canada leaves. Time Canada at that time of leaving Canada was a non-Canadian publication because it had departed from the exemption and the terms of the exemption. It had interrupted the continuity of its production and distribution in Canada. That was one of the terms of the exemption provided in 1965. Therefore, a great many people felt—myself included, although I am not offering myself as a witness—that retroactivity in any legislation is repugnant, and that you only agree to it when there is a very definite requirement that you must have it. I am thinking in particular in connection with the budget where you have to crystallize positions at a certain date so there cannot be changes to evade, avoid or escape the provisions of the law at a certain date. I have said in this chamber time after time in explaining tax bills that retroactivity is something to which I am opposed except when it is beneficial to the taxpayer, and then I am all for it.

The second amendment we propose is that instead of saying that this bill comes into force on January 1, 1976, we say it comes into force on January 1, 1977—instead of saying, as Bill C-58 says, the sections on non-deductibility of advertising expenses apply to any non-Canadian publication published after December 31, 1975. That date has long since gone. We say that December 31, 1975 should be December 31, 1976, with the bill coming into force on January 1, 1977. Those are two items.

The third amendment concerns MD magazine. Representatives of that magazine appeared before our committee. It is a magazine which has a circulation of about 30,000. It is a magazine distributed to doctors. The magazine contains substantially medical advertising, equipment, and things of that nature. It is a clinical magazine.

Senator Bourget: Is it free, Senator Hayden?

Senator Hayden: Yes, it is distributed free.

Senator Smith (Queens-Shelburne): It is like a handbook.

Senator Hayden: It has enjoyed an exemption under the 1965 legislation, under a special provision in section 19 of the Income Tax Act, subsection (4). The wording of subsection (4), as it touches this particular magazine, is as follows:

Subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an advertisement in . . . any publication—

Subsection (1) is the section in the 1965 legislation which imposes the non-deductibility provision on advertising expenses. It does not apply to any publication.

—the principal function of which is the encouragement, promotion or development of the fine arts, letters, scholarship or religion.

[Senator Hayden.]

May I just take you back to the item which the Secretary of State said was the objective of the bill, and that is by increasing the revenues of Canadian magazines and periodicals we would make them economically viable and enable them to develop in a way that would nurture national culture and national identity in Canada. I have always had difficulty in trying to achieve a definition of "national culture." I finally concluded—I could be 100 per cent wrong on this—that you have to look for it in manifestations here and there and elsewhere, in the arts, paintings and this definition, because I would think that fine arts, letters, scholarship or religion would be manifestations of national culture. In those circumstances, why a magazine such as MD is struck out as not being entitled to the benefit of this exemption is difficult for me to understand.

Since 1965, the income tax people, in allowing this exemption to MD each year, have allowed it on the basis that MD is a publication the principal function of which is the encouragement, promotion or development of the fine arts, letters, scholarship or religion.

If national culture can be equated to the fine arts, to letters and to scholarship, then it certainly comes within the objectives which the Secretary of State himself has set as the purpose he expects of the Canadian magazine industry the moment it is on a competitive level with any other magazine in Canada, and it can enhance its revenues. This is the reason for striking out the section of Bill C-58 which repeals the exemption provided in subsection (4) of section 19.

The last item we deal with is the provision with respect to broadcasting. In broadcasting it is provided that the bill shall come into force on a date to be fixed by proclamation. In explaining this, the minister, if I may paraphrase him, said that they had not fixed a date for the broadcast section to come into force. The reason for that was that first of all they had to be satisfied that the needs of the Canadian advertising industry had been adequately satisfied by the existing broadcast facilities available for advertising in Canada before they could proclaim the bill. The real reason, I think, was sort of suggested by Mr. Boyle, the President of the CRTC, who said that he understood, although he could be wrong, that it related to the new station which will be completed in a few months in Vancouver, the biggest competition of which comes from KVOS in Bellingham, Seattle, not too far from Vancouver. The Bellingham station has been enjoying the broadcasting business from the Canadian advertisers, and the moment this portion of the bill is proclaimed the advertising costs which Canadian advertisers pay to the border station for advertising directed to the Canadian market will no longer be deductible for income tax purposes.

● (2150)

The opinion of the committee was that Parliament was the place in which the decision should be made with respect to the circumstances and the date of publication. Therefore, we provided that the way in which the proclamation date would be set would be by a resolution or a motion introduced in the House of Commons. That means the government of the day would introduce the motion or resolution providing for that date and that that resolution or motion would have to be concurred in by the Senate.

You can see, then, that none of these amendments really affects the principle of the bill. In no way have we touched the principle of the bill. The acceptance of these proposed amendments has been good in the eyes of the public, notwithstanding telegrams most senators may have received today from several of the advertisers who appeared before our committee. I was chatting with Senator Goldenberg for a few minutes at dinner this evening and I said, "Do you think I have a legitimate cause of complaint under the Bill of Rights Act, since I feel I have been discriminated against because I did not receive copies of those telegrams?" Perhaps there is a reasonable explanation why I did not receive copies.

In any event, in one of our amendments you can see that we have transferred from ministerial discretion to the Federal Court the matter of interpretation. I think no one can fault the committee on that or even fault such an amendment. On the question of proclamation we have provided that Parliament shall establish the date, and "Parliament" means both Houses of Parliament. Parliament is the authority that should establish the date on as important a thing as the bringing into force of the broad-based sections of this bill; and bear in mind that this is the first time we have this law in Canada.

Now, there are certain regulations and orders of CRTC on various subject matters in connection with broadcasting and the operation of television stations, but on that we felt Parliament should be the ruling factor to establish the date of the coming into force.

Incidentally, I suddenly discovered I was receiving some fan mail, which is a rather unusual circumstance for me, commending us on this attitude of moving in the area of full responsibility toward the courts and Parliament and away from ministerial discretion. I can see why the public interest, as appears in the newspapers and so on, and judging from comments I have heard and telephone calls I have received, would favour such a move.

I feel I have dealt with the amendments sufficiently, honourable senators, and I should now like to take a few minutes to deal with the subject of undertakings, because that question has been raised. The device of undertakings has often been used by the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee in cooperation with the particular minister whose bill is before us in order to facilitate passage of the bill without foregoing the effect of amendments. In other words, the committee would determine whether the undertakings the minister would be prepared to give would be such that they would reasonably meet the requirements the committee thought had to be met or should be met within a particular bill. I will give you a few illustrations of what I mean.

In many of the bills where that undertaking method has been used the undertakings have been lived up to. In the income tax bill, for example, in which the undertakings were given in December of 1970, it took about four years until the last of those undertakings was fulfilled. But they were all fulfilled. With respect to the foreign investment review bill, I reported to the then government leader at a stage in the committee that it appeared that there would be amendments to the bill and I thought he should know early about that fact. Accordingly, he set up an appointment with the minister and his officials as well as with a representative from the Department of Justice. I appeared with our special advisers and we had a full discussion as to the specific undertakings which, judging from the temper of the committee and the tenor of the discussions, would be necessary in order that the bill might be passed without amendment; and that was done. While the undertakings were fulfilled, I would not say they have been fulfilled fully in the way that one might desire; but they have been fulfilled, let us say, to the letter of the undertakings.

Again I think, for instance, of the bankruptcy bill which we dealt with back in 1967 or thereabouts. We put in a "solicitor and client" provision. The then minister, the Honourable Mr. Cardin, felt that such a provision would interfere with his ability to tidy up matters in the world of bankruptcy and would interfere with his fully dealing with the situation. The Honourable John Connolly, who was then government leader in the Senate, arranged an appointment with the Honourable Mr. Cardin, and I saw the minister on three or four occasions during which we discussed the pros and cons of the matter. I then reported to the committee just what the situation was. We finally agreed to report the bill omitting the amendment we had proposed on the solicitor and client privilege. In that case we had an undertaking that they were working on a new bankruptcy act which would be introduced in "a year or two." The new bankruptcy act was only tabled earlier in this session. We have been working on it and I expect that it will be introduced next year. We have done all our work, we have all our amendments, which are being worked on by our special advisers and myself, and we are trying to conform fully to all the recommendations which were made.

● (2200)

I refer to this only to illustrate that the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce is not a hard-boiled or difficult committee to deal with. We do, however, have to look at the substance of what is needed, and when we did that with this bill we felt that nobody could fault us for proposing the kind of amendments we have proposed. We think they are in the public interest and should be supported on that ground.

It would be difficult for me to suggest what undertakings would be required to deal with the subject matter of these amendments, but I have been spared the necessity of that because the minister has not been in touch with me, and I did not feel that I had an obligation to get in touch with him. I did, however, get in touch with the government leader in the Senate and I told him what I thought the proposed amendments were going to be. I can tell you that he certainly did not say that they were awful amendments. His language may have been restrained, but it was not unfavourable to the subject matter of the amendments. Let me put it that way. The government leader will have an opportunity to say whether I have misquoted him or understated him. I certainly have not overstated what he said.

Returning to the matter of undertakings, if I were asked to define them I would say this: if you operate by undertakings, it must be because there is an urgency and an importance in the principle of the proposed legislation which require that it should come into force as quickly as possible. Then the undertakings must be reasonable and in the public interest, and if they are given you must feel that they will be implemented, because there is no statutory basis on which they can be required to be implemented. Again, the undertakings must refer to specific points. To give an undertaking or a commitment is one thing; but that is very general. It must be clear what the undertaking means. It would be impossible to say what an undertaking meant unless it were in relation to a specific subject matter. Under those conditions you might take a look at an undertaking.

In the past we would only agree, and we would only agree now, to accept undertakings and report a bill without amendment, with the full knowledge of the Senate. Furthermore, we have always included such an agreement in our report to the Senate; we have always told the Senate what we have done. If the Senate rejected the idea, that was its privilege. In the same way, it is the privilege of the Senate to reject our report.

If I might express a personal opinion, if these amendments do not satisfy the full test of responsibility on the part of the committee in its approach to this problem, then I do not know whatever would unless it were the Lord's Prayer.

You have this safeguard, however, that if we accept undertakings and the Senate does not agree with our action, it has a chance to reject them. That is not the situation here, of course. The situation here is that we have not heard from the minister. The minister has announced publicly that he will not accept the amendments, and that insofar as the Senate is concerned he knows that there is a majority here who will support the bill without amendment. If he can move in here and do that, that is fine. There is an Irish expression which I will use: "More power to his elbow."

Having said all this, there is an additional word I should like to add.

There developed, not for the first time but for the second time, in my conversation with the government leader, a discussion as to what might be expected to develop in the Senate. I told him my purpose in calling him, and in outlining to him what the subject matter of the proposed amendments would be. He indicated to me, as he had a perfect right to do, that as government leader in the Senate it was his duty to get government bills through without amendment. I would say that that is a legitimate objective, and a responsible one. But looking at it from the point of view of a member of a committee of the Senate, I find it irksome. There may not be any way in which this can be changed, except by a vote in the Senate, either supporting the position taken by the government leader or supporting the report of the committee. I am not looking for a contest. I am not looking for confrontations. What I am seeking to do is the best that can be done so far as the Senate is concerned, and when I say that I refer to the Senate as viewed through the eyes of the public, because the achievements of the Senate and the prestige it has gained over the last number of years have been quite a wonderful thing. The public have acquired an appreciation of the importance, the value and the authority of the Senate. This is something I would not give up for anything.

I would hate to be the chairman of a committee that was under restraint to the extent that it could only study a bill referred to it, but could not make any amendments. I would not want to be chairman of that kind of committee, or operate under that kind of restriction. So I hope we do not get to that stage.

[Senator Hayden.]

Honourable senators, I have taken longer than I expected, although perhaps not much longer. I thought I might be 45 minutes, though I did not tell you that in the beginning because I thought you might have said right away, "Let us adjourn."

That is my story, honourable senators. I am sure there are many things, in the interest of conciseness, that I have not developed as fully as they could be developed, but I think I have gone into the subject enough to make you aware of the nature of the amendments and their scope, and the fact that the principles of the bill are not eroded in any way by what the report proposes by way of amendment.

The committee was not influenced by attitudes of ministers when they appeared before it, and those who are members of the committee will understand exactly what I mean by that. Nor were we influenced by the attitudes of any of the witnesses who appeared. We gave these people a fair hearing, and questioned them quite closely with a view to gathering all the essential information.

This is the report. It is in your hands to say whether the amendments are acceptable or not, and that will determine the fate of the bill.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I rise briefly at this time only to correct the record. I hope to make a fuller statement later on behalf of the government with regard to the measure before us.

All of us have different recollections of conversations which are held in the halls and offices of this building. Let me say that I do not regard my responsibility here as being that of advancing government legislation without amendment. If Senator Hayden has quoted me as having said this, it is as a result of a substantial misunderstanding.

Let me tell you, honourable senators, for your information, that it was my invitation that led to the meeting with Senator Hayden in my office, the purpose of which was to discuss with him ways in which this legislation could be advanced and improved, where possible, in as constructive a fashion as could be achieved.

After the meeting with Senator Hayden I did indeed contact him and suggested ways in which improvements could be made. Senator Hayden is fully aware of my continuing efforts during this past week to make certain that the ideas which have been advanced by honourable senators are given fair consideration by this government.

● (2210)

I assure honourable senators that in the ultimate any Leader of the Government in the Senate has the responsibility to advance government legislation. He also has the responsibility to make sure that the prestige and standing of this chamber are maintained at all times, and I labour unceasingly to make these two concepts compatible. Honourable senators who know the extent of my efforts during recent days with respect to Bill C-58 know that substantial evidence exists of my efforts.

Senator Hayden: Honourable senators, may I just answer Senator Perrault? What he has forgotten is that the first discussion we had was when I approached him by telephone, when I could not reach him otherwise, on the Monday of the week in which we prepared our report. We talked for some time on the telephone, and it was then that I told him of the nature of the amendments which I thought would be proposed, and when he made comment on some of them and not on others.

It was the following morning that there was a discussion with him in his office and he indicated that he would have to discuss with the cabinet or the government these amendments to ascertain what their views were, but he wanted to know whether undertakings would be an acceptable way, insofar as the committee was concerned, of dealing with this. I said, "I am not in a position where I can tell you that now because I am only chairman and one member of the committee, and I would have to know the nature of the amendments and the scope of them, and I want that information." I think later that day on his way into the chamber he did indicate to me that there could be an undertaking in relation to the interpretation of the words "substantially the same", and that was the extent of my discussions with the government leader. I cannot recall a further discussion until this evening.

To my mind it is still the same. Any question of undertakings will have to be discussed in committee because the committee is the sponsor of this report, and I am merely the vehicle through which the report is presented to the Senate. Then whatever they decide will have to come to the Senate to be approved, because it is the Senate that is speaking, not the committee, and it is the Senate which says that this bill is reported without amendment or this bill is reported with amendments, even after our report comes in.

These are the discussions we had. I am inclined to agree with the government leader that there can be misunderstandings as to the exact language that was used in the conversation, but my mind is perfectly clear on the substance of my telephone call, because I had a committee meeting later that night and I relayed the substance of our telephone call to the members of the committee. The meeting which I had next day I did not relate to the committee because parts of it, the absence of which would have made the whole thing disjointed, were discussed in confidence. I have not talked about the substance of what was said on that occasion, and I am sure the government leader knows what I am referring to.

But the parts I felt sure I could relate to the committee I have related to the committee, so at the time they drafted the report they were fully aware of what was going on. I particularly emphasize this because there has been an allegation that I failed as chairman because I did not go to the minister and ask him to discuss with me the undertakings that he might give. My only answer to that, honourable senators, when it came to me, was that I do not regard that as part of my duty as chairman. In all the other cases I have had, the minister actually appeared before our committee. Even in connection with the Foreign Investment Review Agency legislation, the minister appeared before our committee and repeated these undertakings. After our study of the White Paper and the Income Tax Bill which followed, and the Competition Bill which we dealt with and which we reported without amendment, there was attached to our report presented to the Senate a letter from the Minister of Finance setting out his undertaking. So that we have proceeded, I hope, carefully and sincerely without any thought of trying to make yards out of the situation, but just trying to be careful and not to do anything that could be considered or criticized as being improper.

Senator Hicks: Honourable senators, may I ask Senator Hayden if the committee was unanimous in support of the report before us now?

Senator Hayden: No, the vote was seven to one.

On motion of Senator Cook, debate adjourned.

ADJOURNMENT

Leave having been given to revert to Notices of Motions:

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I move, seconded by Senator Perrault, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until tomorrow, Tuesday, June 29, 1976 at 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m.

APPENDIX

(See p. 2262)

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING

BETWEEN:

THE MINISTER OF TRANSPORT

AND:

THE CANADIAN AIR TRAFFIC CONTROL ASSOCIATION
(CATCA)

AND:

THE CANADIAN AIR LINE PILOTS' ASSOCIATION (CALPA)

IT IS HEREBY AGREED

1. THAT the public Commission of Inquiry which has been announced be composed of three (3) judicial appointees; the third being acceptable to CATCA before any public announcement of his appointment is made.
2. THAT a prerequisite to the expansion or introduction of any bilingual air traffic service be a unanimous report of the Commission declaring the proposed expansion or introduction to be consistent with the maintenance of current safety standards in Canadian air operations.
3. THAT the terms of reference now contained in Order in Council PC-1976-1576 should include a provision to the effect that "the Commissioners shall append to their reports any statement on the aspects of the inquiry reported upon, received from CATCA or CALPA within a specified period of time designated by the Commission".
4. THAT the terms of reference should include a further provision to the effect that "the Commissioners shall not in any of their reports indicate that safety has been demonstrated unless they can justify beyond a reasonable doubt why any contrary view expressed by CATCA or CALPA should not prevail".
5. THAT the terms of reference should be revised on page 1 thereof as follows:
  - (a) In the preamble, by amending line 9 thereof to read as follows: "in relation to aviation safety, implementation costs and operational efficiency, and . . .";
  - (b) Further in the preamble, by amending line 13 thereof to read as follows: ". . . industry, and also upon such other matters as might influence . . .";
  - (c) In paragraph (d), by amending line 7 thereof to read as follows: ". . . to aviation safety, implementation costs and operational efficiency; and . . .".
6. THAT the terms of reference should be revised on page 2 thereof as follows:
  - (a) In paragraph (a), by amending line 1 thereof to read as follows: ". . . the Commissioners shall be authorized to prescribe . . .";
  - (b) In paragraph (b), by amending line 2 thereof to read as follows: ". . . and of Air Canada shall furnish to the Commissioners . . .";
  - (c) In paragraph (c), by amending line 1 thereof to read as follows: ". . . the Commissioners shall invite duly designated . . .";

- (d) In paragraph (c), by amending line 3 thereof to read as follows: ". . . the aviation air carrier industry to be present and to . . .";
- (e) In paragraph (d), by amending line 1 thereof to read as follows: ". . . the Commissioners shall be authorized to engage the . . .";
- (f) In paragraph (e), by amending line 1 thereof to read as follows: ". . . the Commissioners shall submit interim reports . . .";
- (g) In paragraph (f), by amending line 1 thereof to read as follows: ". . . the Minister shall table any interim reports and . . .".
7. With reference to the "specially appointed professional advisers" mentioned in paragraph (c) on page 1 of the terms of reference, Transport Canada and CATCA will submit a joint list of appropriate controller advisers to the Commission.
8. THAT Transport Canada will submit before July 1 a recommendation to the Privy Council which the Government will process expeditiously and publish in the Canada Gazette at the earliest possible date as an air navigation order with regard to the use of language in the air, and Transport Canada undertakes to pursue the enforcement thereof.
9. THAT, following the tabling of the final report of the Commission in Parliament, the Government will present a resolution to the House of Commons seeking concurrence therein in a free vote.

This MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING was signed at Ottawa, on the 28th day of June, 1976, subject to acceptance by the membership of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association.

The Honourable Otto Lang,
Minister of Transport

J. M. Livingston, President,
Canadian Air Traffic Control Association

K. A. Maley, President,
Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association

P.C. 1976-1588

CERTIFIED TO BE A TRUE COPY OF A MINUTE OF A MEETING
OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL ON THE 28 JUNE, 1976

The Committee of the Privy Council, on the recommendation of the Minister of Transport, advise that, pursuant to Part I of the Inquiries Act, the Honourable W. R. Sinclair of Edmonton, the Honourable Julien Chouinard of Quebec City and the Honourable D. V. Heald of Ottawa be appointed Co-Commissioners to inquire into the safety of the introduction of bilingual IFR Air Traffic Services in the Province of Quebec, and report upon the implications in relation to aviation safety, implementation costs and operational efficiency, and upon the procedures (and methods of their development) being developed by the Department of Transport in conjunction with the aviation associations and the aviation industry, and also upon such other matters as might influence the further introduction of bilingual Air Traffic Services in Quebec, and, without restricting the generality of the foregoing, to consider, evaluate and report upon

- (a) the parameters of a procedural study to be conducted by the Department of Transport based on the use of an air traffic control electronic simulator;
- (b) the documentation required pertaining to the various procedures developed in order to facilitate evaluation of those procedures;
- (c) the detailed conduct of the Department of Transport's studies and participation therein of representatives of the aviation industry and associations by monitoring, as appropriate, through specially appointed professional advisers if considered necessary, and by means of interim recommendations to the Department of Transport, the aviation industry and associations;
- (d) the IFR procedures finally developed, and the VFR flight operations in Dorval and Mirabel Terminal Radar Service Areas, and St. Hubert Control Zone, in terms of the adequacy of the method used in developing and testing the procedures and the implications in relation to aviation safety, implementation costs and operational efficiency; and
- (e) relevant matters that may in the course of the inquiry arise or develop and that, in the opinion of the Commissioners, should be included in the report.

The Committee further advise that

- (a) the Commissioners shall be authorized to prescribe and adopt such practices and procedures for all purposes of the Commission, including hearings, as they may from time to time deem expedient for the proper conduct of the inquiry and to vary those practices from time to time;

- (b) the officers of the Department of Transport and of Air Canada shall furnish to the Commissioners such information and assistance as they may require for their activities;
- (c) the Commissioners shall invite duly designated representatives of aviation associations and the aviation air carrier industry to be present and to participate in the inquiry;
- (d) the Commissioners shall be authorized to engage the services of such accountants, engineers, technical advisers or other experts, clerks, reporters and assistants as they deem necessary or advisable and also the services of counsel to aid and assist the Commission in the inquiry at such rates of remuneration including transportation and living expenses as may be approved by Treasury Board;
- (e) the Commissioners shall submit interim reports promptly to the Minister of Transport on the results of particular aspects of the inquiry, and shall submit a final report with all reasonable dispatch and within ninety days of the receipt of the final results of the study based on the use of the air traffic control electronic simulator;
- (f) the Commissioners shall append to their reports any statement on the aspects of the inquiry reported upon, received from CATCA or CALPA within a specified period of time designated by the Commission;
- (g) the Commissioners shall not in any of their reports indicate that safety has been demonstrated unless they can justify beyond a reasonable doubt why any contrary view expressed by CATCA or CALPA should not prevail;
- (h) the Minister shall table any interim reports and the final report in Parliament and report in Parliament at an early date on the implementation of such reports; and
- (i) the administrative and related costs of the Commission shall be the responsibility of the Department of Transport.

The Committee further advise that Order in Council P.C. 1976-1576 of 23rd June, 1976 be revoked.

CERTIFIED TO BE A TRUE COPY
P. M. PITFIELD
CLERK OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL

THE SENATE

Tuesday, June 29, 1976

The Senate met at 11 a.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report of the Master of the Royal Canadian Mint, including accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the year ended December 31, 1975, pursuant to sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST

REPORT OF STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE ON LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS PRESENTED AND PRINTED AS APPENDIX

Senator Goldenberg: Honourable senators, I have the honour to present the report of the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs on the Green Paper entitled "Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest."

Honourable senators, I would ask that the report be printed as an appendix to the Debates of the Senate and to the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate of this day, and form part of the permanent records of this house.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is that agreed?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(For text of report see appendix p. 2303.)

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Senator Goldenberg: Honourable senators, the report will be distributed now in both languages, but as its recommendations are of concern to every senator I feel that every senator should have time to study it. I therefore move that it be taken into consideration on Thursday of next week, July 8.

Motion agreed to.

HABITAT

UNITED NATIONS CONFERENCE ON HUMAN SETTLEMENTS—
QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on June 15 last the honourable distinguished Leader of the Opposition asked a question about the Habitat Conference. His query was in relation to the press reports that the Canadian delegation—I believe his words were—"was frustrated," and "were these reports justified?"

The second part of his observation was that "conferences of this nature are being used as a platform for the promotion of irrelevant ideas and what is the view of the government on this?" Is it practical and useful for Canada to continue to participate in such conferences and should attempts be made to ensure greater relevancy? These are all excellent questions.

I have a brief statement to make on behalf of the government on this subject today, with the cooperation of the house. Honourable Senator Flynn's question concerned press reports that the Canadian delegation, along with other western delegations to Habitat, had been frustrated in its efforts at the conference, and on the views of the government on the effects of the introduction of irrelevant matters into the discussions at such conferences.

As a member of the Canadian delegation, I would like to assure the honourable senator that it is an exaggeration to say that the delegation was frustrated in its attempts to influence the proceedings of Habitat. I think that we made a significant contribution to the discussions, in particular in such areas as the control and value of land, the conservation of resources, the environment, the rights of indigenous peoples, the role of women, and the need for public participation in the planning and development of settlements. In addition, the conference warmly welcomed our proposal to establish a United Nations Audio Visual Library for Human Settlements at the University of British Columbia as part of that university's expanding program in settlements study, and as part of the United Nations' information program in this field.

• (1110)

The Canadian delegation achieved its major objectives in these and other topics discussed at the conference. Naturally, no nation ever achieves everything it wants to at conferences of this kind. There is bound to be what may be described as "give and take," compromise, but I believe that any view that the delegation was frustrated must be based solely on consideration of those few, highly political issues which intruded, for which it was not possible to find acceptable compromises.

As honourable senators are aware, almost 150 nations were represented at this conference, the largest UN conference ever held outside the UN headquarters of New York since the inception of the UN.

As for the government's reaction to the introduction of matters of questionable relevance into such conferences, our views have been quite clearly expressed both during the preparations for Habitat and elsewhere. We recognize the importance and the urgency of the issues, but we do not consider that they should be discussed at conferences dealing with general problems of an economic and social nature. The Mideast situation, for example, is in our view a matter which can be discussed more appropriately in the United Nations Security Council or General Assembly than at conferences dealing with the status of women or human settlements. To discuss such an issue in these latter circumstances is unlikely to lead to a solution, and can detract from the main issues before the meetings, and that was the position of the Canadian delegation at the Habitat meeting.

But we must recognize that what is irrelevant to one nation may seem of critical relevance to another and that some nations may feel obliged to seize every conceivable opportunity to argue their case on some contentious issue. The members of the United Nations are sovereign states and may introduce into these conferences whatever matters they consider relevant. With respect to future conferences we shall continue to do our best to keep discussions on what we consider to be the best track, but we shall probably have to bear with a considerable amount of specific political content in conferences dealing with general matters of an economic and social nature.

It should be pointed out, however, that the introduction of these issues which we may consider extraneous does not nullify the work of these conferences in their basic subject areas. In this respect, it should be remembered that at Habitat the work of the three committees was largely undisturbed—and I can attest to that as chairman of one of the Canadian committees—by these issues which were put off for consideration by plenary session at the end of the conference. When considered, they produced some division and some bad press, but by then the real work of the conference was complete.

CITIZENSHIP BILL

THIRD READING—MOTION IN AMENDMENT—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from yesterday, the debate on the motion in amendment of Senator Laird to the motion of Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) for the third reading of Bill C-20, respecting citizenship.

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, since adjourning the debate on the amendment moved by Senator Laird last night I have had a few minutes to look into the matter. Clause 33 as it is in the bill before us, but which would be amended by Senator Laird's motion, deals with matters which for me raise certain questions.

In the first place, section 33, as proposed, would deal with the question of property and civil rights, which is, of course, a matter within the powers of the provincial legislatures; but there is a provision here which would give the lieutenant governor in council—and I emphasize this—certain powers to restrict the acquisition of real property by non-Canadian citizens. As far as I am concerned, by doing this the bill would invade a domain which does not belong to Parliament. It has been established, I think, by legislation passed in Prince Edward Island, which was affirmed by the Supreme Court of Canada, that we are here in a field which, as I have mentioned, is properly within the competence of the provinces, and not of Parliament.

My second point is that if, for instance, we were to say that Parliament has the right to legislate in this domain, Parliament would be purporting to delegate powers to the lieutenant governor in council and I do not think Parliament can delegate to the provinces the power to legislate in matters that belong to the federal government. Still less can it do so if the delegation is not to the legislature itself, but to the lieutenant governor in council. How can you enable the lieutenant governor in council to do things which Parliament claims are within its jurisdiction? I cannot accept that. My idea, as I said last night, is that section 33 should be struck out, purely and simply.

I have looked at the amendment proposed by Senator Laird, and after discussing it with him and with our legal counsel it seems to me that in fact the amendment would restore section 24 of the present act. Of course, if the Senate were to agree with that, I would have no objection, because in the present section 24 there is no delegation of powers to the provinces, or to the lieutenant governors in council; but in substance the present section 24, to my mind, deals with matters which are outside the powers of Parliament. Section 24 contains practically the same wording as the amendment, which is as follows:

- (a) real and personal property of every description may be taken, acquired, held and disposed of by a person who is not a Canadian citizen in the same manner in all respects as by a Canadian citizen; and
- (b) a title to real and personal property of every description may be derived through, from or in succession to a person who is not a Canadian citizen in the same manner in all respects as though through, from or in succession to a Canadian citizen.

All of this deals with matters that are dealt with in provincial legislation concerning property and civil rights. It is not because it is there in the present act that it changes anything.

Subclause (2) as proposed in the amendment is to me entirely useless, because it says:

- (2) Subsection (1) does not operate so as to

- (a) qualify any person for any office or for any municipal, parliamentary or other franchise;

Well, we know very well that the qualifications for municipal offices, for instance, are found in the municipal legislation in each province, where in each case it says that to be elected a mayor or a member of the municipal council or a school board, you have to be a Canadian citizen. The same thing obtains with regard to provincial legislation. The Election Act of each province provides for that. Federally it is provided in our Election Act that to be elected to the house or, as is provided for in the British North America Act, to come to the Senate, you have to be a Canadian citizen.

● (1120)

Then we come to (b) and (c) which say:

- (b) qualify any person to be the owner of a Canadian ship;
- (c) qualify any person to take, acquire, hold or dispose of any property that under or pursuant to any Act of the Parliament of Canada may be taken, acquired, held or disposed of only by Canadian citizens;

Well, honourable senators, if there is already legislation covering this, why mention it? If it is provided for in an act of Parliament, then that clarifies the matter. We do not have to recite that here. The same applies to (d) and (e).

In my view, honourable senators, the present clause 24 should not be there, because it is useless. Therefore, because I agree with the objection raised by Senator Laird on clause 33, I would strike out clause 33 entirely and renumber the following clauses accordingly. But if the Senate would feel safer in restoring the substance of clause 24 which does not delegate any power, and which does not do anything which is provided in the new clause 33, then I have no objection. Therefore, I would like to move a sub-amendment to Senator Laird's amendment which would strike out all the words after "clause 33", and add that the following clauses be renumbered accordingly.

If this sub-amendment is not accepted, then I would certainly support Senator Laird's amendment, but technically speaking I would have preferred the sub-amendment which I am now moving.

Senator Laird: Would the honourable senator permit a question?

Senator Flynn: Certainly.

Senator Laird: In view of the mechanical problem involved here and in view of the fact that I know that Senator Macnaughton wants to speak on the principle of the amendment, would the honourable senator permit me to take sufficient time to consider with the Law Clerk, as he knows I have started to do, the problems raised? Would he permit that?

Senator Flynn: Do you want to adjourn the debate at this time?

Senator Laird: Well, I know Senator Macnaughton wants to speak. If, after he has concluded his remarks, we come to a noon adjournment, I might then be able to arrive at a decision as to whether the way I suggest doing it is mechanically right or whether your way is mechanically right.

Senator Flynn: I do not think your way is wrong, but I prefer mine. I have no objection to an adjournment of the debate until later this day in order to enable you to look at the problem.

Senator Laird: Might I ask Senator Macnaughton if he wants to proceed now?

Senator Macnaughton: Well, honourable senators, I would like to go on. My remarks will be reasonably brief, and I hope they will be of some assistance in the debate.

Senator Flynn: Then the question on the sub-amendment can be put.

Senator Macnaughton: I am certainly not in conflict with either the amendment or the sub-amendment.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I do not wish to intervene in this discussion at this time except to say, since it has been said that so and so wishes to speak, that I would like it to be known that I too would like to speak in due course.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it the wish of honourable senators that the question on the amendment to the amendment be put now, or is it their wish to wait until later?

Hon. Senators: Later.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed?

[Senator Flynn.]

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Hon. Alan A. Macnaughton: Honourable senators, due to an accident of geography I happen to be sitting beside the sponsor of this bill of which, according to the Minutes of the Proceedings, I am the seconder. However, I do not believe I am out of order, because that is a procedural matter, and Senator Laird's amendment was moved after the question on the motion for third reading of the bill was put.

Senator Grosart: Sober second thought.

Senator Macnaughton: Yes, sober second thought. The motion in amendment incorporates some of the objections of the Canadian Bar Association, Real Property Sub-Section, which I feel should be taken into very serious consideration and not just cast aside. Briefly, the evidence of the representatives of the Real Property Sub-Section of the Canadian Bar Association before the committee amounted to seven points. At least, I noted seven, but there certainly were four which I would like to put on the record because in my opinion they have not been considered sufficiently carefully.

The first suggestion of the Canadian Bar Association was:

(1) No Province has yet prohibited the acquisition of real property by non-Canadians although some have set out conditions for such acquisitions. Section 33 is the first Act to specifically prohibit the acquisition of real property by non-Canadian citizens.

The second suggestion was:

(2) The retroactivity of the right to annul set forth in section 33(2) will undoubtedly upset the principle of certainty of title which is a foundation-stone for commercial transactions and, in particular, loans secured by mortgages.

Their third suggestion, or criticism,

(3) The section gives too much discretion to the Provinces to decide which transactions and which persons or corporations are to be subject to the law and will most likely result in ten different sets of regulations reflecting local economic aspirations.

The fourth criticism was:

(4) Section 33 appears to be more legislative than administrative in nature and its constitutionality could be called into question.

To these specific suggestions I would like to add three more, referring to them as (5), (6) and (7) in order to maintain the sequence. Suggestion (5) would be:

The strict liability provisions of Section 33, subsections (4) and (5), should be deleted and replaced with a provision which protects the individual who has acted in good faith and without criminal intent.

I shall not go into detail, because we did so to some extent in committee.

Suggestion (6) is:

If the government wishes to delegate power to deal with land holdings by aliens, the government should delegate the power to the provinces generally (assuming they have the right to do so, which is questionable) and the provinces can then make aliens subject to provincial laws.

Suggestion (7) is a technical modification, and is as follows:

The exemptions set out in the bill, which are those transactions approved by the Foreign Investment Review Agency, should be expanded to include all transactions which are exempt from review under the terms of the Foreign Investment Review Act.

In the light of these serious objections and suggestions made on behalf of the Canadian Bar Association by its Real Property Sub-Section I feel compelled to support the amendment. However, in spite of the urgency of the citizenship legislation and the provisions contained therein, which I know are needed at this time, I suggest that consultation on an informal basis be commenced before requesting or taking final rigid positions with respect to the legislation. The minister could solve the difficulty very simply by proclamation. He can proclaim most sections of the legislation, with the exception of section 33. We asked in committee that he do this, but I understand that he was not much impressed with the suggestions. It is therefore up to the minister, but those are the suggestions of the Real Property Sub-Section of the Canadian Bar Association which I feel should be very carefully considered. Without going into any more detail, the financial implications are serious, and the inability to give formal and good title could bring chaos to commercial transactions generally.

● (1130)

Senator McDonald: At the beginning of his remarks, Senator Macnaughton referred to the fact that no province had passed legislation restricting land holdings. Would he repeat what he said?

Senator Macnaughton: These are not my words. They are taken from the Real Property Sub-Section of the Canadian Bar Association.

No Province has yet prohibited the acquisition of real property by non-Canadians although some have set out conditions for such acquisitions.

Senator Flynn: Residences.

Senator Macnaughton: It continues:

Section 33 is the first Act to specifically prohibit the acquisition of real property by non-Canadian citizens.

Hon. George I. Smith: Honourable senators, I wish to say that I concur in the sub-amendment proposed by the Leader of the Opposition, and also with his expressed feeling, so that if by chance his sub-amendment is not acceptable I am prepared to support the amendment. This seems to be a blank cheque statement, but I concur in all the reasons put forward by the mover of the amendment, by the Leader of the Opposition, and by Senator Macnaughton. However, I wish to add one or two remarks which appear to me to be relevant.

If it is the law that Parliament may deal with this subject—which seems to me to fall entirely within the provincial jurisdiction—and, in fact, Parliament has jurisdiction to do all that section 33 purports to do, we should consider for a moment the actual merits or demerits of such legislation.

I wish to mention one or two points which have not been mentioned and to emphasize others. I am certainly not an authority on international law, if indeed I am on any kind of law, but I am not aware that it is common practice, in what these days we generally refer to as the developed world, to have this kind of legislation. I know it exists in some countries, but I am inclined to doubt whether it is of general application throughout most of the countries of the developed world.

If that be so, it seems to me that we should consider very carefully whether we wish to become involved in this kind of legislation, which carries with it what appears to me to be so many imperfections, or worse. For instance, it might also invite other countries to follow, using Canada as a precedent, or, if that is not the case, to invite retaliation.

Let us next consider for a moment the citizen who will be affected by this kind of legislation, who would be affected by this bill if it is passed, and if the action envisaged under section 33 is, in fact, taken by the provinces.

In very large measure the land which would be affected by such legislation is not the land of wealthy people. It is not land owned by great corporations. In very large measure it is the kind of land similar to that in the province from which I come, owned by ordinary individuals, many of whom are farmers, fishermen, foresters, and many of whom throughout a lifetime of hard work and thrift have looked upon the land, and the improvements they have made to it, as some kind of security for themselves and their spouses when their ability to work hard is diminished because of approaching age.

There is absolutely no doubt about it in my mind. I see it firsthand and have occasion to deal with it from time to time, and have had quite recently. This type of legislation would deprive the owner—the ordinary farmer, fisherman and lumberman—of the opportunity to make a good sale, if that is what he wishes, as the sunset time of life is faced and his ability to earn is either diminished or, in large measure, has vanished. This type of legislation would take that opportunity away from him. It would diminish his market, and we all know that when the scope of a market is diminished, the number of prospective purchasers is diminished, then the prospect of a good sale also diminishes.

This type of legislation would, in effect, make it impossible, in many cases, for such a citizen in my province, which is the only province I am prepared to say I know something about, to negotiate the type of sale he could have negotiated were the market not diminished. To that extent, at least, it not only deprives that individual of the opportunity of making the best of a lifetime of effort and to have some opportunity to offset the inroads of inflation—and I am not now talking about the type of inflation we have debated here on so many occasions, but inflation generally as it has taken place in the erosion of the value of the dollar—it amounts, I suggest, to expropriation without compensation of a substantial part of the value of such land.

Therefore, if Parliament has the jurisdiction—and I certainly doubt that it has it constitutionally—to deal with this type of legislation, we should be very careful, it seems to me, to lend our encouragement and to give our approval to this type of thing without the most careful examination, and without making sure that we understand exactly what the effect of such legislation would be upon the ordinary citizens of this country, if I may use that term without in any way being critical, and satisfy ourselves that the ends to be gained by this type of legislation outweigh the very grave disadvantages which might accrue, and, indeed, would accrue if such legislation were passed, to a great number of our citizens. That is the point I wanted to make, and which I had not heard discussed earlier in this debate.

Another point I want to emphasize has been raised, I think, by all three honourable senators who have preceded me in this debate, and that is the effect of this legislation on titles. If one has not been engaged actively in the work which requires the certification of title, the investigation of title before certification, it may be a little difficult to appreciate the full implications. Looking at it from the point of view of the owner of a piece of land, or the prospective purchaser—the owner who wants to mortgage the property, or the prospective purchaser who wants to buy it—these individuals depend, in large measure, upon a search of title, or certificate of title, which is acquired at a proper price from some person, a lawyer, who is authorized by law to give such certification. Once the lawyer gives it, he is responsible for its being right, regardless of what he may have missed—regardless of what obscure or difficult-to-find provision of law affecting title he may have missed. If he is wrong, he pays for it.

● (1140)

From the point of view of the owner of the land, or the prospective purchaser, such difficulties regarding title are certainly substantial obstacles to real estate transactions and, indeed, the security of property. From the point of view of the people who have to guarantee such titles in some systems—I appreciate it is not so in all provinces of Canada—it is indeed a tremendous burden, and one for which they have to take out the appropriate kind of insurance. Of course, the more chance there is of these people being wrong in their certificates, the more chance there is of the insurance companies being called upon to respond under their policies, and the higher the premiums go. It would be very easy to get into a position analogous to the problem some professions have these days of getting liability insurance at all.

While concurring in the views that have been put forward by those who have preceded me in this discussion, I do want to draw particular attention to the argument that if, indeed, Parliament has the jurisdiction to act herein, then we should examine the merits of what we are going to do before we do it.

Hon. Eugene A. Forsey: Honourable senators, I venture to intervene in this debate, partly because I was present at most of the meetings of the committee and heard a good deal of the argument on the subject, though I unfortunately missed the final meeting, at which I understand the Minister of Justice delivered himself of some opinions on the matter, which apparently carried conviction to the committee, though I think had I been present I might have cherished still certain doubts.

There are certain aspects of this which either have not been touched on so far or have been touched on only very marginally which I should like to raise. I am in favour of the amendment proposed by the Honourable Senator Laird, for reasons which have already been given adequately by other honourable senators who have spoken in the debate. However, I should like to have someone qualified to do so say something about the question of jurisdiction over aliens, because my understanding of subsections (2) to (7) is that they were put in to enable the provinces to pass legislation which would prevent aliens but not other Canadians from outside the province, Canadian non-residents of the province, from holding land. My impression was that the purpose was to narrow to some extent the kind of legislation which the provinces might be wishing to pass on this subject, so that non-residents who are Canadians would not find themselves in difficulties that would arise because of the fact that the province was obliged under its jurisdiction simply to say, "Non-residents without qualification."

I am inclined to wonder whether the Dominion jurisdiction over aliens might not have some bearing on the question of the extent of provincial jurisdiction under property and civil rights in the subsections which Senator Flynn in his sub-amendment would strike out. I should like to hear that discussed by someone qualified to do so. I am not qualified to do so myself, and I do not propose to say any more, but simply to raise the question. I hope that when the sponsor of the bill (Senator Connolly, Ottawa West) replies he will deal with that particular part of it.

On the question of delegation, I confess that at first I was inclined to think the delegation was warranted, that this delegation to the lieutenant governor in council fell within the criteria laid down in the Willis case. However, on reconsideration I am not quite so sure about that. It seems to me quite clear, in the first place, that Parliament cannot delegate its jurisdiction simply to a provincial legislature. The Nova Scotia interdelegation case seems to have settled that quite clearly. It seems clear also that the Winner case and various others have made it clear that Parliament can delegate, not its legislative power but the administration of a Dominion act to a provincial body such as a provincial public utility board, or something of that kind.

I have never heard it questioned that the act which Parliament passed after the decision in the Winner case was invalid, or that the mere administrative delegation, saying to a provincial body or board of some kind, "You shall be deemed to be a Dominion body for the purposes of this act," was a valid exercise of the power of Parliament. When it comes to delegating to the lieutenant governor in council, I think it possible that that may be another kettle of fish.

After the meetings of the committee I had the advantage of reading the argument of Professor Lederman in the AIB case before the Supreme Court of Canada on Question 2, dealing with the validity of the Ontario Government's action in making that agreement with the Government of Canada without legislation. That increased my doubts about this provision delegating power to the lieutenant governor in council to act as an agent of the Government of Canada.

I do not feel entirely positive about it. I just think there is a question here, and a serious question. It seems to me it would be very unfortunate to pass this legislation and then find that we have got a decision of the Supreme Court of Canada on Question 2 in the AIB case which showed that this kind of delegation was improper, that it was colourable legislation, that it was an attempt to do by indirection what Parliament under the terms of the decision in the Nova Scotia interdelegation case cannot do directly. I feel, therefore, it is a very dubious piece of legislation to put on the statute books. It may simply blow up in our faces very shortly after it has been enacted if we get that kind of decision from the Supreme Court of Canada in the AIB case.

[Senator Smith (Colchester).]

I think that is really about all I wanted to say on this, except that I am inclined to ask a couple of questions about Senator Flynn's sub-amendment, although I suppose this would be out of order at this stage, and perhaps I had better wait and raise those questions later when the sub-amendment is actually under discussion.

I really wanted to know about two points: first, the effect of the fact that the Parliament of Canada has jurisdiction over aliens. I am not sure how far that enters into the discussion on this particular amendment to this clause. I should like to hear an authoritative opinion on the subject. Secondly, I am a little bit dubious about whether what is provided in clause 33 is in fact the kind of administrative delegation which, under the decision in the Willis case and the Winner case, Parliament is entitled to engage in.

Senator Lang: I wonder if I might ask the honourable senator a question, because of his acknowledged expertise in these areas. Could he tell us why a province is limited to restricting ownership to those persons who are residents? In other words, could not a province restrict ownership to "Canadian citizens," as defined under the federal Citizenship Act, thereby avoiding the necessity for this kind of clause?

Senator Forsey: I rise with diffidence to reply to that question from a learned honourable senator. My impression is yes, the province of course can simply say, "We forbid non-residents of any kind or description to own property." It apparently cannot say, "We forbid aliens to own property." It can just say "non-residents" like that, and that includes Canadian citizens, non-residents and aliens as well. I thought the purpose of this was to make it plain that the province could say henceforth, "Oh yes, ownership of property by Canadian citizens, that is fine. We do not care about that. But we do not want to have the foreigners having ownership of property." I thought that was the purpose of the thing. I thought there was some obstacle to their simply passing an act dealing with ownership by foreigners. They could pass an act dealing with ownership presumably by anybody but they couldn't pass an act dealing specifically with ownership by foreigners. So, in order to keep the foreigners out, they had to keep other Canadians out, Canadians from outside the province. I thought the intention was to put them in a position to say, "We will keep out foreigners but we will not keep out other Canadians."

● (1150)

That is about the best kind of answer I can make I am afraid and it is a rather muddled one, but that is because I am treading on ground with which I am not at all familiar.

Hon. A. Hamilton McDonald: Honourable senators, there are one or two points I want to make with respect to this legislation. I am not a lawyer and so I have no idea whether the federal government has the power to delegate this authority to the provinces, but it seems to me that if you are going to delegate power to the lieutenant governor in council, then all a provincial government need do is pass an order in council without any public discussion, without any information being given to the public of that province. In this way it would bring a situation into being that I doubt very much the majority of those people would be in favour of if they were aware of what the order in council meant. It seems to me that if you are going to give this power to the provinces—to which I object in the first place and I will tell you why in a few moments—it ought to be the legislature, in order to generate a debate so that the general public may know what the new law means to them.

I would now turn to what Senator Macnaughton mentioned earlier on, and the question I asked of him was to confirm what the Canadian Bar Association had in mind when they said that no province had passed legislation prohibiting the ownership of land in a province. What is the situation in my province of Saskatchewan? In my view they have passed a law, as far as the ownership of land is concerned, which no Canadian ought to put up with. What would happen on the death of a farmer living in Saskatchewan who had willed his farm or his country estate or his city dwelling to his son or his daughter or his mother, but none of them happened to reside in Saskatchewan? The recipient of that property must either within 12 months become domiciled in the province of Saskatchewan or sell the property, or the provincial government will sell it on his or her behalf. Is this the type of law, is this the type of legislation that we as Canadians want? Surely none of us want to be prohibited from owning land in some province in which we do not happen to reside.

To go even further than that, do all of us want to be prohibited from some day buying a cosy nest in a warmer climate than we have in Canada? How many Canadians are buying property in the southern United States for retirement? Do we want the State of Arizona or the State of California to say, "No, you cannot own property here because you are not an American citizen?" Then why should we say to Americans who want to buy a home in Canada, "No, you cannot do that; you are not a Canadian."

Is this the kind of world we want to live in? Sure, there is a provision under section 6 for immigrants to buy property when they come to Canada. The great reason that the vast majority of our forefathers came to this country was they had the right to own property. Why should we not have the right to own property in any province in Canada? If we pass this legislation without amendment we are not going to have that right. I do not want to be prohibited by law from owning property in another country, but that would be the end result of this type of legislation. I do not believe that Canadians generally want to be restricted to owning property only in the province in which they live, or that if they will their property to a member of their family, that member, in order to hold the property, would have to move to that province, as is the case under the present law in the province of Saskatchewan.

I despise this type of legislation. It is not for a free people in a free world. I am going to support either the proposal of the Leader of the Opposition or the proposal of Senator Laird, for I am violently opposed to the government's placing restrictions upon the holding of land in Canada by Canadians, which is the situation in my own province today.

One of the main reasons I disposed of all my property in Saskatchewan, except that which I have to retain in order to sit in this place, is the provincial law. I have four sons and one daughter but I could not leave my property to them. None of them live in Saskatchewan. None of them have any intentions of living in Saskatchewan either, as long as the present government is there. To inherit my property they would have either been forced to return to Saskatchewan to live or the provincial government would have sold my property on their behalf.

If this is the kind of legislation you want, support the bill.

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, as sponsor of the bill, I suppose at this stage I should intervene and speak to the amendments. I am inclined to say to the Leader of the Government, and to the Leader of the Opposition, that we are getting into very technical areas in our discussion today and these points, which are technical points, have been raised by a good many senators. Rather than taking any further steps at this time it might be more appropriate for us to consider returning the bill to committee for the purpose of hearing the Minister of Justice again. I would hope, if this is done, that all honourable senators who have spoken thus far in the debate will be present in order to satisfy themselves.

There may be a procedural difficulty, in view of the existence of one amendment and perhaps another half amendment, respecting just what steps should be taken. However, I think it might not be inappropriate to consider that course of action.

Perhaps I can help a little bit in solving some of the problems that bother a good many senators. I should begin by saying something about the history of the situation which is intended to be covered by this bill. In 1972, as honourable senators know, the Legislature of Prince Edward Island passed a measure which prohibited non-residents of the province from acquiring land in area of more than 10 acres, or shoreline longer than 5 chains. This prohibition extended to non-residents of the province. It excluded not only aliens but also Canadian citizens from other provinces from having larger holdings.

● (1200)

In 1974 Saskatchewan passed a piece of legislation which applied to non-residents of the province, prohibiting them from owning larger tracts of agricultural land there. I will not go into the reasons for that legislation, because it is obvious from the kind of discussion we have had just what the intention of the legislature was.

In 1974 Ontario took a different kind of step when it imposed a 20 per cent land transfer tax upon transfers to non-residents of Canada—not non-residents of Ontario. Senator Flynn mentioned last night that the 1976 budget of the Province of Quebec indicates that it may take a step similar to that taken by Ontario.

[Senator McDonald.]

Senator Flynn: I understand they are hesitant to do so, though. I understand the Government of Quebec has had second thoughts about that proposal.

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West): That could be; I am really not familiar with it. I was basing myself on Senator Flynn's statement last night because of the fact that I am not familiar with that provision of the Quebec budget.

On the question of law with reference to these provincial enactments, the authority would appear to be Morgan et al vs. Attorney-General for Prince Edward Island et al, a case decided by the Supreme Court of Canada. For the record, that is reported in (1975) 55 D.L.R. (3d), at page 527. This was a decision of the whole court, and the judgment was written by the chief justice. In fact, it confirmed a decision of the Supreme Court of Prince Edward Island in the Banco case presided over by Chief Justice Trainor, in which Mr. Justice Bell and Mr. Justice Nicholson participated, and which is reported in (1974) 42 D.L.R. (3d), at page 603.

The point about these judgments is that the courts found that the pith and substance of the law enacted by the Legislature of Prince Edward Island with regard to a prohibition in respect of certain aspects of land tenure for non-residents was a subject matter of the character of property and civil rights within the province, and that it was within the power of the provincial legislature to pass that legislation. As a result of those decisions, therefore, the provinces have had confirmed to them the right to regulate land tenure in the province and, under certain conditions set out in the legislation, to preclude non-residents from holding land in the province whether they be aliens or Canadian citizens. I think it is rather important for all honourable senators to understand that point thoroughly, but perhaps I am over-emphasizing it since I am sure it is clear to most of us.

The passage of this legislation in Prince Edward Island raised certain problems for certain premiers, I am told. At the federal-provincial meeting held here in May 1972 those premiers aired their problems. They said that the exclusion from holding land in a province, as it was applied to Canadian citizens who were non-residents of the province, created problems for some of them. For example, there are probably many people from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick who have summer places in Prince Edward Island. Those people were concerned, and so were their premiers, about what their rights might be if the law continued as it was.

I was not at the conference, of course, but I am told that it was suggested that the proscription or preclusion should be limited to a restriction against foreigners and should not apply to Canadian citizens. They asked what, if anything, could be done to deal with the question of aliens and their right to hold land in light of section 91(25) of the British North America Act. That section, as senators know and as Senator Forsey mentioned again this morning, gives the federal authority the jurisdiction to legislate with respect to aliens.

Following the discussions at the federal-provincial meeting, officials from the federal government and from all of the provinces held meetings—two in November 1972, one in January 1974, and two in April 1974. I am told that some of the best constitutional legal talent in the country was present at those meetings, which were held to try to work out some modus vivendi. The result of those discussions is the provisions contained in subclauses (2) to (7), both inclusive, of clause 33 of the Citizenship Bill as it is now before the Senate. Following the discussions and the agreement made between the officials of both the provincial and federal authorities, the Prime Minister of Canada wrote to each of the premiers in September 1974 to say that, if they desired it, the government would place before Parliament this recommendation from the meeting of the officials, which, as I say, is contained in subclauses (2) to (7) of clause 33 as we have it before us. Most of the provinces accepted this proposal. Those which did not seem to be rather indifferent, because apparently they have no intention of trying to legislate in the field of restricting land tenure within a province.

Last night Senator Flynn raised the question of delegation, and Senator Forsey raised it again today. My attempt to deal with the matter may not be considered adequate by either of those distinguished constitutional experts but, on the basis of what I have been told about what went on, I can say that the delegation is of a limited power to act with respect to aliens. It is not a limited power to act with respect to property and civil rights within the province, because the federal authority has no right to deal in that area. But the federal authority does purport to legislate with respect to aliens, and the agency or entity—not emanation but perhaps organization—in the province selected to be a delegate, as has been said and as appears in the bill, is the lieutenant governor in council in the province concerned.

● (1210)

It is clear, as Senator Forsey has said, that Parliament cannot delegate a legislation-making authority to a provincial legislature, and cannot abrogate the powers that have been conferred upon it by the Constitution. It can only change the distribution of legislative authority as between the provinces and the federal authority by an amendment to the Constitution. I think it is fair to say, however, that in constitutional usage and practice the federal authority can delegate administrative authority and authority to make regulations.

I am informed that subclause 33(2), which purports to authorize the prohibition, or annulment, or restriction of interest in real property in the provinces, is a delegation of an administrative authority. I suppose it is possible to get into a debate on the use of language, or semantics, in that area, but this is the bald proposition that is given to me to justify the proposal, and this is the rationale that was given by Mr. Strayer, the Assistant Deputy Minister of Justice, when he was before the committee. As an example, a parallel is drawn between the situation here and the situation in section 189 of the Criminal Code, which prohibits lotteries, but which, by subsection 190(1), paragraphs (c), (d) and (e), provides exceptions in terms of which the lieutenant governor in council is authorized to license organizations, institutions, and perhaps even individuals, to conduct lotteries.

Senator Flynn: Would the honourable senator at this point permit me to say that the administration of justice is mentioned specifically in the British North America Act as coming under the jurisdiction of the provinces.

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West): There is no question about that. The administration of justice is their responsibility.

Senator Flynn: Then it is not a true parallel that you are giving us.

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West): What I am saying is that these sections of the Criminal Code, section 190 particularly, are explained to me as dealing with situations that are parallel to the one that we have here.

Senator Flynn: They may be explained to you, but they are not explained to me.

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West): I do not say that I accept the explanation, and it is because of the individual problems that arise that I felt that this bill should go back to committee, where they can be better dealt with.

With reference to subclause 33(3), the officials argue that this is a regulation-making authority, and the precedent they put forward as a parallel is the Motor Vehicle Transport Act of 1953, which is to be found in chapter M-14, volume V, of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1970. In this act the federal authority conveys or authorizes or delegates to a provincial authority the right to license for extraprovincial undertakings, and to make regulations in respect thereto. I must say to Senator Flynn that this parallel seems to be a good deal more cogent than the first one concerning lotteries.

This legislation, despite what Senator Macnaughton said respecting the Canadian Bar Association's submission to the effect that this is legislation prohibiting the holding of land, does not in fact do that. It is simply enabling legislation. A province is not required to restrict the foreign control or ownership of land, even if this legislation passes. Certainly clause section 33, of itself, does not restrict the foreign ownership or control of land. It authorizes the making of regulations which can have that effect, but it does not do it of itself. If a province desires to legislate with reference to foreign ownership of land, it must do so by using the formula provided in clause 33. It must do this as agent or delegate of the federal authority, and it must do so subject to the same safeguards as are provided when the federal authority regulates, which are a review of the regulations in question by the Office of the Clerk of the Privy Council, and a review by the office of the Deputy Minister of Justice. They are also, of course, subject to the scrutiny of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, the chairman of which is just leaving.

The question is: Will the provinces use this authority? I think the answer has to be that in certain cases they probably will, but probably not if they feel it is going to stifle needed foreign investment. For example, by simply reading the newspapers we know that the Premier of Alberta has been abroad on several occasions within the last year or so urging foreign investment in his province, as have the Premiers of Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and, recently, Saskatchewan. In any event, honourable senators, provincial action cannot override the effect of the Foreign Investment Review Act, and any approvals given thereunder.

Senator Flynn: Are you sure?

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West): This section really provides an opportunity for such provinces which may wish to do so, to legislate with regard to non-residents, and spread the net very wide so as to include in it not only aliens but Canadian citizens as well, to restrict their prescriptions about land tenure to aliens. This was the problem that the premiers had, because some of them were legislating in this rather broad way, and others thought it would be better to try and restrict such legislation to aliens.

Let us remember also that it does not mean, as Senator McDonald suggested, that you cannot buy a house in Prince Edward Island. The prohibition is against owning more than 10 acres of land, and against owning more than five chains—I forget what that distance is—of waterfront. In other words, it is an invitation to the provinces, if they feel they must legislate in this field for whatever reasons they may have, not to include within their net Canadian citizens, but to restrict it exclusively to aliens.

I have not dealt with all of the problems raised this morning because I am rather hopeful that most of the points that were raised by individual senators, and which are serious points, could be dealt with more effectively if we were to go back to the committee and discuss them with the Minister of Justice and his officials. I hope what I have said, however, will at least clarify some of the problems that certain senators have.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask Senator Connolly a question with relation to the arguments put forward to justify the provisions of subclause (2).

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West): I must say I do not like the arguments, but go ahead.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I am not being critical of you, senator. My purpose is only to ascertain the ingenuity which was exercised by those who argued that the phrase, "to prohibit and annul or in any manner restrict the taking or acquisition . . . of . . . any interest in real property," could have its pith and substance related to aliens.

● (1220)

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West): Well, honourable senators, the question of property and civil rights, and the question of the right to legislate with respect to aliens, are not matters that are easy to discuss in the chamber. I think that can be done more effectively in committee. If we are dealing with the pith and substance of property and civil rights, then I think there is no question but that they are within provincial jurisdiction; but if in respect of land tenure we want to single out aliens and say they shall be prohibited from doing thus and so, then I think section 91(25) of the British North America Act comes into the argument because we may be legislating in respect of the subject matter of aliens which comes exclusively within federal jurisdiction. That is why this device was dreamed up by the officials to delegate that administrative authority.

Senator Laird: Honourable senators, having in mind what I said earlier, and the very interesting suggestion just made by Senator Connolly (Ottawa West), and my own desire to consult further with the Law Clerk, would honourable senators agree to an adjournment of this debate until later this day? This will give me a chance to arrive at some conclusions.

[Senator Flynn.]

By the way, I would ask that the Orders of the Day be amended to show Senator McNamara as the seconder of my motion, because he is the seconder and not Senator Michaud.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Flynn: I suggest that the committee be called in the meantime for an informal meeting.

Senator Croll: But the debate is adjourned until later this day.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

APPROPRIATION BILL NO. 3, 1976

SECOND READING

Leave having been given to proceed to Order No. 5.

The Senate resumed from Wednesday, June 23, the debate on the motion of Senator Langlois for second reading of Bill C-93, for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1977.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, we are dealing with Appropriation Bill No. 3 of the current fiscal year which is in the usual form of granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money with the consent of the House of Commons and the Senate—and I want to point that out—for the balance of the year. In other words, this is an interim supply bill which asks that the remaining $13 billion in the main estimates be approved for spending by departments and other agencies of the government.

The total main estimates this year were $38.4 billion, and when the main estimates were referred to the National Finance Committee of the Senate they were discussed in some detail and a report was made by the committee. I am glad to say that the report was in this particular instance made to the Senate a considerable time before this bill arising from the main estimates came before us.

It has been my experience over a good many years, as a member of that committee, that the more we examine the main estimates in that committee and in this chamber, the more opportunity there is for the Senate to make a real contribution in this very important field of government expenditure. I say that because on a number of occasions recently the minister, the President of the Treasury Board, and his officials have pointed out that some of the changes, some of the more useful changes that have been made in the presentation of the estimates and appropriation bills have been the direct result of suggestions made in that committee. We are still, of course, trying very hard to achieve what we have sought for many years, going back to the days when Senator D'Arcy Leonard was chairman of the committee, and that is the actuality of the restriction of the increases in federal government expenditures to the level of the increases in the GNP. I am glad to say that it has now been announced as government policy, and also that the President of the Treasury Board is, in my estimation, making a valiant effort to see that the policy is being implemented. So far it has not been implemented, and I doubt if it will be in the present year, or next year, unless considerable pressure is brought to bear on the government to make that very important principle effective in its spending policies and in its spending intentions.

I said that further intensive examination by the Senate of these main estimates will serve a useful purpose, because the situation today is that there is great concern evidenced by those professional budget watchers in the country—not all academics, not all economists and not all lawyers, but representatives of many organizations, business and labour. There is concern that there is a lack of realism in the federal government's approach to expenditures and also in its presentation of the estimates and the other methods used to explain its spending intentions. An example of this is contained in an article written in the current issue of the Financial Times, which draws attention to the fact, and I quote:

Some of Canada's most closely guarded secrets are not military but economic.

The federal government refuses to publish its forecasts for the economy—or even its own spending—in any detail. And these secrets are kept from the provinces as well as the public. When provincial finance officials are briefed by their Ottawa counterparts these days, it is by way of graphs and bar charts so the provincial people get no papers or exact numbers to carry away with them.

This is in contrast to the situation in Washington, where the U.S. administration is now required by Congress to publish five-year projections of the main economic indicators and of government spending on existing programs.

This merely draws attention again to an aspect of government spending policy that has been pointed out over and over again by our committee. Neither Parliament nor the committees of Parliament appear to have all the facts that are needed to make a full examination of the estimates.

● (1230)

The solution would appear to be a much more realistic approach by the government to this whole problem of spending, announcing its spending intentions and having approval given by Parliament. On an earlier occasion I indicated some of what I term the excuses—and which the government would term explanations—for some of the problems which arise. The one that is perhaps most often used to discount the level of federal government responsibility for its high spending is, of course, the matter of transfers. We are told that the government really only spends approximately 20 per cent of the money, the rest being transferred to other people. I say that, whereas there is some justification for that, the government is now carrying it to the extreme of utter absurdity. That is a strong phrase, and I leave it to honourable senators to decide whether it is too strong.

In a release by the Treasury Board dated February 18 of this year we have this extraordinary statement of justification of transfers:

Canadian bondholders—both individuals and institutions—will also get substantial payments from the federal government; since the Public Debt of Canada is held mostly by Canadian citizens, the bulk of the $4,650 million to be “transferred” by the Department of Finance in the form of interest, amortization and other servicing charges will add to their income.

So we now have the extension of this absurd argument to the point at which the Treasury Board tells us that the more we go into debt, the more money we are transferring to Canadian individuals and institutions. I hope that will put some kind of a stopper on this absurd and continued use of this excuse of transfers. In other cases there are indications of the extremity to which absurd thinking will lead even as august a body as the Treasury Board.

I made an earlier comment, again on the estimates, to the effect that at the present time, in spite of all the protests to the contrary, the increase in federal government expenditures during the last year was greater than the increase in provincial government expenditures in total. In replying to me, Senator Carter said that he did not understand my figure and he quoted me as follows:

The fact is that in the last fiscal year federal government expenditures increased by 16 per cent, . . .

And I was generous there. Senator Carter's quotation of my statement continued:

—and those of all provincial governments increased by only 11 per cent—

Senator Carter said that he had discussed this with the officials and it was difficult to understand how this could have happened. He said:

I asked the Treasury Board if they could provide me with figures to account for this drastic decrease.

However, I had not mentioned a decrease, but said there was a lower increase, which is hardly a decrease. Senator Carter continued:

They, frankly, were unable to do it. The figures they gave me are as follows:

I will not go into all the detail, but he said finally:

According to the figures I received from the Treasury Board, therefore, instead of reducing the increase in their total expenditures from 20 per cent to 11 per cent, the provincial governments actually increased it from 20.7 per cent to 26 per cent.

There is obvious confusion here between reducing an increase and decreasing, with respect to which I will not go into very great detail. However, it is important to point out that the latest available figures appear to support my statement completely. Senator Carter asked where I obtained the figures. I obtained them, of course, from an examination of the total figures in the federal budget and the provincial budgets and reached the conclusion that it was 11 per cent.

Since then, in the June issue of the Business Review of the Bank of Montreal, a fairly reliable source, we find these figures. As we all know, what is taken out of a computer depends on what is put into it, but in this series of figures the federal government increase for 1976-77 is 13.4 per cent. I know what has been taken out, but will not go into that in great detail. On a comparative basis, the provincial governments increased their expenditures from last year to this year, on the basis of budget spending intentions as against the 13.4 per cent federal increase, as follows: British Columbia, 5.4 per cent; Alberta, 7.7 per cent; Saskatchewan, 11.1 per cent; Manitoba is not given; Ontario, 11.7 per cent; Quebec, 12.8 per cent; New Brunswick, 9.6 per cent; Nova Scotia, 10.9 per cent; Prince Edward Island, 13 per cent; Newfoundland, 11 per cent; and, again, federal government expenditures, 13.4 per cent. I suggest to honourable senators that this completely supports my statement that in the current year the increase in federal government expenditures is greater than that of the provinces. The figures I have quoted will come very close to supporting my statement that it was 11 per cent. I say that again—although I may be harping on this theme—because we need more frankness, more realism and less excuses in the statements we are given when asked to pass legislation such as this, which is, of course, an appropriation act to provide spending authority to the departments and agencies of the government for the remainder of the year.

There was a time, I seem to recall, when the government came rather more often during the year to Parliament requesting grants for interim supply. It is becoming the habit now to do so perhaps twice a year. I suggest that the time has come, having in mind the problems of the sitting times of Parliament, to revert to the policy or practice of the government asking for interim supply at regular intervals, at least four times a year rather than twice a year. If we pass this bill now it will have the effect of giving carte blanche to the departments to spend another $13 billion. They are asking for full supply for the year. I suggest that in this particular area there is a very important role for the Senate, and I hope, and firmly believe from discussions I have had with the chairman and deputy chairman of that committee, that the Senate will in the future contribute more to this type of realistic presentation of the estimates and spending intentions of the government than we have in the past.

Hon. Léopold Langlois: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I must inform the Senate that if the Honourable Senator Langlois speaks now his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on the motion for second reading of this bill.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, Senator Grosart in his remarks cast some doubt on the result of the avowed intention of the President of the Treasury Board to endeavour to reduce the total expenditures of the federal government to the percentage increase of the GNP. I remember when this was discussed—

● (1240)

Senator Grosart: I am sure the Deputy Leader of the Government would not want to misinterpret me, or I hope I have not given the wrong impression. I did not intend to cast doubt on the intention of the President of the Treasury Board to reach that figure. I have said on other occasions that I have the greatest admiration for him, and I think the best thing that could happen to Canada at the present moment is for the President of the Treasury Board to continue in office and to continue the efforts he has been making, for which on several occasions I have complimented him.

Senator Langlois: My reference was to the interpretation I placed on what the honourable senator said to the effect that he was casting doubt on the possibility of realizing the efforts which the President of the Treasury Board is making at this time to try to bring the increase in total expenditures in line with the percentage increase in the GNP.

When the bill was discussed in committee, the honourable senator went so far as to congratulate the President of the Treasury Board on his efforts and his frankness—

Senator Grosart: Yes.

Senator Langlois: —in endeavouring to achieve that goal. That is the only comment I wished to make in that respect, and I am sorry if in some way I misinterpreted the honourable senator's remarks.

Referring again to the percentage of increase in federal expenditures as compared to provincial expenditures, I assume that when my honourable friend gave his percentage increase of the federal expenditures he included the transfer payments.

With regard to his comments on transfer payments, I take it from what he has said this morning that he is very much in favour of the proposal advanced at the last meeting of the Prime Minister and the Premiers, that the federal intention is to permit provinces to opt out of cost-sharing programs and to replace the present federal contribution to such programs by giving provinces more taxing leeway. That is the avowed policy of the federal government, and I take it my honourable friend is in agreement with it. It would appear that we are heading in the right direction.

I do not think I need add very much to what I have already said. As I pointed out in my opening statement, the bill was fully discussed in committee with the minister and his officials, who answered all questions put to them.

I therefore commend the bill to the consideration of the house.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Langlois: With leave now.

Senator Flynn: Leave is granted. Would the Deputy Leader of the Government tell us whether any government cheques have been returned with an NSF annotation recently? I suppose the government wants the bill passed by tomorrow night.

Senator Langlois: I should warn the Leader of the Opposition that it might happen in a few days' time, as tomorrow is the last day of the month.

Senator Flynn: I was thinking of that.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Langlois, seconded by the Honourable Senator

Perrault, that this bill be now read a third time. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 2.30 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

ROYAL ASSENT

NOTICE

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that the following communication had been received:

GOVERNMENT HOUSE
OTTAWA

June 29, 1976

Madam,

I have the honour to inform you that the Honourable Wishart F. Spence, O.B.E., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber to-day, the 29th day of June, at 5.45 p.m., for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to certain bills.

I have the honour to be,
Madam,
Your obedient servant,
Edmond Joly de Lotbinière,
Administrative Secretary to the Governor General.

The Honourable

The Speaker of the Senate,
Ottawa.

CITIZENSHIP BILL

THIRD READING—MOTION IN AMENDMENT—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from earlier this day the debate on the motion in amendment of Senator Laird to the motion of Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) for the third reading of Bill C-20, respecting citizenship.

Senator Laird: Honourable senators, over the noon hour I had an opportunity of discussing the implications of the different mechanical means suggested by the Leader of the Opposition for accomplishing the same purpose, and I have come to the conclusion that I would prefer my motion in amendment to stand, and I am prepared for a vote on it now.

Senator Grosart: A hard decision.

Senator Argue: You are safe.

Senator Denis: You expected that, I suppose.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, with your permission, I should like to make a few remarks, following which I will withdraw my sub-amendment.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I merely wish to repeat what I said earlier, that if the Senate prefers the amendment moved by Senator Laird rather than my sub-amendment then I have no objection. I merely want to take this opportunity to point out that Senator Connolly's speech rather convinced me that we should adopt the amendment moved by Senator Laird.

The main argument put forward by Senator Connolly with respect to the delegation of power to the lieutenant governors in council was that it was of an administrative nature. It is quite obvious that that is wrong. It is quite clear from clause 33(2) that the lieutenant governors in council would be authorized "to prohibit and annul or in any manner restrict the taking or acquisition directly or indirectly of, or the succession to, any interest in real property located in the province." It is quite obvious that this is legislative authority. But I cannot imagine the lieutenant governor of any province acting on the basis of such authority. It is inconceivable.

It is quite clear from the argument advanced by Senator Connolly that the present section 24, which this would replace, deals with Parliament's power to legislate in respect of aliens. If it is felt necessary that aliens be prohibited from acquiring property, Senator Laird's amendment covers the point.

As the speeches in this debate indicate, in accepting clause 33 we are entering into a very complicated situation from the point of view of constitutionality, as well as from the point of view of the practical consequences. Therefore, I think the amendment presented by Senator Laird should be adopted by the Senate. It would only take the other place a few minutes to concur in it. For that reason, I urge honourable senators to vote in favour of Senator Laird's motion in amendment and, with the permission of the Senate, I would withdraw my sub-amendment.

MOTION IN AMENDMENT NEGATIVED

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Connolly (Ottawa West), seconded by the Honourable Senator Macnaughton, that this bill be now read the third time.

In amendment, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Laird, seconded by the Honourable Senator McNamara, that the bill be not now read the third time, but that it be amended as follows:

Page 17:—

Hon. Senators: Dispense.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

Some Hon. Senators: Yes.

Some Hon. Senators: No.

The Hon. the Speaker: Will those honourable senators in favour of the motion please say "yea"?

Some Hon. Senators: Yea.

The Hon. the Speaker: Will those honourable senators who are against the motion please say "nay"?

Some Hon. Senators: Nay.

The Hon. the Speaker: In my opinion, the "nays" have it.

And more than two honourable senators having risen.

The Hon. the Speaker: Please call in the senators.

● (1440)

Motion in amendment of Senator Laird negated on the following division:

YEAS
HONOURABLE SENATORS

Asselin	Hicks
Beaubien	Laird
Bélisle	Lang
Benidickson	Macdonald
Choquette	McNamara
Flynn	Neiman
Forsey	Phillips
Fournier (Madawaska- Restigouche)	Quart
Grosart	Riley
Haig	Smith (Colchester)
Hayden	Walker
	Yuzyk—23.

NAYS
HONOURABLE SENATORS

Barrow	Godfrey
Basha	Graham
Bourget	Lafond
Buckwold	Lamontagne
Carter	Langlois
Connolly (Ottawa West)	Lefrançois
Cook	McElman
Cottreau	McGrand
Croll	McIlraith
Davey	Michaud
Denis	Norrie
Deschatelets	Paterson
Eudes	Perrault
Fournier (Restigouche- Gloucester)	Petten
Fournier (de Lanaudière)	Smith (Queens- Sheburne)—30.

The Hon. the Speaker: I declare the motion in amendment lost.

Honourable senators, is it your pleasure to adopt the main motion?

Hon. David A. Croll: Honourable senators, I will direct what I have to say to the citizenship aspect of the bill. You will understand if I begin by first addressing Senator Williams, and then the rest of you as fellow immigrants. He is an original and the rest of us are sons and daughters or descendants of immigrants.

Senator Flynn: They probably arrived here some time ago.

● (1450)

Senator Croll: Some came by an earlier boat, some came by a later boat and some came overland, so the importance of the citizenship bill can be appreciated.

[The Hon. the Speaker:]

Senator Connolly, who spoke to the bill, covered it historically, with feeling, compassion and understanding, and treated it as an important one. Senator Yuzyk, who speaks acceptably on matters concerning Canadians of other ethnic origins, made his usual valuable contribution. Senator Forsey touched a new base, for him, and dealt with legal matters and made a contribution to the debate.

Senator Flynn: That is nothing new.

Senator Croll: I felt that something more needed to be said, because citizenship is always important to the recipient of the honour as well as to the country that bestows it. I am sure that all of you consider the bill important, and to me it is a rededication.

In other times I spoke of citizenship. As a member of the House of Commons I spoke to the original bill in 1946. I spoke to the amendment in 1951. In 1946 and in 1951 no member of the Senate was of "ethnic origin", as the expression is. There are now five, four of whom were born in Canada. I am the only one who was not born in Canada; I became a naturalized citizen. Two of our members were born in Ireland and one in Great Britain; and the rest of you are the chosen people.

I thought the occasion was significant enough for one who believed in, and participated in, the great Canadian dream to speak concerning its meaning. To those of us not born in this country, who hoped to acquire Canadian citizenship, it was to touch the rim of heaven and so participate in the great Canadian dream. It is open to others, as it was opened to me.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier spoke of this. Whenever I think of the essence of Canadianism, I think of that grand story which is told concerning the life of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. You remember reading about Sir Wilfrid Laurier's attending the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria in 1897. He was engaged in conversation with one of Britain's elder statesmen—this was when Canada was beginning to embark on its immigration policies—and the man said to Sir Wilfrid, "In Canada you already have the French and English, and now you are about to bring in Germans, Italians and Russians. With all these different people, what will the nationality of Canada be?" Sir Wilfrid replied, "The nationality of Canada will be freedom."

I looked back to see what I had to say on this in 1946 and 1951, and I am now going to repeat some of the things I said then. It is 30 years later; I will bring you up to date. These are some of the things I said 30 years ago, and they struck me as being of interest to the house, to show the progress we have made. When speaking to the bill in 1946, this is what I said:

With all due deference, I would mention one group of citizens in this country to whom the question of citizenship... is of the deepest concern, who are fascinated by this bill, and whose hearts, from sheer joy, miss a beat at its implications. They are those who are not charter members of this Canadian organization, like my French-speaking friends; they are not those of Anglo-Saxon stock, like so many others of my friends; they are not those whose birthright gave them every freedom and privilege this country of ours can offer. No, sir; when I mention some of those to whom the question of citizenship is so important, I mean those who had to save and struggle and endure hardship to achieve the status which is so casually accepted by our brethren. I mean the new Canadians—and in saying that, I mean 20 per cent of the population of Canada. I mean also that one-fifth of our population which can hold its head as high as any other when anyone raises the question of loyalty to Canada.

I am one of them. For forty-one years of my forty-six I have lived in this country, have enjoyed liberties and opportunities it has given me, I have gladly allowed myself to become assimilated into its community. What little service it has allowed me to give, I have proudly given. Yet I remain a new Canadian. I am not a native-born; I am a naturalized citizen. Behind me remains, and occasionally I hear, the reminder of those cold years when, from the wrong side of the tracks, this new Canadian could only look across enviously at the warmly-lighted windows of those who enjoyed Canadian birthright and who so casually accepted the high privileges which were theirs from the cradle on.

That, if I may say so, has been the shocking thing so far as most of us are concerned. We have come, in the main, from lands of oppression, hunger and fear; we, or our fathers, have struggled mightily to assemble the little bit which was needed for that which we sought—the opportunity to be accepted on our abilities, not on the basis of the class or group to which birth has assigned us; freedom of education and opportunity for ourselves and our children; a land and a democracy which would engage our hearts and loyalty as never could those downtrodden acres we were leaving.

We have not come, in the main, from some dark European morass where learning and culture never flowered. It was not ignorance that led us to reject our homes and our friends and the countries of our birth—and out of all lands to which we might have gone, to choose Canada. We, or our fathers, were actuated by those same impulses which, one or two or three centuries earlier, had led the forebears of honourable members, whether they speak English or French, to make this same venturesome, sometimes desperate, move from an old world to a new, to escape from drudgery without hope of security, hunger born of social injustice, religious faith without the freedom to practise it, democratic idealism ruthlessly suppressed by the despot.

And we did not imagine that we were exchanging this for streets of gold and untold wealth when we asked admission to Canada. We knew only that here was a land where a man could call his soul his own, and with hard work could see that his sons and daughters had a better start in life than he, and, with a bit of extra luck, could approach old age in dignity and security. So we made our choice, and gambled our lives and those of our families—and by and large we won. Not without pain were the deep-grown roots of generations wrenched from the familiar soil; but mercifully soon, we found, new roots were taking hold in new, far more nourishing clay than ever we had known. We settled fairly easily, at least the younger of us did, into the new scene as gradually the old one faded. We became, in our own thinking, Canadians in all but citizenship, and we were eager for the day when that final proof of right and liberty would be added.

● (1500)

Canada was giving us a new life—what had we to give Canada? We brought to her our brawn and our skill; new Canadians helped till the unbroken soil and build the factories and dig the ditches. They sought to contribute to the new land the best of the national cultures they brought from the old. Was that enough? No; for there remained loyalty. Those of you who know the new Canadian will know that he has been inclined to attach to his Canadianism, to his loyalty to his adoptive country, that same fanaticism which the proselyte shows toward his adoptive faith. To him the title of citizen is something to be proudly worn, a recognition of his own love for this new country of his, an earnest of his determination to serve it—to serve it and to die for it if need be. There is no one of us who has returned from this latest war who does not carry with him the remembrance of the young men with non-Anglo-Saxon, non-Gallic names who lie beneath the temporary markers in the shallow, roadside graves of a half-dozen fronts.

Too often we have heard the assurance given to Americans, "No, you must not mistake us for the British," and the caution delivered to the British, "You must not confuse us with Americans." We have not shouted proudly from the housetops the proclamation that we are Canadians, a nation as distinctive as any that ever came down the pike of history, an up-and-coming nation, with the unique ability to get along with our neighbours and to pick a fight with none. A proud nation which when its own freedom and that of its friends became imperilled threw into the fight every man and woman it had available and still had enough left over to become the third greatest producing country in the world.

We have not realized our own greatness. We travel in the strange, conflicting shadow cast by our mother and by our neighbour, and somehow we still refuse to come out into the warm sun of the world's acclaim.

I suggest also that we call our people Canadians and forget that destructive hyphen we are so wont to use. Surely after all these years we are no longer English or Irish or French or German or Hebrew or Ukrainian Canadians? Surely the people of these national backgrounds need no longer huddle protectively among others of the same descent, keeping alive their immigrant ways and customs only because they have not been accepted into the larger community which apparently is not yet ready to avow its Canadianism.

Surely the time has come for us all to eradicate that sense of domestic isolation? Surely the time has come for us to eradicate the hyphen? It should be known that citizenship is not only a challenge, that it is an achievement; that not only is it a responsibility, it is a privilege. It should be known that no man can be a citizen of a country without first being a citizen of a community, that no man can be a citizen of the world without first being a citizen of a country. How can we hope to understand the problems of other people and take an intelligent attitude toward them unless we first develop techniques and the willingness to understand one another here in Canada?

It is time we awakened to the greatness of our country and called a holiday on hatreds, both racial and religious, which are attacks on the hopes of a free people, and attach a real and important value to the very fact of Canadian citizenship as created, recreated and endorsed in this bill.

This Twentieth Parliament I feel will not only give life to a Canadian citizen but present him with a flag and set aside a day to celebrate the occasion. I hope he has much to celebrate.

Honourable senators, you will realize that obviously parts of this statement are a bit out of date. Today we are dealing with the Thirtieth Parliament, not the Twentieth. The flag is here; it was not here then, and there was no day to celebrate it.

Let us take a look for a few minutes at the situation as I see it now. I was saying that I spoke to the Twentieth Parliament and that we are now in the Thirtieth Parliament, 30 years later. That is quite a long time. The population has changed. At that time the ethnic people comprised 20 per cent of the population; they now comprise 33 per cent of the population. Canada's fertility rate has dropped dramatically below replacement levels, as it is put these days. By 1974 it had dropped from 2.13 children per family to 1.87. It dropped again in 1975 to 1.83. Apparently the only area open to us for a change is immigration. And yet we are talking of the time when we will provide for immigrants to enter the country as we have labour openings. In the meantime we will devote ourselves to indentured labour for our special needs. Surely the time has come for us to consider what indentured labour has meant to Europe before we go into that sort of policy.

In 1946 I said I had been here 41 years. I can say today that I have been here 71 years. I sometimes wonder whether I have paid my dues and have qualified just to be a Canadian—not "old," not "new" and not hyphenated.

I took occasion to speak on this when I indicated to you that in 1946-51 there was no Senate representation of the ethnic groups. There is considerable importance attached to Senate representation, and yet at this very time there are large, important minority groups of ethnic origin which are not represented in the Senate. How can we reconcile that with the fact that the Senate was established for the purpose of giving minority groups and minority provinces a voice simply because they were minorities? Surely in this day and age, this day of communications and political participation, such numerical inadequacy amounts to neglect and cries out for correction.

● (1510)

I referred a few minutes ago to the great Canadian dream. What am I talking about, really, when I say that? Let me say to begin with that the doors we had to push open 30 years ago now have a welcome mat in front of them, and we are invited to enter some places, although in some of the board rooms of this country it is still done somewhat hesitatingly. In other offices ability and competence count, but even yet, now and then, racism and discrimination rear their ugly heads. On this point, let me mention that there was a full-page advertisement in the Toronto Globe and Mail just lately which said: "Our Government: Racist and Arrogant." The least one can say about this is that it was grossly intemperate and misleading, but the terrible thing about it is that here were nameless, faceless bigots, with money in their pockets and hate in their hearts, preaching hate. I, of course, am a past master when it comes to dealing with racism and discrimination. I have been on the receiving end of it for a long time. I can tell you that though these begots claim that their voice, as they put it, is the voice of Canada, it most certainly is not. The most that can be said for these people is that their voice is the voice of hate. It is my view, based on long experience of and long association with this sort of problem, that they are fundamentally mistaken in what they are attempting to do, because an adverse reaction will come very quickly. That is the Canadian way.

Returning to the question of immigrants, we must remember that immigrants brought to this country not only talent, money, culture and creative capacity, but they contributed to every aspect of Canadian life, whether social, economic, political, professional, educational, or those of values and ideas. They have striven constantly not only to join in the spirit of optimism and sense of high adventure which have marked this country from its inception, which it possesses still in such abundance, but in the possibilities and potentials of which it needs now and then to be re-awakened.

We hear much talk of bilingualism. I have never understood the opposition to this. At six years of age I was trilingual, and that situation continued for quite a while. Eventually one language I lost because I was learning English and forgot it; but all of my life I have had two languages. They were not the official languages as we designate them at present, but I do know the advantages of being bilingual, and I do understand how much we need this, and how important and vital it is in a country such as ours.

Where are we now, 30 years later? Certainly as Canadians, more than ever, in the factories and the shops, in the small businesses and on farms we are working and striving to be better, to get along better, to live better and to perpetuate family life in its full meaning. But there is more to it than that. We are to be found, as Canadians, in the Parliament of Canada, in the provincial legislatures, in municipal councils, and in goodly numbers wherever in Canada men and women are elected or appointed to office. Throughout the country we are to be found in the ermine robes of judges and advocates; as teachers in the hallowed halls of learning and culture, as students in large numbers, in the professions, in the arts and in the sciences. We have stood in Caesar's place as representatives of Her Majesty in provincial jurisdictions.

It is true that immigration, for many of us, was the great escape, yet many immigrants passed through hard times before obtaining their citizenship, and the movement still goes on. People still move about in search of work, or a better life, or a dream of relative freedom, and such people do not belong to any one time or any one place: they are still with us.

There is one thing that I want to say very clearly, if I am allowed to give any evidence at all, and that is that we must recognize that never in history has one country bestowed so many riches on its minorities. We have thrived in a land of opportunity which cherishes freedom.

[Senator Croll.]

You will recall the story I told about Sir Wilfrid Laurier, when he was asked what the nationality of Canada would be. He replied, and I do not hesitate to repeat it, "The nationality of Canada will be freedom." I am not sure we can yet say that that ideal has been attained completely, but I like to think that it is recognized as a Canadian goal, a goal which will one day soon be realized by a nation reflecting no dislike of the unlike, and which is tolerant of everything except intolerance itself. We need some of that kind of understanding in this country at the present time, for there are still victims of racism and discrimination.

Senator Flynn: You can say that again.

Senator Croll: Such victims, however, are not always ethnics.

We may still have a long way to go, but we have come a long way already, and the purpose of my standing here is not so much to urge you to vote for the bill, as I think you probably will, but because I thought it was time that somebody gave an accounting and an indication to Canadians of the extent to which we who were blessed enough to have the opportunity to come to this country are thankful for that opportunity. I simply wished to express this thankfulness on behalf of all of us at the present time.

On motion of Senator Flynn, debate adjourned.

INCOME TAX ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Hayden for the adoption of the Report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on Bill C-58, to amend the Income Tax Act.

Hon. Eric Cook: Honourable senators, I have nothing new to add to the excellent speech made last night by Senator Hayden. However, I wish to make a few comments to underline two fundamental issues which emerged during the hearings of the committee.

● (1520)

First, the evidence discloses that unfortunately the Minister of National Revenue, with the approval of the Cabinet, made an error inasmuch as he misinterpreted the provisions of the Income Tax Act.

Second, the evidence discloses that the Minister of National Revenue refused a taxpayer in good standing the right to ask for the protection of the court from government actions, which the taxpayer considered unfair or unjust. The background to the minister's interpretation of the Income Tax Act begins, of course, with the act itself, which provides for its administration by the Minister of National Revenue. However, should any dispute arise as to any of the provisions of the act, it is the courts, with the Supreme Court of Canada having the last word, which have the duty and responsibility to rule upon the wording used and to decide what Parliament intended the law to be. When a court interprets any act, that interpretation is the law of the land until overruled by a higher court, or by an amending act approved by Parliament.

Bill C-58 leaves untouched subparagraph (F) of section 19 of the Income Tax Act, which reads in part as follows:

(F) the contents of which excluding advertisements, are substantially the same as the contents of an issue . . . printed, edited or published outside Canada.

Therefore, in order for Bill C-58 to have any application to the magazine problem as it heretofore existed, it is of vital importance to have subparagraph (F) interpreted. In order that the Senate may have the facts relating to the interpretation of subparagraph (F), reference must be had to the hearings before Senate Banking, Trade and Committee, Committee on May 26 issue No. 88.

The facts given in evidence may be summarized briefly as follows: On May 6 and 7, 1975 Time Canada had meetings with the highest levels of the Department of National Revenue. During those meetings the departmental officials produced a memo which stated in part:

The requirement is that at least half the contents be new, fresh, original material which has not appeared in any periodical outside Canada.

On May 8, 1975, the next day, the Secretary of State, when introducing Bill C-58 in the House of Commons, stated in part:

. . . there is no intention of introducing, in connection with the proposed amendments, a new formula for measuring how substantially a magazine published in Canada must be different from another published abroad.

Then, on October 23, 1975, by means of a press release the interpretation of "substantially the same" was set at more than 80 per cent. The press release reads:

The government's policy requires that more than 80 per cent of the contents of a Canadian periodical must be material which has not appeared in any current or prior issues of foreign publications with which the Canadian periodical may have had any type of continuing arrangement for access to material.

Therefore, on October 23, 1975, the Minister of National Revenue contradicts what the Secretary of State said on May 8, 1975; furthermore, in effect, he says that government policy is contrary to and overrides the plain, clear meaning of the words used by Parliament and set out in subparagraph (F).

Honourable senators, the established law on the correct interpretation of the language used by Parliament in subparagraph (F) was referred to in the hearings of the committee, and I will quote in part from Issue No. 88, page 7.

SENATOR COOK: I would like, Mr. Chairman, to refer to an Exchequer Court case, entitled, Manning Timber Product Limited v. Minister of National Revenue, which was decided in 1951. The judge concluded his judgment with these words:

I have given appellant's powerful argument my best consideration but I am simply unable to see that there is any context here which would enable me to construe "substantial" as "majority". I am fortified in this view by the following passage from the speech of Viscount Simon in Palser v. Grinling . . . If the judgment of the Court of Appeal in Palser's case were to be understood as fixing percentages as legal measure, that would be going beyond the powers of the judiciary. To say that everything over 20 per cent of the whole rent should be regarded as a substantial portion of that rent would be to play the part of a legislator. If Parliament thinks fit to amend the statute by fixing percentages, Parliament will do so. Aristotle long ago pointed out that the degree of precision that is attainable depends on the subject matter. There is no reason for this court to differ from the conclusion reached in these two cases that the portion was not substantial, but this conclusion is justified by the view taken on the facts, not by laying down percentages of general application.

And then I asked the following question:

Mr. Minister, does Parliament, by Bill C-58, amend the Income Tax Act by fixing any percentages for subparagraph (F)?

HON. MR. FAULKNER: No.

Therefore, clause 1 of Bill C-58 cannot change the law relating to Time magazine until subparagraph (F) has been given a proper judicial interpretation after hearing arguments from all likely to be affected, including, of course, the Minister of National Revenue, or until subparagraph (F) has been amended by Parliament itself.

Let the Senate make no mistake. Every taxpayer, small or big, personal or corporate, has a very real stake in this unfortunate and regrettable situation. They will look to the Senate to insist that the words of the Income Tax Act as used by Parliament be given the meaning and effect given to them by the courts after a full and fair hearing, and not the meaning and effect given to them by a member of the Cabinet who at one and the same time refuses the taxpayer the protection of the court.

The second serious defect surrounding Bill C-58 is the denial of a taxpayer of his right to have the protection of the court in his dispute with the minister. Because of the operation of the Income Tax Act, Time Canada could not refer the interpretation of subparagraph (F) to the courts without the consent of the Minister of National Revenue. As I have already stated, the Minister of National Revenue refused to give his consent. Not only did the minister refuse to give his consent to refer the dispute to a court, but subsequently, as already pointed out, he in defiance of all jurisprudence made a ruling which is not supported by the plain words used in the Income Tax Act.

● (1530)

A few days ago I heard Senator Hayden refer to the fact that when he first entered this chamber he and a group of eight Liberal senators helped to amend a government bill, which as drafted denied the right of appeal to the courts. It is becoming more and more common for legislation to be drafted upon the instruction of the bureaucracy denying persons the right to appeal to the court from the findings of ministers, boards and the like. This tendency has been resisted time after time by the Senate. Putting obstacles in the path of citizens who believe they have been wronged and who wish to have the protection of the courts is a sure and certain way to kill democracy in this and any other country.

[Senator Cook.]

When the government of a former Prime Minister, the Right Honourable Louis S. St. Laurent, provided for the creation of the Income Tax Appeal Board, that government created a splendid instrument to hold the balance between the ordinary taxpayer on the one hand and the tax collector backed by all the resources and all the might of the government on the other hand. Not only has the Income Tax Appeal Board throughout the years meted out even-handed justice and given judgment in favour of the taxpayer in, I would say, about one-third of the cases, but also the mere fact that the board exists and has not hesitated to hold against the department when proper so to do has, I am sure, helped the Department of National Revenue to become the usually fair-minded reasonable department that it is today. Indeed, if the officials of the department—not the minister but the officials—had the last word, Time would have received justice. But the officials did not have the last word; it was the minister who had the last word. The minister made the absurd 80 per cent ruling, and he refused to consent to refer the matter to the court.

For my part, I deplore this conduct as not being in the best interest of democracy and justice in Canada, and I hope that the Senate will show that it deplores it also. Surely, to paraphrase a truism, it is far better that there be 99 applications to court without merit than that there be one citizen denied justice. This must surely be the first time that both Parliament and the courts have been brushed aside in order to carry out what is described as government policy.

Honourable senators, there is no place in the Canadian system of law for any government policy—no matter how meritorious it may be—unless it is authorized fairly, clearly and squarely by the language used in an act passed by Parliament. Furthermore, if the application to any citizen of any act of Parliament is challenged by a citizen, there is no justification under our Canadian system for refusing any citizen the right to seek the protection of the courts.

Honourable senators, I support the amendments.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Hon. Keith Davey: Honourable senators, I am afraid that I must once more ask for your patience so as to discuss Bill C-58.

Senator Flynn: Why?

Senator Davey: Although I was not a member of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, I believe I attended virtually all its hearings on this bill. I wish to begin my remarks by thanking the chairman and the members of the committee for their courtesy, cooperation and, I suppose most of all, their patience.

I regret very much that I cannot agree with the report of the committee. Indeed, after listening to practically every witness and reading the evidence of those I did not hear I have arrived at exactly the opposite conclusion to that of the committee and its chairman, Senator Hayden. Today I wish to urge you to reject this report and these amendments which, in my opinion, taken collectively, strike right at the heart of the bill. We are dealing here with much more than four simple amendments. Rather, it is a series of proposals which would effectively squeeze the life out of this bill. I concede at once that I have neither Senator

Hayden's eloquence, lucidity or, certainly, experience. I am not even a lawyer—

Senator Flynn: That is good; "not even."

Senator Grosart: That is the best thing you have said.

Senator Davey: However, I do have some modest working knowledge of media. I recognize amendments, although not specifically so designed, which will nonetheless obstruct, delay and frustrate this legislation. I recognize amendments introduced in the closing hours of this session in the almost certain knowledge that the government could not deal with those amendments during the present session. Let me assure you that time is running out. That is not a pun, because I do not think it is any longer a laughing matter. Time is running out.

Senator Grosart: Time has run out.

Senator Davey: Time is running out on literally hundreds of Canadians who need this legislation in order to survive financially.

In a few moments I will make some comments with respect to the amendments and Senator Cook's interesting speech. First of all I would like to remind you of what this bill is all about; then I would like to indicate just who it is who is in favour of this bill. I would like to discuss with you the opposition to the bill and where it is coming from. Then, as I say, I will turn in conclusion to a discussion of the amendments.

Allow me, then, briefly to restate the objectives of Bill C-58. The bill is attempting to foster an economic climate which will allow the full development of a native Canadian consumer magazine industry and one which will assist Canadian broadcasters to meet their obligations under the Broadcasting Act. Now, this I confess is a difficult speech for me to make. It is a difficult debate, because I am aware of the Senate's understandable respect for the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce. Yet I would not be honest with myself if I did not observe that I have heard in its report and hearings precious little from the members of the committee with respect to what can be done to assist Canadian magazines and broadcasters, although I heard a hell of a lot about the rights and privileges of giant American broadcasters and publishing companies. Now, the nub of the issue is advertising. As it relates to magazines, the simple fact is that Canadian editions of American magazines have an unbeatable head start in the battle for advertising revenue. Editorial material attracts circulation, which in turn attracts advertising. The Canadian editions of American magazines get most of their editorial content, if not all of it, free of charge. As far as broadcasting is concerned, an estimated $20 million of advertising revenue per year, which is growing at the rate of 15 per cent per year, is spent by Canadian advertisers on American television and radio stations. Thus these American stations derive this revenue from a market they were not licensed to serve, at the expense of Canadian stations playing under altogether different and more stringent ground rules. As I repeat, it is a matter of intense regret to me that during the debate and in the hearings we heard really very little about what we were going to do to assist Canadian broadcasters and Canadian magazine publishers. However, we heard a great deal about the rights of American publishing giants and American broadcasting giants.

I would like to tell you who it is who wants this bill. Who are the people who urge us to pass this legislation? In a nutshell, they are the very people whom this bill is designed to help. The people who want us to pass this bill without amendment are Canadians who make their daily bread in the media business in this country—giant corporations like Maclean-Hunter, and marginal publishing operations like Saturday Night; the powerful Canadian Association of Broadcasters, to be sure, but also such fledgling television broadcasting entities as the Global Television Network and CITY Television. Those people trooped before the committee with their hearts on their sleeves, with, in many cases, the seat out of their pants, but nonetheless their feet planted optimistically on the ground.

● (1540)

I consider it extremely important, honourable senators, that the full Senate should hear from those people, at least in part. Let us start with the Canadian Periodical Publishers Association. I do not know whether this booklet entitled Magazines Canada was sent only to members of the committee or to every honourable senator, but it is a list of magazines presently published in Canada. If honourable senators look through it—and if any senator does not have a copy, I will ensure that he or she receives one—they will be astounded at all the titles mentioned, titles such as Ellipse Event, Exile, and Tamarack Review. It goes on and on. There are more than 100 publications. The association which these publications combine to form, the Canadian Periodical Publishers Association, appeared before the committee with an extremely impressive presentation and urged the members of the Senate to pass this legislation.

Let us talk about the giant Maclean-Hunter publication. Maclean-Hunter appeared on May 12. It would be impossible for me to quote all of the things that were said on that occasion, but I would like to quote from the presentation made by Donald Campbell, the President of Maclean-Hunter. He said in part:

Maclean-Hunter has a strong tradition in this country of publishing magazines. And because we are a communications company it is a tradition that has gone beyond profit.

Now listen to this, honourable senators:

You may be surprised to learn that Maclean-Hunter did not make a profit from consumer magazine publishing in either 1974 or in 1975. And it may also surprise you to learn that our profits through the years from publishing consumer magazines have been at best marginal. But our company has been built on a foundation of helping to build Canada, and we maintain that. We have published Maclean's since 1905,

In the same presentation, Mr. Campbell said:

Bill C-58 as presented will be legislation which achieves precisely what it attempts to achieve—the preservation and growth of Canada's periodical press. The adoption of this legislation will encourage new Canadian magazines and provide a financial base so that they can serve the growing reading demands of Canadians.

Then, honourable senators, just this morning I received a letter, which I did not solicit, from Donald Campbell, the President and Chief Executive Officer of Maclean-Hunter. In this letter, which I would like to put on record, he said:

Dear Senator Davey,

While we received a fair and complete hearing before the Senate Committee on Banking—

I have not questioned that, and I would not question it. I think all witnesses received a fair hearing:

—its subsequent report has discounted our recommendations to such an extent that we feel the full implications of the suggested amendments should be made clear. If the 80 per cent "substantially different rule" is discarded, the future of Canada's periodical industry would be placed in jeopardy; the potential rebirth of magazines in this country would be halted in its tracks. Not only would it be a simple matter for foreign publishers to move into this market, but domestic publishers might well be forced to make deals with them in order to stay in business. Newsweek, The Wall Street Journal and dozens of other U.S. magazines and business periodicals, including a refurbished Time, would almost surely launch Canadian editions; Maclean's, Chatelaine, and other Canadian publications would be forced into importing large chunks of unoriginal content.

These are strong statements, but a royal commission, a Senate inquiry and evidence to both the recent Commons and Senate committees have validated their relevance and urgency in this complex set of circumstances.

The vote which the Canadian Senate takes on third reading of Bill C-58 will be a historic one; it will decide, once and for all, whether Canada should have an indigenous periodical press. It was Senator Grattan O'Leary who placed this in its proper context, when he wrote:

"Only a truly Canadian printing press, one with the 'feel' of Canada and directly responsible to Canada, can give us the critical analysis, the informed discourse and dialogue which are indispensable in a sovereign society."

Senator Benidickson: I would like to tell Senator Davey that I received an identical letter from Maclean-Hunter this afternoon, so I assume that all senators received one.

Senator Davey: Thank you, Senator Benidickson. In that case, I apologize for taking up the Senate's time.

Senator McIlraith: I would like the honourable senator to answer a question at this point.

Senator Davey: I would like to wait until—

Senator McIlraith: It is about the letter. Where in the committee's report does the honourable senator find anything that affects the 80 per cent rule that the government wishes to impose? The tenor of the committee's report is that you either interpret the section or you legislate on the point.

Senator Davey: I shall deal with the amendments in a moment or two. If you will allow me, I would like to proceed along the line I am presently taking. I will come to the amendments, but I wish to indicate to the Senate who are the people who want us to pass this bill. The fact is that the people the bill is designed to help are the very people who are urging us to pass it.

I have talked about the Canadian Periodical Publishers Association, and about Maclean-Hunter. Let me now talk about Saturday Night. Saturday Night is a marginal publication, and has been for some time. The President of Saturday Night, and Mr. Ed Cowan, appeared before the committee. I would ask honourable senators to listen to what he said. This is the guy who runs Saturday Night, and he said:

The second point then is simply this, the Time question is about cultural emasculation and about confusing issues. The fact that Time magazine can make a convincing case before the Parliament and people of Canada, to the effect that they are a Canadian magazine, bears terrible witness to the success they have enjoyed in subverting whatever sense this country has of itself. Andy Warhol silkscreening maple leaves, beavers or Margaret Trudeau, does not make him a Canadian painter, not even if he painted these canvases on a Canada Council arts grant. And there is another absurdity in this controversy. The Canadian government has subsidized, through special exemption, Time-Life in its quite legitimate vocation, that of money-spinning—and there is nothing wrong with that—and in its quite illegitimate one, that of passing off a sophisticated and encyclopaedic mirror of American life as a real image of a Canadian one.

We then went on and asked Cowan, "Do you need this bill, and do you need the bill now?" Here is how he answered:

I can tell you this, in very practical terms, I know of three advertising campaigns that I will get this fall. I know at least three more that have asked us for information, should the Time demise happen. I can tell you that those specific three accounts, should we get them, could make a difference in our first full year of operation of red to black. That is how close we are.

That, in a sense, honourable senators, is what this debate is all about—whether or not we are going to bail out Canadian publishers, like Ed Cowan of Saturday Night, or whether we are going to ride in at the last moment and bail out American magazines like Time.

Other interesting witnesses who appeared before the committee were those representing Global Television. Rather than quote from that particular hearing, the President of Global, Allan Slaight, wrote the chairman of the committee on June 21—again I assume that a number of senators received a copy of this letter. However, I would like to quote from it because it gives a clear and very concise statement of where Global Television is at. He said:

Global Television, and other independents springing up across Canada, are good for the Canadian broadcasting business and good for the Canadian economy. When we entered the scene at Global in April 1974, after it had declared bankruptcy, the company was losing $1,500,000 per month, and had a staff size in the range of 220. We reduced the staff to 120 persons. Today, it is at a level of 190, and still growing. We are on the verge of turning the corner, but we urgently require the implementation C-58 to repatriate Canadian dollars from Buffalo to ensure our economic survival.

● (1550)

He goes on:

Many of the dollars placed on Global in our present fiscal year were, we are positive, from the Canadian Advertising agencies who initially assumed that C-58 would be announced, if not law, by this time. They were concerned that they establish a significant franchise on Global. We are concerned that a great many of these dollars will slip through our fingers in our next fiscal year if delays and amendments to C-58 are announced.

That is the Global Television Network.

One of the most interesting presentations we received was from gallant—and I use the word, I think, honestly—gallant, little CITY-TV in Toronto. If there is a community television station in all of Canada, then CITY-TV is it.

I am going to speak in a moment or two—not a great length—about the advertising community who came before the committee, representatives of the advertising community, who said, "Look, one of the reasons you must not pass this legislation is that these small stations like Global and CITY do not have sufficient audiences to justify the placing of advertising on them." That was the argument we heard. It was made repeatedly. I asked Moses Znaimer, the President of CITY-TV the following question, and this can be found in the committee proceedings of June 9:

Secondly, ICA—

That is, the Institute of Canadian Advertisers.

—appeared before this committee. They are against this legislation. Allegedly the advertisers will not use your station. We have been told that repeatedly. I have a list of the 10 largest television advertisers in Canada. I would like to read the list and ask how many of those advertisers use your station: Procter and Gamble, General Foods, the Government of Canada, General Motors, Colgate-Palmolive, Warner-Lambert, Bristol-Myers, Kraft, Molson and Ford. They are the 10 largest television advertisers in Canada. How many of them use CITY-TV?

I think it is fair to say—I am sure the members of the committee will agree with me—we had been led to believe that none of them used CITY-TV. Well, Mr. Znaimer's answer was as follows:

All of them except two. Currently neither Procter and Gamble—and, if I am not mistaken, Kraft—use CITY-TV. I do not want to put the black mark on this, because I want them very much to use CITY-TV, and I expect they will begin to use CITY-TV. Currently, for the first time in our history, we are in negotiation with Procter and Gamble for a very large 52-week contract. All of them use CITY-TV except two; and I put it to you that in the 1976-77 season we will have all of them.

At that point I said:

The point is that advertisers come here and tell us that they will not use your station, and yet all of them, with the exception of Procter and Gamble and Kraft are using your station now.

And Mr. Znaimer replied:

Yes, and they are negotiating to use more, and God bless them!

Mr. Znaimer went on in the presentation to say that the retention of that kind of advertising was dependent upon the passage by the Senate and by the Government of Canada of Bill C-58.

Honourable senators, there they are, the people the bill is designed to help, saying "Yes, it will help." They are saying it so loudly and clearly. They said it before the committee of the other place and they said it before the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce. Yet they still feel constrained to send members of this chamber a wire, which I think most of us have received—a wire which, I suggest, is unique in its unity, and because of that uniqueness I propose to read it into our record. It is signed by Pierre Camu, President of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, Graeme Gibson, Chairman of the Book and Periodical Development Council, Andreas Schroeder, Chairman of the Writers' Union of Canada, Ed Cowan, President of Saturday Night magazine, and Denis Smith, President of the Canadian Periodical Publishers Association. The wire reads as follows:

The undersigned request your support for Bill C-58 as passed by the House of Commons. We appeared before the standing Senate committee to detail the need for this legislation to support income tax amendment as appropriate means to achieve the bill's objectives and to outline positive results we foresee from passage of this bill on Canadian publishing and broadcasting industries. Acceptance by the Senate of any one of the proposed amendments would seriously undermine not only future benefits, but those already taking place. We therefore urge your support as positive and appropriate step in development of Canada's broadcasting and publishing industries.

I find it necessary to add, honourable senators, that I had absolutely nothing to do with this telegram. I did not suggest it be sent. I did not request it be sent. I did not know it was being sent.

Senator Flynn: Who did know?

Senator Davey: I do not know, Senator Flynn, but I suggest it was, undoubtedly, the idea of the people who are on the firing line, the people involved on a day-by-day basis in the Canadian mass media structure, who are saying to this Senate, "We need this legislation." That is their message. That kind of wire is unique in the kind of unity it represents.

There were some other people in favour of the bill, including all three of the ministers who appeared before the committee. We heard from Mr. Faulkner, Mr. Cullen and from Mrs. Sauvé. Indeed, Mr. Faulkner appeared before the committee twice and was questioned extensively.

Senator Flynn: He had to correct his first appearance.

Senator Davey: He did appear twice, Senator Flynn, and I thought he was far more effective the second time he came than the first.

Senator Flynn: I hope so.

Senator Davey: The point I want to make is that no one in this Senate, no member of the committee, can deny that the questioning was extensive, and sometimes, I felt—and this is just my opinion—in a spirit that bordered on antagonism. Nonetheless, every question asked was, I felt, dealt with effectively by the minister. I urge honourable senators who are not members of the committee and who did not attend meetings of the committee to read the committee proceedings of the dates when Mr. Faulkner and the other two ministers, for that matter, appeared before the committee.

Our most compelling witness, by far—I should not say “our,” because it would seem to imply that I am a member of the committee, which is not the case. I am sure Senator Hayden is relieved that I am not a member of the committee. The most compelling witness the committee heard—

Senator Smith (Colchester): I think you were using the pronoun “our” in another connotation.

Senator Davey: Well, I think, Senator Smith, even you might agree with me that one of the more compelling witnesses we heard was Harry Boyle, Chairman of the CRTC. Had I spoken on this matter later this day, which I thought would have been the case, I would have had sufficient time to find a quotation from the speech of Senator Hayden on second reading. I cannot put my hand on it, but he will be familiar with the commendation he had in that speech for the CRTC, a commendation which I commented on in closing the debate, and a commendation which I share. I think most honourable senators have an extremely high opinion of the CRTC, of its former chairman and, indeed, of its current chairman, Harry Boyle.

Following the hearings with the American border stations—and I will be talking about that in a moment or two—I was troubled by some of the things they said, so troubled that I made it my own business to contact Harry Boyle to ask him a series of questions about some of the things the American broadcasters had been saying. Mr. Boyle sent a letter to me, which was subsequently tabled and which found its way into the committee report. I want to quote from the last paragraph of Mr. Boyle's letter to me which, as I say, was placed in evidence before the committee. I remind honourable senators again that Mr. Boyle is the Chairman of the CRTC, the man who, perhaps, is more responsible than any other Canadian for broadcasting policy in this country. He said:

I should note for your information that in 1971 the Commission recommended to the Government that the provisions of the Income Tax Act should be amended in order to offset the heavy financial involvement of U.S. border stations in the Canadian broadcasting system.

The letter is dated June 9, and goes on:

The Commission continues to support the broadcasting aspects of Bill C-58—the legislative proposal that is presently before the Senate Committee, and considers the legislation vital for the continued development of the Canadian broadcasting system.

In the course of his presentation to the committee, Mr. Boyle said:

Mr. Chairman, the point here is that you are charged with a mandate—

He was speaking of himself.

[Senator Davey.]

—the federal broadcasting mandate, to administer broadcasting; and within the parameters of that you are told what you should do. There should be a strong, healthy Canadian broadcasting system. The frustration of it is that you cannot administer it because someone outside takes over and has prerogatives which you cannot overcome in your own sovereign country.

The people supporting the bill and the people urging us to pass the bill without amendment are the people involved day-by-day in the media business in this country, the government, the ministers responsible, and Mr. Boyle, the Chairman of the CRTC.

• (1600)

I should now like to take a moment or two to discuss who it is that opposes the bill, because the bill has received a great deal of opposition; certainly it did during the course of the hearings. For openers, there are all those American companies who, with their oh-so professional, highly skilled lobbyists, have a vested interest in the status quo. There are, for example, the American border television stations, who are understandably unhappy at the prospect of losing such a lucrative set-up. The exchange with the Buffalo stations was most revealing, and I should like to quote from the committee report. I was questioning the representatives from the Buffalo stations on June 9 as follows:

SENATOR DAVEY: ... I would like to read a quotation from the Broadcasting Act. It says:

The Canadian broadcasting system should be effectively owned and controlled by Canadians so as to safeguard, enrich and strengthen the cultural, political, social and economic fabric of Canada.

I may say that the Broadcasting Act passed the House of Commons, and passed the Senate unanimously; so we are on record as endorsing, as one of the purposes of the Broadcasting Act: “to safeguard, enrich and strengthen the cultural, political, social and economic fabric of Canada.”

I would like to ask each of you how your station enriches or strengthens the cultural, political, social and economic fabric of Canada.

MR. BEUTH: In answer to that, senator—and I include in my answer another reference to the Broadcasting Act, which says that the right of all persons to receive programs should not be denied. I think those two are at issue with each other, because on the one hand it says that the importation of U.S. signals on Canada is not restricted—and therein, I think, lies the problem with which we are faced; those two sections of the Broadcasting Act are at odds with each other. I do not see any of that language as reason to take our product and deny us an opportunity to be compensated for it.

SENATOR DAVEY: When Bill C-58 passes, will you be forced out of business?

MR. BEUTH: I speak only for myself and not for the other stations. No, I would not.

SENATOR DAVEY: Would either of the other stations be forced out of business?

MR. BEALL: No, we would not be forced out of business.

MR. ARRIES: No.

There was another exchange in that hearing with the Buffalo stations. I asked them if they would tell me the total amount of their advertising sales in Canada since their inception here. There was a good deal of discussion back and forth about what that meant. I suggested it would be $100 million. I still regard that as a conservative estimate. The Buffalo stations said they thought it was not that high. Perhaps, indeed, it was not. Mr. Beall said he would be delighted to supply the committee with the figures. I don't believe, Senator Hayden, the Buffalo stations have supplied those figures. If they have, I have not seen them. I asked:

In that time period during which you have taken this money out of Canada, which I think would be over $100 million, how much money have you paid in taxes in Canada?

Well, of course you know what the answer was. No money has been paid in taxes in Canada. I asked how much money had been reinvested in Canada. You know the answer to that. No money had been reinvested in Canada.

Then, honourable senators, we came to the hearing at which Time Canada appeared. At the time of the hearing, of course, Time had packed up, bag and baggage, and gone home to New York, but was willing to return to appear before the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, no doubt hoping, hoping against hope, for some kind of deathbed reprieve, or at least some kind of delaying action by the committee. It was an empty performance in that everything Time Canada said before the committee they had said countless times before in other places and on other occasions.

Meanwhile, Time Canada, which is now published in New York—I said this in opening the debate, I said it in closing the debate on second reading, and I find it necessary to say it again here—freely circulates in Canada. Its advertising rates are cut in half in a clear attempt to defy the spirit of the legislation. Subscriptions to Time for Canadians are now $30 a year, even although Newsweek, which carries no Canadian advertising, can be obtained on an annual basis for $19.50. Remember all those lost jobs we used to hear about, that if Time left Canada the printing would be done elsewhere, that there would be all kinds of jobs lost? The fact, of course, is that Time continues to print in Canada.

I had a brief exchange with Mr. LaRue on the question of where Time is printed. I will not now read that. I appreciate your time and patience. The fact is that Time is still printed in Canada because that is the only way legally Time can sell advertising in Canada. A magazine printed outside Canada cannot, under existing legislation, carry more than 5 per cent of its advertising directed to the Canadian market, so let no one be under the impression that Time is doing us a great favour by printing in Canada. Time is printing in Canada—and Mr. LaRue conceded this to me at the hearing—because it must if it is to continue to sell advertising in Canada.

Other opponents of the bill include, expectedly, the Association of Canadian Advertisers and the Institute of Canadian Advertising. Those are multinational advertising trade associations. As I have stated before in the debate, but let me again put it on record now, these organizations opposed the Canadian content requirements for television and radio, and those requirements were introduced five or six years ago. The ACA and ICA opposed those particular requirements; they opposed them in practically the same words that they used in opposing this particular legislation.

Honourable senators, perhaps some of my friends in this debate, perhaps some of the people who will support me in opposing these amendments, will suggest that I should not raise the intervention by the American ambassador, but I should like to touch upon it very briefly. The United States ambassador, as you certainly read, made what I regard as a very curious intervention into the business of the Senate. I described it as a regrettable intrusion and had my knuckles rapped by members of the committee. I still think it was a regrettable intrusion, and one which, in the form it took, as far as I have been able to determine,—and I have been trying to find out—is absolutely unprecedented in the history of this chamber. I agree completely with an editorial which appeared in the Montreal Gazette on Friday, June 11, and which I should like to quote in part. I agree entirely with the thrust of this editorial, which said:

In principle, one can agree that a national government can be expected to make representations on behalf of its citizens abroad, if it finds their case to be valid, and that Parliament should have the opportunity of considering these views. The problem in the present case is that the U.S. representations come so late in the day, appearing to be an attempt to undo the work of government and Commons by an attack through the soft under-belly of the Senate.

The governmental structure in Canada is different from that of the United States. While this country could get itself into a lot of trouble by making representations to Congress that would embarrass the executive, the President is nevertheless not subject to votes of no-confidence. There is a separation of powers. In Canada, with the government responsible to Parliament, representations by the U.S. to Parliament that run contrary to government policy are a touchier matter.

● (1610)

As I say, perhaps most honourable senators do not share that particular concern of mine, but it was an honest concern. I apologize if I embarrassed honourable senators by pressing that concern in my terms of English. I think you would expect me to say what I believe. I still think that intrusion was unnecessary.

I have talked about the people who have urged us to pass this bill, the men and women who work every day in the media. I have indicated who the people are who want us to delay this bill through amendment or any other technique, for that matter, notably those who have a vested interest in what was a very healthy status quo.

I should now like to say a word or two about the position of the committee itself. I was pleased last night when Senator Hayden assured us that he supports what the bill is trying to accomplish. That was reassuring to me because such support from honourable senators has not been easily apparent in this debate. In the debate on second reading, ten members of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce spoke; all but one, my leader, Senator Perrault, opposed the bill.

As sponsor of the bill I found it difficult, in attending the committee, to conclude other than that the cards were stacked against me. Nothing in the ensuing weeks has disabused me of that notion. I assure the house that I do not relish a confrontation of any kind with any senator, least of all the august chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce. My concern is in no sense personal. This is, I think for all of us, a matter of principle.

I agree with what Geoffrey Stevens wrote in the Globe and Mail the other day, as follows:

A prudent bettor would think twice before wagering against Senator Hayden. The Banking Committee is the Senate's blue-ribbon committee. Its recommendations tend to be regarded as Holy Writ by the Senate as a whole. Senator Hayden, 80, who is the dean of the Senate, is probably the most influential single member of the Upper House.

As I say, I agree with that. Maybe I even agree with the next sentence:

He carries more clout than Senator Ray Perrault, the government leader.

Well, I do not know about that, but I certainly agree with the other.

I must say that I was a little less impressed with Stevens column on the preceding day. Stevens, of course, is writing in a newspaper which, as I have explained at other times in this chamber, and I will not go into it today, has a vested interest in Time remaining in Canada because the same company which owns the Globe and Mail owns the company which prints Time Canada. In any event, Stevens, who is himself, of course, a former writer, a former employee of Time magazine, the day before he wrote his accolade for Senator Hayden, said as follows:

Bless the senators' pointed little heads.

I will not make any comment on that. He then went on to say:

I am not, and never have been, a great fan of the Senate of Canada. (When you get right down to it, the Senate Fan Club is one of the more exclusive associations, restricted as it is to senators themselves, members of their immediate families and those prominent supporters of the party in power who avidly read the Ottawa death notices while waiting and dreaming of the golden day when they, too, may be summoned to a seat in the august Red Chamber.)

That is an opinion which I do not share. Geoffrey Stevens has written at other times that the Senate should not be simply a rubber stamp for the other place, and certainly that is an opinion I share, for I do not believe that the Senate should be a rubber stamp for what happens in the other place. By the same token I do not believe that the Senate should be a rubber stamp for whatever is reported by the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, no matter how much all of us respect that committee's work and, indeed, its chairman.

[Senator Davey.]

I now turn to conclude with a brief discussion of the amendments which have been offered by the committee. First of all, as to retroactivity, as Senator Hayden has pointed out there are many precedents for retroactive legislation. He said he favoured retroactive legislation when it favours the taxpayer. Surely, there are a great many Canadian taxpayers who stand to benefit, albeit indirectly. In addition, surely concerned senators and others concerned must have known, as reasonable people, that this legislation was coming. The bill was placed on the Order Paper in the other place almost a year and a half ago and it has been actively discussed on Parliament Hill by all parties for more than five years. Indeed, I want to say to my Conservative friends that a working paper which the Conservative Party had prior to the 1972 election espoused this particular proposal. I want to say to my Liberal friends that in the last three national policy conventions of the Liberal Party of Canada this proposal was accepted by the delegates. Two conventions ago it was accepted by 82 per cent of the delegates. This was the big convention attended by about 3,000 Liberals from coast to coast. At the last convention it was passed unanimously by the convention delegates.

Senator Riley: Dealing with the 80 per cent content?

Senator Davey: Eighty-two per cent, Senator Riley, of the people attending the convention supported the principle of a special privilege.

Senator Riley: Not the 80 per cent content; that is an expression of the minister.

Senator Davey: I will deal with that in a moment or two.

I have more difficulty, and I know honourable senators have a great deal of difficulty, with the exemption for MD of Canada, the exemption suggested in one of Senator Hayden's amendments. I concede at once that in a sense MD of Canada is an innocuous publication, but it is an innocuous publication which could quite easily order its affairs to stay in Canada.

Honourable senators, exceptions got us into this bind in the first place and this requested exception would eventually halt those Canadians who have the will to mount this exact kind of a publication.

Then there is the concern about the implementation for broadcasting. I shared concern about the date of implementation when I introduced the bill on second reading. I said then that I felt the date of implementation of the broadcasting section of the act should have been upon royal assent. The government felt that that particular proclamation should await the finding of better time availabilities, particularly in the Vancouver market. As I am sure all honourable senators know, a new television station is going on the air—is it in September or October, Senator Perrault?

Senator Perrault: September 1.

Senator Davey: This new television station will go on the air in Vancouver on September 1 with, of course, the appropriate availabilities. I would imagine that if the Senate passes the bill without amendment, proclamation would be sometime this summer now that that station is ready to go on the air.

Certainly, the most vexing issue—it is the one which concerns my friend Senator Riley and which was certainly the thrust of Senator Cook's speech and about which I submit there is some misunderstanding—is the decision not to go to court under section 173 of the Income Tax Act. That was not done because Time, as publisher, would not qualify as a taxpayer. The minister did not agree to Time Canada's request for two specific reasons. First, it would be inappropriate because Time Canada's taxes were not affected. So, it was the department's feeling that those whose taxes were directly affected should be involved in litigation.

The second reason was that Bill C-58 was still before Parliament and it was inappropriate for the minister to refer a question to the courts before enactment of the bill. Time Canada then proposed to have an advertiser go to court with the Department of National Revenue under section 173. The minister again was unable to agree for two specific reasons. Bill C-58 was still before Parliament and it was inappropriate for the minister to refer a question to the court that assumed enactment of the bill. Secondly, to get an interpretation of "not substantially the same" it is required that a magazine be capable of being defined as such by the court. Time Canada's then existing issues were clearly not suitable; consequently, a mock-up would be needed to enable the court to provide a positive and useful interpretation. Section 173 provides for determination of a question of fact or law. A mock-up or a hypothetical magazine would be inappropriate for reference to the court.

● (1620)

The Senate amendment indicates that this reasoning has been misunderstood, that the decision not to go to court under section 173 was based on the fact that Time, as the publisher in this case, is not the taxpayer and therefore does not qualify as one of the parties under section 173.

In any event, the minister has publicly stated that should his department be taken to court under the normal appeal procedure by an aggrieved advertiser, and should the court's decision be unfavourable, the government will proceed with necessary measures to legislate the definition of "substantially the same." The 80 per cent interpretation is government policy. There are, in fact, precedents for passing legislation which changes legislation to reflect government policy. Such legislation would not, of course, be retroactive and the advertiser would enjoy short-term benefits from the court decision. However, any long-term benefits would be nullified by government legislation.

The question then arises: "Why does the government not proceed forthwith to enact legislation to define 'substantially the same'?" At the time of the discussion of Bill C-58 in the House of Commons, this was not possible as it required a new notice and a ways and means motion. However, honourable senators, I understand that the minister will give an undertaking that he is prepared to support with Cabinet approval the ways and means motion in the fall to put the interpretation of "substantially the same" into legislation. No doubt my leader will have more to say about this in the course of the debate.

It only remains for me to thank you for your attention and to urge your support for this bill without amendment. As I said at the outset, and as I repeat in concluding my remarks, a great many Canadians involved day by day in the business of producing media are watching and waiting hopefully.

Hon. Norman McL. Paterson: Honourable senators, having listened to Senator Davey I merely wish to point out that every single thing he has said proves conclusively that the publishers are coming on their bellies begging the government to put their competitors out of business. Why can't people fight and compete and win out, instead of asking the government to pull their chestnuts out of the fire for them?

On motion of Senator Lang, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 5.45 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

ROYAL ASSENT

The Honourable Wishart F. Spence, O.B.E., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, having come and being seated at the foot of the Throne, and the House of Commons having been summoned, and being come with their Speaker, the Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to give the Royal Assent to the following bill:

An Act to implement conventions for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax between Canada and France, Canada and Belgium and Canada and Israel.

The Honourable James Jerome, Speaker of the House of Commons, then addressed the Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General as follows:

May it please Your Honour:

The Commons of Canada have voted certain supplies required to enable the Government to defray the expenses of the public service.

In the name of the Commons, I present to Your Honour the following bills:

An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1977.

An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1977.

To which bills I humbly request Your Honour's assent.

The Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to give the Royal Assent to the said bills.

The House of Commons withdrew.

The Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to retire.

---

The sitting of the Senate was resumed.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

Senator Grosart: I would like to ask the Deputy Leader of the Government what the program is for tomorrow.

Senator Langlois: This is the normal adjournment. We will resume tomorrow at 2 o'clock, and carry on with consideration of Bill C-58 and Bill C-88. At 8.45 this evening the Commons will vote on the Medical Care bill, and if that comes to us in time we will be dealing with it tomorrow as well.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

---

APPENDIX

(See p. 2278)

CONFLICT OF INTEREST

REPORT OF STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE ON LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Tuesday, June 29, 1976.

The Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, to which was referred the Green Paper entitled "Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest," tabled in the Senate on April 9, 1975, has, in obedience to the order of reference of April 10, 1975, examined the same and now reports as follows:

Your committee endorses the principles and objectives set forth in the Green Paper.

With respect to some of the specific proposals and related clauses of the "Discussion Draft of Independence of Parliament Act," your committee finds that they require amendment for purposes of clarification and effective application and, therefore, recommends as follows:

PROHIBITED FEES

(Green Paper, Proposal 3)

Your committee considers that the provision relating to prohibited fees set out in Proposal 3 and recommended for incorporation in the Rules of the Senate should more properly be part of a code of conduct for Senators, discussed later in this report, rather than a rule of the Senate since it specifies a practice that Senators should observe in their conduct inside and outside the Senate rather than a rule of procedure in the Senate.

In addition, your committee considers that this provision, as set out in the Green Paper, should be more specific in its wording if it is to serve as a precise and effective rule of conduct designed to eliminate conflict of interest situations. Accordingly, your committee recommends that this provision, as a rule for Senators, be amended to read as follows:

"(1) A Senator shall not

(a) advocate, support or promote any matter, thing, cause or course of action in the Senate or among Senators or Members of the House of Commons, or

(b) intercede with public servants or government bodies in respect of any matter, thing, cause or course of action, if,

(c) in return for so advocating, supporting, promoting or interceding, the Senator is paid or accepts a sum of money, fee or other reward, or

(d) the Senator acts as an adviser or consultant to, or is employed in any other capacity by, any individual, firm or corporation that has a direct pecuniary interest in such matter, thing, cause or course of action or is a director, officer or manager of the corporation.

(2) A Senator shall not represent any individual, firm or corporation before a federal board, commission or other tribunal in a matter in which a right or interest of that individual, firm or corporation is subject to a decision or order of an administrative nature if,

(a) in return for so representing that individual or corporation, the Senator is paid or accepts a sum of money, fee or other reward, or

(b) the Senator acts as an adviser or consultant to, or is employed in any other capacity by, that individual, firm or corporation or is a director, officer or manager of the corporation."

INCOMPATIBLE OFFICES

(Green Paper, Proposal 5)

1. Prohibited Federal Offices

(Draft Act, subclause 10(d))

Your committee is of the opinion that the prohibition against Members or Senators holding federal offices should be a prohibition relating to the remuneration for such offices. The Senate and House of Commons Act, paragraph 10(a), prohibits a Member of the House of Commons from holding any office, commission or employment with the federal government to which remuneration of any kind is attached. No such prohibition is now applicable to Senators.

Your committee, therefore, recommends that subclause 10(d) of the discussion draft, which is part of a list of prohibited offices, be reworded as follows to include the underlined words:

"(d) any office, commission or employment whereby the occupant or holder thereof is appointed by or under the authority of the Governor in Council, the Treasury Board, any Minister or other officer of the Crown or any department, agency or corporation set out in any of the schedules to the Financial Administration Act, under any enactment or otherwise to which any salary, fee, wage, allowance, emolument, or profit of any kind is attached;"

Your committee further recommends that, if this recommendation to include the underlined words is adopted, a provision be added to clause 10 to ensure that where a Member or Senator occupies a federal office, commission or employment to which no remuneration is attached, the Member or Senator is not precluded from receiving an allowance for expenses reasonably incurred in the discharge of the duties of that office, commission or employment.

2. Prohibited Provincial Offices

(Draft Act, subclause 10(f))

Your committee is of the opinion that not every office, commission or employment under the authority of a provincial government, if occupied by a Member or Senator, would violate the concept of the division of powers between the federal and provincial jurisdictions. Your committee, therefore, considers that a Member or Senator should be permitted to accept a provincial office, commission or employment if it is of a temporary nature or is an office, commission or employment to which no remuneration is attached and if it does not in any way involve the federal government.

Your committee also suggests that the word "commission" be added to the first line of subclause 10(f) of the discussion draft so that this clause will be consistent with subclause 10(d).

Your committee, therefore, recommends that clause 10 be redrafted in part as follows:

"10. (1) No Member or Senator shall hold any of the following offices, commissions or employments:

(f) any office, commission or employment under the authority or control of a province of Canada or under the jurisdiction or control of any foreign government.

(2) Subsection (1) does not prohibit a Member or Senator from holding an office, commission or employment referred to in paragraph (f) if

(a) it is of a temporary nature or it is an office, commission or employment to which no remuneration is attached, and

(b) the duties or functions of the office, commission or employment do not in any way relate to matters that involve the federal government."

3. Elected Public Office

Your committee concurs with the recommendation of the House of Commons Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections that there be a specific prohibition against Senators and Members of the House of Commons holding elected public office under the authority or control of a provincial or municipal government.

Your committee also agrees with that committee's further recommendation that a Senator or Member of the House of Commons be required to resign all other elected public offices within a period of six months from the date of his appointment or election, as the case may be, in order to continue to be eligible to retain his or her seat in Parliament.

GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS

(Green Paper, Proposal 9)

1. Prohibited Contracts

(Draft Act, clauses 2 and 3)

Clause 3 of the discussion draft provides that "no Member or Senator shall participate, directly or indirectly, in any government contract". Clause 2 defines the word "participate" as meaning, among other things, "having a beneficial interest in the contract... being a shareholder, an officer, a director... of a corporation that is a party to the contract or... being the spouse of a person who is a party... to the contract".

Your committee considers that, since each meaning of the word "participate" in clause 2 is modified in clause 3 by the word "indirectly", the use of that word in clause 3 gives the clause a meaning that, when applied to certain situations, is too wide and imprecise. Your committee believes, for example, that there is no reason to distinguish between a direct and an indirect beneficial interest in a government contract. The use of the word "indirectly" in clause 3 also produces an absurdity when read with other meanings of the verb "participate". For example, how could a person be "indirectly" an officer or a director of a corporation that is a party to a government contract or how could a person be "indirectly" the spouse of a party to the contract?

Your committee is also of the opinion that a Senator is not in a conflict of interest situation merely because he is a shareholder or a director of a corporation that is a party to a government contract or whose wholly-owned subsidiary is a party to the contract.

Your committee, on the other hand, considers that it should be provided in the proposed legislation that there is a conflict of interest situation if a Senator owns 5 per cent or more of the shares of a corporation that has a government contract or whose subsidiary, whether wholly-owned or not, is a party to the contract, if the Senator's spouse or dependent child is a party to or owns 5 per cent or more of such shares, or if the Senator and the Senator's spouse and dependent child have a combined holding of 5 per cent or more of such shares.

Your committee also considers that it should be provided that there is a conflict of interest situation if a Senator is an officer or manager of a corporation that is a party to the contract or whose subsidiary, whether wholly-owned or not, is a party to the contract.

Your committee also considers that there is a conflict of interest when a Senator who is a director of a company intercedes with public servants or government bodies on behalf of that company in any matter in which that corporation has a direct pecuniary interest, and it is for this reason that your committee has recommended, in respect of proposal 3, that Senators be specifically prohibited from so interceding.

Your committee, therefore, recommends that the words "directly or indirectly" be deleted from any general prohibition, such as the one set out in clause 3 of the discussion draft, that the substantive provisions set out in the definition "participate" be incorporated in clause 3 and that it be provided in clause 3, at least in so far as that clause applies to Senators, that a Senator contravenes the Act if, in relation to a government contract,

(a) the Senator is party to or has a beneficial interest in the contract,

(b) the Senator is an officer or manager of a corporation that is a party to the contract or whose subsidiary is a party to the contract,

(c) the Senator owns 5 per cent or more of the shares of a corporation that is a party to the contract or whose subsidiary is a party to the contract,

(d) the Senator's spouse or dependent child is a party to or owns 5 per cent or more of the shares referred to in paragraph (c), or

(e) the Senator and the Senator's spouse and dependent child have a combined holding of 5 per cent or more of such shares.

2. Permitted Participation

(Draft Act, subclause 4(2))

Subclause 4(2) of the draft Act permits a Member or Senator to participate in government contracts if the amounts paid or to be paid pursuant to the contracts do not exceed in the aggregate the sum of $1,000 in any fiscal year. Your committee agrees with the recommendation of the House of Commons Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections that this exemption of $1,000 be increased to $5,000.

Your committee, however, draws attention to the fact that, even with such an exemption, the prohibition in clause 3 of the draft Act could create problems in outlying areas where the only available supplier of essential goods or materials is a business in which a Member or Senator has a substantial interest.

3. Knowledge of Participation in Government Contracts

Your committee is aware that, because of the large number of contracts entered into annually by various government departments, corporations and agencies, it can sometimes be difficult for a Member or Senator to know whether or not a company in which he owns 5 per cent or more of the shares has entered into a government contract.

Your committee believes that this problem can best be met by the diligence of Members or Senators in keeping themselves informed of the activities of those companies in which they, their spouses or dependent children have combined or separate holdings of 5 per cent or more of the shares.

4. Broadcasting Licences

Your committee notes that the Green Paper does not deal with the question of whether or not a Member or Senator should participate in or derive any benefit from licences for television, radio and cable television issued by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

There would appear to be some inconsistency in prohibiting a Member or Senator from participating in government contracts and yet permitting such a Member or Senator to own or have a substantial interest in a broadcasting undertaking or to participate in an application for a licence issued by the CRTC which, in many cases, has an intrinsic value many times more than the suggested $5,000 exemption mentioned above with respect to government contracts.

Your committee notes that there is a provision in the Broadcasting Act for the Governor in Council to issue directions to the CRTC respecting the classes of applicants to whom broadcasting licences may not be issued. Your committee believes that consideration should be given to the question of whether or not Members or Senators should be included in such a class. Your committee further suggests that a review of the other legislation involving the granting of licences be considered for the purpose of determining whether a similar question arises.

FINANCIAL INTERESTS

(Green Paper, Proposal 15)

Your committee concurs with the recommendation of the House of Commons Committee that an office of Registrar be established. The Registrar for the Senate would receive the disclosures that Senators would be required to file under the Rules of the Senate and the proposed Act. He would also on request give advice, either verbally or in writing, provide Senators with information on matters of conflict of interest and issue a set of forms for the use of Senators. The committee further recommends that the Clerk of the Senate be appointed as the Registrar for the Senate.

Your committee recommends that every Senator be required, within six months of assuming office or within six months after the coming into force of any legislation relating to conflict of interest and on May 31st of each year thereafter, to file with the Registrar a list of the companies in which the Senator, or the Senator's spouse or dependent child, has a beneficial interest through the holding of shares or has an interest as a holder of bonds, debentures or other securities (excluding bonds, debentures and notes issued or guaranteed by the government of Canada, a province or any other public body in Canada) either in an individual capacity or through a private investment company, a partnership or a trust in which the Senator has an interest.

As recommended by the House of Commons Committee, such disclosure would be made to the Registrar on a confidential basis and would not be made public, except under the terms of a court order or on the request of a Senate committee investigating a specific allegation of conflict of interest.

Your committee agrees with the recommendation in Proposal 10 of the Green Paper, as set out in subclause 7(1)(b) of the discussion draft, that all Members and Senators be required to register annually with the Clerk of the House or the Clerk of the Senate, as the case may be, a list of those companies of which they are officers, directors or managers. Your committee recommends that there also be a requirement to disclose the number of shares held by Members or Senators in such companies. Your committee also agrees with the suggestion in the Green Paper that there be public access to this information.

Your committee has considered the suggestion that Senators be required to file copies of their annual income tax returns but does not feel that this would serve any useful purpose. In the report of the Joint Committee of the Australian Senate and House of Representatives on Pecuniary Interests of Members of Parliament (September, 1975), it was concluded that the filing of income tax returns "would constitute neither an adequate nor an appropriate form of registration of pecuniary interest". Among other reasons, the Australian Joint Committee felt that such disclosure would lower the confidence of the general public in the observance of the secrecy requirements of the income tax legislation.

Your committee, therefore, recommends that a Senator be required to produce a copy of his income tax return only if requested to do so by a Senate committee investigating a specific allegation of conflict of interest.

SANCTIONS AND ADMINISTRATION

(Green Paper, Proposals 18 and 21)

1. Public Recourse

(Draft Act, clause 16)

Your committee is of the opinion that the provision in the draft Act allowing public recourse where the Attorney-General of Canada has failed or refused to institute proceedings could lead to many frivolous applications and should be deleted. Since the Green Paper provides that the Act is to be enforced by the Attorney-General of Canada who is responsible to Parliament and since a member of the public may at any time approach a Member or Senator from his area or communicate with the chairman of the appropriate Committee on Privileges established pursuant to Proposal 21 if that person considers that there has been a violation of the law, your committee is of the opinion that this is sufficient to provide a proper balance between the need to preserve the integrity of Senators and the need to ensure that there is adherence to the provisions of the legislation relating to conflict of interest.

2. Committee on Privileges

Your committee is of the opinion that consideration be given to the establishment of an appropriate standing or special Senate committee, or a subcommittee of the Senate constituted as a committee of the whole on privileges, whose terms of reference in relation to matters of conflict of interest would, pursuant to the suggestion contained in Proposal 21 of the Green Paper, be

(a) to investigate all questions of conflict of interest referred to it by the Senate,

(b) to provide Senators on request with advisory opinions, and

(c) to advise the Senate, from time to time, of any changes that in its opinion are needed in conflict of interest legislation.

CODE OF CONDUCT

Certain proposals in the Green Paper contain recommendations for rules that would serve as basic guidelines to be observed by Members and Senators in avoiding conflict of interest situations. Such rules relate to the conduct of Senators outside the Senate and, as such, could not properly form part of the rules of procedure in the Senate. Proposal 3, which relates to prohibited fees and Proposal 17, which relates to the management of private investments and the use of confidential information, are two such recommendations.

Your committee recommends that consideration be given to the drafting of a code of conduct that would incorporate these and other recommendations of a like nature. Such a code could form an essential adjunct to the Rules of the Senate and could serve as a guide to any committee investigating a conflict of interest situation in which the principles embodied in the code are alleged to have been violated.

Respectfully submitted.

H. Carl Goldenberg,
Chairman.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, June 30, 1976

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

MEDICAL CARE ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-68, to amend the Medical Care Act.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read a second time?

Senator Perrault, with leave of the Senate, moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading later this day.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report of the Canada Labour Relations Board for the first 25 months of its operations ending March 31, 1975, pursuant to section 210(2) of the Canada Labour Code, Chapter 18, Statutes of Canada 1972.

Report of the Department of External Affairs for the year ended December 31, 1975, pursuant to section 6 of the Department of External Affairs Act, Chapter E-20, R.S.C., 1970.

Report entitled "Halifax Relief Commission 1918-1976," issued by the Minister of Finance.

Report of the President of the Medical Research Council, including accounts and financial statement certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 17 of the Medical Research Council Act, Chapter M-9, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the National Farm Products Marketing Council, including a statement of expenses, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 16 of the Farm Products Marketing Agencies Act, Chapter 65, Statutes of Canada, 1970-71-72.

Report of the Standards Council of Canada for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, including its financial statements certified by the Auditor General, pursuant to section 20 of the Standards Council of Canada Act, Chapter 41 (1st Supplement), R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the President of the Federal Business Development Bank, including accounts and financial statements and the auditor's report thereon, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to sections

75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter 10, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of agreements made under the Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 7 of the said Act, Chapter A-6, R.S.C., 1970.

REGULATIONS AND OTHER STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS

NINTH REPORT OF STANDING JOINT COMMITTEE PRESENTED

Senator Forsey, Joint Chairman of the Standing Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, presented the ninth report of the committee as follows:

Wednesday, June 30, 1976.

The Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments has the honour to present its ninth report as follows:

In accordance with its permanent reference, section 26, The Statutory Instruments Act, 1970-71-72, c. 38, your committee proposes to continue its review and scrutiny of statutory instruments during the adjournment of Parliament in the summer of 1976.

Your committee therefore recommends that for this purpose, and notwithstanding an order of the Senate of Tuesday, October 29, 1974, respecting the quorum of the committee, the joint chairmen be authorized to hold meetings during the forthcoming summer recess to receive and authorize the printing of evidence when three members of the committee are present, provided both houses are represented.

Respectfully submitted,

Eugene A. Forsey,
Joint Chairman.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Senator Forsey: With leave, honourable senators, I should like to propose that it be considered now. It is, I think, entirely non-controversial.

Senator Flynn: Well no, I think I would like to think it over during the weekend.

Senator Forsey: I yield at once to the Leader of the Opposition.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Forsey, seconded by the Honourable Senator Bonnell, that this report be placed on the Orders of the Day for consideration at the next sitting of the Senate. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Motion agreed to.

• (1410)

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday next, July 6, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Honourable senators, before the question is put I should like to give a brief summary of the work for the coming week.

Next week we will continue with the debate on the report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on Bill C-58, to amend the Income Tax Act; the second reading debate on Bill C-88, to amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act (No. 2); and Bill C-68, to amend the Medical Care Act, as well as other items on the Order Paper. At this time there are no meetings of Senate committees scheduled for next week.

Motion agreed to.

WEDNESDAY SITTINGS—HOUR OF ADJOURNMENT

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 47(2), I move that the Order of the Senate of May 6, 1976, that until the Senate adjourns for the summer recess the Senate shall adjourn at three-thirty o'clock in the afternoon on Wednesdays, be rescinded for this day only.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Motion agreed to.

AGRICULTURE

MOTION TO AUTHORIZE COMMITTEE TO PUBLISH AND DISTRIBUTE ITS REPORT ON KENT COUNTY, NEW BRUNSWICK

Senator Argue, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(i), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture be authorized to publish and distribute its report on Kent County, New Brunswick, as soon as it becomes available, even though the Senate may not then be sitting.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Senator Flynn: I was wondering whether Senator Argue does not intend to be here next week. If he does, there is no rush.

Senator Argue: I expect to be here this coming week, but I thought we should have this done now. If the Leader of the Opposition wants to think about it over the weekend, he may do so.

Senator Flynn: I might as well add that to my list.

[The Hon. the Speaker.]

Senator Forsey: You will have a busy and arduous weekend.

Senator Flynn: Leave is not granted.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

CANADA-UNITED STATES BOUNDARY—QUESTION

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, I should like to ask a question of the Leader of the Government in connection with the 200-mile limit and the extension of Canada's international boundary with the United States seaward. Has the government a policy with respect to the demarcation line on Dixon Entrance on the Strait of Juan de Fuca, George's Bank and northwards from the Alaska Yukon boundary?

If the government has such a policy, would the Leader of the Government outline it in the house and report on the current state of negotiations with the United States?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, because of the detailed nature of the question I must take it as notice. I do not have that information available at the present time.

THE HONOURABLE FREDERICK WILLIAM ROWE

FELICITATIONS ON PUBLICATION OF BOOK

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, unless there are other questions, I should like to mention some additional appropriate literature which could be read over the holiday weekend.

It is gratifying to note the rare degree of dedication which the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition brings to his onerous responsibilities. I can think of few leaders in public life who on Canada Day would choose to read the report on Kent County, New Brunswick, despite its undoubted merits, and who would choose to read, as well, the report of the Standing Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, presented today by our distinguished colleague, Senator Forsey. The thought of the Leader of the Opposition sitting on his patio reading those two documents on Canada Day is edifying, to say the least.

Senator Flynn: It can also be done on the golf course.

Senator Bourget: He would not get leave from his wife.

Senator Langlois: Perhaps he can read them while sitting by his new swimming pool.

Senator Perrault: Or perhaps while waiting to tee off at the tenth hole.

An Hon. Senator: No, the nineteenth.

Senator Perrault: This brings me to a point I should like to make briefly. As honourable senators are aware, we have some authors in our midst. A number of senators have authored distinguished works, essays, books, and articles, quite apart from a copious production of speeches.

I have in my hand a book written by Senator Rowe entitled, Education and Culture in Newfoundland. I have had an opportunity in recent hours to leaf through it, and I recommend that this work, too, should be packed along with the honourable leader's golf equipment.

Senator Flynn: No, it should be read at night.

Senator Perrault: Yes, it is deserving of serious reading at night, and on any other occasion. This book seeks to tell the story of what has happened in that great province of Newfoundland, educationally and culturally, as a result of the decision, which all Canadians welcomed, of the Newfoundland people to become a part of the Canadian nation in 1949.

For this story to be meaningful to other Canadians, obviously our colleague felt it essential that the historical, racial, religious and economic factors that helped to shape the Newfoundland economy and culture prior to 1949 be fully understood. Accordingly, the book contains a great deal of background historical material.

This book will be of special interest to Canadian educators and those interested in specific cultural matters, but it is also designed to have general appeal. As Senator Rowe points out in the book, it is his opinion, shared by many other Canadians, that the unique developments which have occurred in Newfoundland, particularly those resulting from the impact of membership in the Canadian nation, are of interest to all Canadians.

This is the third major work by Senator Rowe dealing with cultural matters as they relate to his native province, and, as many senators know, he has been the author of numerous newspaper, magazine and encyclopedia articles dealing with almost every aspect of Newfoundland's life and culture.

Senator Macdonald: Honourable senators, before the Leader of the Government proceeds further, would he please tell us where we might obtain a copy of this work by Senator Rowe?

Senator Perrault: I am sure that Senator Rowe will be outside the door taking orders after today's sitting. I am not aware as to whether or not a senatorial discount applies.

Senator Phillips: I am sure the Honourable Senator Macdonald was looking for a complimentary copy.

Senator Perrault: Several years ago, my predecessor in office—

Senator Flynn: Who was that?

Senator Perrault: —the Honourable Paul Martin, had the privilege of bringing to the attention of his colleagues in the Senate a publication by Senator Yuzyk, another of the authors in our midst, whose work in interpreting the aspirations and special needs of certain minority groups in Canada has received widespread approbation. I am sure that all members of the Senate are similarly appreciative of the role that Senator Rowe is undertaking as part of his responsibilities, namely, that of interpreting his native province to the rest of Canada. He deserves the congratulations of all of us. I hope many copies of the book are sold and distributed, and I commend it to honourable senators.

Senator Greene: Could the government leader inform the Senate whether he has a piece of the action in Senator Rowe's book?

Senator Perrault: Unfortunately, no, but I have been given a complimentary copy.

Senator Walker: I can think of no one who is a greater authority on Newfoundland, and an honest authority, than Senator Rowe, who has done more than any other Liberal outside of Joey to develop that great province.

Senator Buckwold: I should like a complimentary copy.

Senator Walker: Try to get one.

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT BILL (No. 2), 1976

DATE OF INTRODUCTION IN THE SENATE

Senator Asselin: Honourable senators, I would ask the Leader of the Government if it is true that the third reading of Bill C-84 in the other place has been postponed until the fall and that there is some possibility this bill will not be introduced in the Senate this session?

• (1420)

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I am unable to provide definitive information on that subject at the present time. The work scheduled in the other place has gone far beyond expectations and some basic decision may have to be made in the next few hours about the disposition of the remaining work. I will endeavour to have a report for this chamber as soon as I receive it myself.

CITIZENSHIP BILL

THIRD READING—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) for third reading of Bill C-20, respecting citizenship.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I adjourned the debate yesterday, not because I did not want Senator Croll's moving speech to be the last word on the record in this matter but, first, because I wanted to compliment him on his speech, even though there were some parts of it I thought I had heard before.

The second reason is that during the debate on the amendment moved by Senator Laird to clause 33, Senator Connolly said that the discussion would probably be more effective if the bill were referred back to committee. I think so too. I am not going to go over the proposed amendment again, but the opinions voiced during the discussion showed considerable doubt concerning this part of the bill. Yet, I'm afraid that yesterday's vote did not accurately reflect that concern. For example, if Senator McDonald had been here he would have added another voice to the dissenting opinion.

It might be a good thing for the bill to be referred back to the committee just to hear the minister on whether he would accept one of two things. The bill could be amended so that clause 33 would come into force only on proclamation, and that would permit further study of this matter to be undertaken. If that kind of amendment were made—and I think it would be approved without any difficulty in the other place in a matter of minutes—one of the things that could be done would be to refer the matter to the Supreme Court of Canada for a decision on its constitutionality, because some very practical problems are involved.

Secondly, perhaps we could obtain an undertaking from the minister that as soon as the bill passes he will arrange to put the question to the Supreme Court, so as to warn the provincial governments and the lieutenant governors in council not to use that authority before a decision has been made on its validity.

I think, therefore, to refer this bill back to committee would be the sensible thing to do. I do not insist but I think under the circumstances it would be a responsible decision to make, and I hope that Senator Connolly will change his mind and support the suggestion he made yesterday.

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, I made a suggestion yesterday and I do not think I want to change my mind about it. If there is real concern about clause 33, then perhaps the Leader of the Government would like to think about the suggestion Senator Flynn made. There was, of course, no reference in the committee to the possibility of referring the clause to the Supreme Court of Canada for a ruling. We did not consider that specific point when the Minister of Justice was present. The question of proclamation I believe is in the clause itself. I think it can be proclaimed separately.

It might be helpful to the Senate if I were to say a few words about clause 33, in addition to those of yesterday. I do feel, as I said yesterday, that this is a rather difficult forum in which to discuss detailed, complicated legal propositions such as we have here. I feel a little as if I should be addressing honourable senators as "my learned friends" or "mes savants confrères," when I have to talk on an issue of this kind.

The clause which is giving some honourable senators concern is clause 33, particularly subclause (2) and subclause (3). Perhaps it might be helpful if I put a few more remarks on the record, and, in a different way, about those subclauses.

I think it fair to start out by saying that only the federal authority has power to legislate in respect of aliens. That authority is to be found in section 91, head 25, of the British North America Act. To prohibit, annul or restrain the taking of real property in a province by a person who is not a Canadian citizen, the federal authority proposes by this clause to qualify a delegate or an agent. That is what subclause 33(2) says. It clothes that agent with the authority to act in respect of prohibiting, annulling or restraining the taking of an interest in real property by an alien.

Having granted the authority to take this kind of action, the form of action that is to be taken is to be in accordance with subclause 33(3). The effective method of doing these things is by the issue of regulations under the authority of this proposed federal act. These regulations are not issued in accordance with provincial legislation. They are federal regulations and they have the usual safeguards attached to federal regulations, such as scrutiny by the Office of the Clerk of the Privy Council and the Deputy Minister of Justice, and compliance with the regulations under the Statutory Instruments Act.

Some honourable senators asked why the lieutenant governor in council was chosen to be the agent. I am informed that the reasons for this are threefold. First, the lieutenant governor in council of the provinces has knowledge of local conditions, and particularly in respect to the ownership of land within the province by both non-residents and by aliens.

• (1430)

Secondly, in the provincial government, the lieutenant governor in council has control of certain facilities which deal with land tenure, particularly the land registration laws and the land registration offices.

Thirdly—and I think this is a cogent reason for us to take note of—if the agent, the delegate, were a federal person, a federal board or a federal agency of some kind, then in addition to lacking the first two requirements I have outlined, there would be involved the setting up another federal agency with more bureaucracy and the expenditure of a great deal of money.

Now, this kind of thing has been done before. I gave some examples yesterday, not all of which were particularly impressive to me, but which had been supplied by officials of the Department of Justice. By way of a further example I should like now to refer to the Agricultural Products Marketing Act, Chapter A-7 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1970, and to quote subsection 2(1) which reads as follows:

The Governor in Council may by order grant authority to any board or agency authorized under the law of any province to exercise powers of regulation in relation to the marketing of any agricultural product locally within the province, to regulate the marketing of such agricultural product in interprovincial and export trade and for such purposes to exercise all or any powers like the powers exercisable by such board or agency in relation to the marketing of such agricultural product locally within the province.

That is a broad power of delegation given to any provincial board or agency to make a regulation under a federal act, and not only in respect of local matters but in respect of interprovincial and international matters.

In the present case the agent, the delegate, is a single unit, but one which is alive to the requirement of land tenure within the province, one which can be assumed to know what the feel of the people of the province is with respect of land tenure insofar as aliens are concerned.

I hope that with these few words I have been of some help to members of the chamber who are concerned about this clause.

Senator Forsey: I wonder if Senator Connolly would permit a question. I want to be quite sure that in the quotation he gave from the Agricultural Products Marketing Act certain words did occur. I understood him to say that that act contained words equivalent to "any board or commission, and so forth, authorized by provincial legislation." It seems to me that if those words are there, as I think they are if I caught what Senator Connolly said correctly, they might have a bearing on the subject.

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West): With respect, Senator Forsey, the point I was making was that under the bill before the Senate at this time it is proposed that the delegate be the lieutenant governor in council. That is one specific entity within the organization in the provinces which is selected. In the case of the Agricultural Products Marketing Board, I said the net was cast a great deal wider. The agency appointed to make the regulations under that act is any agency within the province, whether it is appointed locally or not.

Senator Forsey: But under provincial legislation? The words "authorized under the law of any province" occur there. With respect, I suggest they might be material.

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West): Certainly under provincial legislation, yes.

Senator Greene: Will the honourable senator permit a question? I wonder whether clause 33 makes any difference to the Supreme Court decision of 1975 in Morgan et al vs. Attorney-General for Prince Edward Island, et al which held, if I read the learned Chief Justice's judgment correctly, that in the absence of federal legislation making it an incident of citizenship to hold land anywhere in Canada, then a province could prevent a citizen who was not a resident of that particular province from holding land there. Does it enhance Canadian citizenship in any way to make it a right of citizenship to hold land anywhere in Canada, or under the term "alien", to which the honourable senator has referred, can the provinces still treat a fellow Canadian citizen from another province as an alien and prevent him from holding land in that particular province by provincial legislation? Is anything changed by this?

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West): Honourable senators, yesterday I discussed the impact of the case of Morgan et al vs. Attorney-General for Prince Edward Island et al. That matter was decided originally by the Supreme Court of Prince Edward Island in Banco, and it then came before the Supreme Court of Canada. There were no dissenting judgments in either the Court of Appeal or the Supreme Court. The case simply confirmed the validity of the legislation passed by the legislature of Prince Edward Island, which denied the right to non-residents of Prince Edward Island to own land in any quantity larger than a parcel of ten acres, or more than five chains along the shoreline. The prohibition was a broad one. It affected not only foreigners who might come into Prince Edward Island, but also Canadians resident in other provinces. The courts found that any province was entitled to pass legislation of this kind because the pith and substance of that Prince Edward Island legislation was property and civil rights within the province.

This is a long answer, perhaps, to a short question, but what this proposal does, in effect, is to reduce the size of the net, and reduce the amount of the prohibition. No province could pass legislation prohibiting foreigners from owning property within the province, because the right to pass legislation with reference to foreigners or aliens is a prerogative of the federal government under section 91, head 25, of the British North America Act. What this legislation now does is establish, as the agent of the federal government, the lieutenant governor in council of a province, and it authorizes the lieutenant governor in council to regulate the holding of land in the province simply in respect of aliens. It is, I suppose, an invitation for Prince Edward Island to cut down the ambit of its legislation, and to restrict it to foreigners.

I hope that is helpful to Senator Greene.

Senator Grosart: I believe there is before the house a suggestion from the Leader of the Opposition that the Leader of the Government take into consideration certain proposals that the Leader of the Opposition was making. I am not sure that the Leader of the Government was listening at the time, but two proposals were made by my leader, who has unfortunately been called away on a very urgent matter. I would like to have an answer from the government leader to the suggestions of the Leader of the Opposition before we carry on the discussion.

● (1440)

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the idea proposed originally was to have the Minister of Justice testify before the committee on some of the technical aspects of this bill. I can only point out that this bill was before that committee for seven weeks, and at one point the minister was there. It has been extremely difficult for the minister to find time to testify in view of his onerous responsibilities in connection with important measures in the other place—capital punishment and law reform. I have been unable to secure any assurance at all that it will be possible to have the minister meet the committee again. He has, as I said, testified before the committee, and made himself available for the questions of any senator on these technical points. So I cannot give the chamber the assurance that we would be able to secure the testimony of the minister on a return appearance before the committee.

I regret very much that some honourable senators were unable to attend any of the committee meetings which extended over a seven-week period. It is unfortunate that personal scheduling difficulties apparently occurred, but honourable senators have had ample opportunity to direct questions to the minister. It was my hope that the information given us by Senator Connolly would serve to allay any fears, and answer any questions, honourable senators may have. On that basis I would urge that the question be put.

Senator Grosart: The Leader of the Opposition made another suggestion, and perhaps the Leader of the Government would care to comment on it. That is why I suggested earlier that the government leader may not have been listening at that particular moment. The Leader of the Opposition made the alternative suggestion that there might be an undertaking that these controversial sub-clauses (2) and (3) of clause 33 be not proclaimed until their constitutionality is determined. I believe that was the second suggestion made by the Leader of the Opposition. I suggest to the government leader that perhaps he would like to consider obtaining that undertaking.

The point is that in all this excellent debate that we have had on this bill—and I say it is an excellent debate because it is one of the best I have ever heard in this chamber, and certainly the references to the explanations given by Senator Connolly are well deserved—Senator Connolly did not come back to the point raised by the Leader of the Opposition which was the question of the constitutionality of this delegation of legislative or administrative power, whichever it may be. Senator Connolly, as I understood him, defended it on the ground that it was a transfer, and he gave some precedents, of administrative authority. I think it is clear that it is much more than administrative authority. It is very definitely the authority to make law in a field constitutionally occupied by the Dominion.

Honourable senators, this seemed to me to be an excellent alternative suggestion. I might say in passing that the use of precedents which we have often heard brought forward to justify legislative action does not impress me at all because I do not believe the concept of precedent applies in this field in any way. It is understandable that those who are learned in the law tend to rely on the principle of judicial precedent for entirely different reasons, but the fact that something has been done by a government or by Parliament on another occasion does not, to my mind, justify doing the same thing on a second occasion. They may have been wrong in the first place. But that was not the essential point raised by Senator Connolly, who said that there are precedents for this transfer of federal jurisdiction—and that is what it is—and power to the lieutenant governor in council of a province.

The matter that appears to be at issue, certainly in the mind of the Leader of the Opposition, as I understand it, is as to whether this is constitutional. What would be the effect if the lieutenant governor of a province, using this alleged new power, were to take certain action which was found later to be unconstitutional? The problems of ownership, registration and so on of property would be very complex. Therefore, I urge the Leader of the Government—and we are not in any great hurry; we shall be here next week—to take under consideration that suggestion, if the former one is not acceptable, and discuss it with the minister.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I would make just a brief statement by way of outlining the chronology of events which led up to this proposal by the government. I do not intend making a long statement.

First of all, insofar as the second suggestion is concerned, I shall certainly undertake to bring this recommendation to the attention of the Minister of Justice so that he may give it serious consideration, and I give that commitment to the honourable senator. Beyond that, I cannot, of course, announce policy on the matter.

The precursor to this clause which has caused difficulty for some honourable senators provided that property of every description might be acquired by non-Canadians in the same manner as by Canadian citizens. In May 1973 a committee of federal and provincial officials—and I emphasize that these officials came from all of the provinces, and represented every political party in this country—was established to study legal problems, mainly constitutional problems, associated with the control of foreign ownership of land. This committee was established by first ministers—it included, I understand, a representative of the Province of Ontario—because foreign ownership of land was a matter of growing concern. The committee in its report—and this was the opinion concurred in by our counterparts who serve in provincial governments—identified what is now clause 33 of Bill C-20 as one mechanism for avoiding constitutional problems in controlling foreign ownership of land. The problem arises because Parliament, as honourable senators are aware, has legislative jurisdiction under section 91(25) of the British North America Act with respect to aliens, while the provinces have jurisdiction, under section 92(13) of the British North America Act, with respect to property and civil rights in the provinces. In other words, the federal government sought to obtain an absolute consensus among the provinces of Canada.

The Prime Minister subsequently wrote to all provincial premiers stating that the federal government was prepared to amend the Citizenship Act as set out in the committee report, with the addition of a qualification that the authority granted to provinces could not be used to undercut decisions made under the Foreign Investment Review Act. The correspondence between Alberta and the Prime Minister on this subject was tabled in the house on November 6, 1975.

Clause 33 as passed in the other place, and as it is before us, would allow the lieutenant Governor in council of a province to impose conditions, including complete prohibition, on non-Canadians owning land. At the same time it will not allow the provinces to use the authority delegated in ways that would conflict with other federal policy.

● (1450)

Thus, it will not allow provinces to use the authority to restrict ownership of land by landed immigrants; or in ways that would conflict with federal international obligations or policies; or so as to prevent acquisitions by non-Canadians which under the Foreign Investment Review Act have been judged to be of "significant benefit" to Canada.

Clause 33 will only come into force in a given province when declared to do so by proclamation of the Governor in Council. Therefore, those provinces which do not want to regulate foreign ownership of land and consequently do not wish to set up administrative machinery for that purpose will not be required to do so, since clause 33 need never be declared in force in that province. At the same time, those provinces that wish to impose controls will be able to do so.

The authority granted is only to control or prevent future acquisitions of land by non-Canadians. It does not authorize provinces to upset land holdings presently held by non-Canadians. Of course, when the present owners dispose of their land they may be required to dispose of it only to Canadian citizens.

A basic purpose of clause 33 is to enable provinces to control ownership of land by non-Canadians so that they will not restrict ownership by persons resident outside the province, thereby controlling foreign ownership. When provinces restrict the rights of persons resident outside the province, Canadian citizens resident in other provinces in Canada, as well as aliens, are prevented from owning land in that province.

This is the chronology of events. It has not been an arbitrary action on the part of the federal government but was done in close and full consultation with all provincial governments. It is intended to meet a problem which has been developing in many provinces, including the Atlantic and western provinces and central Canada, where much of the prime land is being purchased by those from other countries, denying access to Canadians to what it is felt by many to be their heritage.

Honourable senators, I will undertake to bring to the personal attention of the Minister of Justice the concerns which have been expressed by Senator Grosart. I cannot go beyond that at the present time.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, in view of the undertaking given by the Leader of the Government, I do not wish to pursue the matter much farther, except to say that we thank him for the chronology which he had given us before. It serves a useful purpose at this time. However, I would indicate to him that the point raised was not whether consent of the provinces had been secured. I, perhaps, should compliment the government on the rather unusual approach to federal-provincial relations in seeking the consent of the provinces to the extent it did in this case. I believe I can understand why, because all the federal government was doing was giving the provinces some part of the federal power, so there was no reason whatever why the provinces would object. It was also giving them a power which they already had, the power under the Morgan case and other cases which have been cited, to do the very thing that they may do under this amendment; that is, they already had the power to restrict land ownership to residents.

Now, as I understand it from the excellent explanation by Senator Connolly, all the amendment does is give the provinces a method of dividing those who will be prohibited into two classes: aliens and non-residents. That is all it does. It does not add any power that the provinces did not already have if they had wished to use the general exclusion of all non-residents.

I am not arguing whether it is a good or a bad amendment. I return to the point raised by the Leader of the Opposition, which is the constitutionality of this particular type of delegation. In other words, is this the right manner in which to do it? This is what the Leader of the Opposition has asked be taken into consideration before proclamation of clause 33. In the remarks which he just made, I believe the Leader of the Government has given an excellent "out," if I may use that word, because as I understood him he said that this amendment would not come into effect in any province until proclaimed by federal order in council for that province. That is my understanding of the remarks of the Leader of the Government. If this is so, then here is the mechanism already constituted for the government to accept the proposal of the Leader of the Opposition and merely undertake that it will not take the necessary steps by order in council to make this amendment effective until it has ascertained the constitutionality of the action.

Senator Bonnell: Honourable senators, I did not intend to speak to this motion but I should like to say a few words because Prince Edward Island has been mentioned several times today.

A little over 100 years ago Prince Edward Island had a serious problem, in that foreign landowners, from England, Scotland and Wales, controlled our lands. We joined Confederation to get that land back in the hands of our people. While I was a member of the Government of Prince Edward Island we amended the Real Property Act to provide that an alien could not own more than five acres of our land without the consent of the lieutenant governor in council. We were informed that the province did not have the power or the right to decide who was an alien, or to become involved in immigration matters, which were under federal jurisdiction. The only means by which we could preserve our lands for our farming people was by stipulating that no non-resident could buy land in Prince Edward Island. That prohibition would include Canadians from Saskatchewan, Alberta, Nova Scotia and the remainder of the provinces. That was not the wish of the people of Prince Edward Island, who only wanted to keep the land away from Americans, many of whom had been coming to the province and speculating, buying thousands of acres of prime shore property. Year after year, this land had been bought up by Americans, who would just sit on it, allowing yellow weeds to grow in. It would not be farmed and could not be purchased or used. They were sitting there, waiting to sell it to someone in Florida or New York at a tremendous profit. Somehow or other the province had to protect its people and keep that land in use so that the top six inches of the soil could be used by our people. The only way in which we could do that was by prohibiting non-resident land ownership. Now, with the assistance of the federal government which is prepared to make this change, we are able to say that such prohibition applies only to aliens, and that Canadians may buy land on Prince Edward Island and come there to live.

Let us not continue to procrastinate; let us get this bill through today, as fast as we can, before the million acres we have there now are sold to Americans. We wanted to be part of Canada in 1873; we do not wish to be bought out by America in 1976. Let us pass this bill with due dispatch.

Senator Lang: May I ask my colleague a question? How do the laws of Prince Edward Island as they now stand, or as they may be amended after passage of this bill, affect resident aliens of Prince Edward Island?

Senator Bonnell: If they are Canadian citizens, as I understand it they will be able to buy land; but if they are aliens, just because they come and spend three weeks in Prince Edward Island it does not entitle them to buy half of the province and own it while residing in the United States. They must become Canadian citizens.

• (1500)

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West): Under clause 33(1) an alien is entitled to own land in Canada.

Senator Macdonald: Honourable senators, I move the adjournment of the debate.

Senator Bonnell: Honourable senators, let us continue this debate.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Macdonald, seconded by the Honourable Senator Grosart, that the debate be adjourned until the next sitting of the Senate. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Motion agreed to.

INCOME TAX ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE—DEBATE
CONTINUED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Hayden, seconded by the Honourable Senator Bourget, P.C., for the adoption of the Report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on the Bill C-58, intituled: "An Act to amend the Income Tax Act".—(Honourable Senator Lang).

Senator Lang: Honourable senators, I rise to stand this order. I gave notice to the Whip this morning of my intention to do so, in order that I might yield to any honourable senator who might wish to speak on the order this afternoon. I am not sure that any honourable senator wishes to do so, and, if that is the case, I shall ask that this order stand.

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, I am prepared to participate in the debate this afternoon. I hope to be succinct and constructive in saying a few words in respect of Bill C-58 which is now before us.

Since the early part of this year, I have been a member of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, and in my capacity as a member of that committee I have heard all, or very nearly all, the witnesses who have appeared before the committee regarding this bill. I have also read the reports of the evidence given to the committee, as well as much of the debate which took place in the other house.

I did not enter lightly into my duties as a member of the committee. Over many years of service in Ottawa, I have been aware of the respect in which the committee is held, and rightly held, and its contribution to better government in Canada.

I had, and have, great respect for its long-time chairman, Senator Hayden, who has been marvelously successful in piloting through his committee many items of controversial legislation, and in improving them while doing so. He has been successful too in gaining a spirit of reconciliation among many of those whose natural tendencies might otherwise not have gone in that direction.

As the work of the committee began on Bill C-58, it was apparent that there were many and varied points of view among committee members and that it would take a fair measure of Senator Hayden's talents to bring the committee to a constructive conclusion.

For my own part, I have had many concerns about the bill and I determined to hear the evidence impartially and objectively. I believe I have done that and I believe also that any perusal of my substantial participation in the questioning of witnesses will demonstrate that I had no goal other than to understand the purposes of the bill and its impact on the publishing and broadcasting communities.

Many issues have been raised both for and against the bill. On second reading, and again in this debate, we have had them arrayed for us. However, as Senator Hayden and I agreed in committee, the clear and main concern was with the question of the manner and nature of the definition of "substantially the same" in the Income Tax Act. Who was to say what this phrase meant and what should be its application? Was it enough that the Minister of National Revenue should say that it would require an 80 per cent difference in material before he would agree that something published was not substantially the same? Would the minister have that authority? What was the plain meaning of the words, and what would a court of law rightly do? Had the taxpayers who might be affected been given a proper opportunity to be heard and proper notice of changes in policy?

They are not insignificant questions. They are questions which must be presented and given a proper answer if the Senate is to do its duty to itself and in the public interest. The issue of the definition of "substantially the same," and on whose authority any definition would be promulgated, is one which has concerned me from before the time I became a member of the committee.

As the committee hearings began, I was not content to believe that the 80 per cent rule, if I may call it that, could be the last word on the handling of the question. I was not content that the decision of the Minister of National Revenue was properly based as a ministerial decision.

In committee, the Honourable Bud Cullen, the Minister of National Revenue, responded to questions on those points by defending the appropriateness of his decision under his statute and under the case law. Frankly, I, and many others of the committee, were not convinced that we agreed with him either on the case law or on the basis of the statute. However, he did go on to say that apart from the law, which he believed supported his decision, he had taken the question of the 80 per cent rule to the Cabinet. He told the committee that the 80 per cent rule was a matter of government policy. He went on to say that if his decision was upset in the courts, the government would introduce a bill to legislate the 80 per cent rule into law.

Mr. Cullen also told us that he might have proceeded to legislate the 80 per cent rule into Bill C-58 but was prevented from doing so by House of Commons procedure which would not allow a second ways and means motion on the same matter in the same session.

Not long after Mr. Cullen's appearance before the committee I spoke to Senator Perrault, the government leader, to tell him that Bill C-58 was deficient with respect to the authority for the 80 per cent rule, and that the government should consider an amendment in the Senate; or, if time was not available in the House of Commons to deal with Bill C-58 as amended in this session, then to give an undertaking to the Senate that such a provision would be introduced in the second session of this Parliament to repair the matter which concerned me. Senator Perrault promised me that this suggestion would be considered, and I hope that in his participation in this debate he will give constructive advice on this matter to the chamber.

On the question of notice to the taxpayers affected, and particularly, in the present circumstances, Time magazine, I am satisfied, on the evidence of Stephen LaRue, president of Time Canada, that due and full notice of the policy had been given.

The evidence shows that the Honourable Ron Basford had announced to a Canadian Press correspondent in February 1975 that he was thinking of the definition somewhere between 60 per cent and 80 per cent in terms of content. It was this press story that gave renewed activity to Time magazine's effort to negotiate with the minister.

I do not deny that Time magazine is understandably unhappy with the 80 per cent rule, and also with the delay in the ministerial decision until October 1975. However, Mr. LaRue made it clear that Time was not misled by the minister or any official.

Senator Cook has referred to a memo in the Department of National Revenue that seems to refer to a possible 50 per cent decision. This memo was given to Time during a discussion with officials in May 1975. It was unsigned, and the evidence shows that it was never submitted to the minister. Also, my view is that a fair reading shows that it makes no conclusive point on the question of what is "substantially the same."

The 80 per cent rule has troubled me, honourable senators, and I believe the Senate committee has been correct in being similarly concerned.

My difficulty with the report of the Senate committee is that it does nothing more than set up a legal procedure that will give rise to litigation, and provide in the meantime a substantial uncertainty and unsettling character to the publishing industry in Canada.

We have heard evidence—and I believe Senator Davey was correct in offering that evidence—that the publishing industry has acted on the basis of government policy, as set forth in the bill, and of the approval of Bill C-58 by the House of Commons.

I hope that a possible solution to the difference between the report of the committee on the content rule and the position of the government lies in the direction of an undertaking, as I have mentioned, to the Senate that the decision will not be based on the minister's view of what is his statute and what might be case law, but on a parliamentary decision, a decision of the House of Commons and the Senate, with respect to the 80 per cent rule. So far as I am concerned, the 80 per cent rule, on the evidence we heard in committee, appears to be necessary in order to support the development of the Canadian publishing industry.

● (1510)

Dealing with section 3 of Bill C-58, the broadcast provisions, I was most troubled by many views being put forward in my own community with respect to the border station KVOS-TV. It has a wide following. In fact, the evidence before the committee by Mr. Mintz, its president, was that it received between 85 and 90 per cent of its total revenue from Canadian advertisers and attracted 85 per cent of the television audience of the lower mainland of British Columbia.

It is, in effect, a Canadian station. It has tried very hard and, I believe, honourably and sincerely to obtain resident alien status in Canada. The evidence before the committee showed that it has returned a good deal of its revenues to Canada by way of investment in production facilities and employment in Canada, both part time and full time.

I have agonized over the problem of KVOS-TV and have come to the conclusion, not easily, that section 3 should be advanced in legislation as it is presently drafted. The evidence given by Mr. Mintz in response to questions by me indicates that although the profitability of KVOS-TV will decline, he fully believes that it will remain competitive and profitable in the Canadian market and will provide good service, a continuing service, to the viewers of the lower mainland.

I am satisfied that the new Vancouver television station—which I believe will come on the air in September of this year—was based, in application before the CRTC and in public expectation, on the passage of section 3 of the bill.

With respect to MD and the provision to allow publications promoting fine arts and religion into Canada, again I have been greatly troubled. It would be my hope that the government would give consideration to an exemption in order to allow for the flow of materials that are more analogous to academic freedom than being a substantial impairment to the Canadian publishing industry. I would hope that there would be some flexibility in that regard. However, I should inform the chamber that I am not prepared to hold up my support for Bill C-58 and its passage through this chamber should the government insist on proceeding without any undertaking with respect to MD and similar publications. I will, nonetheless, support the bill.

I cannot support the report of the committee on retroactivity for publications from December 31, 1975 to December 31, 1976. I cannot support that proposed amendment simply because so many Canadians have acted, as I pointed out earlier, on the basis of the passage of this bill, and because I believe, essentially, that this legislation has beneficial public purposes and should be enacted.

With respect to the provision for the proclamation of Part III of the bill, I do not think that a case can be made for depriving the Canadian government of the legislative benefits of that particular provision in terms of its negotiations with the United States government on cross-border problems. I would like to see the government acknowledge that there are tensions in Canada-U.S. relations with respect to cross-border, trans-border communications. I would like to see the government make a statement about further discussions in this respect. However, when all is said and done, it seems to me that we have to provide our government with a strong hand in its negotiations with the United States in this difficult area, and not with a weak one.

Accordingly, despite my respect for the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, of which I am its newest member, and my high regard for Senator Hayden as its chairman, I find myself in opposition, on the first possible occasion, to a report of that committee which has been presented to the chamber. I ask the indulgence of the committee for that. I have stated my views. I have stated my position. I ask honourable senators to support the bill.

On motion of Senator Lang, debate adjourned.

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD ACT

BILL TO AMEND (NO. 2)—SECOND READING—DEBATE
ADJOURNED

Hon. A. Hamilton McDonald moved the second reading of Bill C-88, to amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act (No. 2).

He said: Honourable senators, Bill C-88, to amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act (No. 2), deals with only two matters. First of all, it provides that the members of the advisory committee to the Canadian Wheat Board be elected. Secondly, it provides for the arrangement of another pooling under the Canadian Wheat Board account with respect to malting barley. As a matter of fact, the second amendment is not confined to one additional pool of malting barley; it makes provision, pursuant to order in council, that from time to time new pools may be organized should the need arise. Some people are advocating pools for not only malting barley but for pearl barley and, perhaps, oats that are used for human consumption. It may be that other pools will be required in the future. This provision would give the Canadian Wheat Board the right to create such pools should the producers and consumers of this country deem it necessary.

Both these amendments are in response to requests from producers and producer-organizations. For some time there have been requests from producers to have an elected producer advisory committee. An advisory committee has been in existence almost from the inception of the Canadian Wheat Board, and it is my understanding that originally the advisory committee consisted of members of the grain trade and producers. Conditions changed from time to time as experience was acquired and the activities of the advisory committee were enlarged. It was only last fall that the new minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board, the Honourable Otto Lang, after consultation with producers and producer-organizations, came to the conclusion that the members of the advisory committee should be producers and should be elected by producers. Provision was therefore made to hold an election last fall and an 11-member committee was elected.

● (1520)

Then, of course, because this legislation was not in existence at that time, through an order in council those members who had won election were appointed to the advisory committee of the Canadian Wheat Board. As far as I know from talking to producers, to members of the Canadian Wheat Board and to people generally who are knowledgeable on this subject, they have found that this new system is probably the best that has so far been devised. The Canadian Wheat Board itself seems to be quite happy with the work of the advisory committee; the advisory committee seems to be making a contribution that the Canadian Wheat Board appreciates; it seems to be making a contribution to the producers and producer organizations in the Wheat Board area that both producers and producer organizations appreciate. I therefore think that, all in all, the new procedure is working out well for both the Canadian Wheat Board and the producers.

The bill also makes provision for the election of a new committee every four years. The next election will be held, of course, in 1978. If between elections someone resigns from the committee, or if a vacancy is created for some other reason, the bill gives permission to the minister responsible—the present minister is the Honourable Otto Lang—to appoint a member to fill the vacancy until the next election. In other words, there will not be by-elections. However, the new appointee to the committee will only fill that position until the next election.

The bill also makes provision for payment to members of the advisory committee, the cost of holding elections and expense accounts for members of the committee. It makes provision for at least six meetings per year between the advisory committee and the members of the Canadian Wheat Board. What is happening in fact is that the members of the advisory committee are performing some of the duties that are performed by provincial legislatures or members of Parliament. One could look at the Canadian Wheat Board as the cabinet and the members of the advisory committee as members of the legislature or Members of Parliament. The advisory committee members sit down with the Canadian Wheat Board and make recommendations to them. Certainly, they are not involved in the administration of the Canadian Wheat Board but they advise and bring to the Canadian Wheat Board the thinking of the producers and producer organizations.

Once the Canadian Wheat Board implements new policies, part of the duty and responsibility of the advisory committee members is to go back to the areas they represent and explain to and discuss with the producers and producer organizations why the Canadian Wheat Board is doing this and that. In addition to their perhaps legal responsibilities, if I may so term them, the members of the advisory committee have a moral responsibility, which they are accepting, to act as a public relations group between their fellow producers and the board, and between the board and their producers; it is a two-way street.

I repeat, the information I have been given to date would indicate that this advisory committee is doing a good job on behalf of the Canadian Wheat Board and the producers and producer organizations in the area of Canada that is under the Canadian Wheat Board.

The second provision under the bill sets up a pooling account for malting barley. At the moment the Canadian Wheat Board has four pools, one for red spring wheat, one for durum wheat, one for oats and one for barley. The intention under this bill is to create a second pool under the barley account. This account came into being because barley in Canada is sold chiefly for two purposes, for feed and for malting; it is a good malting barley and a good feed barley.

For many years there was very little agitation from producers to set up a separate barley account for malting barley only. There was reason for that. I can recall that many years ago, when you sent a sample of barley to find out if it could be accepted for malting, if you were successful you probably got from the maltsters, because they took your barley, a five cent premium over your No. 1 feed barley account. Generally the final payments made were not very much higher for malting barley than for barley that went into the feed trade. However, the situation has changed drastically, in that today malting barley draws a considerable premium over feed barley. I think that last year the premium would have been in the neighbourhood of $1 a bushel.

In each pooling account all of the costs associated with the handling and marketing of the grain that goes into that barley is deducted from the pool before the final payment is made to the producer. Because of the present situation, in which malting barley is drawing a considerable premium, which it appears will continue to be the case in the future, the malting barley producers have asked the Canadian Wheat Board to set up a separate pool distinct from the feed barley pool, and the Canadian Wheat Board and the minister are making provision to do this under the bill. This will mean that if there is a premium on malting barley it will not be disbursed to all barley producers across western Canada, but only to those who produce malting barley.

The producer of malting barley is involved in some extra costs over those for the production of feed barley. In the first place, with malting barley you must have excellent seed; you need a better quality seed than for feed barley. A cleaner crop is needed; you must make sure it is harvested dry, that no kernel is cracked and that the awn is not completely knocked off the end of it, because my understanding is that in the brewing process the first thing to do is to get the barley to germinate.

I don't know what you are muttering, Senator Grosart. You don't know any more about barley than you do about most subjects. If you don't want to listen to what I am saying you can leave.

I have no doubt that the farmer who takes the care and time to produce malting barley is entitled to a complete return from that barley rather than have part of it going to a producer who is attempting to grow only feed barley, and that is what this legislation provides for.

● (1530)

I want to repeat that as well as providing for pooling of malting barley, if in the future there is a demand for other pools, this legislation makes provision for it simply by order in council.

I can repeat that the legislation has been asked for by the producers and producer organizations in western Canada. I have heard no one disagree with the legislation. As a matter of fact, it provides for the barley accounts to commence as of August 1, 1975; in other words, the producers of barley in the crop year 1975-76 will be able to get full compensation under the barley pool in that the provision is retroactive to August 1, 1975. Of course, this crop year will end on July 31 next and it is my hope that the Senate can give speedy passage to this bill.

On motion of Senator Macdonald, for Senator Yuzyk, debate adjourned.

MEDICAL CARE ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Azellus Denis moved second reading of Bill C-68, to amend the Medical Care Act.

[Translation]

He said: Honourable senators, a lot was written and said in the other place, both in the House of Commons and in the Committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs, about Bill C-68 which I have the privilege to sponsor on second reading.

Over 50 members of the other place participated in the debates, without counting the third reading speeches that lasted nearly a week in the other place. So I fear that anything we might say here on this subject could only be repetitive and we could hardly improve on what has been said in the other place.

The purpose of Bill C-68 is to impose a ceiling on the increase in the cost of the federal contribution to existing medical health services and also legislate on any new insured service that could be provided after June 23, 1975.

Honourable senators, following the many consultations with the provinces and Canadian medical associations, and the debates in the other place, this bill originally introduced on July 8, 1975 was indeed substantially amended to meet most of the objections not only from the good members of the other place but also to a certain extent the objections that the provinces and the Canadian Medical Association have against this bill.

Concerning the existing medical health services, the part of the federal contribution for the year ending in 1977 will not exceed that of 1976 by more than 13 per cent, and the part of the federal contribution for 1978 will not exceed that of the previous year by more than 10.5 per cent. With respect to subsequent years the contribution will be set by order in council, of course after consultation with the provinces and the groups involved, including medical associations, and taking into account every time, every year, needless to say, the rate of inflation, the cost of living, doctors' fees, their number, their use and so on, unless an agreement is reached before then between the federal government and the provinces. Furthermore there will be a possibility that the order in council be challenged and revoked by Parliament should 50 members ask that such an order in council be discussed in the House.

Honourable senators, as you see, the ceiling for the year 1979 and subsequent years set out in the original bill were taken out and replaced in the way I mentioned earlier.

After reading the debates we realize that the opposition to the original bill mainly had to do with those ceilings for the third and subsequent years which, among other things, would reduce the effectiveness of existing services. In that respect, may I be allowed to refer to the reply of the President of the Canadian Medical Association, Dr. Grisdale, to a question which was put to him in committee by the honourable member for York Centre, as reported in issue 44, page 13, as follows:

[English]

MR. KAPLAN: So that 13 per cent ceiling is not going to damage the level of medical service in Canada, is it?

DR. GRISDALE: Right.

And a little further down:

DR. GRISDALE: No, in the brief, we have referred to the fact that we are not concerned in regard to the first two years.

[Translation]

As far as the provinces are concerned, they obviously prefer the present blank cheque system rather than a limited federal contribution, but these same provinces recognize that it is about time we should rationalize health care costs and look for less expensive operation methods without losing the efficiency of these services, and even allow the addition of new services. The meetings which the minister had with the various provinces have shown that their main objection had to do also with the 8.5 per cent ceiling set for rate increases in the third and following years. This ceiling has been dropped from the bill.

Honourable senators, Bill C-68 is also aimed at permitting the registration of new medical services introduced after June 23, 1975. As you can see, it is not a question of no longer helping the provinces; on the contrary, even new services are to be added to the existing ones.

With respect to these insured services, the 50 per cent share paid by the federal government will benefit only those who will provide these new services, and this percentage will be based only on the average in the provinces offering these new services rather than on a national average for all existing services.

Honourable senators, I wish to emphasize that this bill does not mean that the federal government no longer wants to be a full partner with the provinces in providing better medical services and even in offering new ones. This must be viewed as a rationalization of the system, as an effort to put a stop to the excessive increases in salaries and other costs. Finally, this is aimed at providing at a better cost the same medical services without impairing their efficiency.

In short, this is a call for planning, moderation and a search for less costly alternatives, from which the provinces cannot but benefit.

● (1540)

[English]

Even in the present difficult climate the proposed ceilings on federal medicare contributions will still permit increases in the contributions. Indeed, the average allowable percentage increase for the next two years is actually greater than the average increase experienced from 1971-72 through 1974-75 when there were no ceilings. Ceilings for the years after 1977-78 will take into consideration, among other things, the rate of inflation at the time, changes in the costs of practice which the medical profession must face and the earnings of other groups.

In brief, the federal government intends to remain a full partner in the hospital insurance and medical care programs. Certainly, its contributions will continue to rise substantially. It is estimated that in 1976-77 the contribution to medicare will total about $124 million more than in the current year, and the contribution to hospital insurance will total about $340 million more. That proves that we want to remain in partnership with the provinces.

[Translation]

Honourable senators, I must add as well that after the introduction of the initial bill, the government put forward last fall the anti-inflation program which will certainly contribute to reduce the increase in medical costs, so that the percentage provided in the bill before us will most likely not be exceeded.

[English]

Honourable senators, to sum up, the modifications of the initial act are:

First, to remove the fixed ceiling in the third year, 1978-79, and in subsequent years, as originally proposed in Bill C-68. In its place provision will be made for determination of a ceiling by order in council.

Second, to provide for the establishment of a separate national per capita for each new insured health service or class of health service to which federal sharing is extended under the Medical Care Act. This change will provide a mechanism to ensure that any increases in the federal medicare contributions for new, lower-cost insured services to rationalize and improve the health care system will go only to those provinces providing the new services under the medicare program.

[Senator Denis]

Third, to provide for a three-year exemption instead of a one-year exemption from the ceiling for new insured services. Application of any ceilings would only come into play subsequently as in the existing insured services.

Fourth, to allow any order in council ceiling to be revoked if 50 members of Parliament request a discussion on it.

These amendments have been designed to satisfy some of the concerns of the provinces and of the medical profession with whom the Minister of National Health and Welfare held extensive bilateral discussions during the latter half of 1975.

[Translation]

Honourable senators, as you certainly know, Canada has one of the best medical care services in the world and, naturally, I include the hospital care services from which Canadians also benefit. The federal government insists on doing its part of the work as do the provinces to maintain and improve these services from which we should all be proud.

Honourable senators, I have given you a brief summary of this bill and when we meet in committee to study it further, we will have the advantage of taking the advice of the experts of the Department of National Health and Welfare who will make it a duty to answer your questions.

I am pleased to propose that Bill C-68 be adopted on second reading.

[English]

On motion of Senator Grosart, for Senator Smith (Colchester), debate adjourned.

PUBLIC SERVICE

ACTION OF TREASURY BOARD IN RELATION TO RECLASSIFICATION OF ECONOMISTS, SOCIOLOGISTS AND STATISTICIANS—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Eugene A. Forsey rose pursuant to notice:

That he will call the attention of the Senate to the action of the Treasury Board in relation to the reclassification of the economists, sociologists and statisticians in the Public Service.

He said: Honourable senators, in spite of the fact that we have a rather thin house, I think I had better go ahead today with this inquiry which relates to a matter of, I think, some urgency and, in my judgment, of some importance.

I fancy that all honourable senators have received copies of a document issued over the signature of the president of the Economists', Sociologists' and Statisticians' Association of the Public Service dealing with the question which has arisen, the dispute, the conflict which has arisen between that association and the Treasury Board.

I should like first of all to lay a little background for the specific matter. As honourable senators are aware, under the present Public Service Staff Relations Act the question of classification is not subject to bargaining between the employer and the employees' organization, the union or association. As honourable senators are also aware, no doubt, under the recent report of the Joint Committee on Staff Relations in the Public Service it was proposed that in new legislation classification should be made subject to bargaining.

Now, in the statement that the association has sent to me, and I presume to all the rest of us, the association observes, and I quote:

Realizing that it—

The Treasury Board, that is.

Realizing that it is shortly to lose its exclusive power in this field, Treasury Board has recently carried out several reclassification exercises. Both the Information Officers and the Stenographers have recently been reclassified. In addition, attempts have been made to reclassify the Meteorologists, Mathematicians, and the Commerce Officers.

That is the end of the quotation. By the way, I hope the reporters will not say "quote" when they are putting down what I have said, because I have never used that word as a noun. I say "quotation." This modern American habit of using the word "quote" as a noun is one that irritates me beyond description. It is a bastardization of the English language.

Now, I interpolate here that when the association says that the Treasury Board realizes that it is shortly to lose its exclusive power in this field, it would be better advised to say "may shortly lose its power," because the question of revision of the Public Service Staff Relations Act, I think, is not one that can be assumed to have taken place already or to be so near at hand that one can confidently assume that all the recommendations of the special joint committee on the subject will be included.

Anyhow, the suggestion there is plainly—and I am afraid there may be something in it—that the Treasury Board has been attempting to jump the gun, fearing that it may lose its exclusive power in this field.

Now, to come to the specific question. The contract between the Economists', Sociologists' and Statisticians' Association and the government was to expire—well, in fact, it now has expired—on June 27.

One of the complaints of employees in the Public Service in relation to collective bargaining is that very often negotiations have been postponed until long after the expiry of the contract. There has been a good deal of comment on this and it has generally been derogatory comment. I think there has been derogatory comment in this house. There have been suggestions that some of the difficulties which have arisen in staff relations in the Public Service have arisen from the fact that negotiations were deferred or prolonged long past the expiry of the contract.

● (1550)

I have no hesitation in saying that I think that that is a deplorable situation when it does occur, and it does not contribute to good relations, or, indeed, to the public welfare.

Well, the Economists', Statisticians' and Sociologists' Association decided that it was desirable to get negotiations going well before the expiry of the contract, so it presented its proposals for a new contract to the Treasury Board on April 29; in other words, almost exactly two months before the expiry of the contract. Now comes something that is almost incredible. At 5 o'clock in the afternoon of April 28, the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Board, one Mr. Tennier—who, I should assume, from his name, may be of French ancestry, although it is probably a long way back, since I understand he is English-speaking—the very day before negotiations were to begin, conveyed to the association that the Treasury Board intended to abolish the old classification structure and replace it with a new structure, the exact nature of which had not been decided. I emphasize those words: "the exact nature of which had not been decided."

When I heard this, and I heard it from a member of the association before I got this document from the president, I could scarcely believe my ears. I thought they must have handed in their portfolio, to borrow a phrase from P. G. Wodehouse, and when I got the document I could scarcely believe my eyes. The kindest thing one can say about this kind of action on the part of the Treasury Board is that it is absolutely insane. You do not need any particular knowledge of industrial relations to realize the complete boneheadedness and the provocative nature of this action, you only need a little bit of ordinary common sense. If you are going into negotiations with an organization—negotiations which will undoubtedly include some proposals for changing the amount of remuneration for different classifications of employees—you do not, the day before, almost literally at the eleventh hour, say, "Well, boys and girls, we do not need to go into too much in the way of negotiations on this because you can propose new remuneration, alter remuneration, improve remuneration or change remuneration for this, that or the other job, but the jobs are going to disappear. You don't know what jobs are going to be there."

I never heard of such a thing. I cannot imagine what demon can have possessed the people at the Treasury Board who did this. Well, anyway, this is what they did, and the association naturally protested. I am quite aware that the Treasury Board had the legal power to do this. The Treasury Board can do anything it likes; it can "faire la pluie et le beau temps", to use a French phrase, on this matter of categorization and reclassification. The association protested, naturally, saying—and I quote the president's statement directly:

—pointing out that the Treasury Board was not setting a good example to the departments in the method of consultation and was making a mockery of the Government's attempts to foster good labour-management relations in the private sector.

I think that can be characterized as a moderate statement, a restrained statement. The president's comments continue, and I quote again directly:

Nevertheless, although we were not consulted on the decision to terminate the old structure, we expressed our desire to consult on the one to replace it.

We indicated however, that if such consultation were to be meaningful, it should be conducted over a reasonable period of time, and should therefore be postponed until the current round of negotiations was over.

Assistant Secretary Tennier's reply was bureaucratic in the extreme.

Then comes a direct quotation from Mr. Tennier's reply, and Caesar Augustus from his throne could scarcely improve upon this:

It is a fact that the Employer has taken a decision to terminate the present five level classification structure, a decision fully in accordance with its responsibilities provided for in legislation.

This is undoubtedly accurate, and undoubtedly correct, but of an imbecility, if I may vary my term of abuse, that staggers the imagination.

The president of the association continues—and I quote directly:

He—

That is, Mr. Tennier.

—went on to reject our request for a postponement of action on the classification structure, arguing that a new structure could be introduced within two months, and suggesting the postponement of current negotiations until consultation has taken place. From a glance at the preliminary documents issued by the Treasury Board, there will be a considerable amount of red-circling (downgrading) of our members' positions, and if our members' interests are to be effectively safeguarded, the consultation process will be much longer than the two months suggested by Mr. Tennier. In fact, conversions have taken more than a year in some recent reclassifications.

I pause there to say that from my own knowledge I can say that "more than a year" is a very mild way of putting it. I know of one section of one department in which a reclassification went on for more than two years.

I might add that during that time no new staff could be hired and they took on a large number of people from Office Overload, or something similar, some of whom, at least, were not sworn in until one official insisted that they should be. They were handling cabinet documents, of whose sacredness we have heard a great deal, many times, but nevertheless they had not been sworn. He insisted that they should be sworn, and one of the other officials said, "We have no Bible here." The answer was, "I don't care what you've got. You've got to swear them on something." Then a Jewish member of the staff said he had a Talmud, so they were sworn in on the Talmud.

The suggestion, therefore, that the thing would only take two months is simply ludicrous. It is almost beyond belief, like so much else in this.

The president then says:

If we accept the suggestion of Treasury Board, negotiations could be protracted for over a year.

The president goes on to say:

It is our contention that Treasury Board is making a farce of the consultation process, disrupting the collective bargaining process, and contributing to deterioration of morale among federal employees.

That leads me to the last main point that I want to make. Again the president of this association is putting it very mildly when he says that this is contributing to a deterioration of morale among federal employees, and he might have emphasized, or italicized, the word "contributing." I do not know what other members of this house get on this subject from members of the Public Service, but I have repeatedly received, from a great variety of members of the Public Service, or former members of the Public Service, the most hair-raising accounts of the deterioration of morale in the Public Service of Canada over recent years. I want to say very emphatically that any suggestion that this is simply a by-product of the process of introducing bilingualism, or more bilingualism, into the Public Service, is not involved in what I am about to say at all. If there were no question of bilingualism there would still have been a disastrous decline in morale in the Public Service of Canada.

[Senator Forsey]

I want to say specifically that I have had reports on this subject from five different people, four of whom I know well and the fifth of whom I know a great deal about, and they are as varied a sample as you can possibly get. If I got this kind of report from one particular person, let us say some English-speaking public servant who felt that he had been passed over because a French-speaking public servant had been promoted over his head, or from a French-speaking public servant who felt he had been discriminated against because he was French-speaking and had not been advanced as he should have been, or from an immigrant of some particular variety who felt he had been discriminated against because he was an immigrant, or from a young person who felt he wasn't going ahead fast enough, or from an older person who felt that young people were being promoted over his head, I might have said, "Oh well, this is exceptional." But these reports that have come to me have not come as a request to me to do anything about the thing specifically, or to exercise any influence, or anything like that; they were merely given to me as a matter of information.

They have come to me first of all from a youngish French-Canadian whom I know very well, an extremely competent person, of excellent judgment and vast knowledge, who has been 17 years in the Public Service, and who, I may add, cannot say that he has been given any special favours because he was a French-Canadian—quite the contrary. He could very well say, in my judgment, that he had been passed over when he ought to have been promoted. Anyway, there is the first piece of evidence I get from this youngish gentleman—he may be in his late thirties or his early forties. And I get this story from him.

• (1600)

Then I get it from a retired, high, senior official of the public service, whom I have known for many years, and who is of British origin, and who comes from the Maritime provinces. I know him very well. All these people are people whose veracity and whose balance I cannot for one moment question.

Then I get it in the third place from a gentleman now retired who occupied a very high position indeed in the Public Service for many years. He is in fact an immigrant from the United Kingdom who came here many, many years ago and who occupied successively many positions in the Public Service, winding up in a very eminent position indeed. And he has, I think I may say, an international reputation in his field.

Then I get it from a European immigrant, a continental European immigrant, of my acquaintance who has now had many years' experience in the Public Service, and who had an important position in the public service of another country before he came to Canada some 20 years ago. It is more than 20 years ago, I think, because I have known him for about 20 years.

And I have it finally from an Asian immigrant, a man of very high professional qualifications in a very specialized field.

I don't want to specify more particularly what the qualifications of these people are or their origin because that might lead to somebody ferreting out who they were and cause some difficulty for them. But I get the same story from all of them, and one part of it, one important part of it is this: that constantly people are parachuted into department after department by and from the Treasury Board. Office on the staff of the Treasury Board is apparently the open sesame now to almost any kind of appointment you like. Over and over and over again somebody, sometimes very young—sometimes in his twenties—is bounced into a particular department and put over people of much greater knowledge and experience in that department. In one case a gentleman that I know now finds himself under the orders of a young lady, much younger than himself, whom he trained. Everything she knows about the job she learned from him.

I am not going to say that age and experience are the whole show—far from it. I am not going to say that we should not have new blood coming in, that we should not advance young people in the Public Service when they are qualified. But I do say that it is a very bad situation when official after official after official—and some of these people have given me the evidence of colleagues of theirs, some of whom have retired and some of whom are still there—but official after official after official finds that experience in a department, knowledge of the work of that department, is discounted as being of virtually no importance whatsoever. And when people who possess a Harvard business degree and who are still wet behind the ears and know nothing whatever of the job they are coming into and nothing whatever of the subject they are going to deal with are parachuted into these high positions as director general of this or director general of that—this is the worst possible kind of thing for morale in the public service and it is going on all the time.

There are some—and I don't want to use another strong term because I have used some very strong language already this afternoon and I must try to restrain myself—but there appears to be some notion, shall I put it that way, in high quarters that a degree in business administration is sufficient for everything; that if you can manage anything, you can manage anything else; if you can manage a grocery store, then you can manage a division of the Department of Health and Welfare or a division of the Ministry of Science and Technology or a division of the Department of the Environment or of the Ministry of Urban Affairs or what you like; that anybody can be picked up from a slot in one place where he is managing and put in a slot in another place where he is managing, and the question of whether he knows anything at all about what he is managing, whether he knows anything of the subject, is apparently of no importance.

It is like this loony idea you get in educational circles that the method of teaching is the only thing; it doesn't matter whether the teacher knows anything at all about the subject, but he must be skilled in all the methods, and I won't say the latest methods, taught in the United States, because our habit in this country in educational circles appears to be just to pick up the worn-out old clothes of American educational "experts"—in quotation marks—and then go parading around in these rags, these outmoded rags, under the pleasing delusion that they are the latest thing from Fifth Avenue.

Well, the same kind of delusion appears to be entertained by people in high positions in this country. I don't know quite who they are—somebody who apparently has immense power or some group of people who apparently have immense power—and they seem to think that as long as you have somebody trained in management, it doesn't matter two hoots in Hades whether he knows anything at all about what it is he is managing. This is the kind of thing that is leading to the deterioration of morale in the Public Service, serious deterioration, grave deterioration and, if it goes on, disastrous deterioration. Then on top of all this, these people, these noodles, these possessed people—I don't know how to describe them in parliamentary language—come along and do a crazy thing like this. How on earth anybody who is even grown up and in possession of a moderate proportion of his wits, let alone people holding positions of high authority in the Government of Canada, can do or countenance this kind of thing is absolutely beyond me.

When I got this document I saw red and I was determined that the whole subject should be given in the Senate immediately, or as soon as I could do it, such ventilation as I was capable of. I have now done that, and I hope it has roused some members of this house to investigate these matters further. And I hope some echo, in spite of the fact that there is nobody in the press gallery as usual, I hope some echo of these remarks of mine—which may be considered intemperate but which I can assure you, honourable senators, I could have made much stronger without any difficulty whatever—I hope some echo of these remarks will get through to people in authority who are capable of putting a stop to this kind of insane behaviour which the Treasury Board has indulged in in this particular case.

On motion of Senator Langlois, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, July 6, at 8 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, July 6, 1976

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Copies of Joint Declaration, issued following the International Conference held in Puerto Rico, June 27-28, 1976.

Copies of report to the Minister of National Health and Welfare from the Canada Pension Plan Advisory Committee on private retirement, disability and survivorship plans.

Report on operations under the Regional Development Incentives Act for the month of February 1976, pursuant to section 16 of the said Act, Chapter R-3, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of operations under the Civil Service Insurance Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 21(2) of the said Act, Chapter 49, R.S.C., 1952.

Report of the Army Benevolent Fund Board, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 13 of the Army Benevolent Fund Act, Chapter A-16, R.S.C., 1970.

Report on the administration of the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 28 of the said Act, Chapter C-9, R.S.C., 1970.

Report on the administration of the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act, Part II, including amounts credited to or charged against the Regular Force Death Benefit Account for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 41 of the said Act, Chapter C-9, R.S.C., 1970.

Statement by the Department of National Defence of moneys received and disbursed in the Special Account (Replacement of Materiel) for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 11(4) of the National Defence Act, Chapter N-4, R.S.C., 1970.

IMMIGRATION

GULF ISLANDS, BRITISH COLUMBIA—MINISTERIAL DISCRETION PERMITS—QUESTION

Senator Bell: Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the Leader of the Government in the Senate. It concerns people living in the Gulf Islands of British Columbia. I wonder if the Leader of the Government could ascertain:

(a) the number of people living in the Gulf Islands of British Columbia who are in Canada under a ministerial discretion permit;

(b) how many of those people own property in the Gulf Islands; and

(c) how many have criminal records which prevent their having "landed immigrant" status?

I ask the Leader of the Government to include in the "Gulf Islands" Quadra, Hornby, Denman, Lesquiti, Jeddiah, et cetera, in the north and, going south, take in Salt Spring, Pender and Saturna.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, because of the technical and detailed nature of the question, I must take it as notice.

Senator Flynn: Surprise.

Senator Perrault: It will be my intention to supply the information if it is available.

TRANSPORTATION

BILINGUAL IFR AIR TRAFFIC SERVICES—COMMISSION OF INQUIRY—QUESTION

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, may I ask the Leader of the Government if he has tabled the letter from the commissioners appointed to inquire into the air controllers' and air pilots' problem?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the letter and the documentation appear in the Debates of the Senate and form part of the permanent records of this house.

Senator Flynn: I mean the letter from the commissioners to the Minister of Transport. I understand it was tabled in the other place. I was wondering whether it was tabled in this place.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, as yet I have not received the document for tabling in this chamber. However, it will most certainly be tabled here.

Senator Flynn: I think it would be of interest if it were tabled here—and tomorrow if possible.

COPYRIGHT ACT

CROWN COPYRIGHT—MINISTER OF SUPPLY AND SERVICES

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask the Leader of the Government if he has succeeded yet in getting any information about that question I asked some time ago on the supersession of the former terms of copyright of government publications, the replacement of "Crown copyright reserved" by the words "Copyright Minister of Supply and Services."

I found the same formula on another document today. I have it upstairs.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, that information has not been made available as yet. A reply will be provided as quickly as possible.

Senator Forsey: I hope the Department of Justice can speed matters up, because it seems to me a fairly simple thing to discover. I should have supposed they could manage it in the time that has elapsed since I asked the question.

Senator Perrault: I know that they are according a high priority to the request, and I will contact them tomorrow.

CITIZENSHIP BILL

THIRD READING—MOTION IN AMENDMENT—DEBATE ADJOURNED

The Senate resumed from Wednesday, June 30, the debate on the motion of Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) for third reading of Bill C-20, respecting citizenship.

Hon. John M. Macdonald: Honourable senators, it is certainly not my intention to speak at any length on this subject. I realize that I have not given too much study to constitutional questions; indeed, until I heard the debate on Bill C-20 I did not realize its implications. I did realize, I might say, its practical implications, and at this time I only wish to state that I fully support the misgivings which were expressed by Senator Smith (Colchester) as to what might be the practical implications of this clause.

The Province of Nova Scotia does not have any act of the legislature prohibiting the acquisition of land by non-residents. I sympathize with the point of view of those from Prince Edward Island who do not wish a non-resident to acquire land parcels of more than 10 acres. Not to have such a prohibition could easily lead to good agricultural land being taken out of production.

As far as Nova Scotia is concerned, and particularly the island of Cape Breton, whence I come, I do not think that argument applies. We do have on the provincial statutes the Land Holding Disclosure Act, pursuant to which a non-resident who acquires land in Nova Scotia must, immediately upon completion of the conveyance, deliver to the registrar a disclosure statement setting out precisely what land was acquired and the purpose of the acquisition. That act does not apply in the event that the land in question is acquired by will, or to corporations incorporated under the laws of Nova Scotia.

Personally, I have never understood the necessity of such a disclosure statement. The information could be obtained, if the government desired it, just as easily, or perhaps more quickly, by simply contacting the various regional assessment offices. Certainly, I do not think the Government of Nova Scotia for one moment would ever consider prohibiting the acquisition of land by non-residents or, should this bill be passed, by non-Canadian citizens. We are glad to have non-residents acquire land in our province. In many cases good sales have been made to American citizens of what might be considered poor land. Often the land is used as a site for a summer home. I might say that Cape Breton is a very, very pleasant place in which to live.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Macdonald: People who come to Cape Breton like to stay, and we encourage them to. I hope the day will never come when we prohibit non-residents from acquiring land in that area.

In listening to the debate on the constitutional issues, namely, whether the bill contains a delegation of power, whether it is a legislation action or administrative action, whether it would interfere with the rights of the provinces, and the like, I became somewhat confused. For that reason I believe that the bill, as Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) suggested at one point, should be referred back to the committee to consider the implications of clause 33.

Consequently, I move, seconded by the Honourable Senator Grosart, that this bill be not now read the third time but that it be referred back to the committee to consider the implications of clause 33.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Connolly (Ottawa West), seconded by the Honourable Senator Macnaughton, that this bill be now read the third time.

In amendment, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Macdonald, seconded by the Honourable Senator Grosart, that this bill be not now read the third time but that it be referred back to committee to consider the implications of clause 33.

● (2010)

Hon. John J. Connolly: Honourable senators, I intended to ask for leave to speak, but now that the motion has been made I think I am entitled to do so.

I rise to deal only with a point raised by Senator Grosart—and a perfectly valid point it was. On the last occasion when we discussed this bill I placed upon the record the provisions of section 2 of the Agricultural Products Marketing Act, which is chapter A-7 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1970. I was arguing, as honourable senators will remember, that section 2 of that act was comparable in practically all respects to subclause (2) of clause 33 of the bill now before us. Senator Grosart made the perfectly valid point that simply because there is a similar section in another statute is no justification for assuming that the clause in question is valid. That is correct, because the original statutory form could have been unconstitutional and invalid.

However, section 2 of the Agricultural Products Marketing Act, to which I referred the other day, went before the Supreme Court of Canada, where the decision was unanimous, and it might be helpful if I place on the record a dictum from the judgment of Mr. Justice Taschereau in the case of The Prince Edward Island Potato Marketing Board vs. H. B. Willis Incorporated, (1952) Supreme Court Reports, page 392. I quote from page 410 of Mr. Justice Taschereau's judgment, where he said:

The federal legislation does not confer any additional powers to the Legislature but vests in a group of persons—

In this case the lieutenant governor in council or any person or authority delegated by the lieutenant governor in council.

—certain powers to be exercised in the interprovincial and export field.

Those fields, of course, are beyond the normal jurisdiction of the provinces. He goes on:

It is immaterial that the same people are empowered by the Legislature to control and regulate the marketing of natural products within the Province. It is true that the Board is a creature of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, but it does not prevent it from exercising duties imposed by the Parliament of Canada.

I think perhaps that that passage deals with the point Senator Grosart so clearly raised.

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, I listened with great attention to Senator Connolly. That case he raised may have some relevancy, but it is not very convincing because the vesting of administrative powers and the vesting of legislative powers are two quite different matters. In the case at hand the lieutenant governor in council is given the power to restrict or annul the acquisition of lands. This is purely legislative. I think the point is not fully met by the decision Senator Connolly has cited. However, this is a point to be argued further if the Senate so desires.

I rise at this time to deal with the answers that the Leader of the Government gave in response to my suggestion last week that the bill be referred to committee so that we could ask the minister that before the act is proclaimed clause 33 be submitted to the Supreme Court for an opinion on its constitutionality. I also suggested that the minister might agree to an amendment to provide that clause 33 be not proclaimed before such a reference could be made.

At page 2312 of the Debates of the Senate for June 30, 1976, Senator Perrault made the following statement.

Clause 33 will only come into force in a given province when declared to do so by proclamation of the Governor in Council.

Well, I have read the bill and I have found that clause 43 entitled "Commencement," reads as follows:

43. This Act shall come into force on a day to be fixed by proclamation.

I read that as meaning that the whole act will come into force on proclamation and that the Governor in Council has no discretion to proclaim sections of the act separately. I find I am fortified in that argument by an article which Senator Grosart gave me as we were entering the house. The article is entitled "The Central Fallacy of Canadian Constitutional Law," and was written by J. Noel Lyon. The article appeared in the McGill Law Journal, Volume 27, Spring, 1976. Referring to the breathalyzer law which was introduced in Canada in 1969, Mr. Lyon points out that it was referred to the Supreme Court for an opinion as to its validity and also to determine whether some, but not all, of the provisions of the amendments could come into force on a given day. But I find that the section dealing with the coming into force of that act reads entirely differently. In that particular case it was stated:

This Act . . . shall come into force on a day or days to be fixed by proclamation.

That suggests immediately and very clearly that the intention was that some provisions should come into force on certain days while others would come into force on other days. But, I suggest to you that in the bill before us the discretion is not given to the Governor in Council to proclaim the whole act, with the exception of section 33, and then to proclaim section 33 later on. Therefore, I am not satisfied with the statement of the Leader of the Government.

[Senator Connolly.]

To meet the points I had made, the Leader of the Government said that it was only necessary merely to undertake that it would not take the necessary steps—it meaning the government—by order in council to make this amendment effective until it has ascertained the constitutionality of the action.

I should like that undertaking to be completely reassuring. If in the first place the power is not in the act to proclaim the coming into force of section 33 separately from the rest of the act, then this undertaking means nothing. But if the undertaking is serious, I should like it to be clarified. We should get the assurance that the government will not proclaim section 33, even if it has the power, and I do not think it does—at the same time as the rest of the act. I should like the assurance that it means that the government will submit this clause to the Supreme Court for its opinion on its constitutionality. If I could be convinced, first, that the government has the power to delay the proclamation of clause 33 and, second, that it really means to submit that question to the Supreme Court, then I would be satisfied. Otherwise I think we should have the bill referred back to committee and see what the minister thinks about it. But I doubt the Leader of the Government can give me the assurance I want.

● (2020)

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, of course it is impossible for me to give that kind of assurance at this time. However, I can undertake to discuss the matter thoroughly with the minister in the next few hours. Accordingly, I would move adjournment of this debate.

Senator Grosart: Before the question is put, I should like to thank Senator Connolly for the obvious attention he has given to the point I raised, and ask him further if he would consider whether the case of The Prince Edward Island Potato Marketing Board vs. H. B. Willis Incorporated and the situation before us now in this bill are really parallel. In quoting Mr. Justice Taschereau, he gave the impression that the case turned on the granting of additional powers to the legislature, which is not, of course, the situation in this particular bill. Perhaps at some time Senator Connolly would clarify whether the two cases are parallel or not.

Senator Connolly (Ottawa West): I think the answer is that the cases are parallel. In the case of The Prince Edward Island Potato Marketing Board vs. H. B. Willis Incorporated it was a question of whether or not the federal authority could in fact delegate to the provinces the right to regulate. I will not say "to legislate," since the use of the word "legislate" raises difficulties. Senator Flynn's problem arises from the use of the word "legislation" and the idea of administrative delegation, but I think the dictum from the Supreme Court judgment applies not only to section 2 of the Agricultural Products Marketing Act, but also to subclause (2) of clause 33 of the bill before us.

On motion of Senator Perrault, debate adjourned.

INCOME TAX ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE—DEBATE
CONTINUED

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Hayden, seconded by the Honourable Senator Bourget, P.C., for the adoption of the Report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on the Bill C-58, intitled: "An Act to amend the Income Tax Act".—(Honourable Senator Lang)

Senator Lang: Honourable senators, I would like to explain briefly my intentions tonight. As far as I am personally concerned, I have done my preparatory work and am quite prepared to proceed in this debate at this time. However, I have been considering my position in this context, and feel it would be inappropriate to do so. I beg the indulgence of my colleagues in this matter, and assure them that in asking that this Order stand I do so only after a great deal of consideration. I am, in fact, asking that this Order stand, but am quite prepared to yield to any other senator who might wish to participate in the debate at this time.

Hon. J. J. Greene: Honourable senators, I would like to take advantage of Senator Lang's kind invitation if I may.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Greene: Honourable senators, with regard to this report, it seems to me that what it does not say reassures me, in some ways, more than what it does say. I think the essential problem with regard to the amendment is whether or not, under the guise of taxation, the bill has the effect of impinging upon the right of free speech and free publication. The fact that this excellent committee, after exhaustive hearings under its experienced chairman, who has the respect not only of this Senate but of the whole country, does not find that it is an infringement upon the right of free speech or free publication reassures me, as does the entire debate, both here and in the other place, so that that is not now a matter of concern to me.

We should have been particularly wary in that the most vocal and effective proponents of the measure in the first instance were those who had a vested interest—the Canadian publishing industry—and this, I think, caused many of our concerns that this should not be censorship under the guise of a tax measure. It is, perhaps, of interest to note that at the time this measure was before Parliament in various committees, just 333 years had passed since a similar measure was before the Mother of Parliaments at Westminster under the guise of licensing printing. That measure which was couched in terms of licensing, rather than in terms of inhibiting, free speech resulted in perhaps the most famous defence of the right to free publication ever made in the English language, namely, John Milton's Areopagitica. In Areopagitica, Milton, among other things, said as follows:

For who knows not that truth is strong next to the Almighty; she needs no policies nor stratagems nor licensings to make her victorious. Those are the shifts and the defences that error uses against her power.

Then it was some 117 years ago that another defence of the right of free speech and free publication was made within the ambit of John Stuart Mill's classic Essay on Liberty in which, among other things, he wrote as follows:

Let us therefore suppose that the government is entirely at one with the people and never thinks of exerting any power of coercion—

By which he meant repression of free speech and free publication.

—unless in agreement with what it conceives to be their voice. But I deny the right of the people to exercise such coercion, either by themselves or by their government. The power itself is illegitimate. The best government has no more title to it than the worst.

So my concern was very deep and sincere that under the guise of tax law we were, in fact, repressing the right to free speech. Truth has no national boundaries that I know of, and there should be the right of publication, and there should be the right for all Canadians to read publications emanating from any nation whatsoever, because on that essential foundation surely stands the very essence of our liberties.

Honourable senators, I was concerned that possibly under the guise of tax law we were inhibiting this inherent right of free people to receive publications from any country, wherever they might emanate, and, as I said, I was reassured not only by the debate in the Senate and in the other place but also by the fact that the excellent committee which is reporting to this house had no concern in its report that this measure was in any way an infringement upon the liberty of publication, but was truly and essentially a tax measure. Such being the case, I suggest that we should deal with the report and the bill itself as such. As it is a tax measure, completely within the responsibilities of government and in no way a repression of free speech or the right to free publication, I suggest, with respect, that the Senate should support the bill itself and reject the report.

● (2030)

Senator Flynn: Why?

Senator Greene: In that the report deals essentially with matters of government—

Senator Flynn: You are not serious, are you?

Senator Greene: If there is one thing—

Senator Flynn: You are not serious?

Senator Greene: If it comes to pass that free institutions—

Senator Flynn: Matters of government?

Senator Greene: —and free government as we know it disappears from the ways of mankind, it will probably be more because free governments cannot govern today rather than because they have limited or inhibited freedom.

Any group whose voice is sufficiently loud, be they airline pilots or be they a powerful vested group of any kind throwing milk at a cabinet minister on the steps of the Parliament Buildings, or moving to prevent government from acting, can apparently prevent the government of a free people from acting and I suggest that the government—

Senator Flynn: Let us go home.

Senator Greene: The Minister of National Revenue, in proclaiming the "80 per cent substantially different content rule" last fall was quite properly doing an act of government. For us to hold that up, which we would be doing in supporting the report, would be merely making it impossible, or very difficult, for the government to carry out its function, as opposed to the legislative function.

Senator Asselin: That is what you are doing here.

Senator Greene: I suggest, honourable senators, that this measure has had the support, first, of the O'Leary Commission. Our late, dear and great friend—

Senator Flynn: It is about time you came to that.

Senator Greene:—certainly was not one, whatever his political views may have been, who could ever have been accused of not being a great libertarian from the standpoint of the freedom of the press. The principle of the bill subsequently had the support of a committee of this house, which I believe became known as the Davey Committee on Mass Media. So its principles are clear. The government has made its decision, and those who oppose the 80 per cent rule have the right to appeal that administrative decision to the courts if they see fit. The government, on the other hand, as the Minister of National Revenue has proclaimed, has the right subsequently to bring in further legislation if the decision of the courts is unfavourable. In my opinion, it should not be the function of the Senate through the approval of a report to anticipate judicial decisions, or to supplant the courts in their function.

I suggest that this bill has had a thorough review, that it is in no way an impairment of human liberty or the liberty of publication and, this being the longest session of Parliament in our history, I respectfully suggest, honourable senators, that we should deny the report and pass the bill in order to enable the fulfilment of this measure, which has had such a long legislative history already. If we sit much longer on it we may by the very delay in implementation have rendered ineffective those very methods of free government to achieve its objectives, which I am sure all of us are here to uphold.

Therefore, I respectfully submit, honourable senators, that we support the bill and get on with the further business of this, the longest session in the history of our country, before some new Cromwell comes to this place and says, "Gentlemen, you have tarried too long."

Senator Flynn: Ho, ho, ho; those are the best jokes I have heard in years.

Hon. Ernest C. Manning: Honourable senators—

Senator Smith (Colchester): Let us all go home.

Senator Perrault: Let us have free speech now.

Senator Manning: Honourable senators, inasmuch as Senator Lang has yielded to other senators the opportunity to continue this debate this evening, I would like to ask the indulgence of the house to make a few comments with respect to this motion. Owing to the disruption of air travel

[Senator Greene.]

I was not able to be here when the committee held its final meetings and the report was formulated. However, as a member of the committee I would like to put on the record my endorsement of the report and my full support for the amendments to the bill which the committee is recommending to this house. While I concur fully with the report under the circumstances which were taken into account by the committee, with respect to two matters related to this question I would like to have seen the committee go even further than is recommended in the report. I wish to make it quite clear that I endorse fully the basic principle of the legislation, which is that advertising must appear in a Canadian publication if the advertiser is to qualify for that expense being written off for tax purposes. I believe most of us will accept that principle without very much question. However, the first of the two points which do concern me is the definition of a Canadian publication for the purposes of this legislation. I submit that Parliament would be on much sounder ground if it confined the definition of "a Canadian publication" to a publication of a company incorporated under Canadian law, in which a substantial majority of the equity stock is held by Canadians to ensure that the ownership control is in the hands of Canadians and a company in which the management is Canadian. If those three requirements are met, any such company should be at liberty to publish any kind of legitimate publication it wishes without having the government dictate what the content of the publication should be.

● (2040)

In my judgment that is an area in which the government has no valid right to interfere. It should simply concern itself with a proper definition of a Canadian company, and advertisers using whatever that company publishes should be entitled to the tax benefits the act provides, as compared with advertising placed in a foreign publication.

If it is the government's intention to go beyond that point and interject control of content—which I maintain is wrong—it certainly should not be done in an Income Tax Act. It should be a matter of government policy on that specific subject, which has nothing whatever to do with the question of income tax.

The second area in which I would have liked to see the proposed amendment go further concerns the problem of the border television stations about which the committee heard so much. I would have preferred to see the section dealing with border television deleted entirely from the bill, to be considered at some later date after a genuine effort had been made to work out a mutually satisfactory and equitable arrangement for both the Canadian and American interests involved. I say this because this question bears on the far broader question of Canada's overall relations with the United States. When we get into that field, we are talking about a trade partnership which represents something like $60 billion in two-way trade between our two countries.

No one will argue that this is not of tremendous importance to Canada, because the United States is our biggest export market, and on our trade relations depend thousands of jobs of Canadian workmen, to say nothing of the overall impact on our economy.

Let me make it quite clear that what we are talking about in this report, and this legislation, is a very small matter compared with the total trade relations between our two countries. Certainly, the United States government has far more important things to occupy its time than to become exercised over a minor matter such as that with which this legislation deals. However, I do suggest that this question takes on unusual seriousness because, unfortunately, it is one more in a series of actions taken in recent years which have gone a long way toward undermining the good international relations which existed in earlier years between Canada and the United States. I know that that is disputed by some, but anyone who spends time in the United States, and who talks to Americans both in and out of government, knows that there is validity in what I have just said.

In any process of reasoning, the premise from which we start decides to a large extent the conclusions we arrive at. The premise from which I start to consider an issue of this nature is the firm conviction that Canada's best national interests are inseparably bound up with her relations with the United States.

If that premise is sound, any matter which involves the mutual interests of our two countries should be considered, not as an isolated matter, which by itself might not be very important, but in relation to the overall importance to Canada of our relations, particularly our trade relations, with our southern neighbour.

Canadians who give serious thought to this matter will agree that this country has an almost limitless potential to take advantage of innumerable opportunities to tap the goodwill of the United States to our own national advantage. There are hundreds of ways in which we can tap those resources of goodwill in matters of trade, technology, capital, and cultural achievements. Many of these benefits are available to us without cost as the dividends of mutual goodwill and of friendly negotiations and discussions with our good neighbour.

This is an aspect of Canada-United States relations which points up the folly of the negative nationalists in this country who seem incapable of distinguishing the difference between genuine Canadian nationhood and national sovereignty and nationalism based on negative attitudes directed against a neighbouring country from which we could reap such benefit if we concentrated on the potential opportunities and advantages available to us.

I would not quarrel with Bill C-58, even in the form in which it was submitted, if it had been introduced after a meaningful and genuine effort had been made to resolve the problem of border television stations by discussion with our counterparts in the United States whose interests are very much involved. Had such attempts been made and failed, we would have had a different set of circumstances.

It was quite clear from the evidence presented to the committee that no meaningful attempt was made by the government to sit down and discuss the problem constructively with American groups whose interests were involved, in a sincere effort to arrive at a mutually acceptable arrangement. The attitude of the minister when questioned on this point, and also that of the chairman of the CRTC, made this very clear. Members of the committee will recall that the chairman of the CRTC, when the point was being discussed, said that they had listened to the representations of concerned groups in the United States purely as a matter of courtesy. It was obvious that there was not the slightest intention to give serious consideration to the representations made, other than to give them a polite hearing because they had asked to be heard. I contend that this is not in Canada's best interests.

I would draw to the attention of honourable senators something to which I am sure many have already given thought. In the past two years there has been a development in the United States which has given a new dimension and added seriousness to matters which prejudice our relationship with the United States.

Since the events associated with Watergate there has been a move on the part of the United States Congress to take away a great deal of the latitude and power which for years was vested in the executive arm of the government in Washington. The present position is to require that many more matters be controlled by Congress and that Congress have an opportunity to examine all details, particularly in the field of international affairs, foreign trade and U.S. relations with other countries. As long as these matters were dealt with by the executive arm of government, we could assume that the White House would not pay much attention to complaints and grievances voiced by groups which felt that they had not been dealt with fairly by the Government of Canada in a way that a good neighbour nation rightly expects to be dealt with.

• (2050)

I suggest that these matters have now become, to a far greater degree, the subject of debate in the Congress of the United States, and that means that political reactions to Canadian treatment of U.S. interests are going to make themselves manifest. Groups in the United States who have been aggrieved by the negative approach that Canada so often takes are going to be vocal in expressing their dissatisfaction to their Congressmen, and when these matters come up in Congress for debate it is going to be a very different situation than when they were dealt with by the executive arm of the United States government. The results are far more likely to have repercussions detrimental to the best interests of this country.

The irritation this legislation has caused to two U.S. publications, one of which has been put out of Canada entirely, and the dispute with the U.S. border TV stations, are not of themselves big issues but if we keep on we will some day reach the point where there will be the final straw that will break the camel's back. Surely, it is folly on our part to permit anything like that to happen. In such an eventuality, the United States has very little to lose but Canada has a great deal to lose. I for one do not want to see Canada lose the great advantage that it has enjoyed and can continue to enjoy if we just use a little constructive common sense in the way we deal with matters of this kind.

The only other point I would mention—

Senator Davey: I wonder if I might ask the honourable senator a question? Would you apply the same criteria to the area of broadcast as you listed for print? In the earlier part of your speech, you listed the criteria for print, the criteria you would suggest for print. Would you apply the same criteria to the area of broadcast?

Senator Manning: I do not think the same criteria could be applied, because the U.S. border television stations are not incorporated in Canada. They are entirely U.S. entities.

Senator Davey: So you would not apply the same criteria?

Senator Manning: In the case of the border television stations, no. With them it is a matter of sitting down and working out something which is mutually acceptable to both countries. I do not think you can take care of that problem by Canadian incorporation, as you could do in the case of publications.

Senator Flynn: Would you?

Senator Davey: Yes.

Senator Manning: The other point I was going to make in closing is that in view of the lengthy hearings conducted by the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, and the large number of witnesses that were heard and the attention given to arrive at a constructive conclusion, I would hope this house would not lightly dismiss the recommendations of one of its own senior committees. Anybody who sat in on the committee hearings knows that its decisions were not arrived at quickly or lightly. This was a most exhaustive study. In fairness to the chairman and the members of the committee who worked with him in the preparation of the recommendations, this house should take into account that these recommendations are the end result of days and weeks of hearings and a great deal of careful thought and study, and as such should not be lightly cast aside.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I wonder if the Honourable Senator Manning thought of concluding his address by suggesting that we all rise and sing The Star Spangled Banner.

Hon. Sidney L. Buckwold: Honourable senators, I also thank our colleague, Senator Lang, for providing this opportunity of saying a few words in this debate. I am a member of the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee. Unfortunately, due to my responsibilities at Habitat, I was not present at all of that committee's meetings on Bill C-58.

While expressing, as I have always done, my fullest admiration for our capable chairman, I have to indicate that, although there are matters of concern in Bill C-58, had I had the opportunity of voting I would not have supported the amendments that have been brought forward, except for one that I consider important and which was drawn forcefully to the attention of this house in one of the great speeches we heard. I refer to the speech of Senator Cook, in which he talked about substantial Canadian content.

Before getting into that discussion, may I say that I am a little astounded by the fact that so many of the speakers in this debate commenced their comments by saying they support fully the principle of the bill, but—

Senator Flynn: No.

Senator Buckwold: That is what they said. We have heard it tonight, and we heard it in previous speeches on this bill.

Senator Flynn: The objective of the bill and the principle of the bill are not one and the same.

[Senator Davey.]

Senator Buckwold: What is the principle of the bill?

Senator Flynn: Yes.

Senator Buckwold: The principle of the bill is to be able to develop strong, viable, healthy, productive Canadian publishing industries and broadcast media.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Flynn: That is not the principle.

Senator Buckwold: That is what the principle is.

Senator Flynn: That is the objective of the bill; not the principle.

Senator Buckwold: Is it not interesting, honourable senators, that as soon as anybody speaks in support of this bill, the heckling starts from the other side—the babbling. No one interrupted Senator Manning when he gave his thoughtful address. We sat and listened.

Senator Flynn: You could not.

Senator Asselin: He talked sense.

Senator Buckwold: Those who support the bill would like to have the opportunity of being able to say a few words without the babbling from the other side that we get rolling over here. I would certainly like that opportunity.

Let us talk about the principle of the bill.

Senator Flynn: Yes.

Senator Buckwold: Immediately people start shaking their heads. The fact is that if we agree with the principle of the bill—and everyone has said he does—then, as a government, we have to do something to protect an industry which, as all of us are aware, is in deep trouble. I am talking about the publishing industry in this country.

Senator Flynn: You are not the government. You are a member of the Senate.

Senator Buckwold: We have heard over and over again the problem of American influence on our country. We also hear about the other side of the coin, of course, which is the very close relationship of Canada with our good neighbour to the south. Again, I do not think anyone would dispute the comments that were made by Senator Manning as to how important that relationship is—

Senator Flynn: Senator Forsey did.

Senator Buckwold: —but I do not know whether the Government of the United States is of the view that we are ruffling the feathers of our great neighbour. Time Canada almost voluntarily moved out. It did so well in advance of the final passage of this bill.

There are some very serious problems with our relationship that I wish Senator Manning had raised, such as the takeover of the potash industry by the government of my home province. That is a serious matter. That is something that really disturbs Canada-United States relations. Another area of concern is our relationship in the gas and oil industries, and Senator Manning is well aware of the dependence of American industry in the northwest and north-central part of that country on gas and oil from his province. Yet, we have a strong feeling in this country that we should deny them some of God's blessings that we have. These are the things that are very serious.

I do not really believe the President of the United States is going to lose very much sleep because one major magazine is not going to get an exemption under the Income Tax Act in Canada, that magazine being Time. That is what we are looking at. We have had representations made by the Canadian publishing industry indicating that it cannot exist economically, or in any other way, without this legislation. They have said they cannot develop an indigenous publishing industry encompassing Canadian writers, Canadian photographs, Canadian print, without this legislation. I do not find that so difficult to believe—not if we agree with the principle which, as I say, everyone has indicated he agrees with. There is no blocking of magazines coming into this country. Senator Greene pointed that out. There is no iron curtain through which magazines cannot be brought in, as long as they are not declared unfit for human review, or obscene—and, goodness knows, plenty of those seem to sneak across the border. Magazines appear here by the millions every month—thousands of titles.

● (2100)

The only thing we are talking about is the right of Canadian advertisers to get income tax deduction. That is all we are talking about. I think a great smokescreen is being thrown around this whole situation by bringing in these diversions which, in my opinion, are not the true, basic principles about which we are talking.

I indicated at the beginning of my remarks that I was impressed by the speech of Senator Cook and some of the evidence I have heard about "substantial" Canadian content. There is no doubt in my mind that the ministers involved acted badly. I am the first to admit that. Senator Cook's point that Canadian courts had shown that the word "substantial" did not necessarily mean a majority was a good one. Yet a minister of the Canadian crown indicated that it could be 50 per cent; it could be 80 per cent.

I agree with Senator Hayden; I want to have an undertaking from the minister that that will be protected. I would not go so far as saying it should go to the courts. I will be satisfied if the minister gives an undertaking that a definite percentage will be written into the law so that we will not have ministerial fiat or a ruling by somebody, that we will really have rule by law. I believe that is what we all want. I am proud that Senator Hayden was able to bring that up, although I must say that I cannot go so far as he did in suggesting that the courts should do it. I think it can be corrected by an undertaking.

I would remind my fellow senators that we have had undertakings in the past. It has become an established custom of this chamber to accept undertakings from ministers that bills will be corrected in a suitable and satisfactory manner, rather than sending them back to the House of Commons and going through that procedure. This is a rather new development in the proceedings of the Senate. Many people ask why senators are not amending bills. The fact is that changes are very often developed first of all—as Senator Hayden so well knows, since I think he set the trend—by introducing amendments here long before bills are through the House of Commons, which amendments are passed on to the minister and appear in the form of ministerial amendments in the other place. We have this trend of ministerial undertakings. For example, the Honourable Mr. Benson gave a number of ministerial undertakings in respect of income tax law. I could go on and on in this regard. As Senator Hayden has said so well, these undertakings have been honoured, perhaps not to the full extent but certainly in their principal bases.

I suggest, honourable senators, that if we can satisfy ourselves on that one major point, the question of substantial content, if we can establish the principle that we do not want ministers to rule by directive, that we do not want administrators to rule by fiat, that we have laws that should be followed, then we should be satisfied with this bill which, as everyone agrees in principle, will develop the kind of magazine industry this country so sorely needs. Without this bill I think we can look forward to the demise of a healthy publishing industry in this country.

Senator Forsey: Demise?

Senator Buckwold: Yes, demise. I believe many of our major publications will disappear; they will just not be able to exist; they will go under. I suggest to you, honourable senators, that we have a very real responsibility in this regard. We have been talking about one publication, Time magazine, which is already out, so I do not really see that there is such a great problem in international relations.

With respect to broadcasting, I was impressed by the witness who appeared before the committee on behalf of the CRTC, its Chairman, Harry Boyle. I would ask you all to read his evidence, in which he dramatically pointed out the real importance of being able to control these dollars that are flowing across the border in the millions for advertisements that are televised back into large Canadian centres by stations that have no CRTC regulations to follow, no Canadian content rule which is expensive to obey, and are able to make substantial profits. That was well pointed out during the evidence. I believe that countries have a right to protect themselves against that.

It will be remembered that even in Great Britain, when there were offshore radio stations, there was a great uproar and the government had to do something about that kind of activity. It was almost a form of piracy. I am not suggesting this about our border TV stations on the American side. However, certainly they constitute an infringement of the rights of Canadians to be able to control where the advertising dollar goes, and I suggest that the proper way to do that is through the Income Tax Act.

We are not stopping anybody from advertising on the American stations. If they want to go to the Bellingham station they can continue to do so; they just will not get an income tax deduction for the expense of that advertising. It may be that the station will decrease its rates and the advertiser will find himself in the same position as before. That could happen. On the other hand, we know that in Vancouver there are stations just coming on the air that need this kind of legal protection to make their economic survival possible.

So I say to my fellow senators that we should be satisfied if we can get the undertaking to which I have referred. I am not talking of the other amendments. I think it is going too far to suggest that we want the other place to introduce a bill before the broadcasting regulations go through, and that it be taken through the house and sent back to the Senate, so that we start the argument all over again. I really do not think that is necessary. If we can get an undertaking on the major point I have referred to I personally will support Bill C-58, and I hope my fellow senators will do the same.

On motion of Senator Lang, debate adjourned.

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD ACT

BILL TO AMEND (NO. 2)—SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from Wednesday, June 30, debate on the motion of Senator McDonald for second reading of Bill C-88, to amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act (No. 2).

Hon. Paul Yuzyk: Honourable senators, as could be expected, Senator McDonald has given a lucid and persuasive explanation of Bill C-88 in one of his shortest speeches in this chamber. His wide knowledge of farming in Saskatchewan, much of it based on lifelong experience in this industry, makes him a highly qualified sponsor of this bill. He deserves to be congratulated.

● (2110)

Although I was raised in the wheat province of Saskatchewan and worked on farms during harvest, and although I taught school in rural districts for eight years, I can claim only a very limited knowledge of grain farming based on an even more limited experience in that field. Nevertheless, I have learned much in my new capacity as agricultural critic in the Senate, and from my participation in the work of the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture. The chairman, Senator Argue, and other members of this committee, particularly Senator Michaud, have been doing a fine job of promoting the broad interests of agriculture throughout Canada.

Tonight I draw the attention of the members of this chamber to a thorough, constructive study of a particular region in New Brunswick, entitled "Kent County can be Saved." This report is now being completed for publication this summer.

Honourable senators, at least I can say of myself that because I am not directly involved in agriculture I can approach from a detached point of view the many problems facing our farmers. That means, however, that I have to do much research. Indeed, I am happy that some of my suggestions in the past for improving legislation and reports in this field have been accepted, and accepted with thanks. As a matter of fact, I have received considerable encouragement from my friends on the government side as well as from my colleagues on the opposition side to carry on this not very easy task. It appears that I am fated to continue in this role until the Prime Minister appoints an agriculturalist in the opposition ranks of the Senate. Such a person is very sorely needed in this chamber, and I hope these remarks will catch the ear of the Prime Minister.

Bill C-88, as we have heard from the sponsor, purports to deal with two matters, the more important of which is the provision for new procedures in the election of the members of the advisory committee of the Canadian Wheat Board, while the second aspect of the legislation provides for the establishment of separate pools for selected types of grain within an identifiable grade—in particular, the malting barley pool. Neither of these items is particularly controversial.

The new feature of the Canadian Wheat Board is the election of the eleven-member advisory committee by the producers. Previously, the appointments were made by order in council, which will now automatically appoint the elected member to the board. As a matter of fact, the experiment of elected members is now in progress and has proven to be satisfactory both to the Canadian Wheat Board and to the farmers. The Wheat Board benefits from the views of the producers on a variety of matters, and is now in a better position to report back on these matters to the producers, although it is still essentially responsible for providing the best marketing expertise. Equally important is the role of the members of the advisory committee to inform the farmers about the activities of the Wheat Board and to discuss related matters in meetings with them, although this is not clear in the clauses of the bill.

This consultative process, according to information that I have received, is generally welcomed by most who are involved and concerned. However, although the process appears to be more democratic, it must be remembered that it is the Governor in Council who enacts all rules and regulations—which really means that it is the minister who actually has the control. It will take a very strong committee to change the mind of the minister in some instances.

The legislation makes no definite provision for the elected committee members to hold meetings or to report back to the permit holders and seek their opinion. Moreover, according to the legislation, the board shall call six meetings of the advisory committee annually, and no provision is made for extra meetings if urgent matters suddenly appear; nor is any power given to the committee to request a special meeting if an urgency should arise. I believe that some degree of autonomy should be granted to the advisory committee, otherwise the members might feel that they lack responsibility and can be frustrated, as a result of which they might subsequently become passive. I wonder if this can be rectified by regulation, when it is not mentioned specifically in the bill.

Strong criticism has been raised that this legislation does not explicitly provide for the election of producers to the advisory board. It is the producers who do the electing and in all probability they will elect one of their own. However, there are no restrictions on the qualifications of the candidates, and it is conceivable that a non-permit holder could be elected. Some fear that vested interests could exercise influence to get a non-producer elected who would then not have the best interests of the farmers at heart. Another possibility could be the election of 11 wheat producers—in other words, the whole committee—who could easily neglect the needs of oat and barley producers. However, it is argued that producers are generally well enlightened and would be conscious of the calibre of the candidates, so that if an elected member failed to serve their best interests he would not be re-elected. It is apparent that the minister will not yield on that point unless there is a strong demand made by the farmers, which at this time is not very evident.

This piece of legislation helps to correct a serious problem for barley farmers. In the February 1976 issue of

Grainews, published in Calgary, the overwhelming consequences of this problem are dramatically presented under the heading "Why Alberta barley growers are suing C.W.B." Here are pertinent extracts from the article:

Last month, it was announced certain Alberta farmers were suing the Canadian Wheat Board, on behalf of all Alberta malting barley growers, for monies they claimed the Canadian Wheat Board owed them.

If successful in establishing that the Board in fact were operating a separate malting barley pool, the plaintiffs in this action are hopeful that the Wheat Board will have to pay and distribute well over a hundred million dollars, representing the premium selling price received by the Board and not given to the producer.

In addition, the plaintiffs believe tens of millions of dollars were wrongfully converted as a result of premiums being paid to people other than the producer and for premiums not even paid.

What has really got the malting barley growers upset is the price they have been paid for their product. The Canadian Wheat Board has staked out authority over all malting barley in the country and although the Board has sold malting barley for up to $4.20 per bushel to maltsters, the growers of barley that went for malt have received as little as $2.18 per bushel for the barley grown in the same year.

● (2120)

Indeed in some years the producer did not even receive the 15c. pittance paid by the maltster or exporter. Where the grain companies made up car lots from line barley, that is barley sold to the elevator company as feed barley, but recognized by the elevator operator as suitable for malting barley, the grain companies have received and kept even the 15c. premium.

The Board claims it needs new authority from Parliament to create a separate pool for malting barley. The producers, however, claim the Board is required by the present Act to pool and pay on the basis of inherent quality. The Board, they point out, has already done this in the case of durum wheat and has arbitrarily refused to do so in the case of malting barley.

I do not know how far this case has progressed. Farmers in other provinces have also suffered and complained. To prevent such injustices and future court cases, Bill C-88 provides for a separate pool for malting barley. Such a pool would encourage farmers to raise malting barley that would meet the needs of maltsters. The increasing efforts applied by these farmers in the production of barley for specific selection would pay off very well, as feed barley would no longer be selected for malting purposes. We know that in the 1974-75 crop year over 18 million bushels of feed barley were bought up by malting houses, and that only some 274,000 bushels of malting barley have been selected from grain company stocks.

Under the new legislation I hope that the establishment of a malting barley pool will clearly differentiate malting barley from feed barley. It must have been most confusing when farmers discovered that malting companies, when they ran out of malting barley, chose millions of bushels of feed barley instead. I believe that maltsters should be required to buy their malting barley only from the Wheat Board, which should set the criteria for the selection and grading of malting barley. If this is not made compulsory, then grain companies, particularly the international ones, because of their superior marketing skills, could get to the farmers in advance and use the premium of about 80 cents a bushel as a rake-off profit, much to the disadvantage of co-ops and Canadian-owned grain companies. If maltsters are required to purchase their malting barley from the Canadian Wheat Board, it will give an equal opportunity to small farmers. Malting companies usually purchase large quantities from large farmers, leaving out the small producer. The Wheat Board is able to make a better distribution of sales, which would benefit all the producers in general.

Canada sells nearly $3 billion worth of grain on world markets, which greatly helps to improve our balance of trade. Grain farming is one of the few Canadian industries still not priced out of world markets and should, therefore, be maintained at a high level.

Bill C-88 helps to improve the quality and the productivity of the grain farmer. We on this side of the house endorse the principle of the bill. We think that this piece of legislation could stand some improvement, which no doubt can later be effected by regulations. The present crop year ends July 31 next. We consider it desirable to have the law applied to the present crop year to be of immediate benefit to our farmers.

There are many points which I believe need clarification. It would be useful to the members of the Agriculture Committee to have top departmental officials supply fuller information about the regulations, the election of members to the advisory committee, the grading of grain, the establishing of other grain pools, payments to producers, et cetera. I understand that Senator Argue is not entirely happy with some aspects of this legislation, but he can speak for himself.

I recommend that this bill be referred to committee.

Hon. Hazen Argue: Honourable senators, if I might add a few words in this debate, I would like to say that I agree with the statements that have been made about Senator McDonald's knowledge of the agricultural field and the expertise he has demonstrated once again in introducing an agricultural measure in this chamber.

Senator Yuzyk, let me hasten to add, has really come a long way as an expert—

Senator Grosart: Hear, hear.

Senator Argue:—in this house and in the country, and I congratulate him on the comprehension he has shown in this field, and the energy that he has demonstrated in working on behalf of agriculture in Canada. I think Senator Yuzyk is one of the ablest members of this chamber, and he continues to perform very outstanding service to Canada generally in the many fields in which he is active.

Since we are passing compliments around, let me say how happy I am that the minister responsible for the Wheat Board has already, in practice, put into effect a large section of this bill by seeing to it that the advisory committee to the Canadian Wheat Board was elected. The minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board, who is also the Minister of Transport, gets into controversies once in a while in various sections of the country. He has been criticized in parts of eastern Canada for certain actions, as he has been over the years, and is still criticized in western Canada for certain actions. In providing in this measure, however, for the election of the advisory committee to the Canadian Wheat Board I think he has the general support and approval of western Canada, and of grain producers in particular. I think it is an excellent thing that the farmers themselves, by electing this advisory committee, will have a role to play in the policies of the Canadian Wheat Board.

It is important that this legislation not be delayed, or not unduly delayed. This bill needs to become the law of the country by August 1 of this year so that the provisions for malting barley and any other grains that may come forward can be put into effect. They have to be in effect by August 1 because that is the beginning of the crop year.

Senator Grosart: We'll still be here!

Senator Argue: We will still be here, and this will be the law, so I am not suggesting that we cannot take our time and do a good job. We have enough time left to do that.

The question of a malting barley pool is not new to the Senate, nor is it new to the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture. It is just over a year since the Agriculture Committee itself recommended the establishment of a barley pool. Senator Hays, I think, was the leading promoter of the barley pool in the committee as he has promoted it in other places. I am not saying how large a role we played in the action taken by the government, but we were on the right wavelength. We recognized that this was something that should be done, and more than a year ago we made a recommendation which, of course, we are pleased to see the government making the law of this country by legislative action.

Senator Yuzyk said that I am not really too happy with certain provisions of this bill. In fact, I am happy with the provisions of the bill, but I am not certain that they will be used as effectively or as extensively as they might.

● (2130)

There is still the question of whether it is practical to have a system of protein grades for wheat established in such a way that the individual farmer who produces a high protein quality wheat can himself be certain of receiving the precise rate for his wheat that the Wheat Board in fact would pay. The Wheat Board gets the benefit, and the country gets the benefit, of the higher protein wheat, but it is not true to say that there is any direct flow of the premium from protein wheat to the actual farmer who produces it, but that is a completely different subject, and it is something that the members of the Agriculture Committee can question the officials about if the bill is referred to that committee.

If we have officials from the department before the committee, I should also like to find out something more than I now know about No. 5 durum wheat because there is a big spread in the return that the farmer receives as between No. 4 and No. 5, and I am not at all certain from my own experience and from the experience of others that the farmer in fact gets the correct grade for No. 5 durum. But that is something I can pursue at a later time.

[Senator Argue.]

Honourable senators, I am pleased that this measure is before the house. I think it is constructive and timely, and I am sure it will receive the full support of this chamber, as it received the full support of the other place, and I am pleased to add my voice in support of second reading.

Hon. Harry Hays: Honourable senators, I should like to make a few remarks about the bill. Of course, I support the bill, but my great concern at the moment is its timing. I discussed bringing forward this legislation with the Minister of Agriculture, with the parliamentary secretary to Mr. Lang, and I even spoke less than two weeks ago to the Prime Minister. I have received more mail and telephone calls on whether we would have a malting barley pool than I received on the question of capital punishment. That may seem rather far out, but it is a fact.

The difference between growing malting barley and feed barley in financial terms can range anywhere from $3,000 to $30,000. For instance, if you grow Galt barley which is a feed barley, it yields anywhere from 10 to 15 per cent more bushels per acre than, say, Betsy or Bonanza which are malting barleys. It is my understanding, and I think I am correct about this, that it is the maltsters who select the barley. They are the people who decide whether they are going to take your barley or not, and we do not have many people who make this decision. They have to make it through the supplier of the barley.

For instance, United Grain Growers, who have elevators throughout western Canada like the Alberta Wheat Pool and the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, collect the barley, and when Canada Malting want a carload of malting barley they go to United Grain Growers and say, "We want a carload of Bonanza," or perhaps Betsy or Hector barley—one of the malting barleys. Now it may be that a farmer will have 10,000 bushels of Betsy barley, and they only want to take one or two carloads. This barley has been a very costly one for him. If there is not a special pool he could have sold his barley for $2.80 a bushel at one time, and today the price of barley has dropped by about 75 cents a bushel, while the maltsters are paying anywhere between $3 and $3.50 a bushel. So if he goes into the whole feed pool, as it has been in previous years, he would probably receive only 15 cents a bushel for a variety of barley of which he could have grown 15 or 20 per cent more.

It is very important to these people to make a decision all through the year, because the ministry circulated all the farmers through their agricultural letters that we were going to have a malting pool, and so these people held this barley from last August 1 until now to see if they could get it into the malting pool. This was a special barley that could also have been used for feed barley, so my great concern is—and I have pointed this out to the chairman of the committee—that if we send this bill to committee we must be sure that it goes through, because if the house were to rise and this bill did not receive royal assent before July 31, all these people would have their barley going into a general pool. I think this is a question that should be of great concern to the Senate.

I hope, honourable senators, that if this bill goes to committee, we shall be able to deal with it tomorrow and expedite it, so as to have it passed by Thursday.

Senator Argue: Honourable senators, I am happy to do anything I can as chairman of the Agriculture Committee to expedite the passage of this bill. In anticipation of its being sent to committee I have booked a room for Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. I would think, from the way the Senate operates, it is just as expeditious to have it before the committee at 10 o'clock on Thursday morning as on Wednesday afternoon. So the wheels are in motion, and I am sure the Senate is not going to prevent the farmers from getting a malting grade of barley this year.

Hon. A. Hamilton McDonald: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I must inform the Senate that if Senator McDonald speaks now his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on second reading of this bill.

Senator McDonald: Honourable senators, there is only one comment I want to make, and Senator Hays has really answered part of the question that came to my mind having heard other speakers speaking on this particular bill. The point I want to make is that, so far as malting barley is concerned, you can buy a particular variety of barley that under normal conditions makes good malting barley, but that does not necessarily mean you are going to sell it as malting barley. The only people who can make that decision are the maltsters, and nobody has a malting barley until the maltster says, "I want a carload of that barley." It is only then that you have malting barley.

Senator Yuzyk, I believe, came to the conclusion that no longer would No. 1 feed barley qualify for malting barley. But there is the possibility that it could, because there are occasions in Canada when, because of the weather or other conditions, we do not have enough good malting barley to fill the demand, and then the maltsters start taking a lower quality barley, because they have to have barley to produce malt. So it is not quite true to say that No. 1 feed barley is not going to qualify in the future; it may qualify if there is not enough good barley in Canada to meet our domestic requirements. But the point I wanted to make is that it is the maltsters who make the decision whether you have malting barley or whether you have not.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator McDonald moved that the bill be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture.

Motion agreed to.

● (2140)

MEDICAL CARE ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—ORDER STANDS

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Denis, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Bourget, P.C., for the second reading of the Bill C-68, intituled: "An Act to amend the Medical Care Act".—(Honourable Senator Smith (Colchester)).

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I suspect—

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Smith (Colchester): I appreciate the applause very much, but perhaps it was only in anticipation that I intend to suggest that the Senate might prefer to allow this order to stand because, unlike Mark Antony, I did come prepared to speak and am quite prepared to do so but am not sure that senators are prepared to stay and listen to me.

Senator Langlois: We are prepared to stay and listen.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I ask that this order stand.
Order stands.

REGULATIONS AND OTHER STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ADOPTED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the report of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, which was presented on June 30.

Senator Forsey moved that the report be adopted.

He said: Honourable senators, I move that the Senate concur in this report, which I think is self-explanatory. It merely provides for the committee to keep up with the flow of statutory instruments during the summer so that we shall not have a large backlog when we get back in the fall.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

TRANSPORTATION

BRITISH NORTH AMERICA ACT—MOTION TO REFER SUBJECT MATTER TO TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS COMMITTEE—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from Thursday, June 17, the debate on the inquiry of Senator Bonnell calling the attention of the Senate to the British North America Act as it pertains to transportation.

Hon. A. Hamilton McDonald: Honourable senators will recall that when I moved the adjournment of this debate I did so for two reasons. First, I wished to have the opportunity to peruse the British North America Act to see if there was any reference in it about transportation in Saskatchewan or the Prairie region. I find that there is not; there is no reference to transportation in the British North America Act. Between 1903 and 1961 six royal commissions concerned themselves with transportation in the Prairie region. None of the reports of those commissions referred to the British North America Act in any respect as far as transportation is concerned. At the moment two commissions are studying transportation for the Prairie region—the Hall Commission under Mr. Justice Hall and the Stavelly Commission. Those two commissions have held numerous hearings in western Canada. They have much public support, and it is my view that it would be wrong for the Senate to involve itself in transportation problems when these two commissions are studying transportation matters in the Prairie region. We all hope that their reports will be acceptable to those who make their livelihood in that area, and that their recommendations will be such that the Government of Canada can implement them.

Senator Molgat: Would Senator McDonald reply to a question? Has he any idea as to when these two commissions will report?

Senator McDonald: No, I do not know.

Senator Forsey: May I ask the Honourable Senator McDonald whether he feels it is altogether fair to the Atlantic provinces that we should have to wait until these commissions report at some unknown date in the future? After all, the motion before us would not have any bearing upon the affairs, the inquiries of those commissions into this matter in the Prairie provinces.

Senator McDonald: No, honourable senators. I have no desire to hold up this particular inquiry for any reason. As I said at the outset, I wished to have the opportunity to see if there was any reference in the British North America Act to transportation in the Prairie provinces. From information I have gathered, there is not, and I have no desire to hold this matter up.

On motion of Senator Petten, debate adjourned.

AGRICULTURE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO PUBLISH AND DISTRIBUTE ITS REPORT ON KENT COUNTY, NEW BRUNSWICK

Senator Argue, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture, moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture be authorized to publish and distribute its report on Kent County, New Brunswick, as soon as it becomes available, even though the Senate may not then be sitting.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, July 7, 1976

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have the honour to table:

Copies of Framework Agreement for Commercial and Economic Co-operation between Canada and the European Communities. Done at Ottawa, July 6, 1976.

In the spirit of co-operation which pervades the chamber, I am pleased to comply with the request of the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition and table:

Copies of a letter to Mr. Roger Demers, President, l'Association des Gens de l'Air du Québec from the Minister of Transport, dated July 1, 1976 respecting bilingual air traffic services in Quebec.

Copies of a letter to the Minister of Transport from the three Commissioners appointed for the purpose of inquiring into the safety of the introduction of bilingual IFR Air Traffic Services in the Province of Quebec, dated July 6, 1976.

Report of the Farm Credit Corporation, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, perhaps the letters tabled by the Leader of the Government, those being the letters to the Minister of Transport from the commissioners regarding air control and the letter of the minister to Mr. Demers, President of l'Association des Gens de l'Air du Québec, could be printed as an appendix to today's Debates of the Senate.

Senator Perrault: There is no objection to that procedure, honourable senators.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(For text of letters, see appendix, p. 2352)

ADJOURNMENT

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I move, seconded by Senator Perrault, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, July 8, 1976, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

WEDNESDAY SITTINGS—ORDER OF MAY 6 RESCINDED

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 47(2), I move:

That the Order of the Senate of May 6, 1976, that until the Senate adjourns for the summer recess, the Senate shall adjourn at three thirty o'clock in the afternoon on Wednesdays, be rescinded.

Senator Flynn: Definitely.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Flynn: Step by step.

Motion agreed to.

WORK SCHEDULE FOR PRESENT WEEK

Senator Rowe: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might direct a question to the Leader of the Government. I appreciate the difficulty under which he might be labouring right now, but is he in a position to give us any further details as to the work schedule for the present week.

I am sure the leader appreciates that with the tourist season in full swing it is becoming increasingly difficult to make arrangements for air travel. Many senators, including myself, have reservations for Thursday evening. Is it likely that we will have to cancel those reservations in favour of some other day?

I appreciate that it might be difficult for the government leader to give us that information now.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, Senator Rowe's inquiry is appropriate and timely. This session, of course, has gone beyond the original estimate of the government.

Senator Flynn: Ho, ho.

Senator Perrault: The other chamber is occupied with the debate on Bill C-84, the important issue of capital punishment. I rather think it unlikely that that bill will come to us from the other place before at least Thursday of next week. It may be the government's intention in this place, provided the present work responsibility before us is met, to adjourn for a time with, of course, the house being subject to recall when Bill C-84 reaches the Senate. However, it really depends on how the present work is disposed of this week. We have before us, as honourable senators are aware, four bills which do not appear to be too onerous or too difficult, although one is never, of course, quite certain in parliamentary affairs how long debates will be prolonged.

As I have said, at this time it is impossible to estimate when the bill presently under discussion in the other place will be here. We do not know. There are a number of amendments to be considered. I understand there are at least 15 or 16 amendments that must be dealt with in some form or another. The latest estimate I have is that it will not leave the other place before Thursday of next week, and there may be nothing for this chamber to do next week.

Senator Rowe: May I infer from that that we are likely to adjourn tomorrow afternoon as a matter of routine, or later?

Senator Perrault: Tomorrow afternoon, if the four bills are dealt with by then.

Senator Flynn: I think that estimate is a bit too arithmetic. The question is whether we will have completed the work on the bills before us.

Senator Perrault: That is what I said.

Senator Flynn: Or not.

Senator Perrault: That is what I said.

Senator Flynn: If we adjourn tomorrow, that will be in keeping with the normal practice. We should adjourn tomorrow whether or not we have completed the work before the Senate. We are not going to sit on Friday merely because Bill C-58 or Bill C-20, or whatever you like, is not completed. It would be normal to adjourn tomorrow, as we usually do, and come back next week if these bills are not dealt with, and then face the situation created by Bill C-84, which is an entirely different matter. I think the Leader of the Government should be able to give us the assurance that we will adjourn, as we normally do, on Thursday, tomorrow.

Senator Perrault: I want to assure honourable senators that we do not anticipate the need to employ extraordinary procedures to accelerate the work in this chamber. It may well be that we shall be back next week. There is no question about that. I simply suggest that if through some fortuitous circumstances, through the concise nature of certain contributions to debate in this chamber, we find ourselves in a position to adjourn tomorrow afternoon, or even Friday morning, if that be the case, there may be an opportunity to recess for a brief period of time until Bill C-84, the capital punishment bill, arrives.

Senator Flynn: That answer is not clear enough. I suggest that until we know about Bill C-84 we should deal with the business now before this house in the normal way, which is to adjourn tomorrow and come back on Tuesday. That is what I suggest. We should then know where we stand.

Senator Perrault: In any case, members of the Senate will meet fully their responsibilities.

Senator Flynn: It is not a question of meeting our responsibilities. It is a question of knowing when we are going to have to meet our responsibilities.

Senator Grosart: Would the Leader of the Government indicate the bills he seems to think require full implementation before we recess for whatever time it may be?

[Senator Perrault.]

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I will undertake to provide a report for the Senate about legislation which it is anticipated Parliament should deal with before the adjournment, or before prorogation.

• (1410)

Senator Grosart: That was not my question. My question was: What are the bills which, in the judgment of the Leader of the Government, would require a final disposition before the Senate might recess awaiting Bill C-84?

Senator Perrault: It would be our hope to dispose of Bill C-20, respecting citizenship; Bill C-58, to amend the Income Tax Act; Bill C-68, to amend the Medical Care Act; and Bill C-88, to amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act (No. 2).

Senator Grosart: Is there any great urgency in the passage of any of those bills?

Senator Perrault: We regard them as important pieces of legislation. The government always adopts that view.

CITIZENSHIP BILL

THIRD READING—MOTION IN AMENDMENT—ORDER STANDS UNTIL LATER THIS DAY

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Connolly, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Macnaughton, P.C., for the third reading of the Bill C-20, intituled: "An Act respecting citizenship", and

On the motion in amendment thereto of the Honourable Senator Macdonald, seconded by the Honourable Senator Grosart, that the bill be not now read the third time but that it be referred back to the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs for consideration of the implications of section 33.—(Honourable Senator Perrault, P.C.).

Senator Perrault: Stand until later this day.

Senator Flynn: At this point will the leader permit me to make an observation about what I said yesterday? I should like to give credit to Senator Goldenberg for pointing out to me that yesterday I overlooked subclause (7) of clause 33 which indicates that certain provisions of clause 33 are to "come into force in any province only upon a day fixed in a proclamation of the Governor in Council declaring those subsections to be in force in that province."

I had overlooked that provision because usually when there is a difference in the time of coming into force of the various subsections of an act, that information is conveyed in the last section of the act. Therefore, I wish to make clear now that my question is not on that point but is merely on the question of whether the minister would undertake not to bring in clause 33 before obtaining an opinion from the Supreme Court upon a reference as to its validity and constitutionality. My question, then, is not on the interpretation of clause 43, dealing with the coming into force of the act. I just wanted to clarify that point.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the reason I propose that we stand the bill until later this day is that I have not yet had the opportunity to speak to the Minister of Justice about the question raised by the honourable senator, although I have made the request to do so. It is just that I have not established contact yet. Although we hope to do so at any moment, I am simply unable to give the Leader of the Opposition an answer at the moment.

Senator Flynn: I was just trying to simplify the answer to be given by the Leader of the Government.

Senator Perrault: Thank you.

Order stands.

INCOME TAX ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT REFERRED BACK TO COMMITTEE

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Hayden, seconded by the Honourable Senator Bourget, P.C., for the adoption of the Report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on the Bill C-58, intituled: "An Act to amend the Income Tax Act".—(Honourable Senator Lang).

Senator Lang: Honourable senators, I seem to be in an uncharacteristically yielding mood these days, and I ask your indulgence to yield once again this afternoon to any other honourable senator who may wish to speak on this motion.

Senator Walker: What is going on?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators,—

Senator Flynn: He knows!

Senator Perrault: I rise to make only a few brief remarks. While in a rather restricted sense the question is before us as to acceptance or rejection of the very conscientious report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on the subject of Bill C-58, surely the question goes beyond that. We are concerned with developing in Parliament the best legislation that can possibly be developed on this important subject. It is gratifying to note that in the report there is great support for the principle of this bill by all those who have been associated with its debate and consideration. I want to assure honourable senators that since the introduction of this report on June 22 by the distinguished Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, very careful consideration has been given to its recommendations by the government. All senators have read this report with a great deal of interest. Without question, it contains a number of good ideas. Since June 22, as a number of senators are aware, there have been several useful and constructive conversations and discussions with respect to the views, suggestions and proposed amendments contained in the report.

So much so, that at this time I would like to make a proposal to the Senate, and I shall do so in the form of a motion. It is put forward in the hope that there can be further useful meetings and conversations concerning the bill and that there can be meetings of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce between now and the next time we meet, hopefully to achieve final resolution of some of the problems raised by the committee report. I want to indicate that the government is in a responsive mood with respect to some of these matters.

Honourable senators, I therefore move, seconded by the Honourable Senator George McIlraith, that the report be not now adopted but that it be referred back to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce for further consideration and report.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Hicks: Honourable senators, if we are not giving any instructions to the committee—

Senator Flynn: Wait a moment, please. The motion has not yet been put.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Hayden, seconded by the Honourable Senator Bourget, that this report be now adopted.

In amendment it is moved by the Honourable Senator Perrault, seconded by the Honourable Senator McIlraith, that the report be not now adopted but that it be referred back to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce for further consideration and report.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

Senator Hicks: Honourable senators, we are not referring this back with any instructions. Is there any hope that the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce may make changes in their report that will render the submission more acceptable to the house? Is there any further explanation that the Leader of the Government or the committee chairman can give to us on the subject?

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I do not accept the suggestion made by Senator Hicks that the report might be made more acceptable to the house, because the house has not made any decision on it as yet.

Senator Hicks: Fair enough. I was making certain inferences.

Senator Flynn: Yes, indeed. You have not spoken in this debate yet, but you just now succeeded in making your position quite clear. I think you side with Senator Davey, Senator Austin, and Senator Greene in saying that the report should be simply dismissed.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I do not think so.

Senator Hicks: I do not take that position at all.

Senator Flynn: I think you do, and if Senator Austin wants to explain his position further, I do not mind. I am willing to yield to him if he wants to explain.

Senator Austin: If Senator Flynn would read my contribution in the Debates of the Senate on June 30, he would understand that I was not prepared to support the report, but at the same time I was not prepared to support Bill C-58 unconditionally.

Senator Flynn: That is an impossible position, I would suggest.

Senator Walker: Who cares?

Senator Flynn: In any event, what I wanted to draw to the attention of the Senate is the fact that since the government is willing to compromise, or to listen, that is a good thing, and I think it is in contrast with the positions taken by Senator Davey, Senator Greene and, possibly, to some extent, though I cannot reconcile his two viewpoints, by Senator Austin too.

Motion in amendment agreed to, on division.

● (1420)

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1) (a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce have power to sit while the Senate is sitting today, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation there to.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators have heard the motion. Is there unanimous consent?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Grosart: Is the Senate sitting tonight?

Senator Langlois: There is a possibility. But it is for today at any rate.

Senator McIlraith: I wonder if the proposer of this motion would consider including tomorrow in case it becomes necessary for the committee to sit tomorrow morning while the Senate is sitting.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, in this respect I have checked with the chairman of the committee, and it is proposed, if necessary, that the committee will sit early tomorrow morning before the 11 o'clock meeting scheduled for the Senate.

Senator Flynn: Are we to understand that a meeting will be called for 8 o'clock this evening?

Senator Langlois: No, but at 5 o'clock this afternoon, and we might still be in session at that time. On the other hand we might have adjourned at that time. I don't know.

Senator Flynn: Then we get no dinner.

Senator Langlois: Well, it won't be the first time.

Motion agreed to.

MEDICAL CARE ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Denis for the second reading of Bill C-68, to amend the Medical Care Act.

Hon. George I. Smith: Honourable senators, so that there may be no doubt on which side of this bill I stand, because of the indefinite kind of my remarks, I want to make it clear now that I propose to vote against it. So if I leave any indecision in honourable senators' minds, or if I seem to do so, I would ask them to remember that I have declared my intention at this stage.

I am also mindful of the admonition of, I think it was, the Honourable Deputy Leader of the Government in the

[Senator Flynn.]

Senate that the length of speeches might have something to do with the length of time required to attend to all the business of the house. While I recognize the merit of that admonition, I do have to say that at the moment, at least, I do not feel able to give full effect to it because there are some things that are so full of inherent evil that they cannot be dismissed in a moment's talk.

What I want to say revolves around the proposition that this bill is inherently wrong, is an incredible reversal of a firm and longstanding commitment made to the provinces and the people of Canada, and is indeed a shameful piece of legislation to have before us. I should like to refer for a moment to the present act, the Medical Care Act, which is Chapter M-8 of the Revised Statutes of Canada 1970, and which first appeared in the Statutes of 1966-67 as chapter 64.

Of course, as stated in Bill C-68 itself, the purpose of this legislation is to amend a portion of the Medical Care Act which deals with the amount of the federal contribution to the provinces. Bill C-68 falls, so far as I can see, into two parts. First, the part which is concerned with how much of the total approved cost of the Medical Care Act has to be provided and paid by the Government of Canada, the taxpayers of Canada. Second, the part dealing with certain procedures and principles to be followed with reference to new insured services, with which for the purpose of my remarks I do not intend to deal at any length.

The part which deals with the share that the federal government purports to fix, and would fix if passed, ceilings on the federal payments, introducing an absolutely new concept into an old, well-established and well-understood plan.

Before proceeding to the specific provisions of the plan, I think it would be helpful to take a look for a moment at the history which preceded this bill and which preceded the introduction of the Medical Care Act. In 1965 at a federal-provincial conference the then Prime Minister, the Right Honourable Lester B. Pearson, announced to the conference that the federal government had resolved to provide federal financial support for provincially administered medical plans and indicated that the federal government would be encouraging provinces to put such plans in place. He then pledged and made no reservations about it whatever—anyone in doubt of this may refer to the proceedings of that conference—that the federal government would pay 50 per cent of the cost of the approved medical services provided provincial plans met four basic principles, which he then enumerated. They should be comprehensive and provide a comprehensive scale of medical services. They should be universal; that is, they should cover the great majority of the population of the province—at one time the figure mentioned was 90 per cent. The plans should be administered by a public organization rather than by a private insurance carrier or some other private organization. The plans should be portable.

This, as I say, was in 1965. In 1966, almost exactly 10 years ago, on July 12, 1966, the then Minister of National Health and Welfare, the Honourable Allan MacEachen, introduced the usual resolution concerning the Medical Care bill, which was the proposed bill at that time. He made a speech in support of that resolution. As reported at page 7544 of the House of Commons Hansard of July 12, 1966, Mr. MacEachen said:

I am proud, Mr. Chairman, to be the pilot of this new measure, which will extend the benefits now available beyond the doors of the hospital, ensuring the availability of physicians' services whether these be provided in the doctor's office or in the patient's home. As hon. members know, the federal government has for some years been examining ways and means of ensuring that the opportunity for good health which is now viewed in western democracies as a right possessed by all should be available to every citizen of our country. This effort springs not only from a deepening of our humanitarian concern for our fellow citizens, but from a realization that we cannot afford the social and economic consequences of our failure to do so.

● (1430)

At the following page, 7545, Mr. MacEachen said:

The Government of Canada believes that all Canadians should be able to obtain health services of high quality according to their need for such services and irrespective of their ability to pay. And we believe the only practical and effective way of doing this is through a universal prepaid, government sponsored scheme...

The federal government's proposal, as hon. members know, is to offer the provinces a sizable sum of money to support provincial medical care insurance programs which meet certain established standards.

And he enumerated the standards, which are those I attributed to the Prime Minister in his statement at the federal-provincial conference the preceding year. He goes on, at page 7546, to say:

At the same time not all of the provinces have the same fiscal capability of providing such programs or of meeting the costs of programs designed for all residents. Thus, although Canada is one country a Canadian resident of one province may be at a distinct disadvantage when compared with a Canadian resident of another province...

Thus while it is the policy of this government to redefine its role in so far as conditional grant programs are concerned—

He is talking about a long-standing program of grants.

—it may not abrogate its obligation to ensure the national character of our country by establishing an acceptable level of services available to all citizens. It is proposed, therefore, that with the full cooperation of the provinces the federal government will support medical care programs which meet the four basic principles...

From the national point of view it is also essential to ensure that there is no differentiation in coverage between the residents of one province and another if federal funds are to be provided.

And here are words of commitment with reference to finances, which appear at page 7548 of Hansard of July 12.

Where provinces bring in medical care programs meeting these principles then the federal government, under the proposed bill, would accept fiscal responsibility for a contribution equal to one half of the present per capita cost of insured services in those provinces participating in the plan.

I repeat.

—the federal government... would accept fiscal responsibility for a contribution equal to one half of the present per capita cost of insured services in those provinces participating in the plan.

He then closes with some glowing words.

The introduction of this resolution, Mr. Chairman, I believe marks an historic day for this parliament and for Canada. The program it spells out goes a long way toward closing the gap in our over-all social security system. It is our hope it will result in the commencement of provincial medical care plans covering all Canadians on the 100th birthday of Confederation, July 1, 1967. This would be a most appropriate way to mark our birthday, since it would ensure ready access to medical care to all of our people, regardless of means, of pre-existing conditions, of age, or other circumstances which may have barred such access in the past.

Senator Sullivan: May I ask the honourable senator a question? Has he the glowing words used by the Honourable John Robarts at the time of that federal-provincial conference in 1966 in regard to this plan?

Senator Smith (Colchester): No; I do not think I have the precise words.

Senator Sullivan: Would you like to hear them?

Senator Smith (Colchester): I was present and heard Premier Robarts deliver himself of some very vigorous sentiments, which, as I recall, had the general effect of a prophecy that while this sounded pretty good, it looked to him as though it might turn out to be one of the greatest frauds perpetrated on the people of Canada in all time. Those were not his precise words—

Senator Flynn: Are you satisfied with that, Senator Sullivan?

Senator Sullivan: If the honourable senator would like to hear the exact quotation, I shall be pleased to tell him.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Why certainly. I yield to the honourable senator.

Senator Sullivan: The Honourable John Robarts said at that conference, "Gentlemen, this is the greatest Machiavellian fraud ever perpetrated upon the people of Canada and rammed down the throats of the provinces."

Senator Smith (Colchester): My memory stood me in better stead than I thought it would. Let us proceed to the next step in history, so far as the records of Parliament go. Let us look at the speech of the Honourable Mr. MacEachen as Minister of National Health and Welfare on October 13, 1966, at page 8610 of Hansard of that year. He said he was pleased to move the second reading of the bill:

In the interim since this bill was presented for second reading members will have had an opportunity to study its provisions carefully and, I am sure, constructively. The medical care bill is a short but significant piece of legislation. It has only nine clauses and in this respect is identical with the Hospital Insurance and Diagnostic Services Act passed by this parliament in 1956. I mention this parallel simply to show that good things may come in small packages, for surely we have all lived very happily with our hospital insurance legislation and I doubt that any member of the house would want to see it dismantled.

He speaks about the four principles I mentioned, and then, beginning at page 8611, he said:

It was with the cost of physicians' services in mind that the section in the bill dealing with the calculation of the federal contribution was drawn up. This federal contribution will be equal to 50 per cent of the national per capita cost of insured services incurred by the province for the year—

Meaning every succeeding year.

—multiplied by the average for the year of the number of insured persons.

I repeat his words.

This federal contribution will be equal to 50 per cent of the national per capita cost of insured services incurred by the province for the year, multiplied by the average for the year of the number of insured persons.

So there we have—

An Hon. Senator: Nothing!

Senator Smith (Colchester): Perhaps Senator Hicks will be able to deliver his views on my speech in such a valuable and useful way that all members of the Senate will be able to listen to them. We then have, as the culmination of this glowing account of what the provinces could expect from the Medical Care Bill, the fact that the Medical Care Act was passed into law. Section 3 of the present chapter M-8 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1970, reads as follows:

A contribution is payable by Canada to each province in accordance with this Act, calculated for each year in respect of the cost of insured services incurred by the province in the year pursuant to a medical care insurance plan of the province.

Then we proceed to section 5(1), which reads:

The amount of the contribution payable by Canada to a province for a year in respect of a medical care insurance plan of the province is an amount, as determined by the Minister on the basis of information furnished as required by this Act, equal to 50% of

(a) the per capita cost for the year of all insured services furnished pursuant to medical care insurance plans of participating provinces multiplied by

(b) the average for the year of the number of insured persons in the province at the end of each month in the year.

● (1440)

Throughout the whole period of time this matter was the subject of discussion between the provinces and the federal government, and debate in Parliament, to the final enactment of the bill, emphasis was placed on the payment by the federal government of 50 per cent of the approved costs of the plan to each of the provinces. Nowhere is there a scintilla of evidence that the federal government during that period was hedging its promise. These were clear-cut statements. I have read them and I have provided honourable senators with the appropriate references. If anyone has any doubt about it, I invite an examination of those references and any others that can be found.

[Senator Smith (Colchester).]

It is clear that the 50 per cent provision was not merely a casual commitment made in a lighthearted moment, but a solemn promise made by the then Prime Minister to the provinces gathered in conference, repeated by the Minister of National Health and Welfare in speaking to the resolution, repeated again by that minister in speaking in the debate on the motion for the second reading of the Medical Care Bill, and then solemnized by the Parliament of Canada in the Medical Care Act, and acted upon by all concerned to this very day.

There it is, honourable senators—a solemn promise made to the provinces to induce them to set up medicare plans under the conditions contained in the Medical Care Act, acted upon by them in good faith, and acted upon by the Government of Canada in what appeared to be a manner consistent with good faith up to a certain time, and that certain time was not so very long ago. That time was June 23, 1975, when the then Minister of Finance of Canada introduced his budget and unilaterally, without any agreement with the provinces, stated, as reported at pages 7026 and 7027 of the House of Commons Debates of that date:

A second measure aimed at more effective cost control involves the establishment of a ceiling on the yearly rise in the contributions the federal government makes to the provinces under the Medical Care Act. Since provincial administrations will need some time to adjust their planning, this ceiling will be made effective for 1976 and subsequent years. More specifically a ceiling will be placed on the per capita rate of growth of federal contributions to provinces. This ceiling will be 13 per cent in 1976-77, 10½ per cent in 1977-78 and 8½ per cent in 1978-79 and subsequent years.

There was a declaration that the solemn promise used to induce the provinces to enter into this plan, acted upon by them and by the Government of Canada, was to be departed from. In part of his speech, the then minister made reference to consultations which had been held between the federal government and the provincial governments on the question of controlling costs under the Hospital Insurance Act. But in his speech, as I read it, I can find no suggestion that there were any discussions or consultations with the provinces in respect of the Medical Care Act and any change in the legislation relating to it.

It will not be surprising, I am sure, to any honourable senator whose memory recalls the events which followed that budget, that this met with a storm of disapproval from the provinces. In a few moments, with permission of the house, I will give some examples thereof.

I would ask honourable senators to think for a moment of the speech of the present Minister of National Health and Welfare on the motion for the second reading of the bill which we have before us, which took place on January 28, 1976, in the other place, as reported in House of Commons Debates at page 10408. He made some reference to consultations which had taken place, as I read his speech, after Mr. Turner's budget and after the introduction of this bill, which took place on July 8, 1975. It was introduced by the Honourable Mitchell Sharp on behalf of the Minister of National Health and Welfare.

After making reference to various problems relating to the control of costs and consultations he had had with the provinces since the budget and since the bill had been introduced in July of 1975, he said he would propose three amendments to the bill as it was introduced. The first amendment that he would propose to the committee, if it got that far, was that a specific ceiling be included in the bill for only the years 1976-77 and 1977-78, and after that the ceiling would be set by order in council. Some people may view that as an improvement, but I view it as a most reprehensible way of deciding anything so important as this.

He went on to say that he would also propose that federal payments for any new services which might be approved, if any ever were, would go only to the provinces in which these new services were provided, and that a third amendment would be that if any of these new insurance services were approved there would be a 36-month exemption in respect thereof from the ceilings as imposed.

A moment ago, in answer to a question from Senator Sullivan, I recalled as best I could the comments of the Premier of Ontario at the time in question. I would also like to draw attention to the statement of the then Treasurer of Ontario, the Honourable Charles S. Macnaughton, to the federal-provincial meeting of finance ministers held in November 1968, at which time he asked:

What guarantee have we that in a few years from now, the federal government will not dump the full responsibility for this programme on the provinces, and close off or limit its contributions after it has obliged the provinces to embark on its slippery slope?

Honourable senators, how right he was to be thus concerned, and how right time is proving his concern to be. We have a federal government which persuaded the provinces to embark on a program of medicare on the promise that the federal government would pay 50 per cent of the costs. Now the provinces are in and, as the minister phrases it, the plan has reached its maturity. Now that their resources are committed, the same government welshes on its promises and unilaterally proposes to set a ceiling on its share.

Senator Flynn: Shame!

Senator Smith (Colchester): I say, again, how right he was. The rest of us trusted the word of the federal government at that time. The then Treasurer of the Province of Ontario apparently had a keener vision of its regard for a promise. I venture to say that all of the provinces, and most Canadians, will look with a jaundiced eye on further promises of this government, and I venture the assertion, too, that this kind of unilateral activity, this unilateral backing out on a promise, has done a great deal of harm to the relations between the Government of Canada and the governments of the provinces—harm to the very important field of relations between the federal and provincial governments, harm to the people of Canada, not only as Canadian taxpayers but as provincial and municipal taxpayers, and harm which will far outweigh any possible saving the federal government might hope to realize in its own treasury from this most invidious action.

● (1450)

I said a moment ago that I would, with leave of the Senate, give some indication of the comments of the provinces when they learned of this unilateral declaration of the Minister of Finance on June 23, 1975. Manitoba, through its Minister of Health and Social Development in a communication to the government, said in part:

Your government's decision to proceed with major changes on a unilateral basis is a serious disappointment to our province and, I assume, to most others... Not only does the decision represent an apparent breach of our earlier understanding... but also, and more importantly, it suggests that your Government has every intention of implementing the legislative changes which will cause the primary responsibility for the future reform of health care and for the maintenance of existing service standards to be borne by the provincial governments and their taxpayers.

Quebec, on June 25, in a telegram to the Government of Canada, or one of its ministers, said:

First of all, I deplore the unilateral—

Listen to that word, "unilateral".

—ceiling put on medical insurance by the federal government without warning... One must make the distinction between an economic measure favouring the Quebec taxpayer and an economic measure destined to advantage nothing but the federal treasury—the statement by [your] Government belongs to this second category.

Nova Scotia, in a letter written to a private member of Parliament, without disclosing any breach of privacy, said:

In summary, we regret that the Government used the Budget speech to advise the provinces of the limitations, but as mentioned above, Nova Scotia is willing to meet with Ottawa to discuss the limits on medical insurance and new arrangements on hospital insurance.

Ontario, on July 24, as reported in an interview with the Toronto Star, said:

But the feds have been talking with the provinces for three years and all their proposals amount to is their opting out.

Or, as stated in the Ontario legislature on June 24, 1975, by the Minister of Health:

Now, if I have ever seen any example of unilateral—

Note that word again.

—decision-making without consultation with the provinces, that is it.

Saskatchewan, in an address made to the Victoria conference of health ministers on August 18, 1975, said:

The Government of Saskatchewan deplores the unilateral decision of the federal government... I consider these decisions of the federal government high-handed and insensitive. We... also believe that [in the past] we have been misled by the federal government.

New Brunswick said, through the Minister of Health in a letter to a member of Parliament dated July 18, 1975:

One sincerely regrets the actions of the federal government and the far-reaching deleterious effect that will obviously occur in Provincial-Federal relationships.

Honourable senators, I mentioned the conference of provincial ministers of health held in Victoria on, I think it was, August 18 and 19, 1975. I cannot at the moment lay my hands on it but, in any event, the general thrust of its comment was exactly the same as, in summary, were the comments of the various provinces I have just read to you. If in due course I find this quotation I will ask you to give me time to read it to you.

In the meantime, I should like now to turn to the speech—which at least had the merit of being brief, and I am sure I cannot claim that merit for mine—made by the sponsor of the bill, Senator Denis, in the Senate on June 30 this year, reported in Hansard at page 2317. He did not make many points, but he did make the following which I wish to mention: consultation; a reference to the substantial amendment; the allegation that the present situation is a blank cheque to the provinces; the suggestion that the federal government wants to be a full partner in this plan; and some remark about holding down excessive increases in salaries.

On the question of consultation, I should like to emphasize that there are many kinds of consultation. Some of them are good, and some of them are useless. A consultation, in any true sense, is not simply going to somebody, or some group of people, and saying, "This is what I am going to do". A consultation in any true and useful sense is a discussion with the people who are interested in the subject you want to discuss, and who will have an opportunity to contribute whatever they are able to contribute to the various factors worthy of consideration before a final decision is made.

I suggest, first, that before the budget and before this bill was introduced in July 1975, there was no consultation of any useful kind whatsoever. You will note the use in almost all of the comments I read to you from the provinces of the word "unilateral." "Unilateral" simply implies that there was no consultation involved in the subject in hand.

Honourable senators, I have now found the extract from the comments of the provincial health ministers at the Victoria conference on August 18 and 19, 1975. This was said at the close of the conference:

Health Ministers agreed (d) on the need to control rapidly escalating health costs... Negotiations on health cost sharing, which have been under way for some time—

A reference primarily to hospital insurance.

—and which were progressing well, have been undermined by this arbitrary decision. The Ministers call(ed) on the federal government to continue discussions on more acceptable financial arrangements with the provinces and to withdraw its proposed amendment to the federal Medicare Act (Bill C-68.)

Senator Hicks: When was this?

Senator Smith (Colchester): This was at the provincial health ministers' conference on August 18 and 19, 1975, at

[Senator Smith (Colchester).]

Victoria. The ministers apparently also agreed on the following statement:

The Ministers also agree(d) that further technical meetings of officials to discuss cost-sharing matters are inappropriate until agreement in principle has been reached on the basis of sharing health costs.

The Ministers also felt strongly that bilateral meetings (such as Mr. Lalonde has proposed for the months of September-October) are not an acceptable substitute for full and open discussion of an issue of such national importance.

It is my understanding—and this can be verified by examining reports relating to the conference—that these were all agreed upon by the provinces after being initially put forward by British Columbia.

• (1500)

Some discussions have been going on at the federal-provincial conference of health ministers just a few hundred yards from here. They started yesterday. As I understand it the conference was supposed to continue for two days, but—

Senator Croll: Do you mean the finance ministers?

Senator Smith (Colchester): Yes, you are quite right. Thank you for the correction, Senator Croll.

Senator Flynn: He is always correct.

Senator Smith (Colchester): He certainly was that time, anyway.

Senator Flynn: Good for him.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I would not suggest that because it was an exception it was more noticeable.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Smith (Colchester): Well, I am not sure just what has happened at this conference, but one of the somewhat unusual features of our system of federal government is that quite a bit of law-making is carried on behind closed doors at these federal-provincial conferences—conferences which sometimes have the most far-reaching consequences to our country, to our citizens and to our taxpayers, but which altogether bypass the members of Parliament. I have participated in a good many of those conferences myself, and I am still not sure whether they are right or wrong, but they seem to be an inevitable characteristic of our federal-provincial relations as we now know them.

But I would take it that all that has happened since Mr. Turner's budget—the introduction of this bill in July a year ago, the conference of health ministers at Victoria last August and the consultations which must have gone on since—has not been able to alleviate very much the fears and resentments of the provinces.

I have before me this morning's issue of a paper which I know is not universally beloved in this house but which is rather well known as one of the more widely read newspapers in Canada. In today's issue is the headline: "Provinces opposed to federal proposal on sharing revenue." The lead paragraph in the article says:

It was the poor provinces against the rich but all the provinces together against Ottawa yesterday at the federal-provincial finance ministers' conference.

Senator Croll: What is the newspaper?

Senator Smith (Colchester): I thought everyone would recognize it by the description. It is the Globe and Mail. It carries the address "Toronto" on the front page, and I am sure Senator Croll is familiar with it. I did indicate that I recognize that it is not universally popular among members of this house.

Senator Sullivan: Or any house.

Senator Smith (Colchester): However, I have also before me a page from today's issue of another well known paper published in this city, the Citizen, which deals with this same conference. The headline has at the top in rather small print, "Finance ministers' session," and under that in pretty large print, "Provinces not pleased with federal proposals." Then the two lead paragraphs go on as follows:

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald Tuesday spelled out federal proposals for changing the major financing agreements it shares with the provinces, but won little support from provincial finance ministers meeting here.

Here is the sentence that indicates the great displeasure that the ministers felt with the federal proposals:

The ministers cut short their planned two-day conference and went home complaining that the federal proposals may mean higher taxes, reduced standards of service for health and education, or both, for some of the provinces.

Now, honourable senators, when we come to talk of consultations with the provinces with reference to this bill, I suggest that the kind of consultation that took place was obviously not the kind of consultation that could have the least effect in persuading the provinces that their rights were being reasonably regarded. It was not the kind of consultation that would give them an opportunity to make a real input into the consideration of the problem before the decisions were made, and even after the lapse of a year it has not been sufficient to persuade them that they are being treated fairly. So I have to say that as far as I am concerned, any suggestion that any kind of proper consultation took place with the provinces or with the medical profession, which also asked at one stage at least that this bill be withdrawn, is not acceptable. That kind of suggestion is simply not acceptable, and cannot be accepted by anyone who has really taken any opportunity to find out what the facts really are.

One can say beyond the slightest fear of being proved to be wrong that any allegation made in support of this bill that it is pursuant to meaningful consultations with the provinces cannot possibly be supported by the facts, and cannot possibly be used as an argument by any legislator or by any member of the Senate contemplating the reasons which merit his support of this bill.

When the honourable sponsor of this bill also said that by this substantial amendment ceilings would not be contained in the bill except for the present fiscal year and the next fiscal year, and that after that they would be determined by order in council, he was simply leading us out of the frying pan and into a very hot fire. I don't want ceilings. I think they are contrary to every fair and reasonable consideration on which the provinces entered into this plan. But if we have to have ceilings then, by all means, let them be imposed, but let them be imposed by the members of Parliament. Let them not be left to order in council. They are too fundamental, too important, too substantial to be left to what may be decided by an order in council two years from now, three years from now or four years from now. To my mind, if there has to be a ceiling, then by all means put it in the bill, but do not leave it in the hands of the people whose conduct I have been complaining about all along today.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Smith (Colchester): It is true that there is a provision in the bill that an order in council may be brought before the other place for discussion if 50 members thereof sign a petition asking that that be done, and that if a motion in response thereto is passed by the house it can be submitted to this house and, if passed by this house, be fulfilled either to cancel the ceilings or to change them to some other ceilings. But what good is that? That is merely a sop thrown to those who believe that such things as this should not be done by order in council. Does anybody seriously think that the government of the day, during the debate on a petition signed by 50 members of Parliament, will see its own order in council changed? It will apply the whip. It will see to it that its majority ensures it has its way, whatever party it may be in 1978-79—and I am sure it will not be the present one.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Even that great improvement does not move me to think that government by order in council is good government.

● (1510)

Senator Croll: You practised it.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I am sorry, Senator Croll; I shall be glad to deal with your question, if it was one.

Senator Lamontagne: You deserve another four years.

Senator Smith (Colchester): It might take the people of Canada another year to change things, but it looks pretty inevitable.

The honourable senator also, putting before the house something that somebody had placed before him, I suppose, said that the present system is just giving the provinces a blank cheque to do what they like about costs of medicare. I say not only that this assertion is completely incorrect, but that it is an extremely unfair statement. After all, the provinces have to find their 50 per cent or, in the case of the poorer provinces, because of the way the formula works, not quite 50 per cent. They have just as hard a struggle finding their 50 per cent as the federal government does, and they have to spend a good deal of time on that struggle. I know what the provinces have to go through in this regard, and I say that the suggestion that there is a blank cheque for the provinces, that there is no incentive for them to help cut down costs, is completely and utterly unjustified and completely and utterly unfair.

There was also an assertion in the speech that of course the federal government wants to be a full partner. One thing the bill does is to ensure that they will not be if certain eventualities happen. They are full partners now, but the whole object of this bill is to make sure they are not full partners, if the increase in costs exceeds the rates as set out in the bill.

Senator Flynn: That is right.

Senator Smith (Colchester): So this statement is obviously seen, when you look at the bill itself, to be one that is completely contrary to the principle of the bill.

Honourable senators, you have been very patient with me.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Flynn: You have been extremely convincing.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I appreciate your agreement with my statement, of course, but if the applause that occurred indicated the hope that it might cut short my remarks, I am afraid I might disappoint you.

Senator Flynn: Of course. More, more!

Senator Lamontagne: We can sit tonight.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Yes, and perhaps go on tomorrow as well.

Honourable senators, it is clear that the provinces were angry about this bill not only from the time of Mr. Turner's budget to the time the bill was introduced, but that they are still angry about it. Even if the bill stood alone, as I have said, it would indeed be a source of serious damage to federal-provincial relations. However, it does not stand alone. We all know that. All you have to do is look at what was published as being the matters discussed at the federal-provincial conference, which evidently did not live as long as was anticipated.

This government is doing the same thing in a number of fields. It has given notice to terminate the health insurance agreement with the provinces. It has unilaterally made a decision to change the system of payment of the amounts, as I understand it, for the moment at least, and is doing so to the detriment of the provinces, in respect of their contributions to post-secondary education. They are going back on their guarantee to the provinces against loss to them because of the so-called reform of the Income Tax Act. And of course, which is something that is very fresh in everybody's mind, they have introduced a wage and price control system after winning an election on a promise not to do so. Who, therefore, can blame the provinces, or the people of Canada, if they are angry and unhappy with, and distrustful of, the present government? They certainly have every reason to feel that way.

This bill is a manifestation of how far the government has departed from the rules of fair play, of how it has become dedicated to government by confrontation, government by unilateral decision, and government as its fancy moves it.

I thank you again for listening to me. I have to declare, in case there is any doubt left, that I propose to vote against the bill.

On motion of Senator Phillips, debate adjourned.

AIR TRANSPORTATION

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES ACT—LANGUAGE RIGHTS OF AIR PILOTS IN PROVINCE OF QUEBEC—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne moved, pursuant to notice:

[Senator Smith (Colchester).]

That the Senate affirms its full support of the Official Languages Act, including the right of air pilots to operate in the province of Quebec in either of the two official languages according to their choice, provided that the exercise of that right be compatible with air safety standards as certified from time to time under the authority of the Aeronautics Act.

He said: Honourable senators, I intend to speak only in English today, because I wish to make a special appeal to my English-speaking colleagues. I want to invite them to join with me and other French-speaking senators in a collective and unanimous reassertion of our faith in a bilingual Canada as defined in the Official Languages Act.

The adoption of this motion would not mean that we support all aspects of the government program in this area. I myself have some reservations about certain features of that program. I feel, however, that this is not the time to discuss them.

When the Leader of the Opposition spoke in this chamber on July 9, 1969, almost exactly seven years ago, on the day when the bill dealing with official languages was unanimously approved by the Senate, he said:

● (1520)

We must not expect too much of this bill; it will not solve all the problems that the most optimistic are hoping it will. Nevertheless, I believe the bill represents a step forward that it was absolutely necessary to take.

The current crisis—

Senator Flynn: Would the honourable senator permit a question at this stage? I am moved by the fact that he is quoting me, but as I told him, because he was kind enough to let me know in advance about his motion, I do not see the relevance of the wording to the real problem with which we are faced, and with which he wants to deal. So I wonder if he would not agree to stand the question until we can have some discussion as to the wording of his motion in order to relate it precisely to the problem so that it will not end up as vague as I consider it to be at this time. I am willing to discuss this matter, but under the terms the senator is proposing I have serious reservations.

Senator Lamontagne: Well, honourable senators, the motion has now been put and I am prepared to speak to it. If the Leader of the Opposition or any other member of this house has suggestions as to ways and means of amending the motion which would be acceptable to me and to others, then I would be quite prepared to accept such amendment, but I do not think I should delay what I have to say this afternoon on the motion as it stands.

Senator Flynn: But the honourable senator realizes that his speech may make it more difficult to get a wording which will carry unanimous approval.

Senator Lamontagne: We will see once I have concluded my remarks.

Senator Flynn: The usual flexibility of the honourable senator!

Senator Lamontagne: I am very sorry, honourable senators, that Senator Flynn has chosen to take this kind of attitude this afternoon. This certainly was not my approach to the problem. I took care to communicate with him in Quebec City yesterday morning, and I had another discussion with him yesterday afternoon. It is my construction, at least, that he agreed to the text of the motion when we met yesterday afternoon, and he is now putting the wording of the motion in doubt at this late stage. I think I should be allowed to continue my remarks.

Senator Flynn: On a point of privilege, honourable senators, it is true that we had some meetings yesterday, but the honourable senator will acknowledge that this afternoon before we entered the house I suggested to him that he might postpone this motion in order to have further discussions as to the wording, and he said, "No, take it or leave it." So I think I can put my dissent as to the wording on record at this point.

Senator Lamontagne: I certainly intend at this moment, as it is my right as a member of this chamber—

Senator Flynn: It is your right certainly, but I was trying to find out whether you had achieved a little more flexibility than you used to have in the past.

Senator Lamontagne: I think that if the honourable senator is patient enough to wait for the end of my remarks he will find I am flexible enough, and I would certainly be in a position even after I have completed my remarks to entertain modifications of the motion.

Senator Flynn: I did not want to be told that afterwards.

Senator Croll: That is the price of sitting over there—you are always told afterwards.

Senator Flynn: And I know why Senator Croll always wants to be on the side of the majority.

Senator Croll: The comfortable majority.

Senator Lamontagne: Having quoted what the Leader of the Opposition said in 1969, honourable senators, I want to add that the current crisis shows how right and realistic Senator Flynn was seven years ago.

Senator Flynn: And I am still.

Senator Lamontagne: Which does not mean that he is today.

Today a great number of Canadians, both English-speaking and French-speaking, have the impression that the spirit and principles embodied in the Official Languages Act have been abandoned, or at least seriously weakened. The House of Commons and the government under present conditions can do very little to remove that impression. The Senate, however, is completely free to reaffirm its full support of the act, and I believe that the current situation justifies such a move. If this motion is adopted, Canadians will know that the Senate, at least—this chamber of sober second thought, as we so often say—still fully supports the ideal of a bilingual Canada as envisaged in the act.

The other part of the motion, honourable senators, deals with the dispute over the language of air control in the province of Quebec. I decided to raise this issue partly after reading the excellent article which appeared last Friday in the Gazette. The article stated as follows:

A number of associations, French and English, have been busy leaping to conclusions and passing resolutions these past few days, then firing them off to Ottawa... In a country of two intermeshing linguistic communities it is a rudimentary principle that cooperation between the two to settle their differences cannot be limited to federal government channels.

This "leave it to the government" attitude is not good enough. I believe that the dispute has reached such proportions as to require the involvement of Parliament, of the Senate more particularly, because of its historical mission with respect to minority and provincial rights. The Gazette's editorial also states:

The dispute over the language of air control has been characterized by jockeying for position, rather than cool consideration of the merits of the issue, from the beginning.

As far as I am concerned, I want to concentrate as objectively as possible on the merits of the issue, and in so doing I will use a background paper entitled "Bilingual Air Traffic Services" which was sent to all members of Parliament by the Ministry of Transport on June 22. First, I intend to deal briefly with the situation existing in other countries with respect to the language of air control. The regulations of the International Civil Aviation Organization contain two main recommendations in this respect. The first one reads as follows:

In general, the air-ground radiotelephony communications should be conducted in the language normally used by the station on the ground.

The second recommendation states:

Pending the development and adoption of a more suitable form of speech for universal use in aeronautical radiotelephony communications, the English language should be used as such and should be available, on request from any aircraft station unable to comply with 5.2.1.1.1, at all stations on the ground serving designated airports and routes used by international air services.

● (1530)

Accordingly, many countries, including France, Italy, Spain, Belgium, Switzerland, Japan, Norway, Eastern Europe and most countries of South America, normally use their national languages but make English available to meet the needs of international operations. To my knowledge there has never been any complaint about those air control systems, and our own Canadian pilots have accepted those conditions without raising the safety issue.

In Canada, the Civil Aeronautics Branch of the Department of Transport is responsible for determining air safety standards, including the language of air control. Its personnel is widely recognized for their great expertise. It has at its disposal an air traffic control simulation centre which is supposed to be one of the best and most sophisticated of its type in the world. It is also claimed that certified air safety standards in Canada are more strict than those of most other countries. Under such conditions, and as an individual who is also vitally interested in his own safety as well as that of others, I have full confidence in the normal procedure which has been applied up to now in Canada for the certification of air safety standards, including regulations regarding the language or languages of air control. I strongly believe that this normal procedure should continue to apply in the future without any undue outside interference, political or otherwise. I just want to add that I wish I had the same confidence in our safety standards regarding the use and disposition of nuclear material.

The Aeronautics Act does not specifically prescribe the use of either English or French, but until 1962 English only was used in Canada. In 1962, the Department of Transport issued a directive authorizing pilots to use French in the province of Quebec in situations of stress and emergency provided that the gist of those communications be repeated in English. Thus the use of French has been authorized in those situations since 1962, not as a political concession but as a measure designed to improve air safety.

Since June 1974, the Minister of Transport has authorized the use of French in addition to English in the provision of airport control service to aircraft operating in accordance with the visual flight rules at five airports—Quebec City, St. Jean, Baie Comeau, Sept Îles and St. Honoré. During those two years of bilingual service, no evidence of unsafe incidents resulting from misunderstanding of either official language has been validated. Since last spring, bilingual aeradio advisory services have been available throughout the province of Quebec. In the last few weeks, bilingual airport control services to aircraft operating in accordance with the visual flight rules have been extended to Val d'Or and Bagotville.

What remains to be decided is whether or not to provide fully bilingual airport control services in Quebec—that is to authorize the use of French in addition to English in visual flight rules to Dorval, Mirabel and St. Hubert, and to extend that practice to instrument flight rules throughout the province. These last steps will present more complex problems requiring extensive study. It has been estimated that the simulation experiments begun last March and designed to consider those problems may take 15 to 18 months before they are completed. It appears to me, however, in the light of well-established international practices, that fully bilingual services in Quebec can be supplied within the framework of normal safety requirements, provided they are introduced gradually and in cooperation with all those concerned. I am also under the impression that if English-speaking Canadian pilots can operate efficiently in other countries under the existing regulations recommended by the International Civil Aviation Organization, they will be able to operate as efficiently in Quebec under the same conditions. However, my impression can be wrong.

That is why I make a plea to all those concerned, which includes all Canadians, to keep a cool and rational attitude and to suspend their final judgment until the simulation and other technical studies have been properly carried out. In making that plea I do not intend, and my motion is not intended, to interfere in any way with the work being undertaken by the commission established by the Minister of Transport.

The solution of the technical difficulties involved in the introduction of the new bilingual services is only part of the story. The human element, the willingness to make the system work, is also very important. This is why I hope that the members of the Association des Gens de l'Air du Québec will be patient, in spite of present difficult circumstances, and will participate actively and constructively in the simulation and other technical studies which have been initiated. I also hope that the members of CATCA and CALPA will do the same, and participate in those studies in a truly professional manner and as good Canadians.

I wish to say to all those groups that they should always bear in mind that they have very important responsibilities which go much beyond their respective interests, their feelings and what they may consider rightly or wrongly to be their rights. Air safety depends not only on their competence but also on their daily and friendly cooperation. The cold war now existing between those groups and their members represents in my view a serious air hazard in itself which should concern all Canadians, and which should be removed immediately.

● (1540)

To achieve this most important objective, I propose that a formula should be found to enable the antagonists to meet as human beings and good citizens on mutually acceptable grounds, under the auspices of an appropriate Senate committee if desirable, to negotiate at least a viable truce until the simulation and other technical studies have been completed.

According to many people, English-French relations in Canada are presently in a state of crisis. It is not the first time that this has happened in our history, and I am sure it will not be the last. But, as the Gazette's editorial says:

It might be an idea to look around the world and see if there is some nation whose particular problems one would sooner share than Canada's.

Some Canadians on both sides believe that if Quebec were to separate, our problems and conflicts would go away. This is not true. Geography and economics will never allow us to ignore each other. Indeed, the separation of Quebec could make some of these problems and conflicts even more acute than they are within Confederation.

We have to learn, therefore, to live together and to overcome crises when they arise in a rational way, so that there will not be any victors and vanquished. So far as I am concerned, I am against French power and English power. I am for Canadian power, which can rest only on balance, compromise and the active participation of our two main founding communities and the other ethnic groups who have joined us in the course of Canadian history.

We must always be aware of the fact that feelings and emotions, if allowed to prevail between ethnic groups, will divide us, as they so often do in other areas of human relations. Only the voice of reason will unite us in our best mutual interests. This is the voice that will be expressed in this house and hopefully will be heard throughout the country if this motion is adopted.

Hon. David Walker: Honourable senators, as you all know, I have a great admiration for the ability of my friend who has just spoken, but I think that what we have in front of us today is a problem which is fundamental.

Before saying anything further, I should point out that I agree with him that whatever we do should be done in the spirit of conscious logic, with no emotion one way or the other. I hope that I shall express myself in that way, because I appreciate very much the position taken by my honourable friend and what he has in mind.

At the present time we have—although it might not have suited my friend—a solution to this problem. At least, we have the machinery for a solution. I did not set it up. The Conservative Party was not consulted about setting it up. Perhaps my friend, who is no longer in the cabinet, was not consulted, but certainly the Leader of the Government was. The solution was that this whole thing should be adjudicated by a commission of three very distinguished men. They were picked, apparently, to the satisfaction of the minister and the representatives of the pilots and controllers. That is set out clearly at page 14926 of the House of Commons Debates of June 28, in the memorandum of understanding, signed voluntarily by all three parties.

It might not suit my friend, and it might not suit us on this side of the house because we were not consulted. It might not suit also those on the other side of the house; but there is a memorandum of agreement, of understanding, between the Minister of Transport, the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association and the Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association. I quote from paragraph 2:

That a prerequisite to the expansion or introduction of any bilingual air traffic service—

That is what my friend is talking about.

—be a unanimous report of the Commission declaring the proposed expansion or introduction to be consistent with the maintenance of current safety standards in Canadian air operations.

We did not do this. They decided that it should be done, and it was approved by the federal cabinet and, I am sure, the Prime Minister.

I must not for a moment attempt to take any side in this controversy. To do so would be ridiculous and I would be completely out of order until we have the report. I would ask the Deputy Leader of the Government to listen to what I have to say, because I cannot hear myself think. He is still talking.

Here is the proposition. What else can we do at the present time except await the report of the three commissioners? What else can we possibly do? Is it within the power of the Senate, or if it is within the power of the Senate—my friend is an authority on these things—is it within the common sense functions of the Senate, to step in at this time with a resolution which, if it were carried, would be advice to the three commissioners? And I am sure it would be the hope of my friend that they would act on it.

In court and out of court, in arbitration and out of arbitration, we always wait to see what happens. If my friend is then dissatisfied with the result of the three-man commission, and with its report, and he thinks that in his judgment a resolution should be brought before the Senate, then that will be the time to do so—but not until then. I say that with the greatest of friendliness towards my friend. I am not speaking politically for one party or the other. Why would we not wait? What advantage is there to place on record either the defeat or success of this motion? Surely it does not come at a proper time, and my friend might not have brought it forward had he been in the cabinet. However, he was not in the cabinet at the time. The Leader of the Government was. They, in their wisdom, have found the solution and they have agreed to it. There is no way that I know of to get out of it. I suppose an act of Parliament could set aside an agreement—Parliament can do anything—but I do not think anyone would want to see that done.

Let us give this thing a chance. I do not want to be legal. Could we not say that this motion, coming at a time when the commission is going to meet, and when passions have already been inflamed, is sub judice? In other words, further discussion and further attempts to influence are being made. We have already heard a good deal about influencing. The Leader of the Government heard quite a lot about it when the judges were being importuned from time to time as to what they should do.

● (1550)

Coming to the present case, why should the Senate, the upper house, do what the lower house would not do? There may at some later point be a motion brought forward in the lower house, but why should we try to interfere now with the proper judicial discretion that has been given to these three commissioners?

The motion before the Senate is as follows:

That the Senate affirms its full support of the Official Languages Act, including the right of air pilots to operate in the province of Quebec in either of the two official languages according to their choice, provided that the exercise of that right be compatible with air safety standards as certified from time to time under the authority of the Aeronautics Act.

Are we not trying to substitute something else? Surely we are. Are we not trying to give a reply for the commissioners instead of leaving it to the commissioners to bring in their report?

I hope no senator on the other side will suspect for a moment that I have any political motives in making these remarks. This may in fact do me a lot of harm, because passion is inflamed across Canada and in Quebec, as my friend and I agree, as we have never seen it before. In the days when I was studying French in the province of Quebec, around 1928, there was said to be quite a separatist movement. But they never discussed that with me. They were great hosts at all times, and we all had a very happy time.

Why would we, as a Senate, pass such a resolution as this at the present time? There can only be one motive, and that is to motivate the commissioners to bring in a report favourable to the government. That is how the commissioners would certainly view such a resolution, I would think, and certainly that is how it would be thought of by the public. This, my friend, is not the time for such a resolution. The time may come when you can move such a resolution, but to interfere with the course of justice—not that we set up but that your own government, for whom you have always been a loyal supporter, set up—to set aside the judicial process set in motion would be a gross interference. To illustrate my point, if a judge took a resolution such as this before the commissioners he would be in a very difficult position. Simply because we are the first house, the senior house, does not make our passing such a resolution as this any less incorrect.

I am trying to use moderate words, words that will enlist the moderate support, the reasonable support, of all the members of the Senate, regardless of political affiliation.

My friend, I know, does not profess to be a lawyer. He is very lucky. He is one person in this house who does not profess to be a lawyer but who always acts with the great authority of certain of the lawyers that we know so well, and I admire him for that.

To sum it all up—and there is much authority for what I have said—we are out of place. This motion at this time is extremely out of place. Not only is it out of place, but it is almost unethical. I am not suggesting that my friend is unethical. The motion itself is unethical. Whether you like it or not—and I am directing my remarks particularly to members of the government—whether it is a good commission or whether it is not, the government has set it up. Surely we can depend on the wisdom of those three judges, surely we can depend on their good judgment and their good wisdom to bring in a just result.

If my friend is not satisfied with the report, he can go so far as introducing legislation to remedy it. It may be, of course, that my friend has introduced this motion to placate the ill feeling that emanates from Quebec. I can assure him that such a resolution as this, if passed by this house, would inflame passion from one end of Canada to the other, with the exception of the province of Quebec. I beg of my friend to withdraw this resolution rather than having it voted on and, if so, a count taken, which would only upset the apple cart, just when the Liberal government of Mr. Trudeau has got it level. The commission, as established, should be given the opportunity of investigating the concerns that my honourable and learned friend has raised.

Senator Lamontagne: May I ask a question?

Senator Flynn: You may ask a question, but I want to move the adjournment of the debate.

Senator Walker: I would be delighted if you asked me a question.

Senator Flynn: Many questions have been raised by Senator Walker. It was a speech, and you will have an opportunity of replying to it.

Senator Lamontagne: Am I not allowed to ask a question?

Senator Flynn: Oh, yes, you can do so if you wish.

Senator Walker: I would welcome your question. I do not think my leader would mind.

Senator Flynn: I would mind, I think. I move the adjournment of the debate.

On motion of Senator Flynn, debate adjourned.

CITIZENSHIP BILL

THIRD READING

The Senate resumed from earlier this day the debate on the motion in amendment of Senator Macdonald to the motion of Senator Connolly (Ottawa West) for the third reading of Bill C-20, respecting citizenship.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, in recent days a number of questions have been asked regarding Bill C-20, and requests have been made for commitments from the Minister of Justice with respect to the constitutionality of this proposed measure. At page 2324 of the Debates of the Senate of yesterday, the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition asked whether it was possible to obtain the assurance that the government would submit this clause to the Supreme Court for its opinion on its constitutionality. Senator Grosart, on June 30, made the same request. He asked that clause 33 not be proclaimed until its constitutionality is determined. There were requests of a similar nature made earlier by the Opposition. I want to assure honourable senators that I have brought these requests to the attention of the Minister of Justice, but I have not as yet been able to obtain any assurance or guarantee from him that he feels bound to refer this matter to the Supreme Court.

The Honourable Senator Grosart, in a speech made on June 30, said that, in effect, he would be satisfied to have made known the concerns of the Opposition to the Minister of Justice, and I have done so. I have expressed in writing those concerns. As well, I have communicated personally with the Minister of Justice regarding this bill. I have also brought to the attention of the Minister of Justice the concerns expressed yesterday in this chamber by the Leader of the Opposition with respect to subclauses (2) to (6) of clause 33. The Honourable the Leader of the Opposition spoke about this matter earlier. I have for the information of honourable senators today, however, an additional explanation of this particular clause. It is not unduly long, so I propose to present it at this time.

Senator Asselin: Are you an expert?

Senator Perrault: The purpose of clause 33 is to bring the whole of the Citizenship Act into force on a day to be fixed by proclamation of the Governor in Council. This means that, once the proclamation has been issued, the whole of the act, including clause 33, becomes law on the day set out in the proclamation.

● (1600)

However, part of the bill, namely, subclause (7) of clause 33, provides that subclauses (2) to (6) of clause 33 shall come into force in a given province "only upon a day fixed in a proclamation of the Governor in Council declaring those subsections to be in force in that province." I know the Leader of the Opposition touched on that basic point earlier today. This means a second proclamation is required before subclauses (2) to (6) of clause 33 can be operative in a particular province. In other words, the bill clearly provides for a two-step procedure before the authority that is given to provinces in subclauses (2) to (6) can be acted upon in a given province.

This is different from the proclaiming power that was provided in the case of the "breathalyzer" amendment that was the subject of a reference to the Supreme Court in 1970. As J. Noel Lyon has pointed out in the article in the McGill Law Journal, to which Senator Flynn referred yesterday, the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1968-69, was "an omnibus bill containing a number of unrelated amendments," and the intention of Parliament was to proclaim various parts of these unrelated amendments in force at different times, leaving other parts unproclaimed. The intention, in the case of Bill C-20, is to bring the whole of the act into force on a specific date and to provide for a second proclamation in respect of the operation of subclauses (2) to (6) of clause 33 in any particular province.

[Senator Walker.]

While I cannot at this time provide a commitment from the minister that he is inclined at the present time to refer the matter to the Supreme Court for interpretation, I want to assure honourable senators that the points raised have been brought to his personal attention and they are under consideration by him for possible future action. However, I can give no guarantee beyond that.

Honourable senators, having made that statement I would urge that we proceed to third reading of Bill C-20.

Senator Flynn: I would just mention to the Leader of the Government that the doubts expressed concerning this matter did not emanate only from this side of the house; that there was a vote of 23 to 30 on a substantial amendment moved by Senator Laird. I hope the minister will consider that. A result such as that in a Senate composed of a large majority of government supporters should suggest to him very insistently that he should do what I have suggested.

Senator Perrault: The matter has been brought quite emphatically to his attention. He has been made very aware of the proceedings in this chamber. I want to assure honourable senators on that point.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I understood the Leader of the Government to say I had said that I would be satisfied on this matter if the concern of some senators about the constitutionality of certain subclauses of clause 33 were taken into consideration. Of course, I was speaking to a motion made by the Leader of the Opposition; I was referring only to the reply given by the Leader of the Government here, and said I was satisfied with his statement that he would take it up with the minister. That should not be taken to mean that I would be satisfied that the whole matter would be resolved merely by its being referred to the minister.

Senator Perrault: I understand.

Senator Grosart: The Leader of the Government has suggested that we should now vote on third reading. We have another motion before us, which is not for third reading—a motion moved by Senator Macdonald.

Senator Perrault: Of course. It is a motion to refer the bill back to committee.

Senator Grosart: Yes, to refer it back to committee. I have not consulted the Leader of the Opposition on this, but my suggestion would be that we might defer this until tomorrow in the hope that in the meantime the Leader of the Government might renew his efforts and obtain, if not a clear declaration from the minister that he will refer the matter to the Supreme Court, at least an undertaking that he will produce for consideration by members of Parliament in both houses a clear statement of the government's position on constitutionality. I know a statement has been made, but it would appear not to be conclusive. Perhaps the minister could at least table a white paper, or whatever might be required, to satisfy us that the question of constitutionality has been taken into consideration in relation to these subclauses.

Senator Goldenberg: Would Senator Grosart allow a question? Is he suggesting that the government, whether it is a government of the Liberal Party or a government of the Progressive Conservative Party, will introduce a bill without having tried to assure itself that its provisions are constitutional? Surely the government must have checked this. I was not a member of the committee, but before asking Senator Grosart to answer, I would say as a lawyer that if a client of mine were affected by clause 33 I would probably go to the courts on the question of its constitutionality. That is how it is done. If we are going to expect the minister introducing legislation to submit everything to the courts before Parliament approves, calling on the courts first to decide on constitutionality, we will never legislate effectively.

Senator Flynn: Oh, no.

Senator Asselin: That is not the question at all.

Senator Grosart: I do not want to beg the question, but I think I have to say that Senator Goldenberg has not studied the history of legislation very carefully if he makes the statement he has just made. Of course, governments have on many occasions backed up their intentions in introducing legislation by supplementary papers of various kinds, including statements of their views on the constitutionality of the measure. I was not merely asking whether the government has studied the matter. Of course they have. I would assume that the government did refer the matter to the Department of Justice, and received an opinion. I would assume that. If the government is not prepared to go so far as to refer the matter to the Supreme Court—and we have rules in the Senate which make it quite possible for us to move that certain bills be referred to the Supreme Court; there is nothing new about this—if the government has such an opinion, and if, in spite of the debate that has taken place, it is still of the same opinion, then it should inform Parliament that it is of that same opinion, because there seems to be some doubt. There is nothing unusual in suggesting that the government inform Parliament why it believes a certain measure to be constitutional. The matter has been questioned, and that is all I am asking.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, may I say briefly that the bill before us is the result of months of negotiation with the premiers of Canada and the attorneys-general of Canada. It has been before a committee in the House of Commons, where the constitutional question has been raised and well debated. It has been before a committee of this house for over seven weeks. The Minister of Justice appeared before our committee. Much as I respect the views and opinions of the honourable Deputy Leader of the Opposition, I would say again that ample opportunity has been given for input from every provincial jurisdiction in this country. They support this bill, including, I understand, some Progressive Conservative provincial governments in the nation. We now have a proposal that there be a white paper with respect to constitutionality. I must say that the government rejects the notion, and I urge that we not refer the bill back to committee, but that we proceed to give it third reading.

Some Hon. Senators: Question.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Connolly (Ottawa West), seconded by the Honourable Senator Macnaughton, that this bill be now read the third time.

● (1610)

In amendment, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Macdonald, seconded by the Honourable Senator Grosart, that the bill be not now read the third time but that it be referred back to the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs for consideration of the implications of section 33.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

Some Hon. Senators: Yes.

Some Hon. Senators: No.

The Hon. the Speaker: Those who are in favour please say "yea."

Some Hon. Senators: Yea.

The Hon. the Speaker: Those who are against please say "nay."

Some Hon. Senators: Nay.

The Hon. the Speaker: In my opinion the "nays" have it. I declare the motion in amendment lost.

Senator Grosart: On division.

The Hon. the Speaker: I declare the motion in amendment lost on division. Shall the main motion for third reading carry?

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I cannot let the bill pass without replying to my good friend Senator Goldenberg. It is quite obvious that the government, when it introduces legislation, has the advice of the various departments involved, including the Department of Justice. But I am sure it will not surprise him when I say that in cases of doubt the government always claims to have jurisdiction. That is the history of the federal Parliament, and it is the history of many of the provincial legislatures. That is why it has often happened that the Privy Council and then the Supreme Court have quashed certain pieces of legislation, considering them to have been beyond the competence of the particular legislatures that passed them. So it all depends—some cases are clearer than others; some are more obscure.

I would say that in the present case the discussion in this house, and the long discussions in the other place referred to by the Leader of the Government, suggest that there may be something to the opinions of those who think that this particular clause of the bill is not within the competence of Parliament.

We would not ask the government to refer to the Supreme Court every clause of a bill, but this is a very special case. I do not think Senator Goldenberg would insist that we cannot ask the government in cases like this to refer the matter to the Supreme Court. For God's sake, that's part of what we are here for.

Senator Goldenberg: I might just say in answer to Senator Flynn that I did not suggest that we cannot do it. I do not think that we should try to do it, and, as Senator Flynn may have noted, I did not commit myself on the constitutionality of section 33. I did say that as a lawyer, if a client of mine were affected by it, I think I would take it to the courts, and that is how I think it should get to the courts.

[The Hon. the Speaker.]

Senator Flynn: That is exactly what I want to prevent—one of my friend's clients having to go to the Supreme Court, because I want that client to be spared the fees which Senator Goldenberg would charge him.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I cannot help feeling that the argument is fallacious that because other people think this provision is constitutional it ought to satisfy the consciences of the members of the Senate. I thought one of our duties was to examine every bill which came before us from every point of view—whether it be its constitutionality, its practical merits or whatever—and I thought it was our duty, upon such consideration, to give effect to our considered opinions. It does not move me in the least to have the Leader of the Government say that a great number of people have agreed to it. How much consideration of an impartial nature or from the point of view of the citizens of this country was given to it? Or was it talked about in these discussions in the sense of, "Well, what can we do to bring about what we think the people who are discussing it want done?" What confidence can we have that anybody represented the views of the taxpayers either on the merits or on the constitutionality?

With all respect to Senator Goldenberg, I think he will remember, as chairman of that very ably chaired committee, the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, that some of the evidence given before that committee, by those who ought to know what the law is or what the law means, was not such as to inspire any great confidence in their judgment in this matter.

Surely, if one cannot appeal to a sense of reason and of right and to the innate merit of a matter with respect to the passage of a bill, one should not resort to the appeal that, "Well, look at all these people who have looked at it. They must be right. The Minister of Justice talked about it for two hours somewhere." To me that really is simply giving up and throwing to the winds the rights and duties and responsibilities of this Senate. If that is the way we are going to deal with things, it is not much wonder that in some places we are not held in as high regard as we should like. I therefore cannot bring myself to vote for this bill on third reading, or on any other reading, merely on the arguments put forward by the Leader of the Government and on the argument which has not quite been put forward but has with some temerity been suggested by Senator Goldenberg.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I should simply like to record my regret that the Opposition did not ask to divide the house and have a recorded vote on this amendment which has just been defeated.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the main motion for third reading of the bill?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Grosart: On division.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed, on division.

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

NOTICE OF COMMITTEE MEETING

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, before moving the adjournment of the Senate I should like to bring to your attention that a meeting of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce to consider Bill C-58, and the report made in relation thereto, is scheduled for 5 o'clock this afternoon in room 356-S. The meeting is in camera, of course.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m.

APPENDIX

(See p. 2335)

LETTERS RESPECTING AIR TRAFFIC SERVICES IN THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

Ottawa, Ontario
K1A 0N5
July 1, 1976

M. Roger Demers,
Président,
Association des Gens de l'Air du Québec,
a/s Tapis Rouge,
Aéroport de Québec,
Québec, Qué.

Dear Mr. Demers:

I appreciated the opportunity to meet with you and your associates to discuss the implementation of further bilingual air traffic services in Quebec. You know that we remain fully committed to such implementation just as soon as safe procedures can be certified.

The various steps we have agreed to, including the creation of a Commission, are simply designed to meet the argument that we might neglect safety in any way by promoting bilingual services. I am confident that we will succeed in all of this and I urge your cooperation and assistance in the work we have to do.

I should like to clarify certain misunderstandings concerning the role of the Commission and particularly the advisers and experts they will select. It is the Commission and the Commission alone which will determine the selection.

We agreed to work with CATCA on a list of controller advisers for the possible use of the Commission. We will welcome your assistance in the preparation of the list and we assure you in any case, that unless it is a balanced and sound list, we will not join in submitting it to the Commission. In any event, Les Gens de l'Air as well as CATCA could recommend any advisers to the Commission separately.

We have asked the Commission to deal expressly with CATCA and CALPA arguments if they still contend that safety is not assured. As you know, that could arise when Transport Canada has certified certain procedures to be safe and has indicated our readiness to implement them to expand bilingualism. At that point the Commission will express its judgement on the safety issue and will dispose clearly of the CATCA and CALPA arguments that cannot be substantiated. Incidentally, the word "tout" was erroneously written into the French text of understanding where the expression should have read "un doute raisonnable". This in no way gives either organization a veto: they do not have to be convinced or say so; the Commission need only explain why they disregard the arguments. That will assist us all in satisfying the people of Canada that our certification of safety is right.

I have asked my officials to work closely with you in all matters connected with the implementation of further bilingual air traffic services in Quebec. I urge you to cooperate with us to the full. I am confident that we will succeed and I repeat our objective and commitment of providing French and English service throughout Quebec Air Services. I was distressed to see how fully the language dispute has created a lack of recognition in CATCA for your needs and objectives. I have always tried to have your interests in my mind but to do so properly, I will want to have close contact with "Les gens de l'Air." I look forward to next week's meeting.

Yours sincerely,
Otto Lang

cc: J. M. Livingston,
President
The Canadian Air Traffic Control Association

K. A. Maley
President
The Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association

July 6, 1976.

The Honourable Otto E. Lang,
Minister of Transport of Canada,
Ottawa, Ontario.

Dear Mr. Minister:

Before meeting, studying the terms of reference and beginning the work given to the Commission of Inquiry relating to the safety of the introduction of bilingual IFR Air Traffic Services in Quebec, the Commissioners believe it necessary that the implications for the Commission of the terms of the Memorandum of Understanding made June 28 between yourself and CATCA and CALPA should be determined precisely, and any ambiguity dispelled.

Having regard to certain statements that have been made in the press, it may be worthwhile mentioning that none of the Commissioners had any part in the preparation of the Memorandum of Understanding, the terms of which only came to their knowledge when they were made public.

On Monday, July 5, you delivered to us certified copies of the Order-in-Council authorizing our appointment; of the Memorandum of Understanding; of your letter of July 1 to l'Association des Gens de l'Air du Québec, and of your proposal for an Order contemplated by clause 8 of the Memorandum.

In particular, we will examine, in order, clauses 2, 3, 4, 7 and 9 of the Memorandum.

2. THAT a prerequisite to the expansion or introduction of any bilingual air traffic service be a unanimous report of the Commission declaring the proposed expansion or introduction to be consistent with the maintenance of current safety standards in Canadian air operations.

This provision is to be applied after the Commission has delivered a report. It is well known that once a report has been given by a commission, a government may give it whatever effect it wishes. That does not concern the Commissioners.

The Commissioners are free to give their opinions, be it by a majority or unanimously, in accordance with section 21(1) of the Interpretation Act which reads as follows:

- 21.(1) Where an act or thing is required or authorized to be done by more than two persons, a majority of them may do it.

We are accordingly of the opinion that clause 2 of the Memorandum does not bind the Commission.

3. THAT the terms of reference now contained in Order in Council PC-1976-1576 should include a provision to the effect that "the Commissioners shall append to their reports any statement on the aspects of the inquiry reported upon, received from CATCA or CALPA within a specified period of time designated by the Commission".

It is the Government that is responsible for making public the report of a commission and to have it printed and distributed. On the other hand, it is customary for a commission, in delivering its report, to turn over all the documents, exhibits, reports, statements or writings that it collected so that they may be kept by the Government. The Commission intends to follow this practice, and the Government will be free to publish the statements of CATCA and CALPA. Viewed in this way, clause 3 does not seem to us to present any difficulty to the Commission.

4. THAT the terms of reference should include a further provision to the effect that "the Commissioners shall not in any of their reports indicate that safety has been demonstrated unless they can justify beyond a reasonable doubt why any contrary view expressed by CATCA or CALPA should not prevail".

In your letter of July 1, 1976, you have written to l'Association des Gens de l'Air du Québec "... This in no way gives either organization a veto: they do not have to be convinced or say so; the Commission need only explain why they disregard the arguments ..."

That seems to us to mean that reasons must be given in our report, and such an interpretation of the clause is acceptable to us.

7. With reference to the "specially appointed professional advisers" mentioned in paragraph (c) on page 1 of the terms of reference, Transport Canada and CATCA will submit a joint list of appropriate controller advisers to the Commission.

In our view those words are not restrictive, and as you said in your letter of July 1 to l'Association des Gens de l'Air "... It is the Commission and the Commission alone which will determine the selection."

In our opinion that is the meaning to be given to section 11(1) of the Inquiries Act which provides that the Commissioners must be authorized by the commission issued in the case to engage the services of experts, but, once such authorization has been given, the law does not provide for any restrictions. The Act leaves the choice of the experts entirely in the discretion of the Commissioners.

- 11.(1) The commissioners, whether appointed under Part I or under Part II, if thereunto authorized by the commission issued in the case, may engage the services of such accountants, engineers, technical advisers, or other experts, clerks, reporters and assistants as they deem necessary or advisable, and also the services of counsel to aid and assist the commissioners in the inquiry.

While such a list will be most useful, the Commission will, nevertheless, feel free to consider other experts, if need be, whether by engaging their services as contemplated by section 11, or by summoning them as witnesses as provided in section 4.

9. THAT, following the tabling of the final report of the Commission in Parliament, the government will present a resolution to the House of Commons seeking concurrence therein in a free vote.

As we have said earlier, what the Government does with a report after it has been delivered does not concern the Commissioners, and it is not their function to comment upon this provision.

W. R. Sinclair
Julien Chouinard
Darrel V. Heald

THE SENATE

Thursday, July 8, 1976

The Senate met at 11 a.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report of the number and amount of Loans to Immigrants made under section 65(1) of the Immigration Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 65(6) of the said Act, Chapter I-2, R.S.C., 1970.

Copies of Statement on operations under The Returned Soldiers' Insurance Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 17(2) of the said Act, Chapter 59, Statutes of Canada, 1951.

Copies of Statement on operations under the Veterans Insurance Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 18(2) of the said Act, Chapter V-3, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of Canadian Arsenals Limited, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD ACT

BILL TO AMEND (NO. 2)—REPORT OF COMMITTEE—
PRESENTATION LATER THIS DAY

Senator Argue: Honourable senators, the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture has considered Bill C-88. However, I do not have the report of the committee before me at this time. I would ask for leave to present the report later this day.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE
SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce have power to sit while the Senate is sitting today, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is leave granted?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.
Motion agreed to.

AIR TRANSPORTATION

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES ACT—LANGUAGE RIGHTS OF AIR PILOTS IN PROVINCE OF QUEBEC—ORDER STANDS UNTIL LATER THIS DAY

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Lamontagne, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Forsey:

That the Senate affirms its full support of the Official Languages Act, including the right of air pilots to operate in the province of Quebec in either of the two official languages according to their choice, provided that the exercise of that right be compatible with air safety standards as certified from time to time under the authority of the Aeronautics Act.—(Honourable Senator Flynn, P.C.).

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I was wondering whether it would be possible to stand this item, in view of the absence of Senator Lamontagne, who may be here later today.

Senator Langlois: Stand until later this day?

Senator Flynn: If he comes in later we will see how things are going.

Order stands.

CHRISTIAN EVANGELICAL CENTRE OF CANADA

ACTION OF DEPARTMENT OF NATIONAL REVENUE—DEBATE
CONCLUDED

The Senate resumed from Tuesday, June 8, the debate on the inquiry of Senator Forsey calling the attention of the Senate to the action of the Department of National Revenue in the case of the Christian Evangelical Centre of Canada.

Hon. John M. Macdonald: Honourable senators, since it seems that we have some time to spare this morning I am sure you would wish me to take advantage of the opportunity to say a few words on this matter.

As you know, recently Senator Forsey gave notice that he would call the attention of the Senate to this matter, and on June 8 he did discuss it, and I suppose until he brought the matter to our attention most of us were not familiar with it. You may recall the facts of this particular case. This religious organization had lost its status as a charitable organization with the Department of National Revenue through its failure to file some required report, and it had applied for reinstatement. Before the matter was dealt with the organization informed the department that it would be holding a peaceful demonstration before the Soviet Embassy where it hoped to present a petition to the ambassador. Apparently the department felt that that would constitute political activity and, as a courtesy, it informed the organization that such activity might jeopardize its chances of being reinstated as a charitable organization, since political activity may not be interpreted as charitable under the guidelines of the department.

Perhaps I should interject here that while I am sure the officials of the department acted from the best of motives, nevertheless their action might well be taken to mean that the department did not want this group to hold the proposed demonstration, and, in fact, it did not.

The case is important in that the organization involved is not one of the larger religious groups in Canada, and it might well feel intimidated by a warning from the Department of National Revenue. However, apart from this particular case, as Senator Forsey pointed out, a serious question of principle is involved. Can any charitable, religious or educational organization engage in or participate in any kind of political activity without running the risk of losing its status as a charitable organization under the Income Tax Act? It should be remembered that neither charitable nor political activities are defined in the Income Tax Act. At the present time over 30,000 organizations qualify for the status of charitable organizations, so the guidelines or principles set up and followed by the Department of National Revenue are most important.

I understand the principle followed by the department is that an institution qualifies as a charitable organization if it can be classified as engaging in the advancement of religion, the relief of poverty, the advancement of education or some other activity of benefit to the community as a whole.

● (1110)

I suppose that over the years it was not too difficult to classify these various organizations, but as Senator Forsey has pointed out this is no longer the case. Recently, another organization, Amnesty International, has become concerned. This is an independent, non-government organization. It endeavours to ensure the right of everyone to hold and express his beliefs. Amnesty International works, irrespective of political considerations, for the release of men and women who are in prison because of their beliefs, ethnic origins, colour or language, provided they have neither used nor advocated violence.

I propose to quote from a letter from Amnesty International to various members of Parliament. The organization was concerned, after the budget speech was given, because it was there stated that a revision was to be made of the law relating to charitable organizations. It so happens that while there is no contact between this organization and the Christian Evangelical Centre, they work towards the same end in that there was a minister of religion, for example, who was imprisoned in Russia, and both organizations are trying to obtain his release. This organization, Amnesty International, had this to say:

Our organization has, since 1974, been registered with Revenue Canada as a charitable organization, that is to say, an active charity. This status is of considerable importance to the growth and development of our work, for income was derived from tax exempt contributions.

Although we have this status, it is far from clear whether the full range of our activities is regarded by Revenue Canada officials as charitable. When we applied in 1974 for registration as a charitable organization we were obliged by the officials to accept, as a statement of objectives, a text which contains, among other things, the following proviso:

"provided that the Corporation (i.e. Amnesty International Canada) shall not in any way advocate political action". (supplementary Letters Patent of May 30th, 1974).

It is far from clear what this means. Amnesty does not advocate anything, except respect for human rights, to which Canada officially subscribes by various instruments, such as the Bill of Rights and the International Covenants. If the provision were very literally construed, it might prevent us from communicating with the parliamentary group about individual cases or general issues on the ground that such action was political.

Honourable senators, as you can see, this concerns not only one organization but, perhaps, many. Many organizations which are classified as religious, for example, engage from time to time in activities which could be said to be political, such as holding demonstrations, passing resolutions, presenting petitions, and the like. Let me tell you this: certainly the church to which I belong has taken strong stands on matters which could be termed political; indeed, I recall reading that at the time of the recent elections in Italy, the Pope—the head of my Church—strongly advocated the defeat of the candidates of the Communist Party and urged the electors to vote against them. I do hope, honourable senators, that these actions on the part of the head of my Church will not tempt the Department of National Revenue to declassify us as a religious organization.

I believe, with Senator Forsey, that it is perfectly proper for organizations which are charitable, religious or educational, to engage in the kind of action the Christian Evangelical Centre wanted to take, and I hope that the restrictive interpretation of the act followed in that case will not be repeated. I would suggest that the Department of National Revenue review its guidelines in these cases and take into account the fact that times have changed. It is no longer possible to put charitable, religious or educational organizations into narrow compartments, as it were, and I think we have to recognize that for better or for worse religious organizations especially are increasingly being concerned with matters which but a few years ago would have been considered none of their business and a matter for political parties.

Honourable senators, I am glad that Senator Forsey brought this matter to our attention and I certainly support him in the stand that he has taken.

Senator Rowe: Honourable senators, before Senator Macdonald resumes his seat I wonder if I might ask him a question? I was very much interested, as I am sure others were, in his figure of 30,000 religious and charitable organizations which have applied for and enjoy income tax exemption. I was wondering, in the case of the churches, any of the larger churches, and here let us take the United Church of Canada, for example, if that church as a body enjoys income tax exemption on contributions to it, or do the individual churches such as, for example, the Timothy Eaton Memorial Church in Toronto, have to apply for such exemption on an individual basis? I wonder if Senator Macdonald would have that information. I know it is in the act, but I am not familiar with it.

Senator Macdonald: I am sorry, honourable senators, I cannot give a definite answer to that question. My impression would be that each church itself would enjoy the status of a religious organization, but it could very well be that it would have to be the individual church that would have to make the appropriate application.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might be allowed to answer the question which Senator Rowe has just raised, because I happen to be the treasurer of a French-language United Church. We have to apply individually, and we have an individual number and we make individual returns every year.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, as no other honourable senator wishes to participate, this inquiry is now considered as having been debated.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Choquette: Honourable senators, in view of the number of orders that have been stood, I should like to ask the Leader of the Government why we were convened this morning at 11 o'clock knowing very well that Senator Lamontagne's resolution would be dealt with by only one or two senators, either from this side of the house or from the opposite side. Have we the assurance now that Senator Lamontagne will be here later this day—later this morning, for instance? If he will be here later this day, then we will have to come back this afternoon only for that purpose because everything else is being stood.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, may I with respect point out that in the Orders of the Day Order No. 1 stood in the name of Senator Phillips. But he was not here this morning. We had anticipated a lively second reading debate on this subject, but for that reason we were not able to proceed with that item.

As to Order No. 3—resuming the debate on the motion of Senator Lamontagne that the Senate affirms its support of the Official Languages Act—your leader chose, and that is his discretion, not to proceed with this item today. So really the disposition of today's Order Paper is not in the hands of the government.

May I say by way of information that if it is possible to deal with the second reading of Bill C-68, to amend the Medical Care Act, later this day, the Minister of National Health and Welfare is prepared, if the Senate so desires, to come here to testify in Committee of the Whole on this important bill later in the afternoon. But this matter, of course, is in the hands of the Senate. Having said that, unless there are other motions, I would move adjournment to the call of the bell at approximately 2 o'clock.

[Senator Rowe.]

• (1120)

Senator Flynn: Are there other senators who would care to speak at this time to Bill C-68, to amend the Medical Care Act? I am quite sure I could yield on behalf of Senator Phillips if that is so.

Senator Perrault: We had anticipated that Senator Phillips would be speaking this morning.

Senator Grosart: That does not prevent other senators from speaking.

Senator Flynn: We will yield if other senators wish to speak.

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD ACT

BILL TO AMEND (NO. 2)—REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Leave having been given to revert to Reports of Committee:

Senator Argue, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture, reported that the committee had considered Bill C-88, to amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act (No. 2), and had directed that the bill be reported without amendment.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator McDonald: I move, with leave of the Senate, that this bill be read the third time now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted?

Senator Flynn: Why? Because you will not be here next week?

Senator McDonald: In answer to Senator Flynn, I would hope that we will not be here next week. Before resuming my seat I wish to refer to the remark made by Senator Flynn yesterday in this respect. It is all very well for senators who live in the immediate area, which includes Montreal and Quebec City, to be here for a three-day week, but it is extremely difficult for senators who live in the far reaches of this country to be running back and forth, especially in the month of July. I am one of those senators who would like to sit here every day of the week until this session can be recessed in order to allow senators to return to their constituencies and remain with their people for more than a few hours. I would like to see this house complete its work at as early a date as possible so that senators may leave and remain at home for two or three months.

Senator Flynn: Leave is granted, but I suppose some senators on the other side who were unable to be here this week, of course, would not like to receive the same advice for next week.

Senator McDonald: Other senators can speak for themselves, but I am sure there are many in this house who are fed up with dilly-dallying around rather than proceeding with the work that is before us.

Senator Flynn: That is your problem.

Senator McDonald: It is not my problem; it is yours.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.
The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 2.30 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

MEDICAL CARE ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Bourget for second reading of Bill C-68, to amend the Medical Care Act.

Hon. Orville H. Phillips: Honourable senators, after the excellent speech of Senator Smith (Colchester) yesterday afternoon there is very little to be added to the criticism of this bill. I should like to recall the situation when the original act was introduced in 1966. Various members of the Senate were at that time very anxious to claim responsibility for medicare. I recall their reaching into their jacket and trousers pockets to produce various platforms that had approved it at Liberal conventions as far back as 1929, indicating that, after all, the Parliament of the Liberal Party did work slowly. Today the enthusiasm for Bill C-68 is a great deal less.

When medicare was introduced, the provincial governments of that time claimed that they were being coerced into accepting the program by statements of the federal government. Various members of the cabinet were going around the provinces stating that the federal government had so many millions that it wished to allocate to certain provinces, such as Ontario or Newfoundland, and complaining that the provinces did not accept the grants for medicare. Today the situation has reversed itself completely.

The health field is one of the few areas in which the federal government seems determined to make cut-backs. One wonders what happened to the cry of "free" medicare. Apparently the Canadian government believed medicare was free, and took advantage of the so-called free care. Now the federal government is complaining about increases in costs, and is attempting to make the provinces do the dirty work and cut back the allocation of funds for medicare.

New Brunswick refused to join the medicare program at its introduction. The premier of that day refused to participate until the federal government guaranteed to maintain its share of the cost of medicare. New Brunswick maintained that if the federal government failed to make the necessary guarantees its resources were not sufficient to meet the expenditure. The Premier of New Brunswick of that day must have known the Liberal Party quite well. Senator Robichaud of New Brunswick can now look at Bill C-68, and say that on at least one occasion he was accurate in his forecast.

All provinces opposed the introduction of Bill C-68. The bill was introduced following a meeting of the federal and provincial ministers of health in August 1975. At that meeting the provincial ministers of health opposed Bill C-68; they requested a delay in its introduction. The provincial ministers had not arrived home before receiving notice that Bill C-68 was to be introduced. Cooperative federalism apparently died a very sudden death. The provinces have become used to the familiar message from the Trudeau government, "Take it or leave it."

On the same day that Bill C-68 was introduced, as honourable senators will recall, we received a copy of a speech of the Minister of National Health and Welfare, delivered in western Canada. Apparently he had a different attitude in western Canada. The speech strongly advocated the establishment of a new program, a guaranteed annual income. The program was going to cost only a few million dollars annually. At the time of that speech in western Canada money was plentiful, and the generosity of the federal government knew no bounds. It seemed that the only item required was a provincial permit for a fire sale, and the Minister of National Health and Welfare was in the guaranteed annual income business. Money can be found for a new program of guaranteed annual income, yet reductions must be made in the field of medical care and hospitalization.

The federal government is quick to point out that the increases allowed in Bill C-68 are greater than the projected increases in the provinces during the first two years. After the first two years, the federal government, having supposedly consulted with the provinces, will determine the rate of annual increase by order in council.

Looking at agreements reached in recent federal-provincial conferences, can anyone really expect the views and requirements of the provinces to receive much consideration? The present Trudeau government has about as much concern for, and understanding of, provincial problems as Idi Amin has for hijacked air passengers.

In a recent meeting of the first ministers or premiers, the federal government in its presentation referred to the excellent consultation between the provinces and the federal government in the field of health care. If the consultations have been so effective, one must wonder why it is necessary to introduce Bill C-68 at this time, and, in addition, why it is necessary to establish future increases by order in council. That is a pretty big stick to give the government to wave at the provinces.

It was proposed at the recent meeting of the Prime Minister and the provincial premiers that the federal government would maintain its contributions at a level which rises with the rate of increase in the GNP. Statistics reveal that medical care costs have not increased at a rate comparable with the increase in cost of such items as food and shelter. Indeed, the medical profession has generally kept its annual increases to 4 per cent or less. The anti-inflation program is expected to be effective in keeping medical care costs at or near the present level of their annual increases. If this is the case—and Senator Denis in his introduction confirmed that—we must again ask why it is necessary to pass Bill C-68 at this time. Bill C-68 does not have a direct bearing on the Hospital Insurance and Diagnostic Services Act. However, the last of the Turner budgets served notice that the Hospital Insurance and Diagnostic Services Act will expire in four years. This subject also received considerable attention at the last meeting of the premiers, and the provinces were warned to get in line and be prepared to accept a greater share of hospital costs five years from now.

Bill C-68 also includes incentives for the provinces to extend lower cost health care in a program involving such items as nursing homes, paramedical services and community clinics. Federal-provincial negotiations have been conducted in this field for some time. Despite extensive consultations, no agreement has been reached. We must consider whether nursing homes provide the most desirable method of caring for the aged. The principle of sending the aged to a nursing home reminds me of the old Eskimo method of solving the problem of the aged—they sent them for a long walk in the cold Arctic winds—and I have a feeling that this attitude is beginning to make itself felt in our own attitude towards care for the aged.

● (1440)

During Senator Denis' remarks on planning during his speech—and I should quote the honourable senator; I would not want him to feel that I had misinterpreted his remarks—

Senator Flynn: That is impossible!

Senator Phillips: —he said:

In short, this is a call for planning, moderation and a search for less costly alternatives, from which the provinces cannot but benefit.

However, honourable senators, Senator Denis did not say who is responsible for the planning and the moderation and the search for alternatives. It is impossible to begin a new program without the money and manpower to establish it. I feel the federal government should be providing assistance and leadership in this field rather than passing the full responsibility to the provinces.

As I mentioned earlier, the federal government has been attempting to persuade the provinces to utilize nursing homes without first determining if they, or other forms of accommodation, are available. Some provinces now allow a limited period of hospitalization for specific ailments. An example of this would be 30 days' hospitalization following a paralytic stroke. The patient is then required to leave the hospital, and if a bed is available in a nursing home he may enter the nursing home. However, a new situation then arises. When the patient is in hospital, full coverage is provided. If the patient enters a nursing home he does not have the benefit of full coverage. In fact, he may be required to pay the full cost of a nursing home. This seems to me a rather odd situation. The patient pays taxes and contributes to this program throughout his working lifetime, yet when he retires, and is forced to enter a nursing home, he is then required to pay.

I have seen some of the forms that various provinces require a patient over 65 years of age to sign on entry into a nursing home. They require complete control over any money the patient may have, any stocks he may own, his home and his car. Although some provinces are kind enough to exempt the sum of $600 for funeral expenses, beyond that everything must be signed over to the nursing home or the province. I think this represents one aspect of the matter that has not received sufficient consideration in the discussion of Bill C-68. I would like to hear from the sponsor of the bill an explanation concerning nursing home costs. Is the patient expected to assume the full cost, or will he receive health care coverage from the province? Bill C-68 does not clarify this.

[Senator Phillips.]

This bill is the first of a series respecting restrictions in payments to the provinces. Post-secondary education has already been selected as the next target. At the same time, the federal government urges the provinces to agree to a guaranteed annual income. Can we expect the provinces to accept the new program, with the higher expenditures involved, while we force them to pay a greater share of the cost of existing programs? The provinces now view agreements with the federal government in a number of fields as being in jeopardy. I think it is fair to say, honourable senators, that a federal-provincial agreement is about as effective and longlasting as a Lebanese ceasefire.

The principle of equality was the basis of a number of programs that were introduced in the post-war period. The cancellation of the present agreement under Bill C-68 will have a very adverse effect on the poorer provinces. Therefore, it is going to be most difficult to maintain the same standard of medicare across Canada if this bill is passed.

Again, honourable senators, I ask why it is necessary to pass this bill at this time. A series of conferences between the first ministers of the provinces and the Prime Minister, and between the federal Minister of Finance and the provincial ministers of finance, have broken up in complete disagreement over the proposed changes in federal assistance to the provinces. Bill C-68 is one of the bills causing this situation. I need not remind you that the Senate is expected to be the protector of the provinces and not the servant of the Liberal Party, as it presently is. If we are to live up to our responsibility as protectors of the provinces, I believe, honourable senators, that Bill C-68 should be delayed until there is more agreement between the federal government and the provinces.

Senator Burchill: Honourable senators, Senator Phillips' reference to nursing homes and senior citizens' homes prompt me to make one or two observations. I think this is a very important matter, and should be considered. Therefore, I should like, before the sponsor of the bill winds up the debate, to touch on some of the questions that Senator Phillips asked regarding the cost of keeping up these nursing homes and senior citizens' homes.

In our community, in the northern part of New Brunswick on the Miramichi, we have two wonderful nursing homes—one in Chatham and the other in Newcastle. But they are full. Each has a long list of people wishing to be admitted, and there is no room for them. I have visited these homes, honourable senators, and I have some friends there. They are well looked after; they are as happy as they can be in such institutions. But we do not have a sufficient number of such institutions in this country.

In our hospitals in both Newcastle and Chatham there are patients who are being requested to leave. They have received all the treatment that they can get there, and now they are being asked to leave in order to make room for others. But where are they to go? There just isn't any place for them. I know of two particular cases where the community has been searched to find beds for them, but there is no place for them to go. I think the provision of nursing homes to provide care for our elderly people who need care is a very important matter.

In this connection I would like to refer to one of my friends who is a patient in one of these homes, and who occupies a room with another patient. In other words, there are two patients in the one room. He has told me that the charges are $25 a day for his bed. A man has to be in pretty good circumstances to be able to pay $25 a day; that is nearly $10,000 a year. I wonder just what the arrangements are. This man is not a pauper by any means. He has a house, but he had to leave the house he owned when he was not able to take care of himself, and become a patient in a senior citizens' home. I should like to know how that $25 per day is being met. He told me that was the charge to him, and I presume it is a charge that nursing homes are required to make to keep them going.

● (1450)

I hope the sponsor of the bill, when he replies, will tell us whether an individual patient is required to pay the full amount, or whether the provincial government shares the expense. I know people who have no income except for their old age security cheques, for which the government pays the whole shot. However, I am wondering what the arrangement is for a person who has some property, be it very small. I believe we should consider carefully the cost of operation of nursing homes, because they are needed very badly in our country today.

Senator Flynn: Before Senator Denis winds up the debate, I should like to ask the deputy leader whether it is the intention to have this bill, should it receive second reading, referred to a standing committee or to the Committee of the Whole. If it is to be referred to a standing committee, is there any possibility that the bill will be considered by the committee this afternoon? If it will not delay passage of the bill, I should like to move the adjournment of the debate at this time in order to provide a better opportunity for concluding it.

Senator Langlois: As the honourable Leader of the Opposition will no doubt recall, it had been hoped that this bill could be referred to the Committee of the Whole this afternoon. However, due to the delay in its disposal by this house this morning this plan had to be abandoned, because the minister was not available to appear before the committee this afternoon. Arrangements have therefore been made for the bill, if it receives second reading, to be referred by its sponsor (Senator Denis) to the Special Senate Committee on Science Policy, which will meet this afternoon. I believe the meeting has been scheduled for 3.30.

Senator Grosart: Not the Science Policy Committee.

Senator Langlois: No, the Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science. The chairman of the committee can confirm that. I believe the committee is scheduled to meet at 3.30.

Senator Grosart: Will the minister be there?

Senator Langlois: His officials will be there.

Senator Grosart: Oh, no.

Senator Flynn: Will it make any difference to the work schedule of the Senate if second reading is given on Tuesday night?

Senator Langlois: It would mean that the committee might have to meet on Tuesday and I do not know whether that is possible. The chairman may be in a better position than I am to answer this question.

Senator Flynn: As far as the deputy leader is concerned, does it make any difference? Will we be coming back in any event on Tuesday?

Senator Langlois: Yes, I will move later on that we come back on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

Senator Flynn: Unless the committee chairman says there are some problems about having the committee meet on Tuesday or Wednesday morning, I would move the adjournment of the debate. Has he any objection?

Senator Carter: The only problem is that we have called witnesses, and the witnesses are waiting to appear before the committee this afternoon.

Senator Flynn: Officials?

Senator Langlois: Officials.

Senator Flynn: Let them wait. I move the adjournment of the debate.

Senator Grosart: Surely, the situation, honourable senators, is that if this bill is to go to committee the minister should be there because it is a question of policy we are discussing here. The objections from both Senator Smith (Colchester) and Senator Phillips have been objections to the policy of the government with regard to the treatment of the provinces in respect of the commitment given at the time medicare was introduced. Surely, these are not questions which could properly be asked of the officials. Therefore, I support the motion that we adjourn now, and that we make sure that when the committee sits the minister is there.

Senator Langlois: I can only repeat what I said earlier. The minister was willing to come and it had been arranged for him to appear before the Committee of the Whole, but because he had too many other commitments he could not come.

Senator Flynn: We are not blaming you or the minister.

Senator Grosart: No one is blaming you.

Senator Langlois: I just did not want to leave any confusion.

Senator Flynn: I move the adjournment of the debate.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Flynn, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Grosart, that this debate be adjourned until the next sitting of the Senate. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Senator Hicks: On division.

The Hon. the Speaker: Carried, on division.

On motion of Senator Flynn, debate adjourned, on division.

AIR TRANSPORTATION

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES ACT—LANGUAGE RIGHTS OF AIR PILOTS IN PROVINCE OF QUEBEC—ORDER STANDS

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Lamontagne, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Forsey:

That the Senate affirms its full support of the Official Languages Act, including the right of air pilots to operate in the province of Quebec in either of the two official languages according to their choice, provided that the exercise of that right be compatible with air safety standards as certified from time to time under the authority of the Aeronautics Act.—(Honourable Senator Flynn, P.C.).

Senator Flynn: Stand. May I just explain that although I said earlier that I hesitated to continue the debate because of the absence of Senator Lamontagne, I must admit, as I told Senator Lamontagne privately, that I am not entirely ready. I think I may make a slightly better speech next Tuesday.

Order stands.

ADJOURNMENT

Leave having been given to revert to Notices of Motion:

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I move, seconded by the Honourable Senator Bourget, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday next, July 13, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Before the question is put I should like to give you the schedule of the work of the Senate for next week. As you know, yesterday it was hoped that it would be possible this week to dispose of the bills presently on our Order Paper and then adjourn until Bill C-84 reached us from the other place.

Senator Asselin: If it ever does.

Senator Langlois: Owing to the fact that it has been pretty well ascertained that even by extending our sittings into tomorrow we could not dispose of those measures on our Order Paper before the end of the week, and also because of the degree of uncertainty in respect of the possible date on which Bill C-84 would reach us, it has been decided in the present circumstances that it is preferable to adjourn until Tuesday evening.

We had hoped that by Tuesday evening we would have received a report from the Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science on Bill C-68, to amend the Medical Care Act. I asked the chairman of that committee to endeavour to find out if the minister could be in attendance either before the committee or the Committee of the Whole, to consider that bill through the evening. This latter alternative would have been the better one.

● (1500)

The Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce will probably be in a position to report to the Senate on Bill C-58 by Tuesday evening. It is possible that this committee will also sit some time on Tuesday, but no time has been set.

When we have completed our work on Bills C-58 and C-68 the only remaining item to be dealt with by the Senate before the long summer adjournment or prorogation will be Bill C-84, and by next Tuesday or Wednesday we should have a better idea of when this bill will come before us.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, July 13, at 8 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, July 13, 1976

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Honourable Maurice Bourget, P.C., Speaker pro tem in the Chair.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Revised Capital Budget of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1976-1500, dated June 22, 1976, approving same.

Report of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970. (English text).

Report of the Superintendent of Insurance on the administration of the Pension Benefits Standards Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 22 of the said Act, Chapter P-8, R.S.C., 1970.

Report respecting receipts and expenditures under Part V (Sick Mariners) of the Canada Shipping Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 306 of the said Act, Chapter S-9, R.S.C., 1970 Nil Return. (French text).

Copies of Reports of the Anti-Inflation Board to His Excellency the Governor General in Council reporting its reference to the Administrator of the Anti-Inflation Act of—

(1) Collective agreement between the Atlantic Consolidated Foods Limited, Atlantic Sugar Division and the employees represented by the Bakery and Confectionery Worker's International Union of America, Local 443.

(2) Collective agreement between Western Grocers Limited, Winnipeg, Manitoba and the employees represented by the Retail Wholesale and Department Store Union, Local 469.

(3) Collective agreement between City Motors Ltd., St. John's, Newfoundland and the employees represented by the Transport and Allied Workers Union, Local 855.

(4) Collective agreement between Hickman Motors Ltd., St. John's, Newfoundland and the employees represented by the Transport and Allied Workers Union, Local 855.

(5) Collective agreement between City Motors Ltd., Gander, Newfoundland and the employees represented by the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, Local 544.

(6) Collective agreement between Hickman Motors Ltd., Gander, Newfoundland and the employees represented by the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, Local 544.

(7) Collective agreement between City Motors Ltd., Corner Brook, Newfoundland and the employees represented by the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, Local 544.

Copies of Order of the Administrator under the Anti-Inflation Act, pursuant to section 17(3) of the said Act, Chapter 75, Statutes of Canada 1974-75-76, dated July 8, 1976, and letters thereon from the Administrator to the Minister of National Revenue, respecting—

(1) Collective agreement between the Sudbury District Roman Catholic Separate School Board and the employees represented by the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 1369.

(2) Collective agreement between the Wentworth County Board of Education, Hamilton, Ontario and the employees in the secretarial, clerical group.

Report of the National Librarian for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 13 of the National Library Act, Chapter N-11, R.S.C., 1970.

List of Commissions issued under authority of section 3 of the Public Officers Act during the year ended December 31, 1975, pursuant to section 4 of the said Act, Chapter P-30, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 31 of the Broadcasting Act, Chapter B-11, R.S.C., 1970.

Capital Budget of Air Canada for the year ending December 31, 1976, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1976-1573, dated June 22, 1976, approving same.

Capital Budget of The St. Lawrence Seaway Authority for the year ending March 31, 1977, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C. 1970, together with copy of Order in Council P.C. 1976-1572, dated June 22, 1976, approving same.

Report of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 47 of the Broadcasting Act, Chapter B-11, and sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of Telelobe Canada, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 16 of the Telelobe Canada Act, Chapter 77, Statutes of Canada 1974-75-76, and sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

ANNOUNCEMENT OF COMMITTEE MEETING

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave, I should like to make an announcement at this stage. I had a motion prepared seeking the permission of the Senate for the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce to sit tonight on Bill C-58, to amend the Income Tax Act. However, I am informed that this meeting has been postponed, and will take place at 9.30 tomorrow morning in room 256-S.

CITIZENSHIP BILL

SUGGESTED REFERRAL OF CLAUSE 33 TO SUPREME COURT—QUESTION

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Leader of the Government, in view of the decision of the Supreme Court on the Anti-Inflation Act, and especially with regard to the position of the Government of Ontario in relation thereto, if the Minister of Justice would now agree that it is important to refer clause 33 of Bill C-20, respecting Citizenship, to the Supreme Court? It appears to me to present a very similar problem.

Senator Perrault: I have not had the opportunity to read the judgment of the Supreme Court. I presume the honourable senator has had that opportunity.

Senator Flynn: I read the newspapers.

Senator Perrault: I certainly do not feel that relying solely on fragmentary reports in the media, despite the merits of the media, should be the basis of actions and decisions in this chamber. Until I have had an opportunity to read the court's judgment I will withhold my judgment.

Senator Flynn: I will not discuss the merits of your answer.

COPYRIGHT ACT

CROWN COPYRIGHT—MINISTER OF SUPPLY AND SERVICES—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, a question was asked by Senator Forsey on June 15, and again on July 6. I regret that Senator Forsey is not present in the chamber this evening. He asked:

1. Who is responsible for replacing in the Economic Review, April 1976, the customary, and legal, "Crown copyright reserved," by "Copyright Minister of Supply and Services"?

● (2010)

The answer is that the Department of Supply and Services made that decision.

[Senator Perrault.]

2. By what authority was this change, which appears to be a plain violation of section 11 of the Copyright Act, made?

The answer is by authority of P.C. 1976-104 dated January 20, 1976.

3. Has the Minister of Supply and Services been created a corporation sole?

The answer is no.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

RESTRICTIONS OF SPECIAL PASSPORTS—QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Senator Grosart inquired on June 28 as to the authority for the Department of External Affairs making special regulations in respect of passports held by members of Parliament. He asked:

Under what authority does the Department of External Affairs do this?

The Passport Regulations charge signed on April 12, 1973, by the Secretary of State for External Affairs sets forth the authority for the administration of passport matters.

With leave of honourable senators I could have this placed in the Debates of the Senate unless it is felt that the document should be read at this time. It is a two-page summary.

Senator Grosart: I suggest that it be read now because there is some doubt as to whether that particular regulation does apply to the green passports.

Senator Perrault: I would be pleased to comply. It reads:

WHEREAS, pursuant to Section 4 of the Department of External Affairs Act, R.S.C. 1970—Chapter E-20, "the Minister, as head of the Department, has the conduct of all official communications between the Government of Canada and the government of any other country in connection with the external affairs of Canada, and is charged with such other duties as may be assigned to the Department by order of the Governor in Council in relation to such external affairs. . .", and

WHEREAS, pursuant to Section 3 of the Passport Regulations P.C. 1973-17 the responsibility for the administration of all matters pertaining to the issuing, revoking, withholding, recovery and use of passports has been assigned to the Department of External Affairs; and

WHEREAS, pursuant to Section 2 of the said Regulations, 'Passport Office' means that section of the Department of External Affairs, wheresoever located, that has been charged by the Minister with the administration of those passport matters mentioned in Section 3,

THEREFORE, I, Mitchell Sharp, Secretary of State for External Affairs, the responsible Minister, hereby charge the Passport Office, through the Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs, his deputies and successors, with the administration of all matters pertaining to the issuing, revoking, withholding, recovery and use of passports, mentioned in Section 3 of the said Regulations.

The Honourable Senator Grosart also asked the following question:

Would the Leader of the Government also clarify, when he gives an answer, if the reason for the withdrawal of the validity of these passports to Taiwan has something to do with the safety of Canadians rather than with the fact that Canada revoked, went back on, its solemn promise that it would not take the action it did in respect of recognition of Taiwan?

The answer is: The limitation was not placed on the geographical validity of the passport because of the safety of Canadians but for the reasons previously mentioned.

Senator Smith (Colchester) asked the following question:

I wonder if, while doing that, the Leader of the Government would be good enough to find out just what the rationale is for such a restriction?

The answer is: The Secretary of State for External Affairs has explained in the house that because of the special status accorded the bearer of special and diplomatic passports and the fact that they are normally issued for the conduct of government business, the government's position has been that they should not be used for travel to countries which Canada does not recognize. The restriction is not limited to passports of members of Parliament but is a general rule applied to holders of diplomatic and special passports.

Finally, to clear up the passport question—I will leave the rest of the answers to a later date—Senator Forsey asked a question. This was the nature of his question:

As a supplementary may I ask the Leader of the Government if he is aware that the passport regulations, or certain of them, at all events, and the authority by which they are established or passed, that this question has been before the Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments and that there have been some acerbic comments by counsel to that committee and by the committee itself on the form in which the regulations are drafted?

He said:

We are... awaiting a reply from the department on this matter, because it seems to members of the committee... very dubious whether the form is in fact valid.

In reply to the question raised by Senator Forsey regarding the validity of the Canadian Passport Regulations, I am advised that the views of the Department of External Affairs on this matter were outlined in a letter dated May 2, 1976, which was considered by the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments at its meeting on May 27, 1976.

The issue is whether the Canadian Passport Regulations have been validly enacted pursuant to section 4 of the External Affairs Act. The view of the Department of External Affairs is that, because the delegation to the Secretary of State for External Affairs of the responsibility to issue passports under section 4 of the External Affairs Act is so closely linked with the criteria established by the Governor General in Council in exercise of the royal prerogative to govern the exercise of that responsibility, it was not improper to embody provisions regulating passports in a single instrument rather than in two separate instruments.

The standing joint committee, after careful consideration of these arguments, is of the opinion that the conferring of responsibility for the issuance of passports should preferably be accomplished by a statutory instrument issued under the royal prerogative. These views were outlined in a letter dated June 22 from the counsel of the standing joint committee. They are at present under consideration by officials of the Department of External Affairs.

Senator Grosart: As a supplementary, may I ask the Leader of the Government if he would obtain, at his convenience, an explanation of the rationale of the decision under this authority, if it is full authority—the rationale for the denial of the right to use the parliamentary passport for a parliamentarian to go to Namibia, formerly Southwest Africa, a territory the majority of whose citizens have long been attempting to obtain independence, while the right to use the passport has not been withdrawn in the case of South Africa, the jurisdiction which has steadfastly refused to grant independence and has actually refused to allow a United Nations Commission to go into the territory? The United Nations Commission was refused entry to South Africa and yet the department has decided not to withdraw the use of the passport to South Africa, but it has withdrawn use of it to this young, struggling nation which is attempting to gain its independence. Perhaps the Leader of the Government would obtain the rationale of that kind of decision.

Senator Perrault: Senator, I must take your question as notice because of its technical nature, but certainly Namibia has yet to achieve its independence, and the jurisdiction over Namibia, which, of course, at one time was a trust territory—

Senator Grosart: It still is.

Senator Perrault: —is very much in dispute, and the explanation may relate to the explanation given earlier in reply to the question directed to the government by Senator Smith (Colchester) that these passports are normally issued for the conduct of government business. The government's position has been that they should not be used for travel to countries which Canada does not recognize. The status of Namibia is a very controversial and indeterminate one at the present time. Certainly South Africa does not, I understand, recognize the right of Namibia to exist as an independent nation, and that could be part of the explanation, but I shall certainly seek a further explanation.

● (2020)

Senator Grosart: May I ask a further supplementary? Would the leader also seek an explanation of the statement he just made, quoting the department, I understand, to the effect that these permits are issued to parliamentarians for the "conduct of government business"? I understand that this is in no way the purpose of these permits, which are stamped over and over again for delegations going to other countries in recognition of the fact that parliamentarians are going there simply as parliamentarians. They have nothing whatever to do with government business, and if the leader is suggesting that the use of these green passports is to promote government business, I think Parliament should have an explanation of that ridiculous statement.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, perhaps my explanation should be clarified. The terminology "promotion of government business" is employed in a general sense. When, for example, parliamentary delegations go abroad it can be said that such delegations are travelling in connection with official business relating to the Parliament of Canada.

Senator Grosart: That is another matter. That is not government business.

Senator Perrault: It may be another matter, but such missions certainly relate to the conduct of government business, parliamentary business, and related matters. However, if the honourable senator wishes, I shall certainly undertake to obtain further clarification.

[Later:]

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS IN GALLERY

DELEGATION FROM HOUSE OF COUNCILLORS OF JAPAN

Senator Macnaughton (Chairman of the Committee of the Whole): Honourable senators, may I interrupt these proceedings for a moment? Sitting in the gallery with Madam Speaker are her guests of this evening, and I should like to introduce them. They are: The Honourable Kenzo Kono, President of the Japanese House of Councillors, Mrs. Kono and Mr. Takeo Kono; Mr. K. Kose, Secretary to the President of the House of Councillors; and His Excellency Yasuhiro Nara, Ambassador of Japan, and Mrs. Nara. President Kono is the head of the Japanese Olympic delegation in Montreal.

Honourable senators, on your behalf I extend our warmest greetings and bienvenue to our distinguished visitors.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

MEDICAL CARE ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from Thursday, July 8, the debate on the motion of Senator Bourget for second reading of Bill C-68, to amend the Medical Care Act.

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, I adjourned the debate last Thursday, not because I wanted to add anything to the criticisms made by Senator Smith (Colchester) and Senator Phillips but because at that time it appeared that honourable senators had not been warned that we might call a vote on this bill.

It is a very bad bill as far as we are concerned. It is a very bad bill as far as the provinces are concerned, also. I think the Senate should not let this bill go through without a vote. If the sponsor of the bill is allowed to close the debate, we will ask for a vote to be taken afterwards.

Senator Denis: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: I wish to inform the Senate that if the Honourable Senator Denis speaks now, his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on the motion for second reading of this bill.

[Senator Grosart.]

[Translation]

Hon. Azellus Denis: Honourable senators, like the Opposition Leader, no one will accuse me of being boring for long.

Senator Flynn: You could be.

Senator Denis: I just want to thank those who took part in this debate, especially my good friend, Senator Smith from Colchester who, between ourselves, spoke rather at length; he filled five or six pages in Hansard. He was probably trying to find a reason to oppose the bill, and as one of my friends used to say, he was vaccinated with a gramophone needle. However, I was glad to hear him, since he proved all through his speech that it was really the Liberal party that passed the Medical Care Act, because the opposition in the other place had some doubts. Senator Smith from Colchester used—

Senator Flynn: The other Senator Smith is not here, do not worry.

Senator Denis: Besides, he knew that his cause was lost in advance. He complained that it was bad, scandalous and fraudulent. He referred to the former Ontario premier, Mr. Robarts, and the Minister of Finance, Mr. Macnaughton, when he said it was a fraud. However, this was prior to the implementation of the Medical Care Act. But since then, some have said that it was not a fraud. Instead, this legislation made Canadians feel secure. Before saying that the federal government cheated the provinces, let us see what happened.

I have in hand appendix "N", issue No. 42, page 29, of the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence of the Standing Committee on Health and Welfare and Social Affairs. As far as the 1973-74 federal government contributions to Ontario are concerned—as regards the fraud of the federal government—as far as Ontario is concerned, as I said, there was really a fraud; it got $246,342,000 from the federal government. If there was a fraud, it was in collusion with its friends, the Conservatives, that the Liberal party passed this legislation in the other place in 1966. In fact, this legislation was passed almost unanimously in the Senate because no vote was taken and nobody objected; there might have been a weak "on division" for the sake of appearances.

Senator Flynn: That was at the beginning.

Senator Denis: In 1966, more precisely, on December 6, 1966, a vote was taken in the other place and everybody agreed; there was no vote, but the Conservatives approved this fraud.

Senator Flynn: No, it was not a fraud at the time; it became a fraud.

Senator Denis: I mean that it is in 1968 that the Honourable Charles Macnaughton said it was a fraud.

How come they kept receiving millions of dollars from the federal government in 1974-75? They received $263,374,000: what a terrible fraud the federal government perpetrated on the government of Ontario!

My friend from Colchester complained about that fraud, but I wonder how much his province, Nova Scotia, received from that contribution? In 1973-74, it was not 50 per cent it received from the federal government, it was 63.2 per cent. What a fraud, Honourable Leader of the Opposition!

Senator Flynn: Others received as much.

Senator Denis: 1974—

[English]

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Order.

Senator Flynn: Mr. Speaker, nobody has called anybody to order. I think you should remain in your seat.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, when one senator has the floor, I think it is customary to let him speak, and if an honourable senator wants to ask a question he is, of course, free to do so. But in the present circumstances, and in order to have an orderly debate, I think we should allow the honourable senator who is on his feet to speak.

Senator Flynn: On the point of order, Mr. Speaker, if Senator Denis wishes to complain, I don't mind your coming to his rescue, but as long as he does not complain I think I am entitled to comment.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, I am not coming to the rescue of any senator. I am here as Speaker of the House, and I have taken the Chair many times in the past. I am sure the honourable senator knows I am trying to be fair to both sides of the house.

Senator Flynn: It is not a question of being fair.

● (2030)

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: I do not wish anyone to say that I am coming to the rescue of one senator on one side or the other. I simply wish to be fair to all senators.

[Translation]

Senator Denis: Honourable senators, I do not object to the Opposition leader interrupting me once in a while. He is attempting in vain to prove that he is right in opposing this bill. However, as we used to say he is against what? Grain for the birds? There is nothing in this bill which indicates that the federal government is pulling out as an equal partner. It contributed half of what was spent last year, plus 13 per cent. Who decides what the increases will be? The provincial governments do. Provincial governments are being told: No more blank cheques but we promise to pay half of what it cost last year, plus 13 per cent, if necessary. Who decides how much doctors, nurses and so on are to be paid? The provincial governments do. They stated themselves that the costs were quite high and a way had to be found to bring them down. Well, that is an argument for the provinces. They will be able to tell the doctors whether in Ontario or any other province: Do not ask for unduly exorbitant salaries as we are limited to 13 per cent; the federal government is going to pay half, plus 1.7 per cent for the increase in population.

Well, in recent years the increase never reached that percentage. It is our friends from the NDP, according to the honourable member for New Westminster, who state that the increase in expenditures in 1972-73 was 7.6 per cent; in 1973-74, 8.8 per cent; and in 1974-75, 6.6 per cent. This bill allows 13 per cent. However, those who oppose this bill ask that the government pay more than 13 per cent. To this you must add that following this bill the anti-inflation program came into effect, further reducing expenditures. I am speaking loud enough for the Leader of the Opposition to hear me; do not close your ears, you will understand like all the others because you are not in the position of a man who is not intelligent.

So, in the other place a representative of the Conservative Party, the honourable member for Athabaska, proclaims the necessity to restrict expenditures. He admits, as the provinces also do, that spending must be cut back. But people object to the methods. They say that there was no consultation. Well, since 1973, the Minister of National Health and Welfare has had 10 to 12 meetings with all the provincial health ministers in the country. He has travelled all over Canada and he called on them personally. When people say that he has not listened to consultations, well, consultation does not necessarily mean to approve the provinces' decisions. They used to have a blank cheque. They were told: Spend what you like and we shall pay half. They would be stupid to say that a 13 per cent limit is fine with them—this is normal. But following discussions with the provinces and the medical associations, many amendments have been suggested by the provinces and those associations, as well as by our Conservative friends in the other place. Now, the bill has been fully amended. The statements of Senator Smith (Colchester) regarding the statements made by the provinces, were made before the amendments to the bill. I am convinced that if the honourable senators on the other side asked the same question of the provinces now, they might change their mind. Even the president of the Medical Association said: We are not worried about the 13 per cent. We are not worried about the 10½ per cent. We are worried about what will happen in the future. Therefore, the president of the Medical Association says that this will not affect the efficiency of the services. So, there is no danger that increase in expenditures will be greater than the 13 per cent that has been promised.

Senator Phillips asked a few questions. I talked of moderation. I talked of planning. I talked of solutions for less expensive measures. He is asking me who is responsible for this. The provincial governments are responsible, honourable senators. They are completely free. They do their own administration. They have created their own organizations for medical services. They determine salaries to be paid, the number of people to be employed, and so on. The same applies to hospital insurance, which allows them to build the hospitals they want, and we pay half of the administration and other costs.

So we claim that we have reached the point where we must know how far the government is going. We are prepared to pay not only one half but we are now offering the 13 per cent which represent about $124 million more than last year. It is hardly the attitude of a government that decided to stop paying its share. Furthermore, in the legislation you will find the new insured coverage that will be added to the existing services. Consequently, it cannot be said that the government will no longer pay its share as it is ready to increase it.

I wonder if I should continue.

Senator Flynn: It would be futile.

Senator Denis: Someone mentioned medical care for elderly people, yet everybody knows that old age assistance does not come under this bill.

And then convalescents, another issue raised by Senator Burchill and Senator Phillips. They should know that nursing homes are covered by hospitalization insurance and that it does not cost one red cent to Canadian citizens to be admitted to nursing homes.

Of course, anyone short of arguments strikes at another piece of legislation and says "We forgot to mention elderly people, but there is other legislation for them". They say, "We forgot to speak about convalescents, but there is other legislation for them".

It is a measure that reduces costs, and the provinces were notified in advance so they would not be taken by surprise. Many things have been suggested. For instance, they urge the provinces to enact legislation to compel drivers to wear safety belts. I notice that the honourable Leader of the Opposition is laughing. And yet Australia did just that and automobile accidents have diminished by 25 per cent. So if the honourable senator is afraid to pay more than 13 per cent he should have his safety belt on.

● (2040)

[English]

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Denis, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Bourget, P.C., that this bill be now read the second time.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Senators: Yes.

Some Hon. Senators: No.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Will those honourable senators in favour of the motion please say "yea"?

Some Hon. Senators: Yea.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Will those honourable senators who are against the motion please say "nay"?

Some Hon. Senators: Nay.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: In my opinion the "yeas" have it.

And more than two honourable senators having risen.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Please call in the senators.

● (2050)

Motion of Senator Denis carried on the following division:

YEAS

HONOURABLE SENATORS

Argue	Croll
Austin	Davey
Basha	Denis
Benidickson	Deschatelets
Bonnell	Eudes
Cameron	Fournier
Carter	(Restigouche-
Connolly	Gloucester)
(Ottawa West)	Fournier
Côté	(de Lanaudière)

[Senator Flynn.]

Godfrey
Goldenberg
Hayden
Lafond
Laird
Lamontagne
Langlois
Lefrançois
Lucier
Macnaughton
McDonald
McElman
McGrand
McNamara

Molgat
Molson
Norrie
Perrault
Petten
Riel
Riley
Robichaud
Smith
(Queens-Shelburne)
Sparrow
Stanbury
Thompson
Williams—43.

NAYS

HONOURABLE SENATORS

Beaubien
Choquette
Flynn
Fournier (Madawaska-Restigouche)
Grosart

Haig
Macdonald
Manning
Phillips
Walker
Yuzyk—11.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, I declare the motion carried.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time, on division.

CONSIDERED IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Denis: I move, seconded by the Honourable Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière), that the bill be committed to a Committee of the Whole presently.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate was accordingly adjourned during pleasure and put into a Committee of the Whole on the bill, the Honourable Senator Macnaughton, P.C., in the Chair.

Pursuant to rule 18 of the Rules of the Senate, the Honourable Marc Lalonde, P.C., the Minister of National Health and Welfare, was escorted to a seat in the Senate chamber.

● (2100)

The Chairman: Honourable senators, the Senate is in Committee of the Whole on Bill C-68, to amend the Medical Care Act.

Shall the title of the bill be postponed?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Flynn: I believe the Minister of National Health and Welfare has a statement to make. First, however, I would wish him a very warm welcome to this house. Perhaps he will find it a desirable haven after all the troubles he has gone through, and is likely to go through, in the coming months.

If the minister has a statement to make at this time, we would be pleased to hear him.

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Chairman, I do not have a formal statement to make. This bill has been gone into extensively by the Senate and by the House of Commons. The Honourable Senator Denis has put forward the government's view respecting the bill.

I thank you for the opportunity of appearing before the Senate, and I thank you for your warm welcome, Senator Flynn. I shall be very happy to answer any questions you may have on this particular bill while you are studying it clause by clause. Therefore, my words at the present time will be limited to a very sincere thanks for the opportunity to appear before the Senate.

The Chairman: Clause 1.

Senator Phillips: Senator Denis, when introducing Bill C-68, met with a very cool reception from the provinces. I would like to begin by asking the minister if he would give us the rationale of the bill, and tell us how many provinces requested introduction of Bill C-68 and how many provinces are opposed?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: Mr. Chairman, the rationale for Bill C-68 is pretty straightforward. This bill aims at putting a ceiling on the rate of increase of medical care cost-sharing by the federal government. This was put forward as part of the budget of June 1975, presented by Mr. Turner at that time, as part of the various measures the federal government put forward as expenditure restraint measures.

The fact is, while the rate of growth of medical expenditures in Canada had been roughly on target since the inception of the Medical Care Act, the developments of the last year or two gave rise to serious concern as the rate of growth seemed to be going up very substantially. It appeared that it was necessary to take steps to try to contain the rate of growth in this respect.

I have had the opportunity of having several discussions with my professional colleagues in this respect, and there was a general consensus that steps should be taken to try to reduce the rate of growth of those expenditures, whether by having a better control on the immigration of physicians into Canada, by trying to see to it that the rate of growth of the utilization of services by citizens is reduced, or simply that other measures of a preventive nature be taken to try to contain the rate of growth.

Measures have been taken in the immigration area to try to reduce the immigration of physicians to this country so as to adjust it to the actual needs of the people.

Secondly, measures of a preventive nature have been taken. As an example, some provinces have enacted legislation dealing with seat belts, or reducing the speed limit on highways, which, as the experience of Ontario has shown, has had a substantial impact on reducing the number of injuries and deaths on the roads in the provinces which have enacted and passed such legislation. As you may know, the Government of Ontario has reported a reduction of between 25 and 35 per cent in deaths and serious injuries in car accidents following the introduction of the seat belt legislation.

Lastly, there were financial measures to be taken. This particular bill is part of the financial measures taken to try to maintain the rate of growth at a reasonable level. As you will see, this bill provides for an increase for the current year of 13 per cent per capita. If you add a rate of growth in the population of about 1.6 per cent, on a gross basis the total rate of increase would be roughly 14.5 or 14.6 per cent for this particular year. We find this to be a reasonable level of rate of growth. When we compare this to the rate of growth expected for the year 1975-76, we can expect that the rate of growth will be roughly 14.7 per cent on a gross basis. Therefore, we think that 14.6 per cent for this current fiscal year is a reasonable level which should ensure that citizens of Canada will get all the adequate medical care they need, and at the same time the provinces and citizens in general will be given a warning that medical care should not be abused, and we should make sure that the type of settlements with the medical profession are also set at a reasonable level. This is roughly the purpose of this bill.

As far as the concurrence of the provinces is concerned, they were generally opposed to this particular bill—substantially more at the beginning than at a later stage. Following my meetings with the provinces, amendments were made to meet some of their most serious objections. I have also had meetings with the Canadian Medical Association. We have made amendments so that after the second year the rate of growth of medical care expenses will be determined by order in council which can be debated by the House of Commons and the Senate.

On first reading the bill imposed a ceiling of 8½ per cent per capita for the third and subsequent years. So we have introduced more flexibility, and the rate of growth on a gross basis will be 14.5 per cent this year, and roughly 12 per cent next year. Once more the provinces have not agreed to this step, and if I had been in their shoes I would have taken the same stand. It is obvious that if you have a blank cheque, you are going to object if someone comes around and says, "You don't have a blank cheque any more; your rate of drawing on this bank account is going to be allowed to grow only at a certain rate every year." I would object; I would certainly prefer a blank cheque. But we think this is part of the measures for general financial restraint that the country wants governments to resort to, and, secondly, it is also part of the means—it is one way—of ensuring that the rate of growth of health costs in this country will be maintained at a reasonable level.

● (2110)

So, Mr. Chairman, that is, first, the rationale for this bill and, second, the situation with regard to the provinces.

Senator Flynn: Mr. Chairman, I was interested in what the minister said. I couldn't believe my ears when he mentioned the introduction of safety belts, because when I heard Senator Denis mention the same thing I thought he was merely joking. It seems to me the result of the mandatory use of safety belts is that there are fewer deaths, but more people injured. It is also my understanding that the dead do not cost much under the medicare program, and that injured people cost more. Therefore, I would suggest to the minister that it is hardly an argument in support of restraint in medical care expenses to say that we have adopted the use of safety belts. It seems to me that that is entirely irrelevant to the situation.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: I regret that I have to disagree with Senator Flynn on this point. I would draw to his attention the statistics of New Zealand, Australia and Europe, where seat belt legislation has been in effect for a few years, and to the more recent experience of Ontario, where, if I remember well, not only the number of deaths has been reduced by about 30 per cent but the number of injuries has also been reduced substantially. That has substantive implications in direct health costs, not to count all of the obvious indirect costs in terms of insurance, in terms of rehabilitation and sometimes in terms of social assistance in respect of people who are handicapped for life. The statistics will show that there is an appreciable reduction in serious injuries from the wearing of seat belts.

Senator Flynn: I will not discuss the necessity of wearing seat belts, but I would say that the reduction of deaths is not relevant to medical care costs. That is the only point.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: But certainly the reduction of injuries, both serious and less serious, is a significant factor. Again, the latest statistics from Ontario do support that proposition. There is no doubt that legislation of this nature will have an appreciable impact on total health costs.

Senator Flynn: Then I would ask the minister whether the increase in the cost of medicare in respect of all provinces has been the same all through Canada, or has it increased more in some provinces than in others? Would the minister care to give us some figures on that?

Senator Denis: In the meantime, may I say that—

Senator Flynn: Excuse me, but is that the new minister?

An Hon. Senator: He was.

Senator Denis: If I may, I just want to give you some statistics which you might find relevant. With respect to injuries resulting from accidents, in 1973 the number of injured people was 223,000; hospital fees amounted to $200 million, and medical care came to $100 million.

Senator Flynn: That is not an answer to my question.

Senator Denis: The point is that if we can cut those expenses by 25 per cent, that means it will be $75 million instead of $100 million, and $150 million instead of $200 million. And that is only one preventive measure out of the many we can take.

Senator Flynn: Would the minister now care to reply to my question?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: Surely. I will do so with great pleasure, Senator Flynn. I would be quite happy to leave with the Senate a table showing the figures over the last few years, but you might be interested in the figures for the last year, 1975-76. There may be some adjustments required when the final settlements are made with the provinces, but they will be minimal. It is clear that the rate of increase varies from province to province appreciably in a single year. But what you have to realize is that those adjustments, those rates of increase, are related to settlements with the medical profession in that particular year.

Quebec, for instance, has not had a settlement with the medical profession for about five or six years. Ontario has had settlements every couple of years. So if there is a settlement in Quebec this year, as is likely, you will see a sudden jump in Quebec for this year while relatively the rate of increase will have been more gradual. So it is dangerous to take a single year and say, "Look; that province is not controlling its costs." You have to take the trend over a period of three, four or five years, and then you can decide whether a province is letting its costs rise more than others.

Senator Flynn: You are going to prove my point.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: But if you look at the figures for this year, for 1975-76, you see that the national average increase will be about 14.7 per cent. The percentage increases across the country are as follows:

Newfoundland,	24.6 per cent.
Prince Edward Island,	15.2 per cent.
Nova Scotia,	23.0 per cent.
New Brunswick,	18.5 per cent.
Quebec,	10.7 per cent.
Ontario,	12.7 per cent.
Manitoba,	11.2 per cent.
Saskatchewan,	18.8 per cent.
Alberta,	18.3 per cent.
British Columbia,	23.8 per cent.
The Yukon,	20.3 per cent.
The Northwest Territories,	15.1 per cent.

Senator Flynn: So the lowest increase is in Quebec, I understand.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: Quebec is 10.7 per cent.

Senator Flynn: Where there is not yet compulsory use of safety belts.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: As I said, the figures for a single year do not prove anything.

Senator Flynn: That is what I wanted you to say.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: You have to look at the rate of increase. Well, I said it before you asked, Senator Flynn. You have to look at the trend over a certain number of years.

Senator Benidickson: Mr. Chairman, the minister indicated that the thrust of this bill is to remove some blank cheque operations. All of us, I think, will have read in the last few days that two psychiatrists in the province of Quebec were paid large amounts in the year under the medicare plan. One was paid $600,000, and the other more than $500,000. Yet I am surprised to learn that, as the minister stated, there has been no increase in the allowable fees in the province of Quebec for about five years. That is in contrast to the more frequent increases in the approved rate schedules in other provinces, particularly Ontario. Do psychiatrists have a higher rate schedule than other specialties in the medical profession, and does that account for these two very large earnings in this particular specialty?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: Senator Benidickson, when I was in the practice of law I had the honour and privilege of having psychiatrists for clients, and I feel tonight that I have to come to the defence of my former clients in the sense that the name "psychiatrist" is being used in vain in some papers these days, because these cases do not appear to be cases of psychiatrists, but of—

[Mr. Lalonde.]

Senator Hayden: Physiotherapists.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: I am told the scientific name is "physiatrists". They are medical doctors who use physiotherapists, who hire physiotherapists, and what is happening, I am told—and I do not want to slander that other side of the profession—is that these people are doctors who specialize in treatment for rehabilitation purposes. They have clinics, and they hire physiotherapists, and they supervise the work of those physiotherapists. They are running a very efficient business, if I may use the expression, and this is how we end up with the figures you have mentioned.

● (2120)

Senator Benidickson: They are big factories.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: In my ministerial capacity I will not use any other adjectives than the ones I have already used. I know the government of Quebec is concerned about the matter, and there are discussions going on with the medical profession about these particular types of situations. Once more, however, I am told that this is not the case with regard to the psychiatrists, who are being paid by the hour. I cannot imagine any psychiatrist working that much.

Senator Grosart: I wonder if I could ask the Honourable the Minister to explain what appears to be a discrepancy in his statement that the rate of increase in the post-medical costs has been roughly on target since the inception of the bill, while apparently the assumption in the bill is that the provided rate of increase will be almost exactly the same for next year. Is there an assumption of much greater increases if the bill is not made law, and if so, could the minister give us the figures on both sides, that is, with the bill and without it?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: I could not give you this type of information, because it would be very hypothetical in that it would refer to what would have happened if there had been no bill. The fact is that over the last few years the rate of increase has been roughly on target, and if you look at the figures you will find that in 1973-74, for instance, it was about 7.2 per cent, while in 1974-75 it was about 6.6 per cent. With regard to last year we were very concerned about the rate of increase in the figures. As a matter of fact, our first forecast for 1975-76 was about 16 per cent, almost triple that of the previous year. It was at that time that we foresaw very substantial increases coming that were really out of proportion, we felt, with what was appropriate. There is no doubt in our minds that the fact that this measure was announced in June of 1975 had an appreciable impact on costs for this year. It is hard to differentiate with regard to a single event, but this bill plus, obviously, the measures announced by the government in October of 1975, has had an appreciable impact on the type of settlements which have been made with the medical profession in the various provinces. I have this on very good authority, namely, from some of my provincial colleagues themselves who were in negotiation at the time and who recognized that this gave them a stronger hand in negotiating with the medical profession. So our forecast was 16 per cent. The mere fact that the government announced its intention to present the bill, that the bill was then before the House, and that it appeared likely to be passed by the House, already has had an impact, in our view, on the total costs for 1975-76, and we have little doubt that it will have an impact on the costs for next year.

Senator Flynn: Has it had an impact in the province of Quebec in the hospitals?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: This bill has nothing to do with hospitals. This is a medical care bill, dealing solely with an amendment to the Medical Care Act. If you know the situation in the province of Quebec, you will realize that the problem has not been with the medical profession this year.

Senator Flynn: I know; but what about the rest?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: Medical care has nothing to do with the rest. In hospital care, we are continuing to cost-share until 1980.

Senator Grosart: Is the minister saying that until the last operating year of the Medical Care Act it was on target, and then ceased to be on target? If so, when was that, roughly? In what year?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: Our concern started, really, with the year 1975-76. It was during the year 1974-75 that we could foresee this type of development taking place.

Senator Manning: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the minister what the aggregate joint expenditure was under the Medical Care Act for 1975, or the last year for which figures are available? And what was the actual final percentage of the total borne by the federal treasury?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: For Canada the total was $1,677,670,000, and exactly half of this sum would be the federal share.

Senator Macdonald: I notice in the figures given that the average national increase was 14.7 per cent, yet for the province of Nova Scotia it was 23 per cent. Could you tell us if that was an exceptional year, or has that been the trend all along?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: It was a very exceptional year for Nova Scotia. It was 16.3 the previous year, and 7.4 in 1973-74. It was 9.8 in 1972-73, and 8.6 in 1971-72.

Senator Macdonald: Is there any explanation of the increase for last year?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: There were two factors. One is that there have been fee settlements with the medical profession, which explains part of this increase. The other factor is an increase in the number of physicians in the province to provide better service to the population.

Senator Phillips: Honourable senators, one of the criticisms of the provinces is that in the future, in the year 1979 in particular, it will cost some of the so-called "have-not" provinces additional money. Could the minister give us a projected percentage of the various losses to the provinces, and tell us what provinces are affected?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: I could not give such figures for 1979-1980 for the good reason that the federal government has not decided yet what type of rate increase it will allow for its share of the cost. You will realize that this bill provides that the government is free not to impose a ceiling on the rate of increase. To try to give you an answer in that respect, therefore, would be dealing very much in hypotheses. I realize that the argument has been raised as to whether the poorer provinces would end up being the bigger losers under this proposal, but I must say that there is nothing in this bill which justifies such a conclusion. The rate of increase that is being provided for by order in council applies on the national per capita cost, so that obviously, if a province were to have a very high rate of increase it might find itself outside the national average; but whether you are a poor province or a rich province, there is no difference at all as to what will happen, in effect. This bill is no more slanted against the less advantaged provinces than it is against any other group. It applies in the same way all across the board, and there is no reason why the poorer provinces should end up in a more difficult situation because of this particular bill.

Senator Molson: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if I could ask the minister about something he said a little earlier. He said that some of the provinces have not settled for some time with the profession, and in the case of Quebec, for perhaps five or six years. I would just like to ask him what effect this might have on the information and the statistics that are being used in this case. What exactly does it mean by not having settled with the profession, say, for five years?

● (2130)

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: It does not mean much in the sense that we have exactly the same statistics from every province every year. What happened is that Quebec had a pretty generous level of fees several years ago; in effect, at that time they were at the top level of average remuneration in Canada. They remained at that level for a few years because of the rate of increase of utilization of services. So they did very well. However, in the last couple of years the other provinces have caught up and some have even moved ahead. This is why there are negotiations at the present time to have a readjustment of fees. But it turns out that the average rate of remuneration of doctors in Quebec has compared very favourably with the average in the rest of the country over the last five years.

Senator Molson: Does this mean that a settlement has not been made with individual physicians, or has there been a settlement made subject to future adjustment?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: Negotiations are now going on. Discussions have been going on over the last few months and a tentative agreement has been reached with the medical profession, both specialists and general physicians. A few months ago a suggestion for settlement was rejected by the general assembly of the two groups, but negotiations are still going on at the present time.

Senator Croll: Mr. Minister, when you speak of 50 per cent, that is a loose term. Is it not a fact that under the formula some of the provinces draw as high as 75 per cent or 80 per cent while others draw less? Would you mind giving us the exact amount?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: I would be very pleased to do so. What you said is quite right. The federal government pays 50 per cent of the national per capita cost, and for the year

[Mr. Lalonde.]

1974-75 we paid 78.05 per cent of the cost in Newfoundland, 74.1 per cent in New Brunswick, 65.6 per cent in Prince Edward Island, 57.7 per cent in Nova Scotia, 59.3 per cent in Saskatchewan, 56.6 per cent in Manitoba, 53.2 per cent in Alberta, 48.8 per cent in Quebec, 47 per cent in Ontario and 45.3 per cent in British Columbia. So we are paying 50 per cent of the national per capita cost, and this means that if a province has a lower per capita cost than the national average, then that province gets a higher share. And this can go as high as 78.5 per cent as it did for the year 1974-75 in Newfoundland.

Senator Croll: Mr. Minister, how do you reconcile the fact that a province as rich as Alberta draws a higher percentage than a province like, say, Quebec? Can you explain that?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: Yes, because they have managed to keep their costs for health services below the national average. The national average for 1974-75 was $64.92 per capita. Quebec happened to have a per capita cost above $64.92, and so it ended up receiving slightly less than 50 per cent. However, either because of lower levels of settlements for medical fees or because of a lower rate of utilization of medical services or because of a smaller number of physicians, Alberta ended up having a lower per capita cost and therefore could benefit from cost sharing at a rate slightly above 50 per cent.

So, as I said, this cost sharing is based on a national per capita average whether you happen to be a rich province or a poor province. If, for example, Newfoundland were to decide to have a very costly medical service, it would still receive only a share which would be lower than 50 per cent. So it is up to each province to try to keep a tight control on the cost of its medical services. It happens, as a matter of fact, that there is a substantial transfer of funds on this basis to lower-income provinces because in effect doctors in those provinces are receiving, sometimes, lower average fees or lower earnings generally. I must say that Newfoundland has a pretty high average level of earnings for individual doctors, but they have fewer doctors per thousand people than some other provinces and therefore their average per capita cost is lower than the national average.

Senator Flynn: It means that doctors receive the same amount, but if they happen to work more they receive more.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: Well, they have fewer doctors per thousand people, and if you have fewer doctors and they are providing services to more people, in effect they will end up having an average level of earnings which will be higher than that in other provinces. That is the way the system operates.

Senator Carter: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the minister if he would translate these percentages into terms of extent and quality of services provided. He based his statement on the low average cost in a province, but the fact that a province has a low average cost could mean that the province is unable to provide the same standard of services as would be available in a richer province.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: This is quite true. This is what I meant when I said that some provinces had a smaller number of physicians and therefore you could assume that the quantity, if not the quality, of medical services available to the population would be smaller and thus the provincial per capita cost would be lower than the national per capita cost. But it would also mean that the services to the population would be lower or fewer.

Senator Flynn: Not necessarily lower.

Senator Phillips: I would like to ask the minister how a province such as Newfoundland, which is at the present time receiving, I believe, 78 per cent of the cost from the federal government, would be able to improve its standard of medical care and catch up with the other provinces under the terms of Bill C-68.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: Mr. Chairman, I am afraid that I have to repeat what I said before. What we are basing our increase on under Bill C-68 is the national per capita average, so that if that average increases, we are going to cost-share 50 per cent up to 13 per cent per capita increase in the national per capita cost. If Newfoundland manages to keep its increase in cost to below 13 per cent, it will receive more than 50 per cent of its cost. If it goes above the 13 per cent level, it will be in the same situation as any other province which goes above the 13 per cent. There is no difference in that respect. Our estimate for 1976-77 indicates, or would tend to indicate, that there would be a very slight change either with or without the act, but it depends on the type of settlement that the Newfoundland government will make with its medical profession and what kind of measures it will take otherwise.

● (2140)

Senator Phillips: If I understand the minister correctly, he has projected costs for the coming year for the various provinces. What effect will Bill C-68 have on the percentages received by the four Atlantic provinces?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: I hesitate to put specific figures on the record, because it depends very much on the type of settlements the provinces will wish to conclude with their medical professions and the type of measures they take. For instance, if they do as Ontario and Quebec did, not only enact seatbelt legislation, as Nova Scotia did, but proclaim it, as Nova Scotia did not, it might have an impact on health costs. If the four Atlantic provinces proceed—

Senator Flynn: Now, please.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: There would be an appreciable reduction in health costs for the next year. Even assuming that they were to do nothing of a preventive nature, we estimate that the worst would be a difference of one to two per cent from the present contributions.

Senator Croll: Mr. Minister, I do not quite understand the formula, and perhaps others do not, as it is a little difficult. I am not crying for Ontario, which can cry enough for itself, but it appears to me that although we have the greatest expenditures we receive less from the federal government. Am I wrong in that?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: Would you please restate that, otherwise I believe we would both become confused before long.

Senator Croll: I first admitted that I do not understand the formula. I know what it contains, but I do not know how to relate it to the situation. It strikes me that with respect to the richer provinces—and I will take the example of Ontario because it receives less than 50 per cent, or 49 per cent—

Senator Flynn: It is 48 per cent.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: It is 47 per cent.

Senator Croll: Senator Flynn, you are wrong again.

Senator Flynn: If I am never more wrong than that I will not worry.

Senator Croll: It strikes me that the province which provides the greatest service and spends the largest amount of money for the most people receives the least amount of money under that formula.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: You must mean in percentage terms?

Senator Croll: That is correct.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: It is because it has a large number of physicians per hundred thousand population; the largest number of physicians per 1,000 people being in Ontario, and it has had a pretty high level of fees. Therefore, quite understandably, the net result is that that province ends up with a per capita cost above the national average of approximately $65. If Ontario has a per capita cost of $70 compared to the national average of $65, the federal government will pay to the Province of Ontario $32.50 per capita. That does not amount to 50 per cent of $70, which is the hypothetical cost for 1974-75. So various factors enter into the reasons for the higher cost in a province—a greater number of doctors, a higher level of fees, and sometimes a higher rate of utilization of medical services. These are the three major factors affecting the total cost.

Senator Flynn: Mr. Chairman, I would like to pursue that question a little further. As Senator Croll mentioned, the provinces have really no interest in having more doctors and providing better services if they are to receive a lesser percentage of the cost.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: This depends on the situation in each province. However, obviously if there is a larger number of doctors the net result is that the average per capita cost to that province will be even higher than the national average. In the case of a province with below the national average number of doctors, obviously there will also be an effect on the percentage received. However, if a province keeps itself within the national average it will receive 50 per cent.

Senator Flynn: But if the Province of Newfoundland could recruit more doctors it would have to pay more out of the provincial treasury.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: True. Obviously, it would receive less than 78 per cent of its share.

The Chairman: Shall clause 1 carry?

Senator Phillips: The sponsor of the bill stated that there had been 10 or 12 meetings of the federal and provincial health ministers to discuss the new formula to be used. I presume that at the conclusion of 10 or 12 meetings you have an indication of the various factors to be taken into consideration under clauses 1, 2 and 3. Could the minister indicate to us the factors to be used in determining the amount set by the Governor in Council?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: Various factors will obviously be taken into account. To begin with, the rate of inflation; secondly, the expected rate of settlements with medical professions; and the comparative rates of earnings between the medical and other professions. These are the various factors that will be taken into account by the government of the day in compiling the order in council.

Senator Williams: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the minister the effect this amendment will have, if any, on the Indian health services?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: It will have no effect on the service provided directly by the federal government to the Indian people, for the good reason that we pay 100 per cent of that cost.

Senator Flynn: It would be difficult to pay more.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: These costs are adjusted every year on the basis of need and available funds.

Senator Austin: Mr. Chairman, in the first few moments of the minister's reply to Senator Phillips' first question he referred to a rate of growth of, I believe, 14.6 per cent and 12 per cent in the coming two years. I wonder whether that is net or gross in respect of inflation?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: First of all, the figures I used of 13 per cent and 14.6 per cent apply only to this year, the difference being added for population growth. So it is 13 per cent net and 14.6 per cent gross for this particular year. For next year the figure is 10.5 per cent, and we again expect a 1.5 per cent increase in population, for a gross of about 12 per cent.

● (2150)

If I may return to the question raised earlier with regard to the Indians, I am reminded that the Indians are being covered under provincial health insurance plans and they would be in exactly the same situation as other citizens with regard to services. We are talking in terms of services being provided directly by the federal government.

Senator Croll: My colleague, Senator Benidickson, asked a question with respect to large sums of money going to some physicians. I do not know who released that figure, but in the minds of Canadians medicare is certainly associated with the federal government in Ottawa. Did the minister not consider it important to immediately offer some explanation to all those groups of people who were involved.

When the announcement was made, there should have been an immediate explanation. The harm has now been done, and no matter what we say, or what the minister says, a great many people believe it is an actual fact that some physicians drew fantastic sums of money. In my opinion, it was the duty of the department to offer an explanation, particularly in Quebec and here in Ottawa.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: In effect, Senator Croll, we do not even have figures on the earnings of many doctors, except through Revenue Canada, and you are aware of the rule of confidentiality in this respect. Those figures are in possession of the various boards administering medical and hospital care in the provinces. The figures are released by the boards when the statistics are available, and therefore I hear of those figures, like yourself, when I read them in the press.

I will raise the matter with my provincial colleagues and will bring your remarks to their attention. I will suggest that they take steps to ensure that those figures are put in their proper context. I must admit that there would appear to be obvious cases, and it is pretty difficult to justify the type of fees which some individuals receive. As a matter of fact, I believe that in both Ontario and Quebec there have been prosecutions under the act for abuses involving medical fees.

The Chairman: Shall clause 1 carry?

Senator Grosart: I should like to ask the minister a question about the change in the ceiling. From the time of the statement in the July budget, the ceilings proposed for the first two years were, I think, 13 per cent and 10.5 per cent, and 8.5 per cent for all subsequent years. My understanding of the bill is that this has now been changed. There are new formulas for the first two years, and subsequently the determination will be made, again unilaterally, by the federal government as to what the rate will be following the fiscal year 1976-77.

Perhaps the minister would care to comment on the almost universal objection of the provinces to the announcement, and to the bill, which, they say, was introduced unilaterally. Over and over again we find this word "unilateral". That was their objection. Perhaps the minister would care to comment on why it had to be unilateral, if it was.

Secondly, the unilateral principle is now incorporated in the bill for the years subsequent to 1976-77, despite the fact that in the original announcement it was a set rate of 8.5 per cent for those subsequent years, and which, from the point of view of the provinces, would seem to be much more satisfactory than to have to rely on a unilateral federal government decision in which obviously they had very little confidence.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: In reply, there are several points I would like to raise. First, there has been no change in the figures for the first two years. They are the same as they were in the original bill. The honourable senator is right that in terms of subsequent years there has been a change to the order in council proposal, but that change was made after consultation with the provinces, which I toured in September 1975.

The reason why there was no consultation previous to the announcement in June 1975 was that this was part of the budget measures introduced by Mr. Turner. As it was part of the budget, I was not in a position, nor was he, to embark on intensive consultations beforehand. I took it upon myself to visit the various provinces in the fall of 1975. Following those visits, there were meetings with the Canadian Medical Association, and there was strong objection to the set figure of 8.5 for all subsequent years, because we did not know what to expect in those years. Therefore, I agreed to recommend to cabinet and to the house that the bill be amended so that changes could be made by order in council, and that no set figure be incorporated. Again, that followed my visit to the provinces, when all objected to the set figure.

The federal government may decide not to use this privilege in the future; and, secondly, it will be seen that in the bill itself there is provision for consultation between the provinces and the federal government before making such a decision. It is possible for members of the House of Commons and the Senate to have a debate by resolution on any order in council, which can be revoked by either house if it is found to be unsatisfactory.

There are, we believe, quite a good array of checks and balances in this particular proposal. However, quite correctly, in the end the federal government will be the one to decide, and for that I have no apology to offer. The federal government uses taxation as a means to obtain its dollars, and it should be the one to make the decision as to whether or not any increase is adequate.

Senator Grosart: May I ask a supplementary to my earlier question? In view of the statement made by the minister that the reason the federal government took action unilaterally in this case is that the principle which this bill implements was a budget measure, would this not suggest to the minister an excellent reason why fundamental changes in, or amendments to, existing bills, particularly those dealing with the social field, should not, prior to their introduction, be made a budget matter? Perhaps he will explain why it was the Minister of Finance who made this announcement, putting this matter beyond the point of consultation before it was introduced?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: It is obviously a matter for the government of the day to decide in accordance with each circumstance. I mentioned earlier that the announcement was part of a series of budgetary restraint measures, and as such they were included in the budget. I would remind the Senate that the budget sometimes contains also good things for the provinces, such as substantial increases in equalization payments and social programs. Therefore, I do not think one would want to argue too strongly to the effect that no measure having to deal with the social or financial field should be in the budget. It plays both ways, and generally in the past it has tended to play pretty much in favour of the provinces.

Senator Grosart: But it will still mean the continuation of this unilateral decision-making process, which appears to be the main objection of the provinces, not merely in connection with this bill but with almost every matter of federal-provincial relations. It is a "take it or leave it" approach, which the federal government has so often taken, and which belies the concept of consultation, as the provinces have said many times. It is all very well to say "consultation," but if the federal government has made up its mind, or restricted its position, surely it is not consultation in the normal sense.

● (2200)

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: I have not had the political experience of so many of the members of this house. I have had some experience as a senior civil servant and, over the last few years, as a politician in a department which involves substantial and continuing contact with the provinces. In that time, it has been my experience that the provinces will generally agree that consultation has taken place if a conclusion is reached that is satisfactory to them, or which corresponds to their views. On the other hand, if we reach a conclusion after extended discussion that is different from the view of the provinces, then we are faced with the general outcry that there has been no consultation.

I do not feel one should get too carried away by the statement from the provinces that there has been an absence or a lack of consultation. I readily admit that in this particular instance, this particular proposal was not discussed with the provinces before being introduced in the budget. On the other hand, both myself and my predecessor held extended discussions with the provinces before this measure was introduced on ways to better contain the rate of growth of health costs. Those discussions and consultations, unfortunately, did not prove successful, as a result of which the federal government had to bite the bullet, which is what the Minister of Finance did in June 1975.

Senator Grosart: You lowered the boom.

The Chairman: Clause 1. Shall clause 1 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 2. Shall clause 2 carry?

Senator Phillips: Honourable senators, clause 2, according to the definition, is a reference to a class of new insured services. I wonder if the minister could indicate to the committee what services are being considered under this definition.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: We have made a proposal to the provinces for extended cost-sharing. In case honourable senators might think we are only interested in cutting cost-sharing with the provinces, I should point out that we are very interested in improving the efficiency of health services. We have made proposals to the provinces to extend cost-sharing under the present legislation to services which are not covered at the present time—what we call lower cost alternatives—in exchange for measures taken by the provinces to reduce higher cost services, such as hospital and medical care itself.

We could do this under the Medical Care Act. We have made a specific offer to the provinces to commence cost-sharing in respect of a number of services which would include, first of all, home care programs including organized short-stay home care and catalytic home care programs; secondly, community mental health services; and thirdly, ambulatory health services. These services could become eligible for cost-sharing with the provinces on the 50 per cent basis under the Medical Care Act if the provinces were to agree to put forward a five-year program of reduction in the rate of growth of high cost alternatives. These discussions are presently taking place with the provinces. Practically all of the provinces have put forward their proposals in this respect.

We are also discussing with the provinces the possibility of a global health formula which would provide for a transfer of tax points and grants to the provinces. This offer was made in June. It is on the table at the present time, and I am expecting answers from the various provinces.

These services, which would come under the Medical Care Act for the first time, would not be included in the national per capita average but each class would have a separate national per capita which would apply only to the provinces agreeing to come in with the particular program. Otherwise, a province not providing the service would end up receiving a financial benefit for a service it was not providing to its citizens. That is the reason for this particular clause.

Senator Croll: Would this include nursing homes?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: Nursing homes would not be included under the Medical Care Act, but we could have nursing home intermediate care under the Hospital Insurance and Diagnostic Services Act. This is also eligible under our extended cost-sharing proposal.

Senator Phillips: Senator Croll referred to nursing homes, and both Senator Burchill and I raised questions on this matter during the debate on second reading. It is my understanding, Mr. Minister, that certain provinces pay all of the cost to the patient under the Hospital Insurance and Diagnostic Services Act.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: For nursing homes?

Senator Phillips: Yes. In other provinces, there is a cost to the patient. If the patient is entirely dependent on his old age pension and GIS, the province pays a considerable portion of the cost. On the other hand, if the patient has been fairly successful financially, and has managed his affairs in such a way that he has accumulated a nest egg for retirement, the province then collects from the patient. I am wondering why nursing homes could not be considered under the new insured services.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: We have offered, under the extended cost-sharing proposal, to cover nursing home intermediate care and converted mental hospitals under the Hospital Insurance and Diagnostic Services Act. The list I have given you is the list that will be covered under the Medical Care Act. Nursing homes and converted mental hospitals would come under the Hospital Insurance and Diagnostic Services Act. We have made that offer to the provinces. It is now up to the provinces to decide whether they want to make use of it.

Senator Phillips: I appreciate that you have made an offer, Mr. Minister. Could you give us some indication of its terms?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: It is very simple; the offer is presently on the table. We have informed the provinces that we are ready to commence cost-sharing the day after agreement is reached. This offer has been made over the last year and the provinces are still considering it.

Senator Croll: In respect of hospital care, are you not tied until 1980? What room is there for change?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: There is no necessity to amend the act. We can do it by order in council under the act as it stands at the present time.

Senator Phillips: I have one further question regarding nursing homes, Mr. Chairman. I do not believe the minister gave the percentage in respect of the proposed cost-sharing. Is it that the federal government would pay 50 per cent, or is it on the same formula as medicare.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: Nursing homes and converted mental hospitals would be on the same formula as hospital insurance, which is 25 per cent national average and 25 per cent actual cost in the respective provinces. It is not exactly the same formula as medicare, which is 50 per cent of national average.

The Chairman: Senator Greene.

[Mr. Lalonde.]

Senator Greene: Mr. Minister, how does that formula enable what many members of this chamber have been concerned about, namely, the continuation of national standards? Being from Ontario, I have no difficulty. Ontario can well afford its portion. How does this formula enable New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, or Terre-Neuve to participate to the same degree as Ontario, Colombie-Britannique and Alberta, which are the rich provinces? Can you help me with respect to that?

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: Bill C-68 does not change the basic formula for cost-sharing from what it is at the present time. It simply puts a ceiling on the rate of increase of the national per capita. So that, in effect, the basic standards that are presently provided under the Medical Care Act remain. The lower income provinces will continue for a good while yet, I am sure, to receive much more than 50 per cent federal sharing of their services. As I said, Newfoundland got about 78 per cent of the total cost in 1974-75, and we expect that there will at best be a slight decrease in that percentage for the next few years.

• (2210)

The Chairman: Shall clause 2 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 3 carry?

Senator Phillips: The minister stated that both the House of Commons and the Senate would have the opportunity to debate regulations under the clause dealing with the coming into force of the orders in council. My interpretation is considerably different. The House of Commons, on the request of 50 members, will have an opportunity to debate the regulations. The Senate will then be limited to approving a motion of the House of Commons. The clause provides no opportunity for the Senate to take an initiative in dealing with the regulations passed by order in council. I presume there is a specific reason for this, and I was wondering if the minister could explain the reason for it.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: You are quite right, Senator Phillips. I am sorry if I misled you in my previous statement. The House of Commons has the initiative, on the request of 50 members. This provision is taken directly from another bill passed by Parliament earlier this session. It is practically the same, I believe. It is, in fact, based on the Anti-Inflation Act, which has a similar provision. This is the information I have here.

Senator Grosart: It could be a bad precedent, too.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: It has been approved by Parliament, so I would not dare pass comment on the will of Parliament.

The Chairman: Shall clause 3 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall the title of the bill, an act to amend the Medical Care Act, carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall I report the bill without amendment?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Hon. Mr. Lalonde: May I thank the members of the Senate for their courtesy in having me here tonight.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I know that I express the view of all senators when I extend my commendation to the minister for coming here this evening and for being helpful and cooperative by way of explaining the clauses of the bill before us. Mr. Minister, we in this place have a responsibility to attempt to improve and initiate legislation. As you know, we take our responsibilities very seriously, and we want to thank you for assisting us in the process this evening.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

---

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, the sitting is resumed.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Senator Macnaughton: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole, to which was referred Bill C-68, to amend the Medical Care Act, has considered the said bill and has the honour to report the same without amendment.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Denis: I move that the bill be read the third time at the next sitting of the Senate. There is no hurry.

Motion agreed to.

ADJOURNMENT

Senator Greene: Before the motion for adjournment is put, may I draw to the attention of the Senate that an unrepentant and unreformed socialist, the Honourable Senator Forsey, is the only one formally dressed here. I hope that he is not falling into the trap of a former socialist, Ramsay MacDonald. I think my favourite novel in the English language is Fame is the Spur by Howard Spring, which shows how Ramsay MacDonald fell into the trap, even though he was a socialist, unreformed and unrepentant like our dear friend, of loving the trappings of office more than he did his socialist background. I hope our dear friend has not fallen into the trap of Fame is the Spur.

Senator Forsey: At all events, honourable senators, I have not helped to form a coalition government with my enemies, and I have not accepted the Order of the Garter.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, July 14, 1976

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report of the Textile and Clothing Board, dated May 12, 1976, to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, pursuant to section 19 of the Textile and Clothing Board Act, Chapter 39, Statutes of Canada, 1970-71-72, respecting textured polyester filament yarn.

Report of the Tax Review Board for the year ended December 31, 1975, pursuant to section 17 of the Tax Review Board Act, Chapter 11, Statutes of Canada, 1970-71-72.

Copies of Report of the Commission of Inquiry into events at the British Columbia Penitentiary June 9 to 11, 1975 (Chief Justice John L. Farris of the British Columbia Supreme Court, Chairman), dated September 1975, issued by the Department of the Solicitor General.

Copies of an Agreement between: the Government of Quebec and The Société d'Énergie de la Baie James and the Société de Développement de la Baie James and The Commission Hydro-Électrique de Québec (Hydro-Québec) and: The Grand Council of the Crees (of Quebec) and The James Bay Crees and The Northern Quebec Inuit Association and The Inuit of Quebec and The Inuit of Port Burwell and: The Government of Canada, dated November 11, 1975 and amendments thereto dated December 12, 1975.

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce have power to sit while the Senate is sitting today, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is leave granted?

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I would inquire of the chairman whether a fixed time has been set. I understand it was said in committee this morning that the committee would meet at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Is that a firm time, or are we waiting for a draft report or something of that nature?

Senator Hayden: We finally agreed that the meeting would be at the call of the Chair. I thought we might announce that this afternoon. We are simply awaiting the typing of the report.

Senator Flynn: So the Senate will be advised in due course?

Senator Hayden: Yes.

Motion agreed to.

TRANSPORTATION

PACIFIC WESTERN AIRLINES—POSSIBLE MOVE OF HEAD OFFICE TO CALGARY—QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Leader of the Government concerning Pacific Western Airlines. On March 3 I asked a question relative to the position of the government of Alberta on the removal of the head office of Pacific Western Airlines from Vancouver to Calgary. I asked the leader at that time whether the federal government had a position in respect of a provincial government acquiring ownership of an airline from the private sector, and then beginning to move its base of operations when there appeared to be no necessity for this from the point of view of service. Could the Leader of the Government inform this house whether the government has taken any position with respect to the question of the head office of Pacific Western Airlines?

The matter is of great concern to the employees of Pacific Western Airlines in Vancouver, who number over 1,200. I would like the leader to tell this house whether the government intends to leave the present position of the Canadian Transportation Commission alone, or whether some further measures may be in the offing.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, because of the detailed nature of the question I must take most of it as notice, but I shall endeavour to present a fuller statement tomorrow. It can be said that the Government of Canada is concerned about the general situation which has been described by Senator Austin, together with its implications. I can inform the house that thought is being given to legislation with some possible retroactivity to meet some of the concerns posed by the acquisition of Pacific Western Airlines by the Province of Alberta.

GRAIN

SUBSIDIES PAID ON SHIPMENT OF GRAIN FOR EXPORT TO EASTERN CANADIAN PORTS—SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have replies to questions posed earlier in the session, and I will endeavour to make sure that all questions are properly answered before we rise for the summer recess.

First, may I reply on behalf of the government to a question from Senator Smith (Colchester) regarding total grain subsidy figures for 1975 by province. Of that total of $8,603,157, New Brunswick received $4,579,608; Nova Scotia received $3,821,970; and Quebec received $201,579. So the greater percentage of the subsidy went to two maritime provinces, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Senator Smith's second question was:

Is it expected that the movement of grain in unit trains will be achieved soon?

The answer to that question is: Movements of grain under At and East Rates have traditionally taken place during the period when the Seaway is closed. It is hoped that, if feasible, a unit train would be in operation this coming winter.

The third question was:

What was that throughput which will be sustained at the current levels?

The answer to that question is: Grain movements through Halifax and Saint John have averaged 30 million bushels annually with a roughly even split between the two ports. It is anticipated that the unit train movement would sustain approximately 15 million bushels annually through each port.

FISHERIES

EXTENSION OF COASTAL JURISDICTION—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on June 16 Senator Molson posed a question about the 200-mile coastal jurisdiction. He said:

—has the government any assurance that in proclaiming the 200-mile coastal jurisdiction the provisions of the ICNAF Agreement covering fishing for salmon on the high seas will be respected by the signatory nations?

As honourable senators are aware, ICNAF is the International Commission for Northwest Atlantic Fisheries. The answer to the question is: The Canadian government does not consider that extensions of fisheries jurisdiction to 200 miles need affect the ICNAF Agreement on fishing for salmon on the high seas. Despite such extensions of jurisdiction there appears to be a general consensus developing among ICNAF member countries to the effect that ICNAF or some successor body should continue to regulate fisheries beyond the limits of national jurisdiction in the Northwest Atlantic. Moreover, the consensus emerging from the Law of the Sea Conference, as reflected in the conference's "Revised Single Negotiating Text," explicitly provides for a ban on fishing for salmon beyond the limits of national jurisdiction. It also provides that a country fishing within its own 200-mile zone for salmon originating in another country shall cooperate with the state of origin to ensure the proper conservation and management of salmon on the basis of the primary interest and responsibility of the state of origin with regard to such stocks.

It should be pointed out that the known distribution of salmon originating in Canadian rivers is almost entirely within 200 miles of the Canadian and Greenland coasts.

The government is therefore confident that the Atlantic salmon of Canadian origin will not be subjected to uncontrolled fishing by other nations.

PROVINCE OF SASKATCHEWAN

SAFETY OF GARDINER DAM—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: On June 8 Senator Greene asked a question concerning the safety of the Gardiner Dam. He said:

● (1410)

Honourable senators, I have a question for the Leader of the Government in the Senate. In light of the great disaster in Idaho caused by the failure of the earth-filled dam, and in light of the fact that Canada has one of the largest earth-filled dams in the world, that being the Gardiner Dam, could the leader inform this house, and through us the public of Canada, what steps are being taken by the government to ensure that the Gardiner Dam is safe, and that the pent-up waters of Diefenbaker Lake are being held back by the Gardiner Dam and will not wreak similar havoc in the lands abutting that great earth-filled dam?

The reply to this question is as follows: Under an agreement with the Province of Saskatchewan, the Gardiner Dam was designed and constructed by engineers of the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Administration, then an agency of the Canada Department of Agriculture, in the period 1958 to 1969. This agency will remain fully responsible for the structure until April 1, 1979, with limited continuing liabilities until the year 1994.

During the period of design and construction, PFRA employed a board of internationally recognized engineering consultants to provide technical advice. Under their guidance a comprehensive program for monitoring the performance and safety of the structure was established. PFRA staff have continued a detailed monitoring program since the completion of the project.

The Gardiner Dam is considered to be one of the most highly instrumented dams in the world. A board of consultants is still maintained, and at its most recent meeting in March of this year expressed its general satisfaction with the performance of the structure.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

NEWSPAPER ARTICLE—COMMUNICATIONS BETWEEN CANADA AND UNITED STATES—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I propose to deal next with a question asked by the Honourable Senator Austin on June 10. The question was:

I should like to ask the government leader what state practice is between Canada and the United States in terms of the communication of the positions of each of the two governments to the other, and to the legislative process in those respective countries.

The answer is as follows: It has been the mutually accepted practice between the Canadian and United States governments that formal representations on matters of government policy are communicated as necessary between their respective executives, that is, principally between the Canadian Department of External Affairs and the United States Department of State. Of course, on important matters of policy, contact also takes place as appropriate between the Prime Minister and the President.

In cases where one government considers it reasonable and necessary to bring its position to the attention of the other's legislature, the channels of communication remain the same. The accepted practice has been for one government to request of the other's executive that a message be conveyed to the appropriate legislative body. This procedure has been practised by both governments.

Senator Austin then asked a follow-up question:

I wonder if the government leader can tell us whether the government thinks it appropriate to its position that a foreign government be able to make representations to people in a legislative process in Parliament in a case where that representation is contrary to the government's domestic policy?

The answer to this is that, as a general principle, the procedures referred to above would not extend to cases where a foreign government was considered to be attempting to interfere improperly with the internal affairs of Canada.

MEDICAL CARE ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING

Senator Denis moved the third reading of Bill C-68, to amend the Medical Care Act.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, you have heard the motion. Is it agreed?

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I rise only to say that I regret very much that last night, since I was at Her Honour the Speaker's dinner, I was unable to hear the division bell, and so was unable to come in and record my vote against the second reading of this bill.

Some hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Phillips: You will have the opportunity now. Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

AIR TRANSPORTATION

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES ACT—LANGUAGE RIGHTS OF AIR PILOTS IN PROVINCE OF QUEBEC—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from Thursday, July 8, the debate on the motion of Senator Lamontagne that the Senate affirms its full support of the Official Languages Act, including the right of air pilots to operate in the province of Quebec in either of the two official languages according to their choice, provided that the exercise of that right be compatible with air safety standards as certified from time to time under the authority of the Aeronautics Act.

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, I have thought about this motion since it was introduced last week by Senator Lamontagne and was commented upon by my neighbour, Senator Walker. The first thing I want to tell you is that I have decided to speak in English, which is what I usually do, because I wish to be understood directly by the whole Senate. My second reason for doing so is that I think that in this instance bilingualism is not, or, in any event, should not be, the issue. I realize clearly that it has been perceived in this way in both French and English Canada, and I regret that very much. It has created a very serious crisis, a veritable threat to national unity, and I think we should not let the extremists on both sides be the only ones to be heard.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Flynn: There is no doubt that in Quebec the separatists are very happy with the situation and with the state of mind which has resulted from this problem. There is equally no doubt that in other parts of the country a lot of people have decided that here is the issue on which they can finally say, "Well, that's enough, goodbye bilingualism." I think that those adopting either one of these extreme positions are playing a very dangerous game, and I think it is up to those of us who believe that there is room for understanding and for a logical solution to enter the debate.

I have indicated to Senator Lamontagne personally, and through my interventions when he spoke, that I had some reservations about the wording of his motion. In fact, honourable senators, the first objection I have to the motion is that it does not relate clearly to the crux of the issue at hand. The motion reads:

● (1420)

That the Senate affirms its full support of the Official Languages Act, including the right of air pilots to operate in the province of Quebec in either of the two official languages according to their choice, provided that the exercise of that right be compatible with air safety standards as certified from time to time under the authority of the Aeronautics Act.

The problem is not the Official Languages Act; that has not come into play in this matter at all. No one has suggested that the act was wrongly interpreted, that it should not exist, that it should be abrogated, or anything else of that nature. I do not see how it can be said of an issue, which involves at best 5,000 pilots and controllers, that it justifies our even raising the subject of the Official Languages Act, let alone its abrogation or modification. I do not believe anyone has dared to say that the Official Languages Act was not respected or that it should be amended or abrogated. Therefore, in my opinion, we unnecessarily and dangerously enlarge the problem by calling this act into play in this particular instance.

As I said earlier, it has been perceived generally by the population, and more so by extremists on both sides, as being a bilingualism issue. However, I do not believe that this perception would justify the statement that the principle of the Official Languages Act should be discussed, or needs to be discussed, or that we should need to affirm, or re-affirm our full support of this act. No one in a responsible position has suggested that our dedication to the principles of bilingualism as set down in that act has been brought into question.

Further, the reference to the Aeronautics Act, in my opinion, tends to blur the fact that the entire issue is before a commission appointed by the government. Whether the Aeronautics Act is to come into play later on, after the commission has reported, is something that will have to be decided after the report is presented. Therefore, the Aeronautics Act is of no assistance, and whether we declare that we will observe the provisions of the Official Languages Act or the Aeronautics Act does not mean anything to the public and certainly means nothing to the parties directly concerned, by which I mean CATCA, CALPA and the Association des Gens de l'Air du Québec.

What will they conclude from this motion before the Senate? Nothing. Why? Because the motion contributes nothing to the eventual solution. To my great sorrow, Senator Lamontagne has failed to come to grips with the essence of the problem which confronts the Canadian people at this time. I have given significant thought to an amendment. But it's not easy because I do not wish to provoke any of the parties, or any of those here who may support the government. However, I have, of course, as I will indicate quite clearly, strong criticism of the government's action in this instance. I would prefer hearing other speakers before deciding whether this motion can be improved, whether it can be put into a form which will indicate a possible solution rather than express pious hopes or enunciate meek platitudes such as declaring that we do not intend to change the Official Languages Act and prefer that the Aeronautics Act be employed in this instance.

I come now to the history of the problem. It was given up by Senator Lamontagne up to the point where the strike of the air pilots took place. That was when the trouble started. There was no reference in Senator Lamontagne's speech to that strike.

It should be remembered that there was no great difficulty so far as the public was concerned. I do not say so far as CATCA, CALPA or the Association des Gens de l'Air du Québec were concerned. I say there was no difficulty so far as the public was concerned, until the appointment of Mr. Keenan as commissioner to inquire into the intended implementation of the use of the two official languages at certain Canadian airports. At that time it was limited to Montreal, and, it was suggested, perhaps also to the National Capital airport.

CATCA and CALPA were very happy with the choice of Mr. Keenan, but objections were raised by the Association des Gens de l'Air du Québec. Mr. Keenan then resigned—and for good reason, I suggest, since he had acted for CALPA, and was obviously acting for the majority of the members of CALPA, who had shown an obvious bias.

Decisions of CALPA have always been on the basis of the majority, and the majority of members of CALPA are English-speaking. There is a rather small minority, perhaps 20 per cent, of French-speaking members, but CALPA, I suggest, has always spoken for the majority, without much regard for the views of its minority. However justified was the resignation of Mr. Keenan, the government, in its hesitation to name a new commissioner or commissioners, ended up complicating the situation.

CATCA—that is, the controllers—indicated that they intended to strike, but that strike was stopped by an injunction from the Federal Court. CATCA agreed to obey the injunction and stayed at work, but CALPA—that is, the pilots—decided to strike.

Some people may say that the strike was legal. I entirely disagree. In my opinion, it was illegal. It was unjustified and unjustifiable, mainly because the implementation of the use of both official languages was intended for certain airports only. There was no immediate peril, there was no problem with regard to air safety. But, of course, the Olympics were just around the corner, just a few weeks away. It was a critical time and CALPA decided they had bargaining power which they could use, and they used that bargaining power in dealing with the government in connection with their return to work.

The problem, I suggest, was born right there and then, after the agreement between Mr. Lang and both CATCA and CALPA. Up to that point there was no serious crisis in this country over bilingualism. The question had been dealt with solely as a matter of air safety. But the terms of the agreement—extracted from the government, I would suggest, under duress—started the events which we have witnessed in recent weeks.

● (1430)

Now let me turn to this agreement. First there was to be one commissioner. It will be remembered that there was but one about whom CATCA and CALPA were sure. The government decided that it would appoint two, Mr. Justice Sinclair and Justice Chouinard of Quebec. CALPA complained that with two commissioners there could be divergent views resulting in a stalemate, so the government decided to appoint a third. The funny thing is that after having obtained a third one, CATCA and CALPA went back to their first idea and said that the Commission had to be unanimous. How could the government, how could the Minister of Transport, accept such a condition? It is unbelievable.

Unanimity or else! The government accepted the proposal not to implement any recommendations for the use of both official languages in certain airports unless these were unanimous. Imagine that. CATCA and CALPA took that position on the basis of the support of a majority of their own members, and now they turn around and say, "We want unanimity in the commission's decision, otherwise you, the government, will undertake"—and Mr. Lang agreed to that—"not to act but merely to ignore the recommendations of the commission."

I say to you, honourable senators, that I cannot recall a more abject capitulation on the part of any government.

I admit that the situation was a difficult one with our airlines not operating, and that the minister was under terrific pressure. But that he should have given in to such a condition, that I will never be able to understand or accept.

I do not mean to belabour the point but the fact is that not only did Mr. Marchand resign from the government on this question, but since then the Prime Minister himself has said that he is not too happy with the agreement; Madam Sauvé has said that she could not agree with it; Mr. Danson has said that the pilots and controllers exaggerated; Mr. John Munro has said the same; and a lot of Liberal members in the other place and elsewhere have said the same thing. It is therefore obvious, as I will, I think, prove later on, that the main problem has been created by this very condition exacted from the government, that if the report is not unanimous, if there is any doubt, the government agrees not to implement the use of the two official languages in airports other than those where they are used now.

There were other terms to the agreement that are worth mentioning, although to my mind the problems they raised have been resolved. The only contentious issue that remains is the one I have just discussed. There was a problem about requiring the commissioners to decide beyond reasonable doubt. That gave rise to no great debate. The commissioners, as we all know, wrote to the minister and said, "Well, as far as we are concerned we will be governed by the Public Inquiries Act." In a letter addressed to the Honourable Mr. Lang, dated July 6, printed in our Hansard of July 7 at pages 2352 and 2353, the commissioners dealt with these problems of the question of reasonable doubt, of publishing the views of CATCA and CALPA in the report, and especially the problem to which I previously referred, that of unanimity. They said essentially this, "This is not our concern." I think it was logical for them to say that. They said, "This is the problem of the government. This is the undertaking of the government. We cannot be bound by this unanimity rule or by this veto by one member, or by this capitulation of the government in advance. We will report as we see fit, and we will submit a dissenting report if we wish." So, any problem about the integrity of the commission or the commissioners has disappeared with this statement about the way they will deal with the mandate they have received from the government.

The last point I will mention in passing is that there was an undertaking by Mr. Lang to have any decision resulting from a unanimous recommendation of the commissioners to implement bilingualism in certain Canadian airports approved by the House of Commons. I do not take that too seriously. I think it is very childish.

Senator Asselin: By a free vote.

Senator Flynn: By a free vote. Of course, that is one of the biggest jokes. I suppose they had noticed how the free vote went on capital punishment, on Bill C-84, at the second reading stage, and said to themselves, "Maybe that is the way to deal with a free vote." I am not too sure that they should be reassured by that.

Senator Lamontagne: Let us have a free vote here.

Senator Flynn: On what?

Senator Lamontagne: On this motion.

Senator Asselin: This is a farce.

Senator Flynn: We will have a free vote, sure. There is no doubt that it will be a free vote.

Senator Croll: They just had a free vote on the other side and the "free" won.

Senator Flynn: I do not doubt it was a free vote, but there was just a little bit of force exerted on some of them. We will have occasion to deal with the freedom of members of the House of Commons and of the Senate very soon. In any event, this does not create a problem, because I cannot see Parliament referring the recommendation of the government; I cannot see the opposition deciding against implementation of bilingualism in Canadian airports if the commissioners have reported unanimously. Just imagine it. That would be political suicide for any government or any opposition party.

The problem then is not with the commissioners appointed; their integrity is beyond question. Nor is the problem with the commission, since it has a mandate which ensures that it can do a good job and make sound recommendations on this issue of whether the use of both official languages in certain Canadian airports should or should not be implemented.

The question is whether a minority in CATCA, CALPA or l'Association des Gens de l'Air should cooperate with the commission and wait to see what the recommendations will be. I suggest to you that l'Association des Gens de l'Air is perfectly justified in refusing to cooperate with this commission at this time—not that there is any question about the integrity of the commission, not that there is any question about the integrity of the commissioners, but because the government, having accepted not to do anything about the recommendations if they are not unanimous, gives these people no assurance that they will eventually be treated fairly by the government, and by so doing the government certainly does not create a climate suitable to cooperation.

● (1440)

The Commission could very well bring in a majority report with a weak dissenting voice and then the government would say, "Our hands are tied; we cannot act." Well, I think we must find a solution to this particular problem, otherwise we will not resolve the larger issue. That is the main point.

The commission must be free to use opinions from whatever the source, and it has said just that. However, if the Association des Gens de l'Air du Québec, who are vitally interested in this question, cannot be sure that the commission's recommendations will be acted upon, unless they are unanimous, I say to them, "You are right to underline that point and offer it as an explanation for your refusal to participate." This is not an insult to the commission but a reproach to the government and a reproach to CATCA and CALPA for having extracted that capitulation from Mr. Lang and the government.

I therefore suggest, honourable senators, that we should recommend some method of circumventing this objection—this very valid objection, as far as I am concerned—raised by the Association des Gens de l'Air du Québec. The government by renouncing or denying or, if you will, renegeing on its obligation in this matter is not helping the situation. To my mind, an agreement of this kind, obtained under those circumstances I have referred to, is of doubtful legal or moral value. To me it is a good example of political piracy. Of course, the government cannot, and I would not suggest the government should, denounce the agreement.

It is very interesting to note some of the recent statements made by Mr. Lang. He has suggested, in a rather vague fashion, that he would do something about the recommendations of the commission, appearing to conveniently forget the government's undertaking concerning the rule of unanimity which I have mentioned. Other members of government have made the same sort of cunning noises.

I do not think it is a safe way to find a solution for the government to try to extricate itself unilaterally from this undertaking. I think it is up to, first of all, CATCA and CALPA to recognize that they have obtained something which is really exaggerated and unfair to the minority, the French-speaking minority in their unions. That is what they should recognize. Some people have said, "If the pilots say it is unsafe to use the two official languages, then I believe them." If a French-speaking pilot says it is unsafe not to use the two languages, are you going to take the majority view or the minority view? They may be right, whether or not they are the majority.

It seems to me that CATCA and CALPA should be ashamed of themselves for the way they have treated their French-speaking minorities. I have some reason to hope that they will change their minds.

Yesterday I was looking at a statement made by Mr. Maley in an affidavit he filed with the Federal Court with reference to something which had been asserted in the Globe and Mail. I think I will read paragraph 2, as the first one is of less importance.

I have read the statements in paragraph 4 of the Affidavit of James Bradley filed in this matter and the press reports attached as exhibits thereto. In particular, there has been drawn to my attention a report in the Globe and Mail of June 29, 1976, in which there was attributed to me a statement that the position of the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association had not changed and that the pilots might go out again if the Inquiry Commission recommended bilingual air traffic control in Montreal. The report is entirely incorrect. The statements made by me at the time indicated, on the contrary, a commitment by CALPA to involve ourselves to the maximum of our ability in the work of the Commission in an attempt to justify our views.

The views of the majority, again, are not unanimous by any means.

I stated on numerous occasions that if we were unable to prove before an impartial commission that our concerns were valid, then it would seem we did not have much of a case. I have never said that if bilingual air traffic control were found to be acceptable by the commission, the pilots would go out. I do not even have the authority to make such a statement.

I like this statement by Mr. Maley but I would like to read into it that he is willing to accept the recommendations of the commission, whatever they are, whether unanimous or not. I believe that is the only way you can have a commission operate efficiently and solve the issues relating to both safety and language. I suggest to you that if the Senate were to ask those two associations to review their position in this particular respect, then the Association des Gens de l'Air du Québec could no longer refuse to cooperate with the commission and would be morally forced to say that they are prepared also to accept the recommendations of the commission.

Senator Lamontagne: Provided they have a voice. They have no voice at the moment.

Senator Flynn: I suggest to you, Senator Lamontagne, that you are creating a false issue here because anyone may appear before the commission and the commission is prepared to listen to the Association des Gens de l'Air du Québec. This has been made very clear. I do not believe you are introducing a real problem in raising that point. The commission has clearly said that they will listen to all the viewpoints which might be expressed, and I do not think for a moment that the commission would refuse to listen to les Gens de l'Air. The minister has been begging the Association des Gens de l'Air du Québec to cooperate with the commission; so there is no doubt the commission will listen to them. I do not understand why you say that they haven't a voice.

I say that if they are assured that the recommendations of the commission, whether unanimous or not, will be studied and acted upon by the government, then they will have no reason at all not to cooperate with the commission and by so doing bring about a practical solution which will defuse this whole crisis and cause the bilingualism issue to disappear.

I suggest to you that it is important also for the government to recapture its authority and reassure its responsibility in making a decision on this issue—whatever the viewpoints of pilots. Even taking into account the viewpoint of the commission, in the end the step that must be taken to bring about a practical solution, whether it be implementation of the use of the two official languages in certain Canadian airports or, for whatever valid reasons, not to do so, remains the responsibility of the government to take. I do not mind Parliament's approving or disapproving. That is something else. But first and foremost the government must recover its decision-making powers in this respect. That is imperative. Next, CALPA and CATCA should declare that they will accept the recommendations of the commission whether unanimous or not. At that point, l'Association des Gens de l'Air should immediately declare that it will cooperate with the commission and that it also will accept its recommendations. Subsequently, the government, having been freed to act, should say that it will take whatever measures are required by the facts, the circumstances, and the recommendations of the commission.

• (1450)

Senator Lamontagne: That is, of course, the substance of this motion.

Senator Flynn: No, you did not say that.

Senator Lamontagne: We did.

Hon. Léopold Langlois: Honourable senators, I should like to open my remarks on this motion by quoting a few excerpts from the text of the Prime Minister's statement on national television and radio on the disruption of civil aviation on June 23 last. The Prime Minister opened his remarks in the following manner:

Some would have you believe that the shutdown of aviation results from a conflict between bilingualism and air safety—a conflict between the federal government's alleged desire to promote bilingualism at all cost, and the need for pilots and air traffic controllers to resist the government in the interest of preserving safety in the air.

Such a distortion of the real issues involved makes the finding of solutions unnecessarily and dangerously difficult—and that task is made even more difficult by the emotionalism with which some people on both sides of the language fence discuss the official use of the English and French languages in Canada.

Then the Prime Minister went on to express in clear terms the government's policy:

In the hope of bringing facts and calm judgment to the discussion of bilingual air traffic control in Quebec, I would like to tell you what the government's policy is, how it came about, and why it is necessary. At the same time, I would like to emphasize as strongly as I can, that in fulfilling its very serious responsibility to regulate aviation in Canada, the federal government places the very highest priority on the safety and security of passengers, crew members and the general public. No other goal of public policy has ever or will ever take precedence over the goal of preserving and improving public safety in the air.

Then he added:

If it could be shown that the use of both French and English in conversations between air traffic controllers and pilots in Quebec air space is or could be a safety hazard, the federal government would insist that only the English language be used. Common sense would prohibit any other course of action.

It is now interesting to my mind, honourable senators, to see how the government's policy was evolved. First, back in 1962 Transport Canada issued directives on language usage to the effect that French could be used between controllers and pilots in Quebec for emergency purposes as a safety measure. In 1971 Transport Canada instituted a fact-finding assessment of the operational use of both languages in air-ground communications. That study concluded that situations did exist where private pilots, having a limited knowledge of English, required French language communications to obtain assistance, again in the interests of safety.

In 1974, an aviation safety investigation was carried out at five airports in Quebec on the use of both languages in air traffic control, and, after it was determined that safety could be improved, the use of French in addition to English—and I emphasize that: the use of French in addition to English—was authorized in June 1974, for visual flight rules at the five airports controlled by Transport Canada in the province of Quebec, to wit, the airports of Quebec City, St. Jean, Baie Comeau, Sept-Îles and St. Honoré.

Since then bilingualism has been introduced in radio advisory services in Quebec, and arrangements are being completed for bilingual air traffic control to become available this July at Bagotville with the Department of National Defence providing this service for civilian aircraft, and, on June 26, bilingual air traffic control for visual flight rules became available at Val d'Or.

All of these steps, honourable senators, which relate to VFR flight operations, have been taken in full consultation and cooperation with the aviation community including the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association.

On May 6, the Minister of Transport announced that Transport Canada had begun a series of experiments simulating bilingual air traffic control operations under instrument flight rules at the government's electronic simulation centre in Hull, again with the representatives of various aviation associations and the aviation industry included.

At that time the minister also announced that these experiments were intended to research and develop safe procedures for the introduction of bilingual air-ground communications in IFR operations at several airports in Quebec. These experiments were undertaken by a team of aeronautical experts including representatives of Transport Canada, the Air Transport Association of Canada, the Canadian Owners and Pilots Association, the Canadian Business Aircraft Association and Les Gens de L'Air de Québec.

On several occasions the minister gave the assurance that strict safety standards and practices for aircraft operations, which have been developed over the years in Canada, were not and will not be lowered as a result of any further introduction of bilingual communications in Quebec.

In the June 26 issue of the Montreal Gazette an editorial entitled "Aviation Language Issue" concluded in this way:

● (1500)

The Canadian government has created all the conditions and policies necessary for the issue to be handled in a calm, dispassionate way. It cannot allow itself to be browbeaten by Canadian, American, British, Australian, Scandinavian or other pilots and controllers associations. They have already done the Canadian public and the Canadian economy considerable disservice by their self-serving tactics in the name of public safety. Now they have the chance to return to public service and at the same time contribute to the development of public policy affecting them through the hearings of the inquiry commission.

In its June 28 issue the Montreal Gazette again reproduced an article with the heading: "Air Bilingualism Foes Ignore Social Situation", signed by Mr. K. R. Singh. This article was reproduced in the "Dialogue" section of the newspaper with the following note:

A column open to our readers who wish to express viewpoints on topics of interest. K. R. Singh is an Air Canada pilot. This article originally was offered to Pilot magazine (published by the Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association) but it was rejected for publication.

This excellent article concluded as follows:

This is an act of social irresponsibility that cannot be good for the long-term interest of Canada. Peaceful coexistence is a desirable goal. It cannot come about by forced conformity. To think it can is naive. It is hoped that our aviation technicians can relate to the non-technical needs of our society and handle this social responsibility well.

On June 24, the Toronto Star, in its editorial entitled "Trudeau Clears The Air," wrote the following paragraph:

Now the government's position is crystal clear. The controllers and pilots have no longer any excuse for prolonging this costly work stoppage. Thousands of businessmen, vacationers and other travellers have suffered enormous inconvenience. And both Air Canada and C.P. Air plan to start massive lay-offs if the strike continues. No steps have been taken to date that would make flying in Canada any less safe than it was a week ago. And there is the Prime Minister's assurance that none will be taken if they are judged to jeopardize air safety.

Pilots and controllers should go back to work now.

The place for them to make their case is not on picket lines but before the inquiry commission.

And finally, on June 25 the Toronto Globe and Mail, in its editorial entitled: "Mr. Trudeau and Safety," had this to say:

The Prime Minister has given his guarantee that bilingual communications will not be introduced at Montreal airports unless a commission of inquiry certifies that the introduction will not reduce existing safety standards.

And further it went on:

Mr. Trudeau is dealing not just with a technical problem, he is dealing with the most important kind of political problem; a fact that has been underlined in an unnecessary and unfortunate dislocation in air traffic this week.

I could go on citing editorials from many other Canadian newspapers, both French and English, but I deem it unnecessary. However, there is an additional and last article which appeared in the Montreal Gazette of July 6, which I would like to quote because of the authority of the person who wrote it. This article was written, in a column open to those who wish to express viewpoints on topics of interest, by a Mr. Maurice Baribeau, a pilot and former regional air administrator for Transport Canada at Dorval. Surely, honourable senators, the qualifications of Mr. Baribeau as an air pilot, and his long experience in the air division of Transport Canada and particularly as a former regional air administrator of that department at Montreal airport, qualify him to speak with authority, probably more than anyone else who has to date intervened in the debate on the use of French in air control operations in the province of Quebec. The following excerpts from Mr. Baribeau's article are worth quoting and remembering:

Many people are offering their views on the divisive issue of languages in air traffic control. If the general public is to attempt to judge the situation, a lot more background information is required to clarify the issue in a rational rather than emotional way.

Joe Clark may be right in stating that language in air traffic control is a technical matter which should be settled at technical level. In fact, he is right.

The question was settled by the International Civil Aviation Organization several years ago. ICAO is the technical agency of the United Nations responsible for establishment of aviation and flight standards to be used in international air navigation. When ICAO cannot agree on the setting of a standard, it publishes "recommended practices".

In the matter of languages, ICAO has recommended that English be made available at international airports and on international air routes, in addition to the language(s) used on the ground by the contracting states. This was a sound recommendation and it was accepted by most countries, not all. It was obvious that pilots and other flight crew members could not become multilingual. The use of a common language was the best way to facilitate international air navigation while maintaining adequate safety standards.

I have here in front of me a copy of International Standards, Recommended Practices and Procedures for Air Navigation Services, Aeronautical Telecommunications, Annex 10 to the Convention on International Civil Aviation. This is

Volume II, dealing with communication procedures. It is the third edition of Volume II, of July 1972. The statement on the front page is to this effect:

This edition incorporates all amendments adopted by the Council prior to 25 March 1972 and supersedes, on 7 December 1972, all previous editions of Annex 10.

I go to page 34 of this volume, and I quote the following section, which is section 5.2.1.1.1, as follows:

5.2.1.1.1 RECOMMENDATION.—In general, the air-ground radiotelephony communications should be conducted in the language normally used by the station on the ground.

Note.—The language normally used by the station on the ground may not necessarily be the language of the State in which it is located.

This is all under the heading, "Language to be used." To those who say that English is the international language of aviation, I reply that this is a very eloquent denial of their contention.

I now return to the article by Mr. Baribeau in the Gazette, and I quote as follows:

In any case, considerable flying was going on in the province—

That is the province of Quebec.

—by pilots who could not speak English or whose knowledge of English was marginal. It was then decided as a measure of safety to impose bilingual requirements for the recruitment of any new controller in the province of Quebec.

This was opposed with vehemence by CATCA but the decision stuck.

Perhaps I may be permitted to open a parenthesis, since here we probably are at the root of the whole opposition by CATCA. They were afraid of those bilingual controllers being recruited in the province of Quebec. They were afraid of losing their jobs. I now return to the article.

The then director of civil aviation in Ottawa agreed that French could be used in the case of distress or emergencies. In any case a larger number of controllers with bilingual abilities in the province used their good judgment and assisted French-speaking pilots in difficulty. They were serving the true interests of safety.

In a few cases, lives have undoubtedly been saved by that new practice. French-speaking Quebecers began deriving some benefits from a very costly service which up to that time had been made available only to English-speaking Canadians.

Safety is not the sole prerogative of English-speaking people. All races on this earth should have access to safety services.

Notwithstanding this general public disapproval, as represented by the editorials that I have been quoting from, of their attitude in this crisis, air controllers and airline pilots carried on with their illegal and damaging strike and agreed to return to work only after having obtained from the Minister of Transport what I consider to be unreasonable and unacceptable conditions.

I do not like the protocol signed by the Minister of Transport and national associations of air traffic controllers and airline pilots. However, I do not want to elaborate further on this protocol which has now been reluctantly accepted, so it seems, by members of the Canadian cabinet. [Translation]

Honourable senators, I shall limit myself to the comments I have just made on the memorandum of understanding between the Department of Transport and the national associations of air controllers and airline pilots, except to underline the very difficult position in which the Minister of Transport was; he was forced to negotiate with fanatics to prevent the enormous financial losses threatening Canadians from coast to coast if this strike persisted, particularly on the eve of the Olympics in Montreal.

It was also absolutely urgent to put an end to the national controversy arising from this strike to prevent Canadians from being further divided by this plot against national unity by a handful of extremists. We also had to counteract equally disastrous repercussions coming from my own province, and in particular from politicians who were anxious to take advantage of all opportunities, good or bad, to promote their own selfish ends, and in particular their petty political ends.

Before concluding my remarks, I wish to make a brief reference to what I consider the untimely intervention of the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Quebec in this political matter.

As honourable senators will recall, the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Quebec expressed the view that the memorandum of understanding between the Department of Transport, CATCA and CALPA imposed restraints on the commissioners in their inquiry into air safety, should the government project be implemented to extend the use of French to Montreal airports.

The learned judge even urged the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada to ask the Canadian Judicial Council to look into his allegations. It goes without saying that I am considerably reluctant to criticize, or even to make any reference to the judiciary in the course of a political debate. But I was not the first to throw the ball in this arena, and the one who threw it should be prepared to have his attitude criticized by politicians, as they have the right to do.

However, in the circumstances, I believe it is my duty to make the few comments which follow.

With all respect for the honourable justice, and for the sole purpose of dispelling any doubt or any apprehension which might have been raised in the minds of the public—and may I point out here that this doubt and this apprehension do exist in the minds of many—I want to quote in this connection an article from Le Devoir of June 8, 1976, under the title

"Justice Deschênes and the Commission on bilingualism in air control operations".

This article provides a French translation of an article written by Mr. Edward McWhinney, Chairman of the Department of Political Science at Simon Fraser University in British Columbia, and I quote this short excerpt of Mr. McWhinney's article:

[Senator Langlois.]

Firstly, according to the provisions of the agreement announced on June 28 by the Minister of Transport, Mr. Lang, two private pressure groups, the Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association and the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association, seem to have been granted a right of veto on whether the findings of the inquiry Commission will be mandatory for the members of these two associations.

Moreover, in the Citizen of July 8, there was an article entitled "Judges Reject Lang's Directive." This aberration by the Citizen, as reproduced in this article, is still more serious because it was written after the commissioners' letter was made public, and this article reads in part as follows:

● (1510)

[English]

Fortunately, in some instances, judges do not have to worry as much about politics as cabinet ministers.

So even though Transport Minister Otto Lang compromised on bended knee to the striking air controllers and pilots, the three-member judicial panel appointed to sort out the mess has acted with appropriate independence by saying it will not be bound by Mr. Lang's arbitrary rules.

The transport minister bowed to the pilots' and controllers' demands that the inquiry members would submit a unanimous report.

And finally, in the Gazette of July 10, again written after the publication of the letter from the commissioners to the Minister of Transport, I read the following paragraph:

The judges appointed to the inquiry commission on bilingual air control appear to have stripped their terms of reference of the bias Mr. Lang agreed to incorporate in them at the behest of the anglophone controllers and pilots. The requirement of a unanimous report is not applicable under existing law. The disposition of the report—and reports that controllers and pilots may want to make—is procedurally a matter for the government, not the commission, to decide. Making these and other points, the judges untie the strings that Quebec Superior Court Chief Justice Jules Deschênes said must not bind them.

[Translation]

Once again, the three articles I just quoted show that this doubt, or apprehension, brought about by the untimely intervention of the Chief Justice of the Superior Court reached circles as high as that of academics, like Mr. McWhinney, and usually enlightened journalists of the two papers from which I just quoted.

But perhaps it is the authority of the person and the high office he holds that caused his intervention to influence those minds which probably should not have been confused by this unjustified intervention.

First, I would like to bring to the attention of this house the letter of July 6 last sent to the Minister of Transport, Otto Lang, by the three commissioners appointed to conduct the said inquiry, namely, Justices Sinclair, Chouinard and Heald. Copies of this letter were tabled in Parliament at the beginning of last week, as honourable senators certainly recall.

In that letter, the commissioners point out that none of them was involved in drafting the memorandum of understanding, and that they became aware of its provisions only when they were made public. This is a very important point which should have been taken into account before commenting on the memorandum of understanding. It would also appear that there has been confusion between the memorandum of understanding and order in council P.C. 1976-1576, under which the Privy Council committee, upon the recommendation of the Minister of Transport, appointed the commissioners and delineated their terms of reference. These terms are determined in the order in council and not in the memorandum of understanding between the minister and the CATCA and CALPA representatives. It is the confusion between those two texts that led to this terrible mistake by people who, I think, should have thought twice before speaking.

Senator Flynn: Senator Langlois is making a more terrible mistake than Judge Deschênes.

Senator Langlois: No, my honourable friend was himself misled by those statements.

Senator Flynn: No, not at all.

Senator Langlois: Is my honourable friend suggesting as a lawyer that the protocol binds the commissioners?

Senator Flynn: On the contrary. I say that you are only mentioning Judge Deschênes' mistake, but not Mr. Lang's.

Senator Langlois: I said earlier before you came in—and that is why you do not know—that I did not like the protocol any more than did all the others who took the opposite view. But, in any case, I will not go as far as using the protocol, as my honourable colleague suggested, to say that the commissioners are bound by the protocol.

Senator Flynn: I never said that. That is exactly what I am saying, that the commissioners are not bound and that I had faith in the integrity not only of the commissioners but of the commission, in the ability of the commission to do a good job.

Senator Langlois: The honourable senator spoke earlier, and I noted word for word what he said, referring to the protocol:

● (1520)

[English]

There was a problem about requiring the commissioners to decide beyond reasonable doubt.

[Translation]

This is in the memorandum of understanding, and not in the terms of reference of the commission and this is where you made your mistake, just like Mr. Justice Deschênes.

Senator Flynn: Not at all. I rise on a point of order because I am entitled to correct the interpretation of the honourable senator.

Senator Langlois: No, no.

Senator Flynn: I have a right to make a correction.

Senator Langlois: The honourable senator is not entitled to rise on a point of order to reject a point made by someone else.

Senator Flynn: I am not rejecting anything. I simply reject your interpretation of what I said.

Senator Langlois: What you said is confused.

Senator Flynn: I wanted to make it clear that all these conditions of the memorandum of understanding were determined by the letter sent by the commissioners to Mr. Lang. I am saying that there is only one problem to solve before obtaining the cooperation of the Gens de l'Air, and that is to find a way to get rid of the commitment of the government. This is quite clear. I said so with no hesitation, and my learned colleague is quoting me mistakenly or interpreting what I said mistakenly, like he has just done.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I cannot accept the intervention of my friend and honourable colleague on a point of order because he wants to reject what I suggested. I quoted his own words. We shall be able to read tomorrow in the official report of the Debates of the Senate if he said them or not, unless they are corrected this evening.

Senator Flynn: No, I would not do that.

Senator Langlois: Let us forget this skirmish for the moment. I hope that I shall be able to continue my speech, especially since I am nearly finished, which will encourage my colleagues.

Senator Flynn: Hear, hear!

Senator Langlois: I therefore come back to the paragraph I had started on when I was interrupted.

It would also appear that there has been confusion between the memorandum of understanding and order in council P.C. 1976-1576, under which the Privy Council committee, upon the recommendation of the Minister of Transport, appointed the commissioners and delineated their terms of reference. The memorandum of understanding was tabled in this house on 28 June 1976.

Indeed, in their letter dated July 6, I feel the commissioners dealt in a categorical, clear and precise way with the representations concerning the alleged limitations imposed upon them in the accomplishment of their terms of reference. Also they clearly stated they were acting independently. It was their responsibility, and no one else's, to clarify that issue. It would have been better for everyone to wait until the commissioners cleared that matter before making any comments.

I feel—and certainly my honourable colleagues in this house will share that opinion—that in their letter the commissioners finally dealt with the 'untimely and unfounded objections by the Chief Justice.

I do not wish to bring any confusion or misunderstandings to this important debate, and I shall not comment any further on that sad and unneeded intervention in this national debate.

To conclude, honourable senators, I express my unconditional support for the motion introduced by Senator Lamontagne, in the hope that it will be approved by the Senate.

[English]

Senator Flynn: On a point of order, for the information of Senator Langlois, may I quote rule 28 of the Rules of the Senate of Canada:

A Senator shall not speak more than once to a question before the Senate except in explanation of a material part of his speech in which he may have been misunderstood—

Senator Langlois: It is not on a point of order that you do that; you have a second right to speak, but not on a point of order. That was the point I made.

Hon. Raymond J. Perrault: Honourable senators, I do not intend to intervene at length in this debate on the motion of Senator Lamontagne. However, I think we should recall with approval and satisfaction that all political parties in Canada supported the introduction of the Official Languages Act as a very beneficial action on behalf of Canadian unity. It is to be regretted, however, that the recent controversy affecting air traffic controllers and pilots has developed in some areas of Canada into a dialogue with dangerous and disturbing overtones. I have made it a point to meet personally with Mr. Maley, the president of CALPA, and some of his pilots, and to talk to certain controllers. I am convinced that their principal concern is with respect to safety in the air. But, it has to be said that if Canada is to remain a united country it will do so if moderates in all parties and in all provinces demonstrate tolerance and understanding. In view of some of the comments made in Canada in many of the provinces—honourable senators are aware of these comments—we need more tolerance than ever before with respect to linguistic differences which may exist. We need tolerance with respect to our cultural differences and other differences which exist between and among Canada's people and its provinces. Whatever language they may speak, Canadians want to travel safely in the air and it is wrong-headed and perverse to suggest, as some have—yes, at times in shadowy newspaper advertisements in which the names of the sponsors are not even listed—that the government of this nation or of any of the provinces or any group of Canadians, whether they live in Ontario, Quebec, British Columbia, the Atlantic Provinces or the Prairies, wish to place air safety standards in second place behind language, culture or any other consideration. This is a perverse falsehood. We have high air safety standards in Canada and this is agreed to by all in this chamber and all in Parliament. No one wishes to place those standards in jeopardy. However, it is contended—and this is the essence of the discussion which has taken place in Canada during the past month—with evidence to support it, that under certain conditions the availability of another language, in this case French, in air traffic control in the province of Quebec, specifically at the Montreal airports, could not only maintain the present air safety standards but in actual fact improve and enhance them. That is the statement, that is the contention.

Now, what is the position of the government? I do not intend to go into repetitive detail in this regard, but in essence the government has said, "Let us find out the facts and achieve a determination." Unfortunately, there are some in this country who do not wish to be confused by the facts. They seem not to want an investigation—a fair adjudication. I leave honourable senators to determine where these people exist, because they are to be found in all provinces. Let it be repeated that the government is considering the proposition that the availability of the French language in air traffic control under certain conditions in the province of Quebec may well enhance air safety standards, improve them, make them even better. If this fact can be demonstrated, it should be welcomed by the Canadian people. However, the government proposes to determine the facts separated from the rumour and the fiction. Should this contention of greater safety be borne out, a second language will be available under certain conditions and certain circumstances at certain airports in the province of Quebec.

● (1530)

My honourable colleague made reference to the regulations which apply internationally. I need not quote from them again. However, he has demonstrated that this is not an unusual procedure. English and second languages are available under certain circumstances at airports in many parts of the world. Yet the eminently sensible proposal by the government to ascertain the facts, has precipitated on the part of some, it must be said, malevolence, ill-will, rancour, and misunderstanding. Surely, this is a time for the moderates to speak out against the extremists, those vocal pyromaniacs whose actions are threatening the unity of this country. Some people who should be not speaking out about their concerns, but concerns exist in every province. The great majority of Canadians are moderates, men and women of good will. But unity is threatened, as the Prime Minister stated the other night, by an intolerant minority, some of whom are attempting in the name of "air safety" to seize upon the current controversy to clothe their shoddy prejudices with respectability. They are not going to succeed.

The Bible says, "Let us sit down and reason together." I suggest, honourable senators, that it is still the best procedure for individuals, for families and nations and certainly for the ultimate resolution of the dispute now facing Canada.

On motion of Senator Carter, debate adjourned.

The Hon. the Speaker left the Chair.

Hon. Maurice Bourget in the Chair.

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT BILL (NO. 2), 1976

FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-84, to amend the Criminal Code in relation to the punishment for murder and certain other serious offences.

Bill read first time.

SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Senator Lang: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate, I move that this bill be read the second time now.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, is there unanimous consent?

Senator Flynn: I have no objection to giving leave but I think it would be useful for honourable senators at this time to have the Leader of the Government indicate how this matter might be dealt with. I understand that, other than Bill C-58, this is the last piece of legislation to be dealt with here before we adjourn, in anticipation of prorogation on October 12 and the opening of a new session on October 13. Perhaps, following the discussions we have had, the Leader of the Government at this time would like to indicate what his views are.

Senator Perrault: I thank the Leader of the Opposition for inviting me to comment on this situation. Depending upon the course of the debate, it would be the intention to have a vote on the second reading and third reading of Bill C-84 at 11 o'clock on Friday morning, but again that must depend upon the course of the debate. There will be no attempt at all to restrict the opportunity and, indeed, the right of all senators to participate in this debate, should they so desire.

The proposal will be to adjourn the debate on Bill C-84 this afternoon for consideration by senators of the various clauses of the bill, to enable them to develop their thoughts on the subject, and then at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning to meet once again to resume the debate on the subject of the bill, which may continue all day tomorrow, with an appropriate adjournment for lunch, with the possibility of the Senate's meeting at 9 or 10 o'clock on Friday morning.

Honourable senators, there will be a sitting of the Senate at 8 o'clock tonight to discuss Bill C-58, which is another measure before the Senate.

Senator Deschatelets: May I ask a supplementary question of the leader? If the speeches are concluded on Thursday evening at approximately 10 o'clock, what would prevent the vote from taking place at that time instead of Friday morning?

Senator Perrault: Following the procedure in the other place, it is thought that the establishment of an approximate time for the vote will serve the purpose of permitting all senators, who wish to vote on the subject, to make certain they are in the chamber at that time. That will be the general goal, to have the vote at 11 o'clock Friday morning.

Senator Flynn: I am wondering if perhaps the Leader of the Government would introduce a motion to make it an order of the house that, if the debate is concluded, the final vote will take place at 11 o'clock on Friday morning so as to enable all those who wish to attend to be here at that time. In that way we know exactly when the vote is to take place.

It appears from the discussions we have had with the leader, the deputy leader and the whip on the government side that, having regard to the number of senators who have indicated their intention to speak, we should normally be able to complete the debate within that time and have the vote. If it is the wish of the Senate, and if it is moved by the Leader of the Government, we would agree to make it an order of the house that the vote will take place on Friday at 11 o'clock in the morning if the debate is concluded at that time.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, consideration will be given to the introduction of a motion, and it will either be tomorrow or this evening. The idea certainly has some merit.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Lang, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 44(1)(f), that this bill now be read a second time.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. Daniel A. Lang: Honourable senators, I am rather pleased to direct the Senate's attention to a matter somewhat less controversial than the matter which has been the subject of the preceding debate. I say that rather facetiously, for sure—

Senator Flynn: Are you sure? I think it is the other way around.

Senator Lang:—because this is, as honourable senators know, the no-hanging bill which has been one of the most serious matters not only before the House of Commons in these latter weeks but before the Canadian public.

Of course, honourable senators need not be reminded that the subject matter of this bill has been before this chamber continuously during this session in the form of debates on private members' bills. We have certainly had between eight and ten speeches exhaustively exploring the pros and cons of the issue. I know we are all familiar with the pros and cons.

Not only that, honourable senators, but many of us have been through this same exercise twice before, right here in this chamber. You will recall that the matter came before us in 1967 when a bill was introduced dividing murder into two classes: first, planned and deliberate murder committed during the execution of certain crimes of violence and, on the other hand, murder of police officers and affiliate types of officers, which was termed capital murder and retained the possibility of the death sentence; and, secondly, all remaining murder which fell into the category of non-capital murder with no possible death penalty.

● (1540)

At that time I think all of us agonized—and I use the word "agonized" advisedly—over the pros and cons of this momentous and deep-seated issue. It was the first time that we had been faced with making a legislative decision in this area, and we did so, both in the House of Commons and here, after much searching not only of our own hearts and minds but of the hearts and minds of others. That bill was passed. In the bill there was a proviso calling for the expiration of that law within a period of five years. Accordingly, five years later, the issue came back to Parliament and at that time we were faced with a bill once again altering the definition of murder, and confining murder subject to capital punishment to the murder of prison guards and similar officials. All other murders were not subject to the death penalty.

I think at that time many of us who had been through the debates of 1967 felt that to make up our minds again was not very difficult, because, in fact, we had theretofore established in our own minds what the principles were, and we recognized that the bill of 1972 was merely an extension of the same principle, but again narrowing those classes of murder subject to the death penalty.

Finally, once more, and as provided in that bill for the expiration of a five-year period, we are dealing with the same subject. The five years have, in fact, not as yet expired, but we are dealing with it in anticipation of that expiration.

By this bill we are being asked to drop capital punishment entirely. The only people who will be thus personally relieved are those who have already murdered prison guards and similar officials, or who may do so in the future.

In reality, therefore, honourable senators, it has taken us approximately ten years to effect the abolition of capital punishment.

Senator Flynn: No. It has been with us for 14 years.

Senator Asselin: The first discussion was in 1959.

Senator Flynn: No one has been executed for 14 years.

Senator Asselin: Since 1962.

Senator Lang: Some honourable senators have longer memories than I.

Senator Flynn: You have a more convenient memory.

Senator Lang: Nevertheless, the principle has not changed. It has taken us a long time to come through this evolution. I think that was inevitable. We are dealing here with an issue that is black or white. Capital punishment is either good or bad. It is either necessary or it is not necessary. I find that the compromises we have been making over the years, in one way and another, in some cases stretching our consciences and in other cases suppressing our fears, have not necessarily been desirable, but were probably inevitable, in order to bring about what is a quite revolutionary concept in our criminal law.

For myself, honourable senators, I confess to being an abolitionist. I recall very well that in 1967, when we dealt with that issue, I, like the rest of the Senate, attended meetings on it, at which both retentionists and abolitionists addressed us. I read statistics until I began to become dim of sight. I listened to speeches on public platforms. As a result of that exercise, I must say I came to just one conclusion, which was that to prove or disprove either the argument for abolition or the argument for retention, statistics can be found covering both the local level, the continental level, the Western World and the whole world. I also came to the conclusion that you can read articles or books, you can find quotations from academics, learned legal minds, lay minds, policemen, and others, all claiming a knowledge of the subject, and that you can pick and choose among the best of them. You can pick and choose which ones support your predilections. I also concluded in addition, honourable senators, that you can attend all the forums, symposiums, rallies and meetings on this matter that you wish, and you will find that the people present are, by and large, bringing to those meetings their own predetermined bias.

I suggest that today really nothing has changed as far as that sort of thing is concerned, and I do not think that anything I may say to any one of you this afternoon is going to change by one iota the convictions that I am sure you are all now harbouring after the examinations of conscience and the long discussions that have taken place during the years that have passed.

I am further convinced that notwithstanding press reports to the contrary, this holds true in the House of Commons. Perhaps in that place a few votes may shift under duress or entertainment, but I am sure convictions do not.

[Senator Lang.]

Senator Flynn: The result is inevitable, just the same.

Senator Lang: Honourable senators, if you ask anyone why he is an abolitionist or a retentionist, I think that in all honesty he would have to admit that he could give you no simple answer.

I could profess that I am an abolitionist because capital punishment is not a deterrent. I could profess that I am abolitionist because capital punishment is a "cruel and unusual punishment" within the meaning of the Bill of Rights. I could say that I am an abolitionist because capital punishment is immoral. I could say I am an abolitionist because capital punishment degrades and corrupts the society that imposes it. I could say that capital punishment is an expression of senseless vengeance exacted by society. I could say that I am an abolitionist because capital punishment militates against convictions under our criminal law in favour of acquittals, simply because juries are reluctant to sentence someone to death. I could confess to being an abolitionist because of the obvious fact that judicial error becomes irreversible in capital punishment cases.

• (1550)

However, in all honesty, honourable senators, I do not think that any one or all of those arguments have made me an abolitionist, or that any one or all of the countervailing arguments that could be put forward have made anyone else a retentionist. Our personal positions are determined by a multitude of factors, both conscious and subconscious, both objective and subjective, and particularly by our respective places now in time, in history and in geography.

Honourable senators, having said that, may I briefly draw your attention to some of the specific clauses of Bill C-84 and I shall only refer to those which may be of particular significance during this debate. Clause 2 deals with treason, and for the first time treason is divided into two classes, high treason and treason. It removes the death penalty for high treason and substitutes therefor a mandatory sentence of life imprisonment. Throughout the next few moments I shall be referring to the words "life imprisonment" and I hope you will, in your mind's eye, take the words as being in quotation marks and I should like to deal with their meaning more specifically when I come to them.

Clause 4 divides murder into two categories, first degree and second degree. First degree murder is defined in that clause as being planned and deliberate murder, and that would envisage such things as murder by organized crime and, secondly, murder of police officers, prison officials and guards. All other murder then becomes second degree murder.

It is interesting to note that under the proposed subsection 214(5) certain offences are included by reference in the category of first degree murder, namely, killings occurring during the hijacking of an aircraft, kidnapping, rape, attempted rape, et cetera.

Honourable senators, the purpose of those distinctions, both in the classes of treason created and the classes of murder created, become real rather than apparent when one looks at the definition of "imprisonment for life" contained in clause 21 of the bill. Under that clause high treason and first degree murder are lumped together and call for a mandatory twenty-five year sentence as being "imprisonment for life." In the case of second degree murder or treason the mandatory "imprisonment for life" sentence is ten years.

However, with respect to the ten-year provision a judge is required to make a declaration to the jury, as set out on page 9 of the bill, and he must inform the jury that if they so wish they may recommend a term in excess of ten years but not in excess of twenty-five years during which period of time the convicted person would not be able to request parole.

Of course, honourable senators, this definition of life imprisonment runs right across the other sections of the Criminal Code, the provisions of the Parole Act and other statutes dealing with persons convicted of serious offences, and makes the certainty of their remaining in penitentiary very great. I can conceive of many arguments on the merits or demerits of such mandatory terms as are contained herein, but I think that in truth they reflect the real concern abroad in Canada today over the release of prisoners who become repeaters.

There are clauses in the bill—and I am not referring to them specifically—providing for appeals by persons convicted of murder, providing for appeals on that part of a term of imprisonment in excess of ten years in the case of second degree murder, and providing for appeals on that part of the term in excess of fifteen years for those who are convicted of high treason or first degree murder and for whom life imprisonment means a twenty-five year compulsory sentence.

Honourable senators, it is not a simple formula, and I am afraid that in my explanation I have not made it any simpler, but it does, to my mind, represent a reasonable and fair mix as between the necessity for firm prison terms and for the element of mercy in the parole provisions, both of which, combined in this bill meet the needs and expectations of the Canadian people today.

Senator Choquette: May I ask the honourable senator a question regarding "recommendation by jury," which is to be found on page 9?

Senator Lang: Certainly.

Senator Choquette: It seems that the new section 670 deals only with the question of a jury which recommends that the time to expire before eligibility for parole shall be ten years or more, but there is no provision that the jury can say that it should be less than ten years.

Senator Lang: That is correct, senator. They can recommend more than ten years, but they cannot recommend less. Of course, that is only a recommendation, and the judge may or may not accept it. If, for instance, they recommend thirteen years and the judge accepts that recommendation, then there are provisions whereby the accused could appeal against that extra period of three years.

You will also find in the bill, honourable senators, under clause 25, transitional provisions which you will immediately recognize as being necessary to accommodate situations where trials may occur in the future for crimes which were committed before this date, and to accommodate situations where there are people in prison now convicted of murder under the Criminal Code as it stands. Basically these transitional provisions bring all matters pending, or matters determined under the present Criminal Code and dealing with capital punishment, under the provisions of this bill.

● (1600)

Honourable senators, in conclusion, I hope you will support this bill. I presume, although my leader has not given me any instructions on this, that it will be a free vote in the Senate but, of course, it always is a free vote in the Senate; I recognize that.

Senator Asselin: We hope.

Senator Langlois: That is always true.

Senator Lang: This subject matter is not, in my opinion, particularly appropriate to be dealt with by this house after it has been dealt with by the House of Commons. We are dealing with a matter of the broadest public policy in a very sensitive criminal area and, in my opinion, to in any way attempt to second-guess the elected members of Parliament herein would be a great mistake for us. I, as are all honourable senators, am aware of the vehemence of public opinion with regard to this issue in Canada and the strong retentionist sentiment that is abroad, certainly in areas of Ontario with which I am familiar. I know that this has not made the task of those members of the House of Commons, whose consciences make them abolitionists, any easier. I for one do not wish to make the resolution they have now come to any more difficult than it is for them to live with and, honourable senators, they are really the ones who have to live with it.

On motion of Senator Asselin, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until 8 p.m.

At 8 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

INCOME TAX ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE COMMITTEE PRESENTED AND PRINTED AS AN APPENDIX

Leave having been given to revert to Reports of Committees:

Senator Hayden: Honourable senators, I desire to present the report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on Bill C-58, to amend the Income Tax Act.

In some aspects it is unusual in that the committee followed a direction from the Senate to give further consideration to its report on Bill C-58 and to report back to the Senate. I now present the report, which is of some length, and the Clerk at the Table will deal with it.

The Clerk Assistant (reading):

The Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce to which was referred back for further consideration its Report on Bill C-58, "An Act to amend the Income Tax Act," has, in obedience to the order of reference of July 7, 1976, re-examined the said report and now reports as follows:

Some Hon. Senators: Dispende.

The Clerk Assistant (reading):

For the reasons above stated, satisfied as the committee is that the principles which influenced its consideration of Bill C-58 and were reflected in the original report of the committee are met by government undertakings, and with genuine concern for those who will still be adversely affected by Bill C-58, the committee now reports the bill without amendment.

Respectfully submitted,

Salter A. Hayden,
Chairman.

Senator Hayden: Honourable senators, I should like at this time, with leave of the Senate, to give an explanation of the considerations which led to the making of this report, and I would ask that the report be printed as an appendix to the Debates of the Senate and to the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate of this day and form part of the permanent records of this house.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(For text of report see appendix, p. 2401)

Senator Hayden: Honourable senators, this is an unusual situation. I doubt if there would be two cases in the course of my time in the Senate that a committee report has been referred back for further consideration and report. However, there is always a first time, and the committee, in compliance with the order of reference of the Senate, has reconsidered its report.

In addition, the committee is fully aware of the circumstances which may have led to the reference back to the committee, by reason of the differences between the original report of the committee and the bill which we were reviewing, and the present situation in relation to the summer recess, which always induces some pressure.

In those circumstances, we have looked at the report to see if there is any area within which we can relate the original report and its amendments with the government's policy in this direction, and whether this could be done short of requiring an amendment to the bill. In the course of so doing we heard, as witnesses, the Minister of Communications, the Honourable Jeanne Sauvé; the Minister of National Revenue, the Honourable Jack Cullen; and, finally, the Secretary of State of Canada, the Honourable Hugh Faulkner.

Honourable senators must remember that there was a provision in Bill C-58 under which the broadcast sections did not come into force until a date fixed by proclamation. The Secretary of State of Canada, in a statement to the House of Commons on January 23, 1975, before the bill had been introduced in that house, when referring to the broadcast amendments and this proclamation, said that the bill would not come into force until the government was satisfied that the needs of the advertising industry had been met satisfactorily by the broadcasting stations. This was a condition that the Secretary of State had imposed on the implementation of the date for proclamation to make the broadcast provisions effective.

[Senator Hayden.]

In one of our amendments in the original report we had provided a procedure for determining whether that condition was satisfied, and whether the needs of the advertising industry were satisfied, by the broadcast stations, which was that a motion would be introduced in the House of Commons to deal with the determination of the issue whether the needs of the advertising industry were adequately met by the broadcasting stations. In addition to being approved by the House of Commons, the motion had to be concurred in by the Senate. This, of necessity, required an amendment to the bill, and it therefore required that the bill go back to the House of Commons. I think this was the difficulty that in this chamber brought about the reference back to the committee of its original report for further consideration.

When we had the Minister of Communications, Madam Sauvé, before us she made several statements. One was that she was prepared to implement the conditions laid down by the Secretary of State. In other words, she proposed to make a determination that those conditions had been met. When we suggested to her that this might be done by a hearing, and that she might herself conduct the hearing, she agreed that it was her duty and obligation to make that determination, and she was prepared to make it; she was prepared to conduct a hearing herself, and was also prepared to receive representations and briefs from all persons who might be affected by the bringing into force of the broadcast provisions. That meant that as and when she did make such a determination and fix a date for the coming into force of these provisions, all the advertisers and broadcasting facilities in Canada would be affected by that decision—those in Toronto and Vancouver. She agreed that there was no problem as far as Vancouver was concerned, because this was a new station. It was proposed that the new station would open on or about September 1. She did admit, however, that so far as Toronto was concerned, there was a problem in that there was evidence which might indicate that the needs of the advertising industry could not or might not be adequately met by the broadcasting stations in that area, because of there being full occupation of their prime time.

She undertook to conduct an inquiry and, after hearing briefs and representations, then make a determination. If she determined that the Toronto facilities did not meet the test that was laid down by the Secretary of State of Canada as a condition, in his statement to Parliament in January 1975 before Bill C-58 was even introduced into the Commons, she would deal with the matter of determination of a date accordingly. If, in her opinion, after considering the briefs and representations, it appeared that those needs were met adequately, then she would, of course, make a determination earlier.

Your committee felt that in those circumstances, the objectives of her undertaking were exactly the objectives which your committee had in mind when it proposed dealing with this by way of a motion in Parliament—in other words, to assure that there was such a determination of the condition laid down by the Secretary of State of Canada, before the broadcast sections were proclaimed.

Your committee was not vain enough to think that there is only one way to do something, and was not vain enough to think that the way we proposed is the only way of accomplishing that purpose. Therefore, we were satisfied to accept the undertaking of the minister to conduct a hearing or an inquiry with this object in mind, and with this obligation to implement conditions laid down by the Secretary of State of Canada. We therefore say we are not insisting that our amendment be the one that is recognized and thus force amendment of the bill—depending on how the Senate responded in its consideration of our report.

If our original report had been adopted, the effect of it would have been that the bill, of necessity, would have had to go back to the House of Commons. Therefore, by this undertaking, we had disposed of the first major objection, a matter of principle, that this determination of needs be adequately met would be satisfied.

The next problem related to the question of interpretation of "substantially the same." As you will recall, in the original amendment to the Income Tax Act in 1965 there was a provision under which non-Canadian newspapers and periodicals could qualify for a Canadian status. One test was that the content of such publication in Canada has to be, at least by interpretation in the Department of National Revenue, 80 per cent different from the content of an issue of the magazine published outside Canada. Therefore the Minister of National Revenue had ruled—it is not in the bill, but he had ruled as a matter of interpretation—that the content rule had to be 80 per cent. In other words, if the magazine published in Canada did not meet the test that at least to the extent of 80 per cent it was different from the issue of the magazine published outside Canada, then it did not meet the test and the advertising costs were non-deductible for income tax purposes.

● (2010)

So we, in the course of our original hearing, had challenged the minister on the basis that under the law the determination of "substantially the same" by percentage had been declared a legislative act. In other words, in all the instances where these words "substantially the same" occur—and there are perhaps hundreds of them, and hundreds of decided cases on this point—such a percentage qualification or test is a legislative act and, therefore, has to be done by Parliament. The minister could not, therefore rightfully determine this in the course of his administration and by the exercise of ministerial discretion.

We had suggested and proposed an amendment under which there would be an obligation on the Minister of National Revenue to refer that question to the court for determination. Again, the objective of our amendment turned out to be the same as the objective of an action which the Minister of National Revenue proposed to take at the next session of Parliament. So when the Minister of National Revenue appeared before us he undertook that at the next session of Parliament he would introduce a bill defining "substantially the same," and providing in terms that it meant an 80 per cent content difference as between the Canadian issue published in Canada and the issue published outside Canada. There we saw both objectives were the same—that is, to arrive legally at a position where there could be a legal interpretation of what those words meant.

We also decided after consideration that there were greater advantages to the taxpayer in having this done by act of Parliament than in having it done in the manner in which we had suggested as an amendment—that is, the obligation on the minister to refer the question to the court—because, if you refer it to the court, the court deals with the particular case, and the decision is on the facts of that case only, and on an examination of the issues published in Canada and the issues published outside Canada. It is not in any way to be regarded as a precedent, because the facts may vary from one issue to another. But in the case of an amendment to the Income Tax Act defining the content difference as 80 per cent the House of Commons, first of all, has to approve it, and secondly, the Senate has to approve it. Then there is the opportunity for consideration of alternatives, and when you do get final approval you have an interpretation of general application.

Therefore, we felt that the objectives could reasonably be said to be about the same, and as a consequence we had no hesitancy in saying, "Well, we are not vain. We are not wedded to the method we proposed. Therefore we will accept the minister's undertaking to define these terms by an act of Parliament." We were persuaded, in that regard, that we should not insist on the amendment we had proposed. These two things, we felt, reaffirmed the rule of law and the supremacy of Parliament. This was the keynote of our original report.

There was one other thing that the Minister of Communications undertook to do. We had dealt with the question of international relations, and we indicated that we had heard a great deal of evidence in connection with the situation in Canada and the United States and the relations in the broadcasting industry as between those two countries, but that we felt our terms of reference were not sufficiently wide to enable us to go into much detail. The Minister of Communications, however, undertook very readily to set up a committee, or, as she called it, "a body of people," who would be charged with the responsibility of dealing promptly with the question of broadcasting relationships as between Canada and the United States. She did not feel it could be done in the existing committee, which was charged with dealing only with commercial deletion. She felt that the subject matters were so different, and the representation of Canada and the United States was so different on the question of commercial deletion, that it would be better to deal with this other question by means of another committee.

Our main concern, however, was that we should have a committee which was readily available, and which could give more immediate consideration to these problems that were so vexatious and irritating. We were even more concerned when Mr. Boyle, who is the president of CRTC, said to us that the problems which are on the horizon, or perhaps even closer, in the broadcasting area are bound to be more complicated than the ones we presently have in the broad field of broadcasting. We were, therefore, very appreciative of this undertaking, and we felt that this was a plus in our consideration of the bill.

There were two amendments that gave us some concern, but they were not of the importance that the first ones which I have mentioned were regarded as having. The first amendments were problems of major importance in our assessment, and involved principles. We were not going to give up anything that related to principles.

However, we had also suggested two other amendments, one having to do with the retroactivity of Bill C-58, and the other having to do with the magazine called MD of Canada.

● (2020)

First of all, honourable senators, as to retroactivity, under the bill the date for the coming into force of the clauses dealing with magazines and periodicals was January 1, 1976. We are now in the middle of July 1976, and this bill has not yet become law. But the moment it does become law, its provisions will date back to January 1, 1976, and advertisers who have been advertising in non-Canadian periodicals in the meantime—that is to say, since January 1—find themselves in the position where their advertising costs will not be deductible before the calculation of income tax, and we suggested an amendment under which that date for the coming into force of these particular clauses should be January 1, 1977.

This raised a number of questions which we had to consider. Because such a change would involve an amendment to the bill, we construed the reference back as meaning that we should try to find some way by which matters could be dealt with without the necessity of an amendment to the bill, and we sincerely followed that injunction. Then, when we looked at the clauses, we found that there were only two groups that might be affected by this retroactivity—one was advertisers in Time magazine and the other was advertisers in MD of Canada.

So far as Time was concerned the advertisers would have recourse under section 17 of the Financial Administration Act and, if they could establish hardship, they could apply for remission of the tax. But the evidence before us showed that in order to secure that advertising and those advertising contracts, Time had established an advertising rate which was two-thirds less than the general or regular advertising rate, and, in addition to that, some of the advertisers insisted upon and obtained a guarantee against loss. So that posed the problem of who is hurt by this provision. The advertisers in Time who had been subject to this non-deductibility for 1976 might have difficulty establishing they had been hurt—in other words, that they had suffered hardship—because they had been compensated. The lowering of the rate was compensation for the non-deductibility of the cost of advertising for income tax purposes, and in our view the remaining factor—that is to say, the number who might be affected—would be very small, if there were any at all.

In the case of MD of Canada, it was a small operation, and there was no way except by an amendment to the bill to postpone the exemption which they enjoyed up to that time and thus protect the magazine. The advertisers would be affected. So, when we weighed all the things, we decided that the public interest and the real value of this bill—remember, we did not attack the principle of the bill and neither had the Senate itself, because the principle was approved on second reading in this chamber. We had not proposed any amendments which would erode the principle of the bill. So the net result of all this is that the committee has concluded in its report, because of the great value of the concessions we obtained by undertakings in major areas, undertakings which reinforced the rule of law and the supremacy of Parliament, and the fact of the undertaking of the Minister of National Revenue to amend the bill and define “substantially the same” and the advantages which it gave to the Senate and the House of Commons to challenge effectively the content rule, that we had benefits which were of great importance. Therefore, on that basis, we concluded that we could report the bill without amendment.

[Senator Hayden.]

We have said in our report that it is with genuine regret that we are not able in the circumstances to deal with MD of Canada. It is a small operation, but I suppose even a small operation is entitled to consideration. However, in our opinion, when all the benefits are put in the scales and the circumstances under which there may be some hurt to some people—and it is not too clear as to what they may be, or the extent to which they may go—are added, the public interest would best be served by reporting the bill without amendment and giving the opportunity to the industry—that is, the publications industry and the broadcasting industry—to establish that the objectives which were laid down by the government to be accomplished if this bill came into effect would be actually accomplished.

We did not receive much help from the Secretary of State of Canada.

Senator Walker: That is an understatement.

Senator Hayden: As a matter of fact, he appeared before the committee the day following that on which the Minister of Communications and the Minister of National Revenue appeared, and I must say that the feeling of the committee with respect to them was that they were very cooperative, very understanding and very fair in their consideration of the problems and meeting the position which we presented to them. We regarded our position at that time as being a charge from the Senate to re-examine the circumstances and to see if there were ways in which we could come back to the Senate with a report that would permit the passage of the bill without amendment. They understood that and, as a matter of fact, when we opened the meetings with these two ministers present I made the statement to them that this was not a situation in which we were meeting to study the bill, but were meeting to study ways in which we could resolve, if possible, the differences between the original committee report and the position of the government on this matter. In that light they were very cooperative—the Minister of Communications particularly so, and certainly Mr. Cullen.

● (2030)

We put two propositions to the Secretary of State of Canada—on MD of Canada and retroactivity. He was to confer with his colleague, but he did not come back to the committee. He may have reported to the government leader. It is quite likely that he did so. But having said that he would consult and come back, and he did not do so, we were a little concerned about that and felt that we were not getting cooperation. But notwithstanding that, we felt that the two ministers whom I have mentioned made a great contribution to enable us to make the consideration of the case which we have described in our report.

If honourable senators look at the report, they will see—they do not have to accept my word—actual quotations as to the undertakings of the Minister of Communications and the Minister of National Revenue on the points which I have stated. So there is no question about the undertakings. Honourable senators will see quotations as to the Minister of Communications' undertakings in relation to international relations and the establishment of a committee to deal with a very troublesome and irritable situation, that of our relations with the United States generally in the field of broadcasting.

Those are the conclusions we came to, and on the basis of what we had before us we were prepared to recommend that the bill be reported without amendment.

Hon. David Walker: Honourable senators, before speaking about the chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, I want to thank Senator Davey and Senator McElman for the help they have been to us. They have been of tremendous help and assistance—and we never contemplated it from that quarter. I cannot help but admire Senator Davey because of his distinguished appearance. I try each day to determine whether he looks and acts like Napoleon Bonaparte or Winston Churchill.

Senator Langlois: Both.

Senator Walker: It could well be both. Honourable senators will remember the old school poem:

He scowled, he frowned,

I shook the ground,

I trembled through and through.

He takes the long walk, the glasses down over his nose, the jutting chin, the impressive voice, the piercing eyes; he holds forth, and he is very, very impressive. In other words, Davey gets what Davey wants—to a point, of course.

Then his assistant—a most astonishing person—Senator McElman—

Senator Robichaud: Honourable senators—

Senator Walker: You are not the Prime Minister's assistant. You are in reality the first minister. Senator McElman is a very able person. He told me so himself. I know that he was trained as a stenographer; he knows shorthand, and he is a great help. He was to Premier Robichaud, and I wish he were here tonight, because the thing that I like about him is—

Senator Robichaud: I am here, and I am listening to every word that you are uttering at the moment.

Senator Walker: That is very good.

Senator Robichaud: There are certain things I disagree with.

Senator Walker: I hope you will reply when you get an opportunity. McElman is remarkable because—well, I love those Newfoundland jokes. I go to Senator Carter every once in a while to get a new joke. I have to have a hero for those jokes in order to understand them. I discovered a solution, and in the middle of the night I can always have a laugh. I listen to one of Senator Carter's jokes, and then I put Senator McElman in the hero's role, and it really turns out to be humorous.

Honourable senators, those two people have been of great help to us, and I will tell you why. In their own way they have turned so many senators in favour of opposing this bill. The turnover was amazing. The opposition to this bill was nothing in the beginning, but it became greater and greater as time went on. On this side of the house we could not figure out why so many Liberals would turn against the bill with anger and determination, and we found out that it was because of the actions particularly of Senator Davey, assisted by Senator McElman, in connection with the bill.

We owe a great debt to them because of their actions throughout. We had the house so divided, and so many were opposed to the bill—both Liberals and Conservatives—that it became a non-party matter, and had we had a vote two weeks ago we would have won. But our people heard there was going to be some kind of settlement worked out by the genius who has just spoken tonight, Senator Hayden—a very exceptional leader. I do not always support him, but he has done a remarkable job in this instance.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Walker: He was instrumental in bringing this thing to the settlement which we have at the present time. And may I say this, that with the help of Senator McElman first and Senator Davey second—in accordance with the wishes of Senator Davey, which I know are very sincere—we almost won this thing without any compromises at all, just on a straight refusal of the bill. But, by the time the Senate got the bill, Time had succumbed. It was chopped down; it was massacred; it was murdered. It did not even have a chance, thanks to—I do not think it was Senator McElman at this time; I am sure it was you, Senator Davey—the brilliance of Senator Davey, assisted by his minion in the ministry—what is his name now?—oh yes, Senator Faulkner.

Senator Grosart: He is not a senator.

Senator Walker: Surely I am not insulting the Senate. It is the Honourable Mr. Faulkner. Assisted by him—

Senator Robichaud: You are wrong about Senator McElman.

Senator Walker: Before you make any remarks, Mr. former Premier of New Brunswick, you had better consider what Senator McElman says about you with great regularity.

I may perhaps carry on now for a moment. These things have happened constantly. Time succumbed. Nothing we could do could revive it. Stephen LaRue did not come. He was scared. He was frightened to death of Faulkner. He never did get an appointment with him. He never did have an opportunity to come to Ottawa and discuss with him the purport of this bill and the 80 per cent rule. He never had a chance to explain his point of view. He just got mad, and succumbed.

I think it is a shocking thing, because had he fought on in the way Reader's Digest did I think Time could still be here as a good Canadian magazine, which no less a person than our late friend, the deceased Senator Grattan O'Leary, described as probably the greatest news magazine in the history of the world. But Time passed out. They were scared to death by my friend over there. They passed out. The only time we saw the president was at a meeting of our committee which turned out to be a memorial service in honour of the deceased Time Canada.

It was too bad. I cannot do anything but condemn him. I wonder how he is employed, if he is still employed, by the American Time? I am amazed at the manner in which he abjectly lay down and got tramped upon by my friend over here—and when he gets tramped upon by him, it's a mighty tramp.

● (2040)

Senator Davey continued his great crusade to help the downtrodden publishers, the poor benighted publishers, and the Canadian public. I may say that he is a great advocate, and if a person is a great advocate he must have a sense of compassion. As much as I admire the advocacy of my friend, and his gestures while he advocates, I still cannot understand his lack of human kindness, his lack of consideration for, I was going to say, almost anyone, although he talked of the poverty of the broadcasters and the publishers, and mentioned particularly Maclean-Hunter. Poor Maclean-Hunter. In this year, their profit for the first five months is $2.5 million. Then poor little gallant CITY-TV. Think of the terrible way they have been treated. They have been financed by the big money in Toronto. They have no seat in their pants, Senator Davey inferred. He did not use those words—he is too cultured for that—but that is what he was indicating. Do you know what the draining of the millions and millions of dollars to the United States by these American companies that are getting the advertising here amounts to? Twenty million dollars a year—peanuts.

Senator Choquette: Gross.

Senator Walker: Of course, it is gross. There is a substantial difference. Here we have the image created by Senator Davey of a poor, tiny country bleeding to death. If these inflammatory statements were introduced in a court of law they would cause an immediate mistrial. But in the Senate, of course, being the super-intelligent body that we are, these statements go unchallenged, but not unlaughed at.

Senator Davey conducted his crusade with an energy I have never seen matched by any man in public life, with his devotion to the cause of the Star Publishing Company, that magnificently organized company of many, many facets and magazines—you name it, they've got it—and also the cause of the great empire of the Maclean-Hunter Publishing Company. The way he worked for the cause of those people was something I shall never forget. It was a lesson from which we should all profit. It was something we should all emulate. Now, mark you, I have not his skill of phrase. I can never hope to compete with him there. I can only tell you of the ability he showed, not only through the days but the weeks and weeks and weeks during which we wrestled with this problem.

Senator Davey: And more weeks.

Senator Walker: That is very clever, very good, Senator Davey.

Senator Davey: A very good speech.

Senator Langlois: Amen.

Senator Walker: So be it; quite right. Is that the interpretation of it, or "ainsi soit-il"?

Then there is Mr. Hodgkinson. It put a little spoke in the wheel of Senator Davey when I introduced what he had said. He is no more than the president of the Maclean-Hunter Publishing Company, and a short time before he heard the minister introducing this bill he had boasted—and they had published his boast—that no matter what Time did, Maclean-Hunter could not only get a market for a news magazine but could even outdo Time in a matter of time. That is not a pun either. They were willing to go on with Time and succeed, and when this great bonanza came—unsolicited of course, according to Senator Davey—to Maclean-Hunter and the Star Publishing Company, these two monolithic giants accepted it, and accepted it all gracefully.

[Senator Walker.]

You might ask whether I am supporting the bill. I am not supporting the bill as such. I am supporting the bill subject to the undertakings worked out by that genius—I wish he were a Conservative; he is a Liberal, but I still have to say this—the chairman of the committee and his subcommittee. The whole committee worked out the general undertakings, but the chairman worked out the details. They so turned that bill around that now we are getting pretty well what we originally anticipated. We are not getting everything, but it is far better to get this bill subject to the undertakings of the minister than to get no bill at all, or to have the original bill pass. I do not think that would please anybody.

I will not go over the undertakings again, because the chairman has just finished going over them. I was going once again to go over what had been accomplished on the three major points, plus dealing with MD of Canada. The committee has accomplished fabulous things. I know the undertakings of the ministers will be realized. They are men of their word, and a lady of her word. By the way, what a charming lady Madam Sauvé is.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Walker: She could have been a great and beautiful actress. Also, she has got so much common sense. I was very impressed with her. I was also very impressed by an old friend of mine, Bud Cullen. To see him now as a minister, doing as well as he is doing, is very satisfying to me.

I will not go into the major undertakings described by Senator Hayden. He has pointed out how they changed the purport of the bill by undertakings. He has pointed out to me why I must support the bill, subject to the undertakings. Without them I would violently oppose it.

I am not in the habit of doing this, because I have had great differences of opinion with the Leader of the Government, but I must congratulate him. I must also congratulate his Whip. His great ability is that he is a gentleman. So is our Whip. It is a great thing to have a gentleman in charge of an undertaking such as this. I know that he got around and worried hell out of senators as he got more and more votes for the bill when it seemed to be tumbling overboard, so that people came in from all over Canada a couple of weeks ago. We knew everyone wanted to get away. We knew we had to make some kind of deal, and let us be frank about that.

I have paid the greatest tribute I can to you, Senator Davey. Don't look like that. At the moment you look like Napoleon. I like you better when you put on your glasses, lean over and look like Churchill. Lean over, get your glasses down on the edge of your nose and be, not yourself, but Winston Churchill.

● (2050)

I pay a final tribute to Senator Hayden and to all members of his committee, particularly the subcommittee. I was not on the subcommittee and probably that is why it succeeded so well. All the members were able to come to their individual conclusions.

Senator Hayden has been an old enemy of mine for 45 years. We have always been on opposite sides. He is still on the opposite side. He is a Liberal and I am a Conservative. I have to give credit where credit is due. At no time in this Senate, not even in the time of Arthur Meighen, or great leaders on the Liberal side—I do not know their names so well by heart—has there ever been a man in the Senate with the peculiar ability of Senator Hayden, not only to interpret the law but to amend the law right off the top of his head. Senator Austin noticed this too. Senator Hayden made these remarks. He amazed me. Senator Hayden kept the ship together, aided by Senator Laird, Senator Lang, Senator McIlraith and my great friend, Senator Macnaughton, and others. I know I must have missed some.

Senator Beaubien: Senator Davey.

Senator Walker: Yes, Senator Davey and his friend Senator McElman, but they were not members of the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee. We must admit that we got tremendous contributions from this side of the house from Senator Molson. He is not a Tory. He has always been a Liberal. Also, Senator Flynn and Senator Beaubien—

Senator Beaubien: Don't leave anyone out.

Senator Walker: Senator Smith.

Senator Denis: Colchester.

Senator Walker: Thank you very much, Senator Denis—Senator Smith of Colchester. This was a wonderful show that was put on. I am going to close. We are going to vote on this and I hope soon.

I do not think I have gone over to be a Liberal. However, I am amazed, dumbfounded, in spite of Senator—what is your name?—yes, Davey—that we should have come to this agreement. We do owe it all to Davey because he is the one who scared the hell out of the government because they were going to lose as a result of his actions.

My final word is this: Senator Arthur Roebuck was in the Senate until he was 90, and a very able senator he was. Senator Hayden is 80 and would it not be a wonderful thing, Mr. Minister and Leader of the Government, that a very rare honour should be conferred on Senator Hayden, that he should be made a member of Her Majesty's Privy Council in Canada?

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, would you permit me just a few words?

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, I would like to know if this is in order. There is no motion before the house. Senator Hayden was allowed to make some remarks on the report, as was Senator Walker, speaking for the Opposition. I am in the hands of the Senate. If there is unanimous consent, Senator Perrault may proceed.

Senator Asselin: He has to obey the rules.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: We should not have a debate because there is no motion before the house.

Senator Hayden: Honourable senators, I move the adoption of the report.

Senator McIlraith: Honourable senators, it is unnecessary to move the adoption of a report when a bill is reported without amendment. It stands adopted. The applicable rule reads:

When a committee reports a bill without amendment, such report shall stand adopted without any motion, and the senator in charge of the bill shall move that it be read a third time on a future day.

That is rule 78(4) and it is quite clear. Therefore, there is no necessity for a motion. We can move to the third reading stage and then remarks may be made.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I realize the rule is there. I began to read it when the subject was first raised about an hour ago, but it seems to me that if some senators are allowed to speak, others who may have a different point of view should be allowed to do so.

Senator McIlraith: On third reading.

Senator Walker: Why do you not move third reading?

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: That was my point. That's why I raised the point. Senator Hayden should have asked for leave to make certain remarks on his report because the rule is as Senator McIlraith just pointed out. I am in your hands. If the Senate wants to discuss this and we have unanimous consent, all right; otherwise, there is no motion before the Senate. Those who want to speak can do so on third reading.

Senator Smith (Colchester): In that case His Honour the Speaker is likely to rule that the report has already been accepted by the Senate and that it is out of order to discuss it, and that one must confine oneself to discussion on third reading.

Senator Choquette: Why not move third reading?

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Is there any objection to that?

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I would like to comment on a point of order. I would suggest that it is almost customary in this chamber to suspend our rules. I do not think there has been a single day when I have been here that we have not suspended two or three of our rules by merely asking leave. Senator Hayden did ask leave. Senator Walker presumed that leave would be given. I suggest, therefore, that we can carry on by suspending the rule which, incidentally, does not say there can be no debate. It does not say there can be no debate. It says that the report shall stand adopted without any motion.

This would not be the only time that we have had a discussion in this chamber without a motion before us. I suggest, therefore, if it is the wish of honourable senators to carry on and discuss the report, as distinct from the bill on third reading—and they are two entirely different things—that Your Honour could put the motion that Senator So and So may now speak with leave, which would be a motion that Your Honour could consider.

Senator Davey: Honourable senators, with leave, may I move third reading of this bill.

Senator Grosart: Nothing could be more out of order for an honourable senator, when a point of order is before His Honour, than to move another motion. There is a point of order on which I have sought a ruling from the Chair. I do not know whether Senator Davey's purpose is to prevent discussion of the report.

Senator Davey: The purpose is to expedite the debate.

Senator Grosart: The debate on the bill but not the debate on the report, and it is the report which is before us, and leave has been granted for a discussion of the report. Therefore, I suggest that the proper procedure for Your Honour would be to allow the discussion to continue with leave.

Senator Perrault: With leave, honourable senators, may I make a brief statement?

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Is it agreed? As I said before, I am in your hands. If you have no objection, all right. However, we must realize that according to our rules there is no motion before the Senate. Unless there is unanimous consent and leave of the Senate, I have to put the question on the motion for third reading. Is there unanimous consent?

Senator Asselin: On the point of order, if we give permission to the Leader of the Government and others to make some remarks, then we will have a debate.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Is there unanimous consent?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, frankly, I would prefer to make my remarks on third reading, which I think would be in conformity with the rules of this chamber, but I am in the hands of the Senate. I have only a short statement to make, a non-acrimonious statement.

● (2100)

Senator Grosart: You will have to get leave to speak on third reading, so be careful.

Senator Smith (Colchester): It seems likely that I will not receive unanimous consent to speak now; nevertheless, I will put that to the test by asking for leave to speak now.

Some Hon. Senators: No. Speak on third reading.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: I am sorry, Senator Smith, but I do not hear unanimous consent. One solution would be for honourable senators to agree with me that there should be more liberty on third reading, let us say, and that everyone should be able to speak on third reading. Nor should it necessarily be restricted to third reading; in my opinion, it should also extend to the report, if it is the will of all honourable senators. That might be one way out of the difficulty, and in that case everyone would be treated fairly in the circumstances and every senator would have a chance to speak. Would that be acceptable?

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I would be glad to accept that suggestion. I just want to say that I do not agree with the report, and then say why.

[Senator Grosart.]

Some Hon. Senators: Speak on third reading.

Senator Grosart: It is easy enough for honourable senators to say "third reading," but leave would have to be given, and it just might not be given. I do point out that we have a report before us, that a debate has started, and that the debate has been on the report. There are matters which honourable senators may wish to raise about the debate that has already taken place on the report, and I would therefore suggest that senators be given leave. If not, just say no, and we will wait until tomorrow.

Senator McIlraith: Go ahead and continue the discussion.

Senator Perrault: With leave, then, honourable senators, may I make a brief statement?

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: I want to make it clear that I wish to be fair to all honourable senators. If Senator Perrault speaks now, I think another senator from the other side should have the right to speak. Is that agreeable?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, there is no inclination on the part of the government to restrict debate on this matter. All senators are certainly welcome to participate in any discussion about the merits of the report or any aspect of the bill.

I really rise to say that I think the committee's report is a tribute to the value of men and women of good will meeting together, considering a matter of importance to Canada together and working out proposals which will make this bill, ultimately, a better statute when it is passed into law. I want to assure honourable senators that, regardless of some of the comments spoken and written by the media following the presentation of the first report on June 22, beginning on the morning of the 23rd, I approached the government and discussed with them the views of the Senate in respect of the bill. This, of course, is my responsibility. I indicated to them my support for some of the views contained in that Senate report.

I do not believe that under any circumstances the Senate should be a supine, rubber stamp of the other chamber. In this regard, honourable senators realize that I occupy a unique position in that, while I have a responsibility to help advance government legislation, I have an important responsibility to make certain that the Senate of Canada continues vigorously in its function as the body of second thought and that every effort is made to improve legislation which comes to it from the other place.

I know of the time that members of this committee have invested in consideration of this bill, and I want you to know that I have enjoyed working with them and with my colleagues in government and with others in efforts to have fair and favourable consideration accorded to some of the views expressed in that Senate report. The result is that I think we have achieved something very constructive this evening. As Senator Walker said, not everything has been accepted which was recommended in that report; not everything, but ultimately the bill will be a better bill as a result of our efforts.

The report we have heard tonight is a tribute to the distinguished chairman of the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee and his committee colleagues and to the many other speakers who interested themselves in this bill, regardless of whether they were formal members of this committee. Certainly, there have been differences of opinion from time to time, some of them vigorously expressed, but I have always felt, and I am sure honourable senators share the same attitude, that honest differences honestly expressed constitute one of the important and distinguishing features of parliamentary democracy. In the debate on Bill C-58, and during committee discussion, we have had honest "fences" but all of us support the basic institution of Parliament and the right to dissent.

I think the committee and its chairman deserve the appreciation of all of us for the application and diligence which they brought to consideration of a very important bill. I found it particularly gratifying that they found themselves able to support the principles of the bill—not all of the detail but the principles of it: the goal to encourage further development of a strong, indigenous Canadian publishing and communications industry. That is a worthwhile goal. I think the commitment that we have received from the Secretary of State, for example, that next session he will come before us and will discuss the results of the measure in its application is encouraging. We will have an opportunity to assess the effect of the statute in relation to the publishing industry and the television industry. That is a commitment which the minister has given to the Senate, and I am pleased to note that the Secretary of State's letter is appended to the committee report. All of us want this measure to be effective; we want it to work; we want it to meet the highest expectations of those who have supported it.

Senator Hayden made one of his wise statements tonight when he said that the committee members "are not vain enough to think that there is only one way to achieve something." Well, when any government of Canada ever comes to the belief that there is only one way of achieving anything good, then it is time for that government to leave.

Senator Phillips: I agree.

Senator Perrault: There are many good solutions to the problems which face the Canadian people, and in this case as a member of the government I am gratified to note that the government was not vain enough to think that there is only one way to achieve something.

When this bill was considered in the other place, I believe that it was a basic mistake not to enshrine in the bill a definition of "substantially the same". When the minister came before the Senate committee he indicated his agreement, and he has said on behalf of the government that he will do something about it.

There was, of course, an honest difference of opinion about whether the preferred method to determine the words "substantially the same"—whether the task should go to the courts first or whether the definition should be enshrined in the Income Tax Act. But one "route" was chosen of the two possibilities suggested in the Senate report.

Certainly, in this entire process we have once again put to rest the misguided notion that we have in Parliament an intransigent, immovable government on the one hand, and, on the other hand, an equally immovable and obstinate

Senate committee which specializes in blocking everything. That is one of the sort of misguided notions we see served up from time to time in the media.

Senator Grosart: When did we ever block anything?

Senator Perrault: Well, I do not espouse that view myself, you know.

Senator Grosart: I asked, "When did we ever block anything?"

Senator Perrault: I am talking in terms of the activities of the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee and the suggestion which has been made by some that somehow it is slowing progress when the committee takes time to examine legislation, the suggestion that somehow this process impedes progress.

Senator Grosart: I have never heard that said.

Senator Perrault: I hope you have been reading your newspapers recently.

Senator Grosart: I have.

Senator Perrault: But we are joined in a common cause—all of us—and Bill C-58 is another example of where common cause has been joined to produce legislation which is in the public interest. Certainly, we have confirmed once again the supremacy of Parliament by the fact that an amendment is going to go forward. I will certainly undertake to ensure that the commitment is kept. The government will introduce a bill at the next session to amend the Income Tax Act to define the meaning of the words "substantially the same."

● (2110)

Honourable senators, may I conclude by suggesting that this has been another session of accomplishment for the Senate. We may be the only body in Parliament, or among government-related departments or crown corporations, that does not have a big public relations department; but I wonder if Canadians generally are aware that so far this session we have amended bills that have come before us something like 60 times, and that approximately 35 bills have been initiated in the Senate this session, in addition to numerous reports. That is proof, again, of a body which is vital and alive and working and active—a chamber doing a great deal that is useful for Canada. Perhaps during the summer recess we should tell more Canadians about our work.

I thank the chairman and the committee for a job well done.

Hon. George I. Smith: Mr. Speaker, I now renew my request for leave to participate in this debate.

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I rather hesitate to follow the eloquent performances of Senator Hayden, Senator Walker and Senator Perrault, who have excelled themselves in expressing their points of view. I shall not reach that high standard, but it may be that I will be able to make clear one or two things which trouble me.

Let me say at once that I am delighted to be able to join as warmly as I know how in the tributes that have been paid to the Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce for his lucid and perfectly clear exposition of the report and the reasons which led to it, even though I do not accept it. Not merely on that account, however, do I join in this tribute, but also on account of the long hours of very hard work which he has put in on behalf of the Senate and on behalf of Canadians in his various endeavours to reach a solution which he felt he would be prepared to have his committee accept and present to this house. I do not know how many hours he spent at this sort of thing over and above what all the rest of the committee put in, but I know they were many and that they were filled with hard work.

Of course, I think it only fair to say that while someone else may have had a hand in the report which is before us, it is, in large measure, put together by his industry, his ability as a draftsman, and the expenditure of a great deal of thought and energy. Therefore, I join most willingly in the tribute paid to him, and I will say that I am sure it is highly deserved indeed.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I do not know how I manage to be so nice with everybody, but I have to agree also with the Leader of the Government about the point he made concerning the effort he put into the attempt to find a solution which he felt would satisfy his feelings about what ought to be done. I cannot testify to his efforts from personally accompanying him in his various activities in this regard, but certainly the results became pretty well known to the members of the committee, of which I have the honour to be one, and I think that there can be no doubt at all that he played a very important role in all of this difficult exercise.

Having said that, however, I feel that I simply cannot vote for this bill on third reading, and therefore it would be wrong and very strange indeed for me to avoid saying, at this stage, that I just simply cannot accept the report.

In the first instance, I think it is a bad bill, not because its objectives are bad—since with the rest of the committee I agreed with the original report the committee presented, accepting these objectives without reservation, and which I accept now—but because in my view it was about as badly handled a bill from the time it was first conceived in somebody's mind until this moment, as it was possible to observe in any legislative assembly anywhere. It is simply a bad bill for the achievement of what we all agree, I think, are good objectives.

I am not at all sure that I find myself as happy as my colleagues about the fact that we are prepared to yield because we have received certain undertakings. It seems to me it is such a bad bill, and has been so badly handled—and I am not now talking about anybody in this chamber—that really the only proper thing to do is either amend it as the original report indicated, or amend it by means of some sort of modification of the suggestions contained in that report, or defeat it.

Incidentally, before I overlook this fact, the Leader of the Opposition in the Senate is unable to be present just at this moment, and he did ask me to say, if the matter arose in his absence, that for reasons he gave in the committee he too is unable to support the adoption of the report.

[Senator Smith (Colchester).]

I do not think I should attempt to take up the time of the house or trespass upon its good nature, it having given me leave to speak, by reiterating my reasons for thinking this is a bad bill. I gave those in some detail on second reading, which is now a long time ago. There is one thing, however, that it seems to me that we must not forget. Somehow somebody, in the early stages of this bill, got the idea that because a minister or a group of ministers decided that this ought to be the law, everybody in the country should instantly accept it as being the law and conduct themselves accordingly. That is an attitude that I just do not think any responsible parliamentarian, or anyone interested in parliamentary government, can properly accept. Why should anybody believe that any suggestion, or any bill introduced by anybody or any government, is going to be the law until it is the law? And why should a penalty be imposed on anyone who takes advantage of their everyday right as a citizen of the country to wait until it is the law before they feel they have to pay it? I suppose that perhaps in that feeling is wrapped up the real, fundamental reason why I find it so hard to accept this report.

Thank you, honourable senators, for granting me leave to speak at this time. Thank you for listening to me.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: When shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Lang: Honourable senators, in view of the fact that the sponsor of the bill is not in the chamber at this time, I would suggest at the next sitting.

Hon. Senators: No, now.

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, the sponsor of the bill informed me on his way out that he would not be back until Friday morning, and that he had no objection to the bill proceeding in his absence.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: I am sorry. I did not hear Senator Lang's motion. Is the honourable senator moving third reading? I asked when shall the bill be read the third time?

Senator Lang: I said, at the next sitting.

Senator Grosart: Perhaps you should have a conference with your leader.

Senator Perrault: With leave, I move third reading now.

• (2120)

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Honourable senators, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Perrault, seconded by the Honourable Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate, that this bill be now read the third time.

Senator Grosart: Leave is granted.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Senator Grosart: Mr. Speaker, the motion for third reading has just been put. We have not had an opportunity to discuss the bill on third reading. In other words, third reading has been moved, but not yet passed.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: If Senator Grosart wishes to speak, he is free to do so.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, other members of the house may also wish to speak on the third reading of this bill. While there has been discussion of the report of the committee and the circumstances in which that was made, there is certainly no reason why the bill should not now be discussed on third reading.

The comments that I wish to make are, first, that I am opposed to the passage of the bill without amendment. Had there been a vote on the amendments that were reported to the Senate by the committee, I would certainly have voted in favour of those amendments, and I am quite sure that many other honourable senators on both sides of the house would have done likewise.

There have been undertakings given, but I can only say that this is, in my view, the second best way for the Senate to handle a problem of this kind. There seems to be an unholy fear on the government side that amendments by the Senate will mean the end of the world. I simply do not understand why the government would not accept amendments to the bill such as those that were before the Senate or, at least, permit the Senate to amend the bill, and have it go to the House of Commons which could then make whatever disposition it liked of the amendments and send the bill back. My own feeling is that there would not be any danger of a serious confrontation. The reason I suggest it is important that the Senate insist on amendments when they come before it, particularly amendments bearing the authority that these did—and there can be no greater authority than that—is that the interests of the Senate would be served by these amendments being made to the bill, and sending it back to the House of Commons so that the House of Commons itself and the public would be aware that the Senate has, on second thought, proposed amendments to the bill.

Honourable senators, as I have said, what we have done now in these circumstances is to come up with the second best way of indicating the disposition that the Senate, and certainly the committee of the Senate that discussed the bill, would like to see made of the bill. Five amendments were suggested, and there was a disposition, I think, at that time on the part of the Senate to accept them. I think that without certain pressures—understandable pressures—having been brought to bear, the Senate might well have voted to accept those amendments, and I wish it had.

For various reasons this was not regarded as the solution that could be arrived at to satisfy all those concerned, and it was then decided—and Senator Hayden made this very clear in presenting the original report—that the alternative was to seek certain undertakings from the government. He complained at that time that he had sought undertakings, that he had not been able to obtain them, and it was clear to me, at any rate, and to most honourable senators, that Senator Hayden decided to fight for those undertakings, and if he did not get them, then he would still insist—and I think the committee would have gone along with him—on introducing the five amendments in the report.

In all the circumstances, honourable senators, I agree with all the compliments that were paid to those who brought about what I think we can call an amicable solution of a very difficult situation—Senator Hayden, the Leader of the Government, the Whips and so on. There was also some cooperation, and very substantial cooperation, from at least two ministers as a result of which a solution was arrived at which at least saves the face of the Senate, because I can think of no worse situation for the Senate, to find itself in than to have a committee such as the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce discuss a bill over the length of time it took to discuss this one, hear the multitude of witnesses it heard, and bring in amendments, and then being persuaded to reconsider and to report the bill without amendment without getting some undertakings such as those that have been given.

I have on earlier occasions referred to one device that has been very useful in the Senate, and that is the referring of the subject matter of bills to committees. I think it was I who named that the "Hayden Formula." I now call it the "Hayden Formula No. 1," and the second device, because that is what it is, the "Hayden Formula No. 2"—that is, to fight for your amendments, and if you cannot get them, then to fight equally hard for undertakings by the government. I think all concerned are to be congratulated on the fact that these undertakings were given, or that at least three amendments—perhaps the three major amendments—that Senator Hayden has discussed are there. I shall not go into them in detail, but I think it is a measure of the satisfaction that we can feel in the Senate for the second best solution that the minister should use the word "concession," because one minister at least said, "We are making a concession," and this takes us somewhat beyond a mere undertaking. It was a concession to the committee, and I think the same might well be said of the statements made by another minister, Madame Sauvé.

Those who have been active in bringing about the solution have avoided what could have been two very embarrassing alternatives. One would have been the outright rejection by the government through its majority in the Senate of the amendments made by one of the Senate's committees. My own feeling at the time when that seemed possible was that there could be nothing more damaging to the Senate itself than for the Senate to reject those amendments outright. Fortunately, a formula was devised by which the report was sent back to the committee and these negotiations began, and, to the extent that it is good second best, it was satisfactory.

● (2130)

The other possibility, of course, would have been—and I doubt if this would have been as terrifying to me, at least—a decision by the Senate to amend the bill regardless of the position of the government. I can understand Senator Perrault's difficulty in that situation. He said then, and he has said again tonight, that it is not his exclusive duty to make sure that government bills go through the Senate without amendment. We accept his assurance in that regard. We all realize that he is in an extremely difficult position because he is a member of the cabinet. He has agreed with his colleagues in the cabinet that this is the bill as it should go to Parliament, and as it should go through Parliament, and even on the principle of cabinet solidarity he has some problems there which we recognize.

On the other hand, I think the evidence is clear that in this particular situation Senator Perrault leaned over backwards to bring about this compromise, and I am quite sure that he had some difficulty with some of his colleagues who are inclined to be more intransigent in such matters. I accept the fact that he works for the Senate, perhaps not as assiduously as he might work for the government but he has given us evidence in this particular case that his heart can be at times in the right place.

With those remarks, I regret that the Leader of the Opposition is not here this evening, but I know his wishes in the matter and will indicate them when the vote is called.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Lang: Honourable senators, I have no intention whatsoever of attempting to delay a vote on this bill. However, I am concerned that the sponsor of this bill, which arises out of recommendations of his Special Senate Committee on Mass Media, has left this chamber, with about 30 of us sitting here debating the issue, because he must catch a plane. I do not know whether the honourable senator has lost interest in the matter—I doubt it—or is trying to get out of the kitchen because the heat is too great. However, I think it is a disgraceful thing for a senator who has responsibility for a bill to walk out in the middle of its debate, and leave the remainder of us to deal with the matter.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Lang: Therefore, honourable senators, I move the adjournment of the debate. If you wish, you may vote on this motion.

Senator Grosart: There is no debate on a motion to adjourn.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Is there a seconder of the motion?

Senator Langlois: No.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Lang, seconded by the Honourable Senator Smith (Colchester), that this debate be adjourned until the next sitting of the Senate. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Senators: No.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Senators: Yea.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Those against please say nay.

Some Hon. Senators: Nay.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: In my opinion the "nays" have it.

Senator Grosart: You did not have enough, Senator Lang.

The Hon. the Speaker pro tem: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Senator Grosart: On division.

Senator Asselin: On division.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed, on division.

ADJOURNMENT

Leave having been given to revert to Notices of Motions:

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I move, seconded by Senator Perrault, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, July 15, 1976, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 10 a.m.

APPENDIX

(See p. 2390)

INCOME TAX ACT

REPORT OF STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE ON BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

Wednesday, July 14, 1976

The Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce to which was referred back for further consideration its Report on Bill C-58, "An Act to amend the Income Tax Act", has, in obedience to the order of reference of July 7, 1976, re-examined the said report and now reports as follows:

Your Committee considers it urgent that the following observations be made as the basis for its report. This reference back to the Committee for further consideration and report was made after some debate during which various and opposing views were expressed in the Senate, from which it appeared such reference back should be made in order that the Committee might reconsider the amendments contained in the said report, it appearing that such amendments in the form contained in the report were not acceptable to the Government and it also appearing that the practice of dealing with the differences as between the report and the position of the Government by undertakings which might well represent concessions by both parties should be tested. The motion to refer back the report of the Committee for further consideration and report was approved.

Following the approval of the reference back of the report of the Committee, meetings have been held by the Committee with the Ministers who will be concerned in the administration of C-58, with the following results:

The first Minister to appear before the Committee was the Minister of Communications, the Honourable Jeanne Sauvé. It should be noted in this connection that on January 23, 1975, the Secretary of State of Canada made a statement to the House of Commons in part in respect of the broadcasting provisions of C-58, in which he referred to the amendments of section 19 of the Income Tax Act in their application to broadcasting, as follows:

"... no deduction against income be permitted for advertising time on a non-Canadian broadcasting station for an advertisement directed primarily to a market in Canada. Such an amendment would not, of course, come into effect until sufficient advertising time is available on Canadian stations to satisfy Canadian needs adequately."

One of the amendments contained in the said report dealt with procedure for such determination by Parliament, but such provision appears restrictive in its application if Parliament is not in session. The Minister on this point stated as follows:

1. THE CHAIRMAN: In lieu of that (going back to the House), it is up to you, as the Minister, to make the determination that the conditions existing in the advertising industry, as Mr. Faulkner mentioned on January 23, 1975, are such that it can be said that the needs of the advertising public are adequately satisfied.

HON. MRS. SAUVÉ: Yes.

THE CHAIRMAN: I take it this is a decision you will make.

HON. MRS. SAUVÉ: Yes.

2. THE CHAIRMAN: ... What we are suggesting, in the event that you do it yourself, is that there be opportunity for the stations affected to appear and present their case, with time limits on their appearance, so that they will not run into September 1.

HON. MRS. SAUVÉ: I think I could meet that requirement. I am sure that I could receive representations from interested parties, who would flag me if there were any problems with regard to the date of proclamation that I intend to set. I think it would be difficult for me to take on a commitment to ask the CRTC, for instance, to do that for me, which would involve, I suppose, having public hearings on the matter. I think that would be quite a lengthy process ...

3. HON. MRS. SAUVÉ: ... I think, however, that senators would perhaps be satisfied, if I accepted briefs or representations from interested parties in order to ensure that broadcasting time would be available in Toronto and in Vancouver. I do not think Vancouver will be a problem. Toronto might, in the estimation of some, pose a problem, but I would certainly be willing to receive representations on that.

THE CHAIRMAN: Of course, the proclamation would bring the broadcast sections into force, applying to all the border stations in Canada, so that Toronto becomes, in that regard, just as important as Vancouver, even though Vancouver has a new station coming in.

HON. MRS. SAUVÉ: Yes.

THE CHAIRMAN: So when you make the law applicable to broadcasting you must cover it and rule in connection with all the areas.

HON. MRS. SAUVÉ: Yes.

THE CHAIRMAN: I do not see any objection that could possibly be made to your making that inquiry yourself.

HON. MRS. SAUVÉ: I could do that.

THE CHAIRMAN: And it could be informal. The main thing is that the condition which Mr. Faulkner set out in his speech of January 23, 1975, was that it would not be proclaimed until the needs of the advertising public were adequately served, and that means in any of the communities that are affected.

HON. MRS. SAUVÉ: I certainly stand by the commitment that Mr. Faulkner made about the bill. I think we will ensure that there is broadcasting time available for those advertisers who need it.

4. SENATOR LANG: ... I was not clear, Madame Minister, whether in your remarks concerning the proclamation date of the broadcasting provisions you were prepared to hold public hearings into the matter.

HON. MRS. SAUVÉ: No; I said that would be too difficult. I said I would be prepared to receive representations and briefs from the interested parties before I decided on a proclamation date, and that would be in order to ensure the conditions set by Mr. Faulkner whereby there would be some available advertising time on the Canadian broadcasting outlets.

5. SENATOR LANG: . . . It is not because of Vancouver that this question arises, but because of the situation in the Toronto area. The committee also felt that tying the proclamation date solely to the start-up date of the Vancouver station overlooked the Toronto problem which would, of course, be affected by the bill.
6. HON. MRS. SAUVÉ: I would not disregard it. If it were demonstrated by the different representations that it got that there was no available time on the Canadian stations, then I would have to think about what would be the proper proclamation date. I would certainly not disregard the representations when I received them. You see, there is a difference of opinion as to whether there is some time available . . . So far as Vancouver is concerned, you were right. We would deal with that and the question there would be answered when the new station came on stream. We felt that that was sufficient to provide the advertisers with the space they needed. In the Toronto area you have no new station coming on stream, but I think that one of my officials gave you a breakdown of the time that was available, but he felt that the broadcasters would have the service that they need. Here again I cannot accept a public hearing, and I explained a while ago why I thought that was very difficult to do, but I would certainly accept representations. If the representations indicated to me that there is not enough available time on the Canadian stations, I would certainly take that into account in deciding the proclamation date; and, as I said, I would not disregard the representations.

SENATOR LANG: When you use the term "time available", do you take those words as not just meaning minutes or hours but also audience availability?

HON. MRS. SAUVÉ: Prime time, you mean, the best hours to advertise; I would think that would have to be part of the consideration.

SENATOR LANG: But you might have prime time on a station with a low audience rating.

HON. MRS. SAUVÉ: Yes. But if an advertiser wants to go on that station and if that is his usual means of advertising, then that would suit him and he would not be making representations to me that there was not enough time. I think we would have to look into all of these situations in order to ascertain that there is enough time.

SENATOR LANG: I should point out that I am no expert in these areas.

HON. MRS. SAUVÉ: Neither am I, but I can give you the commitment that it will be looked into very carefully. I understand that if someone is used to advertising on a station with a heavy audience rating, he does not want to be rerouted to some small town station where he gets no coverage.

7. The Minister of Communications in her statements to the Committee quoted above has dealt with the problems of implementing the statement of the Secretary of State of Canada made in the House of Commons on January 23, 1975, in which the conditions required to be met before any determination of the date to be fixed by proclamation is settled for the coming into force of the broadcast section of C-58. Her agreement and statement on this point are:

a) that she will implement the conditions laid down by the Secretary of State of Canada for the necessary determination that "sufficient advertising time is available on Canadian stations to satisfy Canadian needs adequately", and

b) to that end she will receive representations and briefs from the interested parties before any such determination is made by her.

This statement of the Minister deals with the problem that the Committee wished to have resolved before any proclamation was made, providing for the coming into force of the Broadcasting Sections of C-58.

Accordingly, the Committee is prepared to accept this statement of the Minister, and therefore does not now insist on the amendment proposed in the report on that point.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

8. As to the suggestion by the Minister of Communications on the matter of international relations that a committee or a body of people be set up with responsibility for negotiating with representatives from the United States, she had referred only to the subject of commercial deletion. It was suggested that such committee should cover the whole range of broadcasting. This, she stated, would be difficult as a committee is already set up to discuss the matter of commercial deletion and this is quite different from the matters we are dealing with in C-58. However, she showed that she was well aware of the general problem and that it was more embracing than commercial deletion.

Her statements on this point are as follows:

THE CHAIRMAN: . . . the statement you have made; that is, that in the interests of resolving a possible conflict in the field of broadcasting, you would assist in establishing a committee or a body of people who would have the responsibility for negotiating with representatives from the United States. The only thing that bothered me about that was that your paragraph limits this to commercial deletion. I think, and this is the view of the members of the committee, that it should cover the whole range of broadcasting.

HON. MRS. SAUVÉ: I think that would be difficult. . . . I don't think that the two questions should be lumped together. I don't think they belong together, and I am afraid that despite the fact that the senators are preoccupied by international relations, as I am too, I think the best thing to do, if you want those international relations to be preserved in these particular talks, is to make these two questions separate. Commercial deletion should be discussed with the representatives of the regulatory body in the United States and ours, and people from the External Affairs Department, the State Department and the relevant technical people. I think it is much more conducive to better relations between our two countries to have these two questions separate. It seems to me that it would be very difficult otherwise, because Bill C-58 is not at the present time being discussed in that forum or in that committee, and Mr. Vine himself, when he was appearing before the Senate Committee giving the report on Canadian matters, did say that on the occasion of these meetings between the FCC and CRTC and other people there was a reference made to Bill C-58, but it was pointed out by the Canadians that this was an internal matter having to do with the Department of National Revenue and fiscal policy and therefore that it should not be discussed at the same time as commercial deletion. He indicated to the Senate Committee that he agreed with this position, and that he had noted it and agreed that these two questions should not be discussed together. I think it would be much more conducive to clearing these matters that we have between us if they could be discussed in separate forums.

This subject of relations with the United States and the effect on international relations of the provisions of C-58 was of great concern to many senators who spoke on C-58 on second reading and in Committee and on debate on the Committee report. Much evidence was heard by the Committee on this subject and the state of discussions and negotiations by Canada with the United States. In its report the Committee recognized the extreme importance of this issue and referred to the strain on Canada-U.S. relations which it regarded as so important to Canada. This importance was emphasized by the evidence of Mr. Boyle of the CRTC, who stated that most serious and complicated problems in this field were in the immediate offing. Accordingly, the Committee is very appreciative of the Minister's understanding of the situation and her concern and interest in devoting time and effort to discussions and negotiations in this area and the setting up of a Committee to this end.

RE: "SUBSTANTIALLY THE SAME"

The Committee in its efforts to achieve some common ground whereby the differences between the Committee report and the views and policy of the Government also heard the Honourable Mr. Cullen, the Minister of National Revenue. The report of the Committee was opposed to the exercise of ministerial discretion in the interpretation of the words "substantially the same" as they occur in section 19, subsection (5), of the Income Tax Act, on the basis that fixing a percentage of content difference between a periodical published in Canada as against one published outside Canada was a legislative act and not to be determined by ministerial discretion.

The Committee in its report decided that a provision by way of amendment to C-58 should be recommended whereby the interpretation of the words "substantially the same" must be referred to the Federal Court for interpretation even before assessment, after which time the taxpayer had a statutory right of appeal.

The Minister, when recently before the Committee, stated:

HON. MR. CULLEN: I would prefer it in legislation; I am prepared to introduce legislation under a notice of Ways and Means Motion to define "not substantially the same".

THE CHAIRMAN: Without reference to the 80 per cent?

HON. MR. CULLEN: In the concession I am making now, most assuredly I would define "not substantially the same" in the way Government policy has in effect defined it, the way my Department has interpreted it, the backing I had of my colleagues. What we mean by "not substantially the same" is 80 per cent different; otherwise we might as well tear up the bill.

HON. MR. CULLEN: I mentioned putting it into legislation primarily because I think from sober second thought suggestions here that if we put it into regulations it is very easy for a Cabinet, by Order in Council, to change the 80 to 90, or change it to 100.

HON. MR. CULLEN: I am giving that undertaking to introduce a bill to define substantially the same.

SENATOR AUSTIN: In the next session?

HON. MR. CULLEN: Yes.

With this undertaking by the Minister to introduce legislation at the next session of Parliament to define "substantially the same" including therein the 80 per cent content difference, Parliament, both the Commons and the Senate, will have the opportunity to challenge the definition and the 80 per cent content difference requirement included therein. On the other hand, the Committee provided for an appeal to the Courts as of right under C-58 on this point of interpretation by the Minister for a publisher who is defined as a person who has or proposes to have the exclusive right to produce and publish issues of a newspaper or periodical for such purposes.

The undertaking to define by statute removes the exercise of ministerial discretion and affords Parliament the opportunity to challenge the 80 per cent content difference even as the Committee amendment was intended to do. Under the Committee amendment, the Court would be able only to deal with a particular case as to the meaning of "substantially the same." A statutory definition would be of general application but unless concurred in by the Senate would have no force or effect.

The purposes of both amendments would appear to have the same objective, that is to get away from the exercise of ministerial discretion, which is a most desirable purpose.

The Committee is prepared to recommend the acceptance of the undertaking of the Minister of National Revenue to introduce a bill in the Commons at the next session of Parliament to define the meaning of "not substantially the same". The Committee will not insist on its amendment contained in its first report but is not to be taken by such action to have approved of the provisions of the proposed amendment where it refers to the 80 per cent content difference.

These three undertakings hereinbefore described represent the major points of the Committee's original report. The purpose of several of these amendments was to restore the rule of law and the supremacy of Parliament. These undertakings, when implemented, will also accomplish this same purpose. The members of the Committee are not vain and wedded to their way as the only way of achieving this desired result and the Committee is prepared to accept such undertakings in lieu of its amendments.

The Committee in its report did not erode the essential purposes of C-58. Indeed, the Committee supported and approved its stated objectives. The Committee is now prepared not to insist on its amendments on the several points covered by the undertakings outlined above but is not to be taken to approve the 80 per cent content difference, and is happy that this result was able to be achieved. The two Ministers, the Honourable Jeanne Sauvé and the Honourable Bud Cullen, in this regard were understanding and co-operated in the effort to resolve the differences in viewpoint as between the report of the Committee and the Government and this was much appreciated by the Committee.

The report of the Committee contained two further amendments. One such amendment dealt with the position of the magazine MD of Canada and similar publications and struck out the repeal of the exemption provided for magazines, the principal function of which is the encouragement, promotion or development of the fine arts, letters, scholarship or religion, under section 19(4) of the Income Tax Act and reinstated the exemption provided for such magazine.

The second amendment provided for a change in the date for the coming into force of the provisions of C-58 in relation to magazines, periodicals and newspapers by striking out the date January 1, 1976, and substituting therefor the date January 1, 1977, and also changing the date December 31, 1975, as the date of an issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical, to December 31, 1976, after which advertising costs in such publications would be non-deductible for tax purposes. The purpose of such changes in C-58 was to remove all exemptions provided under the original section 19(4) of the Income Tax Act.

The witnesses who appeared before our Committee and, in particular, the Honourable Mr. Cullen, who appeared on Wednesday afternoon, July 7, stated that C-58 was not intended to have any retroactive effect. The retroactivity occurred by reason of the prolonged debate as the bill moved through Parliament, even at this date such bill has not passed into law. However, under the above mentioned amendment proposed in C-58, once the bill became law its provisions would apply to Canadian advertisers in issues of non-Canadian newspapers or periodicals and such advertising costs would be non-deductible for tax purposes as and from January 1, 1976. There was no design that such should be the effect of C-58, but the advertisers who continue to advertise in newspapers and periodicals enjoying an exemption under the then law would find themselves, after C-58 became the law, subject to C-58 and their advertising costs since January 1, 1976, would be non-deductible. For those who can show that hardship has been suffered by reason of this unintended retroactive effect of C-58, the provisions of section 17 of the Financial Administration Act are available for the purpose of applying for remission of such taxes as may be attracted in the period from January 1, 1976, until C-58 becomes law. This right to apply for remission does not require any undertaking in order to be asserted but hardship must be demonstrated to the extent necessary to satisfy the Minister of National Revenue in order that he may recommend such remission to the Treasury Board.

In attempting to determine what advertisers have been adversely affected by this retroactive feature produced by the lengthy duration of the consideration by Parliament of C-58, it would appear to be essential that such advertisers as are seeking remission would have to incur a loss by reason of the retroactive non-deductibility of advertising costs before the calculation of taxes. It becomes important, then, to know the extent of the inducements offered to such advertisers in the way of lower advertising rates to compensate for the possible non-deductibility of such advertising costs in arriving at net income.

It would appear that a very limited number of advertisers would fit into this position by reason of the concessions made to them by the owners of non-Canadian newspapers and periodicals in 1976. Accordingly, for purposes of this report, it becomes necessary to arrive at some conclusion as to the extent of the problem and its importance. The report of the Committee and the amendments proposed in such reports to the Senate was intended to relieve against this situation, except that in the case of exemptions provided under section 19(4) the amendment proposed by the Committee restored the exemption thereby provided without time limitations.

Your Committee has had to weigh such considerations against the substantial advantages provided by the undertakings hereinbefore referred to by the Minister of Communications and the Minister of National Revenue. The view of the Committee is that such benefits as afforded are substantial and are in the public interest, and assist in affirming the rule of law and the supremacy of Parliament in the administration of C-58. The advantages in these circumstances of the undertakings which have been made by the respective Ministers on behalf of the Government would appear to outweigh in great measure the additional financial burden, if any, imposed on advertisers in non-Canadian newspapers and periodicals as from January 1, 1976.

So far as termination of the special exemptions are concerned heretofore enjoyed by non-Canadian newspapers and periodicals, it is a matter of Government policy to remove such special exemptions and the Committee has concluded that its insistence on the retention of the exemption under section 19(4) might adversely affect the undertakings referred to above, which are so important in the public interest and in the administration of C-58. Such insistence by the Committee in this report may well lead to the non-acceptance of the report and the implementation of C-58 without amendment and therefore without the substantial benefit afforded by the undertakings put forward by the Minister of Communications and the Minister of National Revenue. In these circumstances, the Committee is prepared to withdraw these two proposed amendments contained in its original report.

It should be noted that the Secretary of State of Canada, to whom the suggested compromises on these two points were made when he appeared before the Committee on July 8 and in respect of which he stated that he must confer on these points with his colleague, the Minister of National Revenue, did not return to the Committee to indicate what, if any, decision had been arrived at. It is possible that he may have discussed the matter with the Government Leader in the Senate. However, the Secretary of State of Canada has written a letter to the Chairman of the Committee, a copy of which is appended hereto, in which he offers certain concessions, as follows:

In this regard, because of the great interest of you and your Committee in the objective of the Bill, I would be pleased to meet with the Committee next session to provide a status report on the effect of the legislation on meeting our objectives in the periodicals and broadcasting industries.

Certainly, arising out of application of the Act, should evidence be placed before me that would warrant consideration of remission of taxes under the Financial Administration Act on behalf of advertiser/taxpayers in these publications, that information will be transmitted to my colleague, the Minister of National Revenue. I am sure, however, you understand that within the terms of my Ministerial responsibility, I could not go beyond this commitment.

This letter has been read to the Committee and while it may indicate a sympathetic approach and appreciation of the work of the Committee, it does not propose anything that would relieve the condition of those advertisers or publishers who are adversely affected by C-58; more particularly on the two points developed earlier, namely retroactivity and the magazine MD of Canada.

The Committee is still of the opinion that the unplanned retroactive effect of the provisions of C-58, so far as they deal with non-deductibility of advertising costs by advertisers in non-Canadian newspapers and periodicals, should be relieved on the basis of unexpected hardship. There can be no assurance that this will occur under section 17 of the Financial Administration Act. The Committee is still of the view that non-Canadian newspapers and periodicals in the category covered by the exemption provided under section 19(4) should be afforded some period for efforts at compliance or for winding up their affairs and ceasing to carry on in Canada. However, while your Committee is genuinely concerned about this situation and the apparent refusal of the Secretary of State to make any concession by way of compromise on these costs, the Committee is not prepared to insist on its proposed amendments on these two points contained in its original report as the benefits of the undertakings put forward by the several Ministers substantially outweigh the results that may well occur in the withdrawal of these undertakings if amendments to the bill are persisted in.

For the reasons above stated, satisfied as the Committee is that the principles which influenced its consideration of Bill C-58 and were reflected in the original report of the Committee are met by Government undertakings, and with genuine concern for those who will still be adversely affected by C-58, the Committee now reports the bill without amendment.

Respectfully submitted,

Salter A. Hayden,
Chairman.

APPENDIX TO REPORT

The Secretary of State of Canada

July 13, 1976

Personal
The Honourable S. A. Hayden
The Senate
Ottawa, Ontario
Dear Senator Hayden:

First of all, I want to thank you, as chairman, and the other members of the Senate Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, for your diligent examination of Bill C-58.

I want to assure you that I have studied carefully the contents and recommendations contained in the report. It is gratifying to note that the Committee supports the objectives of the Bill. I share with you a hope that the legislation will achieve its objectives and the result will be further development and growth of healthy, indigenous Canadian broadcasting and publishing industries.

In this regard, because of the great interest of you and your Committee in the objectives of the bill, I would be pleased to meet with the Committee next session to provide a status report on the effect of the legislation on meeting our objectives in the periodicals and broadcasting industries.

As well, I would welcome from you and the Committee, and from other members of the Senate, suggestions which from time to time you may wish to make with respect to Canada's cultural industries for which I have some responsibility.

With respect to the proposed legislation, I know we share a desire to make it the means by which the goals we hold in common may be achieved.

It has been my determination from the outset to produce a measure which will be fair and even-handed in its application. In this regard, I am well aware that the status of certain periodicals under the present section 19, subsection 4 of the Income Tax Act has been of concern to certain members of the Committee.

Certainly, arising out of application of the Act, should evidence be placed before me that would warrant consideration of remission of taxes under the Financial Administration Act on behalf of advertiser/taxpayers in these publications, that information will be transmitted to my colleague, the Minister of National Revenue. I am sure, however you understand that within the terms of my Ministerial responsibility, I could not go beyond this commitment.

The recourse is open to any taxpayer to place before the Minister of National Revenue evidence that would warrant consideration of a remission of taxes under the Financial Administration Act. As you know, under Section 17 of the Act, aggrieved taxpayers may seek such remission from the Minister of National Revenue. Although the interpretation of the Act by the Treasury Board has been quite narrow, the recourse still remains available.

I have enjoyed meeting with your Committee and, despite certain differences of opinion which have occurred from time to time—a feature of Parliamentary democracy—I want you to know how useful the Committee's work has been to me and my colleagues.

Yours very truly,
J. Hugh Faulkner

THE SENATE

Thursday, July 15, 1976

The Senate met at 10 a.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT BILL (NO. 2), 1976 QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE

Senator Molson: Honourable senators, I rise on a point of privilege. I heard on the news last night that the bill we are to consider today, which abolishes the death penalty, had been passed by Parliament, that Parliament had gone home and left the buildings to the tourists and that the matter is now closed. Now, that was only a news broadcast, and I do not take it seriously because we run into that sort of thing frequently.

I then saw a member of the government, the Solicitor General, being interviewed on television. It was stated that all pending death sentences had been commuted. I realize that that is by executive action, which action is the duty and privilege of those responsible, but to me it smacks of arrogance. In a way it is practically a gratuitous insult to us in this chamber.

We are meeting for a day and a half or two days to debate this bill and before we have gone beyond the mere formal introduction of the bill we find that the action that would normally be taken as a result of the passage of the bill has already been taken. This action is being taken by the government in the face of the second branch of Parliament; the third, the Crown, is the final authority, of course, to be heard from, but before we, the second house, have had a chance to do anything, to say a word in this present debate. If that is not a slap in the face, I am not sure what it is. We are meeting here today under very odd circumstances, to spend all this time debating an issue which has been emotionally and rather well debated over the years, only to find that the government has already taken the action it wanted to take anyway.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, by way of response may I say that I too listened to news reports along the lines described by Senator Molson, and I listened with some concern. I want to assure honourable senators that today, hopefully, I will be able to bring the concern of this chamber to my colleague. Certainly, I agree that on the basis of the news reports it appeared to be a totally improper statement to make.

Senator Argue: Honourable senators, I am not here to defend the government, but I ask the question: Is it not correct that three of the convicted murderers were slated to be hanged yesterday and if the government had waited for the Senate it would have been too late? That is my impression.

Senator Perrault: My understanding is that the hangings were scheduled for some time today or tomorrow. Nevertheless, a fuller explanation is required for that alleged ministerial statement. I shall endeavour to obtain further information and perhaps report to the chamber later this day.

Senator Grosart: The Leader of the Government might also care to bring to the attention of those responsible the fact that the insult carries through to His Excellency the Governor General and his deputy.

[Later:]

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, with leave, I should like to report on my conversation with the Solicitor General, which has taken place this morning, if it is the wish of the Senate.

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Perrault: I met with the Honourable Solicitor General immediately after leaving the chamber this morning when this matter was raised by Senator Molson. I am advised by the Solicitor General that the news reports purporting to quote him arise from some informal remarks in response to queries from the media following passage of the bill in the other place. He has informed me that in no way did he intend to suggest or to infer that commutations would take place prior to passage of the legislation. As far as the hangings scheduled for this week are concerned, it would be the government's intention to enter stays of execution pending determination of the issue by both Houses of Parliament.

● (1010)

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report on the administration of the Canada Student Loans Act for the loan year ended June 30, 1975, pursuant to section 18 of the said Act, Chapter S-17, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of Canadian Patents and Development Limited for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, pursuant to sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

ADJOURNMENT

Senator Langlois moved, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, July 16, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon.

Motion agreed to.

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT BILL (NO. 2), 1976*MOTION RE DISPOSITION OF THIRD READING AND PASSAGE OF BILL

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, seconded by the Honourable Senator Flynn, P.C., I move:

THAT if the debate on all stages of the Bill C-84, intitled: "An Act to amend the Criminal Code in relation to the punishment for murder and certain other serious offences," is then concluded, any division or divisions required to finally dispose of the third reading and passage of the said bill shall be taken tomorrow, Friday, July 16, 1976, at approximately 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

Motion agreed to.

SECOND READING—DEBATE RESUMED

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Lang for the second reading of Bill C-84, to amend the Criminal Code in relation to the punishment for murder and certain other serious offences.

[Translation]

Hon. Martial Asselin: Honourable senators, I too want to echo the remarks made this morning by Senator Molson concerning the statement made last night by the Solicitor General on CBC television. It is not the first time members of the other place have failed to understand the role the Senate plays in our parliamentary system. I am happy that later today the Leader of the Government in the Senate will make appropriate recommendations to his colleagues, reminding them that the Senate still exists and that it must be respected; when a bill has been passed by the House of Commons, it cannot become law unless it is also passed by the Senate; the bill is rejected if the Senate refuses to accept it.

Yesterday we started studying an extremely important bill intended to abolish completely the death penalty. I listened with great interest to the presentation the sponsor of the bill made last night. First of all, I would like to ascertain whether the vote to be taken after study of the bill has been completed will be a free vote. Those of us who followed the debate in the other place wonder about certain aspects of the motion for a free vote in the House of Commons, much more so because it was noted that all cabinet ministers without a single exception voted for abolition of capital punishment.

This morning I read in the newspaper that the leader of the Social Credit Party, Mr. Caouette, chided one of the ministers for having brought pressure to bear on some members in an attempt to have them support the bill of the Solicitor General, Bill C-84. I trust that here, in the Senate, the government leader and the whip will not resort to that tactic in an attempt to influence the vote to be taken on second or third reading. This is a free vote, which every senator must cast according to the dictates of his conscience.

Through Bill C-84, we are being asked to abolish capital punishment definitively. That is nothing new. We have discussed this bill, or similar bills ever since 1959. A similar bill was introduced for the first time in the House of Commons by the Honourable Frank McGee, who had put forward a private bill for the abolition of capital punishment in certain circumstances. Since that time, I believe Parliament, in both the House of Commons and the Senate, has had to deal four or five times with the very same question. It is obvious that any argument we may present for or against abolition of the death penalty will not be new. But when we hear reporters, in particular a TV commentator, state that the death penalty has been abolished by the House of Commons by a seven vote margin and assume that the Senate will subsequently dispose of the bill within two days, we are bound to conclude that that commentator has little understanding of the role of the Senate in our parliamentary system. The situation is not the same in the House as in the Senate. Besides, assuming that we get it over with in two days, the arguments that we shall advance will be, I repeat, the same ones as in the past, the very ones which were discussed on four or five previous occasions.

So, we may say that capital punishment has been in fact abolished since 1962, as no execution has taken place since that time. There has been no execution because the cabinet, using its royal prerogative, has simply commuted all death sentences, even though Parliament had by majority vote decided that capital punishment was to be maintained for the murder of prison guards, policemen and peace officers. Murderers of prison guards and peace officers have seen their sentences commuted over the last few years. Of course, the government had the right to use its royal prerogative, its clemency, but it seems to me that in so doing the government had already decided to practically abolish the death penalty.

I think we ought to ask ourselves the following question which I am putting to honourable senators, namely: What is our first responsibility as lawmakers? It is, in my view, to enact legislation to protect society at large. If legislation does not protect society adequately, it should be amended. So, I am saying that our first duty, our first responsibility as legislators, is to pass legislation which will ensure the security of Canadian citizens. We must also pass legislation to protect the people in authority, namely, law enforcement officers, who have to implement the legislation.

Now, honourable senators, at the present time 78 per cent of the Canadian people—these are the latest public polls—made representations to members, even to senators, for the retention of capital punishment. Seventy-eight per cent of Canadians favour retention of capital punishment for some crimes, and this to protect, as I said earlier, law enforcement officers, prison guards and policemen on duty.

● (1020)

If we reject the view of the majority of Canadians who, I repeat, are in favour of maintaining capital punishment for certain crimes, what is going to happen? We know that the association of policemen of Canada came out in support of capital punishment for certain crimes I have just described. We know that Canadians—again I repeat—stand for retention of capital punishment. What is going to happen now? I think that the danger we will have to avoid is that justice be carried out in the street, in the sense that policemen and prison guards will not be able to afford to take chances in the future when they have to arrest dangerous people, well-known murderers. With justice being done in the street, patently obvious errors will be committed by policemen, as happened recently when a young man entered a grocery store to commit a minor robbery involving only a few dollars. He was ordered to stop. He started to run away, so the policemen simply fired at him and killed him. This young man had committed a minor robbery. Policemen do not want to take any more chances in the future and they will not. That is why I suggest that justice will be done in the street if capital punishment is not retained for first degree murder, and especially for murder of policemen or prison guards. That is what must be prevented. If in the future, as I said, peace officers cannot take any more chances, they will fire on sight and by so doing they will execute people who would otherwise have been convicted for minor offences only.

I am in favour of the retention of capital punishment. I was an abolitionist in 1952. Again in 1959 I was an abolitionist for other reasons, but since then I have come to think that society in general, and people who are seeking to run society by violence, have not understood how necessary it is to live in a well-organized society and do not realize that established laws must be enforced.

This necessity is a matter of course when we live in Quebec, and especially in Montreal where there are two or three murders a week. Last April in Quebec City two youngsters aged 18 were riding in a car around midnight when someone from the underworld, looking at them passing by and mistaking them for others, simply shot them point blank after they had stopped for a red light. When we look at organized crime in Montreal and elsewhere in Canada, I think we must give people an opportunity to realize that laws have to be obeyed if we are to live in a well-organized society, because these people did not realize it. However, we now want to hand them a blank cheque and tell them: "We have just abolished the death penalty for all murders. We will simply slap a 25-year prison term on you for first degree murder and a 10-year term for second degree murder."

We all know how the Parole Board operates. Things have improved, of course, but it is not normal for anyone sentenced to life imprisonment to go out after serving 15 years and even 10 years sometimes. In addition, there are some cases—I could quote statistics—where within one year policemen again come face to face with those who have already committed a similar crime.

I am not a blood-thirsty man. Of course, I do condemn violence, but Parliament must apply the laws it has adopted.

We could obviously talk about positive action the federal and provincial governments could take to prevent violence in our country and try to reintegrate into society those youngsters who have slipped off the right path. In my opinion, the rehabilitation system is totally defective. It should be reconsidered in detail so that we might bring positive action for the rehabilitation of the young.

Of course, if the death penalty is abolished for first and second degree murder, and if the imprisonment penalty is to be 25 years, those who have been sentenced for these murders will be left there to rot for 25 years, while we could have devised other systems.

[Senator Asselin.]

I think that some American states as well as some European countries have another system under which they try to give some work to the prisoners. God knows that Canada, with its vast territory, could develop a system under which prisoners could work instead of being locked up in their cells for months and years. It would be easy, for example, to find work for them to do in the north just so they could contribute something to the state instead of enjoying free room, board and clothing. They say it costs the state $15,000 a year to keep one prisoner in jail, including food, shelter and clothing. I think we should do something to get the prisoners out of their cells. Why not have them work in the Arctic so they can contribute something to the state and get rehabilitated in preparation for their future release into society?

We could talk much longer on this matter. However, we were asked to be brief because many senators wish to speak on this important question. I say that I am personally in favour of retention because of the current social situation throughout the country. On the other hand, I say that we will have a truly free vote. Honourable senators sitting on the opposition side will vote freely without any pressure and, in view of the commitment made last night by the government leader, I hope that the vote will also be free on the government side.

[English]

I hope that there will be a free vote on your side. On our side there will be a truly free vote. Everyone will vote according to his conscience.

Honourable senators, I have nothing to add at this time, except to tell you that I shall vote for the retention of capital punishment.

Hon. Richard J. Stanbury: Honourable senators, I do not delude myself that I can add anything new in this important debate, or that there is anything that I might say which might change the mind of anyone who has already made up his or her mind during the long series of debates which we have had in this house and which we have had the opportunity of observing and hearing in the other house.

• (1030)

It saddens me that we have not been able to demonstrate greater public support for this bill than has been indicated in the Gallup Poll to which Senator Asselin has referred. I would have preferred that we as parliamentarians had made a greater effort to discuss the matter with the public at the local level and to explain and persuade before having to make this important decision. The public is in a bad mood at the present time. They feel that Parliament is not really representing their wishes. That applies to many issues which have been particularly abrasive lately, but perhaps it applies most dramatically to the question of capital punishment. The result is a loss of faith in the ability of the parliamentary system to reflect the changing social and religious mores of society, as well as the growing insistence on individual and community prerogatives.

The difficulty in which we find ourselves is that, as parliamentarians, with access to great volumes of information and opportunity for extensive discussions, we feel that there is a rational basis for each and every one of our decisions. Yet, almost any decision draws voluminous and vitriolic denunciation as soon as it is made.

The easy thing to do would be to blame the media. Certainly, they give much broader coverage to the negative aspects of any issue than to the positive. I do not want to excuse the media. The instances of irresponsibility are too numerous and too easily documented. I do want to confess, however, that we as parliamentarians contribute to the problem by not working hard enough at explaining our rationale and the need—sometimes the vital need—for the programs and policies we espouse. It is that weakness which makes it absolutely essential that, until we find the will and the ways to better communicate, we continue to operate on the theory of “responsible government” rather than “representative government”. Until we can involve the people in a thoroughgoing discussion of the realistic alternatives on any issue, I am afraid that we shall have to continue to simply be responsible to them rather than pretend to represent their point of view. That involvement may seem like an impossible dream, but in Switzerland it has been accomplished. Issues are developed by petition, discussion papers are prepared and distributed, discussions in depth take place in town meetings, and the decision is made by referendum. After that kind of preparation, the public may well be expected to accept the responsibility of making wise decisions on such difficult issues as taxation, foreign aid and capital punishment, which an uninvolved public would treat in accordance with the most recent whimsy of society or the blandishments of the latest demagogue.

Unfortunately, we have no such public participation in Canada. Gallup Polls here have shown that there is a sentiment against foreign aid; there are contradictory desires for lower taxation and greater services, for less foreign capital and yet for more jobs, and there is an apparent desire to retain capital punishment. On the other hand, the electorate has shown a great facility for choosing individuals of ability and character to be responsible to them rather than representative of them.

The Canadian electoral system has produced, directly in the other place and indirectly in the Senate, members of Parliament of the highest calibre in terms both of character and ability. Almost never has there been occasion to impugn the honesty or motivation of any member of Parliament. Almost never has there been any suggestion that a member of Parliament acted other than in accordance with his judgment of the greatest public good. The Canadian electorate has chosen these people, and they have chosen well. They have chosen them because they like the cut of their jib, their approach to public problems and their dedication to public service. Now it happens that the individuals whom the Canadian people chose to make legislative decisions for them and whom they knew to be responsible to them at a future election, because of the cut of their jib and because of their approach to public problems and their dedication to public service, decided to abolish capital punishment, just as they have decided to continue and increase foreign aid, to rationalize public service, as we saw in the amendments to the Medical Care Act in recent days, and to screen foreign investment.

Some years ago, all parties supported a policy which would permit Canadians of each founding group to speak to the government in their own language. There is evidence that even yet that policy, so unanimously supported by parliamentarians, is neither understood nor accepted by a great many Canadians. But the parliamentarians knew that that policy was essential, not only to preserve the unity of Canada but to accord simple justice to people whose ancestors came here three hundred years ago. It may be that parliamentarians did not then, and may not now, represent the opinion of all Canadians in adopting and defending that policy—particularly when some application of it is perceived as threatening some special vested interests—but surely no one would suggest that the members of Parliament were not right to take such a necessary decision on behalf of the people to whom they are responsible.

Now mind you, we owe it to those people to inform them, to explain to them, to persuade them, and we have not done that job very well, either on the nature of bilingualism or on the issue of capital punishment. And if we do not do that within the next two years the people may well feel that those who voted in favour of this bill and supported various other controversial policies have not fulfilled their responsibility to them, and those members of Parliament who must submit themselves for re-election may find their parliamentary careers foreshortened. But I believe that the voters will look at all of the judgments and actions of the member and the party of which he is an adherent, and again will decide, not whether or not they liked this or that particular judgment but whether they like the cut of his jib, his approach to public problems and his dedication to public service.

So it remains only for those of us who intend to support this bill to satisfy ourselves that, on the basis of all of the evidence before us, all of the expertise which has been made available to us, all of our personal experience and all of the debate in the two Houses of Parliament, we can now say that the decision we intend to make is a rational one, in tune with the urgings of our conscience and in the best interests of present and future Canadians. I have no difficulty in satisfying myself in those respects.

There is no evidence that capital punishment will deter others from committing capital murder and thereby protect society. I can conceive of no other reason which would justify the taking of a human life. It does nothing for the victim or his family, it precludes rehabilitation to a life valuable to society, it denies to the innocent family of the criminal the hope and benefit of restoration, it brutalizes society by institutionalizing the ultimate in violence, and it signifies not only the failure of society to deal with its social problems but its final surrender to hopelessness of the possibility that it will ever be able to do so.

Honourable senators, I will vote in favour of this bill.

Hon. Edgar Fournier: Honourable senators, first let me say that my remarks will be very brief, for more than one reason.

[Translation]

If I dare interrupt five years of silence resulting from several illnesses, the effects of which still bother me, it is because I consider it an important duty to express my views on this crucial matter of capital punishment.

[English]

Honourable senators, I first want to thank the sponsor of the bill, Senator Lang. I am inclined to agree with almost everything he said. However, I regret that it will take more than that to change my view. The honourable senator spoke with sincerity and personal conviction. He was so right when he said that opinions are formed and long debate will not achieve anything.

● (1040)

Honourable senators, I regret to say that this bill will go down in history as being among the many mistakes this government has made. Certainly more could be said about it. I am of the opinion that in this bill we are placing the bulls behind the plough instead of in front.

Instead of talking today about capital punishment, we should first talk about prison reform and make sure that our penitentiaries and correctional institutions are as they should be—houses of reform where no one would desire to live. I regret to say that our penitentiaries and correctional institutions are now approaching the style of a university campus with all its modern facilities inside and outside. Discipline is at a minimum and caretakers and guardians have very little left for self protection. Hard labour, the lash, the board, and the whip have been banned, as have all forms of corporal punishment. I believe that unless we bring about the necessary penal reforms and restore the order of yesterday, we are far from being ready to talk about capital punishment.

Too much emphasis has been put on those "poor" criminals who commit murder at will and without respect for freedom or individual rights. Let us place the emphasis on the correctional institution itself and make it a real house of correction. A person would think twice before committing murder and other serious crimes if he fully realized that the easy life was all over within the prison walls and that the parole board would not open the door too readily. When these reforms have been carried out, then we will be ready to talk about capital punishment.

Justice needs reform all the way down the line. I need not tell you where it should start. Let us not wait until it is too late and the public is taking justice into its own hands, with resulting bloodshed. Think of it seriously.

Honourable senators, I am prepared to admit that hanging a criminal by the neck is not the most logical and appropriate punishment in this year of 1976. In olden days hanging served several purposes. A public hanging on the street corner before a wide audience was a deterrent, a warning that it could happen to anyone. However, in this day and age death by hanging should be replaced by medical means. It would be much more humane.

[Translation]

Honourable senators, let us not forget our responsibilities towards society at large. People expect us to provide the protection they want and deserve. I will vote in favour of retention.

[English]

Hon. John M. Macdonald: Honourable senators, it seems to me that I have been making speeches on capital punishment many times over the past number of years. Indeed, this must be at least the fifth time.

[Senator Fournier.]

As I believe in the total abolition of capital punishment, I supported the bill for partial abolition for a trial period because I felt it was a step in the right direction. Then, in 1973 I introduced a bill in the Senate, Bill S-8, which provided for total abolition, and more recently I spoke on Senator Argue's bill, Bill S-23, on the same subject. I did not vote for the bill extending the trial period for partial abolition because I felt then that that bill should have been for total abolition—permanent total abolition, not only for the crime of murder but for every crime for which death is the penalty.

I can see now I underestimated the strength of the opposition to such a measure extending the time, and I now believe such a measure would not have passed at that time. Indeed, the strength of the opposition to Bill C-84 is surprising, and I expect the close vote in the House of Commons is a pretty accurate reflection of the opinion of Canadians as a whole on the subject.

Having spoken on the main subject matter of this bill so often, I cannot now offer any new arguments to justify my conviction that capital punishment should be abolished in Canada once and for all. I can only briefly restate my reasons for my belief.

In discussing this matter I think we can all agree that the state has the right to take the life of a murderer if such extreme action is necessary. So the question to be answered is: Is it necessary? Personally I do not think so. But I do respect the convictions, which I know are sincere, of those who oppose this bill. There are two main arguments against the bill. One is that the only fitting and proper punishment for a murderer is to kill him. Let the punishment fit the crime, they say. Perhaps in days long gone, in a less enlightened age, in a primitive society, there may have been some validity to this argument. Life was cheap and held in small account. This is not the case today, at least I hope it is not. No longer does our society try to make the punishment equal to the crime or the same as the crime. Even if it were desirable it is not possible. Could the state steal from the thief? Could the state rob the robber? Could the state hijack the plane of the hijacker? No. Harsh, horrible and vicious punishments have been done away with, and the only exception will be abandoned with the passage of this bill, as far as murder is concerned.

May I say at this point I regret that the bill does not go the whole way. I hope that in due course the National Defence Act will be amended to abolish the death penalty under that act.

Honourable senators, I ask you to reflect on the fact that back in 1832 there were 220 offences in England for which death was the maximum punishment. It was as late as 1810 when Sir Samuel Romilly introduced a bill in the British House of Commons to abolish the death penalty for stealing the sum of five shillings from a shop. The bill was defeated. Remember, too, it was only at the personal request of Queen Victoria that the death penalty was habitually commuted on youths under 18 years of age. Yes, we have come a long way in our thinking of how to punish our convicted criminals, and I hope we will take one further progressive step and pass this bill.

The second main argument for the retention of capital punishment is that it is necessary as a deterrent—that its application deters potential murderers from carrying out their evil intentions. Of course, it cannot be proved whether it ever has. Is the death penalty a deterrent to crime? It is indeed strange to me that it did not deter the commission of those 220 offences before 1832. I remember reading of a case in England where a ten-year-old boy was sentenced to be hanged for committing a small theft. The sentence was appealed and the appeal was denied by the judges on the ground that the execution of that boy would deter other ten-year-olds from committing similar offences.

● (1050)

If the death penalty is a deterrent to crime, then it would seem logical to extend its use as a punishment for all serious crimes and thereby prevent the commission of such offences. If it is felt that the death penalty is a deterrent, I cannot understand why it has been gradually abolished over the years. We hear people say that the death penalty should be retained, but that the murderer should be killed in a more humane way. Deliberately to kill a man in a humane way is, to my mind, a contradiction in terms. If it were to be used as a deterrent, then I think the execution should be carried out in the most public and most horrible way imaginable. If we will kill murderers as a deterrent, why not bring back the old method of execution in which a man was hanged, drawn and quartered and his head put on a pole somewhere in a city to deter others from committing similar crimes?

Senator Greene: On Parliament Hill.

Senator Macdonald: That would be a good spot to do it. Personally, I do not think it is a deterrent. I do not think it is the penalty which deters criminals. The real deterrent is the certainty of swift apprehension, arrest, trial and conviction. If the murderer is not arrested, or if arrested he is not brought to trial for months, or if the trial is not conducted with dignity and decorum, then there is no deterrent.

I saw a news item recently which indicated that 50 murders had been committed in Montreal up to the end of June. I doubt if the fear of death would have prevented any of those crimes. But I have not seen any figures to show how many of those 50 murderers were arrested, how many were brought to trial or how many, if any, were convicted.

Honourable senators, let us not confuse the issue. In my mind it is not the penalty which deters criminals. I repeat that the deterrent is the swift, sure arrest and the certainty of speedy trial and conviction of the criminal, and I do not think enough emphasis has been put on that as a deterrent.

It has often been said that there is too much sympathy—a misplaced sympathy—for the murderer and not enough for his victim. I do not agree. Personally, with no sympathy for the murderer but with great sympathy for his victim, I do not see that the state is serving any useful purpose by taking the life of the murderer. With every sympathy for the widow and the children of the victim, I do not believe that the grief of that widow or the grief of those children would be lessened to any extent by the state's making another woman a widow or making other children fatherless.

No matter how much we may disagree on the subject of capital punishment, I know we all have a common purpose and a common objective in the administration of justice. That common purpose, that common objective, is to protect and to safeguard the sanctity of human life. I think we can all agree that nothing is more precious than human life, and that it is the first and highest duty of the state to protect that life.

It may well be said that we live in a society in which violence is becoming more and more commonplace. We are no longer greatly disturbed by acts of violence; there is a normal tendency to meet violence with violence, and violence seems to breed more violence. There seems to be a chain reaction. Some positive action is necessary on our part to break that ever escalating chain of violence. I believe we can at least help break that chain by abolishing capital punishment.

Honourable senators, believing as I do that the execution of criminals is a harsh and horrible punishment, a punishment which is a dreadful legacy from our past; believing as I do that it has no deterrent effect; believing as I do that capital punishment is a backward step which diminishes respect for the sanctity of human life, I support Bill C-84.

Hon. L.-P. Beaubien: Honourable senators, I intend to vote against Bill C-84. Voting for or against this measure is a serious decision which every senator must come to grips with, and because it requires a good deal of thought I want to explain my position, which really is quite simple. For the last two and a half to three years this subject has been before us and we have studied it and discussed it from every conceivable angle. From everything I have heard, read and understood, I am convinced that the majority of the Canadian people are against this bill. In my opinion, in a way it is more important for a member of the Senate than for a member of the House of Commons to do what he feels the majority of the people of Canada want done, because if the members of the House of Commons are not doing what the public wants they can be voted out of office; but we in the Senate are not subject to re-election. Therefore, if we are convinced that the majority of Canadians are against this bill, I think it is our duty to vote against it.

Now, who am I to say that my little conscience will not let me do what most Canadians want me to do? I am here, as all of us are, to do what the Canadian public wants us to do. Since we do not have to face the electorate, I think we have to take that into consideration when voting on this measure, which is one that the majority of Canadians do not want passed.

Hon. Louis-J. Robichaud: Honourable senators, it has been said that everything concerning law and order, and particularly everything concerning capital punishment, has been said either in the other place or here, or the press, on previous occasions, so very little can be added to the argument, whether it be for or against capital punishment or for or against Bill C-84 as we have it before us.

On a previous occasion, in December of 1974, I made my position clear in this house, and I have absolutely no reason to change that position. I am a strong believer in law and order. I am a strong believer in the fact that our Houses of Parliament have to protect our society. I am a strong believer in discipline. I think that one of the ways in which we can exercise discipline is by making incorrigibles pay a just penalty. These are individuals who have committed a number of crimes, and against such people we must be protected.

● (1100)

I might have been persuaded to change my mind on this issue by the eloquence of Senator Macdonald. I respect his opinion, as I respect the opinion of my colleague Senator Stanbury. However, I have not changed my mind and am maintaining my position. Before proceeding further, I would like to associate myself with the remarks made earlier this morning by Senator Molson. Ultimately, this house is going to vote on Bill C-84, but I think it the height of arrogance for anyone in the other place to say that the people of Canada have decided this issue. When a vote was taken in the other place, according to press reports it was 124 to 130, which means that opinion in the other place was not at all clear-cut. A vote has yet to be taken here, and Bill C-84 will not become law until that has happened and until the bill has received Royal Assent.

Senator Macdonald said that, at least to his knowledge, there is no evidence anywhere that capital punishment is a deterrent. That is an opinion, and it is an opinion that I respect, but it so happens that three or four months ago I was a member of a television panel discussion, along with a number of legislators, which also included an ex-convict and the deputy chief of police of Ottawa. The deputy chief of police reported the following fact. In the course of committing a crime at a bank, at gun point, a criminal was approached by a policeman who also drew his gun, so each man had his gun drawn on the other. The bandit said to the policeman, "Will I be hanged if I kill you?" What I am going to say next was said on television, and I hope you will excuse the expression. The policeman replied, "You're goddamn right you'll hang," and the gangster dropped his gun. He did not kill the policeman, because he was afraid that he would suffer capital punishment. This may not illustrate the strength of the case as well as it might, but it is one instance of the fear of capital punishment most definitely being a deterrent, and I firmly believe it is a deterrent, although I respect the views of those who believe it is not.

I am not a "sanguinaire"; I am not vengeful. I believe, however, that in today's society there are, as there was in the society of 20 years ago, in the society of 200 years ago, and even of 2,000 years ago, people who most definitely could be described as incorrigibles. There are those who have reached a stage at which they are beyond all hope of rehabilitation. It is against these people that I would like to see society protected, and more particularly our families, friends and neighbours. That is all I am asking for, that is why I am opposed to Bill C-84, and that is why I am going to vote against it.

I could have come here this morning armed with a pile of statistics. Since I introduced a bill in this chamber in December of 1974 I have accumulated three fat files of statistics and documentation on this issue. I have also received correspondence from across this land, and 95 per cent of it was in favour of full retention or some form of retention.

I respect the will of the people of our country. I think we live in just about the same context here as they do in the United States. In the United States they had abolished capital punishment, but within the last two or three weeks it has become apparent that just about all 50 states of the Union want it reintroduced. Why is this? It is because in the United States today, and in some of the cities of Canada, a man cannot safely walk on the streets alone after sunset. In the United States, "freedom" is a precious word, but they will tell you, if you are in Cleveland, for example, or Buffalo, or Los Angeles, or Washington, or New York, "Don't walk alone on the streets after 5 o'clock in the evening, because you'll be clobbered and you're liable to be killed." All of this in the name of freedom.

I believe that in the United States they are returning to the principle of law and order. They are coming back to the idea of a just penalty for the commission of a crime, and I do not think we should backtrack in this country.

It has been said, with some measure of justification, that capital punishment is barbaric. I am not going to discuss the method of effecting capital punishment this morning. I do not think it is barbaric, and I am perfectly honest with my honourable colleagues here when I say that. I think that the culprit, who in many cases has offended more than once, expects exactly what is coming to him, and if society does not inflict the death penalty in some cases he does so himself in his cell.

I referred a moment ago to a panel discussion I participated in on television, and I mentioned that one of the members of the panel was an ex-convict. This man had served 12 years in the penitentiary, and he said in public, on television, that for a murderer to go to jail for 25 years is a much stiffer penalty than capital punishment. He said, "As far as I'm concerned, I would prefer capital punishment to having to serve 25 years in jail."

If we want to be so humane towards the culprit, why don't we give him what he expected in the first place, instead of forcing him to exist in an isolated cell for the next 25 years of his life?

● (1110)

I took note of a remark made by Senator Asselin this morning criticizing certain individuals in the other place because they might have exerted pressure upon members to vote in favour of capital punishment. I do not agree with that type of criticism because I think it was perfectly fair and justifiable for any cabinet minister, or any member, in the other place to talk to anybody else and express their views, whether for or against capital punishment. I don't think undue pressure was exercised in the other place, and the proof of that fact is that the vote was taken yesterday and it was 124 for retention and 130 for abolition, so there was no undue pressure exerted in the other place. Although I appreciated generally the remarks made this morning by Senator Asselin, I cannot subscribe to the view that undue pressure was exerted on any of the members on either side of the house or of any of the four parties in the other place. That I cannot swallow.

Senator Flynn: The speech of the Prime Minister was an exercise in pressure.

Senator Robichaud: The speech of the Prime Minister was a classic example of a man who speaks his own mind, and he has a perfect right to do that, just as Senator Flynn has a perfect right to do so and just as I have the right to speak my own mind. I do not have to borrow Senator Flynn's ideas; neither do I have to borrow Mr. Trudeau's ideas. I speak my own mind, and that is what I have done this morning. I am going to vote against my own Prime Minister, against the will of my own Prime Minister—

[Senator Robichaud.]

Senator Asselin: But it is supposed to be a free vote.

Senator Robichaud: It is, and when 124 members of the other place vote to retain the death penalty, that, in my view, is perfect proof that it was a free vote—just as it is going to be a free vote here. I am a Liberal—

Senator Flynn: We have known that for a long time.

Senator Robichaud:—and I have always been a Liberal, and I have never had to apologize to anybody in this place or in any other place for being a Liberal. But, as a Liberal, I am going to vote against Bill C-84 because I believe conscientiously that by passing Bill C-84 we are not serving our society as well as we should. As I have said before, honourable senators, there are so many things that could be said on this issue and so many things have already been said on it, but the issue is now clearly before us. There is no question of finding a happy medium between the two; it is either yes or no, and, in my books, on Bill C-84 it is a flat no.

Hon. Henry D. Hicks: Honourable senators, earlier in this session I spoke in support of Bill S-21, which was introduced by Senator Robichaud who has just spoken, and on February 20, 1975—rather a long time ago now—I explained my reasons for supporting the bill and for supporting the retention of capital punishment in some instances. I do not think it is necessary for me to do more this morning than to recapitulate the arguments that I used then and perhaps to make one other observation.

I started with the proposition that it had long seemed to me apparent that there are in our society some persons who by the monstrosity of their own actions forfeit their right to the protection of society, and I believe that society has the right to remove them. I then traced the history of earlier private vengeance which was often wreaked upon the murderer by the relatives or the loved ones of his victim, how in a more orderly society this had been replaced by law and order, and my fears that there was a danger that respect for law and order might not continue if society was the least bit reluctant to enforce the laws strictly and even on some occasions to enforce the carrying out of the supreme penalty in taking the murderer's life. I expressed myself as being not entirely in sympathy with those who upheld the sanctity of any human life, no matter how miserable, no matter how clearly the criminal had demonstrated his opposition to society and his unwillingness to live harmoniously in the society in which we live today. I said that I was not so much concerned with that life as I was with the quality of the lives of the majority of the men and women in this country, and in other countries, who are law-abiding citizens and who want to be able to live in a society other than a terroristic one.

I also expressed the view, and I underline it today, that I am more concerned with the plight of the victims of the murderer than I am with the plight of the murderer himself, and if this bill should pass and become the law of the land, then it seems to me to be urgent that the lawmakers of this country, including those of us who are members of the Senate, should address ourselves at an early date to providing a system of compensation, or at least the assurance of proper care of the dependants of the murder victim so that his children should not be denied proper education and proper care and so that his widow should not be put in a position of penury or near penury for the rest of her life. And I know that all of us can think of some examples of that having happened.

I did not deal with the question of whether or not capital punishment was a deterrent because, frankly, I do not know. I do feel very strongly that those who categorically assert that there is not one bit of evidence that capital punishment ever acts as a deterrent are not entitled to that categorical view, but I admit that it is very difficult to get exact evidence to show the nature of the deterrent effect of capital punishment. However, that was not the basis of my support for the retention of capital punishment, but, rather, my basis was that some persons, by the monstrosity of their own acts and by their rejection of the rules of our society, had forfeited the right to the protection of that society, and I developed it from there.

There is just one related observation, however, arising out of the deterrent effect, which I might make. In recent years the activities of so-called terrorists have commanded a great deal of attention throughout the world, and it is not unusual, as indeed the last incident in Uganda demonstrates, for terrorists to hold hostages, and sometimes not only to hold them but to bring about their death, while demanding the release of other convicted terrorist murderers from jails in various parts of the world. It cannot be gainsaid that if those terrorists who were convicted murderers had themselves been put to death, there would have been no possibility of further terrorist activity involving the taking, retaining and sometimes killing of hostages in order to try to secure the release of convicted murderers.

I realize that that is a somewhat peripheral argument, and I realize that the actions of the Parliament of Canada alone could not have any very serious effect on this. However, it may very well be that if the trend that has been observed during the last two decades continues, then world society in general will have to take note of this situation. In any event, I do not think it is necessary this morning for me to elaborate any further. My views are on record in Debates of the Senate of February 20, 1975, at page 557, and I have no reason to change the views I expressed then. Accordingly, I feel it is my conscientious duty to vote against Bill C-84.

● (1120)

Hon. Ernest C. Manning: Honourable senators, we are met to debate this important bill under circumstances which must be disturbing to every honourable member of this house. Honourable senators already have drawn attention to the fact that the government apparently has dismissed the decision of this house as irrelevant to its decision to abolish capital punishment. That is not only an arrogant insult to every honourable senator, but it ignores the Constitution of Canada which makes this house an integral part of our parliamentary system.

Equally indefensible is the fact that, after the longest session in Canadian parliamentary history, legislation of such great public concern and importance is brought to our desks 24 hours before it is intended that the house should adjourn for the summer recess. If this was an isolated case, and if there were extenuating circumstances, we might not be too critical. But surely, in view of the many times this has happened previously and the length of the present session, which gave the government ample time to make certain that legislation of this importance would come before the Senate with adequate time to do the job we are here to do, this is completely indefensible.

My own inclination under these circumstances is to urge this house to refuse to debate this bill until we return in the fall. However, I realize that as a minority voice that would be futile. I do say, however, that unless the Senate faces up to this repeated disregard for its role and responsibility in the parliamentary process, I for one feel that the value of this chamber will come into serious question, and some of us will have no alternative but to consider whether we are making any meaningful contribution to the governing of Canada.

Turning now to the bill, I very deeply regret and am saddened by the decision in the other place to pass this particular piece of legislation. I say that, first, because as honourable senators have already pointed out, it is contrary to the will of the vast majority of the Canadian people, who rightly feel they have been betrayed by those whom they have elected to represent them. I agree with those senators who have pointed out that a betrayal of this kind could not come at a worse time. Our parliamentary institutions and the confidence of the public in governments today is at a very low ebb. There is a great deal of cynicism and unrest, and a feeling that the parliamentary process is no longer serving the interest or reflecting the will of the Canadian people. To have another body blow of this magnitude levelled at public confidence in government at this particular time is indeed serious to the best interests of this country.

But there is a second and more serious reason for my deep regret that this legislation is before us at all. This bill marks the government's final abandonment of a fundamental principle of justice. That principle is that wrongdoing carries, and must of necessity carry, a penalty commensurate with the degree of the wrong committed. For a worthwhile society to endure, its system and standards of justice must be based on permanent, immutable moral standards and not on the current moral philosophy of the government that happens to be in power.

There is something very special and very sacred about human life. After all, man is not merely another animal, but a created being with a living personality endowed with the ability to reason, to think, to examine and weigh evidence, to arrive at conclusions and make decisions for which he must then assume personal responsibility. If in that context a man deliberately decides to take the life of another person, meaningful justice demands that nothing less than the forfeiture of his life in return will satisfy the requirements of justice.

I do not refer to cases of murder committed in the heat of passion or under circumstances which have temporarily robbed the offender of control of his faculties. That is why we have always provided in our law for sentences in cases of that kind to be commuted by the Governor General in Council. What I am speaking about is cold-blooded, deliberate, premeditated murder. Reference was made by our honourable colleague Senator Hicks to the frequency today of murder associated with hijacking and kidnapping. Men do not do these things on the spur of the moment. They are carefully planned operations involving the intention, if necessary, of taking the lives of innocent victims. That is the type of murder to which I refer. I repeat that in such cases in which responsible individuals decide deliberately to take the life of another person, meaningful justice demands no less than the forfeiture of the life of the offender in return.

Humanistic permissive society has consistently pressured for the elimination of the element of punishment for wrong doing in the administration of justice. Our present-day society has become very strong on sympathy for those guilty of wilful murder and, in fact, there often seems to be more sympathy for the murderers than for the innocent victims of their crimes. Permissive society is always ready to place blame for crime and violence on everything and everybody except the guilty person. It places great emphasis on the state's responsibility to provide treatment and rehabilitation for guilty criminals, including murderers. There is a proper place for all of those things. But the fact remains that modern permissive society has become very much against "the punishment to fit the crime," which it insists on regarding as vengeance rather than an integral and necessary part of meaningful justice.

• (1130)

If we give to the priceless possession of human life its true dignity and worth, the essentials of meaningful justice cannot be met in the case of willful murder apart from the death penalty.

We are told that in this legislation the alternative of a minimum of 25 years imprisonment is an appropriate penalty. I draw the attention of honourable senators to two things: first, there can be no real comparison between a prison term and the forfeiture of life. They are not comparable. Secondly, in the light of this country's experience over the past 25 years, can anyone seriously think that the 25-year minimum jail term in this bill really means anything? Long before the 25 years are up, permissive society will decide that a 25-year minimum prison term is cruel and unnatural punishment, and this will be followed by the adoption of more lenient parole provisions, and first-degree murderers will again be out on the street long before the 25 years are up.

There is so much that can be said on this subject that one faces the problem of what to omit. I do not think we are going to change many minds at this late stage, but we do have a responsibility which we cannot avoid. We in this house are not subject to dismissal by the electorate if we disregard their will, and surely that places on us an even greater responsibility to respect their will and approach this subject with the utmost seriousness.

I shall close with a brief comment on two matters which relate to this question in a very direct way. It is regrettable that when capital punishment is debated, almost without exception it is reduced to whether we should or should not abolish hanging, as though hanging were the only means by which murderers can be executed.

There may well be more desirable methods of execution, and we should not relate our judgment on the matter of capital punishment to a particular method of execution which may be abhorrent to some.

Finally, there is the question of whether capital punishment has a deterrent effect. I agree with my colleague, Senator Hicks, that there is simply no ground on which people can categorically say that the death penalty is not a deterrent to murder. It is not something which can be proved one way or the other by statistics. However, I submit that simple logic dictates that there is a valid argument that the death penalty is a deterrent. We argue, for example, that putting a police car on the highway to check speeders is a deterrent to others. When drivers see a police car stop a speeder, for the next half hour everyone lessens speed. Why? Because the psychological impact of seeing a penalty imposed for a violation of traffic rules acts as a deterrent.

Can anyone argue logically that if there is a deterrent effect when minor penalties such as fines for speeding are imposed there would not be a deterrent effect to a far greater degree when a man pays with his life for the offence of taking the life of another?

It will be a sad day for Canada if the bill passes. It is wrong in principle. It will be detrimental to the best interests of society. It violates the fundamental principle of meaningful justice, and for these reasons I oppose the bill.

Hon. Hazen Argue: Honourable senators, I welcome the bill which is now before the Senate. I welcome it because I feel that the Prime Minister has given leadership in a progressive and far-seeing manner. He has shown that the Canadian Parliament and the Canadian public, with him, will march in the vanguard of the nations of this world toward a more refined civilization. In my opinion, it is good on all counts that the bill should be before the Senate today.

Senator Flynn: Or tomorrow.

Senator Argue: Some have said that there was not a free vote in the other place. Some have said that so far as the cabinet is concerned it was not a free vote. I am not party to the deliberations of the cabinet but, in my view, there was cabinet solidarity.

I am a member of the Liberal caucus, and there was no pressure that I saw exerted on individual members of the caucus in any way, shape or form.

Senator Perrault: That is right.

Senator Argue: The Prime Minister participated in the debate as a member of the caucus, and there was no question of government or party solidarity on the issue.

The Conservatives, I suppose, had a free vote. The leader went one way, and the party went another. It was supposed to be a free vote, but I am not too sure that the performance of the Conservative Party in the other place was in keeping with the best parliamentary practice.

I say that because I have counted the days devoted in the other place to second reading. There were 20 days spent on second reading, and seven days on third reading, of the bill. In the second reading debate, the speakers were: 65 Conservative, 37 Liberal, seven NDP, six Social Credit, and one Independent. On third reading, there were 15 Conservative speakers, five Liberals, two NDP, three Social Credit, and one Independent.

I am pleased that the bill is here, and I am pleased to support it. I am proud that the Prime Minister stood firm and showed leadership. But I think it is a disgrace that any measure, no matter how important, should take 27 days of the time of the other place in any session and, by so doing, make it more difficult for other more important legislation to come before Parliament.

There have been objections raised that the legislation has been dumped on our laps, I think Senator Manning said, in the last 24 or 48 hours of the session, that it makes a mockery of the Senate and puts us in a difficult position.

● (1140)

If I interpreted Senator Manning's remarks correctly, it is his view that the Senate is going down in esteem across the country to the point that he might have to reconsider his position as a senator. He will no doubt tell me whether I am correct but, as I interpret his remarks, he is so fed up with the Senate that he is considering his future course of action, which might include resignation from the Senate. That is the way I took his remarks.

I do not consider resignation from the Senate to be the course to take. I have been as critical of the way in which the Senate operates as any. The Senate makes mistakes from time to time, but one cannot improve the Senate by becoming disgusted to the point of resigning and abrogating one's responsibility as a senator. In my view, what we in the Senate should be doing is discussing the important public issues of the day, the discussion of which in some instances should be initiated in the Senate, following which we should have the guts and the foresight to arrive at decisions on those issues, and we should arrive at such decisions in a reasonable length of time. There is nothing that brings the Senate into lower esteem than an inability to make decisions.

I am pleased with the bill before us. I do not feel it has been proven in any way that capital punishment is a deterrent. After reading the speeches, statistics and reports, I am convinced—others may not be so convinced—that murder by the state increases the incidence of murder generally; violence by the state breeds violence. In my view, as the countries of the world go forward in their march to a higher civilization, there will be fewer and fewer murders, and capital punishment will be banned in country after country.

Statements have been made and evidence produced in support of the proposition that the incidence of capital punishment falls more heavily on accused persons in the lower income stratas and those belonging to minority groups. I think we all understand that if an accused person has large sums of money available for proper investigation and the hiring of the most capable counsel, his chances of being hanged are remote. That is another of the reasons for my supporting this measure.

I am not happy with the law as it presently stands, namely, that those found guilty of murdering a peace officer or prison guard are subject to capital punishment. I do not feel that this kind of discrimination is necessary. In reading over previous speeches I have made on this subject, I see where I pointed out that the danger to the life of a peace officer in the course of his duties was much less than the danger to the lives of persons in many other occupations—those engaged in mining or farming, for example. I have those statistics. This very point has been forcefully brought home to me in the course of the last few weeks, because within 10 miles of where I reside in Saskatchewan two farmers have lost their lives while carrying out their work. On all grounds, in my view, it was a mistake to single out peace officers and prison guards as being in a separate category.

Senator Choquette: Those were accidents, not murders.

Senator Argue: Yes, of course. I am simply talking about the relative dangers inherent in various occupations, which is something I feel is important; others may not.

Senator Grosart: You should not drive a car.

Senator Argue: That might be true.

I should think that if the energy of parliamentarians were directed to doing everything possible to prevent accidents of one kind or another across this country, we would be doing far more for the preservation of human life and the protection of society than by expending so much of it on debating this measure.

I was proud of the leadership of the Prime Minister. I was not proud of the action of a former Prime Minister, the Right Honourable John G. Diefenbaker.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I rise on a point of order. It has been stated very often that one can refer to statements made by ministers when such statements represent the official position of the government. However, to comment on a speech made by an individual member of the other place, I think, is entirely out of order.

Senator Argue: Honourable senators, I am not quoting from the debates of the other place, as the rule states. I am merely stating that a well-known public figure in this country, a man who rose to prominence, who gained public acclaim in substantial measure because of his championship of the cause of abolition, a man who rose to power through the acclaim given him by farsighted people, has turned himself inside out and taken the opposite course.

While a member of the other place, I shared an office with the late Ross Thatcher who, in his very first years as a member of Parliament, introduced a bill to abolish the death penalty. I think those of us who are in favour of abolition of the death penalty are on the right side, the correct side, and I, for one, am fully confident that Canada has seen the last hanging, the last taking of a life by the state in punishment. I make that statement despite the debate that took place in the House of Commons, and fully aware that a Progressive Conservative government, or some other government, might be in office in years to come.

I was pleased to introduce Bill S-23 in the Senate. I moved the motion for second reading of that bill on April 17, 1975. And was pleased that the late Honourable M. Grattan O'Leary found it possible to second that motion. Over the years, the late Senator O'Leary had been a great champion of basic human rights and freedoms, and I was honoured that he was associated with me in bringing that measure forward.

The Senate debated Bill S-23 from time to time. There seemed to be a good deal of support in the Senate for the abolition of capital punishment. I believe the thinking of the Senate in this regard is more advanced than that of the House of Commons. In passing the legislation banning capital punishment for a period of five years, with the exception of those convicted of the murder of a peace officer or prison guard, the vote in the Senate was 37 to 20 in favour. I would hope that the measure presently before us will pass by at least that wide a margin, if not a wider one.

I have referred to actions I felt the Senate should not take. I refer now in a particular way to the action taken by the administration of the Senate with regard to Bill S-23. That bill was debated from time to time, and then fell into the hands of the administration in the Senate. On July 12, 1975, Senator Prowse adjourned the debate. He has been here very little since. The Whip, or the Leader of the Government in his absence, in the absence of Senator Prowse, notwithstanding the fact that there was a possibility of Bill S-23 coming to a vote, adjourned the debate. I was endeavouring to close the debate on the motion for second reading of the bill, and bring the matter to a vote. At times, the debate was adjourned for a number of weeks in advance. That kind of action was a mistake, both procedurally and from the standpoint of the status of the Senate. If honourable senators wonder why they are not sometimes held in high regard, then, for goodness' sake, let's not emasculate the Senate by preventing measures in the Senate from being debated. We should not become involved in protracted adjournments—adjournments in this particular case resulting in a measure not being debated for more than one year. I do not know of any sillier example I could bring to your attention of how the Senate can act in a way damaging to itself.

• (1150)

It is my hope that the Senate will not only pass this measure, but will make the abolition of the death penalty complete by extending it to cover the provisions of the National Defence Act. Senator Macdonald made a strong speech in the debate on Bill S-23—I understand he did the same again this morning, although I missed part of his speech—pointing out that the provision in the National Defence Act for capital punishment in certain instances is a disgrace to the country, a slap in the face to our armed forces, of absolutely no value historically, and a foolish thing to have on our statute books. I am paraphrasing him, but I have read his speeches, and they were in the strongest possible language. I want to give notice that I am prepared in another session, in the hope that the Senate might act favourably—or, if not act favourably, at least act—to introduce a bill to amend the National Defence Act to provide for the complete abolition of capital punishment.

It has been said that I am here to do what the public wants me to do. That is not what governs what I do here. I take into consideration what I believe the public would like me to do, but I use my own judgment. I consider that I am here to put forward certain ideas on agriculture, because I am conceited enough to believe that I have a little more knowledge about some of these things than perhaps the average person, who has not had the opportunity to acquire the facts that I have had. I have a free telephone; I have a chance to read all the newspapers. I try to keep informed, and I consider it my responsibility to use my own best judgment.

[Senator Argue.]

When this bill passes I believe the country will settle down. I believe that the 80 per cent of the population who are today demanding retention of capital punishment will cease their demands, because it will no longer be such a controversial public issue. It is my view that the last time this matter was considered a mistake was made in exempting the murder of police officers and prison guards. That mistake is now being corrected.

I am proud that the Prime Minister led the fight in such a courageous manner in the face of great opposition in the House of Commons and in the country. A friend of mine in Saskatchewan, who is not a supporter of the Liberal Party and who has worked all his life against the Liberal Party, said, "I want to tell you, Hazen, that I think Prime Minister Trudeau is one of the strongest Prime Ministers this country has ever had." I concur in that. I am pleased that this measure is before us today, and it is here because the Prime Minister gave it the kind of courageous leadership that was required.

Hon. Guy Williams: Honourable senators, within hours the abolition of capital punishment will be law. The small majority in the other place is disturbing to me. Does it truly reflect the thinking and viewpoint of the Canadian public? Only time will tell.

There are some very disturbing facts about abolition of capital punishment in this legislation, which will be finalized within hours. In my view, this legislation will make the law enforcement personnel of this country actively defensive in protecting themselves and, quite possibly, with self-preservation in mind, will lead to their shooting first rather than being shot at and killed. This is something that disturbs me very much.

Honourable senators, I intend to be very brief. Let us look at the potential for organized crime. Will this bill increase its activities? I had hoped there would be partial retention of capital punishment. At this moment, I do not believe there will be partial retention of that age-old form of justice, which is changing every decade. It is a major change that is taking place here today. A major step is being taken. Will it truly reflect the thinking of this great Canada?

I spoke on this months ago and made it clear that I believe the death sentence and the noose are deterrents. In my own conscience, I have no reason to change my view on retention.

[Translation]

Hon. Maurice Bourget: Honourable senators, as you know, the bill now before us gave rise to lengthy and important debates in the past fifteen years. I was able in the last few weeks to read several speeches made in the other place. I think we can boil down the arguments that were put forward, either for or against the bill, to about eight or ten good reasons. I also think that even if all senators wanted to rehash or review all the arguments put forward for or against capital punishment, I am sure that none of those speeches could change the opinion of each and every one of us on the important decision we have to make. I think the vote in the other place yesterday shows how controversial is this issue and also how each and every one of us must conscientiously take his responsibilities and vote in favour of or against this bill, and I repeat, conscientiously, keeping in mind the main object of protecting society. That is why I do not intend to dwell on the arguments put forward and repeated many times and why my remarks will be quite brief.

• (1200)

I will simply mention two or three reasons which I think militate in favour of retaining capital punishment for premeditated murders.

This morning we heard again our good friend Senator Asselin, and one of the first arguments he put forward was the same as I want to make. To me, the most important responsibilities of the legislators are those that deal with maintaining law and order in our society and respect for the life of its members. I am 68. I noted on several occasions that when a criminal is brought to trial, there is always a tendency to feel sympathy for the man facing his peers. We forget unfortunately, I think, the innocent victim or victims, or those he leaves behind.

I think this is a human reaction. I have felt it myself. You find yourself involved, you have a bit more sympathy for the man on trial, and unfortunately you forget the victims and those who are left behind.

For my part, I see nothing in this bill that can convince me to support the abolition of capital punishment, even by increasing the present term to 25 years, because this will not prevent more people from committing murder, and consequently it will not bring about more respect for law and order. On the contrary, I am firmly convinced that the retention of capital punishment—as Honourable Senator Manning said—whatever form of execution is chosen, will be a better deterrent than its abolition.

I know, and you can see this as much as I do, that there is far from unanimous agreement on this point and that many do not believe that capital punishment is a deterrent. As for me and several others, I believe that instinctively a great majority of people, and even certain criminals, fear death, and that consequently retention of the death penalty is a better deterrent than its abolition. I know that it is very difficult to prove this mathematically. However, people who are well informed on this issue—I shall mention only one; Senator Asselin referred this morning, as others have done, to the position taken by police officers.

In this regard, however, I shall quote only one person who was well aware of this situation, Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, the former director of the FBI, who quoted in a letter sent to some of his officers on June 1, 1960, the words of an American judge who had said the following:

[English]

The death penalty is a warning just like a lighthouse throwing its beam out to the sea. We hear about shipwrecks but we do not hear about the ships the lighthouse guides safely on their way. We do not have proof of the number of ships it saves but we do not tear the lighthouse down.

[Translation]

I know of a man who was rather familiar with that question because, as you will recall, he had been for many years the director of the federal police in the U.S.A. This letter is reprinted on page 124 of a report on the death penalty published in June 1965 and compiled by the Honourable Guy Favreau, the then Minister of Justice.

I would like to add that we should retain the death penalty even if, by doing so, we could save the life of only one human being. So, even if some of us seem to disagree with that, I think that the fact that most Canadians—I did not check the figures but Senator Asselin mentioned this morning that 78 per cent of the people of Canada are in favour of the death penalty—I think that this fact should be taken into account because if 78 per cent of our people are in favour of the death penalty, it goes to show, I think, that this kind of penalty should be provided in our penal system. I am not saying that I was impressed or influenced by the fact that most Canadians are for the retention of the death penalty or that I made up my mind according to that fact—no, I am not saying that. However, since such a large proportion of Canadians favour the retention of capital punishment, I feel I must take their view into consideration. If 78 per cent of them favour retention of capital punishment, it is an indication that they have reason to believe that capital punishment is necessary for the protection of our society.

Finally, I wish to add that I do not favour retention of capital punishment in a spirit of revenge. I do not like either to kill someone or see someone hang. But I believe that in conscience it is my duty, being convinced that capital punishment will maintain law and order in our country, to vote against the bill now before us. Similarly, in my opinion, the retention of capital punishment will ensure more protection to Canadian citizens of all ages who are now concerned, as you know, and rightly so, at the appalling increase in various forms of violence in this country. Therefore, honourable senators, I shall vote against this bill.

● (1210)

[English]

Hon. Alan A. Macnaughton: Honourable senators, I have spoken twice on capital punishment in the other place, and those speeches are reported in Hansard of February 18, 1960 and May 23, 1961. I do not really expect there will be a stampede of honourable senators to the Parliamentary Library to get the last few remaining copies of those speeches.

Senator Smith (Queens-Shelburne): They are collectors' items.

Senator Macnaughton: May I now make a third attempt to present some views on capital punishment? On February 18, 1960, in the lead editorial of the Montreal Gazette, there was one paragraph which read as follows:

But "a little capital punishment"—which amounts to the occasional hanging of a condemned murderer—would seem to be capital punishment in its most repellent, least deterrent, and least defensible form.

Basically, if one can satisfy the emotions inherent in this question, the matter, I think, becomes one of the individual conscience of each senator. My own feeling is that we have now reached the stage in public understanding of this question which calls for a very careful study and a final vote concerning the death penalty.

In principle, I am opposed to capital punishment for three basic reasons. In the first place, capital punishment emphasizes the punitive aspect of justice. I think we have gone beyond that. The word "punitive" of course means inflicting punishment. Punishment is a penalty imposed by the state to discourage crime. We think of it as making the criminal himself experience some of the consequences of his own act. Today a further qualification has crept in, in that we now try to reform the criminal, either by changing his outlook or by working on his character. I say that today, therefore, the punitive aspect of justice really comprises four elements: the element of acting as a deterrent to the commission of crimes; the element of certain retribution, or making the person who has been convicted of a crime suffer for it; the element of reformation, or making an effort to reform the person's character or outlook; and, finally, the element of protection of society.

It is well understood that law and justice exist for the protection of society. We incarcerate persons who have committed crimes—we put them in institutions or we lock them up in jails. It seems to me that the issue with respect to capital punishment is this: If the taking of life is wrong, does a second wrong accomplish anything positive? Is a capital sentence the best and surest way for a community to repudiate the evil action of one of its members?

To my way of thinking, punitive justice is the oldest, most primitive form of social justice, and I think it is now outmoded. It can be compared to the punishment given to a child which is supposed to mend his ways but often has the very opposite effect. I say that punishment by itself is not enough. Punitive punishment is not in keeping with our cultural advancement today. If capital punishment is a deterrent then the custom of public hangings of condemned criminals in public squares should be revived. I think everyone in this chamber will agree with me that this is not only outmoded, but would shock the present-day conscience of our whole society.

The second problem we run into with regard to the matter we are discussing at the moment is that of human error in judgment. No man is infallible. Even under the best conditions men make mistakes. Even under the best conditions witnesses make mistakes. It is a matter of public record that under stress crimes are particularly odious. Frequently, the cards seemed to be stacked against a fair trial for the accused. The point I want to make is that there is such a thing as human error. Where prejudice has already been created owing to the circumstances of the crime, or to the external factors of publicity, emotion and stress, this prejudice greatly adds to the possibility of error in judgment. Once a person is executed, he is dead and there is no appeal.

My third reason is based on an ethical objection. The state may not take what it cannot give. The state cannot give life, and therefore it should not take life. There is a point at which the omnipotence of the state should end.

The state, of course, has a duty to society. I say that the state fulfils that duty when it withdraws convicted criminals from society. When a person is incarcerated or "sent up" for life and kept there, the state accomplishes at least three things: first, the convicted criminal is punished; secondly, society is protected from the danger of that criminal; and, thirdly, the state takes out of our society those persons who fall foul of the law.

When we attempt to outlaw war we are attempting to do the same thing in the international field that this bill seeks to do in the national field. We are attempting to go beyond the level of punitive punishment, for I maintain that punitive punishment is the oldest, most primitive form of justice.

[Senator Bourget.]

Honourable senators, I shall support the bill.

On motion of Senator Deschatelets, debate adjourned.

OLYMPIC GAMES

FLAME CEREMONY ON PARLIAMENT HILL

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, this afternoon, between two o'clock and three o'clock, the Olympic Flame ceremony will take place in front of the Parliament Buildings.

To enable honourable senators to attend, I move, seconded by Senator Perrault, that the Senate do now adjourn to reassemble at the call of the bell at approximately 3.30 this afternoon, at which time we will resume the present debate.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned until 3.30 p.m.

At 3.30 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT BILL (NO. 2), 1976

SECOND READING—DEBATE CONTINUED

The Senate resumed from earlier this day the debate on the motion of Senator Lang for the second reading of Bill C-84, to amend the Criminal Code in relation to the punishment for murder and certain other serious offences.

[Translation]

Hon. Jean-Paul Deschatelets: Honourable senators, I want first to commend the sponsor of this bill, Senator Lang, for having introduced this bill soberly, clearly and briefly. This debate is proceeding, I hope you will agree with me, in an exemplary manner. I think Senator Lang must be commended for having given this tone to the debate.

Honourable senators, I must admit that before the introduction of Bill C-84 I did not know exactly whether I should be in favour of the abolition or the retention of capital punishment. At times, after reading about loathsome, premeditated crimes, I fell asleep at night as a retentionist and woke up the next morning as an abolitionist. This shows that I am going to give you my opinion dispassionately.

I have read this bill several times as well as the main speeches delivered in the other place. I have come to the conclusion that I shall vote for the bill. I shall explain briefly the motives which led to my decision.

Bill C-84 constitutes a definite improvement over the present situation. To my mind, it puts an end to a major imbroglio. We all agree that the administration of justice, since 1960, has been chaotic and inconsistent with regard to major crimes, resulting in its almost complete weakening throughout Canada especially as a result of a policy of easy bail for major crimes, and systematic commutations of death penalties. We have therefore witnessed what I would call a travesty of justice, in which criminals were condemned to death, with all the ceremonial stipulated under the law, while we were all aware that the law was not taking its normal course and that the death penalty would be commuted. That, to my mind, had unfortunate effects on the public who witnessed, powerless, a deterioration of law enforcement with regard to criminals. That, I feel, is a very serious matter. As I said a while ago, the public did not understand why, for several years, bail was readily granted to criminals accused of the most heinous crimes, thus reflecting in some measure on the judges, the officials and the civil servants responsible for enforcing the law.

That situation could not last any longer. One of the greater merits of Bill C-84, to my way of thinking, is precisely that it offers at long last a new and consistent judicial system which provides, in the case of criminals found guilty of premeditated or unpremeditated murder, long prison terms before they may hope to get a hearing before a court and jury with a view to being paroled. That then, I feel, is one of the deterrents provided in this bill, namely, a long and compulsory prison term to replace the deterrent of the death penalty which, in fact, was no deterrent at all since the sentence was not carried out. This, I submit, is a positive aspect of Bill C-84.

This morning, my good friend, Senator Beaubien, put forward an interesting argument to the effect that a senator must reflect public opinion through his vote. I suppose he had in mind the opinion of the districts we all represent. I wonder, however, whether we are really sure today that 78 per cent of the public is in favour of capital punishment, I doubt it, and here is why. Of the various Gallup polls conducted on capital punishment, I think the majority were held before the introduction of Bill C-84. I consider the public response in favour of capital punishment as a statement of dissatisfaction, of deep concern, if not of revolt following the numerous commutations of sentences, with bail too easily granted for major crimes, with the result that policemen after some years had to deal again with criminals on parole who should have been serving long prison terms.

Personally, I am convinced, either rightly or wrongly, that the public requires in the first place that the person convicted of first or second degree murder should be properly put away and serve the greater part of his sentence. Such was not the case yesterday, but I suggest it will be starting tomorrow if we do pass this bill.

Before I close my remarks, I would like to bring the following suggestion to my honourable colleagues' attention: were this bill to be defeated on second reading, I have every reason to believe—and this is a personal opinion—that sentences to hang, or most of them, would continue to be commuted by royal prerogative of the cabinet, and we have no control whatsoever over that prerogative.

I also want to touch briefly on another point, which we should not ignore: we are, of course, living in a time when certain social phenomena are beyond us—I mean those of my generation. We are facing situations the rationale of which escapes us. Those who have been interested in the administration of justice during the past five or ten years must have noticed a new phenomenon in connection with trials by jury. Those of my honourable colleagues who are lawyers and who keep informed about trials held recently—I must say that I am not aware of the situation in other provinces, but I know the problem that exists in Quebec—have been faced with this new situation: for one reason or another, juries today refuse to assume their responsibilities in the face of the evidence presented in court, with the result that it is extremely difficult to get a conviction in a trial by jury. You are probably aware that the Quebec Bar Association and the Canadian Bar Association are now reviewing this matter, prior to a possible review of trial by jury, and I think it is something we must keep in mind.

There would be several other aspects to be considered. In my view the greatest merit of this legislation is to put an end to an inconsistent and even ridiculous situation. This is why, in my opinion, Bill C-84, however imperfect it may be, will bring about a tremendous improvement, and I feel that when the clauses of this bill have been properly explained to the public, the public will be, up to a point, satisfied and reassured about the confused situation we have been faced with for years.

Therefore, I intend to support this bill.

[English]

● (1540)

Hon. Lionel Choquette: Honourable senators, I had not intended to speak on this important question, as I have spoken to it on several previous occasions. However, after hearing some of the retentionists' speeches, which were so well delivered today by eminent senators, I have decided not to remain silent.

I would like, at the outset, to say that I have always been a retentionist, with the exception of a few years ago when you will recall that my good friend Senator McIlraith introduced a bill, which I thought was useless, to retain the death penalty in cases of the murder of prison guards and police officers while on duty. I said then that we were perpetuating a farce, since we knew that there had not been an execution for murder since 1962 and that we should then go all out to abolish capital punishment once and for all. Now we have a government bill before us which should put an end to further discussion as to whether this country should abolish the death penalty for murder.

I would like at the outset to inform you that I have been practising law in this city for approximately 44 years, 25 of which were spent in criminal law while defending criminals. I have learnt to know their mentality and what we can do with them by way of reforming them. I am convinced that there are some who are no better than wild animals and are just waiting to get out of prison, by evasion or other methods, to again kill their fellow human beings. I would therefore like to see written unequivocally in our Criminal Code a warning which would be very simple and would read like this: "If you kill premeditatedly, cold bloodedly, and wilfully a human being, you shall die."

Such an unequivocal statement would be a warning to would-be killers, and no one could ever convince me that such a statement would not be a deterrent.

As a matter of fact, as we were told by several speakers who preceded me, there are no specific figures that can be advanced or enumerated to show that the death penalty is not a deterrent. Senator Robichaud gave us a flagrant example of two men facing each other, each armed with a gun, and the criminal asking the policeman, "If I were to shoot you, would I die?" The policeman replied, "Yes, you would," and the criminal dropped his gun. That, I think, is one of the most convincing arguments given as to the death penalty's being a deterrent.

The death penalty does not necessarily have to be inflicted by hanging. That is another argument which the abolitionists use all the time—that it is archaic, that it is cruel, and that sometimes it is slow. We do not have to use the hanging method all the time. We could use euthanasia, which is permitted in this case since the criminal would be condemned to death; we could use the method used in some states in the United States and accept the electric chair; we could give the killer an injection one night during his sleep. He would not know when or how he died, yet he would know that he was going to die because he would have been told beforehand that he was going to die at some time as a punishment for his crime.

Some honourable senators this morning quoted from some of the speeches they had delivered in this house, and far be it from me to saddle you with long excerpts of the speech on which I worked pretty hard to deliver in this chamber on December 12, 1967. At that time I quoted something that was most vivid, to show that the death penalty is a deterrent, and to show also the treatment to which some of our prison guards are subjected.

If we abolish the death penalty, I predict, honourable senators—and I am not given to predictions—that before long you will not be able to obtain the services of competent guards to look after our prisons.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Choquette: Last summer a taxi driver drove my wife and me to our cottage. The taxi driver inquired about some of my children. I asked, "Do you know them?" He said, "I went to lower school with them." I inquired, "What do you do now?" and he replied, "Just now I am driving a taxi, but before that I tried to be a prison guard. I did it for three months, but I got out of there quick because some prisoners were going to kill me. Those thugs were preparing to use razor blades to get rid of a guard they thought was unpopular and who had refused them favours. I got out of there. In some of those prisons you have murderers who are awaiting the result of a criminal appeal and they will kill for no reason at all, knowing full well that if they kill a guard they will not be hanged or executed."

Here is what I said at page 603 of the Debates of the Senate for 1967. I recall that Senator Cameron referred to it as "horrendous," and I think there are not 10 senators in this chamber today who were present at that time when I read this into the record. I said:

Recently, honourable senators, I read a book written by . . . Nathan F. Leopold, who spent 45 years in the penitentiary and who was a brilliant man and who expressed several opinions on the death penalty, on our prisons and the type of punishment people should have. I would like you to bear with me just to hear a description of a vicious attack perpetrated by five or six "cons" or inmates against prison guards. I quote this for two reasons: to show that the lives of prison guards are in jeopardy every minute they work in the prison; and to show you that the death penalty is and was a deterrent in this particular instance.

● (1550)

This is what the author had to say:

It was the regular keeper's day off and the relief keeper, only recently employed, while walking the gallery noticed five men in one cell. Instead of ordering the men who didn't belong there back to their own cells or reporting the matter to Mr. Stanton, the cell-house keeper, who would have handled the situation with a minimum of disturbance, the keeper dashed out of the cell house and returned with a captain. Together they went back up to the cell on Four Gallery and ordered the men out. They came out, all right, but they came out fighting. Two men grabbed the keeper and began beating him; the other three turned their attention to the captain. The latter was armed with a lead-tipped cane, which the prisoners wrested from him and used to beat him. Seeing the melee, two fellows who worked in the cell house, and who were friends of the five cons involved in the battle, dashed up the stairs and joined in.

The men had the keeper and the captain separated now. The captain was down on the gallery, and four guys were dancing up and down on his body. Three different times they lifted him over the gallery, as if to drop him to the flag 35 feet below. Most of the men in the cell house were out of their cells by now, lining the gallery and watching the carnage. Each time the men would lift the captain over the railing a shout would go up: "Don't drop him. Don't burn for the s.o.b.!" and each time they would lift him back and start kicking and beating him again.

The keeper, a small man, had been beaten so badly that his face looked like a pound and a half of raw hamburger. How he kept his feet I will never know. Now two of the cons pinioned his arms behind him and a third backed off a few feet, took a running start and hit him as hard as he could in the face. Back for a running start, and this time a kick in the groin. Face, groin, face, groin, blow, kick, blow, kick—he kept it up for minutes. I have never seen a man absorb half that much punishment—no, not a quarter. It was frightful. Eventually the three cons brought the keeper around the gallery to where the captain lay on the concrete. They propped him up against one of the metal plates separating two cells, and each of the seven cons brought up a blow from the floor, squarely in his face. His knees buckled, but still he didn't go down.

Then I commented:

That, honourable senators, is the type of treatment that some of the guards are subjected to, or can receive, every working hour of their lives in a prison where dangerous characters, cons, hooligans, and murderers of this kind are being harboured.

Honourable senators, that is about the extent of my intervention in this debate. I appeal to honourable senators to kill this bill, and I say to you that in so doing we would be carrying out the wishes of the majority of the Canadian people. This body would gain in stature were we to kill Bill C-84.

Hon. Joan Neiman: Honourable senators, my views on capital punishment have already been recorded in this chamber. My first speech on the subject was in support of the bill which extended the present law in respect of capital punishment for a further period of five years. Therefore, my intervention will be brief. I merely wish to reaffirm my beliefs, and to state that I consider it an honour to be a member of this chamber, and associated with a government which may shortly lead us one more painful step towards a better civilization.

I do not delude myself that the passage of this bill will ensure that there will be no change in the incidence of violence, much less a lessening of it, except only to the extent that the government will no longer be a participant. We shall only have the simple expedient of ending a couple of lives each year, as an example and deterrent to other would-be killers, taken away from us.

Those of us who wish to improve the quality of life, as Senator Hicks mentioned again this morning, will have a much more difficult challenge before us. We shall have to work much harder to identify the causes of violent and anti-social behaviour. As we pinpoint them, we, as concerned citizens, have to urge, even demand, that all levels of government, our schools from kindergarten on, our police forces and custodial forces, our learned law professors, criminologists, psychologists, psychiatrists, and even legislators, all of whom study the subject and write articles about it, will have to work together in a concerted effort to find solutions.

It is not going to be easy. It is much less demanding on us to sit back and read about crime in the newspapers, to say that the police should be given more and wider powers of arrest, to say that prison sentences should be longer, that we should execute a few killers, by whatever means, and then we are bound eventually to achieve a greater respect for, and a greater observance of, law and order. It simply does not work that way. It never has worked that way.

Senator McGrand recently introduced a motion here inviting the Senate to set up a committee to study the causes of crime. I share both his interest and his concern, although I do not happen to agree with the particular method he had in mind, for reasons that are not relevant to this discussion. I do believe, however, that the federal legislators should and do have a very significant role to play, both here and in their individual capacity as citizens, in trying to improve our methods of preventing crime, rather than simply passing laws which create new crimes and then imposing penalties to counteract them.

I do not know whether many honourable senators are aware that a series of articles has been commenced in one of the Toronto newspapers, a tabloid called the Toronto Sun, about a man who has just been convicted of being a dangerous sexual offender at the age of 25, after he had committed some really shocking murders. I have only had the opportunity to read the first two articles. I think there will be twelve. I would commend them to all honourable senators. I cannot vouch for the accuracy of the articles, or that all the facts are exactly as the writer reports them to be. But even after having read only two of them, I believe they show clearly that the causes of crime start very early in a child's life; that a child is conditioned by his parents, by the way he is treated in society, how he is treated in school. This man is now incarcerated, probably for the rest of his life—and he should be, according to all the evidence. However, I think this is the type of history that we have to look at and ask, "Where did we go wrong? Where along the way of a boy such as John Graham was did we go wrong? Where could we have helped him? Where today can we help other people?" If we study some of the case histories—and we have plenty of examples in our prisons to study—perhaps then we will be able to come up with more realistic and humane ways of treating criminals and preventing crime.

● (1600)

Many of the people who commit the most heinous crimes which cause revulsion in all of us are not, and have not been, liable to the death penalty. Their crimes and their trials generate the most lurid newspaper stories, which in turn create a demand in the public for capital punishment and greater police vigilance and greater crime prevention measures, but these are the very people who are not, and cannot be, sentenced to death under our present laws and, indeed, who could not be under our previous laws. We simply do not believe in executing a person who is insane or who was mentally ill at the time he killed.

Moreover, have you stopped to think about how many times we have executed the other kind of murderer to which Senator Choquette referred a few moments ago, the kind we consider the most reprehensible, the murderer who deliberately plans his crime? I am sure our police forces know of several people who are assassins for hire, but how many have been prosecuted for their alleged crimes? I do not think it has been for lack of trying to catch them, as far as the police are concerned, but simply because professional criminals have so many more resources at their disposal to protect themselves from their just punishment.

As has been said in this chamber more than once before, it is all too often the poor and disadvantaged who suffer, those who do not have the kind of support and assistance—and perhaps never did throughout their lives—that we would all want for ourselves and for our children, if we or they were to make mistakes. Those stumblebumps of society—they are the ones who become the focal point of our anger and retribution. Very often they are the ones who pay the ultimate penalty so that the rest of us can believe, for a few days, that things will surely then get better.

I tell you that justice today in Canada is not as even-handed as we would all want it to be. A good example of the disparities in the treatment of various accused, beginning with the laying of a charge which inevitably leads to inequities in sentencing and to bitterness in the person most adversely affected, and to disrespect for our judicial system, has been brought to light in a couple of recent cases very close to where I live in Brampton. Both were charges of trafficking in drugs.

The first one received a fair amount of publicity. It involved a 23-year old American woman, Miss Ford, who was arrested and charged with smuggling. She should have been charged with trafficking but the charge was reduced, at the instance of the Crown, so that she, in effect, received a three-year sentence rather than the mandatory minimum seven-year sentence. The reason the Crown gave for reducing the charge was unusual family circumstances. Miss Ford's father is a vice-president of Amtrak, which happens to be the United States national railway passenger service. Her fiancé's father is a general in the United States army. Those were the reasons given for reducing the charge, and on which Miss Ford got a sentence of only three years.

A week later another young lady was charged with trafficking, and her counsel tried to use the same argument on her behalf. She is a young lady of almost the same age with a four-year-old child and no previous record, but because the Crown did not choose to place a lesser charge she was convicted of trafficking, and the judge sentenced her to seven years in prison. The judge said he was absolutely bound by the mandatory provisions of the Narcotic Control Act.

Now, that is a matter we know something about, because it was hoped that the bill I introduced in this chamber about a year ago would have changed some of the penalties for trafficking in hashish and marihuana. As a result of the fact that that bill has not cleared the House of Commons or received royal assent, judges today are bound by a law which is quite harsh and unreasonable. But the fact still remains that there is discretion in the Crown to change the charge, and that is where the inequities arise.

I should really like the Minister of Justice to explain to us, if he can, the reasons for making a difference in this particular case. If what is reported in the paper is entirely accurate, I really do not feel there is a ground for two sentences to be so widely differentiated.

You know as I do, honourable senators, that there can be vast differences in how apparently similar offences, even homicide, can be treated. Although I believe that most people in our justice system act as they do for the best of reasons and in the best of faith, I am also sure that more than one person has been charged with manslaughter rather than murder, or the other way round, either because he had a most persuasive lawyer representing him or because he had a less skilled lawyer or no lawyer at all to represent him at that crucial time. Even under the proposed legislation such a difference would mean a difference in punishment of ten to fifteen years, or perhaps even a lifetime. I am glad that it will not mean a life.

Our laws of morality and justice are not perfect—perhaps they never will be, and perhaps that is only as it should be. I would feel depressed if I thought that any of our laws, and particularly our moral laws, were immutable. I am sure that the Lord Justices of England, who decided that a ten-year-old boy must be put to death for the theft of a few pence to serve as a warning to other youngsters who might be tempted to commit the same crime, felt that they were acting from the most righteous moral principles. Today those principles seem to us unbelievable, almost unreal. We must keep examining and re-evaluating the moral principles and the laws by which we govern ourselves. If one method or course of action has not been the best for the greatest number of us, then we must have the courage to change our course, and take a few risks along the way, if we have to.

Of course, there is risk in abolishing capital punishment entirely, but surely there is a greater risk in refusing to change when circumstances demand it, when the facts and events demonstrate that what we have been doing simply has failed to achieve the results we feel are essential to our way of life. If we refuse to act when we should, then we could all die; our civilization could die.

We are entitled to have misgivings when we embark on a new course, but I must say that the grim forebodings expressed by some honourable senators seem to be more fanciful than factual. I think that if we are too pessimistic in our attitudes we can only encourage uneasiness—an unwarranted uneasiness—in the public.

● (1610)

I know that statistics can be misleading, or unhelpful, at times, but facts remain facts. One fact is that the present bill provides for extremely long sentences, even lifetime sentences, for convicted murderers, and the periods after which they will be eligible for parole have been greatly extended. Another factor is that even under our present law the record for convicted murderers who have been let out on parole is extraordinarily good. Even those let out on temporary absence—and that sort of procedure has received a lot of adverse publicity because of certain unfortunate incidents that did not involve convicted murderers—have had an excellent record.

I would just like to read briefly from the Minutes of Proceedings of the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs of the other place for June 22, 1976, when one of the members of the committee was questioning the Solicitor General and his staff. At page 6967, in reply to a question as to the number of people who had committed crimes or misdemeanours while out on temporary absence, Mr. Therrien, the Commissioner of the Canadian Penitentiary Service, is reported as saying:

I have the figures for 1974, Mr. Chairman, where 275 individual murderers were released on 2,703 temporary-absence permits. Two inmates were late in returning; two inmates did not come back, but were later recaptured.

The following exchange then occurred:

AN HON. MEMBER: More than 2,000?

MR. WOOLLIAMS: None of them defaulted?

MR. THERRIEN: In 1974 there were four.

I stress that there were only four defaulters out of 2,703 temporary absences. That record, while not perfect, is just about as close to perfection as we could possibly expect.

Honourable senators, I know that we must be concerned about these matters, and that we are talking here only about the fate of convicted murderers. In spite of the statements that have been made to the effect that if we allow some of these murderers out on the street they will murder again, the fact is that this has not been the Canadian experience. Evidence was given by the Solicitor General at another hearing that, according to the best available data, the government knows of five murderers who were convicted of murder a second time.

Senator Asselin: It is too many.

Senator Neiman: Of course, it is too many. One killing is too many.

Senator Molson: That is hearsay evidence.

Senator Neiman: One of those five was out unlawfully, since he was not on parole at the time. Two others committed the first or second murder in the United States. That is all that the record shows. There are probably others that may not have been caught, but those are the best statistics available.

Another apprehension which has been expressed is that people who are in prison for a long period of time have nothing to lose by trying to escape, and killing a prison guard or other staff in the process. This again has not been the Canadian experience. I do not want to prolong this debate by reciting more figures, but I would be more than pleased to supply data along these lines to anyone who is interested.

I hope that honourable senators listened very carefully to Senator Argue's speech this morning, not only on the question of capital punishment but also on his view of the right and duty of the Senate to initiate legislation which it believes to be helpful to Canada. He was, of course, speaking specifically to the bill which he introduced in the Senate some time ago for the total abolition of the death penalty. I agree with him that we do ourselves a great disservice if we do not exercise the powers with which we are invested, and I have to admit that I was one of the delinquents who did not advance his bill, although I believed very strongly in it. My reason, and perhaps it was not a very good one, was that I believed this bill we are now considering was going to be introduced at any moment in the other house, and that it would probably serve little purpose to have the two bills dealt with simultaneously. Let me say, however, that I was speaking to one of our ministers, who has great interest in this bill, just a few days ago, and he mentioned that he wished the present bill had been introduced in the Senate in the first instance. I reminded him that we had one here, but it had not managed to get very far, a situation for which I, of course, must accept partial responsibility.

I do not believe it will be a sad day for Canada if Bill C-84 becomes law tomorrow, but it should be a sober reminder of our inability, so far, to make any real progress in the suppression of crime. It should also, above all, be a challenge to us to find new and better ways to eliminate violence in our society without doing violence ourselves.

I am very sorry that our late and beloved colleague, Senator Grattan O'Leary, is not with us. I can picture him standing very straight and proud, voting for this bill. I hope that his spirit will touch us all for a few minutes at about 11 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Hon. Edward M. Lawson: Honourable senators, I would like to make a few brief remarks about this piece of legislation.

As an independent member of this chamber I certainly intend to engage in a free vote tomorrow, uninfluenced by either side, and, with this end in view, one thing I attempted to do was to read as much as I could about the views of the abolitionists, because I want very badly to be persuaded to go in that direction. I also talked to as many people as I could to find out why they were so emotionally concerned, why there was this lack of confidence, why there was this feeling of insecurity and this great concern. Many of them said that they felt they had been betrayed when the government said no on the first occasion, and again on the second occasion, when they said, "We want a further five years as a trial period, and we will only hang those who are killers of police officers and prison guards." They did not do this; indeed it appears that they had no intention of doing it at that time. As a consequence, there is a great lack of confidence in the leadership of this country with regard to what is really happening, and it is in that state of mind that people read about the kind of thing that happened in Vancouver last week. Someone out on parole, or a pass, or whatever it was, who had previously been convicted of a sexual crime, is now alleged to have murdered a nine-year-old girl. There was also the horrible killing we had not many months ago in Vancouver known as "the crossbow killing." In this case two men were hired for $500 to carry out the assignment of killing a young boy of 17 years of age because he had squealed on someone; he had given information on them to the police. The two men concerned took him forcibly from his home after tricking him, took him down by the river, and on the way one of them came across a crossbow. They stripped him naked and thought it would be a different method of execution if they were to kill him with the crossbow. They were unaware, after they had completed this horrible act, that their phones were being tapped because they were suspected of being involved in drug crimes. While their phones were being tapped they were exchanging remarks to the effect of, "Wasn't that something, the way we killed him?" About how long he had lasted, about the way they had to shoot him and how many times they had to shoot him before he passed out—all for their $500. I read about these horrible things and I try to make a balanced judgment. When people responded the way they did, I asked, "What is it you really want? Is it revenge? Is it vengeance?" And the view seemed to be, "No, we want some system of law and order; we want some enforcement of law and order; and we want justice tempered with mercy." They could understand, when the emotion passed, that mercy was appropriate for some sick human being who engaged repeatedly in sex crimes, but they could not find any mercy in their hearts, nor can I, nor could they understand why in God's name we would keep alive the crossbow killers or people like that. They are people to whom life is so meaningless that for $500 they would go "waste"—in the jargon of the underworld—a 17-year-old boy.

● (1620)

Senator Flynn: That is the law at the present time. They were not condemned to death for that because the victim was not a prison guard or police officer.

Senator Lawson: I understand that, and that is the other concern I have. I have had a lot of association, as I have said before, with the police forces in British Columbia, and particularly in Vancouver. The other example which illustrates my concern involves, really, a comedy of errors in connection with the classic bank robbery we had last year in British Columbia. A banker and some of his staff arrived at the bank at 8.30 in the morning, and as they knocked on the door and went in they were followed by a couple of robbers. Immediately the telephone rang because there was an accomplice of the robbers in a telephone booth across the street. At 9 o'clock the manager arrived, accompanied by a couple of members of the staff, and as they were walking along they looked in the window and one of the staff members said, "Well, something doesn't look right because Mary Jane isn't smiling and she is always smiling," or words to that effect, and so they went to a telephone booth and telephoned the police. Five police cars arrived with horns blowing and bells ringing, and so on, whereupon the get-away car arrived at the front of the bank and there was an exchange of gunfire, the bandits outside jumped into the get-away car and drove off firing with automatic rifles. All the police cars gave chase, leaving the bank unattended with the robbers inside. Had they not panicked, the robbers could have taken a shopping basket, filled it with money and walked off down the street, but they did panic, attempted to drag off the assistant manager who managed to escape, and roared off at 80 miles an hour.

However, the whole incident became more involved. In the pursuit the burglars apparently knocked out four or five police cars. At one point an astute police officer commandeered a public bus and with it and his police car blockaded the road. He then set himself up with a shotgun, because he knew they had to pass that way. His plan worked perfectly. He lifted the shotgun, fired and missed—not only the robbers but the police car! Another police officer—and this is a true story, it was reported in the Vancouver Sun, and I read the police record on it—knew that they had to pass over a certain very narrow bridge, so he took his police car and parked it across the road so that they could not get by. He thereupon went under the bridge, where he sat with his rifle, and he was greatly surprised when they drove right on by, because one of the other policeman, who was on foot because his police car had been knocked out, saw this undamaged police car, climbed in and drove off.

As it turned out, when the second car was racing away a salesman, who was offended by somebody passing on the wrong side of the road at 80 miles an hour, waved his fist at them, and gave chase, but thank God they didn't blow his head off. He soon came to the conclusion that he was too busy to chase them any longer, and he decided to go to work. On the way he heard on his car radio that there was a robbery in progress, so he called the police, who managed to pick up the car because of the licence number, and the police chased them into a wooded area, brought in a helicopter and police dogs—and promptly lost them.

This great comedy of errors continued, and the following morning it was only by a fluke that two policemen in a police car—because all the other police cars were out of commission—spotted two men wet to the waist, because they had been walking in the bush. The officers ordered them to lie down on the ground, only to find that they had loaded guns and a stick of dynamite and so on, so in this manner they apprehended two of these people.

While this comedy of errors was going on, the report was that 76 rounds were fired in the chase and either four or five police cars were wiped out. Mercifully, nobody was killed. One policeman was cut across the thighs when the robbers pulled alongside and shot through the police car window; another was shot through the shoulder; and the headrest and the windshield were knocked out of the police car.

The reason I raise this comedy of errors is that in talking with the police—and as late as yesterday this was reported in one of the newspapers—it was indicated by police sergeants that more of this is going to happen and that policemen will not check or chase but will shoot. As Senator Asselin said this morning, sidewalk justice appears to be going to develop as a result of this. So, in dealing with the legislation, we have to concern ourselves with the total impact of what is going to happen.

[Senator Lawson.]

Senator Neiman mentioned changing the psychology of the police, their training and so on. For the only training they are going to need we should hire John Wayne to teach policemen to be quick drawers because that is the way things are going to be. That is the concern expressed by many policemen and senior police officers. I suggest that somebody responsible should be suggesting to police forces and police officers that they cool that kind of talk about the shoot-outs that are going to take place, because I am concerned that for every action there is a reaction and for every quick trigger-fingered policeman there is going to be a quick trigger-fingered burglar or bandit with less concern or less care.

In talking to the people I have talked to I have asked, "What about the peace and security bill?" And they have replied, "We don't want a peace and security bill; we want peace of mind." They want an assurance that something is going to be done and that this situation is going to be dealt with.

The other concern is the question of deterrent. Is capital punishment a deterrent? One thing is certain, if we accept the statistics regarding second-time murderers, the death penalty would have been a deterrent and at least five good citizens would have continued to enjoy a normal life.

In British Columbia we had an experience that perhaps reinforces the point made by Senator Manning this morning when he talked about parking tickets and speeding tickets. I know, as do many of us from British Columbia, that for a period of time driving habits in British Columbia were very, very bad. There was no concern about the cost because it was paid for in the insurance, and there was no concern about the deductible. You were risking your life at every intersection; you had people running lights, crashing automobiles and so on. I am not making a case for the change of government and the change of policy which resulted in the 300 per cent increase in premiums or the minimum deductible of $250, but it was mind-boggling to see a whole community, a whole province change its driving habits overnight. The tripling of the premium and the increase in the deductible virtually changed people's driving habits overnight, so cost was a deterrent. Thus I find myself leaning to the view of Senator Manning that this type of penalty for these kinds of crimes would be a deterrent.

I think there cannot just be a great sigh of relief that it has passed the other house or that it may pass this house, and that that is the end of the matter, because I really think that it is only the beginning and that we have to concern ourselves with the impact of the legislation. I am impressed by the view expressed that we here do not have the same role as the members of the other place. We have the responsibility to express the views of the public, and the majority view seems to be for the retention of capital punishment. We also have to give serious consideration to the peace of mind—not just peace and security, but the peace of mind of the ordinary citizen who desperately wants some strong, decisive, positive leadership.

Having given consideration to all these matters, honourable senators, I am forced to the conclusion that, exercising my independent role in this chamber and my independent judgment, I am going to vote against the bill.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

● (1630)

[Translation]

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I will vote for Bill C-84 on two general grounds, the first being that I am fundamentally an abolitionist; the second, which is of minor importance, is that I want to put an end to a situation which has lasted for almost 14 years, surely since 1967, and which I consider unacceptable, even awful.

I said that in principle I am an abolitionist. I am without doubt, as is Senator Deschatelets, distressed at certain times. There are some cases where I would not be unhappy if the death penalty was carried out; but where do we draw the line? I do not think we can. It is much too difficult.

I am for the abolition of the death penalty because it is final and irrevocable and because rehabilitation, where it is possible, becomes inapplicable. It is not always easy to determine that when the sentence is passed—and a miscarriage of justice cannot be corrected. I know that such cases are infrequent, but it can happen, and I do not want to take a chance. As far as rehabilitation is concerned, I agree that it seems sometimes most unlikely to be successful but, just in case, I do not want to take a chance.

On the other hand, I will say this: I respect very much the views of the retentionists. It was not easy for me to reach those conclusions and to support this bill. I respect the views of the retentionists, because I have often noted that the retentionists and the abolitionists often use the same arguments to reach different conclusions. The close vote in the House of Commons shows that the question is not easy but extremely complicated.

For years many people in responsible positions, and especially our present Prime Minister and Solicitor General, not only have been advocating the abolition of capital punishment but have refused to enforce the existing legislation which provides for it; in spite of all that, in spite of the fact that no criminal condemned to death has been executed over the past 14 years, there was the close contest in the House of Commons where the vote went 133 for abolition, and 125 against on second reading, a majority of 8; 131 for and 124 against on third reading, a majority of 7. A change of 4 votes in either case and the bill would have been defeated.

Therefore, nobody can say for sure whether it is the abolitionist or the retentionist who is right. The results obtained in the House of Commons are far from convincing. However, the bill is now before us, and unless my assessment of the way honourable senators will vote is all wrong, I think that capital punishment will be removed from the Criminal Code; it will still be applied, however, under the National Defence Act.

I have explained why I support this bill: I am an abolitionist. Another reason is that I do not want the situation which has prevailed for the past 14 years, and especially since 1967, to continue. I consider that the government's approach to the problem of capital punishment is highly objectionable—even illegal. Indeed, the government has acted illegally.

Honourable senators, surely you remember that the Criminal Code was amended in 1960 to create a distinction between capital and non-capital murder.

I think that there was some logic behind this distinction—capital murder and non-capital or unpremeditated murder. Premeditated murder called for the death penalty, by hanging, while the other kinds called for life imprisonment.

The last execution in Canada was in 1962, some two or three years after the passing of this amendment to the Criminal Code. From 1962 to this date, even though the Criminal Code provided for the death penalty in the case of capital murder, no murderer has been executed, despite the sentences passed by the courts, despite in fact, the mandatory sentence that the judge who presided at the trial was more or less forced to pass when the accused was convicted of capital murder.

In 1967 we were presented with a bill which asked for a five-year experiment on a new formula; capital and non-capital murder no longer existed. The death penalty applied only in the case of the murder of policemen and prison guards. We were told: "You will try this for five years." At that time, because I considered that the bill was a first step towards abolition of the death penalty and that this was the implicit if not explicit principle underlying the bill, I supported it. But there again the government systematically refused to apply the law, to allow justice to take its course, by commuting all death sentences. I challenge anyone to come forward and tell me that the government acted selectively. The Prime Minister said: "We consider each case on its own merits." To this I replied: "This is not true; you are misleading the public because it is not true that you can commute all of the sentences and say that you are resorting to the commutation prerogatives in a selective way".

In 1972, after the so-called trial period, the government had the nerve to introduce a bill providing for a five-year extension of a trial period which was never applied. He said: "We shall retain the death penalty for the murder of prison guards and police officers. There shall be a five-year extension to this trial period". Could there be any worse insult to Parliament or to the population, when the legislation that we had to approve in 1967 was not applied even once? At that time I voted against the bill in the hope that once we were back to the old system the government would have the guts to bring forward a clear and specific measure that would truly reflect its policy and intentions. We have had to wait until now. It has been said that the Prime Minister has shown courage and leadership in this case. Well, that was long-term courage, a slow-moving courage. That was neither vigorous nor quick-acting courage. He waited until now. He introduced this bill, after having endorsed the Solicitor General, who told us brutally on many occasions: "As far as I am concerned, I shall not apply the law and all sentences will be commuted."

That is precisely the stand taken by the Solicitor General of Canada. Did he want to convince the people that the death penalty should be abolished? Perhaps. But the fact remains that if such were the case he was going against the law. The government was giving a bad example by refusing to enforce an act which was the law of the land.

It was time a bill was brought before Parliament to legalize the present situation. But the way the government handled it did not command respect. I do not share the admiration of Senator Argue or Senator Robichaud for the leadership of the Right Hon. Mr. Trudeau in the matter.

I read the speech he made in the House of Commons and, frankly, I found it in part almost insulting, insulting for the abolitionists whose views I respect. I quote from page 14500—

Senator Langlois: The retentionists.

Senator Flynn: The retentionists, yes. I would have made the correction on the blues, I trust.

Senator Langlois: Although I am one of them.

Senator Flynn: On page 14500, on June 15, 1976. I quote the English version. That part of his speech he delivered in English actually.

● (1640)

[English]

At this moment, eleven men are being held in Canadian prisons under sentence of death for the murder of policemen or prison officials. Some have exhausted their rights of appeal. Others have not. Therefore, while it is impossible to pre-judge how cabinet will treat any individual case when the time comes to decide whether to invoke the royal prerogative—

That is rather amusing, in view of the record of the government.

—of mercy and commute a death sentence to life imprisonment, it is inevitable that the defeat of this bill would eventually place the hangman's noose around some person's neck. To make that quite clear: if this bill is defeated, some people will certainly hang. While members are free to vote as they wish, those who vote against the bill, for whatever reason, cannot escape their personal share of responsibility for the hangings which will take place if the bill is defeated.

If I were an abolitionist, I certainly would not let Mr. Trudeau get away with that.

[Translation]

In any event, I wanted to emphasize the inconsistency of Mr. Trudeau's argument. When a man has systematically refused to enforce the existing law and then tells us: "If you retain the existing law, if this bill is defeated, I shall enforce the law and you will be responsible for it," this is quite wrong. As far as I am concerned, I find this attitude an insult to the intelligence of retentionists and Parliament. Besides, I find that Mr. Trudeau in his speech exerted very strong pressure on members of his party to bring them round to his own point of view and have them vote for the bill.

I am an abolitionist, but I don't like to have this bill referred to us after such a close vote, after events such as those I referred to, after a determined policy on the part of the government not to enforce the law and not to allow capital punishment to be carried out. I don't like to have it referred to us after such a close vote which does not convince us that the House of Commons is in favour of the abolition of capital punishment.

[Senator Flynn.]

Further, I readily accept Mr. Allmand's statement reported to us by the government leader. Yet, considering Mr. Allmand's previous statements that he would not allow capital punishment to be carried out, what he said yesterday afternoon after the bill passed third reading in the House of Commons, that he had already commuted the sentences, is quite consistent with the position he has always taken. The fact that he also took for granted that the Senate would pass this bill without any difficulty is very much in keeping with his views and previous conduct.

Senator Denis: Otherwise, he would resign.

Senator Flynn: Of course, as far as he is concerned, he has been spared capital punishment by the passage of the bill. He has, as it were, saved his neck.

Having said that, this bill will pass, I am sure. But, I hope the government will now seek an alternative to capital punishment. I have already said that I did not think that capital punishment was a deterrent. In this regard I changed my mind quite a bit. This was my thinking: if the death penalty is not a deterrent, imprisonment is certainly not one either. But, on the other hand, if the death penalty is a barbaric punishment, life imprisonment is just as barbaric.

Senator Bourget: Even more.

Senator Flynn: Possibly, much more. What is the solution then? I say that the government, Parliament, will have to direct its efforts towards that purpose. Let us abolish capital punishment, but let us consider the problem deriving from the crime of murder. Murderers have to be punished, just like anyone else, and if the death penalty is not a deterrent, well, let us find something which is going to be a deterrent. We should have a deterrent penalty for murder, just as for other crimes. On the other hand, I would not like somebody to tell me tomorrow: "Well, you have abolished the death penalty because it was too cruel. You will have now to abolish all punishments, because they are too cruel." Then, I think the efforts of the government, of Parliament, should be directed towards correction.

So I shall vote for the bill with the reservations I have expressed, but I shall tell you one thing: if the bill had the effect of exempting from capital punishment a government which is as inept in this regard as this government, I think I would vote against it.

Senator Bourget: That is a good speech for retention you just made.

Hon. Azellus Denis: Honourable senators, just a word on the subject. I know that all of us are opposed to murder, that all of us are in favour of the protection of society. This is a very serious problem, a matter of life or death for criminals or the accused, and for the victims. I maintain quite humbly or candidly that we are not all qualified to decide upon such important or serious things without having the advice of a specialist.

I trust neither the opinion of Senator Deschatelets nor that of Senator Denis. And in such cases, when it is a matter of life or death, it is our duty to consult those who one way or another can enlighten us as a result of their studies, their experience, their occupation, their trade or the contacts they had with people who could tell us or determine whether the death penalty is a deterrent. In addition, if the death penalty were a deterrent, and if it were sufficient, as Senator Bourget said, to save the life of an innocent, I would be in favour of the death penalty. The Leader of the Opposition said that judicial errors are very rare. Of course they are because overwhelming evidence is required to convict somebody, for that person may appeal before all justice courts, even the Supreme Court. He also has some protection, following the arguments put forward by lawyers, etc. In Canada, there are no such errors on record. But there were some legislative errors. The Solicitor General himself admitted that four innocent Canadians were killed after the release of convicted murderers sentenced to death. Therefore, if the same thing were to happen again in ten years, if we were to release another murderer, I wonder if we would not be a little responsible for the death of an innocent man slain by a previously convicted murderer out on parole.

So how do we get the advice and consultations that Senators Deschatelets or Denis say we should have before deciding upon such a crucial issue? I have here the report produced by the joint committee of the Senate and the House of Commons in 1956, which committee conducted a very sound study on that matter. Witnesses were heard from everywhere in Canada. All provincial attorneys general, except Saskatchewan's, and police forces said that we must retain capital punishment. There was even an article included in the report that said that we must consider the will of the majority of Canadians who stated at that time, as they do today, that capital punishment should be retained.

There are people who have conducted studies, people who should be consulted before we reach such an important decision.

Our police forces are unanimously in favour of retention. They are always with criminals, they live with them, discuss with them and follow them. There are also the prison guards. I wonder if Senator Deschatelets has a very sound knowledge of the revision process. I wonder why he did not consult a padre, for instance. He is the one who hears criminals in confession and the honourable senator would have some indication whether capital punishment has a deterrent effect.

Therefore, not being experts, we have consulted those who study this question and approached those who are in a position to know the problem and say that we must retain capital punishment. I agree with them and I will vote against this bill.

● (1650)

[English]

Hon. A. Hamilton McDonald: Honourable senators, I am hesitant to take part in this debate for one reason, and one reason only, that being that it will be impossible for me to be here tomorrow when the vote is taken. However, if I were here I would vote against this bill.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator McDonald: I came to the conclusion, not in the last few months or few years but many years ago, that there is a small segment of our society who cannot be rehabilitated. I think that is true of societies around the world. Bearing in mind the atrocities committed by some people, the hope of rehabilitating the perpetrators of such atrocities went out the window long ago. I have in mind the case brought to our attention by Senator Lawson in what was referred to as the Santa Claus murders in Montreal. I am shocked when I think that the lives of individuals capable of committing such crimes have been spared.

I would like to relate an incident that took place in my own community just a few weeks ago. Seven or eight young men escaped from a penal institution in Manitoba, and two of them showed up in my home town about 2.30 in the morning and went to the home of a former employee of mine. They burst into the house when the door was answered. Brandishing a baseball bat, they demanded money and an automobile. They were persuaded to take a motorcycle instead, and after beating hell out of the husband and wife with the baseball bat they took off on the motorcycle with the money. They drove a few miles out of town to a farm property operated by a young man and his wife. The young man's parents lived in the old farm house, and the young farmer lived with his wife and their children in a new house on the property. The two escapees arrived at this homestead at about 3.30 in the morning, and the young farmer noticed a light in his parents' home, which he found to be unusual at this hour. So he grabbed an old rifle in the kitchen and walked over to his parents' home, where he was shot with his own rifle. His 78-year old mother had been raped.

I do not believe it is possible for people of that mentality to be rehabilitated. I am sorry to say this, but I believe there is a small segment in our society who are not capable of being rehabilitated. I believe that in all justice, both to them and to society in general, they are better removed from society. Whether they are removed by hanging or by some other method, it matters not. I sometimes think that hanging is too good for some of the people I have in mind.

● (1700)

It has been said in this debate that the state cannot create life, so it ought not to take life away. I ask you, then: Why have we got young men at this very moment standing in Montreal armed to the teeth to defend the athletes of the world and the general public? I presume the nation expects those young men to use those rifles if need be. If the state has not the right to take a life, why do we have members of the armed forces? Why are we now considering the purchase of a long-range patrol aircraft whose job it will be to search and to kill? Why are we now in the process of purchasing 128 Leopard tanks? What is the purpose of those tanks? It is hoped that their presence will be a deterrent to war. But if war breaks out the purpose of those tanks will be to kill. The main purpose of the armed forces is not to fight a war. Their main purpose is to prevent a war—and thank God they have been successful at it for the last thirty odd years. But if war breaks out their duty and their responsibility will be to search out and kill the enemy.

There must have been millions of innocent, honest, sincere, good people killed in wartime. I regret that. I regret it much more than taking the life of some scoundrel who has raped and murdered and caused havoc, in some instances over and over again. There are instances when people have been incarcerated for murder and have murdered twice in the penal institution after being incarcerated there. I think it would have been better to have removed that type of individual from society.

I live today in a province—and I am ashamed to say it—where the capital city has the highest crime rate of any city in Canada. Today we have people living in the capital city of my province who are almost as fearful for their lives as people who live in some communities of that great country to the south of us. I despise a society where people buy a gun to protect themselves. But this is the situation in many parts of the world today, and it is developing in our own country.

I do not think anyone could prove to an abolitionist that retention of the death penalty is a deterrent. But no one can prove to me that it is not. Capital punishment is at least a deterrent to the individual who suffers it, in that he will never commit a crime again.

I can only conclude by saying that I believe we are talking of only a very small segment of our society. What would it be? You could probably count on one hand the number of people who would be removed from society in a year. I believe society deserves that protection, and I believe that you and I, as representatives of the public, have a duty to see that Canadians are given the protection they cry out for today. Apparently, according to a Gallup poll, 78 per cent of our population is in favour of retaining capital punishment. I would say that in my province it is 98 per cent. I would be doing less than my duty, despite the fact that I cannot vote, which I regret very much—

Senator Choquette: Can't you pair with somebody?

Senator McDonald: I hope I can. It is my own conviction that we should retain the death penalty, and it is the conviction of the vast majority of the people of my province.

Hon. Raymond J. Perrault: Honourable senators, we have heard this afternoon eloquent speeches by distinguished members of this chamber, for perhaps no issues strike such emotional depths in mankind as the subjects of capital punishment, murder and death.

All of us have listened with utter abhorrence to the details of crimes which have been committed by the "mad dog" killers in our society. I join in the belief that society has not been protected well enough to this time against those so-called "mad dogs" who prey upon the people of Canada in cities and towns and villages across our nation.

Society wants to strike back, to gain vengeance. The first instinct of a human being who has been injured, or who has suffered a grievance or a wrong, is to lash out and strike back, to maim in return, to use physical violence. But can it be that when we support the concept of capital punishment we are saying to the mad dogs in society, "Our only and best recourse is to destroy you"? Yet, after a life has been taken in return, can we really go back to our homes in the belief that we have truly solved the problem of violence by destroying these people who prey on innocent Canadian men, women and children? Surely that is an understandable but overly-simplistic position and response to violence in the kind of society in which we live.

[Senator McDonald.]

In their hearts many senators, whether or not they support or oppose this bill, know that merely taking a life for a life is not an adequate response to violence and it does not provide the kind of protection our citizens must have. What have we achieved to the present time through our penal system? We have achieved a recidivist rate of 80 per cent; 80 per cent of those who go to prison come out to perpetrate more crime and violence in society. A monumental failure. In any other sector of human endeavour, that 80 per cent would be regarded as an utter, abject, colossal failure rate. Our penal system is not working, and what have we achieved through capital punishment?

Senator Beaubien: We haven't got it.

Senator Perrault: I am talking, honourable senators, about all of the evidence available to us in those jurisdictions where capital punishment exists, and of the evidence available to us when it was in force, to a greater degree than we have it at the present time in Canada.

We talk about crimes committed against individuals in Canada. My good colleague Senator McDonald told us of gruesome incidents in his home province, and Senator Lawson described appalling criminal acts in his and my home area. I share with him the sense of outrage and dismay that those kinds of incidents could happen in our society.

● (1710)

I have listened to those people who cite scripture in support of capital punishment—"an eye for an eye"; "a death for a death"; "a life for a life". The State of Israel, which is one of the ancient seats of our Judeo-Christian heritage, is wracked every day with terrorist murders and violence and the taking of life on a gruesome scale. The State of Israel is the custodian of the Judaic tradition in this world, and despite every terrorist provocation in Israel there is no death penalty, and no demand for its establishment. The leaders of Israel believe that the introduction of capital punishment in their nation would only breed more violence, precisely the kind of violence that we are striving to reduce in our own democratic state.

Can anyone seriously suggest that the State of Israel has not had, within its borders, crime equal to the horrible incidents that we have heard of this afternoon? Perhaps it requires a very enlightened and mature form of democracy for its citizens and its government to resist giving way to the basic animal instinct of revenge and blood retribution, and for those citizens and their leaders to say, "Despite the provocation let us see what we can do to meet the problem of crime and violence in its totality." The decision regarding this measure is not an easy one because there are persuasive arguments and there are good men and women on both sides of this particular issue.

Senator Grosart: That is better.

Senator Flynn: You are improving.

Senator Perrault: Perhaps honourable senators think that this is a humorous debate. I do not share that belief.

Senator Flynn: No, no.

Senator Perrault: If the Deputy Leader of the Opposition wants to contribute constructively, we shall all welcome his remarks.

I am gratified that his new leader, who aspires to be Prime Minister of Canada, stood in his place in the other chamber and voted for this particular measure. I give him full credit—Mr. Joseph Clark of Rocky Mountain, Alberta.

Senator Grosart: So do I. You are not immune from interruption.

Senator Perrault: No, I am not immune from interruption but I listen with respect to your speeches and I shall continue to do so.

Senator Grosart: You have interrupted and I hope you continue to do so.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, there are many sincerely held views. What are some of those views? On one side the first argument is that capital punishment is a much greater deterrent than any other form of punishment, because of the built-in fear of the loss of life and, therefore, its abolition would result in the increase of murder. That argument has been advanced and with great sincerity.

It has been said that capital punishment is a just and appropriate one for murder since it is commensurate with the gravity of the offence and it indicates society's abhorrence of taking life.

I want to be fair in setting forth these arguments. As well, the view is advanced that the law should not ignore the public demand for retribution, and that there is general support for the death penalty on the part of those whose work involves regular contacts with the criminal element; that is, the police and prison personnel. It has been said that capital punishment has at least one deterrent—a form of self defence—for the protection of society from the risk of a second offence by the same criminal.

Those are the basic arguments which have been set forth in support of this bill. I think it very significant, however, that on the other hand the opponents of capital punishment include, in this case, the Government of Canada and the leaders of all our major political parties. Yes, the leaders of the major parties in this country support this bill. They can read the public opinion polls. They know the minds of the Canadian people.

The arguments these leaders support are these: The deterrent effect of the death penalty has not been demonstrated, and research in this area has been inconclusive. All available information appears to confirm that the absence of capital punishment has not resulted in a notable increase in murder and other offences previously punishable by death, but that certain abolitionist states have experienced a decrease in crime rates, which is a fact.

Another viewpoint is that the state should set an example of recognizing the sanctity of human life and the absolute wrongness of killing.

Perhaps the final principal argument is that the existence of the death penalty renders criminal justice uncertain and in some cases inequitable because of the reluctance of jurors to inflict the penalty.

It is significant that the statistics indicate that generally those whom we have hanged throughout the history of Canada have had limited economic means or have had very difficult social and educational backgrounds.

Senator Choquette: Poor misunderstood boys.

Senator Perrault: Most were poor and misunderstood; others were not. That is correct. Your observation has some merit.

Certainly, the list of supportive arguments which I have gone through is not exhaustive but I think that one of the points of the government's abolitionist position, which has not received the attention it merits, is that at this time we are engaged in a different kind of debate on capital punishment. This is not a matter of this government's asking Parliament to support total abolition, without any change in parole regulations, with the convicted person going to jail and being released within five or six years, the criminal being let off early and, as some people suggest, almost with the approbation of the state.

Bill C-84 is part of a total package which is being introduced by the government to combat crime, in all its forms, in many, many different areas. Bill C-84 is part of a general offensive against violence in society, against crime, against killers.

There are now significant alternatives to capital punishment. These take the form of life imprisonment with long mandatory terms of incarceration. It should be underlined that these mandatory terms are longer, on the average, than the time so far served by convicted murderers who had their death sentences commuted between January 1961 and January 1968.

I want to say something about commutation. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition told the chamber this afternoon about the record of this government in the area of commutations, suggesting there was some illegality about the process. Surely, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition is aware of the actions of the government in studying every case on its merits, on a case-by-case basis before commutation is granted.

Senator Choquette: They are all good.

Senator Perrault: Commutation is a legal action. There is nothing illegal about it. I have the figures relating to commutations during the term of the last Conservative Government in Canada. The honourable senator occupied a distinguished position in that government.

Senator Flynn: For six months.

Senator Perrault: Well, a distinguished six months, senator.

In 1958, of the 21 death sentences, the government commuted 14. In 1959, 13 out of 15 were commuted. Were those commutations illegal? Of course not. The right honourable leader of your party in the other chamber—

Senator Grosart: Diefenbaker.

Senator Perrault: —was passionately supportive of the idea of commutation. And no one suggested that the act was illegal. I am suggesting to the Leader of the Opposition in this chamber that the government which followed the last Progressive Conservative Government in Canada followed the legal tradition which was established by that government.

Senator Flynn: May I put a question?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senator, I would prefer it if at the end of my remarks you would direct your questions to me. I may not be able to enlighten you.

[Senator Choquette.]

Senator Flynn: You probably could but you wouldn't.

Senator Perrault: Between January 1961 and January 1968, the 28 individuals serving death-commuted sentences had spent an average time of 12 years in a penitentiary prior to their release.

• (1720)

For those who were paroled between January 1968, and September 30, 1974, the average time served rose to 13.35 years. And we are talking in this bill about the awesome prospect of life imprisonment. Mandatory terms have been set down as 25 years for first degree murder, and 10 to 25 years for second degree murder and, although these terms will be subject to review by jurors after 15 years, the seriousness of the offence will lead those who are responsible for the release of convicted murderers to exercise great caution in making those decisions.

A greater certainty of conviction, it is felt, will also be ensured with the abolition of capital punishment, for jurors have often been loath to inflict the death penalty. Eventual release for convicted murderers will mean parole supervision for their entire lifetime, and all that that entails if they commit subsequent offences.

Reference was made earlier in this debate by Senator Lawson to the vicious way certain killers go out and murder again and again. Well, let us look at the statistics. Honourable senators deserve some facts on this particular matter before they vote. Statistics provided by the National Parole Service show that between January 1920 and September 1974, a total of 182 persons who had a death sentence commuted were granted parole—182 in the period from 1920 to 1974. Only 14 of those—14 out of 182—had their parole revoked for not adhering to parole conditions; and only nine persons forfeited their parole on conviction for an indictable offence. Only four people convicted of murder by Canadian courts were convicted of murder a second time between 1920 and the end of 1974.

Senator Flynn: Those executed could hardly do that.

Senator Perrault: Generally, therefore, murderers are not repeaters, and the retentionists' position which claims that capital punishment rids society of would-be second murderers is not supported by statistics.

Senator McIlraith: Would the leader permit a question about those statistics?

Senator Asselin: At the end of his speech.

Senator McIlraith: The statistics the leader is quoting are those of the National Parole Board, and they relate to prisoners released on parole. They do not, I believe, include prisoners released on temporary absence by the penitentiary authorities. Has he the statistics on the latter group of prisoners, and, if he has, will he give them?

Senator Perrault: I will attempt to obtain those figures, if they are available, and present them to the chamber.

Honourable senators, without question, it is the duty of the state to protect its citizens against the effects of crime, particularly violent crime. Rising crime rates have brought home to Canadians a need for changes in the criminal law and changes in the administration of criminal justice. The senators who have spoken in this debate have reflected very accurately, I think, the concern being felt across this country. Society must be protected more adequately.

As I said, Bill C-84 is before us because of the need to fight crime in Canadian society and to meet the public's need for a greater measure of protection. But again this is not an isolated debate on capital punishment itself. This is part of a general package, and there will be companion legislation to deal with all aspects of crime.

Is capital punishment an effective deterrent against murder? Studies in Canada and in the United States and elsewhere show that capital punishment—and again it is necessary to separate emotion, which is understandable on this issue, from fact—does not have any perceptible effect on the murder rate. As a matter of fact, as honourable senators are aware, most murders involve family members—relatives or wives and husbands—and the main season for murders is around Christmastime when families get together.

In a society with a high regard for the dignity of the individual, the use of the death penalty, despite enormous provocation—not only enormous but horrible, sickening provocation—must be viewed as not acceptable. The problems and conflicts of society cannot be resolved by resorting to violence.

I realize that there are contradictory but sincere views held in Parliament and in the country on the question of capital punishment, but the bill before us gives an alternative to those who regard the death penalty as the only answer. The proposed sentencing provisions for convicted murderers, which I have given you, is a new factor of really great and fundamental importance. The proposal is to deal firmly and effectively with convicted murderers by imposing long, mandatory periods of imprisonment to be served before the offender becomes eligible for parole.

Surely it is our duty as legislators to promote legislation which provides the Canadian public with maximum protection from all crimes, not only murder. Other forms of violence are considerably greater in number than the ultimate crime. In the context of this obligation, we have to ask ourselves this question: Should we give high priority to the rational dimensions of the issue, although we are always aware of the moral questions and moral beliefs involved which have to have a place in any debate on such a complex issue?

We endeavour in this chamber and in Parliament to make essentially rational decisions that are preferably based on evidence, and that are always in the public interest. We pride ourselves on the rational process of going through statistics and economic reports, some of which are better than others; but, generally, in Parliament we try to make our judgments on a rational basis and we try to keep emotion out of the decision-making process as much as possible.

There has been ample opportunity in recent years to study research findings and data on the subject of the death penalty. The findings, frankly, have been inconclusive, as some senators have pointed out. This means, essentially, that there is no definitive study in the Canadian experience, or elsewhere, that indicates there is absolute proof, or even a preponderance of evidence, to support capital punishment as a deterrent to the ultimate crime of murder. It cannot, therefore, be advocated as the definitive, or even as a reasonable, solution for what more and more thinking Canadians agree is the focus of our concern in this area—that is, the protection of the Canadian public.

If such evidence existed and if we could be enlightened by proof that, by executing murderers, murder and crime generally would be significantly reduced or discouraged in the future, I think most of us—and I am one of them—would put the public interest above personal considerations and would support the scientific findings. I would find myself in support of retention under those circumstances. But that is not the present situation.

Persons engaged in research in this field are themselves baffled by the complexity of the issue, by the numerous variables, and by the difficulty of identifying motivation and of prescribing modification in criminal behaviour. I should like to quote from a well-known Harvard University study, the Wilson Study. Professor James Q. Wilson spent several years independently studying this subject. The following are the conclusions the professor came to:

Three things can be said about recent attempts to measure the deterrent effect of capital punishment:

1. There is virtually no serious study that indicates that the death penalty is a deterrent above and beyond imprisonment;
2. None of these studies is sufficiently rigorous to prove beyond dispute the absence of deterrent; and
3. It is most unlikely we shall ever have a study that settles the matter one way or another, for the obstacles in the way of a conclusive study are probably insuperable.

• (1730)

Another American scholar in the field warns:

Policy suggestions based on existing evidence can only be made with a clear recognition of the inaccuracy of this evidence.

If expert studies in any area cannot produce conclusive results, can government be expected to do so?

If scientific research cannot prove that capital punishment can and will deter would-be murderers, government certainly cannot guarantee that execution by the state will enhance the protection of the citizen from the crime of murder. While the public is concerned about violent crime, and while this concern leads many to regard the death penalty as a "cure-all" for the ultimate act of violence, the government has concluded that there is no scientific or definitive evidence to support this "cure-all" view, which is the easiest view to accept from a human and emotional standpoint, and which we, as human beings, find ourselves continually involved with.

This lack of convincing proof is one of the reasons for Bill C-84, which proposes a new, more efficient approach to the disposition of convicted murderers. Essentially, the legislation must be viewed as a new approach to deterrence, which, after all, is the fundamental goal of criminal law. The establishment of a system of justice in which there is a greater probability of detection and apprehension is the first step towards a more efficient deterrence of crime. This, of course, is largely dependent upon the resources of our police forces, although it can be argued that the community should also be encouraged to participate in this endeavour. However, the certainty of conviction is an area in which legislators can make a significant contribution.

Prior to 1962, capital murder had the lowest conviction rate of all violent offences in this country. One possible reason for this is that many juries were influenced by the fear of inflicting death by rendering a verdict of guilty. Referring to the British experience, Professor James Q. Wilson of Harvard, whom I have already quoted, noted that the number of murderers found insane by the courts decreased dramatically after the death penalty was abolished in Great Britain in 1965. Obviously, this cannot mean that there were fewer insane people in Great Britain after 1965. What can be inferred, however, is that the verdict of insanity must have been used to protect the accused from execution. At least, that is a logical presumption. Clearly the abolition of capital punishment will remove the hesitation and reluctance formerly experienced by juries, and will encourage, perhaps, a more consistent application of the law.

This increased certainty of conviction should contribute significantly to deterrence. The person who premeditates a murder will not be able to gamble on a manslaughter conviction, for I do not believe that juries will hesitate in deciding on the implementation of the proposed penalty for first degree murder contained in Bill C-84.

In addition to juries, there are other elements that can bring about unequal justice in implementing the ultimate penalty. I am referring to the human variables involved in police investigations, in the crown attorney's outlook and other factors over which Parliament has no control. We must also bear in mind the financial resources of the accused with regard to fighting effectively in the courts to save his life. Can we assume that all the components of our criminal justice system are ideal, or what they should be; that the law is always applied uniformly from case to case by dispassionate judges and juries, by perfectly fair counsel for the Crown, by truthful witnesses and by highly skilled defence lawyers? Can we be sure that there is equal justice for rich and poor in the matter of entering a defence?

Senator Flynn: What about legal aid?

Senator Perrault: Although I believe our system to be good and, generally, equitable, perhaps some senators will agree with me that we cannot consider it perfect, and in the light of this we cannot take the chance that certain discriminatory standards could result from the irreversible act of execution.

What we can say factually about the Canadian experience with respect to the deterrent value of capital punishment is that during the three decades prior to 1960 the number of persons convicted of capital murder, and therefore subject to capital punishment, remained fairly constant at the rate of about 200 per decade. Surely this fact must cause us to reflect momentarily, for it clearly indicates that punishment by execution did not decrease the rate of capital murder over a 30-year period. If one were to study this period on a case-by-case basis within the context of the conviction rates that I have already cited for murder, manslaughter, attempted murder, shooting and wounding, and if one were to take into account the reluctance of juries, as well as the relatively constant number of capital murder convictions per decade, I believe one could not conclude decisively, one way or the other, whether the death penalty served as a deterrent during those 30 years.

If we look at the situation after the suspension of capital punishment—that is, after 1962—the evidence does not show that such suspension has caused an increase in the homicide rate. One of the most distinguished educators in this country, Professor Fattah, Chairman of the Criminology Department of Simon Fraser University, one of our Canadian institutions of learning, in 1972 undertook a study of the deterrent effect of capital punishment in Canada. He noted that in certain provinces, such as Nova Scotia in 1968, Ontario in 1968, 1969 and 1970, Saskatchewan in 1968 and Alberta in 1968 and 1969, the homicide rates actually declined. There were fewer murders, not more. The Ontario figure here is regarded as being of particular significance because Ontario is the most populated, most urbanized and most industrialized province in Canada. Following the 1972 study, data for different Canadian cities also reveal fluctuations. In 1973, for example, the murder rate in Montreal and Vancouver fell, despite the abhorrent crimes committed in the home area of myself and Senator Lawson, while the murder rate in Toronto rose. In the following year, 1974, the murder rate in Montreal and Vancouver rose, while that in Toronto fell. Clearly the variation in murder rates cannot be explained in relation to the suspension of capital punishment because the same law applied in all parts of the country.

Having considered some of the major arguments that have a degree of scientific validity, we must consider the psychological and moral aspects. We have to ask ourselves whether brutal punishment accustoms people to brutality, and whether ends are generally conditioned by means. The people of Israel, whom I mentioned earlier, considered this question and they rejected the idea of brutality, in spite of severe provocation, because they agree that ends are generally conditioned by means. Many other countries have taken this position as well. Violence breeds violence. Senator Hicks, an educator of distinction, knows a great deal about history, and the fact is that history teaches us that at different times vengeance and retribution were part of the socio-cultural fabric of criminal justice, not necessarily because they reformed or deterred the offender, but because they provided a degree of psychological assurance and perhaps even satisfaction to the offended, and there is something of that in the mood prevailing in some of the provinces today.

Years ago it was found to be appropriate to have capital punishment inflicted on a 12-year-old boy for stealing a loaf of bread for his starving family by cutting off his head, which was then put outside the city gates. This was done, as you historians in the Senate are aware, because it gave psychological assurance and satisfaction to the offended. It is to be hoped that we have evolved to the point today at which we can place a higher value on the dignity of human life than on the need for vengeance, regardless of the provocation, which calls for great fortitude of spirit, and that we have modified for the better our priorities and values.

Among these new priorities are liberty and the respect for human life. Consequently the removal of liberty under this new program by a long term of incarceration must be regarded as the removal of one of humanity's most precious rights. This in itself constitutes a severe sanction, and it is an indication to law-abiding citizens that severe penalties still exist for those who engage in the ultimate in anti-social behaviour.

● (1740)

Violence in our society and in other parts of the world, whether shown on television screens as entertainment or revealed in the statistics of increasing crime rates, is a vast and complex problem that requires urgent attention. But how can the use of violence by the state through the execution of convicted murderers in any manner bring us closer to a solution of the problem? The values that we in Parliament use in making major decisions tend to be viewed as examples by the citizens of this country and, in particular, by the young people in our country who need our guidance. The abolition of execution by the state through the legislation before us will, it is hoped, be a clear indication of our rejection of the use of raw, naked violence as a solution to any and all problems.

Senator Flynn: It is 6 o'clock.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, with your leave, I have one more paragraph, so may I complete it?

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, how can we logically advocate the use of discretion and informed reason in the conduct of our affairs to make major decisions, to govern different aspects of our lives, and at the same time implement the most violent form of punishment in the form of the death penalty? This inconsistency becomes even more illogical and indefensible if we cannot assure the public absolutely that the death penalty works in terms of its ultimate goal—the deterrence of murder. On the evidence, no one can provide that assurance or that certainty to Canadians.

Therefore, the fundamental question that we must all ask ourselves is: How can we take effective measures to protect the Canadian public against the acts of those who commit violent crimes? And there are no simplistic answers, no answers regarding murderers which say, "Let us hang them or gas them or shoot them. Let us take away their lives." There are no simplistic answers, honourable senators. To overcome crime and violence is a long, costly, complex and difficult process. The challenge is there, but the danger is that we may yield to simplistic answers. The evidence is that the retention of capital punishment in our criminal law would not only be ineffective but might actually be counterproductive to our ultimate goal which is, of course, the protection of our society against violent crime.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, since the Leader of the Government has completed his speech, may I now put my question? He referred to the study of cases, in all of which cases commutation was granted. Does the senator not recall the statement of the Solicitor General, Mr. Allmand, to the effect that as far as he was concerned nobody would be executed in Canada? Are we not justified in concluding that these so-called studies, if they were engaged in at all, were merely pro forma and that the end result, commutation, was never in doubt?

Senator Perrault: Well, honourable senators, as I recall the statement of my colleague, he said that he would resign if it came to the question of carrying out an execution. In other words, he was saying—

Senator Flynn: You cannot defend him.

Senator Perrault: He was saying, I think—and I can only attempt to interpret his view—

Senator Flynn: You cannot defend him.

Senator Perrault: Let me set out what the facts are. Mr. Allmand said that in the event of a cabinet consensus that there should be an execution carried out, he would resign rather than undertake that responsibility. That is a perfectly frank statement for any minister to make, and I feel sure he would have resigned under the circumstances I have described.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, pursuant to rule 12, and since it is now 6 o'clock, I shall leave the Chair until 8 o'clock this evening, unless the Senate by unanimous consent decides to complete today's business.

Senator Flynn: No, 8 o'clock.

The Senate adjourned until 8 p.m.

At 8 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

Hon. George J. McIlraith: Honourable senators, I have very few remarks I wish to make tonight, and I assure you that, unlike other occasions on which I have spoken, I will be very brief. Today I listened with a great deal of interest to the debate, and it caused me some concern. Some excellent points were raised on both sides of the question. However, at times I thought they became a little out of perspective and, if I am able to do it tonight, which I may not be able to achieve, I would like to bring what I believe to be the main question before this house more clearly into focus in the minds of honourable senators before we vote later today, or tomorrow, as the case may be.

The question before the house is simply that of second reading, or approval in principle, of Bill C-84, an act to amend the Criminal Code in relation to the punishment for murder and certain other serious offences. For the purpose of the point I wish to make, we can disregard the "other serious offences". I believe I am fair in describing the bill as simply a bill for the abolition of capital punishment for the offence of murder in Canada and substituting therefor life imprisonment. I will deal here only with first degree murder without the eligibility for parole until 25 years of the sentence have been served. I would like to say something about that latter reference later in my remarks.

Now, I have said it is second reading of that bill. What is its history? The bill was presented to the House of Commons by the Government of Canada and it was presented as a government measure, somewhat differently than previous bills on this subject have been presented in recent years. It was presented as a government bill and, indeed, observers of the action of the government will have noted that the ministry voted solidly in support of the bill in the other place.

Senator Asselin: They said it was a free vote.

Senator McIlraith: All votes are free, as far as I am concerned.

Senator Asselin: When all the members of the ministry vote the same way it is not a free vote.

Senator McIlraith: I do not wish to digress into the argument as to a free vote. I vote as I wish; sometimes it is a hard decision to make, as this one is for me a hard decision to make. However, I have made it and I wish to explain it, because I believe it is a point that should be considered by all honourable senators.

In that vote on second reading in the other place the House of Commons, the elected representatives of the people, voted by a majority, not a very large majority but a clear majority, to abolish capital punishment for murder.

Senator Flynn: "Clear" is, maybe, arithmetic.

Senator McIlraith: In any event, it was a majority vote, and that is the way we operate in this Parliament. We do not operate on the veto system of some other societies, but on the majority vote system. Then it came to committee stage in the other place and was very fully argued, with many very interesting arguments on both sides being strenuously advanced, with sometimes, I thought, a degree of overfirmness. In any event, there they were. One of the arguments had to do with retaining capital punishment for the murder of policemen and prison guards, and the vote on that amendment, which I considered the key amendment among many amendments, was defeated by a clear majority. The bill then came to third reading in the other place, again an opportunity to defeat the bill. On third reading the other place voted for abolition of capital punishment for murder.

The Leader of the Opposition criticized the government—I think I am summarizing his speech accurately—for not applying the law these last few years; and, certainly, the facts are that there has been no capital punishment administered since 1962.

I am familiar with the procedures which are followed in the examination of individual capital cases, and in those cases of which I had knowledge when I was a member of the cabinet, those procedures had been followed meticulously. Whether honourable senators would agree that the decision in a particular case was right or wrong, the fact remains that each case was looked at most carefully. I know, because for a period, as Solicitor General, I had the responsibility of preparing the cases for consideration and, believe me, they did not go forward to the cabinet thoughtlessly. I can tell you that. It is a difficult, tough job to do, and they were considered carefully. I am not at liberty to tell honourable senators the results of them, but honourable senators are at liberty to agree or disagree with the conclusions reached.

There were also some other critical remarks made of the government by the Leader of the Opposition. He being the Leader of the Opposition, I cannot find fault with him for doing that. He raised a question arising out of the remarks of one of my successors in the office of Solicitor General, and I must say that those remarks caused me great concern. I cannot see how one can objectively fulfill the duty of Solicitor General, in meeting the requirements of the Criminal Code in relation to capital cases, by saying that one would resign before one would sign an order in a capital case. However, that is another question. In my view, it is irrelevant to what we are dealing with here tonight, but I would be less than frank if I did not admit that the statement caused me great concern. I recall the statement well and it concerned me greatly, but, as I say; it is irrelevant to the question we are considering tonight.

[Senator McIlraith.]

There were also some critical remarks made of the Prime Minister. Far be it from me to criticize the Prime Minister, but I must say that in connection with his remarks on capital punishment, which were quoted by the Leader of the Opposition—and the Leader of the Opposition is an abolitionist—I would not go quite as far as he did. I read Hansard the next day, and those remarks bothered me. He said:

It is inevitable that the defeat of this bill would eventually place the hangman's noose around some person's neck. To make that quite clear: if this bill is defeated, some people will certainly hang. While members are free to vote as they wish, those who vote against the bill, for whatever reason, cannot escape their personal share of responsibility for the hangings which will take place if the bill is defeated.

It is perfectly legitimate for anyone to argue that that is perhaps a surprising use of the high office he holds; but, be that as it may, what piddling criticism is that to make on an issue as basic as the one we are dealing with tonight?

That is all I wish to say about that. I did not like the remark, I can tell the Leader of the Opposition frankly. For my part, I have been a retentionist—that is, if you call a retentionist one who wants to see capital punishment retained for murders of policemen and penitentiary guards because of the fact that the nature of the work they do places them in such a position of susceptibility to murder, as was so eloquently expressed by Senator Choquette this afternoon, that for the sake of society we need it. I have never been happy with that definition. If I remember correctly, I spoke at some length in support of the bill extending the present law. Were we involved in that same debate today, I would again support the abolishment of capital punishment, except in respect of certain classes of murderers. I am one of those who believe that for certain classes of murderers, a certain segment of murderers, capital punishment does act as a deterrent.

● (2010)

In my time working in this area I have been unable to find any statistics that have any relevance to this subject. I have not yet had an opportunity to explain why I interrupted the Leader of the Government this afternoon. With great deference, I asked my question because I did not want the statistic he was using to become implanted as a solid argument one way or the other.

My belief that capital punishment acts as a deterrent in respect of certain classes of murderers is based on actual cases—cases where I became aware of what the murderer had said when arrested. Some of it is slightly profane. That kind of evidence is not available to the statisticians working in our universities. In many cases, it never appears anywhere in the evidence at trial. In any event, the statisticians generally look at the summary of the case and the findings, and not at the incidental evidence that may appear through the case. For that reason, such information is not generally known.

I am firmly convinced, based on such evidence, that for certain classes of individuals, what one might call professional criminals, the serious criminals, capital punishment does act as a deterrent. I readily admit that it is not a deterrent in the case of one member of a family killing another.

Notwithstanding those views and those arguments, to expect the Senate now to defeat a bill with the history of this bill and its predecessor bills, and in the light of the record of previous governments, both Liberal and Progressive Conservative, is not realistic.

In administering the laws of the land, the government does a much better job if it knows it has the support of Parliament, specifically the support of the elected representatives of the people behind it. That is when governments best administer laws. The very root of our system is that the government is responsible and answerable to the elected representatives of the people. In this case, it seems to me, after much public furor—and there has been a great deal written and spoken on this issue across the country, a great deal of high feeling on it—the elected representatives of the people having chosen to support the government in bringing about the abolition of capital punishment, to expect to defeat the bill is simply being unrealistic. It is not, in my view, a proper use of the Senate's power and authority in relation to the government of this country.

Senator Choquette: Are you for abolition of the Senate?

Senator McIlraith: I think I have demonstrated in the last few weeks that I am not for abolishing the Senate.

Senator Choquette: Do you think the majority of the Canadian people are for the retention of the death penalty?

Senator McIlraith: I would suspect that the majority of people, at the moment, are for retention. I would also expect that within three, four or five years the people will have seen that our action in this respect was right, and they will be for abolition. That is the answer to that question. If you ask me about the present time, it is certainly my assessment, having been active in political life for many years, that they are for retention at the moment. I would be the first to grant you that.

I hope the abolitionists, with whom I am going to vote on this issue, will forgive me for saying this. I would rather gently tick them off a bit for some of the arguments about conscience and all that. We use our conscience day after day in the parliamentary process, but I believe that a man who holds a different view from my own on any question may have as good a conscience as mine, or even a better one. I just do not accept that argument.

Senator Flynn: You mean he is as civilized as you.

Senator McIlraith: I believe in a free society, in a free parliamentary system. Forgive me, but I must say I am a little critical of some of the abolitionists' arguments about conscience. They go a little too far in suggesting, by inference, that those who are not for abolition have in some way a lesser conscience. I do not accept that proposition at all.

In the circumstances of this particular bill and the history of the government's administration of the executive act connected with capital punishment, and the votes in the House of Commons, the only reasonable and proper way of dealing with this subject is to vote for the abolition of capital punishment. Can you imagine the situation of trying to force a government to carry out capital punishment when it has brought forward a bill to abolish it and submitted it to Parliament; when that bill has been debated for many days by the elected representatives of the people, who in turn are answerable to the voters of Canada on this widely debated subject, and who voted for it three times knowing that they as members of Parliament must seek re-election in two years—

Senator Flynn: The sooner the better.

Senator McIlraith: It is just not realistic. How could the government, in good conscience, take the life of a man in those circumstances. Surely, they must feel their responsibility. This is an issue on which the electors will have before them those who supported the bill, and they will be able to vote for or against them, and thus express their views.

Senator Asselin: The answer is very simple. The government will simply say it was a free vote and a free vote abolished capital punishment, so the government action is covered.

Senator McIlraith: The members of the House of Commons are responsible to their electors, and that is the way it always must be in this country as far as I am concerned. They have voted for abolition, and it is not reasonable in these circumstances for us to require the government to carry out the necessary executive action. Therefore, honourable senators, I come to the firm conclusion that I must vote for the bill for that reason and, I must say, for no other.

● (2020)

I want to make a brief reference to one small item. I know this clause dealing with persons convicted of first degree murder requires that they be sentenced to imprisonment for life without any eligibility for parole until they have served 25 years. I do not happen to like that particular clause. I do not think it is a proper clause. I think that the parole board or some other judicial body should have the power to review individual cases. Just imagine if a 60-year-old man were sentenced and then became terminally ill after, say, 20 years, and there is no authority to release him. It is not realistic.

I hope in the course of the next few years, after some have been sentenced under this provision, the government will look to amending this clause and coming forward with a better provision. There is plenty of time to do that. This will only be applicable to those sentenced after this bill passes.

I would make this request of the Leader of the Government, that in due course the government consider that point in an endeavour to find a better method of detaining a convicted person in prison for a long term while providing for some kind of judicial examination of individual cases, and power to release people under exceptional circumstances—for example, when a prisoner is terminally ill.

I thank you, honourable senators, for listening to me tonight. I hope my argument appeared reasonable to you.

Senator Hicks: Before my honourable friend concludes his remarks, would he permit a question? Would he not agree that the logical extension of the main argument he used would have the effect of saying that if the government does not like any particular law or set of laws, all it has to do is fail to administer them in the true spirit and intent, and thus put Parliament in a position where it must change the laws to agree with the government's attitude? Surely this is shifting the notion of responsibility of the government to Parliament to the opposite pole.

Senator McIlraith: No, I would not agree with that conclusion at all. I am sorry, I just cannot admit that that would be a logical extension of my argument. My argument is confined to a rather narrow point. It is confined to the state taking the life of an individual, and all the executive acts after the judicial process involved in that process is completed.

Hon. Hartland de M. Molson: Honourable senators, I was somewhat reluctant to take any part in this debate because, first of all, I think my views are fairly well known and nothing very much has happened to make me change them. However, in the debate which we held in this house on November 7, 1973 I set out my views, as I thought very clearly. I shall not give you a page number in Hansard; perhaps you will just take my word for it.

I believed then, as I believe now, that capital punishment is a deterrent. I spoke at length, and emphasized the trend toward gangland enforcement by murder, called by gangland bosses "execution." I also emphasized at that time the universally disturbing trend of disrespect for the law which, in my opinion, starts at the top and naturally works its way down.

When I say it starts at the top, I do not suggest for a minute that the most responsible people in this country have no respect for the law. I mean anything but that. I mean that those who are in a position of responsibility and authority command the respect of the people, particularly those who support them politically. It is their attitude which I refer to when I say the trend has been towards disrespect for the law, because I believe that there has been an apparent lack of emphasis on the need for firm deterrent punishment in the last few years. There seems to be a tendency to play down the seriousness of crime, or our view of the seriousness of crime. If, for example, we infer that murder is no longer as serious an offence as we thought it was, because we are not going to use the extreme punishment, then at the same time as we say that we put the other serious crimes on a slightly lower level. We push the whole list down a notch. Armed holdup becomes a little less serious; rape, robbery, theft and so on become less serious, because when you start at the top and make that seem less serious you obviously, by gradation, reduce the importance that is given to the seriousness of other crimes. That is what I believe has been happening, and to me it is extremely disturbing.

In the 1973 debate I emphasized that I detested hanging and I suggested other means of carrying out the death sentence, as Senator Choquette did today, quite in agreement with my views.

[Senator McIlraith.]

I should like to say at this time that I agree thoroughly with Senator Bourget, that there is nothing we can say now that is really going to change anybody's mind. I realize that. So I am only going to try to put briefly the way in which I view this situation. I will attempt to be brief because we have had some splendid speeches in this debate; the average of them has been of the highest order. I respect the views of honourable senators and the way they have expressed them. If I happen to say something in my remarks which disagrees with what they have said I hope they will realize that it is because I disagree and not because I do not respect their views.

I should like to mention that, to my mind, since 1973 the trend in the type of murder has been particularly disturbing. I refer to gangland slayings. I believe the increase in the number of gangland murders has certainly substantiated my views as expressed in that debate.

Organized crime has been playing a bigger and bigger role in my part of the world, Montreal, and it has become quite evident. We have had the Cliche Commission and the Crime Commission to show how organized crime has infiltrated our everyday lives, and has done so to a degree most of us simply could not ordinarily accept. Crime is into all sorts of business. It is not confined only to loan sharking, vice, drugs and so on. For example, we have read about the spread of organized crime into the meat business, and there are all sorts of other businesses in which organized crime is playing a part. Organized crime has a very simple way of enforcing its views. When somebody disagrees, "they" execute him. It has been happening, regardless of the fact that when I said so before some senators contradicted me, saying there was no evidence of organized killing. I am sorry to have to say so, but statistics more than prove the truth of what I said then.

With the removal of capital punishment, it will be even easier to get a "contract," as they call it, to enforce the will of organized crime. With the passage of Bill C-84 there will no longer be any question of the enforcer, the person who has been given a contract, being executed. In fact, because of cabinet commutations there has been no real danger in that respect since 1962.

● (2030)

I would like to digress a little bit at this point. A little earlier there was mention of statistics. I do not think there are any statistics that really help us in this matter. I not only mean statistics illustrating whether or not capital punishment is a deterrent; I simply think available statistics do not help us in any way. I know that one set of statistics was quoted, which was based on the number of convicted murderers. To me, however, the number of convicted murderers is not a very good base for such statistics. I would prefer as a base the total number of homicides. Any number of people charged with murder are convicted of manslaughter, or perhaps are acquitted. I would like to have statistics based on homicides, and to know whether a person involved in a homicide killed again, or was involved in some other serious crime. The number of convicted murderers who have repeated their crimes, however, is so limited in its application, as far as I am concerned, that it is not a valuable statistic. This is one of the problems with all of the statistics that have been brought forward in the matter of capital punishment.

I do not need to remind you that in Montreal, in the year before last, 13 people were killed by being locked in a building which was then set on fire. A little later five people were found shot to death and stuffed in the trunk of a car in the tenderloin district on the south shore of Montreal. These are not "crimes passionnels." These are not crimes such as that of someone getting mad at Christmastime and killing his mother-in-law. These are vicious, planned murders committed by people of the type that Senator McDonald spoke about earlier today, with regard to whom it is useless to talk about the bad breaks they had as children, or to suggest that if we took better care of them they could be rehabilitated. The people who commit that sort of crime are beyond hope, and I agree with Senator McDonald entirely when he says that they are people we can well do without, and which society would feel better for eliminating.

Senator Macdonald: I wonder if the honourable senator would accept a question at this point.

Senator Molson: From you I would accept a question at any point.

Senator Macdonald: Can you tell me how many of these people were arrested, and, if they were tried, how many were convicted? I am referring to the people in Montreal that you mentioned.

Senator Molson: I think one was never caught, and I think one was shot while resisting arrest. One was a fellow called Blass, who was shot when he reached for his gun at the time the police found him in our country heaven north of Montreal, the Laurentians. I do not think anybody was arrested in connection with the murder of the five people who were executed and stuffed in the trunk of the car.

Montreal, of course, is now sometimes referred to as the murder capital of the world. We had 111 murders in 145 days there in the year before last, I believe.

Such murders, as I said before, are not the kind that arise out of family disagreements. They are not the kind of murder that is committed when people drink rubbing alcohol, lose their temper, and seize the kitchen knife. Most of the crime in our area is associated with all the rackets, which the police know about, and which many of us know about, but are unable to get at, and which people put up with because they are so terrified they do not know what else to do. When they talk or fall out of favour the enforcers move in, and that is when you get one of these dirty little murders that I mentioned, where somebody has two or three bullets put into the back of his head and is dropped into a ditch or stuffed in the trunk of a car, or some such thing.

Honourable senators, I do not want to go back over all the things we have heard before. I do not want to take up your time in that way. I do want to say, however, that regardless of the stated views of the Prime Minister and members of the cabinet and others, my opinion, for what that is worth, is that the public of Canada gives every indication of being really uneasy as the consequences of the overriding of the courts by the cabinet. I believe the public is worried also by the very obvious difficulty which will occur in recruiting men of integrity and courage for the police forces and the penitentiary services. Their job is to protect all the citizens; that is what they are engaged for, including all of us and cabinet ministers. Now death by gunfire in the ordinary course of their duties is a greater possibility. It is certainly a genuine occupational hazard. I felt before that singling out those categories of people was wrong, as Senator McIlraith said, and perhaps it was, but I think that if we are going to enlist good people to carry out functions in even greater danger, functions that require great integrity—and, mark you, the pay is not enormous—I do not know how we can take away from them the greatest possible protection.

I read, and heard on television the other night, that by a strange coincidence the government is already planning new high-security penitentiaries to take care of prisoners who will no longer be sentenced to death and others who are extremely dangerous; that these new prisons are going to be so designed that there will be practically no contact between the prison guards and the prisoners, and that that will preclude all the dangers. They are going to be built at a cost of millions of dollars. Now, honourable senators, I do not mind the expenditure of the dollars too much, because the government is going to spend them anyway, but I do mind the thought that we now have to devise another special type of penitentiary because what we have at the present time is no longer any good. I agree with the Leader of the Government who said that the judicial system has not been working well, and that the prison system has not been working well enough. But do you mind telling me how we are going to get better people to run them in a more efficient manner? Do you know of any people who will enlist in these services? I don't know of any. They would be extremely dedicated people who would be prepared to go and work under these conditions. Conditions were bad enough before because they knew that commutation of the death sentence would remove the protection of the death penalty but now they do not even have that protection. So now we are going to have special hygienic, barred places for these criminals, and we are planning to take care of the situation in that way. But I would like you to think of just what is happening. Where does all this lead us?

First of all, let us take the police. Think of yourself, or your son, or your cousin, as a policeman. You meet an armed bandit. You have no more protection than the civilian who is trying to catch the bus nearby. The bandit has a gun. What are you going to do? Are you going to go and say to him, "Drop your gun, bud"? Or are you going to let him have it right away, bang, and if you are well trained or lucky you are going to hit him? That is what is going to happen. The same thing is true of prison guards when they run into any sort of fracas or disturbance. They are not going to go and say, "Please, let me have that knife you are hiding." They are going to get very, very tough indeed, and this could easily lead to more accidents and even more deaths. But as far as policemen are concerned, and Senator Williams brought this up, they are going to shoot first and talk afterwards. More violence! More deaths! It has been suggested that conditions are rapidly approaching when we will want to carry a gun to protect ourselves; that time may already be here. So, after Bill C-84 becomes law, this Utopia, we will look forward to a situation in Canada reminiscent of "High Noon."

● (2040)

But that is where we are heading and we are going to have to protect ourselves, because protection is simply not available. It is not there in the first place, according to the evidence from crime statistics. Secondly, if criminals are caught, the severity of punishment has been so light, including that for murder, that there is very little deterrent at all. What is the effect of a 25-year sentence of imprisonment? Will the prisoner be happy and say, "Thank God I was not hanged"? Is he going to go into this new, hygienic penitentiary saying, "What a lucky fellow I am; where is my steak and colour television?" and live there 25 years happily thereafter? It is reasonable to suppose that in spite of the aberrations or, in some cases, the viciousness of these characters, they are human beings. They are going to look forward to 25 years in a beautiful new penitentiary with absolute horror and it is going to grow from day to day. What will they think of? Will they think of the beauties of a country in which capital punishment has been abolished and everyone is trying to make conditions better, helping to avoid broken homes, and so on? Or will they think of killing a guard or committing any crime to escape to a scene where there are people, air and trees? I suggest to you that we will produce a new type of criminal, a 25-year criminal, who will have absolutely no object or reason for surviving in the new and beautiful prisons. We should think about that before deciding what a great improvement this is.

Honourable senators, I have spoken longer than I intended. I really believe that we have gone back over the issues of the previous debates. Perhaps we have muddled ourselves and allowed a little more of the Parliament Hill fog to come down on us once more by attempting to re-assess the old arguments and questions in our minds. In my opinion we should not do that. We should realize that the Senate is faced with this very difficult, serious and important decision, and we should ask ourselves: what is our purpose and what is our duty? I suggest to you that one of the reasons for creating the Senate was to have representation here for people from the various parts of Canada, particularly minorities. I do not suggest to you that 78 per cent in favour of capital punishment is a minority; in fact, I would say that it is a very substantial majority. However, I do not believe that being appointed in order to defend the problems of a minority should prevent us from dealing with the problems of a majority. I would like to emphasize, as suggested by Senator Beaubien earlier, that as appointed members of this chamber from our respective parts of the country we have a responsibility to support the views of those whom we represent. I do not believe it is up to us to govern, lead or decide which way the people of Canada should go. In my opinion it is up to us in the Senate, if we have any useful function to perform, to reflect the views of those who, I think, know that we are genuinely interested in their point of view, welfare, safety and security. For these reasons, honourable senators, I will vote against the bill.

Hon. George I. Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I feel at this time constrained to enter this very serious discussion, not so much because I think I have any new views to propose for the consideration of the Senate—I suppose that all possible points of view have already been put forward—but because I feel very strongly that some of the views that have been put forward, I know with great sincerity, require some examination before being accepted as having sufficient persuasive power to help one come to a conclusion on what is the most difficult question I have faced since coming here.

[Senator Molson.]

I should like, first, if I may, to say I believe all who have spoken did so from a real conscientious belief, with real sincerity, and did not intend to reflect upon the conscientiousness or sincerity of others. However, as I listened to some I could not help but feel that their intensity of belief in the points of view they were putting forward led them, perhaps, to overlook the fact that others might have just as highly intense feelings as they, and might be just as capable as they of forming an intelligent and useful opinion. I do not wish to make any pointed comments with respect to that score, but it did seem to me that some of the speakers were over-zealous in making the points they intended to make.

I respect the views of all others. I try to do that at all times, particularly when I know without any doubt that we face a serious question which causes the utmost agony of decision—perhaps that is not too strong a phrase—in the minds and hearts of all who have to deal with it. Again, I say that it seems to me that we have to approach this matter in the spirit that, however zealously we may feel with respect to this problem ourselves, others have a right not only to be heard, but a right to have their views considered in the light of the fact that they are conscientious, honourable people wrestling with a most trying and difficult problem.

If I may do so without any thought of offence at all, I cannot help but make some reference to the view which the distinguished Senator McIlraith gave regarding his decision as to how we will vote. Certainly I would be the last one, or one of the last—and, I hope, right at the very last—to suggest that Senator McIlraith is in any way one of those who is prepared to follow the government of the day just because it happens to be the government, even if it is a government of the political persuasion in which he believes. As he said himself a few minutes ago, he certainly has demonstrated that during the last few weeks. However, I find it extremely difficult to accept for myself—although I know he believes it completely—that the Senate should abandon its responsibilities because the other place has, either after a long time or after a short time, made a particular decision. He carried that, I believe, one step further, as I followed him. If I do not express correctly the point he endeavoured to make, I hope he will ensure that I do so before I resume my seat. He extended the principle to the point that, after all, if all the members of a government, even when they were telling the other members of the House of Commons that this was a free vote, decided to vote together in a certain way on a certain question, then it would be impossible for them to carry on if their views were not accepted and, of course, what he was saying, as I understood it, was if they were not accepted by this house.

Senator McIlraith: Would the honourable senator permit me to speak?

● (2050)

Senator Smith (Colchester): I would like to be corrected.

Senator McIlraith: That was not my argument. I made reference to executive responsibility in murder cases, where it is the duty of the government to examine each individual case with a view to commuting the death sentence to life imprisonment or having the death sentence carried out, as the circumstances may warrant.

My point was how a government, after the record of three votes in the other place and its own clear, unanimous record in approving the bill, could reasonably be expected to administer the law; and by "administer the law," I had reference to that part of the law which comes under the administration of the government, as distinct from trial in the courts.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I thank the honourable senator for ensuring that I understand his point. I think I do. I think that what he is saying, after his having corrected me, is that his argument was concerned with this one particular kind of case, namely, the exercise of the executive responsibility related to convicted murderers. I accept that. I thought he was casting a wider net.

Even at that, I find it extremely difficult to accept the proposition. Surely, if the Senate thinks that something is wrong it should not allow that kind of consideration to influence it to vote against its conscience or to prevent its members from following the dictates of their consciences.

One must remember that if, in a symbolic act, all members of the Privy Council sitting in the House of Commons decide to vote unanimously in a certain way and a deliberate choice is made, then those who make it must stand or fall by it; and if by chance they have made the wrong choice they must take the consequences. They cannot expect members of the other chamber to go against their consciences to help them. Although the honourable senator may have that view, I would like him and others to understand clearly that I have a different view.

In the other house they made their choice. They did not all have to decide to vote together. They could have decided, as perhaps they did, to follow their individual consciences, and it could be that their consciences pointed in the same direction. In any event, they are persons who are knowledgeable about politics and they knew, when they made their choice, what the consequences would be if they could not command the support necessary to keep their reputations and prestige intact. To use a common phrase, they put their jobs on the line. They did it intentionally, deliberately and knowingly to achieve a certain end.

Again, I say that we should recognize that. We should not allow ourselves to be diverted from our duty to follow our consciences, in order to rescue those distinguished and honourable gentlemen from any predicament in which they might find themselves.

Of course, they have a very simple remedy, one that is open to any democratic government. All they have to do is say, "Suppose for a moment the bill is not passed in the Senate and those terrible senators defeat our bill. We will go to the public and we will find out who is right." That is the simple answer to the problem, surely? If we believe that the bill is wrong, we should not shrink from our duty of seeing that that particular course is taken. The solution is as simple as the fundamental principle of democracy, and those who place their prestige on the political line know where to go to find out whether the people who elected them are prepared to go along with them. It is as simple as that, and no one can say that it would be a terrible thing for the country.

Senator McIlraith: Would the honourable senator permit me a question?

Senator Smith (Colchester): Certainly.

Senator McIlraith: Does the honourable senator realize that the Leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons also voted on this bill, and would he tell me what kind of an election it would be? My understanding is that the Leader of the Opposition voted for abolition. What kind of an election would it be if both sides are in favour of abolition? I understand the argument he is trying to make in relation to an ordinary bill, but in connection with this particular bill, on which we are being asked to vote, would the honourable senator go a step further and explain how the government will go to the country on this issue if we reject the bill—

Senator Flynn: We have seen that before.

Senator McIlraith: —in view of the position of the Official Opposition and the fact that the Leader of the Opposition in the other place and the Leader of the Opposition in the Senate have said that they support the bill?

Senator Grosart: It is 265 elections, not one!

Senator Smith (Colchester): I have no trouble in dealing with that question. I know very well how the Leaders of the Opposition in this house and in the other place—the former Leader of the Opposition in the other house—voted. I know their beliefs. But they have had to make the difficult choice which the rest of us have to make, which they have made for the time being and perhaps permanently. That is a matter which is of concern to them. But it is the government which has laid its prestige on the line by deciding to vote as a unit.

I mention the point merely because it was raised by Senator McIlraith as a reason for persuading those of us whom he wants to persuade—and that is as many as possible—not to follow our consciences on this particular matter, but that we should have regard for the point he raised, which I find difficult to accept.

I do not see any difficulty about an election. If the government is fortunate enough to have Her Majesty's loyal Opposition and the next major opposition party supporting it, it should not have much fear of an election, should it? It would make an election a simple matter for them, unless the public does not like it—and, after all, even we in the Senate are appointed by elected persons, and ultimately all our positions depend on the views of the people as expressed in the ballot boxes. Therefore I find it a difficult argument to accept.

One honourable senator—an honourable senator apart from the Leader of the Government, whose comments I shall look at in a moment—emphasized, I think correctly, that, to use his exact words, "we must recognize our failure to find new ways of stemming crime." With all the effort I can muster to understand that argument as one which should persuade us to vote for the bill, the logic of it really escapes me, because it seems to me a somewhat strange thing to say that we can help stem crime by making the penalty for crime less stringent. That viewpoint, in terms of persuasiveness, escapes me.

● (2100)

The Leader of the Government made a very eloquent and vigorous speech, and I certainly compliment him on the eloquence and the vigour with which he delivered it. Even as I listened to him at his most eloquent, I could not escape the thought that such vigour and such eloquence might have been better employed had they been devoted to the plight of the lonely widow whose husband, or the helpless child whose father, had been removed by the murderer. I have not seen much evidence from the advocates of this bill which would indicate to me that that aspect of the problem is receiving the same sort of dedicated attention as the question of what to do with the murderer himself.

I see the Leader of the Government about to ask me something. I shall permit him to do so. I do not mind being asked at the moment.

Senator Perrault: Whatever the honourable senator would prefer. I wanted to ask whether, during the honourable senator's time as premier of that great province of Nova Scotia, he introduced a program of compensation for victims of violent crimes.

I was one of the first western Canadians to advocate that kind of policy on behalf of those injured as a result of violent crimes.

Senator Smith (Colchester): No, I did not, and I did not introduce or support a bill for the abolition of capital punishment.

Senator Perrault: That was not within your purview.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Nor did I advocate such a step.

Senator Grosart: A good answer.

Senator Smith (Colchester): If the Leader of the Government wishes to raise that question, surely he has to recognize that the federal government's first responsibility, having been vested with exclusive jurisdiction in the area of crime, should be to deal with the consequences of crime.

The Leader of the Government emphasized at some length the fact that there is a great deal of violence—and I understood him to mean violence resulting in death—in the State of Israel, a state for which I have a great deal of respect, and that the government of the State of Israel was of the view that nothing would be accomplished in respect of that violence by the introduction of capital punishment. I do not know. I suppose there are two sides to that argument, just as there are to the one in which we are presently engaged. Are they right, or is the prevalence of violence due to the fact that they have not taken this step?

Senator Grosart: A good point.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Who knows? I do not pretend to know, and I do not think the Leader of the Government knows. Therefore, so far as its probative value is concerned, he and I are in the same boat. It really does not help either one of us, or anyone else, in dealing with this matter.

[Senator Smith (Colchester).]

The Leader of the Government went on to say that the state should set an example as to the sanctity with which life should be viewed. Those are his general words; I do not pretend to quote him exactly, but I think that is a fair summary of what he said. I certainly agree with that. But whose life? Only that of the murderer? Whose life? Should not the state be as much concerned with the life the murderer has taken? Surely one cannot deal with this question by saying that the state should set an example in respect of the sanctity of life. That, to me, is something that has no bearing on the argument at all or, if it does have some bearing, something which would lead me to feel that the state should be even more concerned than it is with the sanctity of the life that the murderer has taken and the consequences on the lives of those who were dependent on the continued existence of that life.

The Leader of the Government, in dealing with the proposed punishment of lengthy terms of imprisonment, referred to the convicted murderer having to face the awesome prospect of being incarcerated for a term of 25 years. Certainly, that is not a pleasant prospect to face. I accept that. However, the real question with which we have to struggle is whether that is as awesome a prospect to face as the prospect of being dispatched to eternity at an untimely moment.

The Leader of the Government also made some reference to the prospect of supervised parole, on being released from prison, for the rest of the convicted murderer's life. Really, I do not view that as very much of a deterrent or penalty. If the individual is going to be released on parole at all, he is going to be subject to certain conditions. Notwithstanding those conditions, he would have a great deal of time to himself. Incidentally, he would also have the time and the opportunity to commit additional crimes, if he so wished. Certainly, the parole authority and parole officers are not going to be living with these individuals day in and day out. There would certainly be no lack of opportunity for an individual to return to his criminal proclivities, if that should be his or her desire.

It was also put forward as an argument against capital punishment—or, at least, I assumed it was put forward as an argument against capital punishment—that, according to the statistics, since 1920 only four persons have been convicted of murder a second time. Surely, Senator Molson drew attention to the weakness of that statistic. How many murders were committed by these people? How many people died at their hands? As the Leader of the Government readily recognizes, one of the weaknesses of statistics is that they do not tell the whole truth—not because someone is deliberately trying to falsify them, but simply because it is not possible.

Senator Perrault: I suggested that difficulty.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Yes. I am simply pointing out that such statistics have no probative value at all on either side of the argument. Time and time again, the Leader of the Government made that point.

Senator Choquette: Had those murderers been hanged, they could not have committed a second murder.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Not in this world, anyway.

The argument was put forward that society needs a greater measure of protection against the prospective criminal, especially against the prospective murderer. I have already made some comments in that regard. Surely, one does not achieve that extra protection by allowing convicted murderers to live. That strikes me as being a strange way of achieving or bringing about additional protection. Then, we must deal firmly with convicted murderers, someone said, and I agree with that. I think that capital punishment is not only a question of dealing more firmly but of dealing conclusively with convicted murderers. I find it hard to reconcile the argument that we have to be firmer and at the same time gentler. I realize that those who put forward that argument are sincerely and honestly convinced that what they say is right, and that they are on the best course in the interests of society as a whole. I grant that at once. However, I find it difficult to reconcile their line of reasoning.

● (2110)

I come now to one of the basic difficulties I find with the views of the government leader, which were, as I said before, presented with such vigour and eloquence. More than once during his speech he said words to the effect that the findings of all those who have tried to gather statistics on this matter, the findings of all those who have tried to discover a means of proving that one course is better than another, have all reached an inconclusive result. I think at one stage his words were, "There is really no proof to support one side of the argument or the other." However, the inference to be drawn from that is another one that escapes me. There is no proof, no conclusive finding, that the absence of capital punishment—I was going to say "political punishment"; it would have been a slip of the tongue, perhaps in some ways an appropriate one—there is no conclusive evidence that we should abandon the course we have been following.

It is true that a lawyer's training and upbringing do sometimes narrow his ability to see things which have no proof, but I had always believed that the burden of proof was not on someone who was arguing to retain things as they are, but rather ought to fall on the person who argues that a change would be better than what we have now. It seems to me a strange reversal of what always looked to me to be an ordinary, sensible, reasonable question, of who should prove what, to say that because there is no proof that a change would be better we ought to change. That does seem to me a little hard to follow.

I suppose what I have said indicates something of the trouble I have with the arguments that are put forward. However, I do not find any necessity to declare how I am going to vote until the time for that decision comes, when I hope that, along with all other honourable senators, I will find the strength of mind, heart and will to follow whatever my conscience requires of me.

In the meantime, I wish only to thank honourable senators for listening to me. I hope I have not been guilty of saying anything inflammatory or unfair. I have certainly endeavoured to avoid those possibilities. Again I thank you, honourable senators, for your courtesy.

Hon. A. E. Haddon Bell: Honourable senators, I know it is getting late and I do not want to keep you, but there are two points that I should like to contribute to the debate.

First, I should tell you that yesterday I was incredulous when I heard that we were going to give Bill C-84 second reading this week, probably pass it and then give it royal assent by Friday. I was incredulous because in this chamber we usually give very thorough scrutiny to legislation. I am not at all convinced that a bill which continuously occupied the other house for months can be accepted so quickly by us. I know we are frightfully clever in this chamber. Nevertheless, there are several questions that come to mind. One, in particular, is the ten-year minimum sentence for a murder that is not premeditated. I feel this is the sort of thing that a Senate committee should examine very thoroughly before we give assent to such a provision.

This bill coming, as it does, at the end of a long session—I believe one of the longest in the history of Parliament—it seems to me that wisdom would suggest that we adjourn second reading, so that agreement could be reached in order that we could proceed with the bill in the new session at the point to which we had progressed at the time of adjournment. I believe other legislation is being proceeded with in this way in the other place, such as the gun law, Bill C-83, and other legislation. I realize that this will not perhaps fit in with the government's plans, and that is unfortunate for the government. However, we did not ask to receive this legislation at the end of this long session, and I put it to you, with all the earnestness I can muster, that we in this chamber are not responsible to the government, we are responsible to the people of Canada.

Coming from the west coast, I feel I have a particular mandate. Although I am an abolitionist and would not like to support capital punishment, to support abolishing capital punishment at this time simply will not do. As soon as our society has reached a level of development when men no longer murder each other, the state will then not need to have a provision for capital punishment in its Criminal Code. As the situation is in our society today, we must retain capital punishment.

We may never have a case go to the courts in which there is no recommendation for clemency; we may never have such a horrible crime committed again, so that perhaps nobody will ever have to be hanged. I hope that is the case. But why not leave the provision in the code in case it is needed?

A great deal has been said both for and against the deterrent effect of capital punishment. All I can say is that nobody has convinced me that capital punishment is not a deterrent. I believe that we have to protect the innocent with all the resources we have in our power. This being one of the reasons for retaining capital punishment, where is the harm in having it remain on the statute books?

Honourable senators, many others have spoken and brought out the relevant points far better than I could, so I will not keep you much longer. However, one or two points were raised which I feel need answering. One was that capital punishment is brutalizing. What is more brutalizing than for the citizenry of a country to become so unsure of its legal system, its jurisprudence and system of protection that the citizens feel they must take the law into their own hands? Surely, that is the most brutalizing effect of all.

There is one other point that I feel is very inconsistent in our approach to this abolition of capital punishment legislation. We have in our laws provision for abortion. I fully subscribe to the idea that there are times when an abortion must be performed. I feel that our law in this regard is an excellent one. However, where is the consistency between refusing to kill a vicious murderer, who has been found guilty and has no recommendation for clemency, and a law which provides for the killing of an unborn, innocent child? I think we have our priorities a little confused here.

● (2120)

Therefore, although I am an abolitionist at heart, I am not one at this time and will not support the bill tomorrow.

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, may I move the adjournment of this debate?

Senator Grosart: Before you move the motion, which is not debatable, I wonder if I could ask the Leader of the Government what is the time disposition he has in mind for the continuation of this debate? Obviously, Senator Austin wishes to speak on it and I know there is at least one other senator who wishes to do so. We have more or less a firm time schedule, which I am sure we all would like to keep.

Senator Langlois: We have an hour in the morning from 10 o'clock to 11 o'clock.

Senator Grosart: Is it the intention of the government to give priority to the continuation of this debate, in the hope that we may conclude it by 11 o'clock?

Senator Langlois: It will be the first item of business.

Senator Grosart: Is it then the intention that we conclude by 11 o'clock, and that will be the end of the business on the Order Paper? Is that the intention, if we conclude this debate by 11 o'clock? I am asking so we can perhaps arrange our priorities on this side. We are anxious on this side to bring this debate to a conclusion by 11 o'clock, to meet the timetable suggested in the resolution presented by the Leader of the Government.

Senator Langlois: In this respect, I cannot bind the Senate. There are some other items on the Order Paper, and I am in the hands of honourable senators if they want to deal with those items. Pursuant to a motion agreed to this morning, arrangements have been made to have royal assent at 12 noon. We have a very narrow time margin in which to deal with any other business. However, I am in the hands of the Senate.

Senator Flynn: I think the question is whether it is the intention of the government to bring us back, if necessary, next week to deal with any other items on the Order Paper.

Senator Perrault: No, honourable senators, the intention would not be to bring honourable senators back next week.

Senator Choquette: I did not hear that.

Senator Langlois: The answer is no.

On motion of Senator Austin, debate adjourned.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 10 a.m.

THE SENATE

Friday, July 16, 1976

The Senate met at 10 a.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

ENERGY

CONSERVATION OF FUEL—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on June 16 Senator Argue asked a question about the conservation of energy and whether the policy of the government is to conserve energy in the use of its automobiles and all automobiles within its control.

In reply, may I say that with respect to the idling of automobiles, on average the fuel consumption, when idling, of warmed-up automobiles is about 0.4 Imperial gallons per hour. This is a significant quantity of fuel and is enough to drive the average North American car about six miles in city driving. Air conditioning does add a significant increase to this fuel consumption, and could be expected to raise this fuel consumption to 0.6 gallons per hour.

The federal government has instituted and given high priority to a strong in-house energy conservation program requiring all departments and agencies to reduce their energy consumption 10 per cent in the fiscal year 1976-77 and to hold at this reduced level for the next ten years. This program involves reducing heating, lighting and air conditioning levels, using more efficient modes of transportation and limiting the use of energy-intensive products. The use of automobiles within the federal government is one of the areas where many agencies can reduce their energy consumption.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

RESTRICTIONS OF SPECIAL PASSPORTS—SUPPLEMENTARY ANSWER

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, a question was asked by Senator Grosart on July 13, requiring a further explanation with respect to diplomatic and special passports. Senator Grosart sought an explanation of the statement I made quoting the department to the effect that permits are issued to parliamentarians for the conduct of government business. He said:

I understand that this is in no way the purpose of these permits, which are stamped over and over again for delegations going to other countries . . .

The Canadian passport identifies the bearer as a Canadian citizen and is issued to facilitate entry to foreign countries. Diplomatic and special passports go a step further and identify the bearer as having a special status in the eyes of the issuing authority. Over 95 per cent of the special passports issued are issued to Canadian government officials and their dependents travelling on official business, which is the reason the statement was made that these passports are normally issued for the conduct of government business. These passports are also issued to parliamentarians identifying them to the officials of the receiving country as having a special status as parliamentarians. It is for the same reason that the passport office, from time to time, inscribes appropriate observations when the bearer has been invited to participate as a member of an official Canadian delegation.

USE OF DIPLOMATIC AND SPECIAL PASSPORTS FOR TRAVEL TO NAMIBIA—SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Finally, honourable senators, I come to the supplementary question asked by Senator Grosart, also on July 13, concerning travel to Namibia. The answer to this question is rather lengthy, since it contains comments on the status of Namibia, and with leave of the Senate I will have it placed in the Debates of the Senate rather than burden the Senate with an overly long and detailed explanation at this time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(The answer is as follows):

As was noted in the preliminary reply to this question, the status of Namibia is a very controversial and indeterminate one at this time. Essentially, the problem is that, while the United Nations (and Canada) has declared that the South African administration of the territory is illegal, and that responsibility for the territory rests with the United Nations, the South African government refuses to accept this position and continues to administer the territory.

Honourable senators will probably recall that Canada formally declared, in July, 1971, its acceptance of the 1971 advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice to the effect that the continued administration of Namibia by South Africa was illegal. This opinion, I might note, also declared that states (such as Canada) were "under obligation to recognize the illegality of South Africa's presence in Namibia and the invalidity of its acts on behalf of or concerning Namibia, and to refrain from any acts and in particular any dealings with the government of South Africa implying recognition of the legality of, or lending support and assistance to, such presence and administration." As a consequence of accepting this advisory opinion, the Canadian government does not maintain any diplomatic, commercial or consular facilities in or for Namibia, and Canadians who wish to travel to the territory do so at their own risk.

It is in the light of this position of the government, and in view of the continued illegal administration of the territory by South Africa, that the government has decided that diplomatic and special passports cannot be used for travel to Namibia. It might be useful to emphasize that the Canadian government not only does not recognize the present de facto administration of the territory, but has formally declared it to be illegal. Viewed in this context, I hope that honourable senators will accept that the Canadian government is anxious to avoid any official action which might be interpreted as implying acceptance of this illegal administration, as would be the case, the government believes, if the government were to permit the use of diplomatic or official passports for travel to Namibia.

In response to the honourable senator's comments regarding South Africa, it should be noted that Canada continues to maintain diplomatic relations with South Africa and, therefore, the use of diplomatic and official passports in that country is not subject to the same restraints as are applied in the case of Namibia.

CITIZENSHIP BILL

SUGGESTED REFERRAL OF CLAUSE 33 TO SUPREME COURT

Senator Flynn: Does the Honourable the Leader of the Government have an answer to my question about the referral of clause 33 of the Citizenship Bill to the Supreme Court?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, as yet I have had no positive response from the government on that point, but it has been made, the question has been posed, and a commitment has been given by the Minister of Justice that consideration will be given to all of the recommendations.

Senator Flynn: I hope the clause will not be proclaimed for some time.

TRANSPORTATION

PACIFIC WESTERN AIRLINES—POSSIBLE MOVE OF HEAD OFFICE TO CALGARY

Senator Austin: Does the Honourable the Leader of the Government have a reply for me to my question about provincial ownership of interprovincial airline services, and in particular, PWA?

Senator Perrault: Well, this morning I can only say on behalf of the government that the government is very concerned about the Pacific Western Airlines case and is giving consideration to the course of action, including possible legislative action, that it might be appropriate to take, as well as giving consideration to the larger question, which is the ownership of regional airlines by provinces in the context of the federal government's constitutional responsibilities in connection with aeronautics in this country. The government is most concerned about the situation.

● (1010)

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT BILL (NO. 2), 1976

VOTING PROCEDURE

Senator Molson: Honourable senators, I should like to ask the Leader of the Government a question about the vote that is to take place this morning. I know it was declared as a free vote in the House of Commons by the Prime Minister, but I do not know what the practice is in the Senate. Will senators of all parties be free to vote according to their conscience?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have always felt that votes in this chamber traditionally are free votes and votes of conscience.

Senator Molson: I won't ask any further questions in that regard.

SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Lang for the second reading of the Bill C-84, to amend the Criminal Code in relation to the punishment for murder and certain other serious offences.

Hon. Jack Austin: Honourable senators, emotion grips me as I rise to participate in this debate on the abolition of capital punishment. We are not only deciding about laws, which in itself represents a momentous enough event, but in this instance about lives. In our society, and rightly so, nothing is more cherished than the right to life. It is the first right in any list of human rights.

I am emotional in a real way, too, about the right to life in another sense. In choosing to save the life of a convicted murderer, do we impose upon society, on ourselves, the risk that such a person when released will return to murder again? By not taking his life, do we encourage others in society to believe that "the price is right" if they decide to commit murder? Believe me, it is the innocent I am concerned about and not the criminal. Our families, our neighbours, our communities, those who make a constructive contribution to society are our first concern. Are we trading their lives for a misbegotten compassion for the criminal, however pathetic his story?

I have listened to all the debates, all the arguments here and in the other place, in the media and in the gathering places of my community. I have agonized in public and in private. I spent an afternoon in Invermere, British Columbia, with 60 citizens of that community publicly reviewing the pros and cons of this dreadful decision. Finally, I have concluded that this bill does nothing to add to public risk. The evidence does not support the argument that it will encourage individuals in society to take more lives. On the other hand, I see nothing to convince me that this bill alone will result in an early reduction in the number of deaths by murder in our society.

But I will not support the taking by the state of human life for nothing—for no clearly demonstrated public good. I cannot support the argument of some senators in this debate that lives should be taken until those who would change the law can demonstrate that the law needs change. That may be the correct premise for most lawmaking in our society, but surely not with the taking of life. Surely, those who would take life have the onus of proving it has a public advantage attached to it.

I try to still my emotions to think through the implications of this issue and I tremble. I know that if a child of mine, or anyone I knew and personally cherished, were murdered or even carelessly lost by the actions of some fool, I would swell up with anger. I would hate. I would seek revenge. But it is precisely in those circumstances that I am disqualified to judge what is the right way for a civilized man to build his society, to perpetuate humanity, to reach for God's hand in the stars.

Humanity has had a long struggle to come to this point. We have done so because in the war between our emotional nature and heritage and our intellectual gift the latter has just barely been able to override. Our system of laws, this sweet process of reason over emotion, debate over warfare, decision in Parliament and the courts over victory in battle, has been and is our proudest achievement as mankind—not scientific advance, not art, music or publishing, Canadian or American, however great they may be. When I am vengeful I will remember none of this. Do not let me be judge and jury in my own cause. When I am not vengeful, reason with me as we do today.

I believe the Prime Minister, speaking in the other place, put the matter before us correctly and I adopt his arguments by reference here. Canadians have had a good debate. Everything on every side that can be said has been said. It is time to decide and to set in place the process of future trial and error which will tell us whether today we are right or wrong in what we do.

Two points raised by honourable senators in the debate last evening must be touched on by me, although they do not relate directly to the bill itself. My colleague, the senior senator from British Columbia, Senator Bell, asked this chamber to delay its consideration of this bill until fall. She said we should not hurry such a vital matter. Honourable senators, we have been a long time debating and deciding. Each of us all of our lives has lived experiences which today will lead us to our respective conclusions. The country has had 10 years of debate; the other place months of it. In the Senate we have three times debated this matter. Bill S-21 was introduced on December 19, 1974, and there were 17 speakers before the bill was withdrawn on February 5, 1976. Bill S-23 was introduced on March 13, 1975, and there were five speakers, the bill remaining on the Order Paper. Bill C-84 has been spoken to by 25 senators before my speech. I know that all senators have been conscientious in following this issue. It is time to settle the matter and lift the burden of it from the community.

Senator Molson referred last night to the dilemma for all of us posed by the choice between our knowledge, our experience, our judgment and our conscience on the one part and our awareness of the public attitudes, which at this time seem to favour continuance of the present law. We are not the rubber stamp of the House of Commons. Equally we are not the rubber stamp of the Gallup Poll. If we are democratic political leaders, then we must lead where we believe the people must go in the interest of all of us and we must tell the people why we so believe.

Senator McLraith put it best last evening when he said that within three, four or five years the people will see that abolition was right.

I conclude, honourable senators, in the knowledge that each of us will make his or her decision out of honest conviction.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, I have not spoken previously in the chamber or in committee on the subject of capital punishment. As is the case with many senators, this is my first speech on this subject. I need hardly say that I have listened with interest and instruction to the speeches which have been made in this chamber on at least three occasions, including the present debate. As Senator Austin just remarked—his count is not quite the same as mine—I take him to have been the twenty-fifth speaker during this debate and I am the twenty-sixth. This leads me to say that this has been in my view, without the risk of being accused of gratuitous comment, an excellent debate on both sides. The points of view have been put forward. I have, as have Senator Austin and all other senators, had some difficulty in making up my mind as to the proper course of action for the Senate and the Parliament of Canada to take with respect to this bill. I have read much of the literature on the subject and it has not convinced me fully that either side is completely right as to this question of abolition or retention of capital punishment. I was very interested when Senator Lang was chosen as the sponsor of the bill, for I have great respect for Senator Lang and I had hoped that he would convince me that I should vote for the bill. I say that because I think my natural instincts are those of an abolitionist. I am against killing and cruelty, not only in connection with our own animal species but all animal species.

● (1020)

Those being my instincts, I should explain why I am going to vote against the bill and why and under what circumstances I am a retentionist at the moment.

It is a very difficult decision to make, in view of those who take the opposite stand. One has to consider the fact that the entire cabinet decided to introduce the bill, and more than half the members of the House of Commons voted in favour of it. The leader of my own party, and parties other than the party in office, voted in favour of the bill. In the Senate, of course, some of my own colleagues, including my own leader, have announced that they will vote in favour of the bill. On the other hand, practically the same number of members of the House of Commons decided the other way, and the majority of my own colleagues on this side of the house will vote the other way, according to the announcements they have made.

I was particularly impressed yesterday when three former provincial premiers, by coincidence one after the other, rose and found themselves compelled to say that they would vote against the bill. I do not know whether that has any particular significance. Perhaps it has, because we are all familiar with the statement that government is usually best when it is closest to the people.

In reaching a conclusion, I asked myself this question: what is the essential purpose of the bill? I reached the conclusion that its purpose is to reach a statutory decision as to the legislation most likely to reduce the incidence of murder and the killing of individuals by the state or its agents.

I put the two together because, particularly in the matter that was raised by Senator Asselin, and which was commented on by others, it seems to me that it is quite possible that the bill will defeat its own purpose in the second part of that purpose which I indicated. I am impressed with the particular argument that it may lead to more taking of life by the state—that is, by its agents.

Senator Asselin described the measure as increasing the possibility of sidewalk and prison corridor killings. We are all aware of the frustration among the police forces of this country, and others, about what is, in their opinion, inadequate handling of the charges they lay in cases of alleged murder.

So I say it may well be that this bill will result in more killings of suspected murderers or suspected criminals of every kind, and in this case without trial. That is one of the concerns I have about this bill.

Understandably, much of the emphasis in the discussion here and elsewhere has been on the matter of deterrence. That is understandable, because, of course, if it could be proved conclusively one way or the other that capital punishment would or would not deter additional murders, then the issue, to my mind, would be fairly well decided by the evidence.

Senator Perrault gave us a good deal of evidence on the matter. It has surprised me that the argument made by others, that it is not a deterrent, is that almost invariably everyone agrees that there is no conclusive evidence that capital punishment does, in fact, deter prospective murderers. On the other hand, Senator Perrault—he was particularly obvious in this type of argument—and others continued to quote statistics on the matter. I recognize that some of the material in the speech the leader made came from different sources, which may explain some of the apparent contradictions in his argument. I agree that there is no conclusive evidence that capital punishment will or will not deter. However, I do not think the whole question hangs on that. There are other reasons for capital punishment, punishment itself being one. It does not concern me to say that the state should not punish, that there is something immoral about punitive measures taken by the state. The essence of the Criminal Code is punishment for crimes committed.

There is the element of preventing further murders by the convicted murderer. We know that there have not been cases of second murders committed by convicted murderers following release from jail. Someone put the figure at five, but that is hardly conclusive. There is also the matter of other serious crimes, such as rape, that are abhorrent to us, committed by released murderers.

The essential element, of course, has to be the protection of society and, perhaps more important—and I place great stress on this—the assurance to society that the state itself is prepared to take extreme measures to meet extreme violence such as murder.

One of the main reasons I will vote against this bill is, of course, the evidence that Canadian society is not now assured that the state is prepared to take the necessary measures to meet its view of the seriousness of the crime of murder. I am not one who would say that in all cases we should vote exactly in line with what we view as the thinking of the people as a whole. On the other hand, when we have evidence that 78 to 80 per cent of Canadians are opposed to the action we are asked to take in supporting this bill, then I am concerned. Surely, what democracy is all about, what representative parliamentary democracy is all about, is the election of members of Parliament—and the appointment of other members of Parliament—to give effect to the demonstrated will of the public.

[Senator Grosart.]

It is, of course, true to say that any government has an obligation to attempt to lead public opinion into those approaches to problems which it believes to be correct. The fact of the matter is that the government has, in this case, tried hard, over a long period of time, to lead public opinion to its viewpoint on the question of capital punishment, and it has failed. It has tried over a long period of time, and has failed. I cannot support a government bill which flies in the face of public opinion, as this one does.

I listened with great interest to the honourable sponsor of the bill, Senator Lang, for various reasons. He gave us his well thought-out reasons for his support of the bill. I went down them one by one and asked myself whether I could accept those reasons for supporting the abolition of capital punishment.

• (1030)

The first reason he gave was that there was no evidence that capital punishment is a deterrent. I have expressed my views on that, but I am myself moved by the fact that the police forces of this country do believe it is a deterrent, and that would be my second reason for opposing the bill. The police are those who are closest to this problem. I was in my youth at one time a police reporter—not only a police reporter but a night police reporter—and I can well understand why the police in general are inclined to believe that capital punishment is a deterrent. I am not saying, as I have indicated, that there is proof, but I am impressed with the fact that almost unanimously—not quite, but almost unanimously—the police associations of this country are in favour of the retention of capital punishment.

The next question I have asked, without obtaining a satisfactory answer is: If there is to be so much stress on deterrence, why do we put people in jail? Why do we imprison them? Surely, the purpose is to deter others from committing the same crime. Yet the Leader of the Government gave us an indication that something like 80 per cent of those who are imprisoned repeat their crime. So imprisonment is not a deterrent.

What is a deterrent? One of the finest speeches that I have heard on the subject was delivered in this house in 1973 by Senator Hastings, who unfortunately is not with us. On inquiry I find that he is recovering from his illness, and I am happy to know that that is so. Senator Hastings is the most outright abolitionist I have ever known. He began his speech by saying:

In reaching my own conclusion, I have the advantage—some may regard it as a disadvantage—of knowing, as friends, approximately 30 men who are the subject matter of the bill; that is to say, 30 men who have been convicted of capital and non-capital murder and who are in custody or out of custody at the present time.

Senator Hastings convinced me, at least, that convicted murderers can be rehabilitated, and in my view—although strangely enough it was scarcely mentioned in this debate—that is the strongest possible argument on the side of the abolition of capital punishment.

However, Senator Hastings then went on to say that imprisonment was not the answer. Yet imprisonment is the answer suggested in this bill. Senator Hastings gave some alarming figures three years ago from a report which gave the following information, according to a study by Dr. Carlson of the Guelph Correctional Centre:

The study shows that of the 1,070 prisoners he followed after their release, 686 had been reconvicted by 1971; almost a third of that number were back in jail within six months; more than half were serving new sentences within a year of their release; two-thirds had been reconvicted within 18 months, and within two years, three-quarters had been found guilty of a new offence.

It is thus clear that imprisonment does not appear to be effective in the rehabilitation of prisoners. The study also proved that it is not a deterrent.

What is the answer? Some honourable senators have suggested—and I agree with them—that we need a complete shake-up in our whole punishment system, our penal and reformatory systems. But this has been going on for years, and as far as I can see the situation is getting worse. Senator Lang suggested that one of the reasons he was against capital punishment was on the grounds of it being “cruel and unusual punishment.” With respect to him, that is merely parroting a phrase that in my view has no reference here whatsoever. Certainly, capital punishment is not an unusual punishment. It has been going on for years. It is the very opposite of cruel. It could very well be argued that it is more cruel to put someone in jail for 25 years than to put an end to his life. He suggested that he might be taking this position because capital punishment was immoral. With respect, I think that also begs the question completely.

On both sides, the retentionists and the abolitionists are just as much concerned with the morality of government action. It would seem strange to me for anyone to suggest that there is something immoral in the state punishing a criminal.

He also said that another possibility was that capital punishment degrades and corrupts society. I am not concerned with that in any way myself. This is a society which permits and encourages violence and pornography. The degradation and corruption of society by that permissiveness at the government level, the Parliament level, in my view, is far, far greater than any possible degradation that may occur from the hanging of a convicted murderer in certain circumstances.

He also mentioned senseless vengeance. I reject that concept entirely. In our jurisprudence today, there is no suggestion anywhere that capital punishment is in any way an act of vengeance by society. Of course it is not. Yet we hear such phrases being used in this debate, and capital punishment has been described as a “basic animal instinct.” Of course it is not. Other words used to describe capital punishment were “naked, raw violence by the state.” Of course it is nothing of the kind.

I have come down on the side of retention in part because of the extremist rhetoric on the other side. When I hear extremist rhetoric I usually reach the conclusion that the argument itself is bad.

Senator Lang said that capital punishment militates against convictions, that juries are at times reluctant to convict when they know or suspect that the result of their verdict may be the taking of human life. I agree with that. I think there is no question that that has happened. On the other hand, it has been a very difficult decision for juries to make and for judges to make, but they have made them. Although I have considerable sympathy with any member of cabinet who has to make that awful decision, I have no sympathy with cabinet rejecting that responsibility which cabinet itself has placed on judges and juries.

One of the main reasons, in my view, why the public has not been convinced that the abolition of capital punishment is the proper course to take is the way the government is handling it. Surely, confidence in law and order was not increased in this particular area when the Solicitor General, the one responsible for law and order in this particular area, said that he would not recommend approval by the cabinet of a decision of a judge and jury for capital punishment.

Some may say that is not what he said. He actually said that he would resign from the cabinet if the sentence were not commuted. It is, of course, the same thing because he could hardly put himself in the position of resigning if he recommended it. I believe that certainly shook the confidence of the public.

The same may be said of the Prime Minister's statement: “If this bill is not passed, some people will hang.” What he was saying, of course, is “I will hang.” Because the decision, in the final analysis, would be his. “I will hang despite Parliament.” That is all it could be because for 14 years all the sentences have been commuted. Suddenly the Prime Minister says, “If Parliament does not agree with me, some people will hang.” That did not help convince the public that the government was taking the kind of attitude toward this problem that would lead to an improvement in the law and order situation of this country.

● (1040)

Naturally, I am also very concerned with the great problem that death is so final—the problem of the possibility of the hanging of an innocent man. There is no question that that is something which would lie on my conscience if I were a juror, a judge or a member of the cabinet. But we all have difficult decisions to make, many kinds of decisions, in life, domestic life, and merely the fact that one innocent man might be hanged would not convince me that that is a good reason for abolishing capital punishment.

Honourable senators, we are shortly to vote on second reading of this bill. It is of interest to me that the debate has been so widely participated in. I believe I am the twenty-sixth speaker, and I think it is of great credit to the Senate that we have taken this time. We have heard more speakers in a fairly short time than could hardly have been possible in the House of Commons. I hope there will be no comments in the press that we rushed this bill through. It has certainly not been rushed through.

It is interesting to note, although I do not think it will be reflected in the vote, that some 15 senators have spoken against the bill while 11 have spoken in favour of it. That count indicates that this is a matter on which we are divided and on which none of us should take the position that he is necessarily right and others are necessarily wrong.

Hon. Norman McL. Paterson: Honourable senators, I rise because I am convinced that capital punishment is a deterrent. To my mind, most murderers are cowards. I want to stand and be counted against abolition.

I have in mind that by abolishing the death penalty we are simply giving those who have murdered a good chance to do it again.

Put yourself in the place of the two widows in Moncton who were left with families to raise and children to feed while worrying about the cost of living. And yet we put those two cowardly birds in prison, possibly for the rest of their lives, where they will have no dishes to wash, no cost of living to worry about, nice beds to sleep in, no leaky roofs to mend and no grass to cut at home. They will just have a lovely, easy time of it for the rest of their lives, and they can shove a knife into any guard they dislike without further penalty.

I have expressed myself, and now I will stand and be counted.

Hon. H. Carl Goldenberg: Honourable senators, I realize that the time is almost eleven o'clock, and the resolution, as I recall it, stated that the debate would conclude at approximately eleven o'clock. I would take just a few minutes, but I will not even begin if honourable senators feel I should sit down at eleven o'clock. If they are prepared to give me a few minutes extra, I will speak.

Hon. Senators: Go ahead.

Senator Goldenberg: Honourable senators, my intention is to comment briefly on one or two considerations which have been raised in the course of this debate. First, there is the repeated reference to public opinion polls which show that a majority of those polled favour retention of the death penalty. It is argued in consequence that Parliament must act accordingly; in other words, Parliament should follow the polls. This, of course, is not the principle on which our parliamentary system operates. We do not operate government by referendum—and the polls, in any event, are not a referendum.

Let me point out that the Parliament of the United Kingdom, from which we take our lessons in parliamentary government, does not accept the proposition that it must follow the polls. In the past few years there appeared to be just as strong a demand for the restoration of capital punishment which had been abolished in the United Kingdom, but the Parliament at Westminster did not feel bound by that. It rejected the proposal by a formal vote, and capital punishment has not been restored.

I have learned that a similar "strong demand" made itself felt in West Germany but that the Bundestag resisted it, and capital punishment has not been restored in that country despite the increase in acts of terrorism.

Another consideration raised in the course of this debate is whether or not death, as a penalty, is a greater deterrent than the threat of long imprisonment. On this aspect I should like to quote the conclusions of an authority, Charles L. Black, Jr., Professor of Jurisprudence at Yale University, who, in his book Capital Punishment, published in 1974, says:

I think the answer has to be that, after all possible inquiry, including the probing of all possible methods of inquiry, we do not know, and for systematic and easily visible reasons cannot know, what the truth about this "deterrent" effect may be. We know that, on raw data, there has been somewhat more homicide in capital punishment states than in non-capital punishment states. But we cannot draw any valid conclusions from this, for factors other than the punishment system may easily explain the difference.

On the same point I refer again to the United Kingdom where the Royal Commission on Capital Punishment almost 20 years ago reported:

The general conclusion which we have reached is that there is no clear evidence in any of the figures we have examined that the abolition of capital punishment has led to an increase in the homicide rate or that its introduction has led to a fall.

I submit, honourable senators, that if retention of the death penalty is justified, it follows that it must be justified on grounds other than its deterrent effect, because this effect, the deterrent effect, cannot be proven.

Last night in his speech in favour of restoration of the death penalty, Senator Molson—

Senator Flynn: Did you say "restoration"?

Senator Goldenberg: I used the term "restoration" because there has been no death penalty carried out for so many years, but I am prepared to call it "retention." It is still on the statute books.

Senator Asselin: That is much better.

Senator Flynn: Very good.

Senator Goldenberg: I will say that Senator Molson, in his speech in favour of retention, referred to the gangland murders in Montreal. Now, as a resident of Montreal, I can confirm that he painted a true picture of a serious situation which is causing great public concern there. But Senator Molson failed to show how retention of the death penalty would solve that particular problem, especially, as he admitted in answer to Senator John Macdonald's question, since the mass murderers in the two specific cases of which he spoke had not been found, except perhaps one.

• (1050)

Senator Molson: It was 50:50, I think.

Senator Goldenberg: Well, most of them were certainly not found.

Senator Molson: You are drawing conclusions.

Senator Goldenberg: One of them was found dead. He had already been killed.

For clarification of this particular point let me quote from the experience of one of Canada's great criminal lawyers, Mr. Arthur Maloney, Q.C., now the Ontario Ombudsman, and who was formerly in the House of Commons with some honourable senators here. This is what Mr. Maloney says on this point:

What then do those well-motivated retentionists expect as a result of the restoration of a penalty that has not been carried out in Canada since 1962? What is it that is then supposed to occur? I suppose the answer that would be given to me would be that the crime of murder would be eliminated or at least its incidence would be drastically reduced. That assumes, first of all, that all murderers will be caught. In fact a very large number of them will not be found out at all. By a stroke of incredible good fortune, as their peers are hanged, they will get away with it. That is the first stage at which the inequality of the death penalty is made manifest. You see all murderers who plan their crime as opposed to those who kill on the sudden, in a crime of passion setting, know that they won't get caught. The death penalty holds no fear for them, and for those who commit a crime of passion—why it has never even entered into their minds.

And so, on the basis of his experience over 33 years as one of Canada's leading criminal lawyers, Mr. Maloney would not agree with the view that retention or restoration of the death penalty will reduce the incidence of murder by organized crime. There must be other methods for dealing with this.

You will notice, honourable senators, that Mr. Maloney was describing what he calls "the inequality of the death penalty," arising from the fact that many murderers are never caught. I hope you will bear with me if I read to you what he describes as the second stage of the inequality of the death penalty, and this is something we must bear in mind before we vote today. Here is what Mr. Maloney says:

But for those who are caught, now follows the routine procedure of investigation, of arrest and of charge. . . . A conscientious policeman, let us say, in any one of our provinces, interested in justice will conduct a detailed enquiry in the course of which facts will come to light that alter the complexion of the crime, so that when the crown attorney comes to view the case, he may be called upon to conclude that this charge may not be murder at all; instead, it will be manslaughter. Besides the crown attorney being human, he may cringe at the thought of laying a charge that might result in an execution and would never dream of doing so unless the facts clearly and unambiguously demand it. But, alas, the same case occurs in another part of the country—a less dedicated policeman unearths the facts less scrupulously. A hard-nosed crown attorney views them more harshly and with a firm conviction that unless we hang a few fellows now and then crime will destroy us all, and as a result this time a charge of murder is laid. This is the second stage in inequality that emerges. Human variables such as the policeman's attitude, the crown attorney's outlook . . . intervene to bring about unequal justice or injustice as the case may be.

Mr. Maloney points to the potential for injustice in these words and please bear them in mind, honourable senators:

Men tried in one part of the country are found guilty and sentenced to die because of the judge chosen to try them, the crown attorney chosen to prosecute them, and the defence counsel picked to defend them; and their peers in crime in another part of the country, who did neither more nor less, are found guilty of manslaughter only, or acquitted altogether because they got a better deal of the cards.

Arthur Maloney concludes:

Imagine what a difference in result from case to case, from court to court, from province to province, from city to city. The potential for injustice, incorrigible, irretrievable injustice, meted out more often than not to the poor, the defenceless, the deprived, the abandoned of our society—

In the same vein, Professor Black, whom I have already quoted, asserts:

We do not and cannot administer the penalty of death without arbitrariness and mistake.

Honourable senators, for these reasons, among others, I shall vote for the bill.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Lang, seconded by the Honourable Senator Petten, that this bill be now read a second time.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Senators: No.

Some Hon. Senators: Yes.

The Hon. the Speaker: Since there appears to be some uncertainty, those in favour of the motion will please say "yea".

Some Hon. Senators: Yea.

The Hon. the Speaker: Those against the motion will please say "nay".

Some Hon. Senators: Nay.

The Hon. the Speaker: In my opinion the "yeas" have it. And more than two honourable senators having risen.

The Hon. the Speaker: Please call in the senators.

• (1100)

Motion of Senator Lang carried on the following division:

YEAS

Honourable Senators

Argue	Goldenberg
Austin	Graham
Barrow	Greene
Basha	Lafond
Buckwold	Lamontagne
Cameron	Macdonald
Carter	Macnaughton
Connolly	McElman
(Ottawa West)	McGrand
Côté	McIlraith
Cottreau	McNamara
Davey	Michaud
Deschatelets	Neiman
Flynn	Norrie
Forsey	Perrault
Fournier	Petten
(Restigouche-	Stanbury
(Gloucester)	van Roggen
	Yuzyk—34.

NAYS

Honourable Senators

Asselin	Grosart
Beaubien	Langlois
Bélisle	Lawson
Bell	Lefrançois
Bourget	Manning
Denis	Molson
Eudes	Paterson
Everett	Phillips
Fournier	Robichaud
(Madawaska- Restigouche)	Smith (Colchester)
Fournier	Sparrow
(de Lanaudière)	Williams—22.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I declare the motion carried.

Senator Hicks: Honourable senators, I was paired with the Honourable Senator Lang. Had I voted, I would have voted against the motion.

Senator Molgat: Honourable senators, I was paired with the Honourable Senator Hayden. Had I voted, I would have voted in favour of the motion.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time, on division.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate, I move, on behalf of Senator Lang, that this bill be read the third time now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Perrault, seconded by the Honourable Senator Lamontagne, that this bill be now read the third time.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

● (1110)

Senator Davey: Honourable senators, I rise on a point of privilege. My attention has been drawn to Senate Hansard of Thursday, July 15. I wish to apologize to the Senate for my absence on the third reading of Bill C-58 which, of course, I sponsored. I thank my colleague, Senator Lang, the sponsor of this bill, for drawing my absence to the attention of the Senate.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Senators: On division.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed, on division.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I suggest that it be deemed that a recorded vote on third reading would have been the same as that on second reading.

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

ROYAL ASSENT

NOTICE

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that the following communication had been received:

GOVERNMENT HOUSE
OTTAWA

July 16, 1976

Madam,

I have the honour to inform you that His Excellency the Governor General will proceed to the Senate Chamber today, the 16th day of July, at 12.00 noon for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to certain bills.

I have the honour to be,
Madam,
Your obedient servant,
Edmond Joly de Lotbinière
Administrative Secretary to the Governor General

The Honourable
The Speaker of the Senate,
Ottawa.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

● (1200)

ROYAL ASSENT

At 12 noon His Excellency the Governor General proceeded to the Senate chamber and took his seat upon the Throne. His Excellency was pleased to command the attendance of the House of Commons, and, that House being come, with their Speaker, His Excellency was pleased to give the Royal Assent to the following bills:

An Act to amend the Criminal Code in relation to the punishment for murder and certain other serious offences.

An Act to amend the Income Tax Act.

An Act to amend the Medical Care Act.

An Act respecting citizenship.

An Act to amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act (No. 2).

The House of Commons withdrew.

His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to retire.

_____

The sitting of the Senate was resumed.

● (1210)

ADJOURNMENT

Leave having been given to revert to Notices of Motion:

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I move, seconded by the Honourable Senator Bourget, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, October 12, 1976, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

Senator Lawson: Before the question is put, I wonder if I might ask a question of the deputy leader. If my calendar is correct, October 12 is a Tuesday, which would mean those of us coming from some distance and wishing to be here for an 11 o'clock sitting on October 12 would have to travel on Thanksgiving Day.

Senator Langlois: Arrangements have been made to reconvene at that date and time, so I am afraid those coming from a distance and wishing to be here will have to make arrangements to travel on Thanksgiving Day.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, October 12, at 11 a.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, October 12, 1976

The Senate met at 11 a.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT

NOTICE

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that she had received the following communication:

GOVERNMENT HOUSE
OTTAWA

September 29, 1976

Madam,

I have the honour to inform you that the Right Honourable Bora Laskin, P.C., Chief Justice of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber at 11.00 a.m. on Tuesday, October 12th, for the purpose of proroguing the First Session of the Thirtieth Parliament of Canada.

I have the honour to be,

Madam,

Your obedient servant,
Edmond Joly de Lotbinière
Administrative Secretary to the Governor General.

The Honourable

The Speaker of the Senate,
Ottawa.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Hon. Senator Langlois tabled:

Report of the Agricultural Products Board for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 7 of the Agricultural Products Board Act, Chapter A-5, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Agricultural Stabilization Board for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 14 of the Agricultural Stabilization Act, Chapter A-9, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Economic Council of Canada, including its financial statement certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 21(1) of the Economic Council of Canada Act, Chapter E-1, R.S.C., 1970.

Capital Budgets of Eldorado Nuclear Limited and Eldorado Aviation Limited for the year ending December 31, 1976, pursuant to section 70(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with copies of Order in Council P.C. 1976-1986, dated August 5, 1976, approving same.

Copies of Orders in Council P.C. 1976-1910 and P.C. 1976-1912, dated July 27, 1976, amending Part II of the Schedule to the Hazardous Products Act, pursuant to section 2(3) of the said Act, Chapter H-3, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Auditor General on the examination of the accounts and financial statements of the National Battlefields Commission for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 12 of An Act respecting the National Battlefields at Quebec, Chapter 57, Statutes of Canada, 1907-08, and sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Northern Canada Power Commission, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 24 of the Northern Canada Power Commission Act, Chapter N-21, and section 75(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Department of Public Works for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 34 of the Public Works Act, Chapter P-38, R.S.C., 1970.

Report on operations under the Regional Development Incentives Act for the months of March, April, May and June, 1976, pursuant to section 16 of the said Act, Chapter R-3, R.S.C., 1970.

Copy of Proceedings of the Royal Society of Canada, 1975, together with a copy of the 1975-76 Calendar and a copy of the Report of Council containing the financial statements of the Society for the year ended February 29, 1976, and the auditors' report thereon, pursuant to section 9 of An Act to incorporate the Royal Society of Canada, Chapter 46, Statutes of Canada, 1883.

Statement of expenditures and financial commitments made under the Veterans' Land Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 49 of the said Act, Chapter V-4, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Atomic Energy Control Board of Canada for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 20(1) of the Atomic Energy Control Act, Chapter A-19, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of operations under the Canada Water Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976, pursuant to section 36 of the said Act, Chapter 5 (1st Supplement), R.S.C., 1970.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

PROROGATION SPEECH

The Right Honourable Bora Laskin, P.C., Chief Justice of Canada, Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, having come and being seated at the foot of the Throne, and the House of Commons having been summoned, and being come with their Speaker, the Right Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to close the First Session of the Thirtieth Parliament with the following speech:

Honourable Members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

The First Session of the Thirtieth Parliament was opened on September 30, 1974. In the 744 days since the opening, the Senate has met 216 times and the House, 343 times. Both in terms of the amount of elapsed time and the number of sittings of each House, this has been, by far, the longest session in the history of the Parliament of Canada. In terms of public legislation, this has been our most productive session, although, if examined on a yearly basis, the pace of legislation has been at the rate that has come to be normally expected in the last two decades.

The principal direction of the legislation enacted during this session has been toward the reasonable development and the just and equitable sharing of the great riches of our land. In addition to several important fiscal measures that have been passed, Parliament has put into place a program to combat inflation so that Canadians may indeed reap the benefits of their own productivity. As part of this program the Government has imposed upon itself a policy of restraint in the growth of its own expenditures and Parliament, as part of this program, has enacted alterations to such statutes as the Medical Care Act and the Unemployment Insurance Act.

At the same time, Parliament has not been unmindful of the need for continuing growth of the economy and has amended the Export Development Act and created the Federal Business Development Bank. The orderly development of business will be assisted by the enactment of the Canada Business Corporations Act and healthy competition in the free market will be stimulated by the amendments to the Combines Investigation Act.

In both economic and social terms, housing has been of great concern during this session and you have twice amended the National Housing Act and related statutes.

Energy resources are central to the development of the nation. This has led to the enactment of the Petroleum Administration Act and to the creation of Petro Canada.

Agriculture has been of major concern to you during this session. You have enacted a measure to provide for two price wheat and you have passed the Agricultural Stabilization Act and the Western Grain Stabilization Act. You have made important amendments to the Farm Credit Act and to the Canadian Wheat Board Act as well as to several other statutes of great importance to the farmers of this country.

Several measures have been enacted to strengthen our social security system. You have improved the benefits of the Canada Pension Plan and the Old Age Security Act. Amendments to the statute law with regard to superannuation have been enacted. The services of those who fought for our country have been remembered in amendments to the laws relating to veterans' and civilians' war allowances, veterans' and returned soldiers' insurance, and to the compensation for former prisoners of war.

The institutional framework of Government has been a significant concern in this session. Parliament has enacted statutes to create the office of Secretary to the Cabinet for Federal-Provincial Relations and to amend Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements. Measures have been passed to protect the representation of all provinces in the House of Commons and to improve the representative of the northern territories in Parliament. You accepted your responsibilities by dealing with the financial arrangements for representatives of the Crown, for judges and for legislators. A number of measures relating to the structure of the courts were enacted, including important amendments to the Supreme Court Act. Committees of both Houses considered and made recommendations on the subject of members of Parliament and conflicts of interest. A special joint committee of both Houses considered and made recommendations on employer-employee relations in the public service. The Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments has not only effectively taken up its responsibilities under the Statutory Instruments Act, but also has embarked on an important study of government policy on the release of information, the conclusions of which are eagerly anticipated. Both Houses have considered procedural reform and, while progress has been made, both are to be encouraged to continue the work in future sessions.

You have made several amendments to the criminal law, including the enactment of a permanent law with regard to the punishment for murder and certain other offences.

Several of the statutes enacted have been designed to protect the equality of men and women in the letter and administration of the law.

During this session, a new Citizenship Act was passed and a measure to regulate the import and export of articles of cultural value was enacted. The Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission was created and a measure was enacted to assist the development of Canadian publications and broadcasting.

Almost all of the legislation that was forecast in the Speech from the Throne opening this session on September 30, 1974 has been enacted. This, however, constitutes merely half of the legislation that Parliament has adopted in the session. Parliament has indeed produced a remarkably great amount of legislation. Nonetheless, the demand for even more continues and Parliament has little time to spare in its effort to meet the needs of the nation.

Members of the House of Commons:

I thank you for the provisions you have made for the service of Canada during the present and the two previous fiscal years.

Honourable Members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

May Divine Providence continue to bless our country.

The Honourable the Speaker of the Senate then said:

Honourable Members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

It is the will and pleasure of the Right Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General that this Parliament be prorogued until two o'clock in the afternoon this day, Tuesday, the 12th day of October, 1976, to be here holden; and this Parliament is accordingly prorogued until two o'clock in the afternoon this day, Tuesday, the 12th day of October, 1976.

---

Abbreviations

1r, 2r, 3r	= First, second, third reading
amds	= amendments
com	= committee
div	= division
m	= motion
neg	= negated
ref	= referred
rep	= report
r.a.	= royal assent

Abortion, 917

France, 837

Morgentaler, Dr. Henry, abortion charges, 1036, 1732, 1742-6, 1767-8

Admission of facts but denial of guilt, 1745, 1746

Canadian Institute of Public Opinion, survey results, 1767, 1774

Excerpts from notes of supreme court judges, 1773

Jury decision, reversal of court of appeal, 1767-8

Statement of Past President of Bar Association, 1773-4

Priorities for government action, 121

Removal from Criminal Code of item relating to abortion, 188, 838

Status of Women News, statement issued by National Action Committee, 120-1

Study of procedure for obtaining therapeutic abortions, question re committee on, 1428, 1624-5, 1639, 1654-5

Acadians, 18-19

Bilingualism, 18-19

Education, Royal Commission, Public Services and Provincial-Municipal Relations, Nova Scotia, 19

Prominent Acadians, 18

Acts passed during the Session

PUBLIC ACTS

Chapter		Bill No.
	October 10, 1974
1. West Coast Grain Handling Operations Act .....		C-12
	October 30, 1974
2. Appropriation Act No. 3, 1974 .....		C-31
	November 27, 1974
3. Army Benevolent Fund Act amendment .....		C-17
4. Canada Pension Plan Act amendment .....		C-22
5. Customs Act amendment .....		S-4
6. Customs Tariff Act (No. 1) amendment .....		C-27
7. Trust Companies Act and Loan Companies Act amendment .....		S-7
8. War Veterans Allowance Act and Civilian War Pensions Allowances Act amendment .....		C-4

Acts passed during the Session - *Continued*PUBLIC ACTS - Continued

Chapter	December 13, 1974	Bill No.
9. Immigration Act amendment .....		S-12
10. Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act amendment .....		C-214
11. Alberta-British Columbia Boundary Act, 1974 .....		S-13
12. Fire Losses Replacement Account Act amendment .....		C-18
	December 20, 1974
13. Representation Act, 1974 .....		C-36
14. Federal Business Development Bank Act .....		C-14
15. Indian Oil and Gas Act .....		C-15
16. Public Service Employment Act, Public Service Staff Relations Act, Public Service Superannuation Act, and Interpretation Act amendment .....		C-38
17. Export Development Act amendment .....		C-9
18. Supreme Court Act and Federal Court Act amendment .....		S-2
19. Revision of references to Quebec Court of Queen's Bench Act .....		S-16
20. Statute Revision Act .....		S-3
21. Appropriation Act No. 4, 1974 .....		C-42
22. Appropriation Act No. 5, 1974 .....		C-45
	February 27, 1975
23. Customs Tariff Act (No. 2) amendment .....		C-39
24. Excise Tax Act and the Excise Act amendment .....		C-40
25. Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act amendment .....		C-370
	March 13, 1975
26. Statute law relating to Income Tax Act amendment (No. 1) .....		C-49
27. Canadian Wheat Board Act amendment .....		S-6
28. Northwest Territories Representation Act .....		C-51
29. Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Bruce-Grey) .....		C-228
30. Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Lafontaine-Rosemount) .....		C-229
31. Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Berthier-Maskinonge) .....		C-365
	March 24, 1975
32. West Coast Ports Operations Act 1975 .....		C-56
33. Canada Business Corporations Act .....		C-29
34. Prairie Grain Advance Payments Act (No. 1) amendment .....		C-10
35. Recognition of the Beaver ( Castor canadensis ) as a symbol of the sovereignty of Canada, an Act to provide for .....		C-373
	March 25, 1975
36. Appropriation Act No. 1, 1975 .....		C-54
37. Appropriation Act No. 2, 1975 .....		C-55

Acts passed during the Session - Continued

PUBLIC ACTS - Continued

Chapter		Bill No.
	March 26, 1975
38. National Housing Act amendment .....		C-46
	April 24, 1975
39. St. Lawrence Ports Operations Act, 1975 .....		C-59
40. Law Reform Commission Act amendment .....		C-43
41. Railway Act amendment .....		C-48
42. Civil Service Insurance Act amendment .....		C-26
43. Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act repeal and Trade Marks Act (No. 1) amendment .....		S-9
	May 8, 1975
44. Senate and House of Commons Act, Salaries Act, and Parliamentary Secretaries Act amendment .....		C-44
45. Farm Credit Act amendment .....		C-34
46. Fort-Falls Bridge Authority Act amendment .....		C-367
	June 19, 1975
47. Petroleum Administration Act .....		C-32
48. Judges Act and certain other Acts for related purposes and in respect of the reconstitution of the Supreme Courts of Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island Act amendment .....		C-47
49. Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission Act .....		C-5
50. Cultural Property Export and Import Act .....		C-33
51. Northern Canada Power Commission Act amendment .....		C-13
52. Territorial Lands Act amendment .....		S-20
53. British North America Acts, 1867 to 1975 Act amendment .....		C-3
54. Two-Price Wheat Act .....		C-19
55. Ocean Dumping Control Act .....		C-37
56. Salaries Act amendment .....		C-24
57. Appropriation Act No. 3, 1975 .....		C-64
58. Old Age Security Act amendment .....		C-62
59. Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce Act amendment .....		S-15
60. Explosives Act amendment .....		S-17
	July 30, 1975
61. Petro-Canada Act .....		C-8
62. Excise Tax Act amendment .....		C-66
63. Agricultural Stabilization Act amendment .....		C-50
64. Prairie Grain Advance Payments Act (No. 2), amendment .....		C-53
65. Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act 1972 amendment .....		C-57
66. Statute Law (Status of Women) 1974 Act amendment .....		C-16
67. Public Service Staff Relations Act amendment .....		C-70
68. Olympic (1976) Act amendment .....		C-63
69. Privileges and Immunities (International Organization) Act amendment .....		S-25
70. Customs Tariff Act (No. 3) amendment .....		C-67

Acts passed during the Session - Continued

PUBLIC ACTS - Continued		Bill No.
Chapter
December 2, 1975
71. Statute law relating to Income Tax Act amendment (No. 2) .....		C-65
72. Environmental Contaminants Act .....		C-25
73. Lieutenant Governors Superannuation Act .....		C-23
December 15, 1975
74. Appropriation Act No. 4, 1975 .....		C-79
75. Anti-Inflation Act .....		C-73
76. Combines Investigation Act and Bank Act amendment, and repeal of chapter 23, Statutes of Canada 1966-67 .....		C-2
77. Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation Act amendment .....		S-27
78. King George V Cancer Fund Winding-Up Act .....		C-76
December 20, 1975
79. Supplementary Borrowing Authority Act, 1975 .....		C-80
80. Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971 amendment .....		C-69
81. Statute Law (Superannuation) Amendment Act, 1975 .....		C-52
82. National Housing Act and the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation Act amendment .....		C-77
83. Government Annuities Improvement Act .....		C-75
84. Regional Development Incentives Act amendment .....		C-74
85. Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing Act amendment .....		C-21
86. Animal Contagious Diseases Act amendment .....		C-28
February 25, 1976
87. Western Grain Stabilization Act .....		C-41
88. Halifax Relief Commission Pension Continuation Act .....		C-78
March 30, 1976
89. Appropriation Act No. 1, 1976 .....		C-90
90. Appropriation Act No. 2, 1976 .....		C-91
91. Temporary Immigration Security Act .....		C-85
92. Statute Law (Veterans and Returned Soldiers' Insurance) Amendment Act, 1976 .....		C-86
93. Criminal Law Amendment Act (No. 1) 1975 .....		C-71
94. Feeds Act amendment .....		S-10
May 5, 1976
95. Compensation for Former Prisoners of War Act .....		C-92
96. Motor Vehicle Tire Safety Act .....		S-8
97. Quarantine Act amendment .....		S-31
May 20, 1976
98. Anti-Inflation Act amendment .....		C-89

Acts passed during the Session - Concluded

PUBLIC ACTS - Concluded

Chapter	Bill No.
June 15, 1976
99. Senate and House of Commons Act and Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act amendment with respect to escalation of certain payments thereunder .....	C-81
100. Aeronautics Act amendment .....	S-34
101. Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act repeal and Trade Marks Act (No. 2) amendment, an Act to amend .....	S-35
June 29, 1976
102. Appropriation Act No. 3, 1976 .....	C-93
103. Appropriation Act No. 4, 1976 .....	C-94
104. Canada and France, Canada and Belgium and Canada and Israel, an Act to implement conventions for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax between .....	S-32
July 16, 1976
105. Criminal Law Amendment Act (No. 2) 1976 .....	C-84
106. Income Tax Act amendment .....	C-58
107. Medical Care Act amendment .....	C-68
108. Citizenship Act .....	C-20
109. Canadian Wheat Board Act (No. 2) amendment .....	C-88
 LOCAL and PRIVATE ACTS
December 13, 1974
110. British Columbia Telephone Company Act amendment .....	S-11
February 27, 1975
111. International Air Transport Association Act .....	S-18
July 30, 1975
112. Royal Canadian Legion Act amendment .....	S-28
113. Marriage Law Exemption Act (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) Act .....	C-1001
114. Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank Act .....	S-24
115. Alliance Security & Investigation, Ltd. Act .....	S-26
December 20, 1975
116. Northland Bank Act .....	C-1002
117. Eastern Canada Savings and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company Act .....	S-29
June 15, 1976
118. United Grain Growers Limited Act .....	S-33

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne

Consideration of Speech from the Throne, 7; termination date of Address in reply, 13; engrossing and presenting of Address to His Excellency the Administrator of the Government of Canada, 188
 Motion for Address in reply, Hon. Joan Neiman, 14-18; seconded, Hon. Ernest G. Côtteau, 18-20

Speakers: Senators

Bonnell, Lorne, 71-75	Grosart, Allister, 21-26
Burchill, G. Percival, 122	Hicks, Henry D., 111-16
Cameron, Donald, 37-45	Laird, Keith, 144-6
Carter, Chesley W., 116-20	Macdonald, John M., 138-42
Côtteau, Ernest G., 18-20	Manning, Ernest C., 68-71
Desruisseaux, Paul, 32-37	Neiman, Joan, 14-18
Fergusson, Muriel McQueen, 184-8*	Norrie, Margaret, 120-2
Flynn, Jacques, 180-4	O'Leary, M. Grattan, 48-51
Forsey, Eugene A., 51-58	Perrault, Raymond J., 26-30
Godfrey, John M., 58-59	Rowe, Frederick William, 62-68, 71
Graham, Alasdair, 174-7	Williams, Guy, 142-4

Administration of justice

Allegations of interference by cabinet ministers, 1825-6, 1846-8, 1857-9, 1890-3, 1920-3, 1930-1

Administrator of the Government of Canada

Laskin, Rt. Hon. Bora, P.C.

Royal Assent, 95, 220

Speech from the Throne at Opening of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament, 2-7

Administrator of the Government of Canada, Deputy

Martland, Hon. Ronald

Opening of Parliament, 1-2

Spence, Hon. Wishart F.

Royal assent, 313-14

Aeronautics

Authorization re instituting of security measures, 2125

Canadian air carriers landing in foreign countries, 2125

Conventions, international, 2124, 2125, 2130-1

Costs of security measures, apportioning of, 2131

Enforcements of regulations by Canada, 2130

Inadequacy of security checks, 2131

Jurisdiction over aircraft landing in Canada, 2130

Landing of foreign air carriers without being subjected to security measures, 2125

Security measures for civil aircraft of foreign air carriers, 2124, 2131

Speakers: Senators

Buckwold, Sidney L., 2125

Grosart, Allister, 2130-1

McDonald, A. Hamilton, 2125

Thompson, Andrew, 2124-5, 2131-2

Aeronautics bill S-34. 1r, 2103; 2r, 2124-5, 2130-2; ref to com, 2132; rep without amdt, 2141; 3r, 2141; r.a., 2207

Aging

- Compulsory retirement and lack of consideration for talent potential, 186-7
- 'Salute to Senior Citizens Day', Toronto, excerpt from speech by Rt. Hon. John G. Diefenbaker, 186
- See following item

Aging, the anatomy of Special Senate Committee report, 146-9, 320-3, 516-18

- Conferences on aging, provincial, 516-17
- Dilemmas of Modern Man, excerpt from speech of Dr. Nathan Shock, 516
- Employment of older citizens, 322
- Geriatric studies in faculties of medicine, 516
- Health departments, special research branches, 321
- National councils on social research and on aging, 322
- Old age security, reduction in age limit, 146
- Ontario Select Committee on Aging, 517, 518
- Population increase in respect of elderly persons, 516
- Recommendations accepted by government, 147; see Appendix to Debates of Oct. 22/74
- Senior Citizens' Week (US), 517; Ontario committee recommendations, 518
- Sociological aspects of aging, 516-17
- Suggestion that Hansard of Oct. 22/74 be sent to municipal and social agencies, 147
- Speakers: Senators
  - Carter, Chesley W., 320-3
  - Croll, David A., 146-9
  - Fergusson, Muriel McQueen, 516-18

Agreements, conventions and treaties

- Air transport agreements, international, 1135
- Alaska Boundary Treaty, 578
- Canadian Airline Pilots, Memorandum of Understanding between Minister of Transport and Pilots Association, 2276-7
- Helsinki Declaration on Security and Co-operation in Europe, 1293, 1466, 1471-5, 1757-61
- Tax treaties or conventions, countries with which Canada has concluded agreements, 855, 867, 925
- Textiles, arrangement regarding international trade in, 947
- UNESCO Convention (Beirut), 515
- Visual and Auditory Materials of an Educational, Scientific and Cultural Character, international circulation of, 487

Agricultural products cooperative marketing

- Bank loans for initial payments, processing, selling costs, 1631
- Deficiencies in drafting of legislation, 1631
- Food production for foreign aid, 1630
- Marketing, 1630-1
- Ontario wheat producers problems, 1631
- Stabilization of agricultural industry, 1630
- Tobacco industry, government payment re, 1631
- Speakers: Senators
  - Argue, Hazen, 1631-2
  - Buckwold, Sidney L., 1630-1
  - Lang, Daniel, 1631
  - Macdonald, John M., 1631

Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing bill C-21. 1r, 1617-18; 2r, 1630-2; 3r, 1640; r.a., 1712

Agricultural stabilization

Commodities covered by act, 1191
 Controlled production, 1193
 Cost of production formula, 1191
 Flexibility as to type of support program required, 1191
 Grain subsidies, 1191
 Instability of farm produce prices, 1190
 Production costs, 1191, 1192-3
 Production to alleviate world hunger, 1193
 Provincial and/or producer participation in program, 1191
 Regional stabilization plans, 1191
 Stop loss level, 1193
 Support price of 90% over 5 years, 1191
 Top loading, 1193-4

Speakers: Senators

Greene, John J., 1190-2
 Macdonald, John M., 1192-3

Agricultural Stabilization bill C-50. 1r, 1164; 2r, 1190-4; ref to com, 1194; rep without amdt, 1212; 3r, 1212;
 r.a., 1281

Agriculture

Agricultural products cooperative marketing, 1617-18, 1630-2, 1640
 Bank loans for initial payments, processing, selling costs, 1631
 Deficiencies in drafting of legislation, 1631
 Food production for foreign aid, 1630
 Marketing, 1630-1
 Ontario wheat producers problems, 1631
 Stabilization of agricultural industry, 1630
 Tobacco industry, government payment re, 1631
 Beef prices, 122
 Beef producers, federal assistance for, 240-1, 253
 Crop disasters, 84
 Crop insurance programs, 1227-9, 1468-71, 1622-3
 Excerpt from letter from Director of Crop Insurance Div. of Agricultural Canada, 1469-70
 Federal-provincial assistance, 1227
 Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, 1622
 Penalties for late payment of premiums, 1227, 1471
 Recommendations of Agriculture Committee, 1229
 Spot loss coverage, 1227-8, 1469, 1622-3
 Unit prices on selected crops, 1228-9, 1470-1
 Variations in provincial coverages, 1228, 1469
 Farm credit, 781, 788-91, 796-7, 803-07, 847-8, 863-5, 880-8, 889-93, 899
 Farm lands, need for conservation of, 121
 Feed grains, 47, 129-31, 157-9, 161-2, 584-6
 Freight assistance to Atlantic provinces, 1035
 Government policies, improvement in, 84-85
 Grain prices, 82, 84, 85
 New Brunswick
 Kent County, need for bilingualism in contacts with farmers, 122
 Small farms development program, applications unregistered at Moncton office, 1213
 Prairie grain advance payments, 583, 595-601, 614-15, 621-2, 684, 709, 731, 1136, 1156-7, 1166-8, 1180, 1198, 1281
 Quota restrictions, 85

Agriculture - *Concluded

- Small farms development program, number of loans approved for provinces, 1197-8, 1213
- Two-price wheat, 900, 928-30, 942-4, 1088-90, 1095
- Western Wheat Pools, 83
- Wheat Board, 12, 106-07, 169-72, 255, 265-7, 656
- Wheat Board annual report, 685

Agriculture, Standing Senate Committee

- Expenses, 160, 348
- Meetings during Senate sittings, 132, 243, 1022, 1045, 1196
- Membership, motion for and question re, 591
- Reports
  - Agricultural Stabilization bill C-50, rep without amdt, 1212
  - Animal Contagious Diseases bill C-28, rep without amdt, 1653
  - Crop insurance programs, 1212, 1227-9, 1468-71, 1622-3
  - Farm Credit bill C-34, rep with amdt and recommendations, 847-8, 863-5, 880-8, 889-92
  - Feeds bill S-10, rep with amdts, 584-6
    - Commons amdts ref to com, 1635-7; rep that Commons amdts be concurred in with one substitution, 1650-3, 1660-1
  - Kent County, NB, 2308, 2334
  - Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) C-10, rep without amdt, 684
  - Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 2) C-53, rep without amdt, 1180
  - Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, rep without amdt but with recommendations, 1088-90
  - Western Grain Stabilization bill C-41, rep without amdt, 1756
  - Wheat Board bill (No. 1) S-6, rep without amdt, 255
  - Wheat Board bill (No. 2) C-88, rep without amdt, 2356
- Terms of reference, 161, 206
- Western grain stabilization, com authorized to study subject matter of Bill C-41, 1615

Air Canada

- Bilingualism of pilots, 2344-8, 2378-86
- Service Fredericton-Ottawa, 854-5, 867
- Service Ottawa-Halifax, 1479-80
- Service St. John's-Ottawa, 506-08
- See* Air transport,
- Transportation.

Aircraft registry

- Aircraft Convention, International Recognition of Rights in, 173
- Central registry for property, federal-provincial conferences re, 1000
- Conflict between creditors, 173-4
- Constitutional problems in bill, 1000
- Correspondence between Committee and provincial Attorneys General and certain federal depts., 990-7
- Federal-provincial conferences, lack of, 1000-02
- Notice of interest, 173
- Property and civil rights of provinces, 1001
- Rolling stock of railways, 1001
- Seizure of aircraft, 173, 1000, 1001
- Signatories to convention, 173
- Transport and Communications Committee report, 980-1
- Treaty-making authority of government, 1001

Aircraft registry - Concluded*Speakers: Senators

Bourget, Maurice, 980-1, 990-7, 1002
 Connolly, John J., 1000-02
 Flynn, Jacques, 173-4, 981, 999-1000
 Giguere, Louis de G., 172-3
 Grosart, Allister, 174
 Langlois, Leopold, 1001

Aircraft Registry bill S-5. 1r, 12; 2r, 172-4; ref to com, 174; rep of com with recommendation that bill be not proceeded with, 980-1, 999-1002; bill removed from Order Paper, 1002

Aird, Hon. John B. (Resigned Nov. 28/74)
 Tributes, 334-6

Air transport

Aircraft registry, 12, 172-4, 980-1, 999-1002
 Excise tax, 1268, 1271
 Flight delays due to labour dispute, 2062-3, 2168
 Fredericton-Ottawa, 854-5, 867
 International Air Transport Association, 265, 301-03, 373, 382, 581, 1122, 1135
 Official Languages Act, language rights of air pilots in Quebec, 2344-8, 2378-86
 Operating deficit, 1271
 St. John's-Ottawa, 506-08

Alaska Boundary Treaty of 1825, 100th anniversary of establishment of Canada's western boundaries, 578

Alberta-British Columbia boundary

Boundary commission, composition of, 219, 225
 Federal-provincial agreement on boundary lines, 225

Speakers: Senators

O'Leary, M. Grattan, 223-4
 Prowse, J. Harper, 219, 225

Alberta-British Columbia Boundary bill S-13. 1r, 136; 2r, 219, 223-5; 3r, 225; Commons amdt, 326, concurred in, 336-7; r.a., 397

Alberta parliamentarians, visit to Senate, 1087

Alliance Security & Investigation, Ltd. bill S-26. 1r, 1022; 2r, 1053-4; ref to com, 1054; rep without amdt, 1074; 3r, 1091; Commons amdt concurred in, 1261; r.a., 1281

Amendments, observations or recommendations in committee reports regarding bills

Aircraft Registry bill S-5, 980-1, 999-1002
 Alberta-British Columbia Boundary bill S-13, 326, 336-7
 Alliance Security & Investigation, Ltd. bill S-26, 1261
 Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1573-81
 British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 325, 338
 Canada Business Corporations bill C-29, 666-71, 685, 712
 Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1571, 1589-95
 Continental Bank of Canada bill S-30, 1367-9, 1405-06, 1407-08
 Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, 848, 908-09
 Eastern Canada Savings and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company bill S-29, 1355, 1372
 Farm Credit bill C-34, 847-8, 863-5, 880-8, 889-93, 899
 Feeds bill S-10, 584-6, 1635-7, 1650-3, 1660-1

Amendments, observations or recommendations in committee reports regarding bills - *Concluded

- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 354-62, 366-8, 374-5, 382-5, 402-06, 446-54, 456, 969-71, 983, 1007-11, 1014-21, 1023-33, 1036-8, 1046-9, 1066, 1074-80
- Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, 348-9, 368
- Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23, 1369
- Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, 2058, 2066-8
- National Commercial Bank of Canada bill S-24, 1057, 1062-3
- Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, 840, 851, 1005
- Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 981-2, 1013, 1034
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill (No. 1) S-9, 240, 245
- Statute Law (Status of Women) bill C-16, 1122-3, 1136
- Territorial Lands bill S-20, 579
- Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, 1088-90

Andras, Hon. Robert K., Minister of Manpower and Immigration

- Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1695-1706
  - Amdts to be proclaimed in Jan/76, 1700
  - Appeal procedure, 1704; statistics on appeals, 1704
  - Application form for unemployment insurance, 1704
  - Claimants outside Canada, 1703
  - Dependency reduction from 75% to 66⅔%, 1696, 1697
  - Disentitlement, 1699
  - Escalation in unemployment insurance payments, 1697
  - Leaving employment voluntarily and refusal of suitable employment, 1702
  - Minimum benefit, 1702
  - Persons 65 yrs. and over, 1696, 1697, 1698
    - OAS and GIS benefits, 1696, 1698
    - Refund of UI contributions, 1701
    - Retirement benefits, 1702
    - Statistics on UI claims, 1698, 1701
  - Prison or institutional inmate, 1703
  - Qualifying time, extension of, 1700
  - Recovery of advance payments, 1703
  - Regional breakdown of government savings, 1700
  - Self-employed persons or partnerships, 1699
  - Sharing of costs between employees, employers and government, 1697
  - Sick benefits, 1700-01, 1702
  - Social insurance number, 1705
  - Social security measures, increase in benefits, 1696
  - Students returning to school, 1700
  - Suitable employment, defining of, 1703
  - Training or instruction for new employment, 1702-03
  - Unemployment statistics (1974), 1697

Animal contagious diseases

- Artificial insemination centres, 1632-3
- Compensation for diseased animals, 1632
- Export health certification, 1632, 1633
- Foreign meats, 1633
- Garbage feeding, 1633
- Maintenance of deadyards and rendering plants, 1632
- Penalty for non-reporting of disease, 1634
- Quarantine, 1634
- Regulatory powers of authorities, 1634
- Transportation and care of animals, 1633, 1634

Animal contagious diseases - *Concluded

Tuberculosis, brucellosis, hog cholera, 1632

Zoos and game farms, 1634

Speakers: Senators

Flynn, Jacques, 1633-4

McGrand, Fred A., 1632-3

Norrie, Margaret, 1634

Animal Contagious Diseases bill C-28. 1r, 1618; 2r, 1632-5; ref to com, 1635; rep without amdt, 1653; 3r, 1666; r.a., 1712

Animal Disease and Protection Act

See Animal Contagious Diseases bill C-28, 1618, 1632-5, 1653, 1666, 1712

Anti-inflation (Bill C-73)

Anti-Inflation Board, 1506, 1511-12

Functions and powers of board and administrator, 1506, 1511

Regulations of Governor in Council, 1506, 1511-12, 1583

Appeals, 1583

Budget reduction in Regional Economic Expansion Dept., 1683

Canadian Press article quoting statement of Hon. Mr. Pepin, 1576

Compensation, fringe benefits, etc., 1504, 1505

Constitutionality of legislation, question of, 1508

Cost inflation, wage and price controls to counteract, 1503

Energy food and housing supplies, 1504

Enforcement provisions, 1505-06, 1508

Existing contractual arrangements, 1505

Export profits, 1503

Family allowances, 1683

Federal-provincial cooperation in application of guidelines, 1507-08, 1512-13, 1586

Toronto high school teachers, 1507, 1508

Fish and farm products, exemption from guidelines, 1504

Government expenditures, 1504, 1507

Government rejection of Anti-Inflation Board's opinion on postal workers' contract, 1627-8

Interest rates, 1582, 1584

Bank profits, 1582

Judges' salaries, 1662, 1681

Labour leaders' attempts to defeat program, 1505, 1513

Low-income groups, 1504-05

Maintaining of balance of fiscal and monetary policies, 1504

National Defence cutbacks, effect on Nova Scotia economy, 1683

Postal workers, 1587

Prices and incomes policies, 1504, 1508

Productivity and compensation for, 1508-09

Professional categories, 1508, 1509

Voluntary compliance, 1504

Salaries of members, parliamentary secretaries and others, 1585

Termination clause, constitutionality of, 1505, 1573-87

US-Canada wage demands and productivity, 1507

Voting results on legislation in Commons, 1510-11

Wage guidelines, 1683

Anti-inflation (Bill C-73) - Concluded

Speakers: Senators

Argue, Hazen, 1558-9, 1563, 1578-9
 Asselin, Martial, 1509-13, 1574-5
 Austin, Jack, 1525-8
 Beaubien, L. P., 1582
 Benidickson, W. M., 1582, 1584-6
 Carter, Chesley W., 1575
 Denis, Azellus, 1580
 Desruisseaux, Paul, 1542-5
 Flynn, Jacques, 1578, 1579-80, 1586, 1587
 Forsey, Eugene A., 1508, 1532-7
 Greene, John J., 1507, 1508, 1532, 1535
 Grosart, Allister, 1508, 1538-42, 1578
 Hayden, Salter A., 1573
 Lawson, Edward M., 1582
 Manning, Ernest C., 1579
 McDonald, A. Hamilton, 1580-1
 McIlraith, George, 1577
 Molson, Hartland de M., 1573-4
 Perrault, Raymond J., 1503-08, 1511, 1512-13, 1575-7, 1579, 1580, 1582, 1586, 1587
 Phillips, Orville H., 1575, 1583-4
 Robichaud, Louis-J., 1578-9
 Smith, George I., 1508, 1509, 1528-32, 1537, 1580
 van Roggen, George C., 1577, 1581

See Canadian economy

Anti-Inflation Bill (No. 1) C-73. 1r, 1500-01; 2r, 1503-13, 1524-37, 1538-45, 1550-64; ref to com, 1564; rep without amdt but with observations, 1573; m for 3r, 1573, m in amdt, 1573-81, neg, 1581; m for 3r cont, 1581-3; further m in amdt, 1583-7, neg, 1587; 3r, 1587; r.a., 1617

Anti-inflation (Bill C-89)

Anti-Inflation Commission, members, duties, staff and performance, 2135-6
 Appeals, 2098
     Compensation cases, 2098
     Increases in compensation in excess of guidelines, 2098
     Right of notification to an appeal board, 2098
 Appeal Tribunal members, 2106
 Authority of Administrator, 2098
 Bank of Canada, 2135
 Blacklog of appeals to board, 2105, 2111, 2135
Canada's Income Policy, An Economic Assessment, article in Canadian Tax Journal, 2134
 Compensation in Quebec industry, 2098
 Conference Board of Canada, comments re anti-inflation program, 2133
 Export levy, effect on resource industries, 2113-14
     New plants and equipment, 2114
Financial Times survey re percentages of wage settlements, 2105
 Foreign exchange, need for in balance of payments, 2114
 Government spending, 2105
 Gross National Product, 2138-9
 Increase in workers affected by guidelines, 2112
 Inflationary effects of high interest rates, food, fuel and transportation costs, 2104
 Labour, failure of employers to file reports with AIB, 2139

Anti-inflation (Bill C-89) - Concluded

- Labour leaders' influence on inflationary trends, 2112
- Labour representation in Parliament, 2137
- Maritime wage settlements, 2104, 2106
- Money supply, 2105
- Price increases vs cost-of-living adjustments, 2112
- Small industries, 2113
- Statistics on inflationary trends (1971-77), 2133, 2135
  - Currency and demand costs (1968-75), 2133
  - Government spending, 2133, 2135
- Three-year limit, 2136
- US anti-inflation program, 2135-6
- US economy, 2138-9
- Women's professional and business groups, 2104
- Speakers: Senators
  - Asselin, Martial, 2133-6, 2150-1
  - Bell, A. E. Haddon, 2114
  - Flynn, Jacques, 2138
  - Greene, John J., 2136-7
  - Lawson, Edward M., 2139
  - Lamontagne, Maurice, 2112-13
  - Phillips, Orville H., 2104-05
  - Stanbury, Richard J., 2098, 2137-9
  - van Roggen, George C., 2113-15
- See Canadian economy*

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89. 1r, 2076; 2r, 2098, 2104-06, 2111-15, 2133-9; ref to com, 2139; rep without amdt, 2141; m for 3r, 2150, m in amdt, 2150-1, neg, 2151; 3r, 2151; r.a., 2152

Anti-inflation program

- Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1284, 1293, 1298-1303, 1319-30, 1349-53, 1411-15, 1443-5
- Committee authorized to study legislation in advance of Bill C-73 coming before Senate, 1426
- See Anti-Inflation bills C-73 and C-89*

Anti-inflation program, questions

- Budget reduction in Regional Economic Expansion Dept., 1683
- Family allowances, 1683, 1716-17, 1721
- Ferries operating between Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, 1815, 1860, 1861
- Judges salaries, 1662, 1681
- Meeting of Minister of Finance and provincial representatives re implementation of guidelines, 1549
- National Defence cutbacks in Nova Scotia, 1683, 1716
- Postal workers' contract, government rejection of Board's opinion on, 1627-8, 1655
- Saint John, N.B., increase in bus fare, 1815-16, 1846
- Wages guidelines, 1683

Appendixes

- Aging, recommendations of Special Senate Committee, report on action taken, see Appendix to Debates of Oct. 22/74
- Aircraft Registry bill S-5, correspondence between Transport and Communications Committee and provincial Attorneys General and certain federal departments, 990-7
- Air traffic
  - Letters from Canadian Air Traffic Control Association and Air Line Pilots Association, and letter to Minister of Transport, 2352-3
  - Memorandum of Understanding between the Minister of Transport and Pilots Association, 2276-7
- Bankruptcy and insolvency, rep of Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee on subject matter of Bill C-60, see Appendix to Debates of Dec. 11/75
- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Florida meeting, 2224-33
- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Quebec meeting, 1144-55
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, TV program 'Les Beaux Dimanches', report of Transport and Communications Committee, 1118-20
- Canadian textile problems, report of Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 2055-6
- Combines Investigation bill C-2, rep of com, 1589-95
- Competition policy in Canada and Combines Investigation Act, report of Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 675-83, 1135
- Conflict of interest, report of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 2303-06
- Criminal law, interim report of Legal and Constitutional Affairs on subject matter of Bill C-83, 2127-8
- Crop insurance programs, report of Agriculture Committee, 1227-9
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service
  - Third report of Special Joint Committee, 1003-04
  - Sixth report of Special Joint Committee, 1799-1812
- Estimates
  - Year ending Mar. 31/75, supplementary (D), 695-702
  - Year ending Mar. 31/76, supplementary (A), 1565-70
  - Year ending Mar. 31/76, supplementary (B), 1948-53
  - Year ending Mar. 31/77, 2173-5
  - Year ending Mar. 31/77, supplementary (A), 2234-5
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, unveiling of portrait in Senate foyer, speeches at ceremony, 469-71
- Forestry, Spruce budworm problem, position statement prepared by Environment Department, 1230-2
- Immigration Policy Committee, third and final report, 1376-84
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, second rep of com, 2401-05
- Loto Canada, rep of com, 2234-5
- Mexico, communique of Parliamentary delegation to Canada, 1887-8
- New Brunswick economic conditions, letter to Hon. Michel Fournier from Diocese of Bathurst, N.B., 1854-5
- Rules of the Senate, report of Committee on Standing Rules and Orders, 1331-6
- Science Policy Committee, first report, 1171-3
- Social welfare forms, see Debates of May 19/76
- Standing Committees, Joint Committees, see appendix of Apr. 27/76
- United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention, statement made in Commons by Secretary of State for External Affairs, 1248-9

Appropriation bill No. 3, 1974 C-31. 1r, 192; 2r, 192-3, 198-205; 3r, 213; r.a., 220

Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42. 1r, 373; 2r, 379-80, 385-95, 406-10, m to ref bill to com, 410-17, neg, 417; m for 2r agreed to, on division, 417; m for 3r, 426-30, m that bill be ref to com, 430-4, neg, 434, 3r agreed to, on division, 435; r.a., 467

- Appropriation bill No. 5, 1974 C-45. 1r, 402; 2r, 424-5, 440-1, 444-6; 3r, 446; r.a., 467
- Appropriation bill No. 1, 1975 C-54. 1r, 703; 2r, 703-07, 715-23; 3r, 733-6; r.a., 740
- Appropriation bill No. 2, 1975 C-55. 1r, 707; 2r, 707-08, 736-9; 3r, 739; r.a., 740
- Appropriation bill No. 3, 1975 C-64. 1r, 1097; 2r, 1129-32; 3r, 1133; r.a., 1134
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1975 C-79. 1r, 1571; 2r, 1602-15; 3r, 1615; r.a., 1617
- Appropriation bill No. 1, 1976 C-90. 1r, 1954; 2r, 1972-3, 1976-82; 3r, 1982-4; r.a., 2002
- Appropriation bill No. 2, 1976 C-91. 1r, 1965-6; 2r, 1972-3, 1984-91; 3r, 1991-2; r.a., 2002
- Appropriation bill No. 3, 1976 C-93. 1r, 2252; 2r, 2259, 2286-8; 3r, 2288; r.a., 2301
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1976 C-94. 1r, 2252; 2r, 2259; 3r, 2267-9; r.a., 2301

Argue, Hon. Hazen

Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing bill C-21, 1631-2

Ontario wheat producers problems, 1632

Agriculture

Crop loss insurance, 1227-9, 1468-71

Comparison of 1976 prices for insurable crops, 1470-1

Excerpt from letter from Director of Crop Insurance Div. of Agriculture Canada, 1469-70

Penalties for late payment of premiums, 1470

Spot-loss coverage, 1469

Variations in provincial coverages, 1469

Agriculture, Standing Senate Committee

Expenses, 160, 348

Meetings during Senate sittings, 1045

Membership, question re motion for, 591

Reports

Agricultural Stabilization bill C-50, rep without amdt, 1212

Animal Contagious Diseases bill C-28, rep without amdt, 1653

Crop insurance programs, 1212, 1227-9, 1468-71

Farm Credit bill C-34, rep with amdt, 847-8, 863-5, 880-8, 889-92

Feeds bill S-10, rep with amdt, 584-6

Commons amdt ref to com, 1635-7; rep that Commons amdt be concurred in with one substitution, 1650-3, 1660-1

Kent County, NB, 2308, 2334

Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) C-10, rep without amdt, 684

Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 2) C-53, rep without amdt, 1180

Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, rep without amdt but with recommendations, 1088-90

Wheat Board bill S-6, rep without amdt, 255

Terms of reference, motion re, 161, 206

Argue, Hon. Hazen - *Continued

- Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1558-9, 1563, 1578-9
  - Agricultural organizations and farming community, 1558-9, 1563
    - Adverse aspects of legislation, 1558-9
    - Agricultural support programs, 1563
    - Minister of Agriculture, Hon. Eugene Whelan, 1559
    - Press report re acceptance of proposals, 1558
    - Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, 1558; press report of president's radio speech, 1558
- British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 133
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2406, 2415-17
  - Adjournment of debate on Bill S-23, 2416
  - Discrimination in past legislation, 2415
  - Lower income and minority groups, 2415
  - Senate responsibility, 2415, 2416
- Energy, conservation of fuel of car awaiting Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, 2209, 2443
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 791, 805-06, 847, 863, 886-8, 890-1
  - Age limit, 806, 863, 890
  - Eligibility criteria, 805
  - French Canadians enrolled in agricultural courses, 806
  - Interest rate, 791
  - Letter from Canadian Federation of Agriculture, 891
  - Small farm development, 805
- Feeds bill S-10, 129-31, 584-6, 1485-7, 1635, 1636-7, 1650-3, 1660-1
  - Commons amdts, 1635, 1636-7
  - Definition of 'feed', 130
  - Feed inspections, 585
  - Manufactured feeds, authority to regulate, 130
  - Medicaments, 585
  - Modifications proposed, 130
  - Penalty upon conviction for indictable offence, 1635, 1636
  - Pet foods, 585
  - Responsibilities of Agriculture Canada, 585
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and o'hers, 82-83
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, Standing Senate Committee
  - Orders of the day, notification of item standing in senator's name, 2123
- Investigations in Parliament, point of order re discussion of subject, 1478
- Manitoba Indian Brotherhood, meeting with senators, 290-1
- National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment) bill S-23, 800-02, 1459
  - Deterrent aspect, 800
  - Government attitude towards total abolition of death sentence, 800
  - Murders of Toronto policemen cited, 800, 801
  - Occupational hazards vs loss of life, 801
  - Parole or leave of absence records, 801
  - Statistics on killings of policemen, 801
- Northland Bank bill C-1002, 1599-1600
- Olympic bill C-63, 1201-02
  - National context of Games, 1202
  - Western attitude towards expenditures undertaken for Games, 1201-02
  - Western Canada projects sponsored by federal government, 1202
- Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) C-10, 597-9, 600, 602
  - Crowsnest Pass Agreement re freight rates, 598
  - DREE, 599

Argue, Hon. Hazen - Continued*Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) - Concluded

Elevator companies, question of commission for, 597

Flax, 597-8

Grants and subsidies, 599

Railway branch lines, proposed removal of, 598-9

Rules of the Senate

Debate procedure, 601

Point of order re amending of money bills, 886-7

Excerpt from The Modern Senate of Canada, 887

Precedents of money bills amendments by the Senate, 887

Rights of Senate in Matters of Financial Legislation, report of special committee, 887-8

Question of privilege re adjournment of debate on Bill S-23, 1459

Rules of the Senate, report of Standing Rules and Orders Committee, 1460-2

Adjournment of debates for prolonged periods, 1462

Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee, 1462

Oral questions, 1460

Quorum of committee meetings, 1460

Quotations from speeches made in Commons, 1460

Terms of reference of committees, 1461

Procedure or practice inconsistent with practices and usages of Senate, 1461

Senate

Business, 1036, 1108, 2121

NDP member for Yorkton-Melville, statement re Senate, 1636

Protective staff, summer uniforms, 1156, 1213-14

Senate reform, discussion out of order, 1578-9

Tailoring service for members of Parliament, 2167-8, 2209

Televising of committee proceedings, 549-50

Senate and House of Commons (Supplementary Retirement Benefits) bill C-81, 2195, 2204

Press criticism of members of Parliament, 2195

Saskatchewan legislature, salary increases, 2195

Transportation, Crowsnest Pass freight rates, 889, 924*Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, 928-30, 1088, 1089

Bread prices, 929

Government disregard of escalating costs, 929-30

Statements to Commons committee re floor price:

Canadian Federation of Agriculture, 929

National Farmers Union, 929

Ontario Wheat Producers' Marketing Board, 930

Palliser Wheat Growers Assoc., 930

West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12, 82-85

Agriculture policies, improvement in, 84-85

Crop disasters, 84

Grain prices, 85

Prairie farmers and grain handlers reaction to Perry report, 84

Quota restrictions, 85

Western Wheat Pools, 83

West Coast Ports Operations bill C-56, 727-8

Disruptions in economy due to strikes, 727

Western farmers, difficulties of communication with government, 727-8

Wheat Board annual report, 685, 732

Argue, Hon. Hazen - Concluded

- Wheat Board bill (No. 1) S-6, 170-2, 266-7
  - Cash advances, 267
  - Excerpts from press release by Senator Argue, 171
  - Final payments, 170
  - Grain prices, 170-1
  - Malting barley, 266
  - Operations of Board, 170
- Wheat Board bill (No. 2) C-88, 2331-3
  - Malting barley, 2332
  - Wheat grading, 2332

Argus Corporation Ltd., takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd., reference to Senate Committee, inquiry dropped, 1063-4

Army benevolent fund

Statutory authority for management of Army Welfare Fund, 303-04

Speakers: Senators

- Grosart, Allister, 304
- Macnaughton, Alan A., 303-04

Army Benevolent Fund bill C-17. 1r., 280; 2r, 303-04; 3r, 307; r.a., 314

Asselin, Hon. Martial, P.C.

- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1509-13, 1574-5
  - Anti-Inflation Board, 1511-12
    - Functions and powers of Board and Administrator, 1511
    - Governor in Council's powers, 1511-12
  - Economic dictatorship aspect of legislation, 1509
  - Government expenditures, 1509-10
  - Labour attempts to defeat legislation, 1513
  - Private sector suppliers of commodities and services, 1512
  - Professional categories, 1508, 1509
  - Provincial jurisdiction over guidelines, 1512, 1513
  - Three-year period of program, 1510, 1512, 1574-5
  - Voting results in Commons, 1510-11
- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, 2133-6, 2150-1
  - Anti-Inflation Commission, members, duties, staff and performance, 2135-6
  - Backlog of appeals to Board, 2135-6
  - Bank of Canada, 2135
  - Canada's Income Policy, An Economic Assessment*, article in Canadian Tax Journal, 2134
  - Conference Board of Canada, comments re anti-inflation program, 2133
  - Statistics on inflationary trends (1971-77), 2133, 2135
    - Currency and demand costs (1968-75), 2133
    - Government spending, 2133, 2135
  - Three-year period of program, 2136
  - US anti-inflation program, 2135-6
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 415-16
- Beef producers, federal assistance for, 240-1, 253
- Budget, date of presentation, 161

Asselin, Hon. Martial, P.C. - Continued

- Canadian economy
  - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1443-5
  - Excerpts from speeches by Prime Minister re government policies on controls, 1443
  - Federal-provincial jurisdiction, 1444
  - Government expenditures, 1443-4
    - Aircraft purchases, 1444
    - Consultants fees, 1444
    - Microsystems, 1444
    - Mirabel Airport, 1444
  - Gross National Product, 1443
- Crime and violence, 1659-60
  - Motion in adm't to amdt re terms of reference of proposed committee, 1660, agreed, 1660
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 587-9
  - Credibility of witnesses, 588
  - Miscarriage of justice, 588
  - Murders of policemen and prison guards, 588
  - Responsibility of judge and jury, 588-9
  - Royal prerogative, 587-9
- Criminal Code, illegal abortions, acquittal of Dr. Henry Morgentaler of charges, 1036
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, 1767-70
  - Bail provisions, 1767
  - Crimes against internationally protected persons: Prevention and Punishment - an analysis of the UN Convention, 1769
  - Impaired driving, breathalyzer test, 1768-9
    - Rehabilitation of alcoholics, lack of facilities, 1769
    - Suspension of licence and sentence of imprisonment, 1768
  - Jury decision, reversal by court of appeal, 1767-8
    - Canadian Institute of Public Opinion survey re, 1767
    - Morgentaler case*, 1767
  - Kidnapping and extortion, 1769
  - Quebec inquiry into organized crime, 1769
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2407-08
  - Expenses for maintenance of jail inmates, 2408
  - First and second degree murder and prison term for, 2408
  - Gallup poll, 2407
  - 'Justice in the street' by policemen, danger of, 2408
  - Montreal and Quebec City statistics on murders, 2408
  - Parole Board, 2408
  - Rehabilitation, 2408
  - Responsibility of lawmakers, 2407
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-214, 377-8
- Estimates, Loto Canada, 2245-6
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 402-04, 1007-10; m to amend com rep, 1010-11
  - Educational drawbacks as result of criminal record, 1008-09
  - Onus of proof for possession or trafficking of cannabis, 1008, 1011
  - Parole or unconditional release, 1008
  - Penalty for importing, exporting, trafficking or possession, 1009
  - 'Traffic', 'give', and 'sell', definitions of, 1009-11
- Grey Cup Game, Vancouver, 300, 301
- Immigration bill S-12, 194-5, 214, 216

Asselin, Hon. Martial, P.C. - Continued

- Industry, Canadian textile problems, 901, 971, 978-9, motion that subject matter be ref to com, 978-9, agreed, 979
  - Agreements, importing countries disregard of, 844
  - Le Devoir* article re unemployment in Victoriaville, 844
  - Quebec textile workers, 844
  - Textile Board recommendations, 845
  - Textile companies converting to import companies, 844
  - Wages, Canada vs other countries, 844
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Tokyo conference, 245-8
  - Japan, economic expansion, 245-7; employment standards, 246-7; inflation, 246, 248
  - Labour unions and strikes in Canada, effect on foreign investments, 245-6
  - Middle East, 247-8; Canadian peacekeeping force, 247
- Judges bill C-47, 1051-2
  - Annuities for judges and deceased judges' spouses, 1052
  - Canadian Judicial Council, 1052
  - Pensions, 1052
  - Salary increases, 1051-2
  - Selection of judges, 1051
  - Superior Court workload, 1052
- Legislation, difficulty in dealing with omnibus bills, 1767
- Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001, 1251
- Olympic bill C-63, 1200-01
  - Deficit forecast, 1200
  - Federal government responsibility re expenditures, 1200-01
  - Point of order re minister speaking on behalf of government, 1202
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1285, 1319, 1355
- Privileges and immunities of senators, 1435
- Public Service, strike of general labour and trades group, 642
- Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation for maintenance, 537-40
  - Agreements between federal-provincial governments for services of RCMP, 538
  - Financial implications, 538
  - Conferences and correspondence between Quebec Justice Minister and Solicitor General, 538-9
  - Constitutional jurisdiction of provinces over police matters, 539
  - Opting-out formula, 539
  - Police Costs - Where are all those Millions?*, booklet published by Quebec Justice Dept., 538
  - Separatism, danger of upsurge as result of federal-provincial differences on subject, 540
  - Staff and equipment, lack of facilities to fight Quebec organized crime, 538
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1658
- Representation bill 1974 C-36, 423-4
  - Amalgamation formula, 423-4
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 818-20
  - Bankruptcy of livestock breeders, 820
  - Deterioration of supplies in storage, 819
  - Injunction granted to manufacturers and millers, 819
  - Precedents of emergency legislation, 819, 820
  - Wage and job security demands, 819
- Salaries (Lieutenant Governors) bill C-24, 1091-3, 1094
  - Comparison to salaries of other officials, 1092
  - Pensions, 1092-3
  - Status of lieutenant governors, 1091-2
- Senate business, 923
- Television and radio coverage of proceedings of Senate and committees, 1487-8
  - Controls, 1488
  - Public reaction, 1487-8
  - Resolution adopted by Commons re broadcasting of proceedings, 1487

Asselin, Hon. Martial, P.C. - Concluded

- Work ethic in Canada, 339-42
- Guaranteed annual income, 339-40
- Real and fraudulent poverty, 341
- Vaincre la pauvreté dans les pays riches*, by Lionel Stoleru, 341
- Waste and duplication in social security programs, 340

Atlantic provinces

- Development of tidal power in Bay of Fundy, 2070, 2142
- Feed grains, freight assistance, 1035
- Ferry service operating between PEI, NB, NS and NFLD, and North Sydney and Port aux Basques, possible increase in fares, 1815, 1860, 1861
- Forestry, devastation by Spruce budworm, 1158-63, 1169-70, 1218-20, 1230-2
- Migratory bird sanctuaries, contracts for warden services, 279
- Nova Scotia, storm damage, 135-6
- Offshore oil and gas resources, 2070, 2141-2
- Transportation, Prince Edward Island, 73
- See names of individual provinces

Atlantic provinces, transportation

- British North America Act as it pertains to transportation, 2049-54, 2063-6, 2070, 2106-08, 2115-18, 2196-8

Auditor General of Canada

- Proposed referral to National Finance Committee of report on office of Auditor General of Canada, 796

Austin, Hon. Jacob (Introduced in the Senate Nov. 5/75)

- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1525-8
  - Aspect of 'war' in economic outlook, 1526
  - Disappearance of values of social qualities of life, 1526
  - Economic specialization of interests, 1526
  - Energy crisis, 1527
  - Government spending in response to society's needs, 1526-7
  - Politicians' role and responsibility to public in combatting inflationary trends, 1527-8
- Canada-US relations
  - BC provincial election, question re comments of US ambassador, 1627
  - Canada-US boundary, government policy re demarcation line on Dixon Entrance on Strait of Juan de Fuca, George's Bank and northwards, 2308
  - Communications between Canada and US, newspaper article re remarks attributed to Senator Davey, 2192-3, 2377-8
  - Unofficial meeting of US ambassador with media representatives in Ottawa, 1626
- Canadian Labour Congress
  - Political affiliation, 2153-4
  - Possibility of general strike, newspaper report re meeting and proposals for liberal corporatism, 2130
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2444-5
  - Gallup poll, 2445
  - Parolees, potential for repeat of murders, 2444
  - Vengeance, 2444-5

Energy

- Construction of Arctic gas pipeline, supply of Arctic gas to southern Canada, 2037-8, 2069-70
- Offshore oil and gas resources in Atlantic provinces, 2070, 2141-2, 2202-03
- Proposed construction of pipeline from Prince Rupert to Edmonton, 2037
- Proposed pipeline treaty between Canada and United States, 2037

Austin, Hon. Jacob - *Concluded

- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2314-15, 2337
  - Broadcasting, 2315
  - KVOS-TV, 2315
  - Canadian ownership and advertising, percentage stipulation, 2314-15
  - 'Substantially the same', definition of, 2314
  - Time* magazine, 2314-15
- Labour, the working poor in Canada, 2154-9
  - Benefits for those under 65 yrs., 2157
  - Canada Pension Plan, 2157
  - Excerpt from speech of Prime Minister at Canadiana Conference, 2158
  - Expansion of money supply and redistribution of resources, 2155
  - Gallup poll results re income statistics, 2155
  - Misallocation of human and physical resources, 2155
  - Old age security, 2156-7
  - Responsibility to work, 2156
  - Social security review (1973), 2156
  - Welfare expenditures (1966-76), 2157
  - Women in the labour force, 2157
- Laing, Honourable Arthur, P.C., the late, 1525
- Marine safety, British Columbia fisheries, 1814-15
- Newfoundland, financial assistance for Come-By-Chance refinery, 1826-7, 1860
- Pacific Western Airlines, possible move of head office to Calgary, 1824-5, 1859, 1868-9, 2376, 2444
- Role of senators and responsibility to nation, 1525, 1527
- Trudeau, Right Honourable Pierre Elliott, Prime Minister, tribute to, 1525

Baltic Nations

- Visitors to the Senate, Acting Honorary Consul General of Estonia and Acting Honorary Consul of Latvia, 1867

Banking, Trade and Commerce, Standing Senate Committee

- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, rep without amdt, 2141
- Anti-inflation policy, m to authorize com to study subject matter of Bill C-73, 1408, agreed, 1426
- Bankruptcy and insolvency, com authorized to examine and report on subject matter of Bill C-60, 911
- Budget, 160, 348, 524-5, 911, 1502, 1781, 2119
- Competition policy in Canada and the Combines Investigation Act, com authorized to study, 109-10
- Engagement of services of counsel and technical, clerical and other personnel, 1427-8
- Income tax, com authorized to study legislation prior to receipt of bills, 280, 298-9
- Industry, Canadian textile problems, subject matter ref to com, 979
- Meetings during adjournment, 2047-8
- Meetings during Senate sittings, 373, 505, 535, 563, 1006, 1035, 1403, 1416, 1438, 1485, 1502, 1856-7, 2069, 2098, 2120, 2192, 2216, 2338, 2376
- Members, 96
- Ottawa Journal* article re comments of President of Time Canada before Committee, 2140
- Reports
  - Alliance Security and Investigation, Ltd. bill S-26, rep without amdt, 1074
  - Anti-inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, rep without amdt but with observation re termination clause, 1573
  - Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, rep without amdt, 2141
  - Bankruptcy and insolvency, 1596-7
  - Canada Business Corporations bill C-29, rep with amdts, 666-71, 685
  - Canadian textile problems, 2055-6
  - Combines Investigation bill C-2, rep without amdt but with observations, 1571, 1589-95

Banking, Trade and Commerce, Standing Senate Committee - *Concluded

Reports - *Concluded

- Competition policy and Combines Investigation Act, 663-6, 675-83, 1121-2, 1135
- Continental Bank of Canada bill S-30, rep with amds, 1367-9, 1405-06; m to refer rep back to com, 1406; further rep of com, 1407-08, adopted, 1408
- Customs bill S-4, rep without amdt, 213
- Customs Tariff bill (No. 1) C-27, rep without amdt, 280
- Customs Tariff bill (No. 2) C-39, rep without amdt, 499
- Eastern Canada and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company bill S-29, rep with amds (French text only), 1355
- Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40, rep without amdt but with observations re unlicensed wholesalers, 570
- Excise Tax bill C-66, rep without amdt, 1278
- Explosives bill S-17, rep without amdt, 280
- Federal Business Development Bank bill C-14, rep without amdt, 426
- Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements bill C-57, rep without amdt, 1197
- Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies bill S-7, rep without amdt, 160
- Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, rep without amdt, 645
- Income Tax bill (No. 2) C-65, rep without amdt, 1454
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, rep with amds, 2252-5, 2269-75; further rep without amdt, 2389-2400, 2401-05
- Income Tax Conventions bill S-32, rep without amdt, 1867
- Indian Oil and Gas bill C-15, rep without amdt, 402
- Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, rep with amds, 348-9, 368
- National Commercial Bank of Canada bill S-24, rep with amds, 1057, 1062-3
- Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, rep with amds, 840, 851, 1005
- Olympic bill C-63, rep without amdt, 1211
- Petro-Canada bill C-8, rep without amdt, 1244
- Petroleum Administration bill C-32, rep with amds, 981-2, 1002, 1034
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, rep without amdt, 1639
- United Growers Limited bill S-33, rep without amdt, 2003
- Terms of reference, 110, 1427-8
- Tributes to Chairman Senator Hayden, 1316-17

Bankruptcy and insolvency

- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee authorized to examine and report on subject matter of Bill C-60, 911; rep of com, 1596-7
- Bankruptcy judge, 1597
- Registrar's position, reinstatement of, 1596
- Rights and priorities of secured creditors, 1596

Barrow, Hon. Augustus Irvine (Introduced in the Senate Sept. 30/74)

- Eastern Canada Savings and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company bill S-29, 1307-08
- Explosives bill S-17, 263-4
- Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75, 1628-9, 1630
  - Auditor General's appt. as auditor, 1629
  - Background and statistics of annuities, 1628
  - Return rate increase, 1628-9
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1639

Beaubien, Hon. L. P.

- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1582
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2411

Beaubien, Hon. L. P. - *Concluded

- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1929
- Canada-US relations, 1929
- Canadian companies controlled in US, 1929
- Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, 281
- National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment) bill S-23, 835-6
  - Crime increase, 835-6
  - Montreal kidnappings, 835
  - Violation of parole conditions, 836
- Senate business, 1876

Beaver (Castor canadensis)

- See* Canadian Sovereignty bill C-373, 685-8, 709, 714, 731.

Beetz, Hon. Jean, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada

- Royal assent, 1791-2, 2002, 2207

Belgium

- Canada-Belgium income tax convention, 1792, 1793-8

Belisle, Hon. Rheal

- Broadcasting, appearance of Gerda Munsinger on CBC television program, 1619
- Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission bill C-5, 849-51
  - Canadian Transport Commission members and employees, protection re employment, 850
  - Communications: Some Federal Proposals*, 850
  - Licensing of cable television, 850
  - Provincial consultations and jurisdiction, 849-50
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 562, 564-7
  - Appeals at state expense, 565
  - Compensation for victims of crime, 564-5
  - Deterrent aspect, 565
  - Innocent persons convicted of crime, 565
  - Life sentence, duration of, 565
  - Police officers and prison guards, lack of law enforcement in murders of, 566
  - Rehabilitation of convicted persons, 565
  - Responsibilities of judge and jury, 565
  - Royal prerogative, 566-7

May's Parliamentary Practice, Queen's Consent to Bills cited, 566

- Customs bill S-4, 167-9
  - Jurisdiction to outer limits of territorial sea of Canada, 168
  - Oil explorations of foreign origin off Atlantic coast, 168
  - Preferential tax exemptions to Canadian companies in resource explorations, 168-9
- Customs Tariff bill (No. 1) C-27, 270-1
  - Tariff protection, effect on consumer, 270-1
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-370, 527, 528
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 891
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 167-8
- Fire Losses Replacement Account bill C-18, 353
  - Conditions covering replacement of or repair to buildings, 353
- Ocean Dumping Control bill C-37, 1049-50
  - Alternate disposal, 1050
  - Conference on Law of the Sea, 1050
  - Deliberate or accidental dumping, 1051
  - Federal-provincial consultation, 1050
  - London Convention, 1050

Belisle, Hon. Rheal - *Concluded

- Ocean Dumping Control bill C-37 - Concluded
  - Ontario, pollution of lakes and rivers, 1050
  - Permits for dumping, 1050
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1665
- Rules of the Senate
  - Point of order re senators taking part in debate, 560
  - Use of unparliamentary language in debate, 562
- Senate business, 1881
- Statute Law (Status of Women) 1974 bill C-16, 1104-07
  - Cadet organizations, 1106
  - Education, 1105
  - Labour force discriminations, 1105
  - Pension inequalities, 1106
  - Political status, 1105
  - Speakers of the Senate, 1105
  - Unemployment insurance, 1106
- Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, 1708-09, 1710
  - Common-law spouse, 1708
  - Equalization of benefits to male and female employees, 1708
  - Interest on return of contributions, 1708-09, 1710
  - Members of Parliament, 1709
  - Widows of senators, 1709
  - Widows without survivor benefits, 1708
- Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances) bill C-4, 258-62
  - Common-law wife, 261
  - Dependent children, 260
  - Equality for male and female veterans, 260
  - Widowers of female veterans attaining age of 60 yrs., 261
- Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1701
  - Refunds to persons 65 yrs. and over, 1701

Bell, Hon. A.E. Haddon

- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2), C-89, 2114
- British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 132-3, 338
  - Capital stock, 132
  - Construction expenditures, 132
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2075
- Criminal Code bill S-21, 574-5
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-85, 2441-2
  - Abortion vs murder, 2441-2
  - Deterrent aspect, 2441
- Environmental affairs, protection of coastal waters from radio-active pollution, 889, 924
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1018-19, 1031-3, 1076
  - Certificate of analysis, 1033
  - Compulsory treatment, 1032
  - Criminal records of young offenders, 1032
  - Penalty, 1032
  - Possession for purpose of trafficking, 1032-3
  - Preventive detention of traffickers, 1032
- Immigration, Gulf Islands, BC, ministerial discretion permits, 2322
- Visitors to Parliament, abatement of noise in Senate precincts, 1012
- Western Grain Stabilization bill C-41, 1725

Benidickson, Hon. W. M., P.C.

- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1584-6
  - Bank interest rates, 1582, 1584
  - Government expenditures, 1585
  - Ottawa Citizen* article titled 'Carpets escape the axe', 1585
  - Salaries of members, Parliamentary secretaries and others, 1585
  - Termination clause, 1584
- Appropriation bill No. 1, 1975 C-54, 703, 704
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1975 C-79, 1609-12, 1614
- Appropriation bill No. 2, 1976 C-91, 1991
- Argus Corporation Ltd., takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd., reference to Senate committee, inquiry dropped, 1063-4
- Committee proceedings, delay in printing and distribution of, 703-04
- Customs Tariff bill (No. 1) C-27, 262, 263
  - Articles exempted, 262
  - Petroleum products, 262
  - Schedules omitted from bill format, 263
- Customs Tariff bill (No. 3) C-67, 1209-10, 1215
  - Aircraft and aircraft engines, 1210
  - Gifts, 1210
  - Petroleum products, 1210
- Estimates
  - Corporate power in relation to expenditures, 1611-12
    - Canadian Establishment*, by Peter Newman, 1612
    - Conflict of interest, excerpts from letters re, 1612
    - Power Corporation of Canada Ltd., 1611-12
    - Royal Commission re, 1611-12
  - Energy, Mines and Resources, 1609
  - Information Canada, 1610
  - Oil compensation program, 1609
  - Transport Department, 1609-11
    - Aircraft manufacturing, 1610-11
    - Canadair-Government of Canada option, 1610-11, 1614-15
    - Mirabel and Toronto Airports, 1610
    - STOL aircraft, 1609-10
- Law Reform Commission bill C-43, 624-5, 660-1
  - Assets distributed through bankruptcy, 661
  - Benefits available to lower income groups, 660-1
  - Canadian Welfare article by Prof. Friedland on 'Law for the Layman', 661
  - Composition of Commission, 624; members of legal profession, 625
  - Family property and sharing of assets in event of marriage breakup, 624
  - Judgment debtors, problems through ignorance of law, 661
  - Law educational system, 625
  - Legal profession statistics, Quebec and Ontario, 625
  - Objectives for year in field of criminal law, family law, code of sentencing, expropriation, etc., 624
  - Poor man's bankruptcy, 661
  - Studies of commission to date, 624
- Manpower and Immigration Dept., Manpower Division, 419-20
  - West Germany economic development, report on, 419-20; unemployment and inflation, plans re, 419
- Northland Bank bill C-1002, 1600
- Parliamentary immunity, 1399
- Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) C-10, 615

Benidickson, Hon. W. M., P.C. - *Concluded

- Rules of the Senate
  - Point of order on inquiry re Air Canada service, 506, 507
  - Presentation of committee report before review by senators, 1606
  - Special procedure or practice in committee, approval of Senate for, 1364
  - Time of daily sittings, 1364
- Salaries (Lieutenant Governors) bill C-24, 1095
- Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances) bill C-4, 269-70
- Televising of committee proceedings, 514, 521-2
- Welfare ministers' conference, statement by Minister of NHW re federal policy in social welfare field, 556, 564

Bilingualism and biculturalism

- Air Canada pilots, 2344-8, 2378-86
- Appointment of unilingual employees over 60 yrs. to bilingual positions, 290
- New Brunswick agricultural representatives, 121-2
- Nova Scotia Acadians, 18-19
- Official languages, implementation of resolution, report to Parliament tabled, 289-90
- Official languages, report of Commissioner tabled, 757
- Public Service bilingualism, statistics, 290
- Quebec Bill 22 on use of French language, 55-58

Bills, general data

- Amendments, observations or recommendations regarding bills
  - Aircraft Registry bill S-5, 980-1, 999-1002
  - Alberta-British Columbia Boundary bill S-13, 326
  - Alliance Security & Investigation, Ltd. bill S-26, 1261
  - Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1573
  - British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 325, 338
  - Canada Business Corporations bill C-29, 666-71, 685, 712
  - Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1571, 1589-95
  - Continental Bank of Canada bill S-30, 1367-9, ref back to com for further report, 1405-06, further rep of com, 1407-08
  - Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, 848, 908-09, 1005
  - Eastern Canada Savings and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company bill S-29, 1355, 1372
  - Farm Credit bill C-34, 847-8, 863-5, 880-8, 889-92, 899
  - Feeds bill S-10, 584-6, Commons amds, 1467, 1480, 1485-6, ref to com, 1635-7
  - Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 300, 354-62, 366-8, 374-5, 382-5, 402-06, 446-54, 456, 969-71, 983, 1007-11, 1014-21, 1023-33, 1036-8, 1046-9, 1066, 1074-80
  - Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2252-5, 2269-75, ref back to com, further rep without amdt, 2389-2400, 2401-05
  - Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, 348-9, 368
  - Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23, 1369
  - Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, 2058, 2066-8
  - National Commercial Bank of Canada bill S-24, 1057, 1062-3
  - Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, 840, 851, 1005
  - Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 981-2, 1013, 1034
  - Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill S-9, 240, 245
  - Statute Law (Status of Women) 1974 bill C-16, 1122-3, 1136
  - Territorial Lands bill C-20, 579
  - Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, 1088-90
- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, lack of regulations in format, 1529

Bills, general data - *Concluded

- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, subject matter ref to Legal and Constitutional Committee, 940-1
- Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada) bill C-223, ref to com after m for 3r, 740
- Income Tax bill C-49, 645-7
- Legislation received in Senate without original explanatory notes, 622, 709
- Minister of Manpower and Immigration invited to take part in Senate debate on unemployment insurance, 1695-1705
- Minister of State for Urban Affairs invited to take part in Senate debate on national housing, 748-57, 1673-81
- Omnibus bills, difficulty in dealing with, 1742, 1775-6
- Printing and distribution of bills, 61
- Private bills
  - Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001, suspension of rule 95, 1234-5
  - Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, suspension of rule 95, 1207-09
- Public and private bills dealt with during session, 1286-7
- Public bills, motion to suspend rules dropped, 1292
- Resume of Senate work Oct. 21-Dec. 20/75, 1717
- Right to Information bill C-225, subject matter ref to Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 467
- Schedules omitted from bill format, 263
- Superannuation bill C-52, rep of Committee on Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, 1545-7

Bills, Numerically, Commons

- C-2 Combines Investigation
- C-3 British North America Acts 1867 to 1975
- C-4 Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances)
- C-5 Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission
- C-8 Petro-Canada
- C-9 Export Development
- C-10 Prairie Grain Advance Payments
- C-12 West Coast Grain Handling Operations
- C-13 Northern Canada Power Commission
- C-14 Federal Business Development Bank
- C-15 Indian Oil and Gas
- C-16 Statute Law (Status of Women) 1974
- C-17 Army Benevolent Fund
- C-18 Fire Losses Replacement Account
- C-19 Two-Price Wheat
- C-20 Citizenship
- C-21 Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing
- C-22 Canada Pension Plan
- C-23 Lieutenant Governors Superannuation
- C-24 Salaries
- C-25 Environmental Contaminants
- C-26 Civil Service Insurance
- C-27 Customs Tariff (No. 1)
- C-28 Animal Contagious Diseases
- C-29 Canada Business Corporations
- C-31 Appropriation No. 3, 1974
- C-32 Petroleum Administration
- C-33 Cultural Property Export and Import

Bills, Numerically, Commons - Continued

C-34	Farm Credit
C-36	Representation 1974
C-37	Ocean Dumping Control
C-38	Public Service Employment, Staff Relations, Superannuation, Interpretation
C-39	Customs Tariff (No. 2)
C-40	Excise Tax and Excise
C-41	Western Grain Stabilization
C-42	Appropriation No. 4, 1974
C-43	Law Reform Commission
C-44	Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries
C-45	Appropriation No. 5, 1974
C-46	National Housing (No. 1)
C-47	Judges Act and Certain Acts related to the Supreme Courts of Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island
C-48	Railway
C-49	Income Tax (No. 1)
C-50	Agricultural Stabilization
C-51	Northwest Territories Representation
C-52	Statute Law (Superannuation)
C-53	Prairie Grain Advance Payments (No. 2)
C-54	Appropriation No. 1, 1975
C-55	Appropriation No. 2, 1975
C-56	West Coast Ports Operations 1975
C-57	Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements
C-58	Income Tax (No. 3)
C-59	St. Lawrence Ports Operations
C-62	Old Age Security
C-63	Olympic
C-64	Appropriation No. 3, 1975
C-65	Income Tax (No. 2)
C-66	Excise Tax
C-67	Customs Tariff (No. 3)
C-68	Medical Care
C-69	Unemployment Insurance
C-70	Public Service Staff Relations
C-71	Criminal Law Amendment (No. 1) 1975
C-73	Anti-Inflation (No. 1)
C-74	Regional Development Incentives
C-75	Government Annuities Improvement
C-76	King George V Cancer Fund Winding-Up
C-77	National Housing (No. 2)
C-78	Halifax Relief Commission Pension Continuation
C-79	Appropriation No. 4, 1975
C-80	Supplementary Borrowing Authority
C-81	Senate and House of Commons
C-84	Criminal Law Amendment (No. 2) 1976
C-85	Temporary Immigration Security
C-86	Statute Law (Veterans and Returned Soldiers' Insurance)
C-88	Wheat Board (No. 2)
C-89	Anti-Inflation (No. 2)
C-90	Appropriation No. 1, 1976
C-91	Appropriation No. 2, 1976
C-92	Compensation for Former Prisoners of War
C-93	Appropriation No. 3, 1976

Bills, Numerically, Commons - *Concluded

- C-94 Appropriation No. 4, 1976
- C-214 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment
- C-223 Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada)
- C-228 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Bruce)
- C-229 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Lafontaine)
- C-365 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Berthier)
- C-367 Fort-Falls Bridge Authority
- C-370 Electoral Boundaries Readjustment
- C-373 Canadian Sovereignty Symbol
- C-1001 Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass)
- C-1002 Northland Bank

Bills, Numerically, Senate

- S-1 Railways (pro forma)
- S-2 Supreme Court
- S-3 Statute Revision
- S-4 Customs
- S-5 Aircraft Registry
- S-6 Wheat Board
- S-7 Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies
- S-8 Motor Vehicle Tire Safety
- S-9 Proprietary or Patent Medicine and Trade Marks (No. 1)
- S-10 Feeds
- S-11 British Columbia Telephone Company
- S-12 Immigration
- S-13 Alberta-British Columbia Boundary
- S-14 Criminal Code (control of weapons and firearms)
- S-15 Industry, Trade and Commerce Department
- S-16 Statutes of Canada (to revise references to Court of Queen's Bench)
- S-17 Explosives
- S-18 International Air Transport Association
- S-19 Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code
- S-20 Territorial Lands
- S-21 Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence)
- S-22 Senate (Intersessional Authority)
- S-23 National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment)
- S-24 National Commercial Bank of Canada (Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank)
- S-25 Privileges and Immunities (International Organizations)
- S-26 Alliance Security and Investigation, Ltd.
- S-27 Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation
- S-28 Royal Canadian Legion
- S-29 Eastern Canada Savings and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company
- S-30 Continental Bank of Canada
- S-31 Quarantine
- S-32 Income Tax Conventions
- S-33 United Grain Growers Limited
- S-34 Aeronautics
- S-35 Proprietary or Patent Medicine and Trade Marks (No. 2)

Bills, Private, Commons

- Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) C-1001. 1r, 1233; 2r, 1233-4; ref to com, 1234; suspension of rule 95, 1234-5; rep without amdt, 1244; 3r, 1251-2, 1257-9; r.a., 1281
- Northland Bank C-1002. 1r, 1524; 2r, 1598-1600; ref to com, 1600; suspension of rule 95, 1601; rep without amdt, 1602; 3r, 1619; r.a., 1712

Bills, Private, Senate

- Alliance Security & Investigation, Ltd. S-26. 1r, 1022; 2r, 1053-4; ref to com, 1054; rep without amdt, 1074; 3r, 1091; Commons amdt concurred in, 1261; r.a., 1281
- British Columbia Telephone Company S-11. 1r, 99; 2r, 132-4; ref to com, 134; rep without amdt, 178; 3r, 194; Commons amdt, 325; concurred in, 338; r.a., 397
- Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank, see National Commercial Bank of Canada S-24
- Continental Bank of Canada S-30. 1r, 1306; 2r, 1340-5; ref to com, 1345; rep with amdts, 1367-9, 1405-06; m to ref rep back to com, 1406; further rep of com, 1407-08, adopted, 1408; 3r, 1408
- Eastern Canada Savings and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company S-29. 1r, 1293; 2r, 1307-08; ref to com, 1308; rep with amdts, (French text only), 1355, 1372; 3r, 1373; r.a., 1712
- Honey Bear Brewing Corporation Limited, refund of fees on proposed bill, 1782
- International Air Transport Association S-18. 1r, 265; 2r, 301-03; ref to com, 303; rep without amdt, 373; 3r, 382; r.a., 581
- National Commercial Bank of Canada S-24. 1r, 923; 2r, 935-6, 958-62, 973-4; ref to com, 974; rep with amdts, 1057, 1062-3; 3r, 1063; r.a., 1281
- Royal Canadian Legion S-28. 1r, 1180; 2r, 1194-6, 1205-07; ref to com, 1207; suspension of rule 95, 1207-09; rep without amdt, 1211-12; 3r, 1212; r.a., 1281
- United Grain Growers Limited bill S-33. 1r, 1914; 2r, 1924-5, 1930, 1946-7; ref to com, 1947; rep without amdt, 2003; 3r, 2009; r.a., 2207

Bills, Public, Commons

- Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing C-21. 1r, 1617-18; 2r, 1630-2; 3r, 1640; r.a., 1712
- Agricultural Stabilization C-50. 1r, 1164; 2r, 1190-4; ref to com, 1194; rep without amdt, 1212; 3r, 1212; r.a., 1281
- Animal Contagious Diseases C-28. 1r, 1618; 2r, 1632-5; ref to com, 1635; rep without amdt, 1653; 3r, 1666; r.a., 1712
- Anti-Inflation (No. 1) C-73. 1r, 1500-01; 2r, 1503-13, 1524-37, 1538-45, 1550-64; ref to com, 1564; rep without amdt but with observations, 1573; m for 3r, 1573, m in amdt, 1573-81, neg, 1581; m for 3r cont, 1581-3; further m in amdt, 1583-7, neg, 1587; 3r, 1587; r.a., 1617
- Anti-Inflation (No. 2) C-89. 1r, 2076; 2r, 2098, 2104-06, 2111-15, 2133-9; ref to com, 2139; rep without amdt, 2141; m for 3r, 2150, m in amdt, 2150-1, neg, 2151; 3r, 2151; r.a., 2152
- Appropriation No. 3, 1974 C-31. 1r, 192; 2r, 192-3, 198-205; 3r, 213; r.a., 220
- Appropriation No. 4, 1974 C-42. 1r, 373; 2r, 379-80, 385-95, 406-10, m to ref bill to com, 410-17, neg, 417; m for 2r agreed to, on division, 417; m for 3r, 426-30, m that bill be ref to com, 430-4, neg, 434; 3r agreed to, on division, 435; r.a., 467
- Appropriation No. 5, 1974 C-45. 1r, 402; 2r, 424-5, 440-1, 444-6; 3r, 446; r.a., 467
- Appropriation No. 1, 1975 C-54. 1r, 703; 2r, 703-07, 715-23; 3r, 733-6; r.a., 740
- Appropriation No. 2, 1975 C-55. 1r, 707; 2r, 707-08, 736-9; 3r, 739; r.a., 740
- Appropriation No. 3, 1975 C-64. 1r, 1097; 2r, 1129-32; 3r, 1133; r.a., 1134
- Appropriation No. 4, 1975 C-79. 1r, 1571; 2r, 1602-15; 3r, 1615; r.a., 1617
- Appropriation No. 1, 1976 C-90. 1r, 1954; 2r, 1972-3, 1976-82; 3r, 1982-4; r.a., 2002
- Appropriation No. 2, 1976 C-91. 1r, 1965-6; 2r, 1972-3, 1984-91; 3r, 1991-2; r.a., 2002
- Appropriation No. 3, 1976 C-93. 1r, 2252; 2r, 2259, 2286-8; 3r, 2288; r.a., 2301
- Appropriation No. 4, 1976 C-94. 1r, 2252; 2r, 2259; 3r, 2267-9; r.a., 2301
- Army Benevolent Fund C-17. 1r, 280; 2r, 303-04; 3r, 307; r.a., 314
- British North America Acts 1867 to 1975 C-3. 1r, 1005; 2r, 1054, 1060-2; 3r, 1081; r.a., 1095
- Canada Business Corporations C-29. 1r, 472; 2r, 489-98; ref to com, 498; rep with amdts, 666-71, 685; 3r, 685; Commons concurrence in Senate amdts, 712; r.a., 731
- Canada Pension Plan C-22. 1r, 242; 2r, 249-52, 277-9; ref to com, 279; rep without amdt, 300; 3r, 307; r.a., 314
- Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission C-5. 1r, 803; 2r, 829-32, 841-3, 849-51; ref to com, 851; rep without amdt, 998; 3r, 1007; r.a., 1095
- Canadian Sovereignty Symbol C-373. 1r, 663; 2r, 685-8, 709; 3r, 714; r.a., 731
- Canadian Wheat Board, see Wheat Board

Bills, Public, Commons - Continued

- Citizenship C-20. 1r, 2058; 2r, 2071-5, 2077-9, 2087-96; ref to com, 2096; rep without amdt, 2242; m for 3r, 2264-5, m in amdt, 2265-7, 2279-86, 2289, m in amdt neg, 2289-90, debate on 3r cont, 2290-3, 2309-13, 2323-4, 2336-7, 2348-50; m in amdt that bill be ref back to com, neg, 2350; 3r, 2350; r.a., 2450
- Civil Service Insurance C-26. 1r, 712; 2r, 766-7, 770; 3r, 775; r.a., 832
- Combines Investigation C-2. 1r, 1283; 2r, 1293-6, 1308-12; ref to com, 1312; rep without amdt but with observations, 1571, 1589-95; 3r, 1598; r.a., 1617
- Compensation for Former Prisoners of War C-92. 1r, 2014; 2r, 2038-43; 3r, 2043; r.a., 2096
- Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada) C-223. 1r, 663; 2r, 710-11; m for 3r, 714-15, 740; m in amdt that bill be ref to com, agreed, 740
- Criminal Law Amendment (No. 1) 1975 C-71. 1r, 1714; 2r, 1730-3, 1742-7, 1766-70, 1772-6; ref to com, 1776; rep with amdt, 1867-8, 1884-6; m for 3r, 1893, m in amdt, 1893-9, m in amdt to amdt, 1899-1900, neg, m for 3r as amended, 1900, 1903-06, further amdt, 1906-07 neg, 1908; 3r, 1908; Commons agreement in Senate amdt, 1974; r.a., 2002
- Criminal Law Amendment (No. 2) 1976 C-84. 1r, 2386; 2r, 2386-9; m re disposition of 3r and passage of bill, 2407; 2r cont, 2407-42; question re voting procedure, 2444; 2r cont, 2444-50; 3r, 2450; r.a., 2450
- Cultural Property Export and Import C-33. 1r, 712; 2r, 761-6, 768-70, 797-800, 810-13; ref to com, 813; rep with amdt, 848, 908-09; m in amdt adopted, 909-11; 3r, 912; Commons concurrence in Senate amdt, 1005; r.a., 1095
- Customs Tariff (No. 1) C-27. 1r, 242; 2r, 262-3, 270-1; ref to com, 271; rep without amdt, 282; 3r, 291; r.a., 314
- Customs Tariff (No. 2) C-39. 1r, 472; 2r, 484-5, 486-9; ref to com, 489; rep without amdt, 499; 3r, 508, 514-16; r.a., 581
- Customs Tariff (No. 3) C-67. 1r, 1197; 2r, 1209-10, 1214-15; 3r, 1215; r.a., 1281
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment No. 1 C-214. 1r, 325; 2r, 377-8; 3r, 382; r.a., 397
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment No. 2 C-370. 1r, 514; 2r, 526-8, 536-7; ref to com, 537; rep without amdt, 555; 3r, 564; r.a., 581
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Berthier) C-365. 1r, 564; 2r, 602-03; 3r, 606; r.a., 656
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Bruce) C-228. 1r, 583; 2r, 601; 3r, 606; r.a., 656
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Lafontaine) C-229. 1r, 583; 2r, 601-02; 3r, 606; r.a., 656
- Environmental Contaminants C-25. 1r, 1348; 2r, 1371-2, 1403-04; ref to com, 1404; rep without amdt, 1437; 3r, 1446; r.a., 1476
- Excise Tax C-66. 1r, 1265; 2r, 1267-78; ref to com, 1278; rep without amdt, 1278; 3r, 1278-80; r.a., 1281
- Excise Tax and Excise C-40. 1r, 279; 2r, 499-501, 519-20; ref to com, 521; rep without amdt, 570; com observations re unlicensed wholesalers, 570; 3r, 570-3; r.a., 581
- Export Development C-9. 1r, 459; 2r, 459-64; 3r, 464; r.a., 467
- Farm Credit C-34. 1r, 781; 2r, 788-91, 796-7, 803-07; ref to com, 807; rep with amdt and recommendations, 847-8, 863-5, 880, m in amdt, 880-2, point of order re amdt, Speaker's ruling reserved, 882-8, Speaker's ruling on point of order, 889-90, m for adoption of rep continued, 890-2, m in amdt adopted, 892, main m as amended agreed and rep adopted, 892; 3r, 893; r.a., 899
- Federal Business Development Bank C-14. 1r, 348; 2r, 366-71, 417-18; ref to com, 418; rep without amdt, 426; 3r, 444; r.a., 467
- Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements C-57. 1r, 1136; 2r, 1175-8, 1180-8; ref to com, 1188; rep without amdt, 1197; 3r, 1214; r.a., 1281
- Fire Losses Replacement Account C-18. 1r, 325; 2r, 338, 353; 3r, 366; r.a., 397
- Fort-Falls Bridge Authority C-367. 1r, 781; 2r, 855-6; 3r, 867; r.a., 899
- Government Annuities Improvement C-75. 1r, 1618; 2r, 1628-30, 1640-1; ref to com, 1641; rep without amdt, 1649; 3r, 1706; r.a., 1712
- Halifax Relief Commission Pension Continuation C-78. 1r, 1714; 2r, 1717-18, 1721-3; 3r, 1730; r.a., 1792
- Income Tax (No. 1) C-49. 1r, 583; 2r, 606-14, 616-21, 627-40; ref to com, 640; rep without amdt, 645; m for 3r, 645-9; m in amdt, neg, 649-56; 3r, 656; r.a., 656

Bills, Public, Commons - Continued

- Income Tax (No. 2) C-65. 1r, 1403; 2r, 1417-22, 1439-42; ref to com, 1442; rep without amdt, 1454; 3r, 1459; r.a., 1476
- Income Tax (No. 3) C-58. 1r, 1792; 2r, 1836-45, 1848, 1862-6, 1869-73, 1881-3, 1908-10, 1925-9, 1931-3, 1938-46, 1955-8, 1992-2002, 2004-06, 2014-15, 2024-33; ref to com, 2033; rep with amdts, 2252-5, 2269-75, 2293-2301, 2313-15, 2325-30, 2337, m to ref rep back to com, 2337, agreed, 2338; further rep of com without amdt, 2389-98, 2401-05; 3r, 2398-2400; r.a., 2450
- Indian Oil and Gas C-15. 1r, 325; 2r, 337-8, 351-3; ref to com, 353; rep without amdt, 402; 3r, 426; r.a., 467
- Judges Act and Certain Acts related to the Supreme Courts of Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island C-47. 1r, 1005; 2r, 1040-3, 1051-3; ref to com, 1053; rep without amdt, 1066; 3r, 1080; r.a., 1095
- King George V Cancer Fund Winding-Up C-76. 1r, 1467; 2r, 1480-3; 3r, 1486; r.a., 1617
- Law Reform Commission C-43. 1r, 583; 2r, 624-5, 643-4, 660-1; ref to com, 661; rep without amdt, 759; 3r, 768; r.a., 832
- Lieutenant Governors Superannuation C-23. 1r, 1304; 2r, 1337-40; ref to com, 1340; rep without amdts but with observations, 1369; 3r, 1370; r.a., 1476
- Medical Care C-68. 1r, 2307; 2r, 2317-18, 2338-44, 2357-9, 2364-6; bill committed to Committee of the Whole, Hon. Alan A. Macnaughton in the Chair, Hon. Marc Lalonde, Minister of Health and Welfare, taking part in debate, 2366-75; rep without amdt, 2375; 3r, 2378; r.a., 2450
- National Housing (No. 1) C-46. 1r, 742; 2r, 743-8; bill committed to Committee of the Whole, Senator Bourget in the Chair, Minister of State for Urban Affairs Hon. B. Danson taking part in debate, 748-57; rep without amdt, 757; 3r, 757; r.a., 758
- National Housing (No. 2) C-77. 1r, 1667; 2r, 1667-73; bill committed to Committee of the Whole, Senator Macnaughton in the Chair, Minister of State for Urban Affairs Hon. B. Danson taking part in debate, 1673-81; rep without amdt, 1681; 3r, 1681; r.a., 1712
- Northern Canada Power Commission C-13. 1r, 795; 2r, 807-08, 813-15; ref to com, 815; rep with amdt, 840, 851; 3r, 855; Commons concurrence in Senate amdt, 1005; r.a., 1095
- Northwest Territories Representation C-51. 1r, 583; 2r, 594-5, 622-3; 3r, 642; r.a., 656
- Ocean Dumping Control C-37. 1r, 1005; 2r, 1038-40, 1049-51; ref to com, 1051; rep without amdt, 1088; 3r, 1088; r.a., 1096
- Old Age Security, Old Age Assistance C-62. 1r, 1087; 2r, 1101-03, 1123-6; 3r, 1126; r.a., 1134
- Olympic C-63. 1r, 1174; 2r, 1188-90, 1198-1205; ref to com, 1205; rep without amdt, 1211; 3r, 1211; r.a., 1281
- Petro-Canada C-8. 1r, 1174; 2r, 1178-9, 1215-18; ref to com, 1218; rep without amdt, 1244; 3r, 1251; r.a., 1281
- Petroleum Administration C-32. 1r, 847; 2r, 861-3, 902-07, 012-16, 925-7, 935-6; ref to com, 936; rep with amdts, 981-2, 1002; m to amend French version, 1013; 3r, 1013; Commons concurrence in Senate amdts, 1034; r.a., 1095
- Prairie Grain Advance Payments (No. 1) C-10. 1r, 583; 2r, 595-601, 614-15, 621-2; ref to com, 622; rep without amdt, 684; 3r, 709; r.a., 731
- Prairie Grain Advance Payments (No. 2) C-53. 1r, 1136; 2r, 1156-7, 1166-8; ref to com, 1168; rep without amdt, 1180; 3r, 1198; r.a., 1281
- Public Service Employment, Staff Relations, Superannuation, Interpretation C-38. 1r, 464; 2r, 464-6; 3r, 466-7; r.a., 467
- Public Service Staff Relations C-70. 1r, 1235; 2r, 1235-7, 1244-6; 3r, 1251; r.a., 1281
- Railway C-48. 1r, 712; 2r, 760-1; ref to com, 761; rep without amdt, 795; 3r, 803; r.a., 832
- Regional Development Incentives C-74. 1r, 1524; 2r, 1601-02, 1619-22; ref to com, 1622; rep without amdt, 1639; 3r, 1658-9; r.a., 1712
- Representation 1974 C-36. 1r, 402; 2r, 420-4, 435-40; ref to com, 440; rep without amdt, 443; 3r, 443; r.a., 467
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations C-59. 1r, 817; 2r, 817-27; 3r, 827; r.a., 832
- Salaries C-24. 1r, 1065; 2r, 1081, 1091-5; 3r, 1095; r.a., 1096
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries C-44. 1r, 847; 2r, 856-61, 868-80; 3r, 889; r.a., 899

Bills, Public, Commons - *Concluded

- Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirements Benefits C-81. 1r, 2177; 2r, 2186-7, 2193-6; ref to Committee of the Whole, 2196; considered in Committee of the Whole, Senator Macnaughton in the Chair, 2203-07; rep without amdt, 2207; 3r, 2207; r.a., 2207
- Statute Law (Status of Women) 1974 C-16. 1r, 1065; 2r, 1103-07; m to amend French version, 1122-3; 3r, 1123; Commons concurrence in Senate amdt, 1136; r.a., 1281
- Statute Law (Superannuation) C-52. 1r, 1706; 2r, 1706-11; 3r, 1711; r.a., 1712
- Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances) C-4. 1r, 242; 2r, 267-70; ref to com, 270; rep without amdt, 272; 3r, 281; r.a., 314
- Statute Law (Veterans and Returned Soldiers' Insurance) C-86. 1r, 1856; 2r, 1883-4, 1910-11; 3r, 1917; r.a., 2002
- Supplementary Borrowing Authority C-80. 1r, 1638; 2r, 1641-4; ref to com, 1644; rep without amdt, 1649; 3r, 1649-50; r.a., 1712
- Temporary Immigration Security C-85. 1r, 1813; 2r, 1820, 1827-36; ref to com, 1836; rep without amdt, 1874; 3r, 1893; r.a., 2002
- Two-Price Wheat C-19. 1r, 900; 2r, 928-30, 942-4; ref to com, 944; rep without amdt but with recommendations, 1088-90; 3r, 1090; r.a., 1095
- Unemployment Insurance C-69. 1r, 1686; 2r, 1686-95; bill committed to Committee of the Whole, Senator Macnaughton in the Chair, Minister of Manpower and Immigration Hon. Robert K. Andras taking part in debate, 1695-1700; m to amend clause 6 not carried, 1700, debate cont, 1700-06; 3r, 1706; r.a., 1712
- West Coast Grain Handling Operations C-12. 1r, 76; 2r, 77-93; 3r, 93-94; r.a., 95
- West Coast Ports Operations 1975 C-56. 1r, 723; 2r, 724-30; 3r, 730; r.a., 731
- Western Grain Stabilization C-41. 1r, 1714; 2r, 1723-6, 1735-8; ref to com, 1738; rep without amdt, 1756; 3r, 1766; r.a., 1792
- Wheat Board (No. 2) C-88. 1r, 2260; 2r, 2315-17, 2330-3; ref to com, 2333; rep without amdt, 2356; 3r, 2356-7; r.a., 2450

Bills, Public, Senate

- Aeronautics S-34. 1r, 2103; 2r, 2124-5, 2130-2; ref to com, 2132; rep without amdt, 2141; 3r, 2141; r.a., 2207
- Aircraft Registry S-5. 1r, 12; 2r, 172-4; ref to com, 174; rep with recommendation that bill be not proceeded with, 980-1, 999-1002; bill removed from Order Paper, 1002
- Alberta-British Columbia Boundary S-13. 1r, 136; 2r, 219, 223-5; 3r, 225; Commons amdt, 326, concurred in, 336-7; r.a., 397
- Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation S-27. 1r, 1034; 2r, 1062, 1067; 3r, 1080; r.a., 1617
- Canadian Wheat Board, see Wheat Board
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) S-21. 1r, 443; 2r, 528-31, 557-62, 574-5, 587-91, 658-60, 688-92, 937-40; m in amdt that subject matter be ref to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 940-1, 974-5, 982-3, Order stands, 1157-8, 1168-9, 1459-60, Order discharged and bill withdrawn, 1733
- Criminal Code (control of weapons and firearms) S-14. 1r, 193; 2r, 293-5; ref to com, 295
- Customs S-4. 1r, 12; 2r, 131, 167-9; ref to com, 169; rep without amdt, 213; 3r, 222; r.a., 314
- Explosives S-17. 1r, 243; 2r, 263-4, 271-2; ref to com, 272; rep without amdt, 280; 3r, 291; r.a., 1134
- Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies S-7. 1r, 47; 2r, 100-03; ref to com, 107; rep without amdt, 160; 3r, 180; r.a., 314
- Feeds S-10. 1r, 47; 2r, 129-31, 157-9, 161-2; ref to com, 162; rep with amdts, 584-6, 592; 3r, 594; Commons amdts, 1467, 1480, 1485-6, ref to com, 1635-7; rep that Commons amdt be concurred in with substitution of one amdt, 1650-3, 1660-1; Commons concurrence in Senate amdt, 1974; r.a., 2002
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code S-19. 1r, 300; 2r, 354-62, 366-8, 374-5, 382-5, 402-06, 446-54, 456; ref to com, 456; rep with amdts, 969-71, 983, 1007-10; m to amend com rep, 1010-11, 1014-21, 1023-30, neg, 1030-1, debate on rep cont, 1031-3, 1036-8, 1046-9, rep adopted, 1049, m for 3r, 1066; m to amend sec. 1 of bill, 1066, 1074-5, agreed, 1075; m for 3r cont, 1075-6; m that bill be not proceeded with, 1076-7, neg, 1078; m for 3r cont, 1078-80; 3r, 1080

Bills, Public, Senate - Concluded

- Immigration S-12. 1r, 136; 2r, 164-7, 194-8, 213-19, 222-3, 230-3; ref to com, 233; rep without amdt, 239; 3r, 244-5; r.a., 397
- Income Tax Conventions S-32. 1r, 1777; 2r, 1789-90, 1793-8; ref to com, 1798; rep without amdt, 1867; 3r, 1881; Commons amdts, 2236-7, 2244; r.a., 2301
- Industry, Trade and Commerce Department S-15. 1r, 243; 2r, 272-4, 281, 304-6; ref to com, 306; rep with amdts, 348-9, 368; 3r, 373, 398-400; r.a., 1134
- Motor Vehicle Tire Safety S-8. 1r, 47; 2r, 125-6, 149-52; 3r, 161; Commons amdts, 2058, 2066-8; r.a., 2096
- National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment) S-23. 1r, 643; 2r, 800-02, 833-6, 840-1, 893-6, Order stands, 1168, 1297-8, 1459, 1816-17, 1848-9
- Privileges and Immunities (International Organizations) S-25. 1r, 934; 2r, 957-8; 3r, 973; r.a., 1281
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks (No.1) S-9. 1r, 47; 2r, 126-8, 155-7; ref to com, 157; rep with amdt, 240, 245; 3r, 245; r.a., 832
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks (No.2) S-35. 1r, 2103; 2r, 2125-6, 2132; 3r, 2144; r.a., 2207
- Quarantine S-31. 1r, 1763; 2r, 1778-80, 1785-7, 1788; ref to com, 1788; rep without amdt, 1874; 3r, 1893; r.a., 2096
- Railways S-1 (pro forma). 1r, 7
- Senate (Intersessional Authority) S-22. 1r, 505; 2r, 576-7, 770-3, 815-16; ref to com, 816
- Statute Revision S-3. 1r, 12; 2r, 128-9, 159; ref to com, 159; rep without amdt, 243; 3r, 253; r.a., 467
- Statutes of Canada (to revise references to Court of Queen's Bench of Quebec) S-16. 1r, 243; 2r, 274-7, 291-3; 3r, 301; r.a., 467
- Supreme Court S-2. 1r, 12; 2r, 103-06, 153-5, 162-4; ref to com, 164; rep without amdt, 243; 3r, 253; r.a., 467
- Telegraph Canada, see Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation S-27
- Territorial Lands S-20. 1r, 326; 2r, 371-2, 375-7; ref to com, 377; rep with amdt, 579; 3r, 579; r.a., 1095
- Wheat Board S-6. 1r, 12; 2r, 106-07, 169-72; ref to com, 172; rep without amdt, 255; 3r, 265-7; r.a., 656

Blois, Hon. Fred M.

Identity cards for senators, 179-80

Bonnell, Hon. M. Lorne

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 71-75

Canadian Men's Curling Championship, congratulations to Newfoundland rink and to Charlottetown rink, 1889

Citizenship bill C-20, 2313

Real Property Act, PEI, 2313

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, New Delhi conference, 1495-1500

Authority and prestige of Parliament, external and internal threats, 1499

Building of a new international economic order, 1497-8

Canadian delegation, 1495

Commonwealth as instrument of social, political and economic transformation, 1499-1500

Development of Southeast Asia, 1496

Energy crisis, 1497

Canadian requirements, imports and exports, 1497

Environment, control of pollution and protection of wildlife, 1498-9

Indian Ocean as zone of peace, 1496

International security in Africa south of the Sahara, 1496-7

Ministers, Members and Conflicts of Interest, 1499

Multinational corporations, 1498

Nuclear energy, 1497, 1499

Parliament of India, 1495-6

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, 1495-6

Social problems of unemployment, violence, youth unrest and drugs, 1498

World population growth and food resources, 1497-8

Bonnell, Hon. M. Lorne - *Concluded

- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 72
- Ferries operating between Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, possible increase in fares, 1815, 1860, 1861
- Fisheries, tuna research, 73-74; 200 mile limit, 74
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 446-8, 1019, 1020, 1046, 1078-9
  - CMA resolution re non-medical use of cannabis, 447
  - Educating of public and youth as to drug danger, 448
  - 'Give', definition of, 1020
  - Long-standing effects from use of marihuana, 448
  - Misleading newspaper reporting of proceedings on bill, 1046
  - National Organization for Reform of Marihuana Laws (US), 447
  - Penalties for drug convictions, 447
- Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1162-3
  - Prince Edward Island, 1162
  - Wildlife affected by forest conditions, 1162
- Inflation, 72-74
  - Commodity prices, 72
  - Petroleum costs, 72
  - Population control, 72
- Matheson, Hon. Alexander W., the late, former Premier of Prince Edward Island, 1861-2
- National Anthem, 74
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill (No. 1) S-9, 126-7, 128
  - Authority for making regulations, 128
  - Certificates of registration, 127
  - False advertising, 128
  - Proprietary division of food and drug regulations, 127
  - Quality, manufacture, safety and effectiveness of proprietary medicines, regulations re, 127
- Regional economic expansion, 74
- Senate reform
  - Committee work, 74-75
  - Term of appointment, 75
- Trans-Canada highway, maintenance cost subsidies, Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island, 1903, 1922
- Transportation
  - Air service, PEI, 73
  - British North America Act as it pertains to transportation, 2049-54, 2070
  - Prince Edward Island
    - Background of ferry services to PEI, NB and NS, 2050-1
    - CNR and Canadian Brotherhood of Transport and General Workers, labour disputes, 2053-4
    - Charlottetown Guardian* article re statements of Highways Minister, 2053
    - Excerpt from BNA Act re provisions relating to PEI services to be assumed by federal government, 2049-50
    - Ferry services of Albert, Northern Light and Stanley. 2150
    - Marine East Coast Co-ordinating Committee, 2050, 2054
    - National transportation policy, 2053
    - Potatoes, transportation by truck and resulting highway and marketing costs, 2052
    - Railway traffic provisions, 2051-2
      - CNR discontinuance of passenger service, 2052
    - Transportation rates for passengers, vehicles and freight, 2051
      - Federal government responsibility for increases, 2051
- Unemployment insurance, 74

Boucher, Hon. William A. (Deceased June 23/76)

Tributes, 2251-2

Bourget, Hon. Maurice, P.C.

Aircraft Registry bill S-5, 980-1, 990-7, 1002

Transport and Communications Committee report, 980-1

Correspondence between Committee and provincial attorneys general and certain federal depts., 990-7

Federal-provincial conferences, lack of, 1002

Appropriation bill No. 2, 1976 C-91, 1986

Canada Year Book, 1822

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, TV program 'Les Beaux Dimanches', 1099, 1118-20

Council of Europe, Parliamentary Assembly, Strasbourg conference, 1431-4

Economic and cultural development (OECD), 1431

Economic disruptions and difficulties, 1432

Energy resources, 1432-3

European shipping policy, 1433

International investment, 1432

International relations, 1433

Policies for non-inflationary recovery, 1432

Relations with underdeveloped countries, 1432, 1433

Trade pledge, 1432

World economic interdependence, 1432

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2417-18

Deterrent aspect, 2417

Gallup poll, 2418

Hoover, J. Edgar, excerpt from letter sent to officers of FBI, 2417

Law and order, respect for, 2417

Estimates

Olympic Games deficit, 1986

European Parliament, 331-3

Energy resources, 332

Excerpts from Foreign Affairs Committee report, 332-3

Trade and investment relationships, 332

Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23, 1337-8, 1339-40

Contribution rate, 1338

Lieutenant governors not included, 1338

Pension at 65 years of age or upon becoming disabled, 1338

National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 748-67 (Chairman, Committee of the Whole)

National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, 1678

Appraisal of housing costs in various areas, 1678

Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, 807-09, 814-15

Commission members, functions and jurisdiction, 808, 814

Construction of transmission network, 808

Employment of native people, 808

Expenditures over $50,000, approval of Governor in Council for, 815

Financial records and procedures, maintenance of, 809

Operating budget, 808, 809

Ownership of northern generating power, 808

Power rates and terms of crown loans, 808, 809

Rules and Orders Committee

Powers and duties of committees, 1425

Sub-committee to coordinate scheduling of meetings of committees, 828-9, 1091

Members, 924

Bourget, Hon. Maurice, P.C. - *Concluded

Senate business, 924, 1880, 1916, 2044, 2121

Speaker pro tem, 382, 396, 1395, 2176, 2361

Bourque, Hon. Romuald (Deceased August 14, 1974)

Tributes, 11-12

British Columbia

Alaska Boundary Treaty of 1825, 100th anniversary of establishment of Canada's western boundaries, 578

Alberta-British Columbia boundary, 136, 219, 223-5

Food retailing industry salaries, 879

Habitat, United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, 1959-64, 2199-2200, 2278-9

Immigration problems in Vancouver and other Canadian cities, deportees returning illegally, 166-7

Marine safety, B.C. fisheries, 1814-15, 1860

Parliamentarians visit to Senate, 1087

Strike legislation, 1326-7

Labour movement reaction, 1327-8

Supermarkets, 1327; Canada Safeway, 1327

Victoria Legislative Assembly representative Mr. William Templeton, visitor to Senate, 854

British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11. 1r, 99; 2r, 132-4; ref to com, 134; rep without amdt, 178; 3r, 194; Commons amdt, 325, concurred in, 338; r.a., 397

British North America Act

Transportation, BNA Act as it pertains to, 2049-54, 2063-6, 2070, 2115-18, 2196-8, 2211-12, 2217-21, 2333-4

See Transportation

British North America Acts 1867 to 1975 (appointment of senators for NWT and Yukon)

Commons representation in Territories, 1060

Jurisdiction of Parliament in Senate appointments, 1061

Manitoba and other provinces, Senate representation (1886), 1061

Native representation, 1061

Ombudsman for territories, 1060

Property qualification, 1060

Residence requirement, 1054

Senate reform, 1061

Speakers: Senators

Forsey, Eugene A., 1061-2

Grosart, Allister, 1060-1

McIlraith, George, 1054

British North America Acts 1867 to 1975 bill C-3. 1r, 1005; 2r, 1054, 1060-2; 3r, 1081; r.a., 1095

British Trade Mission

Montreal office and other offices in Canada, inquiry, Senator Forsey, 206, 252

Broadcasting

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Estimates for, 201

Gerda Munsinger, appearance on television program, 1007, 1013, 1034, 1073, 1239-40, 1256-7, 1618-19

Broadcasting - Concluded

- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation - Concluded
  - Remembrance Day program, 257
  - TV program 'Les Beaux Dimanches', 225-6, 1099, 1118-20, 1127-9
- Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission, 803, 829-32, 841-3, 849-51, 998, 1007, 1095
- Canadian Television news report on death of Viateur Ethier and misrepresentation as member of Conservative Party, 1241
- Commercial advertising by Guaranty Trust, use of picture of Parliament Buildings, 556
- References to Newfoundland by CTV, question of privilege, 2215-16
- Televising of proceedings of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 509-14, 521-3, 543-54
- Television and radio coverage of Senate and committee proceedings, 1365-6
- See Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58

Buckwold, Hon. Sidney L.

- Aeronautics bill S-34, 2125
- Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing bill C-21, 1630-1
  - Bank loans for initial payments, processing, selling costs, 1631
  - Food production for foreign aid, 1630
  - Marketing, 1630-1
  - Ontario wheat producers problems, 1631
  - Stabilization of agricultural industry, 1630
  - Tobacco industry, government payment re, 1631
- Appropriation bill No. 3, 1974 C-31, 202-03
- Canadian Men's Curling Championship, congratulations to Newfoundland rink, 1889
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2075
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 559-60
  - Conviction of innocent person, 559-60
  - Resolution of the Senate re present law, suggestion, 560
- Criminal Law Amendment bill C-71, 1898
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, 1799-1812
  - Casual employees, 1811-12
  - Classification, 1806
  - Collective bargaining in the Public Service, facts and figures, 1801
  - Designated employees, 1802-04
  - Incompetence and incapacity, disciplinary action, 1810-11
  - Interim report, 1799
  - Managerial and confidential exclusions, 1810
  - Maximum penalties for unlawful activity, 1805-06
  - Pay research in collective bargaining, 1808-10
  - Prosecution of offences under the act, 1804-05
  - Public interest in Public Service bargaining, 1801-02
  - Public Service Employment Act, 1800-01
  - Scope and limitations of committee's investigations, 1799-1800
  - Technological change and long-term layoff, 1807-08
  - Union voting procedures, 1811
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee
  - Availability of draft report to press, 1755-6
  - Reports
    - First report, terms of reference, 255
    - Second report, tabled in Commons Nov. 26/74
    - Third report, 998-9; recommendation to establish permanent Staff Relations Board, 998; workload of present Board, 999
    - Fourth report re Public Service Staff Relations bill C-70, rep without amdt, 1211

Buckwold, Hon. Sidney L. - Continued

- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service - Concluded
  - Reports - Concluded
    - Fifth report, Superannuation bill C-52, rep with amdts, 1545-7
    - Sixth report tabled and printed as appendix, 1793, 1799-1812
    - Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, ref to com, 1442
- Estimates
  - Energy, Mines and Resources, 203
  - Wheat, two-price system, 203
- Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40, 572, 573
  - Unlicensed wholesalers, 572, 573
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 806, 865
  - Age limit, 865
  - Comments of Chairman of Farm Credit Corp., 865
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1079
- Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1169, 1170
  - Provincial efforts to alleviate problem, question of, 1169, 1170
- Habitat, United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, report of Canadian National Committee, 1959-64, 2200
- Immigration bill S-12, 165-6
- Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 613
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2328-30
  - Broadcasting, 2329; CRTC, 2329
  - Canada-US relations, 2328-9
  - Principle of bill, definition of, 2328
  - 'Substantially the same', 2329
  - Time magazine, 2328-9
- Insulin, production of, 100, 110-11
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Colombo, Sri Lanka conference, 988
  - Aid to developing countries, 988; Sri Lanka and Pakistan, 988
  - Birth control, 988
  - Education and training in resource development, 988
- King George V Cancer Fund Winding-Up bill C-76, 1483
- National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 747-8, 749, 754, 755
  - Building materials tax, 747-8
  - Forgiveness provision for municipalities, 747
  - Housing starts, 747
  - Interest charges, 747
  - Registered Home Ownership Program, 747
  - Rental housing projects, 754
  - Sewage treatment plants and trunk storm sewer systems, 747
  - US program for income tax deductions of interest and municipal taxes, 748
- Olympic bill C-63, 1190
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1429
- Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill C-10, 599, 600
  - Labour problems and effect on wheat and farm industries, 600
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill S-9, 127, 128
- Public Service Staff Relations bill C-70, 1235-7, 1245-6
  - Apolitical aspect of board appointments, 1236
  - Authority of chairman to appoint outside arbitrator, 1237
  - Backlog of work of board, 1236-7
  - Board composition and responsibilities, 1236-7, 1246-7
  - Term of office, 1246-7
  - Finkleman report, 1235-6
  - Topics involving committee recommendations, 1235

Buckwold, Hon. Sydney L. - *Concluded

- Representation bill C-36, 438
- Russia-Canada hockey series, 59
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 823-4
  - Labour unrest, 823-4
  - Wage settlements and controls, 824
- Secrecy in government, discussion of TV program re committee involved in, 1349
- Senate business, 1090, 1879-80
- Televising of committee proceedings, 550-1
- Temporary Immigration Security bill C-85, 1831, 1832
- Territorial Lands bill S-20, 371-2
  - Conflict of interest, 372
- Transportation
  - BNA Act provisions relating to transportation, 2219, 2220
  - Saskatchewan, inquiry re rail abandonment, 2220
- United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention, status of Palestinian Liberation Organization as participants, 1238, see also 1242-4, 1248-9
- Western Grain Stabilization bill C-41, 1725, 1726
- Wheat Board bill S-6, 106-07, 172
  - Distribution of balance in wheat account, 107
  - Grain prices, 107
  - Initial prices, 107
  - Operations of Board, 172

Budget speech

- Accommodation for senators in Commons gallery, 255, 1087, 2150
- Date of presentation, question, 161

Bulgaria

- President of the General Assembly and His Excellency the Ambassador, visitors to Senate, 124

Burchill, Hon. G. Percival

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 122
- Air Canada service Fredericton-Ottawa, 854-5, 867
- Canadian economy
  - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1330
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2075
- Criminal Law Amendment bill C-71, 1746
- Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1158-9, 1816
  - Cost-sharing of insecticide spraying, 1158-9
  - Damaging side effects of chemicals, 1159
  - Excerpt from paper prepared by director of Maritime Forest Research Centre, 1158
  - Federal-provincial plans for assistance, 1816
  - New Brunswick dependence on forest industry, 1158
  - Newspaper headlines re lack of federal assistance, 1158
- Income Tax Conventions bill S-32, 1796
- Lumber industry, New Brunswick, effect of inflation on, 122
- Medical Care bill C-68, 2358-9
  - Nursing homes, 2358-9; NB, 2358-9
- Transportation
  - BNA Act as it pertains to transportation, 2221
  - Intercolonial railway, 2221

Business corporations

Canada Business Corporations, 472, 489-98, 666-71, 685, 712, 731

Cameron, Hon. Donald

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 37-45

Criminal Code (control of weapons and firearms) bill S-14, 293-5, 480

Costs of registration system, 294

Question as to progress of bill in committee, 480

Resolution of Medicine Hat church re programs of radio, TV, theatre and movies, 294

Statistics on crime and gun accidents in Canada and US, 294, 295

Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 37

Industry, Canadian textile problems, value of suits or suiting materials imported, 901, 934

Labour defiance of court orders, 2237

Mexico, visit of Canadian Parliamentarians, 930-3

Agriculture, 931, 932

Banff School of Advanced Management, visit to Mexico and other countries, 930-1

Exchange visits of parliamentarians and businessmen, 932-3

Housing, 931

Industrial development, 931, 932

Tourism, 931-2

Northland Bank bill C-1002, 1598-9

Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1409, 1410

Resource development, 38

Televising of committee proceedings, 554

Transportation, 38-45

Canadian Pacific Railway, 38-45

Canadian Pacific: A Brief History, by J. L. McDougall, 40-41

Canadian Transportation and Distribution, excerpt from magazine re freight policy, 43

Construction costs of railway, 38

Crowsnest Pass, 41-42

Globe and Mail articles re CPR, 43, 44

Hudson's Bay Company, 39

Income from oil, gas, minerals, real estate and related operations, 40-41

Integration of CNR and CPR, 43-44

Land grants and sales, 39-42

Marathon Realty, CPR subsidiary, 39

Tax and land concessions, 38-39

The CPR: A Century of Corporate Welfare, by Robert Chodos, 38-39, 40

Canada business corporations

Administrative discretion, 494

Amalgamations, 492-3; Black & Decker case, 492-3

Amending of bylaws and submitting of proposals by shareholders, 491

Business corporations incorporated for objects other than provincial, 669

Complaints re mishandling of business, 492

Directors, 492, 493-4, 668-9, 670-1

Energy Board, 685

Failure to file documents, penalty for, 669

Inspection of records and shareholders' lists, 669

Liability of directors, 669

Ontario Corporations Act, 493, 495, 496

Pipeline construction application, amdt re definition of 'company', 670

Proposals for New Business Corporations Law for Canada, report of task force, 490

Registration of corporations, 490

Canada business corporations - *Concluded

- Reorganization of companies, 669-70
- Senate committee recommendations (1970), 490, 685
- Shares and dividends, 491, 492, 496
- Voting trust agreements, 492
- Witnesses from government and private industry, 670
- Speakers: Senators
  - Flynn, Jacques, 685
  - Hayden, Salter A., 489-93, 498, 666-71
  - Walker, David J., 494-7

Canada Business Corporations bill C-29. 1r, 472; 2r, 489-98; ref to com, 498; rep with amdts, 666-71, 685; 3r, 685; Commons concurrence in Senate amdts, 712; r.a., 731

Canada pension plan

- Applications and payments, retroactive clause, 277-8
- Assignment or attachment of benefits, 278
- Drop-out provision, 249
- Employment by country other than Canada, 250-1
- Income Security for Canadians, White Paper on, 250
- Male and female contributors, equalization of benefits, 250
- Pensionable earnings and exemption, 251
- Religious sects exempt from contributions, 250, 278
- Self-employed persons, 251
- Social Security in Canada, Working Paper on, 250
- Speakers: Senators
  - Carter, Chesley W., 249-52, 278-9
  - Macdonald, John M., 277-8

Canada Pension Plan bill C-22. 1r, 242; 2r, 249-52, 277-9; ref to com, 279; rep without amdt, 300; 3r, 307; r.a., 314

Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Florida meeting, 2221-2, 2224-33

- Agenda, 2224
- Canada-US relations, 2222
- Canadian Centennial coins, presentation to US delegates, 2222
- Committee I, 2224, 2225
  - Canadian cultural legislation and regulations, 2227
  - Eastport, 2226
  - Flathead River, 2225-6
  - Garrison Diversion project, 2225
  - Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement, 2225
  - Law of the Sea, 2226-7
  - Richelieu-Lake Champlain, 2225
  - Skagit, 2226
  - Water boundaries, 2226
  - West Coast pollution, 2226
- Committee II, 2224, 2227-30
  - Anti-inflation program, 2228
  - Canada-US automotive agreement, 2227-8
  - Canadian cultural legislation and regulations, 2229-30
  - Controls on trade with Cuba, 2229
  - Extension to Canada of US restrictions on political contributions, 2230

Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Florida meeting - *ConcludedCommittee II - Concluded

Foreign Investment Review Act, 2229

Multi-lateral trade negotiations, 2230

Saskatchewan takeover of potash companies, 2228-9

Trans-Border economic issues, 2227

US dumping charges and countervailing duties, 2228

Committee III, 2230-2

Agriculture, 2232

Energy, 2222, 2230-2

Plenary meeting, 2232

Speaker: Senator

Macnaughton, Alan A., 2221-2, 2224-33

Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Quebec meeting, 1137-43, 1144-55

Committees and members of, 1138

Delegates, 1138

Designation of meeting places and timetables, 1138

Energy resources, 1141-2

Athabaska tar sands and Colorado oil shale, 1141

Coal reserves, 1141

Nuclear energy, 1142

Prices, 1141; controversy re, 1141

Shortfall in deliveries to US, 1141

Solar and geothermal energy, harnessing of tides, heat pumps, 1142

Excerpt from speech by Prime Minister Trudeau, 1140

Excerpt from speech by US Deputy Secretary of State, 1140

Reform of Canadian section of Group, 1137-40

Trans-border problems, 1139

US Congress contacts, importance of, 1139-40

Speakers: Senators

Macnaughton, Alan A., 1137-40

van Roggen, George C., 1140-3

Canada-United States relations, 66-68, 71, 227-9

Communications between Canada and US, newspaper article re, 2192-3, 2377-8

Foreign Affairs Committee authorized to report on, 227-9; committee authorized to publish and distribute

Vol. I of report, 1653; report tabled, 1716

Questions re, 1625-7

Report of Foreign Affairs Committee, 1747-50

Changing concepts of the relationship, 1748

Current problems, 1748

Information program, 1749

Inter-Parliamentary Group meetings, 1749

Legislative channels and contacts, 1748-9

Statistical comparisons on trade, 1749

The Institutional Framework for the Relationship, Vol. I of report, 1747-8

Trade relations, 1748

Tributes to committee members, witnesses and staff, 1750

Unofficial meeting of US Ambassador with media representatives in Ottawa, 1626

Canada Year Book, 1821-3

Delays in publishing of, 1822

Translation of, 1822

Updating of charts, data, statistics, etc., 1821

Canadian Armed Forces

Casualties in defence of France in World War I and World War II, 1417

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Estimates for, 201

Operating expenditures, capital expenditures, Summer Olympics, 201

Munsinger, Gerda, appearance on television program, 1007, 1013, 1034, 1073, 1239-40, 1256-7, 1618-19

Profane language used on TV programs, 1128

Report of La Presse article re alleged statement by Senator Lamontagne, question of privilege, 1165-6

Role of CBC and CRTC administration, 1128

Saint-Jean-Baptiste Day program, 1128

TV program 'Les Beaux Dimanches', 225-6, 1099, 1118-20, 1127-9

Dubious nature of film, with separatist tendencies, 1127

National unity, depreciating of, 1128

See Broadcasting

Canadian coins, reported change in design, 1937, 1955

Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank

See National Commercial Bank of Canada bill S-24, 923, 935-6, 958-62, 973-4, 1057, 1062-3, 1281

Canadian Council of Christians and Jews

Brotherhood Week, 542

Indian and non-Indian children, wilderness camping, 542

Labour-management conferences, 542

Religious dialogues, 542

Student exchange, 542

Canadian economy

Attack on Inflation – a program of national action, 1284, 1293, 1298-1303, 1312-14, 1319-30, 1349-53,
1411-15, 1443-5, 1446-9, 1454-8, 1516

Anti-Inflation Board, functions and powers, 1301-02, 1314

BC strike legislation, 1326-7

Labour movement reaction, 1327-8

Supermarkets, 1327; Canada Safeway, 1327

Business groups to be affected, 1300

CBC News Magazine commentary re financial operations of business groups, 1314

Consultations with provincial finance and labour ministers, 1303, 1312

Corporate profits, lack of ceiling on, 1444

Cost-of-living index (1970-75), 1312-13

Credibility of government program, question of, 1350-1

Demands vs productivity, 1350

Deputy ministers' salaries, 1314

Dollar value (1946-75), 1298

Economic Summit Conference, Canada's absence from, 1447

Energy, raising of costs by OPEC nations and effect on Canada's economy, 1299

Excerpts from Prime Minister's speeches re government policies on controls, 1443, 1454-5

Federal-provincial jurisdiction, 1444

Federal-provincial leadership, 1374-5

Financial and monetary policies, 1456

Government expenditures in federal and provincial areas, 1313-14, 1324-5, 1351-2, 1411, 1412-13,
1443-4, 1447-8, 1456-7

Aircraft purchases, 1444

Bank of Canada building, 1324

Canadian economy - Continued*Attack on Inflation - Continued*Government expenditures - Concluded

- Bilingualism program, 1352
- Consultants' fees, 1444
- Federal budget deficit, 1447
- Members' indemnities, 1448
- Microsystems, 1444
- Mirabel Airport, 1314, 1325, 1444
- Olympic entertainment, 1352
- Ontario, 1447
- Pickering Airport, 1325
- Prime Minister's statement re, 1448
- Public Service, salary increases, 1444
- Salaries of top-level officials, 1352
- Sculptures, 1324-5
- Studies of toilet facilities, offices, industrial plants, etc., 1352
- Translation services, 1352
- UK government budget costs, 1448
- Work force, 1352
- Government role in inflationary trend, 1350
- Gross National Product, 1413, 1443
- Guidelines of White Paper on Attack on Inflation, 1300
- Housing needs, 1301
  - Excerpt from statement by minister, 1457
- Industrial profit margin, decrease in, 1413
- Inflation, effects on economy, 1298-9
- Inflation, types of, 1321
- Interest rates, 1313, 1314, 1327-8
- Labour and industry, wage settlements affecting international trade, 1300, 1447
- Labour and management demands, 1293, 1374, 1412, 1414, 1448-9, 1457-8
- Limit of increase for low-income workers, 1327
- Loopholes alleged in program, 1329-30
- Low-income groups, 1313, 1314
- Maximum increase allowable to wage earners and other income groups, 1301
- Members of Parliament salary increases, 1352
- Money supply, increase in, 1323
- No-interest loans to foreign countries, 1314
- Parliamentary and other governmental restraints, 1302, 1312
- Pensioners, 1323
- Prices control vs wages control, 1322, 1457
- Problems of equity in temporary freeze of wages and controls, 1322
- Professional groups, 1301
- Propane and butane industry employee-employer dispute and withdrawal of essential services, 1328
- Psychological reactions to controls, 1350, 1352-3
- Public interpretation of proposals, 1351
- Rectification of disparities between men and women, 1320
- Regional disparities, 1313
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, powers of, 1320
- Responsibility of individuals in assessment and carrying out of proposals, 1350
- Restriction, effect on free enterprise, 1457
- Salaries of members of Parliament and executives, objections to, 1325, 1326
- Senate role in attack on inflation, 1322
- Social services, 1324

Canadian economy - *ConcludedAttack on Inflation - *ConcludedSolving of inflation by

Lessening of external pressures involving trading partners, 1353

Productivity, 1353

Self-discipline, 1353

Statement by Prime Minister re right to strike and wages above guidelines, 1293

Temporary aspect of controls, 1350

Trade strategies, 1374

Trades Union Congress of Britain, statement of policy, 1328-9

US controls, 1329

Voluntary restraints, 1313

Wage and price controls, unsatisfactory results of, 1351-2

US publication re, 1351

Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 1443-5

Desruisseaux, Paul, 1411-15

Flynn, Jacques, 1454-8

Forsey, Eugene A., 1319-26

Lang, Daniel, 1446-9

Lawson, Edward M., 1326-30

Manning, Ernest C., 1349-53

Perrault, Raymond J., 1293, 1298-1303

Phillips, Orville H., 1312-14

Stanbury, Richard J., 1373-5

See Anti-inflation, 1500-01, 1503-13, 1524-37, 1538-45, 1550-64, 1573-87, 1617, 2076, 2098, 2104-06, 2111-15, 2133-9, 2141, 2150-1, 2152

Canadian Film Industry

Academy award to Crawley Films Ltd., of Ottawa, 2003

Canadian Labour Congress

Political affiliation, question re announced objective of CLC to take part in decision-making process relating to government policy development, 2153-4

Possibility of general strike, newspaper report re meeting and proposals for liberal corporatism, 2130

Salary increases for officers, 2159, 2209-10

Canadian National Railways

Cost of construction of tower in Toronto, 2185-6, 2263-4

Services in Atlantic provinces, 1923-4, 1976

See Railways

Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation

Background of Corporation, 1062

Change of name to 'Telegobe Canada', 1062

President and chief executive officer, 1062

Speakers: Senators

Flynn, Jacques, 1067

Langlois, Leopold, 1062

Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation bill S-27. 1r, 1034; 2r, 1062, 1067; 3r, 1080; r.a., 1617

Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission

- Association of Communications Regulatory Bodies, 842
- Bell Canada applications, 831-2
- Cable television, jurisdiction of, 842, 850
- CTC members and employees, protection re employment, 850
- Communications: Some Federal Proposals, 842-3, 850
- Executive committee, 830
- Head office location, 830
- Matters pending before CTC, 830
- Powers of commission, 830-1
- Provincial and consumer representation on commission, question of, 831
- Provincial consultations and jurisdiction, 841, 849-50
- Renaming of commission, 829
- Responsibility to report to Minister of Communications, 830
- Terms of appt. and qualification of commission members, 830, 831
- Speakers: Senators
  - Bélisle, Rhéal, 849-51
  - Forsey, Eugene A., 829-32
  - Grosart, Allister, 841-3

Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission bill C-5. 1r, 803; 2r, 829-32, 841-3, 849-51; ref to com, 851; rep without amdt, 998; 3r, 1007; r.a., 1095

Canadian sovereignty symbol

- Importation of beavers from US for Grey Owl film, 687-8, 709
- Lord Beaverbrook of New Brunswick, 686
- Non-restriction on commercial use of beaver symbol, 687
- Petitions and communications received to support adoption of beaver symbol, 686-7
- Significance of beaver to Indians, armed forces and areas of national interest, 686
- Speakers: Senators
  - Fergusson, Muriel McQueen, 685-8
  - Grosart, Allister, 687
  - Quart, Josie D., 687

Canadian Sovereignty Symbol (Beaver, Castor canadensis) bill C-373. 1r, 663; 2r, 685-8, 709; 3r, 714; r.a., 731

Canadian Wheat Board, 12, 106-07, 169-72, 255, 265-7, 656, 2260, 2315-17, 2330-3, 2356-7, 2450
 Adjustment payment to grain producers, 1297
See Wheat Board bills C-88 and S-6

Candu reactors

- Sale of Candu reactors to Argentina and Republic of Korea, state of negotiations, 1307, 1319

Capital punishment

- Commutation of death sentence, 400, 443, 528-31, 557-62, 574-5, 587-91, 658-60, 688-92, 937-41, 974-5, 982-3, 1157-8, 1168-9
- National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment), 643, 800-02, 893-6, 1168, 1297-8, 1459, 1816-18, 1836, 1848-9, 2243-4
- Partial abolition and expiration of trial period, 1656
- See* Criminal Code and Criminal Law bills

Carter, Hon. Chesley W.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 116-20
- Aging, the anatomy of Special Senate Committee report, 320-3
  - Employment of older people, 322
  - Research on social welfare and the aged, 321-2
- Air Canada, service between St. John's and Ottawa, 508
- Alberta-British Columbia Boundary bill S-13, 326, 336-7
- Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1575
  - Termination clause, 1575
- Canada Pension Plan bill C-22, 249-52, 278-9
  - Appeals, 251
  - Drop-out provision, 249
  - Earnings and retirement test, 251
  - Employment by country other than Canada, 250-1
  - Income Security for Canadians, White Paper on, 250
  - Pensionable earnings and exemption, 251
  - Religious sects exempt from contributions, 250
  - Self-employed persons, 251
  - Social Security in Canada, Working Paper on, 250
- Canadian Men's Curling Championship, congratulations to Newfoundland rink, 1889
- Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-92, 2038-9, 2042-3
  - Compensation as distinct from disability pension, 2038
  - Evaders, 2039
  - Prisoners of war held by European powers and in Korea, 2039
  - Prisoners of war held by Japanese, 2038, 2039, 2043
  - Statistics on duration of imprisonments, 2042
  - War veterans' allowance, 2043
  - Widows' allowances, 2038-9, 2042-3
- Crime and violence, 1288-91
  - Anatomy of Human Aggression*, by Dr. Eric Fromm, 1289
  - Causes and Prevention of Violence and Crime, US National Commission on, 1289
  - Decline in spiritual values, 1291
  - Permissive society, 1290-1
    - Wall Street Journal* article by Claire Boothe Luce, 1290-1
  - Statistics on rape, robberies, murders, male and female offenders, 1289
  - Whatever Became of Sin?*, by Carl Menninger, 1291
- Crime increase, 117, 118
- Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, 848, 908
- Estimates
  - Economic development, 190
  - Governor General's warrants, 190
  - Gross national product vs government expenditures, 189-90
  - Health and welfare, 190
  - Increase in estimates (1974-77), 2212
  - Loan items in supplementary estimates, precedents, 2258
  - Loto Canada, 2238, 2259
  - Old age security and guaranteed income supplement payments (1969-77), 2213
  - Provincial government expenditures, 2189, 2190, 2213
  - Public debt, 190
  - Transfer payments, 2213-14
- Estimates and Supplementary Estimates (A), fiscal year ending Mar. 31/75, 136-7, 189-90
- Estimates, fiscal year ending Mar. 31/77, 2182-3, 2189, 2190, 2212-14
  - Supplementary (A), 2237-8, 2258
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 116

Carter, Hon. Chesley W. - Continued

Fisheries

Law of the Sea Conference, 117

Newfoundland, 117; ice conditions, 117; foreign fishermen inside limit, 117

Health, Welfare and Science Committee

Reports

Crime and violence in contemporary Canadian society, 2242-3

Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, rep with amdts, 848, 908

Environmental Contaminants bill C-25, rep without amdt, 1437

Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75, rep without amdt, 1649

Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23, rep without amdt but with observations, 1369

Quarantine bill S-31, rep without amdt, 1874

Royal Canadian Legion bill C-28, rep without amdt 1211-12

Helsinki Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe, 1814

Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1872

Inflation, 116-20

Cost-push inflation, 119

Demand-pull inflation, 119

Food shortage and destitution in eastern countries, 117

Individual responsibilities, 119-20

Oil prices, 116

Structural inflation, 119

Supply of goods and services, government policies re, 116-17

World political and economic outlook, 117-18

Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23, 1339

National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment) bill S-23, 893

National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 750, 751, 752, 755

Non-profit and cooperative housing, 750

Veterans, 750

News media, disservice to Canada in derogatory remarks re Throne Speech, 118

North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1494

Armed forces in Europe, 1494

Leopard tanks, 1494

Reserve equipment, 1494

Ocean Dumping Control bill C-37, 1088

Old Age Security bill C-62, 1101-03, 1125-6

Absence from Canada, 1103

Calculation of income, 1102

Guaranteed income supplement, 1101-02

Income Security for Canadians, White Paper on, 1101

Joint application, 1125

Married or common-law status, 1025

Means test, 1102

Overpayments, 1103

Social Security in Canada, Working Paper on, 1101

Suspension of allowance, 1102

Termination of allowance upon husband's death, 1125

Universality vs selectivity, 1025

Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation by federal government, 966

Newfoundland, request for use of RCMP during labour strike, 966

Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, 1194-6, 1206, 1207, 1209, 1211-12

Branch agreements to amdts, 1206, 1207

British Commonwealth and Empire, deletion of words, 1195

Carter, Hon. Chesley W. - *ConcludedRoyal Canadian Legion bill S-28 - Concluded

- Department to assist or advise ex-servicemen's clubs, 1196
- Filing date of petition, 1212
- Legion background, 1194
- Property, branch holdings, 1195, 1206
- Sports training plan, 1195, 1206
- War veterans allowances, 1194
- Woods Committee study of pensions, 1195

Science Policy, Special Senate Committee

- Institute for Research on Public Policy, 1225
- 'Need for an Overall Science Policy', excerpt from committee report (1970-73), 1225
- Research and development programs in government laboratories and industry, 1225-6
- Lack of coordination, 1225-6
- Other countries, 1226

Senate

- Committee meetings during adjournments of Parliament, 952-3
- Committee meetings, scheduling of, 828
- Committee proceedings, televising of, 522-3
- Research staff, 320

Senate and House of Commons Act

- Regulations re senators' attendance and deductions for absence, 952-3

Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 874

Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, 2196

- Freeze on salaries of members of Parliament, 2186
- Sessional expenses and allowances, 2186
- Supplementary retirement benefits, 2186-7, 2196

Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances) bill C-4, 267-8

- Children attending school, 267-8
- Discrimination affecting those under 65 yrs., 268
- Escalation of allowances to consumer price index, 268
- Means test, 268
- Qualification of 365 days overseas, 268
- Residence requirement, 268

Statute Law (Veterans and Returned Soldiers' Insurance) bill C-86, 1883-4

- Common-law spouse, 1884
- Death benefit limitation, 1884

Transportation

- BNA Act as it pertains to transportation, 2220
- Intercolonial railway, 2220

Work Ethic in Canada, 474-8

- Changes due to economic environment, 475
- Definition of work ethic, 474-5, 477
- Evaluation of services performed for society, 476
- Market orientation concept of work, 477
- Right to work, unions and employers denial of, 476
- Social security programs, 477
- Social status vs job status, 475
- Teachers and public servants under contract, 477
- Unemployment insurance, 477
- Unequal distribution of wealth, 477
- Volunteer workers, 477

Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company, 1293, 1307-08

Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, see National Housing bills C-46 and C-77

Chile

Aid from Canada by grants, loans, re-scheduling of debts, technical assistance, etc., 1438-9, 1597-8

Choquette, Hon. Lionel

- British North America Acts 1867 to 1975 bill C-3, 1067
- Crime and violence, 1453
  - Directives of proposed committee, question of, 1453
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 589, 590-1
  - Recommendation for clemency, 589
  - Responsibility of judge and jury, 590-1
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2420-1
  - Alternative to death by hanging, 2420
  - Deterrent aspect, 2420, 2421
  - Excerpt from Commons Justice and Legal Affairs Committee report, 2423
  - Excerpt from speech (1967) re book by Nathan F. Leopold, convicted killer, 2420-1
  - Parole, 2423
  - Prison guards' reaction to legislation, 2420
  - Prison term, 2423
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1018
- Indian Oil and Gas bill C-15, 351-2
  - Consultation with Indian Bands, 352
  - Excerpt from Commons committee proceedings, 352
- Judges bill C-47, 1080
- Law Reform Commission bill C-43, 643-4
  - Composition of commission, 643, 644
  - Part-time commissioners, 644
  - Quebec representation, 644
  - Sharing of assets and family property in event of marriage breakup, 643
- Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23, 1340
- Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, 813-14
  - Commission members, functions and jurisdiction, 808
  - Expenditures over $50,000, approval of Governor in Council for, 814
  - Lack of authority of Yukon and NWT councils, 814
  - Power rates, 814
- Old Age Security bill C-62, 1126
- Olympic bill C-63, 1189
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1410, 1428-9
- Science Policy, Special Senate Committee, expenditures of, 1223
- Senate
  - Amplification and simultaneous interpretation system, 13
  - Business, 2356
  - Tailoring service for members of Parliament, 2209
- Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, 1709-10
  - Widows of senators, 1709-10
- Statute Revision bill S-3, 159

Christian Evangelical Centre of Canada

Action of Revenue Department re, 2183-4, 2354-6

Citizenship

- AIB* case, 2282-3
- Alien ownership of land, 2074, 2091, 2095, 2096, 2264-7, 2279-85, 2311-13, 2323, 2349-50
  - Authority to provinces for making of regulations re, 2285-6
  - Certification of title, 2282
  - Federal-provincial conferences re, 2284-5
  - Morgan et al*, 2074, 2284, 2311
  - Ontario, 2284
  - Prince Edward Island, 2284
- Appeals, 2089-90, 2096
- Armed forces personnel, 2093
- Background of citizenship, naturalization and legislation re, 2071
- British subject and subject of the Queen, 2088, 2095
- Children born abroad, 2072
- Citizen of Ireland, 2075
- Citizen of the Commonwealth, 2072-3
- Citizenship certificates, 2071, 2074-5, 2077, 2094
- Discretions on humanitarian grounds, 2073-4
- Eligibility age, 2078
- Equality for men and women, 2072
- Ethnic element of Canadian citizenship, 2290-2
- Excerpt from speech of Senator Croll (1946), 2290-2
- Federal-provincial conferences, 2284-5
- General regulations, 2090
- Good character qualification, 2073
- Illegal residents, 2094
- Immigration from US to Canada, statistics, 2094
- International law, question of, 2281-2, 2286, 2350
- Judges of citizenship courts, 2074, 2078
- Jurisdiction over aliens, 2282-3, 2350
- Landed immigrants, residency requirements and qualifications of, 2073, 2074, 2078, 2087-8, 2093, 2094-5
- Land Holding Disclosure Act, NS and Cape Breton Island, 2323
- Language requirement, 2091, 2093, 2095
- Laurier, Sir Wilfrid, statement at Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria, 2290, 2293
- McGill Law Journal* article, 'The Central Fallacy of Canadian Constitutional Law', 2324, 2348
- Ministerial authority, 2096
- Non-Canadian triable at law as Canadian citizen, 2092
- Oath of allegiance and oath of citizenship, 2091-2, 2094
  - Regulations respecting the taking of, 2090-1
- Pledge appended to Bill of Rights, 2078-9
- Powers and authorizations of Minister and Governor in Council, 2088-9, 2090, 2279, 2282-5, 2289, 2310, 2312-13, 2324
- Precedents in transfer of federal jurisdiction, 2312
- Prince Edward Island Potato Marketing Board vs H.B. Willis Inc.*, 2323-4
- Property and civil rights, 2279
- Qualification for municipal office, 2279-80
- Qualification to own ship, or acquire, hold or dispose of property, 2279-80
- Real Property Act, 2280-1, 2313
  - Evidence of Canadian Bar Association, 2280-1
- Referral of Clause 33 of Bill C-20 to Supreme Court, question of, 2348-50, 2362, 2444
- Resumption of citizenship, 2073, 2093
- Security of public order risks, 2073, 2090
- Status of British subjects, 2072
- Students, 2093

Citizenship - Concluded

Speakers: Senators

Bell, Ann E. H., 2075
 Bonnell, M Lorne, 2313
 Burchill, G. Percival, 2075
 Connolly, John J., 2071-5, 2094-6, 2264-5, 2284-6, 2310-11, 2313, 2323-4
 Croll, David A., 2290-3
 Flynn, Jacques, 2266, 2267, 2279-80, 2284, 2285, 2289, 2301-10, 2324, 2349, 2350
 Forsey, Eugene A., 2087-92, 2282-3, 2310, 2311, 2350
 Goldenberg, H. Carl, 2092, 2349, 2350
 Greene, John J., 2092, 2093, 2311
 Grosart, Allister, 2311-12, 2313, 2324, 2349
 Laird, Keith, 2265-6, 2280, 2289
 Lang, Daniel, 2283
 Macdonald, John M., 2092-4, 2323
 Macnaughton, Alan A., 2280-1
 McDonald, A. Hamilton, 2283-4
 Perrault, Raymond J., 2311, 2312, 2324, 2336-7, 2348-9, 2362, 2444
 Smith, George I., 2281-2, 2286, 2350
 Yuzyk, Paul, 2077-9

Citizenship bill C-20. 1r, 2058; 2r, 2071-5, 2077-9, 2087-96; ref to com, 2096; rep without amdt, 2242; m for 3r, 2264-5, m in amdt, 2265-7, 2279-86, 2289, m in amdt neg, 2289-90, debate on 3r cont, 2290-3, 2309-13, 2323-4, 2336-7, 2348-50; m in amdt that bill be ref back to com, neg, 2350; 3r, 2350; r.a., 2450

Civilian war allowances

Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances), 242, 267-70, 272, 281, 314

Civil Service insurance

Adopted children, 766
 Amendment to annuity tables, 766
 Equal rights to man and wife, 766
 Sharing of insurance proceeds, 766
 Statistics on policies issued, 766

Speakers: Senators

Denis, Azellus, 766
 Flynn, Jacques, 770

Civil Service Insurance bill C-26. 1r, 712; 2r, 766-7, 770; 3r, 775; r.a., 832

Clerestory of the Senate Chamber, Special Senate Committee

Installation of stained glass windows, 481
 Theme for project, 481

Speaker: Senator

Connolly, John J., 480-2

Clerk of the Privy Council and Secretary to the Cabinet

See Federal-Provincial relations, 465, 466,
 Public Service Employment, Staff Relations, Superannuation, 464-7.

Clerk of the Senate

Clerk's Scroll, 1667, 1683-5

Property qualification of senators, return presented, 242; supplementary return authorized, 242; supplementary return tabled, 472

Receipts and disbursements (1973-74), ref to com, 192

Receipts and disbursements (1974-75), ref to com, 1005

Receipts and disbursements (1975-76), ref to com, 2167

Combines

Takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd. of Argus Corporation Ltd., reference of matter to Senate committee, inquiry dropped, 1063-4

Combines investigation

Competition policy in Canada and the Combines Investigation Act, committee to examine and report on, 109-10

Reports, 663-6, 675-83, 1121-2, 1135, 1589-95

Combines investigation (Bill C-2)

Air transport, control and direction of, 1572, 1591-2

Amendments, effect of, 1589

Appeals from decisions of Commission, 1296

Bid-rigging, 1295

Chartered accountants and other professions, 1591

Civil damages, 1594

Committee meetings held on consideration of subject matter of bill, 1294

Conflict of interest, statement by Senator Godfrey, 1308-09, 1315-16

Constitutional problems in provisions of bill, 1310-11, 1593-4

Due diligence re certain offences, 1590

Exemption for affiliates, 1590

Export combines, 1296

Farm Products Marketing case and Breweries case, 1592

Foreign judgements, laws or directives, 1296

Franchises, 1593

Inability to obtain supplies of brand name product, 1594

Institution of proceedings on summary conviction, 1593

Interim injunction, 1594

Mergers and monopolies, 1589

Misleading advertising and unfair or dishonest selling practices, 1294, 1295, 1309-10

Penalty provisions, 1572

Professional sports, 1296, 1590

Proof that agreement prevents or lessens competition unduly, 1295

Recommendations of com incorporated in amdts to bill, 1588-90

Refusal to deal, 1594

Regulated trades, industries and professions, 1590-1

Resale price maintenance, 1295

Restrictive Trade Practices Commission powers, 1294, 1295-6

Right of action in civil or federal courts for damages and provincial jurisdiction re, 1296, 1310-11

Right of appeal from orders of Commission, 1594

Service industries, coverage extended to, 1294-5

Trade union activities, 1295

Winnipeg Commodity Exchange, 1592-3

Combines investigation (Bill C-2) - Concluded*Speakers: Senators

Cook, Eric, 1294-6
 Flynn, Jacques, 1308-12, 1598
 Godfrey, John M., 1308-09, 1315-16
 Hayden, Salter A., 1571-3, 1589-95

Combines Investigation bill C-2. 1r, 1283; 2r, 1293-6, 1308-12; ref to com, 1312; rep without amdt but with observations, 1571, 1589-95; 3r, 1598; r.a., 1617

Commission on the Future

Authority to hold conference re, 295-8
 Termination of mandate of Science Policy Committee to hold conference, 1171-3, 1220-6, 1246-7, 1259-60
 See Science Policy, Special Senate Committee, first report

Committee of Selection

Appointment, 7
 Members, 7
 Report
 Standing Committees, members, 96-97; rep adopted, 107

Committee of the Whole

Medical Care bill C-68, Hon. Marc Lalonde, Minister of Health and Welfare, taking part in debate, 2366-75
 National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, Hon. Barnett Danson, Minister of State for Urban Affairs, taking part in debate, 748-57
 National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, Hon. Barnett Danson, Minister of State for Urban Affairs, taking part in debate, 1673-81
 Senate and House of Commons (Supplementary Retirement Benefits) bill C-81, Mr. H. D. Clark, Director of Pensions and Insurance Division of Treasury Board, present, 2196-2207
 Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, Hon. Robert K. Andras, Minister of Manpower and Immigration, taking part in debate, 1695-1706

Committee on Orders and Customs

Appointment, 7

Committees, general data

Aging, the anatomy of Special Senate Committee report, 146-9, 320-3, 516-18
 Agriculture
 Expenses, special, 348
 Authorization to meet during adjournments of the Senate, 2171-2
 Banking, Trade and Commerce
 Expenses re study of bankruptcy and insolvency, 1781
 Expenses re study of budget resolutions relating to income tax, 524-5
 Expenses, special, 160, 348
 Meetings during adjournments, 2047-8
 Clerestory of the Senate Chamber, Special Senate Committee, 480-2
 Committee meetings during Senate sittings, 1856-7
 Co-ordinating Committee to arrange scheduling of committee meetings, 828-9

Committees, general data - Concluded

- Crime and violence, special Senate committee proposed, 916-22
- Delay in printing and distribution of committee proceedings, 703-04
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service
  - Draft report released to press, 1755-6
  - Expenses re study of Parts, I, II and III of paper, 525, 1624
- Foreign Affairs
  - Expenses re study of Canada-United States relations, 1781
  - Expenses, special, 348
- Implementation of new schedule of meetings, 1937-8
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration
  - Budgets and special expenses of committees, reports tabled, 160, 213, 348, 524-5, 795, 956, 1088, 1244, 1781-2
  - Printing of proceedings, question of, 953
  - Regulations respecting attendance of senators, report presented, 1781-2
- Inter-Parliamentary Advisory Committee, 1490, 1494
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs
  - Expenses, special, 348, 525-6, 795
  - Meeting held in camera, question of privilege, 1770-1
  - Televising of proceedings, 509-14, 521-3, 543-54
- Meetings during Senate sittings, objection to, 827-8
- Meetings, scheduling of, 828-9, 924
- National Capital Region, special joint committee proposed, 1097; appointment, 1126
- National Finance
  - Counsel and staff, engagement of, 351
  - Expenses re study of legislation and other matters, 525, 795, 1781
  - Meetings during adjournments, 2048
- Notices of meetings of subcommittees and steering committees, 2192
- Privileges and immunities of senators, motion for appointment of special committee, 1434-6
- Question of referral of Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13 to Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 815
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments
  - Expenses, 525, 795
- Rules and Orders
  - Sub-committee to study coordination of meetings of committees, 858-9, 924, 1091
- Science Policy
  - Expenses, 160, 648, 795, 1088, 1244, 1261
- Standing Committees members, 96-97
- Sub-committee meeting, 1931
- Televising of committee proceedings, 509-14, 521-3
- Work Ethic in Canada, special Senate committee proposed, 281-8, 339-42, 474-8, 518
- Work of committees during present session, 1286-8
- See Rules of the Senate, report of Standing Committee on Rules and Orders

Committees, Joint, Special

- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service
- Immigration Policy
- National Capital Region

Committees, Joint, Standing

- Library of Parliament
- Printing of Parliament
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments
- Restaurant of Parliament

Committees, Senate, Special

- Aging (see Aging, the anatomy of Special Senate Committee report)
- Clerestory of the Senate Chamber
- Crime and Violence (proposed)
- Privileges and Immunities of Senators (proposed), motion withdrawn
- Poverty in Canada
- Science Policy
- Work Ethic in Canada (proposed)

Committees, Senate, Standing

- Agriculture
- Banking, Trade and Commerce
- Foreign Affairs
- Health, Welfare and Science
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs
- National Finance
- Rules and Orders
- Transport and Communications

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association

- Secretary General Sir Robin Vanderfelt, visitor to Senate, 1966
- South African region delegation, visitors to Senate, 1087

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, New Delhi conference, 1495-1500, 1644-6

- Authority and prestige of Parliament, external and internal threats, 1499
- Building of a new international economic order, 1497-8
- Canadian delegation, 1495
- Commonwealth as instrument of social, political and economic transformation, 1499-1500
- Development of Southeast Asia, 1496
- Energy crisis, 1497
  - Canadian requirements, imports and exports, 1497
- Environment, control of pollution and protection of wildlife, 1498-9
- India, 1495-6, 1645-6
  - Canada's aid to, 1645-6
  - Communications problems, 1645
  - Government, 1495-6, 1645
  - Jaipur City twinned with Calgary, 1645-6
  - Nuclear explosion in Rajasthan from reactor supplied by Canada, 1645
  - Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, 1495-6
- Indian Ocean as zone of peace, 1496
- International security in Africa south of the Sahara, 1496-7
- Ministers, members and conflicts of interest, 1499
- Multinational corporations, 1498

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, New Delhi conference - Concluded

Nuclear energy, 1497, 1499

Social problems of unemployment, violence, youth unrest and drugs, 1498

Vice-President, Hon. James Jerome, 1646

World population growth and food resources, 1497-8

Speakers: Senators

Bonnell, Lorne, 1495-1500

Grosart, Allister, 1644-6

Compensation for former prisoners of war

Carleton University award of Rip Van Winkle award to Veterans Affairs Minister, 2039-40

Compensation as distinct from disability pension, 2038

Compensation to be not more than 100% disability pension, 2041

Evaders and escapees, 2039, 2040, 2042

Prisoners of war held at Dieppe, 2040

Prisoners of war held by European powers and Korea, 2039

Prisoners of war held by Japan, 2038, 2039, 2040, 2043

Statistics on duration of imprisonments, 2042

Three months limitations, 2041, 2042

War veterans' allowance, 2043

Widows' allowances, 2038-9, 2040, 2042-3

Speakers: Senators

Carter, Chesley W., 2038-9, 2042-3

Croll, David A., 2041

Macdonald, John M., 2040-1

McDonald, A. Hamilton, 2041-2

Norrie, Margaret, 2039

Phillips, Orville H., 2039-40

Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-92. 1r, 2014; 2r, 2038-43; 3r, 2043; r.a., 2096Competition policy in Canada

Canadian Breweries case, 664

Civil damages, 665

Energy Board, 670

Inability to obtain supplies to carry on business, 665

In Re The Farm Products Marketing Act, 664

Interim injunction, 665-6

International Air Transport Association, 1122, 1135

Jurisdiction of Federal Court in criminal matters, 666

Lawyers fees, Ontario, 664

Per se liability in matter of defence, 664

Reviewable transactions, 665, 666

Services included in combines legislation, 663-4

Sports, professional and amateur, 664-5

Summary convictions, 666

Toronto Daily Star article re proposed amdts, 664

Speaker: Senator

Hayden, Salter A., 663-6, 675-83, 1121-2, 1135

Competition policy in Canada and the Combines Investigation Act

Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee to examine and report on, 109-10

First report, 663-6, 675-83

Second report, 1121-2, 1135

Condolences to Hon. Renaude Lapointe on death of brother, 382

Conferences

Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, 542

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, New Delhi conference, 1495-1500, 1644-6

European Parliament, 307-13, 331-3

Habitat, United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, report of Canadian National Committee, 1959-64, 2199-2200, 2278-9

Helsinki conference on security and cooperation in Europe, 1293, 1466, 1471-5, 1757-61

Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, Florida meeting, 2221-2, 2224-33

Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, Quebec meeting, 1137-43, 1145-55

Inter-Parliamentary Union, Sri Lanka meeting, 984-8

Inter-Parliamentary Union, Tokyo meeting, 234-8, 245-9

Mexico, Canadian parliamentarians visit to, 775-7, 852-3, 930-3

North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1489-94, 1513-16, 1726-8

North Atlantic Assembly, London conference, 342-7, 362-5

Oil-producing and oil-consuming countries, 605-06, 774-5

Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe, 1431-4

United Nations Conference on World Population, 236

United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention, status of Palestinian Liberation Organization as participants, 1238, 1242-4, 1248-8

Conflict of interest

Combines Investigation bill C-2, withdrawal from debate (Senator Godfrey) because of conflict of interest, 1294

Question of privilege re, 1315-16

Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest, Green Paper on, 373, 573-4, 580

Question of privilege re, 779-81

Ref to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 774

Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 847, 856-61, 868-80

Sky Shops Ltd. (allegations re Senator Giguere), 1348, 1395-7

Supreme Court bill S-2, 153, 163

Conflict of interest

Green Paper entitled 'Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest', report of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 2278, 2303-06

Code of conduct, 2306

Financial interests, 2305

Government contracts, 2304-05

Broadcasting licences, 2305

Knowledge of participation in government contracts, 2304-05

Permitted participation, 2304

Prohibited contracts, 2304

Incompatible offices, 2303-04

Elected public office, 2304

Prohibited federal offices, 2303

Prohibited provincial offices, 2303-04

Sanctions and administration, 2305-06

Committee on Privileges, 2305-06

Public resources, 2305

Connaught Laboratories Ltd.

Residential development in vicinity of testing laboratories, 586, 616, 732, 902

Connolly, Hon. John J., P.C.

- Aircraft Registry bill C-5, 1000-02
  - Central registry for property, federal-provincial conferences re, 1000
  - Constitutional problems in bill, 1000
  - Property and civil rights of provinces, 1000
  - Rolling stock of railways, 1001
  - Treaty-making authority of government, 1001
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2071-5, 2094-6, 2264-5, 2284-6, 2310-11, 2313, 2323-4
  - Alien ownership of land, 2074, 2095, 2096, 2265, 2285
    - Authority to provinces for making of regulations re, 2285-6
    - Federal-provincial conferences, 2284-5
    - Morgan et al*, 2074, 2284, 2311
    - Provincial laws, PEI, Sask., Ont., 2284
  - Appeals, 2096
  - Background of citizenship, naturalization and legislation re, 2071
  - British subject and subject of the Queen, 2095
  - Certificates of citizenship, 2071, 2074-5, 2094
  - Children born abroad, 2072
  - Citizen of Ireland, 2075
  - Citizen of the Commonwealth, 2072-3
  - Discretions on humanitarian grounds, 2073-4
  - Equality for men and women, 2072
  - Good character qualification, 2073
  - Illegal residents, 2094
  - Immigration from US to Canada, statistics, 2094
  - Judges of citizenship courts, 2074
  - Language requirement, 2095
  - Ministerial authority, 2096
  - Powers of Lieutenant Governor in Council, 2285, 2310
  - PEI Potato Marketing Board vs H.B. Willis Inc.*, 2323-4
  - Residence requirement, 2073, 2074, 2094-5
  - Resumption of citizenship, 2073
  - Security of public order risks, 2073
  - Status of British subjects, 2072
- Continental Bank of Canada bill S-30, 1340-5
  - Aspects of amalgamation with IAC Limited, 1342-3
  - Borrowing cost of finance subsidiaries, 1345
  - IAC Limited, 1340-5
    - Assets and liabilities, 1341, 1343-4
    - Background and officers of company, 1340-1
    - Debts and debentures, 1341, 1343, 1344
    - Financing areas, 1341-2
    - Shares to be issued to Continental Bank, 1342, 1343, 1344, 1345
  - Leasing arrangements, 1345
  - Mortgage portfolio, 1343
  - Transition period, 1342-5
    - Bank Act provisions applicable during transition, 1343, 1344
    - Penalties and sanctions, 1344
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 559
  - Royal prerogative, 559

Connolly, Hon. John J., P.C. - Concluded

- Criminal Law Amendment bill C-71, 1733
- Customs Tariff bill (No. 1) C-27, 262-3
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee
  - Availability to press of draft report, 1756
- Free trade, an economic consideration for Canada, 1852
  - GATT, 1852
    - Textile and other manufacturing, problems of, 1852
- Gelinas, Hon. Louis-Philippe, the late, 1713-14
- Hugessen, Hon. A. K., the late, 2007
- Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C., the late, 533
- Legislation, schedules omitted from format of bills, 263
- Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, P.C., the late, 2176
- Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, 840, 851
- Ocean Dumping Control bill C-37, 1040
  - Courts of criminal jurisdiction, 1040
  - Dumping by aircraft over land, 1040
- O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan, the late, 2035
- Quarantine bill S-31, 1786-7
  - Black death of Europe and the London plague, 1786
  - Immigration (1847) causing ship-fever, typhus and cholera, 1786
    - Grosse Isle monument to victims, 1786
  - Research scientists, tribute to, 1786-7
    - Pasteur, Fleming and Snow, 1787
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 824, 826
  - Penalty clause, 824, 826
- Salaries (Lieutenant Governors) bill C-24, 1081, 1094, 1095
  - Former provincial levels of salaries, 1081
  - Non-accountable allowances and other benefits, 1081
  - Pensions, 1094
  - Special expense fund, 1095
  - Status of Lieutenant Governors, 1094
  - Tax benefits, 1095
- Senate
  - Clerestory of the Senate Chamber, Special Senate Committee, 480-2
    - Installation of stained glass windows, 481
    - Terms of reference of committee, 480-1
    - Theme for project, 481
- Senate (Intersessional Authority) bill S-22, 771-2
  - Informal arrangements previously used, 771-2
  - Sittings of Senate committees during election periods, question of feasibility of, 722
- Supreme Court bill S-2, 103-06, 162-4
  - Appeals, restriction to Supreme Court, 103-04, 163
  - Case overload and delays in Supreme Court hearings, committee on, 104-05
  - Conflict of interest, 163
  - Interest on money awards, 103, 163
  - Jurisprudence, 163
  - Quorum, 163-4
  - Residence requirement for judges, registrars and deputy registrars, 103, 162-3
  - Televising of committee proceedings, 513
  - Temporary Immigration Security bill C-85, 1830

Constitution of Canada

- Patriation, correspondence between the Prime Minister of Canada and the First Ministers of the Provinces on the subject of, 2079-86
- Amdts by unanimous consent of Parliament and legislature, 2082
- Draft proclamation, 2083-4
- Excerpt from previous speech, 2080
- Federal-provincial agreements, 2085, 2086
- House of Commons, redistribution of seats, 2085-6
- Language rights, 2084
- Letters received in opposition to patriation, 2079-80
- Protection of French Language and Culture, 2084-5
- Provincial consultation in amendments, 2080-2
- Senators, Western provincial appointments, 2085
- Unanimous consent of provinces, question of, 2081-2
- Victoria formula, 2082-3

Speaker: Senator

Forsey, Eugene A., 2079-86

Consumer Credit and Cost of Living, Special Joint Committee (1967)

- Recommendations of Fifth Report, action taken for implementation of, 2238-41
- Bankruptcy, orderly payment of debts, 2239, 2240; recommendations of Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 2240
- Relief from unconscionable transactions, 2239, 2240
- Borrowers' and Depositors' Protection Act, 2239
- Combines investigation, 2240
- Cooling-off period re purchases, 2240
- Faulty or defective goods, 2239, 2240
- Financing of used motor vehicles, 2239, 2241
- Form of agreement for credit transactions, 2239, 2240
- Government guaranteed loans to low-income consumers, 2240
- Information and education, 2239, 2240
- Money management education and credit and debt counselling, 2240-1
- Prepayment of contracts, 2239, 2240
- Technical sub-committees of Consumer Affairs, 2239, 2241

Continental Bank of Canada

- Aspects of amalgamation with IAC Limited, 1342-3
- Borrowing cost of finance subsidiaries, 1345
- IAC Limited, 1340-5
  - Assets and liabilities, 1341, 1343-4
  - Background and officers of company, 1340-1
  - Debts and debentures, 1341, 1343, 1344
  - Financing areas, 1341-2
  - Shares to be issued to Continental Bank, 1342, 1343, 1344, 1345
  - Subsidiaries and ownership of realty and insurance companies, 1341, 1343
- Leasing arrangements, 1345
- Mortgage portfolio, 1343
- Transition period, 1342-5
  - Bank Act provisions applicable during transition, 1343, 1344
  - Penalties and sanctions, 1344

Speakers: Senators

- Benidickson, W. M., 1406
- Connolly, John J., 1340-5, 1406, 1408

Continental Bank of Canada - Concluded

Speakers: Senators - Concluded

- Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 1345
- Everett, Douglas, D., 1345
- Hayden, Salter A., 1367-9, 1405-06, 1407-08
- Lang, Daniel, 1406
- Macdonald, John M., 1345
- Sparrow, Herbert O., 1345

Continental Bank of Canada bill S-30. 1r, 1306; 2r, 1340-5; ref to com, 1346; rep with amds, 1367-9, 1405-06; m to ref rep back to com, 1406; further rep of com, 1407-08, adopted, 1408; 3r, 1408

Conventions

- Aircraft Convention, International Recognition of Rights in, 173
- Export or import of cultural articles, UNESCO convention re illegal operations, 764, 813
- Tax treaties or conventions, countries with which Canada has concluded agreements, 855, 867, 925
- See* Agreements, treaties, conventions

Cook, Hon. Eric

Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1294-6

- Appeals from decisions of Commission, 1296
- Bid-rigging, 1295
- Committee meetings held on consideration of subject matter of bill, 1294
- Damages and costs for injury, 1296
- Export combines, 1296
- Foreign judgments, laws or directives, 1296
- Misleading advertising and unfair selling practices, 1294, 1295
- Professional sports, 1296
- Proof that agreement prevents or lessens competition unduly, 1295
- Resale price maintenance, 1295
- Restrictive Trade Practices Commission powers, 1294, 1295-6
- Service industries, coverage extended to, 1294-5
- Trade union activities, 1295

Customs bill S-4, 131

- Importation by sea within Canadian waters, 131
- Proclamation of bill, 131
- Restriction to 12-mile limit, 131

Customs Tariff bill (No.2) C-39, 484-5

- Food products, 485
- Housing materials and appliances, 485
- Preferential rates for developing countries, 485
- Temporary tariff reductions (1974), 485
- Tourist exemptions, 485

Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40, 571-2

- Unlicensed wholesalers, 571-2

Income Tax bill (No.3) C-58, 1848, 2293-4

- Excerpt from committee hearings re Manning Timber Products Ltd. v Minister of National Revenue, 2293-4
- Rights of taxpayers to protection of court, 2294
- 'Substantially the same', definition of, 2293
- Time Canada*, 2293, 2294

National Housing bill (No.1) C-46, 755-6

- Newfoundland, deterioration of buildings after lease expiry, 755-6

Cook, Hon. Eric - Concluded

- Petro-Canada bill C-8, 1178-9, 1218
  - Authorized capital, 1178
  - Control by Governor in Council, 1218
  - Establishment of national petroleum company as crown corporation, 1178
  - Sale of government interest in Panarctic Oils, 1178
  - Scope of activities, 1178-9
- Railway bill C-48, 760
  - Compliance by companies to regulations, 760
  - Disclosure of financial operations, 760
  - Ministerial powers, 760
  - Western Economic Opportunities Conference, 760
- Senate and House of Commons Act
  - Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, motion that subject matter be ref to com, 951; agreed, 954
- Senate business, 923-4

Copyright Act

- Economic Review*, 'Crown copyright reserved', replacement of words, 2200, 2322-3

Corporations and Labour Unions Returns Act

- Report of Ministry of Industry, Trade and Commerce, 2059-61, 2108-09

Cote, Hon. Jean-Pierre, P.C.

- Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada) bill C-223, 715
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, Standing Senate Committee
  - Orders of the Day, notification of item standing in senator's name, 2123
- Regulations re attendance of senators, 1911-12
  - Attendance records, 1912
  - Committee review of reasons for absence, 1912
  - Official business, specifying of, 1912

Cottreau, Hon. Ernest G. (Introduced in the Senate Sept. 30/74)

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 18-20
- Inflation, 19
- King George V Cancer Fund Winding-Up bill C-76, 1480-2, 1483
  - Assets value, 1482
  - Background of King George V fund, 1481
  - Payment of assets to National Cancer Institute of Canada, 1481
  - Trustees of fund, 1481
  - Trust fund provisions re transfer of funds, 1481-2
- Nova Scotia, 18-20
  - Acadians, 18-19
    - Education, Royal Commission, Public Services and Provincial-Municipal Relations, 19
    - Prominent Acadians in life of nation, 19
  - Bilingualism, 19
  - Fisheries, 19; offshore fishing, 19-20
  - Storm damage, 1765-6
  - Transportation, 20
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine and Trade Marks bill S-35, 2125-6
  - Excerpt from speech by Hon. Marc Lalonde, 2126
  - Federal-provincial consultations re legislation, 2126
  - Self-medication, 2126

Cottreau, Hon. Ernest G. - Concluded

- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee
- Travel arrangements for committee outside of Canada, 1479

Council of Europe, Parliamentary Assembly, Strasbourg conference, France, 1431-4

- Economic and cultural development (OECD), 1431
- Economic disruptions and difficulties, 1432
- Energy resources, 1432-3
- European shipping policy, 1433
- International investment, 1432
- International relations, 1433
- Policies for non-inflationary, 1432
- Relations with underdeveloped countries, 1432, 1433
- Scientific research, 1431-2
- Trade pledge, 1432
- World economic interdependence, 1432
- Speaker: Senator
- Bourget, Maurice, 1431-4

Crerar, Hon. Thomas A., P.C. (Deceased April 11, 1975)

- Tributes, 778-9

Crime

- Capital punishment, commutation of sentences of accused murderers and kidnappers, 400, 443, 528-31
- Drug convictions, 66
- Gun crimes and accidents in Canada and US, 294, 295
- Parole, consideration by government of changes in present system, 1371
- Rape, 66
- See following items*

Crime and violence, special Senate committee proposed, 916-22, 944-5, 1252-5, 1288-91, 1449-52, 1646-7; m that subject matter be ref to Health, Welfare and Science Committee, 1647; m in amdt to amdt re terms of reference, and referral of subject matter to Health, Welfare and Science Committee, 1659-60; rep of com, 2242-3; terms of reference, suggested, 2243

Abortion, 917

Anatomy of Human Aggression, by Eric Fromm, 917, 1289

Basic principles for prevention of crime, 1253

Statement of Henry Fielding, founder of crime prevention organization, 1253

Biblical history of crime and violence, 944

Capital punishment, 917

Causes and Prevention of Violence and Crime, US National Commission on, 1289

Child abuse, 918-19

Murderers who suffered parental cruelty, 918

UK investigations, 918

Crime and punishment as ritual of life, excerpt from article by Dr. Carl Menninger, 920

Crime increase and demands on protective resources, 1449-50

Decline in spiritual values, 1291

Directives of proposed committee, question of, 1453

Enuresis, Fire Setting and Cruelty to Animals: a Triad Predictive of Adult Crime, 919

Firearms, police use of, 1253

Good Housekeeping article by Art Linkletter re 'What I've learned about drugs since my daughter's death', 1451-2

Guns, freedom of purchase and possession, 920-1, 1452

Human Aggression, by Dr. Anthony Storr, 917

'Jungle made by humans for humans', 917

Crime and violence, special Senate committee proposed - Concluded

- Marihuana convictions of young people, 1451-2
- Netherlands crime reform, 1253-4
  - Communication between prisoners and personnel, 1254
  - 'Land Without Prisons', Newsweek article, 1253
  - Penal system, 1253
  - Permissive population, comparisons, 1253-4
  - Rehabilitation, 1253
- New Zealand, low crime rate, 920
- Parental attitudes towards punishment, 944, 945
- Penal system failure, 921
- Permissive society, 1290-1
  - Wall Street Journal* article by Claire Boothe Luce, 1290-1
- Physical punishment and loss of freedom, 917-18
- Prison population per capita, 1451
- Psychopathic Personality, Sociopathic Personality and Character Neurosis*, excerpt from address by Prof. James McHorter, 919-20
- Rehabilitation of convicted murderers, 921
- Religious sects in pacifist role, 917
- Royal Canadian Mounted Police duties, 1450
- Sex deviates, 1451
- Society's ignorance of causes of crime, 921
- Statistics on rape, robberies, murders, male and female offenders, 1289
- Television programs, 945, 1255
- Terms of reference of proposed committee, question of, 1647, 1660
- Training of police in psychology, pathological conduct and behaviour, 1450
- Unnecessary activities of police, 1450
- US Police: A New Image?*, excerpt from Christian Science Monitor, 1254-5
- Vice squads, 1450
- Violence depicted in life styles, 1255
- Vulnerability of democratic society, 1452-3
- Whatever Became of Sin?*, by Carl Menninger, 1291
- Youth training, 1253
- Speakers: Senators
  - Asselin, Martial, 1659-60
  - Carter, Chesley W., 1288-91
  - Choquette, Lionel, 1453
  - Desruisseaux, Paul, 944-5
  - Greene, John J., 922
  - Inman, F. Elsie, 1255
  - McElman, Charles, 1646-7
  - McGrand, Fred A., 916-22
  - Norrie, Margaret, 1252-5
  - Rowe, Frederick William, 1449-53

Criminal Code

- Abortions, acquittal of Dr. Morgentaler of charges re, 1036
- Abortions, study of procedure for obtaining therapeutic abortions, question re committee on, 1428, 1624-5, 1639
- Combines investigation, 1283
- Commutation of death sentence, 443, 528-31, 557-62, 574-5, 587-91, 658-60, 688-92, 936-41, 974-5, 982-3, 1157-8, 1168-9, 1459-60, 1733
- Control of weapons and firearms, 193, 293-5, 479-80

Criminal Code - Concluded

- Food and drugs, narcotic control, 300, 354-62, 366-8, 374-5, 382-5, 402-06, 446-54, 456, 969-71, 983, 1007-11, 1014-21, 1023-33, 1036-8, 1046-9, 1066, 1074-80
- National Flag of Canada, 663, 710-11, 714-15, 740
- Total abolition of capital punishment (National Defence), 643, 800-02, 893-6, Order stands, 1168
- See following items under Criminal Code and Criminal Law

Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence)

- Acquittals and convictions in cases of murders of police officers (1967-73), 529
- Administration of law, objections re, 688-9
- Atlantic Provinces Policemen's Assoc., meeting in Moncton, 530, 689-90
- Clemency recommendation, 688, 940
- Commutations since 1972 legislation, 659
- Compensation to victims of crime, 557
- Constitutionality of bill, question of, 688
- Credibility of witnesses, 588
- Crime increase and legislative permissiveness, 659
- Deterrent aspect, 558, 559, 562, 659
- Disclosure of other evidence after conviction, 558
- Excerpt from Code re responsibility for carrying out sentence, 560-1
- Fredericton meeting of students at University of NB, 690
- Jury and judge responsibility in sentence of death, 562, 588-9, 590-1, 690-1, 940
- Liberal Party convention decision on capital punishment, 689
- Louis Riel* case cited, 561
- Miscarriage of justice, 588, 589-90, 691
- Moral issue in question of capital punishment, 974
- Murder of Moncton policemen, 529, 561, 689
- Murders of policemen and prison guards, 529, 530, 561, 588, 689
- Nuremberg trials, 561, 562
- Petition of Right Act, 939
- Premeditated murders, 659, 660
- Pre-sentence report, 691
- Privy Council decision and provisions in criminal law re royal prerogative, 938
- Rehabilitation failure, 659
- Remission Service of Justice Dept., Fauteux Commission on, excerpt from report, 937
- Resolution re present law, suggestion, 560
- Royal prerogative on commutation of death sentence, 529-30, 558, 559, 562, 587-9, 660, 690, 937-40
- Statistics on death sentences, 940
- Treason and sea piracy, 688
- Treatise on the Laws, Privileges, Proceedings and Usages of Parliament*, excerpt from, 983-9
- US judicial system, 691, 692; Canadian Press report published in Saint John Telegraph Journal, 692
- Vengeance vs justice, 561-2
- Speakers: Senators
  - Asselin, Martial, 587-9
  - Belisle, Rheal, 562, 564-7
  - Buckwold, Sidney L., 559-60
  - Choquette, Lionel, 589, 590-1
  - Connolly, John J., 559
  - Croll, David A., 974-5
  - Denis, Azellus, 660
  - Desruisseaux, Paul, 658-60
  - Flynn, Jacques, 982-3, 1733
  - Fournier, Sarto, 589-90
  - Godfrey, John M., 575

Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) - Concluded*Speakers: Senators - Concluded

Heath, A.E. Haddon, 574-5
 Hicks, Henry D., 557-8, 559
 Manning, Ernest C., 530-1
 McElman, Charles, 688-92
 Michaud, Herve J., 580-1
 Neiman, Joan, 937-41
 Prowse, J. Harper, 560-2
 Robichaud, Louis-J., 528-30, 1733
 Walker, David J., 558-9

Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21. 1r, 443; 2r, 528-31, 557-62, 574-5, 587-91, 658-60, 688-92, 936-40; m in amdt that subject matter be ref to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 940-1, 974-5, 982-3, Order stands, 1157-8, 1168-9, 1459-60; Order discharged and bill withdrawn, 1733

Criminal Code (control of weapons and firearms)

Costs of registration system, 294
 Question as to progress of bill in committee stage, 479-80
 Resolution of Medicine Hat church re programs of radio, TV, theatre and movies, 294
 Statistics on gun crimes and accidents in Canada and US, 294, 295
Speaker: Senator

Cameron, Donald, 293-5

Criminal Code (control of weapons and firearms) bill S-14. 1r, 193; 2r, 293-5; ref to com, 295

Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada)

Damage or insult to flag, 710
 Incidents of desecration to flag, question of, 710
 Penalties, 710, 740
 Speech by Governor General on first raising of National Flag, 710
Speakers: Senators

Côte, Jean-Pierre, 715
 Fergusson, Muriel McQueen, 710-11
 Flynn, Jacques, 714, 715
 Forsey, Eugene A., 710
 Yuzyk, Paul, 740

Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada) bill C-223. 1r, 663; 2r, 710-11; m for 3r, 714-15, 740; m that bill be ref to com, agreed, 740

Criminal law

Subject matter of Bill C-83, an act for the better protection of Canadian society against perpetrators of violent and other crime, ref to com, 1852-3, rep of com, 2119-20, 2127-9, 2163-6, 2183

Criminal law amendment (Bill C-71)

Appeal from decision on summary conviction, 1732
 Bail provisions, 1767
 Conditional release, 1731-2
 Conspiracy in or outside Canada, 1731

Criminal law amendment (Bill C-71) - Concluded

- Crimes against internationally protected persons: Prevention and Punishment*, an Analysis of the UN Convention, 1769
- Criminal offence resulting in serious harm, 1732
- Impaired drivers, 1731, 1768-9, 1775
  - Rehabilitation of alcoholics, lack of facilities, 1769
  - Suspension of licence and sentence of imprisonment, 1768
- Jury system and role of jurists, 1744-5, 1773, 1774
- Kidnapping and extortion, organized crime, 1769, 1775
- 'Morgentaler' amendment, 1732, 1742-5, 1767-8, 1772-4, 1903-06, 1907-08
  - Admission of facts but denial of guilt, 1743, 1745
  - Canadian Institute of Public Opinion, survey results, 1767, 1774
  - Excerpts from notes of supreme court judges, 1773
  - Statement of Past President of Bar Association, 1743, 1773-4
- Murder, conspiracy to commit murder, trafficking in narcotics, 1733
- Offence against internationally protected person, 1730
- Placing bets on behalf of others, 1731
- Quebec inquiry into organized crime, 1769
- Rape and other sexual offences, 1731
  - Complainant's testimony, 1731
- Right of judge to infer from peace officer's evidence that disturbance has occurred, 1894-6, 1897-9, 1907-08
- Summary of judgment of minority, 1746
- Telecommunications, use of 'blackbox', 1731
- UK law, 1746

Speakers: Senators

- Asselin, Martial, 1767-70
- Burchill, G. Percival, 1746
- Connolly, John J., 1733
- Croll, David A., 1746
- Flynn, Jacques, 1742-7, 1774, 1775, 1776, 1885, 1897-8, 1903-06
- Forsey, Eugene A., 1897
- Godfrey, John M., 1897
- Goldenberg, Carl, 1867-8, 1884-6
- Grosart, Allister, 1898, 1899
- Langlois, Leopold, 1730-3, 1772-6, 1884-6, 1897-8, 1899
- Neiman, Joan, 1898, 1907
- Rowe, Frederick William, 1746, 1776, 1899
- Smith, George I., 1893-6, 1898, 1899, 1907-08

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No.1) 1975 C-71. 1r, 1714; 2r, 1730-3, 1742-7, 1766-70, 1772-6; ref to com, 1776; rep with amds, 1867-8, 1884-6; m for 3r, 1893, m in amdt, 1893-9, m in amdt to amdt, 1899-1900, neg, m for 3r as amended, 1900, 1903-06, further amdt, 1906-08, neg, 1908; 3r, 1908; Commons agreement in Senate amdt, 1974; r.a., 2002

Criminal law amendment (Bill C-84)

- Abortion vs murder, 2441-2
- Alternatives to death by hanging, 2410, 2411, 2414, 2420, 2430
- Appeals, 2389
- Background of convicted killers, effects of, 2429-30
- British Columbia bank robbery, 'comedy of errors' re, 2424-5
- Capital Punishment*, by Professor of Jurisprudence of Yale University, 2448
- Challenge to identify violent and anti-social behaviour, 2421

Criminal law amendment (Bill C-84) - Continued

- Deterrent aspect, 2409, 2410-11, 2412, 2413, 2417, 2418, 2419, 2420, 2421, 2425, 2428, 2434-5, 2436, 2441, 2446, 2448-9
- Discrimination in treatment of accused persons, 2415, 2422
- Excerpt from Commons Justice and Legal Affairs Committee proceedings, 2423
- Excerpt from speech of Ontario Ombudsman, 2448-9
- Excerpt from speech of Opposition leader, 2434
- Excerpt from speech of Prime Minister, 2426
- Excerpt from speech of Senator Choquette (1967) re book by Nathan F. Leopold, convicted killer, 2420-1
- Expenses for maintenance of jail inmates, 2408
- First and second degree murder, 2388-9, 2408, 2435
- Gallup poll, 2407, 2408, 2409, 2417, 2418, 2419, 2445, 2446
- Hoover, J. Edgar, letter sent to officers of FBI, 2417
- Incorrigibles, 2412
- Injustices in implementing penalty, 2418, 2432
- 'Justice in the street' and self-preservation by policemen and prison guards, 2408, 2420, 2437-8, 2446
- Law enforcement, lack of respect for, 2413, 2417, 2418, 2419
- Media coverage of subject and effects of, 2409
- Montreal and Quebec City, statistics on murders, 2408, 2411
- Montreal Gazette* article re capital punishment, 2418
- Murder of Moncton policemen, 2448
- Organized crime, 2407, 2436-7, 2448
- Parole, 2423, 2424, 2430, 2440, 2444
  - Escapees from Manitoba institution and aftermath of crime, 2428
- Parole Board, 2408
- Permissive society, 2414
- Premeditated and unpremeditated murder, 2414, 2419, 2435
- Prison reform, 2410, 2437
- Prison term, ten years or life, 2389, 2414, 2419, 2423, 2440
- Professional criminals, resources of, 2422
- Recidivist percentage, 2429
- Recommendation by jury, 2389
- Rehabilitation, 2408, 2446-7
  - Guelph Correctional Centre study by Dr. Carlson, 2447
- Responsibility of members of Parliament, 2407, 2409, 2414, 2435, 2439, 2446-7, 2448
- Sanctity of human life, 2414, 2418, 2440
- 'Santa Claus' murders, 2428
- Sex offender, Toronto Sun article re, 2421-2
- Terrorists, 2413
- Transitional provisions re pending matters, 2389
- Treason, 2388-9
- UK law, 2410
- UK Royal Commission on Capital Punishment, 2448
- Victims of murder and other crime, compensation for, 2411, 2413, 2440
- Wilson, Prof. James Q., study on criminal behaviour, 2431, 2432
- Speakers: Senators
  - Argue, Hazen, 2415-17
  - Asselin, Martial, 2407-08
  - Austin, Jack, 2444-5
  - Beaubien, L. P., 2411
  - Bell, A. E. Haddon, 2441-2
  - Bourget, Maurice, 2417-18
  - Choquette, Lionel, 2420-1
  - Denis, Azellus, 2427

Criminal law amendment (Bill C-84) - Concluded

Speakers: Senators - Concluded

Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 2419-20
 Flynn, Jacques, 2387, 2388, 2425-7
 Fournier, Edgar, 2409-10
 Goldenberg, H. Carl, 2448-9
 Grosart, Allister, 2445-7
 Hicks, Henry D., 2413, 2436
 Lang, Daniel A., 2387-9
 Lawson, Edward M., 2423-5
 Macdonald, John M., 2410-11
 Macnaughton, Alan A., 2418-19
 Manning, Ernest C., 2413-15
 McDonald, A. Hamilton, 2427-8
 McIlraith, George J., 2430, 2433-6, 2439
 Molson, Hartland de M., 2436-8, 2444
 Neiman, Joan, 2421-3
 Paterson, Norman McL., 2448
 Perrault, Raymond J., 2387, 2428-33, 2440
 Robichaud, Louis J., 2411-13
 Smith, George I., 2438, 2439-42
 Stanbury, Richard J., 2408-09
 Williams, Guy, 2417

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) 1976 C-84 (punishment for murder and certain other offences). 1r, 2386; 2r, 2386-9; m re disposition of 3r and passage of bill, 2407; 2r cont, 2407-42; question re voting procedure, 2444; 2r cont, 2444-50; 3r, 2450; r.a., 2450

Croll, Hon. David A.

Aging, the anatomy of report of Special Senate Committee, recommendations of committee and report on action taken, 146-9 (see Appendix to Debates of Oct. 22/74)
 Old age security, reduction in age limit, 146
 Research by staff of Parliamentary Library, 146
 Suggestion that Hansard of Oct. 22/74 be sent to municipal and social agencies, 147
Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1553-8
 Government expenditures, 1555
 Labour collective bargaining, 1555-6
 Low-income or unorganized groups, 1556-8
     Minimum wage, 1557; statistics on employees, 1557
     Poverty line updated (1975), 1556
     Toronto Star Article 'Making Work Pay More Than Welfare', 1557
 Professionals, 1553
 Progressive Conservative Party suggestion for wage and price freeze, 1554
 Public reaction, 1554
 Regulations, 1554
 War Measures Act, 1554, 1555
     Decontrolling, 1554
Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 379-80
Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee
     Engagement of counsel and technical, clerical and other personnel, 1427, 1428
Citizenship bill C-20, 2290-3
     Ethnic element of Canadian citizenship, 2290-2
     Excerpt from speech (1946), 2290-2
     Laurier, Sir Wilfrid, statement at Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria, 2290, 2293

Croll, Hon. David A. - Continued

- Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-92, 2041
- Consumer Credit and Cost of Living, Special Joint Committee (1967), inquiry re action on implementation of recommendations, 2238-41
  - Bankruptcy, orderly payment of debts, 2239, 2240
  - Recommendations of Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 2240
  - Relief from unconscionable transactions, 2239, 2240
- Borrowers' and Depositors' Protection Act, 2239
- Combines investigation, 2240
- 'Cooling-off' period re purchases, 2240
- Faulty or defective goods, 2239, 2240
- Financing of used motor vehicles, 2239, 2241
- Form of agreement for credit transactions, 2239, 2240
- Government guaranteed loans to low-income consumers, 2240
- Information and education, 2239, 2240
- Money management education and credit and debt counselling, 2240-1
- Prepayment of contracts, 2239, 2240
- Technical subcommittees of Consumer Affairs, 2239, 2241
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 974-5
  - Disregard of established law, 974
  - Moral issue in question of capital punishment, 974
  - Suggestion for vote on bill, 975
- Criminal Code (control of weapons and firearms) bill S-14, question as to progress of bill in committee stage, 479
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, 1746
- Estimates
  - Suggestion that items remain on Order Paper for discussion at any appropriate time, 1782-3, 1784
  - UNESCO, 379-80
- Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements bill C-57, 1184-6
  - Social welfare programs, 1184-6
    - Medicare, phasing out of federal assistance, 1184-5; deterrent fees, 1185
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, tribute upon resignation from the Senate, 967
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1014, 1016, 1018, 1074
- Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75, 1629-30
- Immigration bill S-12, 165, 166, 195-7, 244-5
  - Employment of immigrants for manual and menial work, 196, 244
  - Statistics on deportations, 196
- Immigration policy, unauthorized press publication of confidential draft report of Special Joint Committee, 1286
- Labour, the working poor in Canada, 2019-23
  - Employment, provincial statistics, 2019
  - Minimum wage, 2019-22
    - Provincially, 2019, 2022
    - Rates for experienced adult workers (legislated as of Dec. 31, 1974), 2031
    - Vs welfare, 2021-2
  - Poverty line, 2022
  - Specified areas of working poor, 2019
  - Supplementary income as work incentive, 2022
  - Union workers, 2022
- Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C., the late, 533-4
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, meeting in camera, question of privilege, 1770-1
- Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, P.C., the late, 2177
- Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest, Green Paper on, 373, 573-4, 580, 780
- Parliament Buildings, use of East Block rooms by senators, proposal, 110

Croll, Hon. David A. - Concluded

- Penitentiaries, action taken to implement principal recommendations of Special Joint Committee, 2200, 2249
- Poverty
  - Children in Poverty*, report by National Council of Welfare, 625-6
  - Senate report on poverty - poverty line updated (1974), 626
- Privilege, question of, re remark by government leader, 198
- Privileges and immunities of senators, proposed special Senate committee, 1434, 1721, 1726
- Role of Senator Croll during instigation of government annuities legislation, 1630
- Rules of the Senate, 1364, 1422-3, 1425-6
  - Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee, 1364, 1423, 1425, 1426
  - Powers and duties of committees, 1423, 1425, 1426
- Senate
  - Pensions for widows of senators, 282
  - Role in committee work, 148-9
  - Simultaneous interpretation system, 504
- Senate and House of Commons Act
  - Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, 951-2, 953, 954
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 874
- Social welfare, distribution of income, 2144-9
  - Distribution of income by quintiles, 2145
  - Forms required of welfare recipients, 2144, see also appendix to Debates of May 19, 1976
  - Income redistribution through government intervention (1970), 2145-6
  - Myths concerning welfare, 2144
  - Report of study of government expenditures on welfare, 2147-8
  - Role of government in ensuring full employment and redistribution of wealth, 2146
  - Subsidies to businesses, 2147, 2149; CNR and CPR, 2149
  - Universality of welfare programs, 2146-7
- Television and radio coverage of proceedings of Senate and committees, 1483, 1484
  - Controls, 1483, 1484
  - Other countries decisions re broadcasting of parliamentary proceedings, 1483
  - Resolution adopted by Commons re broadcasting of Commons proceedings, 1483
- United Nations resolution naming Israel as racist nation, condemnation of, motion re, 1397-8
- Work Ethic in Canada, special Senate committee proposed, 281-8, 518
  - Community employment, 283
  - Guaranteed minimum income, 281
  - Immigrants employed for farm work, 284, 286
  - Loss of working days because of strikes, 286
  - Management-labour relations, 284
  - Poverty in Canada - A Report of Special Senate Committee, 281-2
    - Report updated, 282
  - Provincial needs for workers, 284
  - Welfare vs unemployment insurance, 283, 284, 287
  - Working poor, 283

Crop insurance

- Report of Agriculture Committee, 1212, 1227-9, 1468-71, 1622-3
- See* Agriculture

Crown liability

- Criminal Law Amendment (Crown liability, immigration, parole) bill C-71, 1714, 1730-3

Crowsnest Pass, 41-42, 598, 889, 924

Cultural property export and import

- Appeal against board ruling, 798, 811-12
- Articles for exhibition purposes, 766
- Articles made by person now deceased or which have been in Canada 35 yrs. or more, 764, 765
- Articles under control list, 797-8
- Book of Kells, Ireland, 770
- Bureaucracy in discretionary powers of minister, 768
- Cultural properties of heritage of other countries, importing of, 798, 810-11
- Determination of values, 765, 798, 812
- Excerpts from statements of Secretary of State, 798-9
- Freedoms of thought and action, elimination of in over-protection by government, 768, 770, 799-800, 812
- Institution, definition of, 765-6
- Preservation of muniments, excerpt from statement of Hon. Joseph Howe, 770
- Prohibition of illegal imports, 764
- Review Board, 763-4, 908-11
- System of export control, 762-5
  - Determination of fair cash price, 762, 764, 765
  - Financial assistance for custodial institutions, 762
  - Ministerial permits or bulk licences, 763
  - Objects of national heritage, 762
  - Permits, 762, 908, 909
- Tax incentives for sale or donation of cultural property to custodial institutions, 763
  - Exemptions, 763
- UK legislation, 761, 763, 765, 799
- UNESCO convention, 764, 813
- Speakers: Senators
  - Carter, Chesley W., 848, 908
  - Everett, Douglas D., 765, 797-800
  - Grosart, Allister, 810-13, 909-11
  - Hicks, Henry, 765-6
  - Lamontagne, Maurice, 761-5, 766, 908-09, 910, 911
  - O'Leary, M. Grattan, 768-70

Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33. 1r, 712; 2r, 761-6, 768-70, 797-800, 810-13; ref to com, 813; rep with amdts, 848, 908-09, m in amdt adopted, 909-11; 3r, 912; Commons concurrence in Senate amdts, 1005; r.a., 1095

Curling

Canadian Men's Curling Championship, congratulations to Newfoundland Rink, 1889

Customs (Bill S-4)

- Importation by sea within Canadian waters, 131
- Jurisdiction to outer limits of territorial sea of Canada, 131, 168
- Preferential tax exemptions to Canadian companies in resource explorations, 168-9
- Speakers: Senators
  - Belisle, Rheal, 167-9
  - Cook, Eric, 131

Customs bill S-4. 1r, 12; 2r, 131, 167-9; ref to com, 169; rep without amdt, 213; 3r, 222; r.a., 314

Customs tariff (Bill C-27)

Articles exempted, 262
Effects of tariff protection on consumer, 270-1
Petroleum products, 262

Speakers: Senators

Belisle, Rheel, 270-1
Benidickson, W.M., 262, 263
Connolly, John J., 262-3

Customs Tariff bill (No. 1) C-27. 1r, 242; 2r, 262-3, 270-1; ref to com, 271; rep without amdt, 280; 3r, 291; r.a., 314

Customs tariff (Bill C-39)

Food products, 485
Handicrafts from developing countries, 488, 515
Housing materials and appliances, 485, 489, 515
Ministerial powers, 488
Preferential rates for developing countries, 485, 515
Temporary tariff reductions (1974), 485
Tourist exemptions, 485, 488
UNESCO, 487-8, 515
Agreement for Facilitating International Circulation of Visual and Auditory Materials of Educational, Scientific and Cultural Character, 487
Excerpt from Montreal Star re, 487-8
Exclusion of Israel from European group, 488

Speakers: Senators

Cook, Eric, 484-5
Grosart, Allister, 486-9, 514-16

Customs Tariff bill (No. 2) C-39. 1r, 472; 2r, 484-5, 486-9; ref to com, 489; rep without amdt, 499; 3r, 508, 514-16; r.a., 581

Customs tariff (Bill C-67)

Aircraft and aircraft engines, 1210, 1214
Gifts, 1210, 1214
Petroleum products, 1210, 1214
Polymer plates for letterpress printing, 1214
Religious publications, 1214
Tariff and excise revenues, 1214

Speakers: Senators

Benidickson, W.M., 1209-10, 1215
Grosart, Allister, 1214-15

Customs Tariff bill (No. 3) C-67. 1r, 1197; 2r, 1209-10, 1214-15; 3r, 1215; r.a., 1281

Danson, Hon. Barnett, P.C., Minister of State for Urban Affairs

National Housing bill (No.1) C-46, 748-57
Advisory council, 756
Handicapped persons, 753
Housing starts, decrease in, 749

Danson, Hon. Barnett, P.C., Minister of State for Urban Affairs - *ConcludedNational Housing bill (No. 1) C-46 - *Concluded

- Indians, 751
- Inspection of projects, 751
- Interest rate, 752
- Land purchase for lease to non-profit or cooperative organization, 755, 756
- Limited dividend program, 754-5, 757
- Mortgage insurance fund, 753, 754, 755
- Non-profit and cooperative housing, 749, 750
- Rental housing projects, 750, 754
- Senior citizens housing, 749, 750
- Sewage treatment loans, 756
- Statutory limits for making or insuring loans, 756
- Veterans, 749, 750-1

National Housing bill (No.2) C-77, 1673-81

- Abuses, 1678
- AHOP, 1673-4, 1676, 1678
- Appraisal of housing costs in various areas, 1678
- Continuity of program and target, 1675
- Cooperatives, 1679
- Costs of program, 1677
- Critical areas of housing, 1674
- Density, 1674
- Design, 1674
- Expenditures on interest reduction grants (1976), 1679
- House price limits, 1676
- Housing standards and construction quality, 1673, 1675, 1676-7
- Inflationary effect of new regulations, question of, 1673
- Land assembly programs of municipalities, 1675
- Loans and grants, 1674
- Low cost medium density housing, $1000 grants to municipalities, 1680
- Private funding, 1675
- Refinancing of mortgage, 1676
- Rental accommodation, 1677
- Repayment conditions, five-year clause, 1678
- Servicing of land, 1675
- Single parent family, 1676
- Two-person families, 1674
- Warranty from builder to owner, 1681

Davey, Hon. Keith*Income Tax bill (No.3) C-58, 1836-42, 1843, 1845, 1846, 1865, 2027-32, 2294-2301, 2327, 2328

- Advertising revenue, 1837
- Background of legislation on foreign periodicals, 1837
- Broadcasting
  - Advertising of prime time, survey report of Bureau of Broadcast Measurements, 2031-2
  - Buffalo stations, presentation to committee, 2298-9
  - Canadian Association of Broadcasters' document, 1842
  - CITY-TV, Toronto, 2297
  - CRTC, letter from Chairman, 2298
  - Global Television, letter from president, 2296-7
  - Wire from Canadian Association of Broadcasters and others urging support of bill, 2297

Davey, Hon. Keith - Concluded

Income Tax bill (No.3) C-58 - Concluded

- Canada WestWord*, the magazine for British Columbians, excerpt from, 2028
- Canadian Forum*, excerpt from article by Peter Newman, 2029
- Canadian Journal of Political Science*, excerpt from, 1839
- Christian Science Monitor* article re Time's editorial policy, 1840
- Content*, excerpt from Editor's speech on CBC Capital report, 2032
- Criteria for deduction for tax purposes, 1837
- Fredericton Gleaner* article, 1841
- Globe and Mail*, 1838; article re Senate committee and chairman, 2300
- Interest Group Tactics and the Politics of Foreign Investment: The Time-Reader's Digest Case Study*, 1839
- Letter from Stephen S. LaRue, president of Time Canada, 1839
- Letter sent to Prime Minister by writers, photographers, etc., 1838
- Maclean's* magazine, 2028; presentation to committee, 2295-6
- Mass Media Committee's report, excerpts from, 1839, 1840, 1841-2
- MD of Canada*, 2030, 2300
- Montreal Gazette* editorial, 2299
- Newsweek*, lack of Canadian advertising, 2027-8
- Opposition to bill through lobbying, 2298-9
- Revitalizing of Canadian magazines, 1838
- Rights of Canadian broadcasters and publishers, 2295
- Saturday Night*, 2296
- Speech of Richard Roehmer, P.C., Toronto, 1841
- 'Substantially the same', definition of, 2301
- Time and Reader's Digest*, 1837-8, 2028, 2299, 2301
- Time* editorial re advertising and subscription rates, 2028
- Toronto Sun* article by John Slinger, 1838
- Publishing industry, 62, 556, 564, 582-3, 956-7, 2140
- Globe and Mail* article by J. Carruthers re Time magazine, 582-3
- Letter from Senator Davey to Globe and Mail re editorial entitled 'Whittling Down a Freedom', 582
- Ottawa Journal* article re comments of President of Time Canada Limited before Senate committee, 2140
- Television commercial advertising of Guaranty Trust, use of picture of Parliament Buildings, 556, 564, 956-7
- Time and Readers Digest* magazines, tax concessions in advertising, 582
- Time* magazine, brief presented to members of Commons, 62

Death penalty

See Criminal Code and Criminal Law Amendment bills

Deaths

- Boucher, Hon. William A., 2251-2
- Bourque, Hon. Romuald, 11-12
- Childers, Erskine, President of Republic of Ireland, 265
- Crerar, Hon. Thomas A., P.C., 778-9
- Gelinas, Hon. Louis-Philippe, 1713-14
- Hugessen, Hon. A.K., 2007
- Kickham, Hon. Thomas J., 324
- Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C., 532-3
- Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, P.C., 2176-7
- MacKay, Hon. John, Lieutenant Governor of Prince Edward Island, 135
- O'Leary, Hon. Michael Grattan, 2034-6
- Prowse, Hon. J. Harper (Sept. 28/76)

de Grandpre, Hon. Louis-Philippe, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court

Royal assent, 2152

Denis, Hon. Azellus, P.C.

Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1580

Bourque, Hon. Romuald, the late, 11

Canadian National Railways, cost of construction of tower in Toronto, 2185-6, 2263-4

Civil Service Insurance bill C-26, 766

Adopted children, 766

Amendment to annuity tables, 766

Equal rights to man and wife, 766

Sharing of insurance proceeds, 766

Statistics on policies issued, 766

Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 660

Royal prerogative, 660

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2427

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Lafontaine) bill C-229, 601-02

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1037

Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001, 1233-4, 1235, 1251, 1252, 1258-9

Medical Care bill C-68, 2317-18

Ceiling on federal contributions, 2317-18, 2365

Expenditures, anti-inflation program effect on, 2365

New services, 2318

Nursing homes, 2366

Provincial responsibilities, 2365

Statistics on accidents and medical care, 2368

Senate and House of Commons (Supplementary Retirement Benefits) bill C-81, 2195

Statute Law (Status of Women) 1974 bill C-16, 1103-04, 1107, 1122-3

Acts amended, 1104, 1107

Civilian war pensions and allowances, 1104

Criminal Code, 1104

Elections, 1104

Immigration, 1104

National Defence, 1104

Pensions, 1104

Public Service employment, 1104

Unemployment insurance, 1107

Excerpt from Le Devoir editorial, 1103

Female staff of Senate, 1103-04

Recommendations of Royal Commission on Status of Women, 1104

Speakers of the Senate, 1107

Televising of committee proceedings, 510, 511

Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce, 243, 272-4, 281, 304-06, 348-9, 368, 373, 298-400, 1134

Deschatelets, Hon. Jean-Paul, P.C.

Continental Bank of Canada bill S-30, 1345

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-85, 2419-20

Alternatives to death by hanging, 2420

Deterioration of law enforcement, 2419

Deterrent aspect, 2419, 2420

Gallup poll, 2419

Premeditated or unpremeditated murder, 2419

Deschatelets, Hon. Jean-Paul, P.C. - *Concluded

- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-85 - Concluded
  - Prison term, 2419
  - Responsibility of juries, 2420
- Forestry, devastation by Spruce budworm, 1218-19
  - Bacillus thuringiensis, experiments conducted in combatting tobacco and cabbage bugs and Spruce budworm, 1218-19
  - CBC announcement re spraying for budworm, 1219
  - Quebec areas affected, 1218
- Industry, textile imports affecting Canadian industry, 791-3
  - Excerpt from speech of Hon. Mr. Pepin re negotiations with other countries, 792
  - Government efforts to instigate restraints on imports, 792
  - Unemployment in textile industry, 791
  - USSR trading policy, 791
- National Capital Region, Special Joint Committee
  - First report, committee quorum, 1237
- Olympic bill C-63, 1188-90, 1198, 1204-05
  - Coin-selling program to include gold coins, 1188-9
  - Cost according to market price of gold, 1189
  - Design and size of coins, 1190, 1205
  - Expenditures forecast, 1188
  - Gold content, 1204-05
    - Statement of Postmaster General, 1204-05
  - Gold requirements for program, 1198
  - Limit on coins issued, 1189
  - Lottery receipts, 1188
  - Profit potential for COJO, 1188
  - Programs of government assistance for Games, 1189-90
  - Trade marks and copyrights, 1189
- Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation for maintenance, 501-04
  - Contracts between Solicitor General and provinces re RCMP, 501
  - Costs of police administration, 503-04
  - Financial implications of RCMP provincial operations, 501, 502
  - Quebec and Ontario, 500, 501, 503
    - Correspondence between Quebec Justice Minister and Solicitor General, 503
- Representation bill C-36, 436, 437
- Speaker pro tem, 1781

Desruisseaux, Hon. Paul

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 32-37
- Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1542-5
  - Constitutional and controversial aspects of bill, 1544-5
  - Decree of Emperor Diocletian to fight inflation, 1542-3
  - Food prices control, 1544
  - Freezing of dividends, 1544
  - Personal responsibility for controls, 1543
  - Productive capacity, requirement of investment, 1544
  - UK prices and wages freeze, 1543-4
- Bourque, Hon. Romuald, the late, 33
- Canada Year Book, 1788, 1821-3
- Canadian economy
  - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1411-15
    - Government expenditures, 1411, 1412-13

Desruisseaux, Hon. Paul - Continued

Canadian economy

Attack on Inflation - Concluded

Gross national product, 1413

Industrial profit margin, decrease in, 1413

Labour demands, 1412, 1414

Report of Economic Council of Canada, 1411-12

Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1316

Question of privilege re interpretation of conflict of interest, 1316

Crime and violence, 944-5

Biblical history of crime and violence, 944

Parental attitudes towards punishment, 944, 945

Television programs, 945

Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 658-60

Commutations since 1972 legislation, 659

Crime increase and legislative permissiveness, 659

Deterrent aspect, 659

Premeditated murders, 659, 660

Rehabilitation failure, 659

Economic conditions and prospects

Capital investment from domestic and foreign sources, 34-35

Construction empires, 36

Economic growth, 34

Government spending and national debt, 35

Gross national product, 33

Inflation, 33-36

Labour unrest, 36

Mineral resources and projected output, 35-36

Unemployment, 33

Economy of Canada, 1072, 1073, 1113-17

Excerpt from Fortune article by Prof. Meltzer, 1116

Floating exchange rates, 1116

Foreign investment in Canada, 1116-17

Free enterprise, 1116

Government expenditures, 1115

Government policies and economic planning, 1115-16, 1117

Gross national product, 1114

Inflation, 1113-14

Excerpt from Les Affaires re international consumer prices, 1113-14

International trade balance, 1117

Labour unions, administrative policies, 1116

Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, availability to press of draft report of Special Joint

Committee, 1756

Energy, international conference of oil-producing and oil-consuming countries, exclusion of Canada, 605-06, 775

Felicitations to Hon. Renaude Lapointe and others, 32

Florida land deals, involvement of Canadians in alleged swindle, 1012, 1198

Free trade, an economic consideration for Canada, 1738-41, 1851

Economic Council of Canada recommendations, 1738, 1740, 1741

Expansion of trade in Atlantic economic community, 1740

GATT, 1739, 1740

International credit and money convertibility, 1740

Keynes' theories, 1738

Desruisseaux, Hon. Paul - *Concluded

- Free trade - Concluded
  - Secondary industries, 1738-41
    - Employment, 1740
    - Import controls, relaxation of, 1739
    - Role in economic survival of provinces, 1738-9
    - Textiles and other industries, 1739-41; Quebec, 1739
    - Trade with United States, 1740
- Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 636-7
  - Energy resources, 637
    - Oil prices, 637
    - Withdrawal of companies from Canada, 637
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1865-6
  - Broadcasting, 1865-6
  - Difficulties of small publications, 1865
  - Mass media reaction, 1865
  - Time* and Newsweek, 1865
- Industry, textile and other imports affecting Canadian industry, 781-8, 901, 947-8, 974-8
  - Anti-dumping procedures, 978
  - Canadian Textile Commission briefs presented to government (1974), 782
  - Competition from textile imports, 782, 785, 975-8
  - Dominion Textile Co. closing, 783
  - Dumping of foreign textiles at depressed prices, 782-3
  - GATT provisions for protection of signatories, 781-2, 785, 786, 787
  - Gazette* article on The Case for Textile Protection, 781
  - Imports per capita, 782
  - Negotiations, lack of textile industry representatives, 976
  - Policy introduced by Hon. Mr. Pepin, 782
  - Polyester and cotton-mixed fibres, 783, 977
  - Representations and recommendations of union leaders, workers and producers, 783-4
  - Separatist leader's comments on CBC re government attitude toward secondary industry trade policies, 978
  - Sheet glass, 781-9
  - Sheets and pillowcases, relaxing of restraints re, 783
  - Shirts, import quota and prices, 785, 977
    - Recommendations, lack of enforcement of, 976-7
    - Textile and Clothing Board, role of, 976-7
  - Unemployment in Wellington District and other areas, 782, 784, 786-7, 977, 978
  - Unsatisfactory textile trade policies, 976
- Investigations in Parliament, question of privilege, 1476-7, 1478
- Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., resignation from the Senate, 212
- O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan, the late, 2036
- Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation for maintenance, 567-8
  - Federal-provincial agreements re RCMP, 568
  - Quebec and Ontario policing costs, 568
  - RCMP background, 567-8
- Senate
  - Business, 1108
  - Committees, 945
  - Vacancies, 945
- Tributes to Senator Hayden, Chairman of Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 1316-17

Dickson, Hon. R.G.B., *Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada

- Royal assent, 731, 899

Documents tabled

See Journals of the Senate

Drugs

Alcoholism and drug addiction among Indians, 142-3
Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code, 300, 354-62, 366-8, 374-5, 382-5, 402-06, 446-54,
456, 969-71, 983, 1007-11, 1014-21, 1023-33, 1036-8, 1046-9

Drury, Hon. Charles Mills, Minister of State for Science and Technology and Minister of Public Works

Resignation offer and rejection by Prime Minister, 1890-3, 1920-2

Duggan, Hon. James

Kickham, Hon. Thomas J., the late, 324
Newfoundland, CNR services, 1868, 1903
Transportation, BNA Act as it pertains to transportation, 2115-18
    Newfoundland, 2115-18
        CNR operations, 2115-18
            Abandonment of passenger service, 2115-16
            Elimination of freight trains, 2116
            Limited 'train consist', 2115-16
            Overcharges on freight, 2117
            Shipment delays, 2116
    Road cruiser service, 2116
        Bus fares, 2117
        Bus purchases, questions re, 2116
    Terms of Union re transportation services, 2117, 2118

Eastern Canada Savings and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company bill S-29. 1r, 1293; 2r, 1307-08; ref to com, 1308; rep with amds (French text only), 1355, 1372; 3r, 1373; r.a., 1712

Economic conditions and prospects

Arab nations monopoly of oil industry, 69-70
Athabasca tar sands and Mackenzie River pipeline, 70-71
Canada-US relations, 70
Capital investment from domestic and foreign sources, 34-35
Commodity price determination, 69; transportation costs, 70
Construction empires, 36
Economic growth, 34
Energy resources and establishment of Petro-Canada, 69
Financial Times of Canada editorial, 69
Government spending and national debt, 35, 628
Gross national product, 33, 189-90, 199-200, 350, 628, 629
Inflation, 15-16, 19, 33-36, 628
Labour unrest, 36
Lumber industry, New Brunswick, 122
Mineral resources and projected output, 35-36
New Brunswick, 1750-4, 1817-20, 1821, 2009-13
Nova Scotia storm damage, 1765-6
Oil prices, 69-70, 71
Unemployment, 33, 628
See Anti-inflation,
    Economy of Canada,
    Inflation.

Economy of Canada, 1012, 1067-73, 1081-2, 1113-17

- Cost-push inflation, 1072
- Countercyclical policies, 1068, 1072
- Crude oil exports, ceiling on, 1072
- Current account deficit, 1071
- Employment and unemployment statistics, 1070
- Excerpt from Fortune article by Prof. Meltzer, 1116
- Excerpts from speeches of Senator Lamontagne (1966, 1970), relating to economic conditions, 1068-9
- Exports decline due to work stoppages, 1070
- Finance Minister's statements re fiscal policies, 1068-9, 1071
- Floating exchange rates, 1116
- Free enterprise, 1116-17
- Government expenditures, 1082, 1115-16, 1117
- Gross national product, 1070, 1114
- Housing market, 1069
- Index of real domestic product and of industrial production, 1070
- Inflation, 1113-14
  - Excerpt from Les Affaires re international consumer prices, 1113-14
- Interest rates, 1069
- International trade balance, 1117
- Labour unions, administrative policies, 1116
- Provincial deficits, 1071
- Recessions (1953-74), 1067-8
- Tax cuts, 1082
- Trade deficits re parts and accessories of motor vehicles, 1071
- US economic conditions, 1069, 1070
- US production of small cars affecting auto pact, 1071-2

Speakers: Senators

- Desruisseaux, Paul, 1072, 1073, 1113-7
- Flynn, Jacques, 1072-3, 1081-2
- Forsey, Eugene A., 1082
- Lamontagne, Maurice, 1067-72

Electoral boundaries readjustment (Bill C-214)

- Electoral Boundaries Commissions, functions of, 378
- Discrepancies in decisions of provincial commissions, 378
- Recommendations, specifying of reasons for, 378

Speaker: Senator

- Asselin, Martial, 378

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill (No. 1) C-214. 1r, 325; 2r, 377-8; 3r, 382; r.a., 397

Electoral boundaries readjustment (Bill C-370)

- Commissions, members and powers of, 526-7, 536-7
- Geographic considerations in establishing quota of constituencies, 527, 536
- Rural and northern constituencies, 527

Speakers: Senators

- Belisle, Rheal, 527, 528
- Flynn, Jacques, 527, 536, 537
- Lafond, Paul C., 527
- Molgat, Gildas L., 526-8, 536-7

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill (No. 2) C-370. 1r, 514; 2r, 526-8, 536-7; ref to com, 537; rep without amdt, 555; 3r, 564; r.a., 581

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Berthier) bill C-365. 1r, 564; 2r, 602-03; 3r, 606; r.a., 656

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Bruce) bill C-228. 1r, 583; 2r, 601; 3r, 606; r.a., 656

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Lafontaine) bill C-229. 1r, 583; 2r, 601-02; 3r, 606; r.a., 656

Emergency legislation

St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 817-27, 832
West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12, 76-93, 95
West Coast Ports Operations bill C-56, 723-30, 731

Emergency sittings

Authority to convene Senate during adjournments, 328

Employer-employee relations in the Public Service

Casual employees, 1811-12
Classification, 1806
Collective bargaining, facts and figures, 1801
Designated employees, 1802-04
Incompetence and incapacity, disciplinary action, 1810-11
Interim report, 1799
Managerial and confidential exclusions, 1810
Maximum penalties for unlawful activity, 1805-06
Pay research, 1808-10
Prosecution of offences under act, 1804-05
Public Service Employment Act, 1800-01
Technological change and long-term layoff, 1807-08

Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee

Availability to press of draft report, 1755-6
Budget, 525, 1088, 1624
Communication from Commons, 160; reply from Senate, 188-9
Expenses re study of Parts I, II and III of paper, 525, 1088
Members
    Commons, 242
    Senate, 242
Public Service Staff Relations bill C-70, ref to com, 1211
Recommendation to establish permanent Staff Relations Board, 998
Reports
    First report, committee quorum and engagement of staff, 255
    Second report tabled in Commons Nov. 26/74
    Third report pertaining to public meetings and recommendations re Board, 998-9, 1003-04
    Fourth report re Public Service Staff Relations bill C-70, rep without amdt, 1211
    Fifth report re Superannuation bill C-52, rep with amdts, 1545-7
Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, ref to com, 1437, 1442
Terms of reference, 160, 188-9, 255
Workload of present board, 999

Employment

- Work ethic in Canada, 281-8, 339-42, 474-8, 518
- Working poor in Canada, 2019-23, 2154-8

Energy resources

- Alaska reserves, 1141
- Arab nations monopoly of oil industry, 69-70
- Arctic gas pipeline, supply of Arctic gas to southern Canada, 2037-8
- Athabasca Tar Sands and Mackenzie River pipeline, 70-71, 1141
- Atlantic provinces
  - Development of tidal power in Bay of Fundy, 2070, 2142, 2210
  - Offshore oil and gas resources, 2070, 2141-2, 2202-03
- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, discussions re energy resources, 1141-2, 1145-7
- Colorado oil shale, 1141
- Conservation of fuel of car awaiting Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, 2209, 2443
- Construction of Arctic gas pipeline, supply of Arctic gas to southern Canada, 2037-8, 2069-70
- Domestic oil prices, 610
- Energy, Mines and Resources Dept., estimates for, 193, 201-2, 203
- Excise tax, 1265, 1267-80, 1281
- Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements, 1136, 1175-8, 1197, 1214
- Gasoline excise tax, 1100-01, 1112-13
- Government policy re Canadian ownership of companies developing oil and gas on crown lands, 1259-60, 2210
- Income tax, 583, 606-14, 616-21, 627-40, 645-56
- Indian oil and gas claims, 325, 337-8, 351-3, 402, 426, 427
- International conference of oil-producing and oil-consuming countries, exclusion of Canada, 605-06, 774-5
- International Energy Agency (IEA), 605
- Lighting of government buildings, 606, 1238-9
- Mineral resources and projected output, 35-36
- Nuclear energy, 1142
- Oil and gas reserves, negotiations between federal government and governments of producing provinces, 2070
- Oil and mining industries, 609-11, 613-14, 616-20, 629-30, 635, 637, 639-40
  - Alberta, 617, 618, 632
  - BNA Act provisions re provincial natural resources, 630, 632
  - Coal mining, 619-20
    - Leduc well, 620
    - South African Coal, Oil and Gas Corp., annual report, 619
  - Earned depletion, 610
  - Great Canadian Oil Sands, 619
  - Prices and production costs, 617-18, 620, 621
  - Pricing of Crude Oil: Economic and Strategic Guidelines for International Energy Policy*, by Taki Rifai, 618
  - Royalties, 609-10, 617, 629, 632, 636-40
  - Withdrawal of companies from Canada, 630, 637
  - Write-off of exploration expenses, 610-11
- Oil refiners, compensation to, 445-6
- Passamaquoddy-Cobscook Bay, US Corps of Engineers report on, 2210-11
- Petro-Canada, 69, 1174, 1178-9, 1215-18, 1244, 1251, 1281
- Petroleum administration, 847, 861-3, 902-07, 912-16, 925-7, 934-6, 981-2, 1002, 1013, 1034
- Pipeline from Prince Rupert to Edmonton, proposed construction of, 2037
- Pipeline treaty between Canada and United States, proposed, 2037

Energy resources - *Concluded

Provincial royalties, 609-10
 Shortfall in oil deliveries to US, 1142
 Solar and geothermal energy, harnessing of tides, heat pumps, 1142
 Syncrude project, 71

Energy, Statement of Policy, Proposed Petroleum and Natural Gas Act and New Canada Oil and Gas Land Regulations, 2169-72, 2179-82

Background of Statement of Policy, 2171
 Berger inquiry, 2180
 Canada-US relations, 2179
 Crude oil and natural gas prices, 2169, 2170, 2181
 Dependency on imported oil, 2170
 Discretionary powers under new regulations, 2171
 Domestic energy, increase in prices, 2170
 Exploration and development in frontier regions of Canada, 2170, 2171, 2181
 Export prices of natural gas, 2170
 Freeze period on petroleum products prices, 2170
 Government decisions re crude oil and natural gas prices, 2170
 Hydroelectric power generation, statement of Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, 2180
 National energy strategy for Canada, 2169-70
 Nuclear energy, 2180
 Petro-Canada, 2181-2
 Provincial exports of energy, 2180
 Reduction in average use of energy, 2170
 Self-reliance on natural gas, 2170
Speakers: Senators
     Perrault, Raymond J., 2169-71
     Phillips, Orville H., 2179-82

Environmental affairs

Ocean dumping control, 1005, 1038-40, 1049-51, 1088, 1096
 Protection of coastal waters from radio-active pollution, 889, 924

Environmental contaminants

Chemical contamination from industry, 1372
 DDT and other chemicals, dangerous effects of, 1404
 Federal-provincial consultations, 1372, 1404
 Government authority to obtain information re environment and manufactured substances, 1404
 Major provisions of bill, 1371-2
Speakers: Senators
     Macnaughton, Alan A., 1371-3
     Quart, Josie D., 1404-05

Environmental Contaminants bill C-25. 1r, 1348; 2r, 1371-2, 1403-04; ref to com, 1404; rep without amdt, 1437; 3r, 1446; r.a., 1476

Estimates

Agriculture, 695, 699, 1569
 Assurance that discussion on estimates does not terminate with passage of bill, 193, 203, 204, 205, 708

Estimates - Continued

- Athabaska Tar Sands, 693
- Auditor General's statement re low standard of government control of finances, 1976, 1977
- Bilingualism, 1986
- Borrowing authority, 389, 391, 392-4, 708, 721, 735, 737-9, 1603, 1604-05, 1612-13, 1972-3, 1988-9
- Breakdown of interim supply, complexity of allocation of votes, 737
- Budgetary votes and budgetary statutory items, 200, 704, 707-08, 2173
- Canadair Ltd., interest-free loans, 693, 706, 719, 720, 733
- Canadian Broadcasting Corp., 201, 1056
- Canadian International Development Agency, 200
- Canadian National Railway deficit, 693, 704
- Cape Breton Development Corp., 201
- Cheque cashing before Mar. 31, 1989-90
- CIDA, authority to carry funds from year to year, 973, 1055, 2174
- Consumer and Corporate Affairs, 697
- Control procedures for expenditures, 350
- Corporate power in relation to expenditures, 1611-12
  - Canadian Establishment*, by Peter Newman, 1612
  - Conflict of interest, excerpts from letters re, 1612
  - Power Corp. of Canada Ltd., 1611-12
  - Royal Commission re, 1611-12
- Correction in figure relating to supplementary estimates (D), 703
- Crown corporations, 1056
- Date of enactment of appropriation bill, 1130
- Deferment of capital projects, 1980-1, 1982-3, 1984
- Departmental cutbacks, 1131
- Dollar items, 379, 693, 695, 697-9, 704-06, 719, 723, 1565-70, 1603, 1607, 1613-14, 1967-70, 1971, 1977, 1979, 1980, 1982-3, 1987-8
  - Lack of authority for transfers, 1607
  - Statistics (1967-70), 1967-70, 1980, 1982-3, 1987-8
  - Statistics (1973-76), 1979, 1980
- Economic development and supply, 190, 379
- Employees in the government, statistics, 972
- Energy, Mines and Resources, 193, 201-02, 203, 695-6, 699-700, 701, 1566, 1608, 1609
- Energy policy for Canada, 2189
- Estimates by type of payment, 2173-4
- External Affairs, 697, 701, 1568
- Family allowances, 1084
- Glassco Commission report on Financial Management and Control Study, 1967, 1982
- Globe and Mail* article re 'Workers get shock at bank: Government cheques NSF', 1977-8
- Government restraints, 1083, 1130-1
- Governor General's warrants, 190
- Gross National Product vs government expenditures, 189-90, 199-200, 350, 972-3, 1605, 1607, 2187-8, 2287
  - Financial Times* article re, 2287
- Growth of budgetary expenditures in various depts., 972, 983, 1054-5
- House of Commons, program expenditures, payment to Leader of Social Credit Party, 719, 722, 1605-06, 1613
  - Bill introduced in Commons re future payments to SC Party leaders, 1605-06
  - Political aspect of, 1605-06
- Housing grants, 1986
- Inclusion of Main and Supplementary Estimates in one bill, 190-1
- Income tax refunds, 716
- Increase in estimates (1974-77), 2212, 2213
  - Supplementaries, 693, 2187, 2190-1

Estimates - Continued

- Increase in non-budgetary items and in statutory items, 2174
- Indian and Northern Affairs, 200-01, 379, 700, 701
- Industry, Trade and Commerce, 1566
- Inflation, 2188, 2190-1
- Information Canada, 201, 350, 1610
- Inter-Provincial Pipe Line Ltd., 693, 706-07, 720
- Labour, 697-8
- Law Reform Commission poster, 349-50, 351
- 'Leading Cases in Constitutional Law', excerpt from decision in 'Edinburgh and Dalkeith Railway Company v. Wauchope', 391
- Loan item in supplementary estimates, question of precedent, 2255-6, 2258
- Lockheed long-range patrol aircraft, 1984-5, 1986
- Loto Canada, 2234-5, 2237-8, 2244-9, 2255-8
- See Loto Canada
- Manpower and Immigration Dept., Manpower Division, 400-01
- Medicare and hospital insurance, 1608
- Milk subsidies, 704
- National Finance, 1569
- National Health and Welfare, 190, 696, 702, 1055, 1566, 1568
- Nova Scotia heating costs, 1985
- Oil equalization payments, 2188
- Oil refiners, compensation to, 445-6, 1055, 1084, 1609
- Oil subsidies to Ottawa Valley Line, 1985
- Old age security fund, 693, 704, 705, 1055-6, 1971-2, 2213, 2173
- Globe and Mail* report on, 705
- Olympic Games deficit, 1985, 1986, 2256
- Government policy and statement re, 2256
- Payments to provinces, 379
- Percentage increase of supplementary estimates in relation to main estimates, 1948, 1967, 1971, 1976-7, 1983-4
- Point of privilege raised in Commons, 394
- Privy Council, 696
- Provincial government expenditures, 2189, 2190, 2213, 2287
- Public debt, 190, 1607-08
- Public Service employees, increase in, 2174
- Public Works, 696-7, 698, 1566-7
- Purchases of goods and services, 1084, 1085
- Railways, compensation to, 379
- Recommendation of Canadian Economic Policy Committee, 1084
- Referral of supply bills to National Finance Committee, 716, 717-18, 733-4, 736, 1129-31, 1604-05, 1613
- Regional economic expansion, 697, 701-02, 1570
- Science and Technology, 1567
- Secretary of State, 698, 1567, 1568-9, 1570
- Solicitor General, 1569
- Special employment measures, 1602
- Spouses' allowances, 1602
- Statutory expenditures required by law, 349, 1130
- Non-statutory expenditures, 1130
- Student summer employment, 1603
- Suggestion that items remain on Order Paper for discussion at any appropriate time, 1782-5
- Supplementary estimates appropriation bill, question of retroactive power to government, 1976

Estimates - Concluded

- Supply and Services, 693
- Transfer payments to provinces, 1084, 2213-14, 2287, 2288
- Transport Dept., 693, 697, 702, 1567, 1568, 1569, 1609-11, 1985-6
  - Aircraft manufacturing, 1610-11
  - Canadair-Government of Canada option, 1610-11, 1614-15
  - Mirabel and Toronto Airports, 1610
  - Reductions, 1985-6
  - STOL aircraft, 1609-10
- Treasury Board, 704, 720
- Two-price wheat system, 1985
- Unemployment insurance, 1055, 1083, 2188, 2190; unemployment in potential productivity 2187-8
- UNESCO, 379-80
- Urban affairs, 1568
- Veterans Affairs, 693, 699, 704, 1567-8, 1569
- Votes for grants in fiscal year, 1972
- Votes for which additional sums are required, 1972
- Votes payments on calendar year basis, 1972
- Wheat, two-price system, 193, 202, 203
- Yearly estimates totals (1969-76), 1565

Estimates referred to National Finance Committee

- Fiscal year ending Mar. 31/75, 108; rep of com, 136-7, 189-91
  - Supplementary (A), 108, rep of com, 136-7, 189-91
  - Supplementary (B), 300, rep of com, 349-51, 372
  - Supplementary (C), 441-2, rep of com, 444
  - Supplementary (D), 586, rep of com, 693-4, 695-702
- Fiscal year ending Mar. 31/76, 555; rep of com, 971-3, 983-4, 1054-7, 1082-6
  - Supplementary (A), 1409; rep of com, 1549, 1565-70
  - Supplementary (B), 1824; rep of com, 1937, 1948-53, 1966-70
- Fiscal year ending Mar. 31/77, 1777; rep of com, 2167, 2173-5
  - Removal of item from Order Paper, question, 1782-5
  - Supplementary (A), 2178; rep of com, 2237-8, 2244-9, 2255-8

Estonia, 58th anniversary of Proclamation of Independence

- Tribute to Estonians, 1785
- US Resolution re foreign policy of non-recognition of annexation of Baltic States by USSR, 1785

European Community

- Canada's claim for compensation re loss of preferential access of Canadian commodities to British market, 579-80, 661-2, 671
  - Cheddar cheese, 671
- Concessions of interest to Canada, 671
- Negotiations leading to agreements between various countries, 671
- Wheat and barley, 671

European Parliament, Strasbourg and Brussels meetings, 307-13, 316-20, 329-33

- Canada-European Community relations, excerpt from Senate committee report on, 310, 332-3
- Canada-United States relations, 317-20, 329-33
- Canadian delegation, 308-09

European Parliament, Strasbourg and Brussels meetings - *Concluded

Economic situation, 311
 Energy resources, 312-13, 332
 Exchange meetings in Ottawa, 308
 Finished goods, export of, 317, 319, 320, 330
 GATT, 319, 320
 Multinational corporations, 330
 Ottawa office, establishment of, 308
 Prime Minister's visit to the Community, 308
 Trade and investment relationships, 332
 United Kingdom, 312

Speakers: Senators

Bourget, Maurice, 331-3
 Grosart, Allister, 319-20, 329-31
 O'Leary, M. Grattan, 316-19
 van Roggen, George C., 307-13

Everett, Hon. Douglas D.

Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 413-14, 415
 Cabinet ministers, resignation offers and rejection by Prime Minister, 1892
 Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank bill S-24, 961-2
 Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, 765, 797-800
     Appeal against board ruling, 798
     Articles under control list, 797-8
     Cultural properties of heritage of other countries, importing of, 798
     Excerpts from statements of Secretary of State, 798-9
     Fair cash offer, determination of, 798
     Rights of individuals, 799-800
     UK legislation, 799
 Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/75, Supplementary (B), 349-51
     Control procedures, 350
     Information Canada, 350
     Law Reform Commission poster, 349-50, 351
     Manpower requirements of federal government, 350
     Statutory expenditures required by law, 349
 Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/75, Supplementary (D), 683-4, 695-702
     Agriculture, 695, 699
     Athabaska Tar Sands, 693
     Canadair Ltd., loans to, 693
     CNR deficit, 693
     Consumer and Corporate Affairs, 697
     Discussion on subject matter of appropriation bills remaining on Order Paper, 1783-4, 1785
     Dollar items, 693, 695, 697-9
     Energy, Mines and Resources Dept., 695-6, 699-700, 701
     Inter-Provincial Pipe Line Ltd., and Syncrude project, 693, 694
     External Affairs, 697, 701
     Increase in main estimates through supplementaries, 693
     Indian and Northern Affairs, 700, 701
     Labour, 697-8
     National Health and Welfare, 696, 702

Everett, Hon. Douglas D. - Concluded

- Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/75, Supplementary (D) - Concluded
  - Old age security fund, 693
  - Privy Council, 696
  - Public Works, 696-7, 698
  - Regional economic expansion, 697, 701-02
  - Secretary of State, 698
  - Supply and Services, 693
  - Transport Dept., 693, 697, 702
  - Veterans Affairs, 693, 699
- Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/76, rep of National Finance Committee, 971-3
(Presented by Senator Sparrow)
- Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/77
  - Supplementary (A), rep of National Finance Committee, 2234-5
- Fort-Falls Bridge Authority bill C-367, 897
- Income tax, com authorized to study legislation prior to receipt of bills, 298-9
- Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, 272-4, 348-9, 399-400
  - Authority provided under Statistics Act, 273-4
  - Disclosure of information to Customs officer, 273, 274
  - GATT, 400
  - Import analysis and examination of invoices, 273-4
  - Imports, question of non-tariff barriers re, 400
  - Support services for industrial and trade development, 272-3
- Information Canada, 400
- Manpower Division of Department of Manpower and Immigration, motion to authorize com to examine and report on, 400-1
- Responsibilities and functions of Manpower Division, 400-01
- National Finance Committee
  - Reports
    - Estimates
      - Year ending Mar. 31/75, 136-7, 189-90
        - Supplementary (A), 136-7, 189-90
        - Supplementary (B), 349-51, 372
        - Supplementary (C), 444
        - Supplementary (D), 693-4, 695-702
      - Year ending Mar. 31/76, 971-3, 983-4, 1054-7, 1082-6
        - Supplementary (A), 1549, 1565-70, 1602
        - Supplementary (B), 1937, 1948-53, 1966-70
      - Year ending Mar. 31/77
        - Supplementary (A), 2234-5
    - Supplementary Borrowing Authority bill C-80, rep without amdt, 1649-50
- Senate business, 1881, 1915

Excise tax (Bill C-40)

- Air transportation, 500
- Articles for handicapped persons, 500, 501
- Building materials and water distribution equipment, 500, 501, 519, 520
- Clothing and footwear, 499, 501
- Day care centers, 501
- Government revenue from tax, 519
- Liquor, wine, tobacco, 500
- Transportation equipment, 500, 501, 520
- Unlicensed wholesalers, 520, 570-3
- Vehicles of high energy-consuming category, 500, 519-20

Excise tax (Bill C-40) - Concluded*Speakers: Senators

Buckwold, Sidney L., 572, 573
 Cook, Eric, 571-2
 Flynn, Jacques, 519-20, 570-1
 Hayden, Salter A., 570, 572-3
 Macnaughton, Alan A., 499-501
 Manning, Ernest C., 573

Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40. 1r, 479; 2r, 499-501, 519-20; ref to com, 521; rep without amdt but with observations re unlicensed wholesalers, 570; 3r, 570-3; r.a., 581

Excise tax (Bill C-66)

Air transportation, 1268, 1271
 Building insulation materials, 1268, 1274, 1277
 Businesses and persons eligible for refund, 1267-8, 1272, 1274, 1279
 Deficit resulting from single oil price policy, 1269, 1271, 1273
 Gasoline for personal use and for travel to and from place of business, 1267, 1268, 1269, 1272-3, 1276-7
 Gasoline tax in other countries, 1280
 Income tax refunds, 1270-1, 1279
 Increase to all consumers in lieu of tax, suggestion, 1279
 Method for filing of claims and administration of refunds, 1270
 Nova Scotia home heating costs, 1275
 Prices of gas and oil, 1273, 1277
 Records of gasoline purchases, maintaining of, 1268
 Refunds, 1279
 Subsidy paid by low-income persons, 1272, 1274, 1276
 Tax administration costs, 1272
 Worldwide oil crisis, 1275

Speakers: Senators

Flynn, Jacques, 1273-5, 1276, 1277, 1279-80
 Grosart, Allister, 1271-3
 Macnaughton, Alan A., 1267-71, 1278
 Perrault, Raymond J., 1275-6, 1280
 Prowse, J. Harper, 1271, 1277-8

Excise Tax bill C-66. 1r, 1265; 2r, 1267-78; ref to com, 1278; rep without amdt, 1278; 3r, 1278-80; r.a., 1281

Explosives

Authority to regulate purchase and possession of fireworks and explosives, 263-4, 271
 Factories licensed to manufacture explosives, 271
 Inspections by provincial officials, 271
 National standards for gun magazines, 264
 Offences, 272

Speakers: Senators

Barrow, Irvine, 263-4
 Macdonald, John M., 271-2

Explosives bill S-17. 1r, 243; 2r, 263-4, 271-2; ref to com, 272; rep without amdt, 280; 3r, 291; r.a., 1134

Export development

- Authorized capital, 459-60, 462
- Board of directors, 464
- Foreign investment insurance program, 460
- Interest rate, 462, 463, 464
- Short-term and medium-term credit for small businesses, 461
- Speakers: Senators
  - Grosart, Allister, 462-4
  - Langlois, Leopold, 459-62, 464

Export Development bill C-9. 1r, 459; 2r, 459-64; 3r, 464; r.a., 467

Exports and imports

- Cultural property export and import, 712, 761-6, 768-70, 797-800, 810-13, 848, 908-11, 912, 1005
- Export development, 459-64, 467

External affairs

- External Affairs Department, Passport Office
  - Refusal to accept Canadian currency of $50 and $100 denominations, 2037, 2077
- Passports, diplomatic and special, for travel to Namibia, 2363-4, 2443-4
- See* Foreign affairs

Farm credit

- Age limit, 788, 789, 797, 806, 807, 863-5
- Agricultural investments, 790
- Agricultural production, worldwide need, 803-04
- Availability of farm land, 797, 806-07
- Capital fund of corporation, 789, 790, 807
- Eligibility criteria, 805
- French Canadians enrolled in agricultural courses, 806
- French language literature in regard to legislation, 805
- Full-time and part-time farmers, 789, 803
- Interest rate, 789, 791
- Letter from Canadian Federation of Agriculture, 891
- Loan statistics, 795
- Maritime farmers, problems of, 863-4
- Mortgage or productive capacity of real estate, 789, 790-1
- Repayment record, 788
- Security requirements, 791, 804
- Small farm development, 804-05
- Statistics on persons involved in farming, 864
- Statistics on provincial loans, 807
- Western farming, 864
- Speakers: Senators
  - Argue, Hazen, 791, 805-06, 863, 886-8, 890-1
  - Belisle, Rheal, 891
  - Buckwold, Sidney L., 806, 865
  - Grosart, Allister, 886, 887, 891-2
  - Macdonald, John M., 796-7, 864, 880
  - McIlraith, George, 880-4, 885
  - Michaud, Herve J., 803-05
  - Norrie, Margaret, 863-4
  - Perrault, Raymond J., 886, 887, 890

Farm Credit bill C-34. 1r, 781; 2r, 788-91, 796-7, 803-07; ref to com, 807; rep with amdt and recommendations, 847-8, 863-5, 880, m in amdt, 880-2, point of order re amdt, Speaker's ruling reserved, 882-8, Speaker's ruling on point of order, 889-90, m for adoption of rep continued, 890-2, m in amdt adopted, 892, main m as amended agreed and rep adopted, 892; 3r, 893; r.a., 899

Farming

See Agriculture

Federal Business Development Bank

Counselling assistance to small enterprises, 370
 Federated Council of Sales Finance Companies, 369
 French version of bank name, 417
 Industrial Development Bank, 369-70
     Authorized capital, 370
     Background, 369
     Lending policies, 369-70
     Loans, 369
     Loss ratio, 369
 Information service, 370-1
 RoyNat, 369
 Scope of bank operators, 418
Speakers: Senators
     Flynn, Jacques, 417-18
     Godfrey, John M., 366-71

Federal Business Development Bank bill C-14. 1r, 348; 2r, 368-71, 417-18; ref to com, 418; rep of com, 426; 3r, 444; r.a., 467

Federal Court bill

See Supreme Court bill S-2, 12, 103-06, 153-5, 162-4, 243, 253, 467

Federal government buildings

Langevin Block and Justice Building, renovation particulars and costs, 76-77, 137
 Lighting of government buildings and costs of energy, 606, 1238-9

Federal-provincial fiscal arrangements

Basic and additional revenues, 1175-6, 1183-4
 Conditional and unconditional payments, 1182
 Costs of program, 1175
 Freehold oil and gas revenue, 1176
 Government commitment re oil and gas revenues for development and exploration, 1181
 Income tax revenue guarantee, 1176, 1177
 Medicare and hospital insurance, 1182-7
     Deterrent fees, 1185
     Home care and clinical supervision, 1186
     Phasing-out of federal assistance, 1183, 1184-7
     Remote areas, problems of, 1187
     Shortage of persons in medical profession, 1187
     UK health services, unsatisfactory operation of, 1186
 Personal and corporation tax rates, 1177
 Provincial equalization payments per capita, 1176-7, 1182
 Social welfare programs, 1184-6
 Tax rebates on oil and gas revenues, Western provinces, 1177

Federal-provincial fiscal arrangements - *Concluded

Speakers: Senators

Croll, David A., 1184-6

Grosart, Allister, 1180-4

Lang, Daniel A., 1175-8

Perrault, Raymond J., 1186-7

Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements bill C-57. 1r, 1136; 2r, 1175-8, 1180-8; ref to com, 1188; rep without amdt, 1197; 3r, 1214; r.a., 1281

Federal-provincial relations office

Clerk of the Privy Council and Secretary to the Cabinet, 465-6

Responsibilities, 466

Meetings (1964-73), 465

Privy Council functions, 465

Public Service employment, 464-6, 467

Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies

Assets of federally incorporated companies in Canada, 101

Borrowing limit, 100, 101-02

Subordinated debentures, 100, 102

Speakers: Senators

Hayden, Salter A., 100-03

Walker, David J., 103

Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies bill S-7. 1r, 47; 2r, 100-03; ref to com, 107; rep without amdt, 160; 3r, 180; r.a., 314

Feeds

Bureaucratic control in enforcement of regulations, 158

Definition of 'feed', 130

Inspections, 585

Manufactured feeds, authority to regulate, 130

Medicaments, 585

Modifications proposed, 130

Pet foods, 585

Responsibilities of Agriculture Canada, 585

Whole seeds or grains free of deleterious substance, 138

Speakers: Senators

Argue, Hazen, 129-31, 585-6, 1635, 1636-7, 1650-3

Flynn, Jacques, 1652-3

Greene, John J., 1635

Langlois, Leopold, 1480, 1635-6

McDonald, A. Hamilton, 158-9

Norrie, Margaret, 161-2

Yuzuk, Paul, 157-8

Feeds bill S-10. 1r, 47; 2r, 129-31, 157-9, 161-2; ref to com, 162; rep with amdts, 584-6, 592; 3r, 594; Commons amdts, 1467, 1480, 1485-6, ref to com, 1635-7; rep that Commons amdts be concurred in with substitution of one amdt, 1650-3, 1660-1; Commons concurrence in Senate amdt, 1974; r.a., 2002

Felicitations

Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, P.C., speeches at unveiling of portrait in Senate foyer, 469-71
 Lapointe, Hon. Renaude, appointment to office of Speaker of the Senate, 22, 26, 32, 37, 51, 58, 62, 72, 81, 82-83, 111, 116, 120, 138-9, 144, 167-8, 174-5, 184-5
 Martin, Hon. Paul P.C., former Leader of the Government in the Senate, 14, 18, 22, 26, 32, 37-38, 48, 51, 62, 72, 111, 116, 120, 122, 132, 142, 174, 181, 185, 208-12
 (Farewell speech to Parliament, 207-08)

Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, P.C. (Resigned May 23, 1975)

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 184-8

Aging, 186-7

Compulsory retirement and lack of consideration for talent potential, 186-7

'Salute to Senior Citizens Day', Toronto, excerpt from speech by Rt. Hon. John G. Diefenbaker, 186

Aging, the anatomy of Special Senate Committee report, 516-18

Conferences on aging, provincial, 516-17

Dilemmas of Modern Man, excerpt from speech of Dr. Nathan Shock, 516

Geriatrics studies in faculties of medicine, 517

Ontario Select Committee on Aging, 517, 518

Population increase in respect of elderly persons, 516

Senior Citizens' Week (US), 517; Ontario committee recommendations, 518

Sociological aspects of aging, 516-17

Canadian Sovereignty Symbol bill C-373, 685-8

Importation of beavers from US for Grey Owl film, 687-8, 709

Lord Beaverbrook of New Brunswick, 686

Non-restriction on commercial use of beaver symbol, 687

Petitions and communications received to support adoption of beaver symbol, 686-7

Significance of beaver to Indians, armed forces and areas of national interest, 686

Committees, Special, Senate, study and analysis of reports for information of Parliament and public, 516

Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada) bill C-223, 710-11

Damage or insult to flag, 710

Incidents of desecration to flag, question of, 710

Penalties, 710

Speech by Governor General on first raising of National Flag, 710

Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 184-5

Former Speaker of the Senate, felicitations, 14, 18, 22, 26, 32, 37, 51, 58, 62, 68, 72, 111, 116, 120, 132, 138, 139, 142, 167, 173, 181, 184-5

Indian and Eskimo recruitment development program, 569

International Women's Year, 896-9

Abortion, deletion from Criminal Code, 898

Anti-discrimination legislation, 897

Excerpt from UN publication re inequality between men and women, 897

Indian women, loss of status on marriage to non-Indian, 898

Inequalities for university graduates, 898

Pay discrepancies noted by Statistics Canada, 898

Professionals, 898

Property rights on marriage breakup, 898

Royal Commission on the Status of Women, 897

Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, P.C. - *Concluded

- International Women's Year - Concluded
  - Social revolution by women, 896
  - UN Assist. Sect. General for Humanitarian and Social Affairs, Mrs. Helvi Sipila, 896
  - United Nations designation of year, 896
  - 'Why Not' campaign, 897
  - Women's Program, Department of State, 897-8
  - Working women, heads of families, 898
- Legislation received without explanatory notes, 709
- Mexico, Canadian parliamentarians visit to, 775-7
  - Canadians retired in Mexico, 777
  - Exchange of cultural exhibitions, 776-7
  - Influence in international policies, 775
  - Joint ministerial meetings, Canada-Mexico, 775
  - Political system, 776
    - Chamber of Deputies, 776
    - Institutional Revolutionary Party and other parties, 776
    - President, 776
  - Seasonal agricultural workers in Canada, 777
  - Standard of living, Canada-Mexico, 775
  - Trade, Canada-Mexico, 776-7
  - Women, status of
    - Chamber of Deputies, 776
    - Equality before law and in all aspects of life, legislation for, 777
    - National programs for family planning, etc., 777
    - Social improvement, work in, 777
- Research staff, Parliamentary Library and Senate, 516
- Senior Citizens from March Township and Kanata, visitors to Senate, 555
- Speaker pro tem, 582, 803
- Speeches at unveiling of portrait in Senate foyer, 469-70; reply 470-1
- Status of women, 186-8
  - Advisory Council on the Status of Women, priorities cited, 187-8
    - Abortion, removal of item from Criminal Code, 188
    - Canada Labour Code amdt, 187
    - Canada Pension Plan, inclusion of homemakers, 187
    - Divorce or dissolution of marriage, 187
    - Equitable employment of women to federal government positions and to boards, commissions and crown corporations, 187
    - Superannuation Act amdts, 187
  - International Women's Year, 188
- Tributes upon resignation, 967-8
- Visit to the Senate after resignation, 1970

Ferry service

- North Sydney and Port aux Basques, possible increase in fares, 1861
- Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, possible increase in fares, 1815, 1860, 1861

Finance Committee

- See* National Finance, Standing Senate Committee

Firearms

- Control of weapons and firearms, 193, 293-5

Fire losses replacement account

Conditions covering replacement of or repair to buildings, 353

Yukon and Northwest Territories, insurable properties and premiums, 338

Speakers: Senators

Belisle, Rheal, 353

McDonald, A. Hamilton, 338

Fire Losses Replacement Account bill C-18. 1r, 325; 2r, 338, 353; 3r, 366; r.a., 397

Fisheries

Extension of 200 miles coastal jurisdiction, 74, 2208, 2377

Law of the Sea Conference, 117

Marine safety, British Columbia fisheries, 1814-15, 1860

Newfoundland, 117; ice conditions, 117; foreign fishermen inside limit, 117

Nova Scotia, 18-20; offshore fishing, 19-20

Rights of MicMac Indians of Cross Point Reserve to fish Atlantic Salmon, 2208, 2264

Tuna research, 73-74

Flag, National, 663, 710-11, 714-15, 740

Florida land deals, involvement of Canadians in alleged swindle, 1012, 1198

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 180-4

Adjournment, point of order re, 1110

Air conditioning system on Governor General's car, tax on, 2209

Aircraft Registry bill S-5, 173-4, 981, 999-1000

Conflict between creditors, 173-4

Constitutionality of bill, question of, 173, 1000

Federal-provincial conferences, lack of, 1000

Registration of mortgage or claim for provision of fuel or other material, 173

Aird, Hon. John B., resignation from the Senate, 334

Alliance Security & Investigation, Ltd. bill S-26, 1053-4, 1261

Animal Contagious Diseases bill C-28, 1633-4

Penalty for non-reporting of disease, 1634

Regulatory powers of authorities, 1634

Transportation and care of animals, 1634

Zoos and game farms, 1634

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1578, 1579-80, 1586, 1587

Post Office workers, 1587

Termination clause, constitutionality of, 1578, 1586

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, 2138

Anti-inflation program

Judges' salaries, 1662, 1681

Meeting of Minister of Finance and provincial representatives re implementation of guidelines, 1549

Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 392-5, 407, 408, 410, 411-12, 413, 414, 416

Appropriation bill No. 1, 1975 C-54, 715-16, 733-6

Appropriation bill No. 2, 1975 C-55, 736-8, 739

Appropriation bill No. 3, 1975 C-64, 1097-8, 1129-31

Appropriation bill No. 4, 1975 C-79, 1604-06

Appropriation bill No. 1, 1976 C-90, 1976-7

Appropriation bill No. 2, 1976 C-91, 1986-7, 1988-9, 1991-2

Auditor General of Canada, report of Independent Review Committee, question of referral to com, 796

Austin, Hon. Jacob, introduced in the Senate, 1354

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee
  - Engagement of counsel and technical, clerical and other personnel, 1427, 1428
  - Meetings during adjournments, 2047-8
- Bankruptcy and insolvency, com authorization to examine and report on subject matter of Bill C-60, 911
- Boucher, Hon. William A., the late, 2251
- British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 132-3
- Canada Business Corporations bill C-29, 685
  - Energy Board, 685
  - Senate committee work on bill, 685
- Canada-United States relations
  - Communications between Canada and US, newspaper article re remarks by Senator Davey, 2193
- Canada Year Book, 1788
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
  - TV program 'Les beaux dimanches', 226
- Canadian economy
  - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1293, 1454-8
    - Excerpt from Prime Minister's speeches, 1454-5
    - Financial and monetary policies, 1456
    - Government expenditures, 1456-7
    - Government guidelines, 1455-6
    - Housing, excerpt from statement by Minister, 1457
    - Labour reactions, 1457-8
    - Prices and incomes policy, 1457
    - Restrictions, effect on free enterprise, 1457
    - Statement by Prime Minister re right to strike and wages above guidelines, 1293
  - Canadian Labour Congress, political affiliation, 2153
- Canadian Men's Curling Championship, congratulations to Newfoundland rink, 1889
- Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation bill S-27, 1067
- Canadian Press report of statements made by Leader of the Government re matter concerning Senator Giguere, 1395-6, 1397
- Canadian Television News report on death of Viateur Ethier and misrepresentation as member of Conservative Party, 1241
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2266, 2267, 2279-80, 2284, 2285, 2289, 2309-10, 2324, 2336, 2349, 2350, 2362, 2444
  - Delegation of powers to Lieutenant Governor in Council, 2279, 2289, 2324
  - McGill Law Journal article, 'The Central Fallacy of Canadian Constitutional Law', 2324
  - Property and civil rights, 2279
  - Qualification for municipal office, 2279-80
  - Qualification to own ship, or acquire, hold or dispose of property, 2279-80
  - Suggested referral of Clause 33 of bill to Supreme Court, 2362, 2444
- Civil Service Insurance bill C-26, 770
- Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1308-12, 1598
  - Conflict of interest, interpretation of, 1308-09
  - Constitutional problems in provisions of bill, 1310-11
  - Misleading advertising and unfair or dishonest selling practices, 1309-10
  - Right of action in civil or federal courts for damages, and provincial jurisdiction re, 1410-11
- Combines investigation, New Brunswick court of appeal decision re K.C. Irving, Ltd., 1023, 1045-6
- Combines, planned takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd., of Argus Corporation, 1063, 1064
- Crerar, Hon. Thomas A., P.C., the late, 775
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 982-3, 1157-8, 1168-9, 1733
- Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada) bill C-223, 714, 715

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - *Continued

- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No.1) C-71, 1742-7, 1774, 1775, 1776, 1885, 1897-8, 1903-06
  - Criminal Code provisions applicable to abortion, 1746
  - Admission of facts but denial of guilt, 1745
  - Comments of Past President of Bar Association, 1743
  - Morgentaler case*, 1742-5, 1903-06
    - Jury decision, reversal by court of appeal, 1742-6
  - Jury system and role of jurists, 1744-5
  - Right of judge to infer from peace officer's evidence that disturbance has occurred, 1897
  - Summary of judgment of minority, 1746
  - UK law, 1746
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2387, 2388, 2425-7
  - Excerpt from speech of Prime Minister, 2426
  - Extension of legislation re commutation of death penalty (1967-76), 2426
  - Problems deriving from murder, solution of, 2427
- Economy of Canada, 1072-3, 1081-2
  - Government expenditures, 1082
  - Tax cuts, 1082
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Berthier) bill C-365, 602
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-370, 527
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Bruce) bill C-228, 601
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Lafontaine) bill C-229, 602
- Emergency sittings of the Senate, 328
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee
  - Availability to press of draft report, 1755
- Energy, prices for crude oil and natural gas, announcement re, 2142-3
- Estimates
  - Auditor General's statement re low standard of government control of finances, 1976
  - Borrowing authority, 392-4, 735, 737-8, 1603, 1604-05, 1988-9
  - Breakdown of interim supply, complexity of allocation of votes, 737
  - Canadair, interest free loan, 733
  - Date of enactment of appropriation bill, 1130
  - Departmental and crown corporations cutbacks, 1131
  - Dollar items and transfer payments, 1977
  - Form and title of appropriation bills, 717
  - Government expenditures and restraints, 1130-1, 1605
  - Government spending, increase in, 715-16, 1605
  - House of Commons, program expenditures, payment to the Leader of Social Credit Party, 718, 1605-06
    - Political aspect of, 1605-06
  - Income tax refunds, 716
  - Percentage increase of supplementary estimates in relation to main estimates, 1976-7
  - Question of privilege raised in Commons, 394
  - Referral of supply bills to National Finance Committee, 716, 717-18, 733-4, 1129-31, 1604-05
  - Statutory and non-statutory expenditures, 1130
  - Supplementary estimates appropriation bill, question of retroactive power to government, 1976
- Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40, 519-20, 570-1
  - Building materials and construction equipment, 519, 520
  - Government revenue, 519
  - Transportation equipment, 520
  - Unlicensed wholesalers, 520, 570-1
  - Vehicles of high-energy-consuming category, 519-20
- Excise Tax bill C-66, 1273-5, 1276, 1277, 1279-80
  - Building insulating materials, 1274
  - Conservation of gas and oil, question of, 1274

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

- Excise Tax bill C-66 - Concluded
- Exemptions, 1274, 1279
- Gasoline tax in other countries, 1280
- Increase to all consumers in lieu of tax, suggestion, 1279
- Refunds, 1279
- Subsidy paid by low-income persons, 1274
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 884
- Federal Business Development Bank bill C-14, 417-18
  - French version of bank name, 417
  - Scope of bank operations, 418
- Feeds bill S-10, 1652-3
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 181-2
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen
  - Speech at unveiling of portrait of, 469-70
  - Tribute upon occasion of resignation, 968
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1014, 1015, 1016, 1019, 1020, 1025-6, 1027-8, 1029, 1030, 1075-6
  - 'Give', 'trafficking', 'distribute', definition of, 1025-8, 1075
  - Point of order re amdt under discussion, 1015
- Foreign affairs, Canada-United States relations, 234
- Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1163
- Gasoline excise tax, 1100, 1101
- Gélinas, Hon. Louis-Philippe, the late, 1713
- Gouin, Hon. L. M., retirement from the Senate, 2057
- Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75, 1641
- Habitat, UN Conference on Human Settlements, 2199-2200
- Immigration policy, unauthorized press publication of confidential draft report of Special Joint Committee, 1286
- Income Tax bill (No.1) C-49, 627-30, 647-9
  - Committee consideration of bill, press and public ignorance of, 647
  - Economic conditions, 627-8
    - Government expenditures, 628; forecast (1975-76), 628
    - Gross National Product, 628, 629
    - Inflation, 628
    - Unemployment, 628
  - Energy resources, 629-30, 648-9
    - BNA Act provisions re provincial natural resources, 630
    - Exodus of capital, personnel and technology, possibility of, 630
    - Royalties, 629, 648
  - Taxpayers, statistics on, 628-9
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2024-7, 2337-8
  - Bill C-118 (1965) providing exemption for advertising costs, 2024
  - Excerpt from speech re, 2024, 2025
  - Broadcasting, 2025, 2026
    - Bellingham station, 2026
  - GATT provisions re exemption of tax from imported products defined as services, 2027
  - MD of Canada*, 2027
  - Ministerial powers, 2025
  - Time and Reader's Digest*, 2024-7
- Income Tax Conventions bill S-32, 1798
- Indian Oil and Gas bill C-15, 426
- Indians, Manitoba Brotherhood, request to appear before Senate committee, 315
- Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, 368

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - *Continued

- Inflation, 182-3, 519
  - Government 'restraints', 183
  - Gross National Product vs government expenditures, 182-3, 519
  - Supply of goods and services, 183
- Investigations in Parliament, point of order re discussion of subject, 1477, 1478, 1479
- Judges bill C-47, 1053, 1080
- Justice, administration of, allegations of interference by cabinet ministers, 1848, 1857-8, 1859, 1890-3, 1920-2, 1930-1
  - Drury, Hon. Charles Mills, resignation offer and rejection by Prime Minister, 1890-3, 1920-2
  - Ouellet, Hon. André, resignation because of impending contempt of court appeal, 1890-3, 1920-2
- Kickham, Hon. Thomas J., the late, 324
- Labour conditions, strike of longshoremen in Quebec, back-to-work legislation, 833, 838-9, 840, 846, 849, 855, 867, 888, 900-01, 912
  - Withdrawal of services by longshoremen at Montreal, 1006
- Laing, Hon. Arthur, the late, 532-3
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
  - Expenses, special, 525, 526
  - Meeting held in camera, 1770
  - Televising of committee proceedings, 510, 513-14, 551
- Legislation, difficulty in dealing with omnibus bills, 1742
- Liberal Caucus, invitation to members of Opposition, 1868
- Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23, 1338-9
  - Appointments after royal assent of bill, 1339
  - Inadequacy of remuneration, 1338
  - Members of Parliament retired to office of lieutenant governor, 1339
- Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001, 1251-2, 1257-8
- Medical Care bill C-68, 2359
  - Seat belts, 2367, 2368
- Mexico, communique of Parliamentary delegation to Canada, 1874, 1887-8
- Mexico, visit of Canadian Parliamentarians, 852-3
  - Political stability, 853
  - Tariff preferences for developing countries, 852
  - Tourism, 853
  - Trade missions, 852-3
- Money bills, Senate authority to amend, 1656, 1657-8
- Montreal police force, threatened strike, 849
- Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, 2068
- Narcotics, study of legislation by Senate committee, 316
- National Finance Committee, meetings during adjournment, 2048
- National Housing bill C-48, 742, 753, 755, 756
- National lottery, proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada, 2161, 2191
- North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1727
  - Canada's role in NATO, 1727
  - Warsaw Pact, 1727
- Official languages, report to Parliament, 289-90
- Official languages, right of air pilots in Quebec, 2344, 2345, 2348, 2378-81
- O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan, the late, 2034
- Olympic bill C-63, 1203-04
  - Expenditures, inflationary trend, 1204
  - National aspect of Olympics, 1204
  - Unjust criticisms by government alleged by Opposition members, 1204-05

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - *Continued

- Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation by federal government, 603, 954-5
- Motion that subject be referred to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 603, 954-5; agreed, 966
  - Cost-sharing formula, 955
  - RCMP operations in other provinces, 954
  - Subsidizing by Ontario and Quebec and other provinces, 955
- Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 982, 1002
- Political Parties, possible RCMP investigation, 2063
- Post Office, opinion of Anti-Inflation Board re settlement with Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1597
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1370, 1403, 1410, 1416-17
- Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill C-10, 599, 600
- Prime Minister Trudeau's visit to British Columbia with cabinet ministers, 1763, 1764
- Privileges and immunities of senators, proposed special committee, 1434, 1734
  - Search warrants, procedure in dealing with, 1434
- Progressive Conservative Party of Canada, leadership convention, 1778, 1813-14
- Public Service, bank's refusal to cash government cheques, 1974-5, 2003-04, 2008
- Public Service Staff Relations bill C-70, 1245, 1246
  - Board composition and term of office, 1245
- Railway bill C-48, 760-1
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1639-40, 1662, 1663, 1664
  - Effects of anti-inflation program on regional areas, 1662, 1663, 1664
  - Passage of bill, question of, 1639-40
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee
  - Newspaper article re Chairman Senator Forsey, 794
- Representation bill C-36, 438-9
- Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, 1207, 1209
- Rules of the Senate
  - Adherence to subject of debate, 599, 600
  - Minister's statement of policy, senator's comment or criticism re, 1203
  - Point of order re comment on speech of Commons member, 2416
  - Point of order re question of privilege on Air Canada service, 507
  - Point of order re remarks by government leader, 1826
  - Point of order under advisement by Speaker, 884
  - Reference of items to National Finance Committee, 1109, 1110
  - Suggestion that matter of appropriation bills being ref to com be considered by Standing Rules and Orders Committee, 736-7
  - Suspension of rule 95 re private bills, 1207, 1209
- Rules of the Senate, report of Committee on Standing Rules and Orders, 1358, 1361, 1362, 1364
- Science Policy Committee, 1246-7
- Senate
  - Adjournments, 712-13, 1107-08, 1110
  - Business, 124, 153, 222, 324-5, 713, 723, 1107, 1110, 1122, 1250, 1262-4, 1265, 1287-8, 1409, 1438, 1547, 1878, 1879, 1880, 1915, 1916, 1954, 2046, 2336
  - Criticisms by public and in press re Senate consideration of bill C-49, 647
  - Monday evening sittings, question of, 1878, 1879, 1880
  - Reform
    - Official Opposition, reinforcement of, 184
    - Suspensive veto, 184
    - Term of appointment, 184
  - Simultaneous interpretation system, 504
  - Vacancies, 1772

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 868-70
  - Adequacy of increase, question of, 868
  - Appointment of commissioners to inquire periodically into remuneration of members of Parliament, 869-70
  - Comparison to salaries of top public servants and professionals, 868
  - Cost of living index, 869
  - Expense and travel allowances, 869, 870
  - Method of awarding increase by legislation, 868
  - Parliamentarians' remuneration scale (1953-70), 869
  - Press and public reaction to salary increase, 870
  - Prime Minister, ministers and deputies, 869
  - Principles governing salary increase, 868
  - Speaker of Senate and of Commons, 869
  - Stevadores' wage demands, 868
- Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, 2187, 2193-5, 2196, 2203, 2204, 2205, 2207
  - Liberal Caucus support re cancellation of 7% increase, statement of Prime Minister re, 2193
  - Provincial legislatures, salary increases, 2194
  - Senior public servants, 2193-4
  - Supplementary retirement benefits, 2194
- Senate (Intersessional Authority) bill S-22, 576-7, 815-16
  - Committee work, delays due to dissolution of Parliament, 577
  - Dissolution periods 1963-74 (number of days), 576
  - Resolution re intersessional authority, 576
  - Sittings of committees between sessions, 577
    - Limitation, 577
    - Reports of committees, 577
- Sessions of Parliament, legislative program, 1902-03
- Smith, Hon. George Isaac, introduced in the Senate, 1282
- Sports, message of congratulations to Montreal Canadiens on winning of the Stanley Cup, 2129
- Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, 1437, 1442
- Statutes of Canada (to revise references to Court of Queen's Bench of Quebec) bill S-16, 291-3
- Supplementary Borrowing Authority bill C-80, 1642, 1643, 1649
  - Inclusion of borrowing authority in appropriation bills, 1642, 1643
  - Period covered by borrowing authority, 1649
  - Referral of bill to committee, question of, 1643
  - Requirement of recommendation of Governor General, 1643
- Supreme Court bill S-2, 106, 153-5
  - Applications for leave to appeal, 153-4
  - Conflict of interest, question of, 153
  - Interest on money awards, 153
  - Residence requirement for judges, registrars and deputy registrars, 153
- Tailoring service for Senate and Commons, 2167-8
- Televising of committee proceedings, 510, 513-14, 551
- Territorial Lands bill S-20, 375-7
  - Conflict of interest, 376-7
  - 'Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest', 377
  - Offshore rights and the seabed, 376, 377
- Transportation, bilingual air traffic services, Commission of Inquiry, 2322, 2335
  - Disruption of services in Canada, 2237, 2243, 2249-50, 2258-9
- Transport Minister Hon. Jean Marchand, rumour of resignation, 573
- Uranium of Canada, Limited, proposed referral of report to National Finance Committee, 1639

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - *Concluded

- West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12, 76, 78-80, 93-94
  - Conciliation commissioner, 79
  - Delay in negotiations, 78
  - Proposals for collective bargaining, prohibition against strikes, compulsory arbitration, 79-80
- West Coast Ports Operations bill C-56, 725-7, 730
  - Disruptions in economy due to strikes, 725-6
  - Loss of man-days in recent strikes, 725-6
- West Coast ports operations, resumption of work by longshoremen and related operations, question, 742

Food and drugs, narcotic control

- Advertising of drugs by give-away, 1018-19
- Application for withdrawal of criminal record, 1038, 1048
- CMA resolution re non-medical use of cannabis, 447
- Cannabis, 354-6, 357-8, 359-60
  - Convictions for possession of, 355-6
  - Hazards of use, 357, 359-60
    - Metabolic interactions with other drugs, 359-60
    - Persistence of THC in the body, 359
    - Tar content, 359
  - Research, 357
- Certificate of analysis, 1033
- Drug and gun control, 1015
- Drugs and alcohol, teenagers' and young children's use of, 355-6, 383-4, 453, 1048
- Drugs, Society and Personal Choice*, 361
- Drug trials cited, 1024, 1029
- Educational drawbacks as result of criminal record, 1008-09
- 'Give', 'traffic', and 'sell', definition of, 1009-11, 1015-31, 1047, 1075
- Goods for export purposes, 1066
- Healthways* magazine, excerpt from, 374
- Indian reservations, drug and alcohol problem and suicide rate, 453-4
- LeDain Commission, 354, 383
- Misunderstandings by public re purpose of legislation, 374-5, 449, 970, 1046
- National Organization for Reform of Marihuana Laws (US), 447, 449
- Onus of proof for possession or trafficking, 1008, 1010-11
- Parole or unconditional release, 969, 970, 1008, 1037, 1038
- Penalty for importing, exporting, trafficking or possession, 367, 375, 447, 1009, 1037-8, 1047-8
- Permissive society, 361-2
- Preventive detention and compulsory treatment, 1032
- Search by police, authority for, 356
- Speakers: Senators
  - Asselin, Martial, 402-04, 1007-11, 1074-5
  - Bonnell, Lorne, 446-8, 1019, 1020, 1046, 1078-9
  - Buckwold, Sidney L., 1079
  - Choquette, Lionel, 1018
  - Croll, David A., 1014, 1016, 1018, 1074-5
  - Denis, Azellus, 1037
  - Flynn, Jacques, 1014, 1015, 1016, 1019, 1020, 1025-6, 1027-8, 1029, 1030, 1075-6
  - Goldenberg, Carl, 969-71, 1025, 1066, 1079
  - Greene, John J., 454, 1027
  - Heath, A. E. Haddon, 1018-19, 1031-3, 1076

Food and drugs, narcotic control - Concluded*Speakers: Senators - Concluded

Hicks, Henry D., 366-8, 1017
 Laird, Keith, 1014, 1016-7
 Lawson, Edward M., 374-5
 Manning, Ernest C., 405-06, 1014-15, 1016, 1037-8
 McDonald, A. Hamilton, 1019, 1026
 McElman, Charles, 1077
 McGrand, Fred A., 404-05
 McLraith, George, 1015-16, 1019, 1020, 1021, 1023-5, 1026, 1027
 Neiman, Joan, 354-8, 456, 1014, 1017-18, 1076-7
 Perrault, Raymond J., 1028, 1029-30
 Phillips, Orville H., 1036-7
 Prowse, J. Harper, 382-5, 1046-8
 Rowe, Frederick William, 448-54, 1048-9
 Sullivan, Joseph A., 358-62, 1079-80
 van Roggen, George C., 1048
 Williams, Guy, 453-4

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19. 1r, 300; 2r, 354-62, 366-8, 374-5, 382-5, 402-06, 446-54, 456; ref to com, 456; rep with amdts, 969-71, 983, 1007-10; m to amend com rep, 1010-11, 1014-21, 1023-30, neg, 1030-1, debate on rep cont, 1031-3, 1036-8, 1046-9, rep adopted, 1049; m for 3r, 1066; m to amend sec. 1 of bill, 1066, 1074-5, agreed, 1075; m for 3r cont, 1075-6, m that bill be not proceeded with, 1076-7, neg, 1078; m for 3r cont, 1078-80; 3r, 1080

Foreign affairs

Aid to Chile, 1438-9, 1597-8
 Canada-United States relations, 66-68, 71, 227-9, 234, 1653, 1716, 1747-50; questions re, 1625-7
   Canada-United States boundary, government policy re demarcation line on Dixon Entrance on Strait of Juan de Fuca, George's Bank and northwards, 2308
   Canadian Defence spending, remarks by United States Ambassador, report in Globe and Mail, 2122-3, 2192-3, 2201
   Communications between Canada and US, newspaper article re remarks attributed to Senator Davey, 2192-3, 2377-8
 Club of Rome, President Peccei, visit to Senate committee, 473
 Estonia, 58th anniversary of Proclamation of Independence, 1785
 European Parliament, 307-13, 316-20, 329-33
 Helsinki Declaration on European Security and Cooperation, 1293, 1466, 1471-5, 1791
 Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, Florida conference, 2221-2, 2224-33
 Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, Quebec conference, 1137-43, 1145-55
 Inter-Parliamentary Union, Colombo, Sri Lanka conference, 984-8
 Inter-Parliamentary Union, Tokyo conference, 234-8
 Italy, earthquake victims, Canadian government assistance to, 2111
 Mexico, visit of Canadian Parliamentarians, 775-7, 852-3, 930-3
 North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1489-94, 1513-16, 1726-8
 North Atlantic Assembly, London conference, 342-7, 362-5
 Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to Argentina, 1975, 2142
 Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to India, 1859-60, 1869
 Palestinian Liberation Organization
   Position taken by Canadian delegation at United Nations, 110, 137-8
   Status as participants in United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention, 1238, 1242-4, 1248-9
 Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe, Strasbourg conference, 1431-4

Foreign affairs - Concluded

Passports

- Restrictions on special passports of MPs, article in Globe and Mail, 2262-3, 2362-4, 2443
- Use of diplomatic and special passports for travel to Namibia, 2363-4, 2443-4
- South Africa-Zambia relations, 229
- United Kingdom, Prime Minister Harold Wilson, visit to Ottawa, 473

Foreign Affairs, Standing Senate Committee

- Budget, 193, 348, 1781
- Canada-United States relations, committee authorized to report on, 227-9, 234; committee authorized to publish and distribute Vol.I of report, 1653; report tabled, 1716
- Meetings during Senate sittings, 713, 1059, 2216
- Members, 96
- Reports
  - Canada-United States relations, 1716, 1747-50
  - Citizenship bill C-20, rep without amdt, 2242
  - Immigration bill S-12, rep without amdt, 239
  - Temporary Immigration Security bill C-85, rep without amdt, 1874
- Terms of reference, 227

Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1158-63, 1169-70, 1218-20, 1230-2, 1816

- Acreage affected in Ontario, Quebec, Maritimes and Newfoundland, 1219
- Bacillus thuringiensis*, experiments in combatting tobacco and cabbage bugs and Spruce budworm, 1218-19
- CBC announcement re spraying for budworm, 1219
- Christmas tree industry, 1169
- Cost-sharing of insecticide spraying, 1158-60, 1163
- Damaging side effects of insecticides, 1158-63
- Economic results from destruction, 1158, 1219
- Excerpt from paper prepared by director of Maritime Forest Research Centre, 1158
- Federal cost-sharing in aerial control programs, 1219-20, 1816
- Federal responsibility, 1160-1, 1162
- Lumber companies' participation in control, 1220
- Maple and Birch 'dieback', 1160
- New Brunswick dependence on forest industry, 1158
- Newfoundland, 1161
  - Birch and Mountain Ash, 1162
- Newspaper headlines re lack of federal assistance, 1158
- Position statement prepared by Environment Department, 1230-2
  - Effectiveness and efficiency of chemical control, 1230-1
  - Possible alternatives to widespread use of chemicals, 1231-2
  - Scope and effectiveness of environmental monitoring, 1231
- Prince Edward Island, 1162
- Quebec, 1218
- Smallholdings and farmers' woodlots, 1169
- Statistics on NB forestry ownership, 1169
- Task force report, 1220
- Wildlife affected by forest conditions, 1162
- Speakers: Senators
  - Bonnell, Lorne, 1162-3
  - Buckwold, Sidney L., 1169, 1170
  - Burchill, G. Percival, 1158-9, 1816
  - Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 1218-19
  - Flynn, Jacques, 1163

Forestry - Concluded*Speakers: Senators - Concluded

- Hicks, Henry D., 1161
- McElman, Charles, 1159-61, 1169-70
- Michaud, Herve J., 1169
- Perrault, Raymond J., 1162, 1163, 1219-20, 1230-2
- Robichaud, Louis-J., 1163
- Rowe, Frederick William, 1160, 1161-2

Forsey, Hon. Eugene A.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 51-58
- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1508, 1532-7
  - Anticipated contravention of guidelines, 1537
  - Controls by voluntary means, 1533
  - Federal-provincial cooperation in enforcement of guidelines, 1508, 1536-7
  - Labour unions, 1535-7
    - Ontario secondary school teachers, 1536
    - Public Service Alliance, 1536-7
  - Over-ruling of courts of Parliament, 1534-5
    - Wee Frees* and Taff Vale cases cited, 1535
  - Power of regulation given to Administrator of Board, 1533-4
  - Progressive Conservative Party proposals, 1533
  - Safeguard operations of Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 1534, 1535
  - UK controls, 1533
- Anti-inflation program
  - Family allowances, 1683, 1716-17, 1721
  - Postal workers' contract, government rejection of Anti-Inflation Board's opinion re, 1628, 1655
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1976 C-94, 2267-9
- British North America Acts 1867 to 1975 bill C-3, 1061-2
  - Jurisdiction of Parliament in Senate appointments, 1061
  - Manitoba and other provinces, Senate representation (1886), 1061
  - Native representation from NWT and Yukon, 1061
- British Trade Mission offices in Canada, 206, 252
- Business of the Senate, committee meetings, 1090, 1091
- Canada Year Book, 1822
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
  - Gerda Munsinger, presence in Canada and appearance on television program, 1034, 1073, 1239-40, 1256-7
    - Question of privilege re reply to question, 1256-7; further question of privilege, 1618-19, 1625
- Les Beaux Dimanches* program, 1127-8
  - Dubious nature of film with separatist tendencies, 1127
  - National unity, deprecating of, 1127
  - Report of Transport and Communications Committee re, 1127-8
- Canadian coins, reported change in design, 1937, 1955
- Canadian economy
  - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1319-26
    - BC Premier's statement re temporary price freeze, 1323
  - Canadian Labour Congress proposals, 1323-4
    - CLC appearance before Senate committee, question of, 1326
  - Constitutional validity of legislation, question of, 1320
    - Canada Temperance Federation case*, 1320-1
    - Globe and Mail* article by Prof. J. D. Morton re, 1320
  - Cost-push inflation, 1321

Forsey, Hon. Eugene A. - Continued

Canadian economy - Concluded

Attack on Inflation - Concluded

Demand-pull inflation, 1321

Emergency or temporary legislation, 1320-1

Globe and Mail articles on price controls, 1323

Government expenditures, 1324-5

Bank of Canada building, 1324

Mirabel Airport, 1325

Pickering Airport, 1325

Sculptures, 1324-5

Inflation, types of, 1321

Money supply, increase in, 1323

Pensioners, 1323

Price control vs wage control, 1322

Problems of equity in temporary freeze wages and controls, 1322

Rectification of disparities between compensation for men and women, 1320

Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, powers of, 1320

Salaries of members of Parliament and executives, objections to, 1325, 1326

Senate role in attack on inflation, 1322

Social services, 1324

CNR services in Atlantic provinces, 1924, 1976

Canadian Labour Congress, political affiliation, question of privilege, 2153, 2154

Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission bill C-5, 829-32

Bell Canada applications, 831-2

Executive committee, 830

Head office location, 830

Matters pending before CTC, 830

Powers of commission, 830-1

Provincial and consumer representation on commission, question of, 831

Renaming of commission, 829

Responsibility to report to Minister of Communications, 830

Terms of appointment and qualifications of commission members, 830, 831

Candu reactors, proposed sale to Argentina and Korea, 1307, 1319

Childers, Erskine, President of Republic of Ireland, death of, 265

Christian Evangelical Centre of Canada, action of National Revenue Department re, 2183-4, 2346

Citizenship bill C-20, 2087-92, 2282-3, 2310, 2311, 2350

AIB case, 2282-3

Alien ownership of land, 2091

Appeals, 2089-90

British subject and subject of the Queen, 2088

General regulations, 2090

Landed immigrants, residence requirement, 2087-8

Language requirement, 2091

Powers and authorizations of Minister and Governor in Council, 2088-9, 2090

Security or public order risks, 2090

Constitution of Canada, correspondence between the Prime Minister of Canada and the First Ministers of the Provinces on the subject of Patriation, 2079-86

Amdts by unanimous consent of Parliament and legislatures, 2082

Draft proclamation, 2083-4

Excerpt from previous speech, 2080

Federal-provincial agreements, 2085, 2086

House of Commons, redistribution of seats, 2085-6

Letters received in opposition to patriation, 2079-80

Protection of French language and culture, 2084-5

Forsey, Hon. Eugene A. - ContinuedConstitution of Canada - Concluded

Provincial consultation in amendments, 2080-2

Senators, western provincial appointments, 2085

Unanimous consent of provinces, question of, 2081-2

Victoria formula, 2082-3

Copyright Act, Economic Review, 'Crown copyright reserved', replacement of words, 2200, 2322, 2362

Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada) bill C-223, 710

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, 1897

Right of judge to infer from peace officer's evidence that disturbance has occurred, 1897

Energy resources, lighting of government buildings, 606, 1238-9

Federal government buildings, Langevin Block and Justice Building, 76-77, 137

Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 51

Foreign affairs

Aid to Chile, 1438-9, 1597-8

Canadian Defence spending, remarks by United States Ambassador, report in Globe and Mail, 2122-3, 2201

Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75, 1641

Government Expenditures Restraint bill, date of introduction in Senate, question, 2130; further question, 2159, 2264

Helsinki Declaration on European Security and Cooperation, 1293, 1466, 1471-5

Cooperation in field of economics, science, technology and environment, 1473

Cooperation in humanitarian and other fields, 1473

Equal rights and self-determination of peoples, 1472

Exchange of observers, 1473

Improvement of working conditions for journalists, 1473

Inviolability of frontiers, 1472

London Economist article re deficiencies in Declaration, 1474-5

Matters related to giving effect to certain principles, 1473

Prior notification of major military movements, 1473

Reunification of families, 1473-4

Protest on Parliament Hill against Rumanian government, 1473

Sovereign equality, respect for rights inherent in sovereignty, 1472

Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, 1472-3

Travel for personal or professional reasons, 1474

Immigration bill S-12, 197-8

Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2015

Broadcasting, 2015

Canada-US relations, 2015

Canadian advertising content, escalating percentage of requirement for, 2015

MD of Canada, 2015

Information Canada, inaccuracies in publications regarding Governors General of Canada and Prime Ministers of Canada, 1757, 2003

Meighen, Rt. Hon. Arthur, removal of portrait from Commons corridor, 53, 563

National lottery, proposed incorporation of Loto Canada, 2103, 2110-11, 2160-2, 2163; inquiry dropped, 2191; see also 2267-9

Excerpts from speeches or statements re, 2160

Fiscal policy of government, departure from, 2162

Gullibility of the poor in relation to lotteries, 2162

Method of authorization for lottery, 2160-2

Regressive taxation in relation to lotteries, 2162

Nobel Peace Prize winner, refusal of USSR to permit acceptance of award, letter from Senator Forsey re, 1761

Forsey, Hon. Eugene A. – Continued

- Northwest Territories, Senate appointment, 1772
- Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to India, 1869
- Parliament Buildings, East Block renovations, 241; inquiry dropped, 279
- Parole, consideration of changes in present system, 1371
- Political affiliations, 1536
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1430, 1431
- Prerogatives of Prime Minister, orders in council re, 1349, 1355
- Prime Minister Trudeau's visit to British Columbia with cabinet ministers, 1764
- Privileges and immunities of senators, 1734
- Privileges of Parliament, commercial use of picture of Parliamentary Library, 1729, 1764-5
- Public Service Commission, new offices, interior wall decoration, 1930, 1975-6
- Public Service Employment, Staff Relations, Superannuation, Interpretation bill C-38, 466
  - Secretary to the Cabinet for Federal-Provincial Relations, 466
- Public Service, Treasury Board action in reclassification of economists, sociologists and statisticians, 2318-21
- Quebec Official Language Bill 22, 56-57, 829, 912, 924-5
  - Administrative discretion, 57
  - Constitutionality of, 56-57
  - Question re government decision on petition, 829, 912, 924-5
  - Universities, stipulations re, 57-58
- Queen Elizabeth, Her Majesty, celebration of Silver Jubilee in Canada, 1318-19, 1403
- Regulations and other statutory instruments, agreement between federal government and provincial governments, question, 2103, 2110
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, Standing Senate Committee
  - Duties and functions of committee, 1534, 1535
  - Expenses, 178
  - Reports
    - First report, 178, 205-6
    - Second report tabled in Commons Oct.29/74
    - Third report, 239-40, 264
    - Fourth report, 327-8, 338
    - Fifth report, 1100, 1133-4
    - Sixth report, 1479, 1487
    - Seventh report, 1638
    - Eighth report, 2045
    - Ninth report, 2307-08, 2333
  - Translation of criteria of committee, 264
  - Travel arrangements for committee outside of Canada, authority for, 1479, 1497
- Saint John, N.B., increase in bus fare, 1816
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 825-6
  - Penalty clause, 825-6
- Salaries (Lieutenant Governors) bill C-24, 1093, 1094
  - Jurisdiction and status of lieutenant governors, 1093
  - Queen of Canada, 1093
- Secrecy in government, discussion on TV program re committee involved in, 1349
- Senate and House of Commons (Supplementary Retirement Benefits) bill C-81, 2195-6
- Senate business, 2122
- Senate reform, 52-54
  - Initiation of bills, 52
  - Orders in Council and other legislation, 52-53
  - Representation from Yukon and Northwest Territories, 53
  - Suspensive veto, 54
  - Term of appointment, 54

Forsey, Hon. Eugene A. - *Concluded

- South Africa-Zambia relations, 229
- Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, 1710
- Televising of committee proceedings, 511
- Temporary Immigration Security bill C-85, 1830-2
- Translation of criteria of Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 264
- Transportation
  - British North America Act as it pertains to transportation, 2217-21
  - British Columbia terms re transportation service, 2218
  - Chignecto Ship Canal, 2219
  - Ferry employees, right to strike, 2218-19
  - Government policy, lack of statement re, 2218
  - Intercolonial railway, 2217-18
    - British Columbia, 2218
    - Defence aspects, 2218, 2220-1
    - New Brunswick, 2217-18
- Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1690-1, 1698, 1699, 1700, 1702, 1705, 1706
  - Persons 65 yrs. and over, 1690-1, 1698
  - Reduction in payments, regressive aspect of, 1691
  - Regional breakdown of savings due to legislation, 1700
- Victoria Memorial Museum, rumoured change of name, 1035, 1165
- West Coast Ports Operations bill C-56, 728

Fort-Falls Bridge Authority

- Agreement between US and Canada for reconstruction of bridge, 851-2
- Date of construction commencement, 851
- Financing and approach landings, 856
- Ownership of bridge, 856, 857
- Tourist statistics, 855-6

Speakers: Senators

- Everett, Douglas D., 897
- Haig, J. Campbell, 855-6
- Molgat, Gildas L., 851-2, 867

Fort-Falls Bridge Authority bill C-367. 1r, 781; 2r, 855-6; 3r, 867; r.a., 899

Fournier, Hon. Edgar E.

- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2409-10
  - Alternative to death by hanging, 2410
  - Prison reform, 2410

Fournier, Hon. Michel

- New Brunswick, economic conditions, 1817-20
  - Agriculture, 1818
  - Fisheries, 1818
    - Two hundred mile limit, 1818
  - Forestry, 1818-19
  - Infrastructural works, government expenditures on, 1818
  - Mining, 1819
  - Nuclear power plant, change of site, 1817
  - Primary industry and natural resources, utilization needed, 1818

Fournier, Hon. Michel - Concluded

- New Brunswick - Concluded
- Shipping, 1820
- Tourism, 1819
- Transportation, 1819
- Unemployment, 1820

Fournier, Hon. Sarto

- Canadian Armed Forces casualties in defence of France in World War I and World War II, 1417
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 589-90
  - Miscarriage of justice, 589-90
  - Responsibility of judge and jury, 589
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Berthier) bill C-365, 602-03
- Free trade, an economic consideration for Canada, 1741
- Gouin, Hon. L. M., resignation from the Senate, 2057
- Sports, message of congratulations to Montreal Canadiens on winning the Stanley Cup, 2129
- Televising of committee proceedings, 509-10
- United Nations resolution naming Israel as racist nation, condemnation of, 1398

France

- Canada-France income tax convention, 1792, 1793-8

Free trade, an economic consideration for Canada, 1738-41, 1849-52, 2059

- Auto pact, 1849
- Communist world contacts, 1850
- Economic blocs, development throughout world, 1850
- Economic Council of Canada, report and recommendations, 1738, 1740, 1741, 1850, 1851
- GATT, 1739, 1740, 1852
- Imports, competition to Canadian products, 1850
- International credit and money convertibility, 1740
- Keynes' theories, 1738
- Multi-national corporations, 1850
- Secondary industries, 1738-41, 1851-2
  - Employment, 1740
  - Import controls, 1739, 1850
  - Quebec, 1739
  - Role in economic survival of provinces, 1738-9

Speakers: Senators

- Connolly, John J., 1852
- Desruisseaux, Paul, 1738-41, 1851
- Fournier, Sarto, 1741
- Molgat, Gildas L., 1849-52
- van Roggen, George C., 1741

Gélinas, Hon. Louis-Philippe (Resigned Dec. 10/75)

- Tributes, 1713-14

Giguère, Hon. Louis de G.

- Aircraft Registry bill S-5, 172-3
  - Aircraft Convention, International Recognition of Rights in, 173
  - Notice of interest, 173
  - Seizure of aircraft, 173
  - Signatories to convention, 173

Giguere, Hon. Louis de G. - Concluded

- Canadian Press report of statements made by Leader of the Government re matter concerning Senator Giguere, 1395-7
- Conflict of interest, allegations re Sky Shops Export Ltd., 1348

Godfrey, Hon. John M.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 58-59
- Canada-Russia hockey series, 58-59; question of privilege re press report of speech, 98
- Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1293-4
  - Withdrawal from debate because of conflict of interest, 1294
  - Question of privilege re, 1315-16
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 575
- Criminal Law Amendment bill C-71, 1897
  - Right of judge to infer from peace officer's evidence that disturbance has occurred, 1897
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee
  - Availability to press of draft report, 1755
- Federal Business Development Bank bill C-14, 366-71
  - Counselling assistance to small enterprises, 370
  - Federated Council of Sales Finance Companies, 369
  - Industrial Development Bank, 369-70
    - Authorized capital, 370
    - Background, 369
    - Lending Policies, 369-70
    - Loans statistics, 369
    - Loss ratio, 369
  - Information service, 370-1
  - RoyNat, 369
- Immigration bill S-12, 167
- Immigration Policy Committee, third and final report, 1375, 1376-94
- Money bills, Senate authority to amend, 1656
- Public servants in $60,000 bracket, 889
- Regulations re attendance of senators, 1918-19
  - Attendance records, 1918-19
  - Official business, specifying of, 1918
- Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, 1208
- Rules of the Senate
  - Suspension of rule 95 re private bills, 1208
- Senate and House of Commons Act, 948-54
  - Regulations re attendance of senators, motion that Senate make regulations re attendance and deductions for absence, 948-51; m in amdt (Senator Cook) that subject matter be ref to Internal Economy, Budgets, and Administration Committee, 951-4; agreed, 954
  - Committee work of Senate, 950
  - Deductions for absence and permissible days of absence, 949-50
  - Remuneration, 949
  - Senate reform, 950-1
  - Senatorship, public and press reaction to, 949
  - Sittings of Senate and Commons, 948-9
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 870-5
  - Attendance in Parliament, Senate recording of and Commons statements re, 874
  - Comments of Senator Lapointe (1973), 871
  - Comments of Senator O'Leary (1942), 870-1
  - Committee work of Senate, 874-5
  - Conflict of interest aspect of bill, 870
  - Hours of work on Senate sitting days, 872-3

Godfrey, Hon. John M. - *Concluded

- Senate and House of Commons bill C-44 - Concluded
- Leave of absence and deductions for absence, 872, 874, 875
- Senatorship, public and press reaction to, 870-1
- Sittings of Senate and Commons and attendance statistics, 871-2
- Televising of committee proceedings, 547

Goldenberg, Hon. H. Carl

- Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1564
- Canadian economy
  - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1330
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2092, 2349, 2350
- Conflict of interest, 2278, 2303-06
  - Code of conduct, 2306
  - Financial interests, 2305
  - Government contracts, 2304-05
    - Broadcasting licences, 2305
    - Participation in government contracts, 2304-05
    - Prohibited contracts, 2304
  - Incompatible offices, 2303-04
    - Elected public office, 2304
    - Prohibited provincial and federal offices, 2303-04
  - Sanctions and administration, 2305-06
    - Committee on Privileges, 2305-06
    - Public resource, 2305
- Criminal Code (control of weapons and firearms) bill S-14, question as to progress in committee stage, 480
- Criminal law
  - Interim report of committee, 2163-6
    - Dangerous offenders, 2165
    - Firearms and other offensive weapons, 2164
    - Intercepted communication, 2164-5
    - Law Reform Commission report, excerpt from, 2164
    - National Parole Board's powers, 2166
    - Parole, 2165-6
    - Provincial parole boards, 2165
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No.2) C-84, 2448-9
  - Capital Punishment*, by Professor of Jurisprudence of Yale University, 2448
  - Deterrent aspect, 2448-9
  - Excerpt from speech of Ontario Ombudsman, 2448-9
  - Government responsibility, 2448
  - Organized crime, Montreal, 2448
  - UK Royal Commission on Capital punishment, 2448
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee
  - Sixth report tabled and printed as appendix, 1793, 1799-1812
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 969-71, 1025, 1066, 1079
  - Committee report with amdts, 969-70
  - Drugs for export purposes, 1066
  - Give, trafficking, definition of, 1025
  - Misleading press reporting of aim of bill, 970
  - Onus of proof of offence, 969
  - Parole or unconditional release, 969, 970
- Judges bill C-47, 1066

Goldenberg, Hon. H. Carl - Concluded

Justice, administration of, allegations of interference by cabinet ministers, 1858

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee

Expenses, 213

Meeting held in camera, 1770

Reports

Conflict of interest, 2278, 2303-06

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, rep with amends, 1867-8, 1884-6, 1893-1900

Criminal law, interim report on bill C-83, 2119-20, 2127-9

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-370, rep without amdt, 555

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, rep with amends, 969-71, 983,
1007-11, 1023-33, 1036-8, 1046-9

Judges bill C-47, rep without amdt, 1066

Law Reform Commission bill C-43, rep without amdt, 759

Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001, rep without amdt, 1244

Parole System in Canada, report tabled, 10

Representation bill C-36, rep without amdt, 443

Statute Revision bill S-3, rep without amdt, 243

Supreme Court bill S-2, rep without amdt, 243

Territorial Lands bill S-20, rep with amdt, 579

Televising of committee proceedings, 509, 510, 513

Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1431

Rules of the Senate, 1359

West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12, 80

Termination date of agreement, 80

Gouin, Hon. Leon Mercier (Resignation Mar. 18/76)

Tributes, 2057

Government annuities improvement

Auditor General's appt. as auditor, 1629

Background and statistics of annuities, 1628, 1629-30

Retroactive date, 1641

Return rate increase, 1628-30, 1640, 1641

Status of sales contracts, 1640

Speakers: Senators

Barrow, A. Irvine, 1628-9, 1630

Croll, David A., 1629-30

Flynn, Jacques, 1641

Forsey, Eugene A., 1641

Greene, John J., 1630

Grosart, Allister, 1630, 1640-1

Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75. 1r, 1618; 2r, 1628-30, 1640-1; ref to com, 1641; rep without amdt, 1649; 3r, 1706; r.a., 1712

Government expenditures, 16, 23-24, 26, 27-28, 182-3, 199-200, 349-51, 519

Bank of Canada building, 1324

Bilingualism program, 1352

Control procedures, 350

Fiscal and monetary policies of government, 23-24

Manpower requirements, 350, 1352

Mirabel Airport, 1325

Government expenditures - Concluded

- Olympic entertainment, 1352
- Pickering Airport, 1325
- St. Lawrence Islands National Park, 1549-50, 1588
- Salaries of top-level officials, 1352
- Sculptures, 1324-5
- Studies of toilet facilities, offices, industrial plants, etc., 1352
- Translation services, 1352
- See* Estimates

Government Expenditures Restraint bill, questions re date of introduction in Senate, 2130, 2159, 2264

Governor General

Deputy

- Beetz, Hon. Jean, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
  - Royal assent, 1791-2, 2002, 2207
- de Grandpre, Hon. Louis-Philippe, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
  - Royal assent, 2152
- Dickson, Hon. R. G. B., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
  - Royal assent, 731, 899
- Judson, Hon. Wilfred, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
  - Royal assent, 1281
- Laskin, Rt. Hon. Bora, P.C., His Excellency the Administrator of the Government of Canada
  - Opening of Parliament, Speech from the Throne, 2-7
  - Prorogation of Parliament, Speech from the Throne, 2453
  - Royal assent, 95, 220, 467, 581, 1095-6, 1476, 2096
- Martland, Hon. Ronald, Deputy Administrator of the Government of Canada
  - Opening of Parliament, 1-2
- Spence, Hon. Wishart F., Deputy Administrator of the Government of Canada
  - Royal assent, 313-14, 656, 740, 758, 832, 1617, 1712, 2301
- Inaccuracies in pamphlet issued by Information Canada regarding Governors General in Canada, 1757, 2003
- Royal assent by His Excellency the Governor General Rt. Hon. Jules Leger, 397, 2450

Graham, Hon. B. Alasdair

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 174-7
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 174-5
- Housing, 176
- Inflation, 175-6
  - Milk subsidy, 175-6
- Nova Scotia
  - Cape Breton coal mines, operating losses, 176; DEVCO, 176
  - Destruction of forests and residential property by fire, 2178
  - Springhill fire disaster, possibility of federal aid, 1241-2
  - Steel industry, Cansteel study of Atlantic rim, 176
  - Storm damage (1974), 135

Grain

- Grain prices, 170-1, 266
- Malting barley, 266
- Prairie grain advance payments, 583, 595-601, 614-15, 621-2, 684, 709, 731
- Subsidies on grain shipped to Eastern Canadian ports for export, 2159, 2201-02, 2211, 2376-7
- Two-price wheat, 900, 928-30, 942-4, 1088, 1090, 1095
- West Coast grain handling operations, 76-93, 95
- West Coast ports operations, 723-30, 731

Green Papers

- Immigration Policy, 584
- Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest, 373, 573-4, 580, 774, 779-81

Greene, Hon. John J., P.C.

- Agricultural Stabilization bill C-50, 1190-2, 1212
  - Commodities covered by act, 1191
  - Cost of production formula, 1191
  - Flexibility as to type of support program required, 1191
  - Grain subsidies, 1191
  - Instability of farm prices, 1190
  - Provincial and/or producer participation in program, 1191
  - Regional stabilization plans, 1191
  - Support price of 90% over 5 years, 1191
- Anti-Inflation bill (No.1) C-73, 1507, 1508, 1532, 1535
  - Federal-provincial cooperation in application of guidelines, 1507, 1508
  - Toronto high school teachers' wage settlement, 1507
  - Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, powers of, 1535
  - Wage and price controls vs wage and price freeze, 1532
- Anti-Inflation bill (No.2) C-89, 2137
  - Labour representation in Parliament, 2137
- Austin, Hon. Jacob, introduced in the Senate, 1354
- British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 133
- Broadcasting, references to Newfoundland by CTV, question of privilege, 2215-16
- Canada-US relations
  - Television broadcasts, 'electronic theft' of commercial advertising, 1626
- Canadian economy
  - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1326
- CTV news report on death of Viateur Ethier and misrepresentation as member of Conservative Party, 1241
- Capital punishment, partial abolition and expiration of trial period, 1656, 1716
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2092, 2093, 2311
  - Morgan et al vs Attorney General for PEI*, 2311
- Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1296
- Crime and violence, proposed special Senate committee, 922
- Energy
  - Offshore oil and gas resources in Atlantic provinces, 2070, 2141-2
  - Statement of Policy re oil and gas, 2182
- Feeds bill S-10, 1635
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control, and Criminal Code bill S-19, 454, 1027
  - Alcoholism, 454
- Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75, 1630
- Immigration bill S-12, 165
- Income Tax bill (No.3) C-58, 2325-6
  - Excerpts from Milton's Aeropagitica and Mill's Liberty, 2325
  - Freedom of speech and of publication, 2325
  - O'Leary Commission, 2326
  - 'Substantially the same', definition of, 2314
- Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., resignation from Senate, 212
- National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment) bill S-23, 893-6
  - Communication between public and members of Parliament, question of, 895-6
  - Doctrine of atonement, 894
  - Excerpt from autobiography of Nathan Leopold, 895

Greene, Hon. John J., P.C. - *Concluded

National Defence and Criminal Code bill S-23 - Concluded

Murder of Chicago boy, 894-5, 896

Opinions of prominent lawyers, 894

Quality of mercy, 894

Rehabilitation, 895

Royal prerogative of mercy, 894

National lottery, proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada, 2162

Pan American Games, congratulations to Canadian team members, 1318

Political Parties, possible RCMP investigation, 2063

Privileges and Immunities of senators, proposed special committee, 1435

Hiring of counsel and staff, 1435

St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 822-3

Penalty clause, 823

Salaries (Lieutenant Governors) bill C-24, 1095

Saskatchewan, safety of Gardiner Dam, 2179, 2377

Senate

Television and radio coverage of Senate committee proceedings, 1365-6, 2099

Appointive nature of senators' term of office, 1366

Committees, 1366

Press reporting of Senate proceedings, 1365

Public reaction to appearance of senators on television, 1365

Relevance of Senate to constitutional procedure, 1365

Right of public to view proceedings, 1365

Senate and House of Commons Act

Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, point of order on motion re, 952, 954

Motion of privilege re omission of statement and Speaker's ruling from Minutes of Proceedings, 961

Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 874

Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, 2204

Senate role, 894

Sports, message of congratulations to Montreal Canadiens on winning of the Stanley Cup, 2129

Transportation

BNA Act provisions relating to transportation, 2219

United Nations Assembly resolution on Zionism, 1411, 1417

Grey Cup Game, Vancouver, 300-01*Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate

Abortions, operation of Committee on Abortion Law, 1624-5, 1639

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 21-26

Adjournment from afternoon sitting to evening sitting, 1108-09, 1111-12

Aeronautics bill S-34, 2130-1

Conventions, international, 2130-1

Costs of security measures, apportioning of, 2131

Enforcement of regulations by Canada, 2130

Inadequacy of security checks, 2131

Jurisdiction over aircraft landing in Canada, 2130

Aircraft Registry bill S-5, 174

Aird, Hon. John B., resignation from the Senate, 335-6

Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1508, 1538-42, 1578

Anticipated contravention of guidelines, 1540

Audit and examination of businesses, 1540

Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - ContinuedAnti-Inflation bill C-73 - Concluded

- Bill of Rights vs powers of Administrator, 1540-2
- Constitutionality of legislation, question of, 1508
- Controls vs guidelines, 1539-40, 1542
- Enforcement of guidelines, 1539-40, 1542
  - Federal-provincial cooperation, 1542
- Judicial review of appeal, 1541-2, 1563-4
- Objections to bill from business, labour groups and teachers, 1538-9
- Penalties and appeals, 1540
- Prescription of and publication of guidelines, 1539
- Termination clause, constitutionality of, 1578
- Appropriation bill No. 3, 1974 C-31, 199-202, 204, 205
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 385-90, 391, 392, 412, 413, 414-15
- Appropriation bill No. 5, 1974 C-45, 444-5
- Appropriation bill No. 1, 1975 C-54, 705-07
- Appropriation bill No. 3, 1975 C-64, 1098
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1975 C-79, 1606-09
- Appropriation bill No. 1, 1976 C-90, 1980, 1981, 1982-4
- Appropriation bill No. 2, 1976 C-91, 1987-8, 1989, 1990, 1991
- Appropriation bill No. 3, 1976 C-93, 2286-8
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1976 C-94, 2268, 2269
- Army Benevolent Fund bill C-17, 304
- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee
  - Engagement of counsel and technical, clerical and other personnel, 1427
- Bills, printing and distribution of, 61
- Bills received in Senate without original explanatory notes, 622
- Bourque, Hon. Romuald, the late, 11
- British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 133-4
  - Advertising of bill, 133
- British North America Acts 1867 to 1975 bill C-3, 1060-1
  - Appt. of senators for NWT and Yukon, 1061
  - Commons representation, 1060
  - Ombudsman for territories, 1060
  - Property qualification, 1060
  - Senate reform, 1061
- Broadcasting, appearance of Gerda Munsinger on CBC television program, 1619
- Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank bill S-24, 958-61
  - Assets, statistics for Canadian domestic banks, 958-60
  - Authorized capital and shares, 960
  - Branch offices, 959
  - Comparative United States and Canadian statistics relating to banking offices, 960
  - Name of bank, possible conflict re, 960
  - Risk financing, 960
  - Specialty operations, 960
- Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission bill C-5, 841-3
  - Association of Communications Regulatory Bodies, 843
  - Cable television, jurisdiction of, 842
  - Communications: Some Federal Proposals*, 842-3
  - Provincial consultations, 841
- Canadian Sovereignty Symbol bill C-373, 687
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2311-12, 2313, 2324, 2349
  - Powers of Lieutenant Governor in Council, 2313
  - Precedents in transfer of federal jurisdiction, 2312
  - Prince Edward Island Potato Marketing Board vs H. B. Willis Inc.*, 2324

Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - *Continued

- Clerk's Scroll, 1667, 1683, 1684, 1685
- Committee meetings
  - During Senate sittings, 827-8, 1856-7
  - Notices of meetings of subcommittees and steering committees, 2192
  - Scheduling of, 828, 829, 1091
- Committee report on regulations re attendance of senators, rule re consideration of, 1782
- Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, New Delhi conference, 1644-6
  - India, 1645-6
    - Canada's aid to, 1645
    - Communications problem, 1645
    - Government, 1645
    - Jaipur City twinned with Calgary, 1645-6
    - Nuclear explosion in Rajasthan from reactor supplied by Canada, 1645
  - Vice-President, Hon. James Jerome, 1646
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, 1898, 1899
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2406, 2445-7
  - Deterrent aspect, 2446
  - Gallup poll, 2446
  - Government responsibility, 2446-7
  - Parolees, potential for further crime, 2444
  - Permissive society, 2447
  - Policemen's reaction to legislation, 2446
  - Question of privilege (Hon. Mr. Molson), 2406
  - Rehabilitation, 2446-7
    - Guelph Correctional Centre, study by Dr. Carlson, 2447
  - Vengeance vs justice, 2447
- Criminal law, subject matter of Bill C-83 ref to com, question re, 1853
- Croll, Hon. David A., role in government annuities legislation, 1630
- Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, 810-13, 909-11
  - Appeal against board ruling, 811-12
  - Controls system, 811
  - Cultural heritage vs national identity, 810-11
  - Determination of values, 812
  - Fair cash offer, 812
  - Permits, 811, 812
  - Review Board, 813, 910
  - Rights of individuals, 812
  - UNESCO convention, 813
- Customs Tariff bill (No. 2) C-39, 486-9, 514-16
  - Anti-inflationary effects of tariff decreases, 514
  - Building supplies, 489
  - Handicrafts from developing countries, 488, 515
  - Housing materials, 515
  - Ministerial powers, 488
  - Preferential rates for developing countries, 515
  - Tourist exemptions, 488
  - UNESCO, 487-8, 515
    - Agreement for Facilitating the International Circulation of Visual and Auditory Materials of an Educational Scientific and Cultural Character, 487
    - Exclusion of Israel from European group, 488

Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

Customs Tariff bill (No. 3) C-67, 1214-15

Aircraft and aircraft engines, 1214

Gifts, 1214

Petroleum products, 1214

Polymer plates for letterpress printing, 1214

Religious publications, 1214

Tariff and excise revenues, 1214

Distribution of document in Senate chamber, 644

Estimates

Assurance that discussion on estimates does not terminate with passage of bill, question of, 193, 203, 204, 205

Budgetary votes and budgetary statutory items, 200

Canadair, government loan to, 706

Canadian Broadcasting Corp., 201, 1056

Canadian International Development Agency, 200, 1055

Cape Breton Development Corp., 201

Cheque cashing before Mar. 31, 1989, 1990

Crown corporations, operating deficits, 1056

Deferment of capital projects, 1982-3

Discussion on subject matter of appropriation bills remaining on Order Paper, 1783, 1784-5

Dollar items, 706, 1607, 1967-70, 1980, 1982-3, 1987-8

Lack of authority for transfers, 1607

Statistics (1967-70), 1967-70, 1980, 1982-3, 1987-8

Energy, Mines and Resources, 201-02, 1608

Energy policy for Canada, 2189

Form of supplementary estimates, lack of explanatory breakdown of expenditures, 706

Glassco Commission report on Financial Management and Control Study, 1967, 1982

Government expenditures vs GNP, 199-200, 705-06, 1054, 1085, 1607, 2187-8, 2287

Financial Times article re, 2287

Government restraints, question of, 1054

Health and Welfare and other depts., 1055

Inclusion of main and supplementary estimates in one bill, 190-1

Indian and Northern Affairs, 200-01

Industry, Trade and Commerce, 202

Inflation, 2188

Excerpt from publication of Canadian Economic Policy Committee, 1056

Information Canada, 201

Inter-Provincial Pipe Line Ltd., 706-07

Loan item in supplementary estimates, question of precedent, 2255-6

Loto Canada, 2256-8; President, 2257

Medicare and hospital insurance, 1608

Oil equalization payments, 2188

Oil refiners, compensation to, 445, 1055, 1608-09

Old age security fund, 705, 1055-6

Globe and Mail report, 705

Olympic Games, government policy and statement re, 2256

Percentage increase of supplementary estimates in relation to main estimates, 1967, 1983-4

Provincial government expenditures, 2189, 2190, 2288

Public debt, 1607-08

Regulations by order in council, 2257

Transfer items, 2190; Treasury Board statement re, 2287

Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - *Continued

- Estimates - Concluded
  - Unemployment insurance fund, 2188, 2190; unemployment, 2187-8
  - UNESCO, 380
  - Wheat, two-price system, 202
- Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/76, 1054-7, 1085
  - Supplementary (B), 1966-70
- Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/77, 2187-90
- European Community, Canada's claim for compensation re loss of preferential access of Canadian commodities to British market, 579-80, 661-2, 671
- European Parliament, 319-20, 329-30
  - Canada-US relations, 319-20, 329
  - Finished products, export of, 319, 320, 330
  - GATT, 319, 320, 329
  - Multinational corporations, 330
- Excise Tax bill C-66, 1271-3
  - Conservation, question of, 1273
  - Deficit resulting from single oil price policy, 1271, 1273
  - Exemptions, 1272
  - Federal-provincial agreement, 1272
  - Gasoline for personal use, 1272-3
  - Prices of gas and oil, 1273
  - Subsidy paid by low-income persons, 1272
  - Tax administration costs, 1272
- Export Development bill C-9, 462-4
  - Authorized capital, 462
  - Board of directors, 464
  - Interest rate, Canadian firms vs foreign firms, 463
  - Loans to countries outside OPEC, 463
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 882-4, 886, 887, 891-2
  - Point of order re proposed amendment to committee report, 882-3
  - Rejection by Commons of amdt similar to Senate proposed amdt, 892
- Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements bill C-57, 1180-4
  - Basic and additional revenues, 1183-4
  - Conditional and unconditional payments, 1182
  - Government commitment re oil and gas revenues for development and exploration, 1181
  - Medicare and hospital insurance, 1182-3
    - Protests re government phasing-out of assistance, 1183
  - Provincial equalization payments per capita, 1182
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 22
- Fiscal and monetary policies of government, 23-24
- Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75, 1630, 1640-1
  - Retroactive date, 1641
  - Return rate increase, 1640, 1641
  - Status of sales contracts, 1640
- Government expenditures, 26
- Habitat, United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, report of Canadian National Committee, 1962-3
- Immigration bill S-12, 197, 232, 233
  - Deportation statistics, 232, 233

Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

- Immigration policy, unauthorized press publication of confidential draft report of Special Joint Committee, 1286
- Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 613, 634-7, 653-4, 655
  - Economic conditions, 634-5
  - Foreign accrual property income, 635
  - Petroleum and mineral resources, 635
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1956, 1958, 2395, 2396, 2398-2400
- Income Tax Conventions bill S-32, 1793-6
  - Countries with which Canada has concluded conventions, 1794
  - Federal-provincial jurisdiction, 1795-6
  - Inconsistencies between convention and any other law, 1795
  - Prohibition against discrimination, 1794
  - Taxpayer position in countries without conventions, 1794
  - Withholding tax on dividends, interest payments, royalties, 1794
  - Artistic works, 1794
- Industrial unrest, 24
- Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, 304-06, 398-9
  - Interdepartmental arrangement re access to information, 398-9
- Inflation, 23-24
- International Air Transport Association bill S-18, 302, 303
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
  - Expenses, special, 525-6
  - Meetings during Senate sittings, 543
  - Televising of committee proceedings, 512, 552-3
- Loto Canada, 2111, 2163, 2256-8, 2268, 2269
- Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001, 1234-5
- Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., resignation from the Senate, 209-10
- Medical Care bill C-68, 2359
- Minister invited to explain bill in Senate chamber, question of, 198
- Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, 151
  - Regulations, lack of information on, 151
- National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 744-7, 748, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757
  - Building materials tax, 745-6
  - Government costs, 746
  - Home ownership of older homes, 745
  - Housing starts, decrease in, 744-5
  - Limited dividend program, 746
  - Mortgage insurance fund, 753, 755
  - Non-profit and cooperative housing, 745
  - Registered home owner savings plan, 746
  - Rental housing, 746
- National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, 1667, 1671-2, 1677, 1678, 1679-80, 1681
  - Costs of program, 1677
  - Density restrictions, 1672
  - Expenditures on interest reduction grants (1976), 1679
  - Federal funding of public housing, statistics (1970-74), 1672
  - Housing target, 1671
  - Inflationary effects of regulations, question of, 1672
  - Loan ceilings, 1671-2
  - Local limits, 1678
  - Low cost medium density housing, $1000 grants to municipalities, 1680
  - Rental accommodation, 1677

Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

- National Housing bill C-77 - Concluded
  - Repayment conditions, 5-yr. clause, 1678
  - Resales, 1672
  - Servicing of land, 1679-80
  - Special cases, 1671
  - Standards, 1672
  - Warranty from builder to owner, 1681
- North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1493-4
  - Interparliamentary Advisory Council and sub-committee, 1493
  - Resolution of Internal Economy Committee to study expenses and sharing of costs of interparliamentary associations, 1494
- Northland Bank bill C-1002, 1599
- Northwest Territories Representation bill C-51, 622-3
  - BNA Act, amdt re NWT representation, 622
  - Chairman of commission for NWT, terms of appointment, 623
  - Indians and Eskimos, voting franchise, 622
  - Neo-colonialism in respect of Territories, 623
- Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to India, 1869
- Oil export tax, 1264, 1265-6
- O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan, the late, 2035-6
- Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation by federal government, 963, 964
- Passports
  - Restrictions on special passports of MPs, article in Globe and Mail, 2262-3, 2362-3, 2443
  - Use of diplomatic and special passports for travel in Namibia, 2363-4, 2443-4
- Petro-Canada bill C-8, 1215-18
  - Control by Governor in Council, 1218
  - Crown corporations' assets, 1216
  - 'Energy Policy for Canada - Phase I, Vol. I Analysis', 1216
  - Equity and debt investment for Petro-Canada, 1216
  - Excerpt from minister's statements re petroleum industry, 1215
  - Foreign control, 1217
  - Government policies detrimental to small companies, 1215, 1216
  - Private sector achievements, 1215-16
  - Revenues for exploration, 1217
- Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 912-16
  - Alberta and Saskatchewan oil production for national consumption, 914
  - Consumer protection, 916
  - Control of revenues to insure reinvestment for exploration and development, 914
  - Federal-provincial relations and national unity in solving of problems, 915-16
  - Federal-provincial temporary arrangements, controversy re, 913
  - Frontier oil, 913
  - Natural gas, price restraints and controls, 914
  - Nuclear and other energy components, 914-15
  - Political price fixing, 915
  - Prices, 914
  - Provincial royalties, 913
  - Sarnia-Montreal pipeline, 915
  - Use of petroleum products in various sectors, extent of, 913
- Point of order re passage of appropriation bill, 387-8, 390
- Privilege, question of, right to invoke a rule of the Senate, 198

Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

- Privileges and Immunities (International Organizations) bill S-25, 958
  - European Community, 958
  - Ottawa office, establishment of, 958
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill S-9, 128
- Public Service Employment, Staff Relations, Superannuation, Interpretation bill C-38, 465-6
  - Federal-provincial relations, Secretary to the Cabinet for, 466
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1664, 1665
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, functions and authority of, 515
- Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, 1206-09
- Rules of the Senate
  - Committee reports, reference back to com or Committee of the Whole for reconsideration, 882-3, 884
  - Debate on interrogation restricted to brief explanatory remarks, 1213
  - Forms and Proceedings, question re authority of rules, 882-3
  - Presentation of Committee report before review by senators, 1606
  - Quotations from speeches made in Commons, 1606-07
  - Reference of estimates to National Finance Com, 440-1
  - Senator speaking twice on same subject, 1513
  - Suspension of rule 95 re private bills, 1207, 1208-09, 1234-5
  - Two days' notice between 1r and 2r of bills, 1109
- Rules of the Senate, report of Standing Committee on Rules and Orders, 1425, 1462-4
  - Adjournment of debates for prolonged periods, 1464
  - Oral questions, 1462-3
  - Powers and duties of committees, 1424
  - Quotations from speeches made in Commons, 1463
  - Terms of reference of committees, 1463, 1464
    - Procedure or practice inconsistent with practices and usages of Senate, 1463
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 821-2
  - Government policy in future conciliation matters, 822
  - Inability of society to keep law and order, 822
  - Precedents of emergency legislation, 821
- St. Patrick's Day, 1902
- Science policy, 1222-4
  - Committee work in creating awareness of science futures, 1223, 1224
    - Tribute to chairman, 1224
  - Expenditures of committee, 1223-4
  - Futures branch of US Congressional Library, 1225
  - Managing the Future - A Conference on Anticipatory Institutions*, 1223
  - Predictive and normative approach in futures, 1224
  - US state commissions on futures, 1225
- Senate
  - Business, 125, 152, 153, 380-1, 482, 484, 1090, 1091, 1108-09, 1111-12, 1524, 1547, 1548, 1682, 1685-6, 1711, 1712, 1877, 1878-9, 1915, 2044, 2120-1, 2336
  - Monday evening sittings, question of, 1877, 1878-9
  - Reform, article in Globe and Mail quoting statements of Prime Minister, questions re, 32, 47
  - Role, 1578
  - Referral of bill to committee, Senate rule re, 1644
  - Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, 2205-06
  - Tax treaties or conventions with other countries, 855, 867, 925, 942
  - Transportation, 25-26
  - Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, 1088-9, 1090

Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - *Concluded

- Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1691-3, 1697, 1698, 1699, 1700, 1701, 1702, 1703, 1704, 1705
  - Appeal procedure, 1704
  - Burden of amdt on underprivileged and older persons, 1692
  - Claimants outside Canada, 1703
  - Deficit of UI fund, 1691
  - Disentitlement, 1699
  - Persons 65 yrs. and over, 1697, 1698, 1701
  - Question of subject matter of UI problems being ref to royal commission, 1693
  - Recovery of advance payments, 1703
  - Regressive aspect of legislation, 1692
  - Sick benefits, 1700, 1702
  - Training or instruction for new employment, 1702
- United Grain Growers Limited bill S-33, 1925
- United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention, status of Palestinian Liberation Organization as participants, 1238, 1243
  - Canada's contribution to UNESCO, 1243
  - UNESCO, withdrawal of grants and exclusion of Israel from European Zone, 1243
  - Objectors to decision, 1243
- West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12, 85-89
  - Conciliation commissioners, Globe and Mail item re, 88
  - Costs of strike action, 87
  - Government intervention and inadequacies in dispute, 86-87
- Work Ethic in Canada, 518

Guidelines for Motions for the Production of Papers, tabled in Commons Dec. 19/74, ref to Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 467

Gun control

- Control of weapons and firearms, 193, 293-5

Habitat

- United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, report of Canadian National Committee, 1959-64, 2278-9

Haig, Hon. J. Campbell

- Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission bill C-5, 988
- Committee meetings, conflict in scheduling of, 828
- Fort-Falls Bridge Authority bill C-367, 855-6
  - Boise Cascade, ownership of bridge, 855
  - Financing and approach landings, 856
  - Tourist statistics, 855-6
- Honey Bear Brewing Corporation Limited, refund of fees on proposed bill, 1782
- Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, 149-51
  - National safety trade marks, 150
  - Regulations, lack of information on, 151
- Transport and Communications, Standing Senate Committee
  - Report
    - Aeronautics bill S-34, rep without amdt, 2141

Halifax Relief Commission Pension Continuation

- Background of Commission formed after Halifax explosion (1917), 1717-18, 1721-2
- Blind persons, rehabilitation, 1722

Halifax Relief Commission Pension - Concluded

Pensions and allowances paid to widows and disabled persons, 1718, 1722

Inequalities of, 1722

Transfer of responsibilities and assets to Canadian Pension Commission and other organizations, 1718, 1722

Speakers: Senators

Norrie, Margaret, 1717-18

Smith, George I., 1721-3

Halifax Relief Commission Pension Continuation bill C-78. 1r, 1714; 2r, 1717-18, 1721-3; 3r, 1730; r.a., 1792Hayden, Hon. Salter A.

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1573

Banking, Trade and Commerce, Standing Senate Committee

Bankruptcy and insolvency, com authorized to examine and report on subject matter of bill C-60, 911

Competition policy in Canada and the Combines Investigation Act, com authorized to examine and report on matters relating to, 109-10

Engagement of counsel and technical, clerical and other personnel, 1427

Expenses, 160

Meetings during Senate sittings, 1006, 1034

Reports

Alliance Security and Investigation, Ltd. bill S-26, rep without amdt, 1074

Anti-Inflation bill (No.1) C-73, rep without amdt but with observation re termination clause, 1573

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, rep without amdt, 2141

Bankruptcy and insolvency, rep on subject matter of Bill C-60, 1596-7, see appendix to Debates of Dec. 11/75

Canada Business Corporations bill C-29, rep with amdts, 666-71, 685

Canadian textile problems, 2055-6

Combines Investigation bill C-2, rep without amdt but with observations, 1571, 1589-95

Continental Bank of Canada, bill S-30, rep with amdts, 1367-9, 1405-06; rep referred back to com, 1406; further rep of com, 1407-08

Customs bill S-4, rep without amdt, 213

Customs Tariff bill (No. 1) C-27, rep without amdt, 280

Customs Tariff bill (No. 2) C-39, rep without amdt, 499

Eastern Canada Savings and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company bill S-29, rep with amdts (French text only), 1355, 1373

Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40, rep without amdt but with observations re unlicensed wholesalers, 570

Excise Tax bill C-66, rep without amdt, 1278

Explosives bill S-17, rep without amdt, 280

Federal Business Development Bank bill C-14, rep without amdt, 426

Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements bill C-57, rep without amdt, 1197

Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies bill S-7, rep without amdt, 160

Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, rep without amdt, 645

Income Tax bill (No. 2) C-65, rep without amdt, 1454

Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, rep with amdts, 2252-5, 2269-75, 2293-2301, 2313-15, 2325-30, 2337; ref back to com, 2337-8; further rep without amdt, 2389-98, 2401-05

Income Tax Conventions bill S-32, rep without amdt, 1867

Indian Oil and Gas bill C-15, rep without amdt, 402

Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, rep with amdts, 348-9, 368

National Commercial Bank of Canada bill S-24, rep with amdts, 1057, 1062-3

Hayden, Hon. Salter A. - Continued

- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee - Concluded
  - Reports - Concluded
    - Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, rep with amdts, 840, 851
    - Olympic bill C-63, rep without amdt, 1211
    - Petro-Canada bill C-8, rep without amdt, 1244
    - Petroleum Administration bill C-32, rep with amdts, 981-2, 1002
    - United Grain Growers Limited bill S-33, rep without amdt, 2003
- Bankruptcy and insolvency, 1596-7, see also appendix to Debates of Dec. 11/75
  - Bankruptcy judge, 1597
  - Registrar's position, reinstatement of, 1596
  - Rights and priorities of secured creditors, 1596
- Canadian Business Corporations bill C-29, 489-93, 498, 666-71
  - Administrative discretion, 494
  - Amalgamations, 492-3; Black & Decker case, 492-3
  - Amending of bylaws and submitting of proposals by shareholders, 491
  - Business corporations incorporated for objects other than provincial, 669
  - Complaints re mishandling of business, 492
  - Failure to file documents, penalty for, 669
  - Form of application for corporations, 491
  - Inspection of records and shareholders' lists, 669
  - Liability of directors, 669
  - Pipeline construction applications, amdt re definition of 'company', 670
  - Proposals for a New Business Corporations Law for Canada, report of task force, 490
  - Registration of corporations, 490
  - Reorganization of corporations, 669-70
  - Senate committee recommendations (1970), 490
  - Shares and dividends, 491, 492
  - Voting trust agreements, 492
  - Witnesses from government and private industry, 670
- Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1571-3, 1589-95
  - Air transport, control and direction of, 1572, 1591-2
  - Amendments, effect of, 1589
  - Chartered accountants and other professions, 1591
  - Civil damages, 1594
  - Constitutionality of provisions of bill, 1593-4
  - Due diligence re certain offences, 1590
  - Exemption for affiliates, 1590
  - Farm Products Marketing cases and Breweries case*, 1592
  - Franchises, 1593
  - Inability to obtain supplies of brand name product, 1594
  - Institution of proceedings on summary conviction, 1593
  - Interim injunction, 1594
  - Mergers and monopolies, 1589
  - Penalty provisions, 1572
  - Recommendations of com incorporated to amdts to bill, 1588-90
  - Refusal to deal, 1594
  - Regulated trades, industries and professions, 1590-1
  - Right of appeal from orders of Commission, 1594
  - Sports, 1590
  - Winnipeg Commodity Exchange, 1592-3
- Competition policy in Canada and the Combines Investigation Act, 663-6, 675-83, 1121-2, 1135
  - Canadian Breweries case*, 664
  - Civil damages, 665
  - Constitutional aspects, 666
  - 'Due diligence' clause, 664

Hayden, Hon. Salter A. - ContinuedCompetition policy in Canada - Concluded

Energy Board, 670
 Inability to obtain supplies to carry on business, 665
In Re The Farm Products Marketing Act, 664
 Interim injunction, 665-6
 International Air Transport Association, 1122, 1135
 Jurisdiction of Federal Court in criminal matters, 666
 Lawyers fees, Ontario, 664
 Reviewable transactions, 665, 666
 Services included in combines legislation, 663-4
 Sports, professional and amateur, 664-5
 Summary convictions, 666
Toronto Daily Star article re committee amends, 664

Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee, unauthorized release to press of draft report, 1756

Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40, 570, 572-3

Unlicensed wholesalers, 570, 572-3

Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies bill S-7, 100-03

Assets of federally incorporated companies in Canada, 101

Borrowing limit, 100, 101-02

Subordinated debentures, 100, 102

Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 606-14, 635, 638-40, 645-7, 654-5

Canada Savings Bonds bonus, 608

Committee consideration of bill, items discussed and witnesses interviewed, press and public ignorance of, 645-6, 654-5

Construction industry, 612-13

Corporate tax rate on manufacturing or processing income, 612

Foreign accrual property income, 611-12

Interest and dividends, 607-08

Pension deductions, 608

Personal exemption, 607

Petroleum and mining industries, 609-11, 613-14, 639-40

Domestic oil, 610

Earned depletion, 610

Provincial royalties, 609-10, 639-40

Royalties payable to freeholders, 609

Tax rate, 610

Write-off of exploration expenses, 610-11

Registered home ownership plan, 608-09

Registered retirement savings plan, 612

Roll-over provisions re amalgamated corporations, 612

Transfer of age exemption to spouse, 608

Income Tax bill (No. 2) C-65, 1417-22

Contributions to registered parties and candidates, 1421

Cooperatives, 1420

Interest and dividends credit for man and wife, 1419, 1422

Investment tax credit, 1421

Registered retirement savings plans, 1420

Resource allowance in respect of oil and gas wells or mineral resources, 1417-18

Sharing of $1.50 price increase in barrel of oil under modified system and including Alberta's royalty reduction, 1418-19, 1422

Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1862-5, 1945-6, 2252-5, 2269-75, 2389-2400, 2401-05

Advertisements directed to Canadian broadcasts by a foreign broadcasting undertaking, 2252

Advertising space in non-Canadian periodicals, exception for tax purposes, 2252, 2270

Hayden, Hon. Salter A. - *ConcludedIncome Tax bill C-58 - Concluded

- Broadcasting provisions re advertising in border stations, 2252, 2270, 2272
- Canada-US relations, 2254
- Canadian Radio and Television Commission, 1863
- Competitive options, 1862
- Discussions with Leader of the Government re amdts, 2274-5
- Effective date of provisions affecting periodicals, 2253, 2272
- Limitation re advertising expense on broadcasting undertaking, 1863-4
- Mass Media Committee report, excerpts from, 1862
- MD of Canada*, 2253, 2272
- Recommendations of committee, 2254
- Retroactivity of date of bill becoming law, 2272
- 'Substantially the same', interpretation of, 2252-3, 2271
- Time and Reader's Digest*, 1862-3, 1865, 2270-1
- Toronto broadcasting stations, prime time availabilities, 1864
- Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, 348-9
- Tributes to Senator Hayden, Chairman of Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 1316-17

Hays, Hon. Harry, P.C.

- Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank bill S-24, 935-6, 973-4
  - Authorized capital and shares, 935
  - Branch banks, 936
  - Head office, 935
  - Name of bank, 974
  - Pension funds of crown corporations, investment of, 973-4
  - Provisional directors, background of, 936
  - Specialties operations, 936
  - Sponsor (Boyd, Stott & McDonald Limited), 936
  - 'Wholesale bank', 936, 973
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 864-5, 884-5
  - Age limit, 864-5, 884-5
  - Full-time and part-time farmers, 884
  - Responsibility of consumers to encourage food production, 864
  - Transfer of farm from father to son, 884-5
- Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 620-1
  - Coal mining, 620, 621
  - Oil industry, 620-1
    - Leduc well, 620
    - Prices, breakdown of production costs, 620, 621
    - Turner Valley Field well, 621
- Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 861-3, 934-5
  - Cost compensation, 861
  - Crude oil, overseas prices, 862
  - Domestic oil, 862
    - Administration of interprovincial trade, 862
    - Exercise of federal power, 862
    - Federal-provincial agreements, 862
    - Licences for interprovincial transactions, 862
    - Penalties for default of provisions, 862
    - Price restraints, 862
  - Natural gas, equitable pricing regime in producing and consuming provinces, 861, 862
  - Petroleum export voluntary charge payable to National Energy Board, 861-2

Health and welfare

- Abortions, 120-1, 188, 837, 838
- 'Priorities for government action', 121
- Canada Pension Plan, 242, 249-52, 277-9, 300, 307, 314
- Children in poverty, report by National Council of Welfare, 625-6
- Connaught Laboratories testing adjacent to proposed housing development, 586, 616, 732, 902
- Environmental contaminants, 1348
- Estimates for, 190
- Insulin, production of, 100, 110-11
- Labour, the working poor in Canada, 2019-23, 2154-8
- Proprietary or patent medicine, trade marks, 47, 126-8, 155-7, 240, 245
- Senate report on poverty—poverty line updated (1974), 626
- Social welfare, distribution of income, 2144-9
- Statute Law (veterans and civilian war pensions), 242, 267-70, 272, 282, 314

Health, Welfare and Science, Standing Senate Committee

- Crime and violence, subject matter ref to com, 1659-60
- Members, 96

Reports

- Canada Pension Plan bill C-22, rep without amdt, 300
- Crime and violence in contemporary Canadian society, 2242-3
- Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, rep with amdts, 848, 908-11
- Environmental Contaminants bill C-25, rep without amdt, 1437
- Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75, rep without amdt, 1649
- Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23, rep without amdt but with observations, 1369
- Ocean Dumping Control bill C-37, rep without amdt, 1088
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill S-9, rep with amdt, 240, 245
- Quarantine bill S-31, rep without amdt, 1874
- Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, rep without amdt, 1211-12
- Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Pensions) bill C-4, rep without amdt, 272

Heath, Hon. A. E. Haddon

See Bell, Hon. A. E. Haddon

Helsinki Declaration on European Security and Co-operation, 1293, 1466, 1471-5, 1757-61; motion that Senate support Canadian government's position re territorial status quo in Europe, 1814; agreed to, 1814

- Cooperation in field of economics, science, technology and environment, 1473
- Disputes, peace solutions for, 1757
- Equal rights and self-determination of peoples, 1472
- Exchange of observers, 1473
- Families, uniting of, 1758
- Humanitarian and other fields, 1473
- Human rights, 1757
- Improvement of working conditions for journalists, 1474
- Inviolability of frontiers, 1472
- Journalists, visa and travel difficulties, 1758
- London Economist* article re deficiencies in Declaration, 1474-5
- Matters related to giving effect to certain principles, 1473
- Mediterranean, 1757
- Military manoeuvres, 1757
- Newspapers featuring articles on Conference, 1757-60
- New York Times* article, 1757

Helsinki Declaration on European Security and Co-operation - Concluded

Nobel Peace Prize winner, refusal of USSR to permit acceptance of award, 1760-1

Letter from Senator Forsey re, 1761

Obligation to obey international law, 1757

Peking Review article on USSR disregard of agreements, 1760

Prior notification of major military movements, 1473

Process of detente, 1757

Reunification of families, 1473-4

Protest on Parliament Hill against Rumanian government, 1473

Security, 1757

Sovereign equality, respect for right inherent in sovereignty, 1472

Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, 1472-3

Statements by leaders of various nations, 1758

Threat or use of force, 1757

Toronto Globe and Mail article - The Brutal Reality of Brezhnev's Policy, 1759

Tourism, youth meetings, education and culture exchanges, 1758

Trade, 1757

Travel for personal or professional reasons, 1474

USSR, 1758-61

Invasion of other countries, 1759

Military power, 1761

Violation of treaties and agreements, 1758-61

Warsaw Pact, phases of strategic plan, 1759-60

Disunity of the West, 1759-60

Global democratic peace, 1760

Period of peace co-existence, Khrushchev's policies of de-Stalinization, 1759

Social change, 1759-60

Speakers: Senators

Forsey, Eugene A., 1293, 1466, 1471-5

Yuzyk, Paul, 1757-61

Hicks, Hon. Henry D.

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 111-16

Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 557-8, 559

Compensation to victims of crime, 557

Disclosure of further evidence after conviction, 558

Respect for law, 557, 558

Royal prerogative, 558, 559

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No.2) C-84, 2413, 2436

Deterrent aspect, 2413

Law and order, respect for, 2413

Terrorists, 2413

Victims of murder, 2413

Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, 765-6

Farm Credit bill C-34, 885

Age limit, 885

Scrutiny of applications, 885

Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 111

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 366-8, 1017

Penalties for possession or trafficking of drugs, 367

Summary conviction, 367

Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1161

Damaging side effects of chemical spraying, 1161

Federal responsibility, 1161

Hicks, Hon. Henry D. - *Concluded

Greetings from Hon. Paul Martin, High Commissioner to the United Kingdom, 658

Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2337

Inflation, 112-13

Bay of Fundy power potential, 112

Energy costs, 112-13

High cost of money, 112

National petroleum corporation to control prices and distribution, 112

Trans-Canada pipeline, 112

Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, 151-2

National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 744, 754

National lottery, proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada, 2168-9

Gullibility of the poor in relation to lotteries, 2169

Merits of lotteries, question of, 2169

Method of authorization of, 2168

Regressive taxation in relation to, 2169

Representation bill C-36, 438

Rules of the Senate, 1425

Science policy, 113-15

Defence Research Board, 114-15

Granting agencies, 113-15

Inter-Council Coordinating Committee, 115

National Research Council, 113-14

Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, 2205

Hockey

Russia-Canada series, 58-59; Press report of speech by Senator Godfrey, 98-99

Honey Bear Brewing Corporation Limited, refund of fees on proposed bill, 1782*House of Commons

Parliamentary representatives, executive and assistants, increase in appts., 435-6

Salaries of members of Parliament, opposition to increase in, 436

Senate and House of Commons, salaries and parliamentary secretaries, 847, 856-61, 868-80, 899

Senate and House of Commons, supplementary retirement benefits, 2177, 2186-7, 2193-6, 2203-07

Housing

Interest rates, 1313, 1314, 1327-8

National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 742, 743-57, 758

National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, 1667-81, 1712

See National housing

Hugessen, Hon. A. K., the late (Deceased Mar. 30/76)

Tributes, 2007

Iceland

Parliamentarians from Iceland, visitors to Senate, 2184

Immigration

Criminal law amendment (Crown liability, immigration, parole), 1714, 1730-3

Gulf Islands, British Columbia, ministerial discretion permits, 2322

Munsinger, Gerda, presence in Canada and appearance on CBC television program, 1007, 1013, 1034, 1073, 1239-40, 1256-7

Security, 1813, 1820, 1829-30

Immigration (Bill S-12)

- Appeal against deportation order, 166
- Deportee returning without minister's consent, 164-5, 166-7, 216-17, 230-1
- Employment of immigrants for manual or menial work, 196, 284, 286
- Haitians, 215
- Illegal activities of immigrants, 217, 232
- Ministerial power of discretion re indictment or summary conviction, 214
- Statistics on immigration and deportations, 196, 230-1, 232-3

Speakers: Senators

- Asselin, Martial, 194-5, 214, 215
- Buckwold, Sidney L., 165-6
- Croll, David A., 165, 166, 195-7, 244-5
- Forsey, Eugene A., 197-8
- Godfrey, John M., 167
- Greene, John J., 165
- Grosart, Allister, 197, 232, 244
- Laird, Keith, 164-5, 166, 230-2, 233
- Langlois, Leopold, 166, 213-19
- Perrault, Raymond J., 166-7, 197, 198
- Thompson, Andrew E., 166
- Yuzyk, Paul, 230

Immigration bill S-12. 1r, 136; 2r, 164-7, 194-8, 213-19, 222-3, 230-3; ref to com, 233; rep without amdt, 239; 3r, 244-5; Commons concurrence, 366; r.a., 397

Immigration policy

- Alcoholics, chronic, 1386
- Canada's need for immigrants, 1377
- Contagious diseases, 1386
- Crimes of moral turpitude, 1386
- Demographic factors, 1377
- Departmental organization, 1393
- Development assistance and the 'brain drain', 1379
- Drug addicts, 1386
- Economic factors, 1377
- Entry and exit controls, 1386-7
- Federal-provincial cooperation, 1393-4
- Foreign students, 1391-2
- Homosexuals, 1386
- Independent immigrants, 1382-3
- Managing immigration flows, 1380-1
- Mental illness and epilepsy, 1386
- Non-bona fide immigrants or non-immigrants, 1386-7
- Non-discrimination, 1379-80
- Prejudices regarding immigrants, 1378
- Prohibited classes, 1385
- Prostitutes, 1386
- Public charges, 1386
- Refugees, 1385
- Retardation, 1385
- Selection criteria, sponsored relatives, 1381-2
- Services for immigrants, 1392-3
- Special inquiry, appeal and deportation procedures, 1388-9
- Temporary workers, 1389-91

Immigration Policy, Special Senate Committee

Members, Senate, 643

Message from Commons, 584

Message to Commons, 592

Reports

Recommendation to extend date of submission of committee report to Oct. 31/75, 1006, 1021

Recommendation to extend date of submission of committee report to Nov. 14/75, 1306

Third report, 1375, 1376-94

Terms of reference, 584, 592

Unauthorized press release of confidential draft report of committee, 1285-6

Income tax

Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee authorized to study legislation prior to receipt of bills, 280, 298-9

Christian Evangelical Centre of Canada, action of National Revenue Department re, 2183-4, 2354-6

Income tax (Bill C-49)

Canada Savings Bonds bonus, 608

Construction industry, 612-13

Corporate tax, 612, 638

Economic conditions, 627-8, 634-5

GNP, 628, 629

Government expenditures, 628; forecast (1975-76), 628

Inflation, 628

Unemployment, 628

Foreign accrual property income, 611-12, 635

Interest and dividends, 607-08

Oil and mining industries, 609-11, 613-14, 616-20, 629-30, 635, 637, 639-40

Alberta, 617, 618, 632

BNA Act provisions re provincial natural resources, 630, 632

Coal mining, 619-20

Leduc well, 620

South African Coal, Oil and Gas Corporation, annual report, 619

Earned depletion, 610

Great Canadian Oil Sands, 619

Prices and production costs, 617-18, 620, 621

Pricing of Crude Oil: Economic and Strategic Guidelines for International Energy Policy, by Taki Rifai, 618

Royalties, 609-10, 617, 629, 632, 636-40

Tax rate, 610, 617

Withdrawal of companies from Canada, 630, 637

Write-off of exploration expenses, 610-11

Pension deductions, 608

Personal exemption, 607, 638

Reduction, effect on federal treasury, 638

Registered home ownership plan, 608-09

Registered retirement savings plan, 612

Roll-over provisions re amalgamated corporations, 612

Statistics on taxpayers, 628-9

Transfer of age exemption to spouse, 608

Income tax (Bill C-49) - Concluded*Speakers: Senators

Benidickson, W.M., 613, 614
 Buckwold, Sidney L., 613
 Flynn, Jacques, 627-30, 647-9
 Grosart, Allister, 613, 634-7
 Hayden, Salter A., 606-14, 635, 638-40, 645-7, 654-5
 Hays, Harry, 620-1
 Lamontagne, Maurice, 648, 649
 Langlois, Leopold, 637-8
 Manning, Ernest C., 630-4
 Perrault, Raymond J., 649-52
 Prowse, J. Harper, 616-20, 652-3

Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49. 1r, 583; 2r, 606-14, 616-21, 627-40; ref to com, 640; rep without amdt, 645; m for 3r, 645-9, m in amdt neg, 649-56; 3r, 656; r.a., 656

Income tax (Bill C-65)

Alberta royalties, 1418-19, 1422, 1441
 Contributions to registered parties and candidates, 1421
 Cooperatives, 1420
 Interest and dividends credit for man and wife, 1419, 1422, 1440
 Investment tax credit, 1421, 1440
 Joint return for man and wife, 1422
 Registered retirement savings plans, 1420, 1440-1
 Resource allowance in respect of oil and gas wells or mineral resources, 1417-18, 1441-2
 Sharing of $1.50 price increase in barrel of oil under modified system and including Alberta's royalty reduction, 1418-19, 1422

Speakers: Senators

Hayden, Salter A., 1417-22
 Lang, Daniel, 1421, 1422
 Manning, Ernest C., 1422
 Smith, George I., 1439-42
 Walker, David J., 1418, 1420

Income Tax bill (No. 2) C-65. 1r, 1403; 2r, 1417-22, 1439-42; ref to com, 1442; rep without amdt, 1454; 3r, 1459; r.a., 1467

Income tax (Bill C-58)

Advertisements directed to Canadian broadcasts by a foreign broadcasting undertaking, 2252
 Advertising revenue, 1837
 Advertising space in non-Canadian periodicals, exemption for tax purposes, 2252, 2270
 Background of legislation on foreign periodicals, 1837
 Bill C-118 (1965) providing exemption for advertising costs, 2024
 Excerpt from speech of Senator Flynn re, 2024, 2025
 Broadcasting, 1842, 1865-6, 1870, 1882, 1909, 1928, 1932, 1944, 1998-2002, 2015, 2025, 2026, 2253, 2270, 2272, 2296-7, 2298-9, 2315, 2326-9
 Advertising of prime time, survey report of Bureau of Broadcast Measurements, 2031-2
 Bellingham Station, 1872, 1882, 1928, 1944-5, 1998-2002, 2026
 Buffalo stations, presentation to committee, 2298-9
 Canadian advertising expenditures, 1870, 1928
 Canadian Association of Broadcasters' document, 1842
 CITY-TV, Toronto, 2297

Income tax (Bill C-58) - ContinuedBroadcasting. - Concluded

- CRTC, 1870, 2031-2, 2298, 2329
- GATT provisions re exemption of tax from imported products defined as services, 2027
- Global television, letter from President, 2296-7
- KVOS-TV, 2315
- Mexican border station, 2000
- Reciprocal agreements between governments, 1928
- UHF-TV, Vancouver, 2000
- Warmetco station, 1999
- Canada-US relations, 1844, 1870-1, 1872, 1883, 1909, 1929, 1932, 1944-5, 1955-6, 1958, 1994, 2000, 2005-06, 2015, 2029-30, 2254, 2327, 2328-9
- Canadian advertising in Time, 1993, 2015
- Canadian companies controlled in US, 1929
- Canadian Forum*, excerpt from article by Peter Newman, 2029
- Canadian Journal of Political Science*, excerpt from, 1839
- Canadian ownership of and advertising in periodicals, percentage stipulations, 1926, 1927, 1932, 1939
- Canadian Periodical Publishers' Association, letter from, 1944
- Chatelaine*, 1957
- Christian Science Monitor* article re Time's editorial policy, 1840
- Competitive options, 1862
- Content*, excerpt from Editor's speech on CBC Capital report, 2032
- Criteria for deduction for tax purposes, 1837
- Destruction of competition, 1844
- Detroit Free Press* article re 'magazine dispute', 1909-10
- Difficulties of small publications, 1865
- Discussions between Leader of the Government and Committee Chairman re amdts, 2274-5
- Dumping of textiles in Sherbrooke, Quebec, by American-owned subsidiary, 1942
- Economic aspects of legislation, 1844
- Effective date of provisions re periodicals, 2253, 2272
- Excerpt from committee hearings re Manning Timber Products Ltd. v Minister of National Revenue, 2293-4
- Excerpts from Milton's Aeropagitica and Mill's Liberty, 2325
- Foreign Investment Review Agency, 1909
- Foreign investments contributing to Canadian revenue, 2005
- Fredericton Gleaner* article, 1841
- Freedom of the press, interference with, 1927, 1933, 2325
- Global Television, letter from President, 2296-7
- Globe and Mail*, 1838
- Article re Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee and Chairman, 2300
- Interest Group Tactics and the Politics of Foreign Investment: The Time-Reader's Digest Case Study, 1839
- Letter from Stephen S. LaRue, president of Time Canada, 1839
- Letter sent to Prime Minister by writers, photographers, etc., 1838
- Maclean's* magazine, 1909, 2028
- Presentation to committee, 2295-6, letter from President, 2296
- Magazines Canada*, 2295
- Mass Media Committee report, excerpts from, 1839, 1840, 1841-3, 1862, 1865
- Mass media reaction, 1865
- MD of Canada*, 1881-2, 1926, 1957, 2004-05, 2015, 2027, 2253, 2272, 2300
- Mexican President's statement re relations with US, 1995-6
- Ministerial rulings, 1871, 1872, 1882-3, 2025
- Montreal Gazette* editorial, 2299
- Newsweek*, lack of Canadian advertising, 2027-8
- O'Leary Commission, 2326
- Potash industry, Globe and Mail article re, 1909

Income tax (Bill C-58) - Concluded

- Recommendations of committee, 2254
- Revitalizing of Canadian magazines, 1838
- Rights of Canadian broadcasters and publishers, 2295
- Rights of taxpayers to protection of court, 2294
- Saturday Night*, 2296
- Speech of Richard Roehmer, P.C., Toronto, 1841
- 'Substantially the same', definition of, 2252-3, 2271, 2293, 2301, 2314, 2329
- Telegraph-Journal*, St. John, NB, article re Canada-US border TV war, 1945
- Time and Reader's Digest*, 1837-8, 1842-5, 1862-3, 1865, 1869-70, 1871-2, 1882-3, 1909, 1927, 1932, 1938-9, 1942, 1943, 1956-7, 1993-8, 2004, 2005, 2024-7, 2270-1, 2293, 2294, 2299, 2301, 2314-15, 2328-9
- Advertising rates to Canadian advertisers, 1943, 2038
- Dumping of cost-free content, 1943
- Subscription rate, Canada-US, 1995-6, 2038
- Toronto Broadcasting stations, prime time availabilities, 1864
- Toronto Sun* article by John Slinger, 1838
- Women's magazines published in US and circulated in Canada, 1957

Speakers: Senators

- Austin, Jack, 2314-15, 2337
- Beaubien, L.P., 1939
- Buckwold, Sidney L., 2328-30
- Carter, Chesley W., 1872
- Cook, Eric, 1848, 2293-4
- Davey, Keith, 1836-42, 1843, 1845, 1864, 1865, 2027-32, 2294-2301, 2327, 2328
- Desruisseaux, Paul, 1865-6
- Flynn, Jacques, 2024-7, 2337-8
- Forsey, Eugene A., 2015
- Greene, John J., 2325-6
- Grosart, Allister, 1956, 1958, 2395, 2396, 2398-2400
- Hayden, Salter A., 1862-5, 1945-6, 2252-5, 2269-75, 2389-2400, 2401-05
- Hicks, Henry D., 2337
- Laird, Keith, 1908-10
- Manning, Ernest C., 1931-3, 2326-7, 2328
- McElman, Charles, 1938-46
- McIlraith, George, 1925-9
- Paterson, Norman McL., 2301
- Perrault, Raymond J., 1992-2002, 2274, 2337, 2396-7
- Rowe, Frederick William, 1955-8
- Smith, George I., 1881-3, 2395, 2397-8
- van Roggen, George C., 1869-73
- Walker, David J., 1842-5, 1848, 2393-5

Income Tax Bill (No. 3) C-58. 1r, 1792; 2r, 1836-45, 1848, 1862-6, 1869-73, 1881-3, 1908-10, 1925-9, 1931-3, 1938-46, 1955-8, 1992-2002, 2004-06, 2014-15, 2024-33; ref to com, 2033; rep with amdts, 2252-5, 2269-75, 2293-2301, 2313-15, 2325-30, 2337; m to ref rep back to com, 2337, agreed, 2338; further rep of com without amdt, 2389-98, 2401-05; 3r, 2398-2400; r.a., 2450

Income tax conventions

- Accruing property income, 1790
- Capital gains, 1790
- Countries with which Canada has concluded conventions, 1794
- Federal-provincial jurisdiction, 1796-7
- Prohibition against discrimination, 1790, 1797

Income tax conventions - *Concluded

- Supplementary agreements, 1789
- Taxpayer position in country without convention, 1794, 1798
- Teachers' tax exemption, 1790
- Withholding tax on dividends, interest payments and royalties, 1789, 1790
  - Artistic works, 1794
- Speakers: Senators
  - Burchill, G. Percival, 1796
  - Flynn, Jacques, 1798
  - Grosart, Allister, 1793-6
  - Lang, Daniel A., 1789-90, 1796-8

Income Tax Conventions bill S-32. 1r, 1777; 2r, 1789-90, 1793-8; ref to com, 1798; rep without amdt, 1867; 3r, 1881; Commons amds, 2236-7, 2244; g.a., 1301

Indian oil and gas

- Alberta oil royalties to Indian Bands, 337
- Consultation with Indian Bands, 352, 426
- Excerpt from Commons committee proceedings, 352
- Oil prices and increased revenue from, 337-8
- Speakers: Senators
  - Choquette, Lionel, 351-2
  - Flynn, Jacques, 426
  - Laird, Keith, 426
  - McDonald, A. Hamilton, 337-8, 352-3

Indian Oil and Gas bill C-15. 1r, 325; 2r, 337-8, 351-3; ref to com, 353; rep without amdt, 402; 3r, 426; r.a., 467

Indians and Eskimos

- Alcoholism and drug addiction, 142-3
- Buffalo kill, 142
- Demonstration on Parliament Hill, 143
- Estimates for Indian economic development, 379
- Fishermen's assistance program, 142
- Great Lakes pollution, 142
- Housing rights under NHA, 751
- Indian women, loss of status on marriage to non-Indian, 898
- Land claims, 17
- Legal restrictions on former freedoms of livelihood, 142
- Manitoba Indian Brotherhood
  - Meetings with senators, 290-1
  - Request to appear before Senate committee, 315-16
- Money-poor and land-rich aspects of Indian life, 144
- Oil and gas, 325, 337-8, 351-3, 402, 426, 467
- Recruitment development program, 569
- Rights of MicMac Indians of Cross Point Reserve to fish Atlantic salmon, 2208, 2264
- Talent potential for sports, arts and Indian culture, 143
- Treaties, 142
- Voting franchise, 622

Industrial Development Bank, See Federal Business Development Bank bill C-14, 348, 368-71, 417-18, 426, 444, 467

Industry

- Construction empires, 36
- Forestry, devastation by Spruce budworm, 1158-68, 1169-70, 1218-20, 1230-2
- Labour unrest, 24, 36
- Sheet glass, 785-6
- Textile imports and effect on Canadian industry, 781-7, 791-3, 843-6, 901-02, 945-8, 975-9
- See* following items

Industry, textile and other imports affecting Canadian industry, 781-7, 791-3, 843-6, 901-02, 945-8, 975-9, 2045, 2055-6

- Anti-dumping procedures, 978
- Canadian textile problems, 2045, 2055-6
- Sheet glass

- Roumanian imports, 786
- Ville St. Laurent Co., 785, 786
- World surplus of flat glass, 786

Textiles

- Canadian Textile Commission briefs presented to government by various textile organizations (1974), 782
- Competition from textile imports, 782, 785
- Disregard of agreements by textile importing countries, 844
- Dollar value of imported suits or suiting, 901
- Dominion Textile Co. closing, 783
- Dumping of foreign textiles at depressed prices, 782-3
- Excerpt from speech of Hon. Mr. Pepin re government negotiations with other countries, 792
- GATT, provisions for protection of signatories, 781-2, 785, 786, 787
- Gazette* article on The Case for Textile Protection, 781
- Government concern and study of problem, 792, 901-02, 945
- Import control list and prices, 783-5, 901, 946
- Imports per capita, 782
- International trade deficit, 782, 975-6
- International Trade in Textiles, agreement re, 947
- Polyester and cotton-mixed imports, 783, 946, 977
- Quebec textile workers, 844
- Le Devoir* article re unemployment in Victoriaville, 844
- Representations and recommendations of union leaders, workers and producers, rejection of, 783-4
- Separatist leader's comments on CBC re government attitude towards secondary industry trade policies, 978
- Subsidies to other areas of industry, 785
- Textile and Clothing Board, role of, 946, 976-7
  - Inquiry into imports of certain fabrics and clothing, 946-7
  - Recommendations, lack of enforcement of, 845, 976-7
- Textile companies converting to import companies, 844
- Unemployment in Wellington District and other areas, 782, 786-7, 791, 844, 977-8
- USSR trading policy, 791
- Wages, Canada vs other countries, 844

Industry, textile and other imports affecting Canadian industry - *ConcludedSpeakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 843-6, 901, 971, 978-9
 Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 791-3
 Desruisseaux, Paul, 781-7, 901, 947-8, 974-8
 Perrault, Raymond J., 901-02, 945-8

Industry, Trade and Commerce Department

Authority provided under Statistics Act, 273-4
 Import analysis and examination of invoices, 273-4
 Imports, question of non-tariff barriers re, 399, 400
 Interdepartmental arrangement for access to information, 398-9
 Support services for industrial and trade development, 272-3

Speakers: Senators

Beaubien, L. P., 281
 Everett, Douglas D., 272-4, 349, 399-400
 Grosart, Allister, 304-06, 398-9
 Hayden, Salter A., 348-9

Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15. 1r, 243; 2r, 272-4, 281, 304-06; ref to com, 306; rep with amdts, 348-9, 368; 3r, 373, 398-400; r.a., 1134

Inflation, 15-16, 19, 72-74

Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, White Paper on, 1284, 1293, 1298-1303, 1319-30,
 1349-53, 1411-15
 Beef industry and prices, 122
 Cost-push inflation, 119
 Demand-pull inflation, 119
 Energy costs, 112-13
 Excerpts from paper prepared by George C. Baker, 112-13
 Food retailing industry, salaries, 879
 Food shortage and destitution in eastern countries, 117
 Government expenditures and control of, 16, 26, 27-28, 144-5, 182-3, 189-90, 199-200, 349-51, 1056
     Excerpt from publication of Canadian Economic Policy Committee, 1056
     Legislation, multiplicity and complexity of, 145
     Literature surplus, 145
     Provincial and municipal expenditures, 144-5
     Restraints, 141, 183
     Windsor Star article on, 144
 High cost of money, 112
 Japan, 246, 248
 Lumber industry, New Brunswick, 122
 Milk subsidy, 175-6
 National petroleum corporation to control prices and distribution, 112
 Oil prices, 72, 116
 Population control, 72
 Public debt, 190
 Responsibility of individuals, 119-20
 Restraints and controls, 876-7
 Structural inflation, 119
 Supply of goods and services, 116-17, 121, 183
 Tariff decreases, question of anti-inflationary effects of, 514-15
 Trade balance of payments, deficit, 877
 Trends affecting export markets, 877

Inflation, - Concluded

- Wage and price controls, 145
- World economic and political outlook, 117-18
- See Anti-inflation,
  - Canadian economy,
  - Economic conditions and prospects.

Information bill (Right to Information) C-225, ref to Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 467

Information Canada

- Inaccuracies in publication regarding Governors General and Prime Ministers, 1757, 2003

Inman, Hon. F, Elsie

- Birthday felicitations, 348
- Crime and violence, 1255
  - Crime increase, 1255
  - Firearms, police use of, 1255
  - Violence depicted in life styles, 1255
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, tribute on occasion of resignation from the Senate, 967
- International Women's Year, 1346-7
  - Background of women's role during past centuries, 1346
  - Leadership in industry, professions, arts and sciences, 1346
  - Provincial jurisdiction in matters of property laws, civil rights and education, 1346
- Kickham, Hon. Thomas J., the late, 324
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1410

Inquiries, calling the attention of the Senate to matters of national and international interest

- Aging, the anatomy of Special Senate Committee report, 146-9, 320-3, 516-18
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation TV program 'Les Beaux Dimanches', 225-6, 1099, 1118-20, 1127-9
- Canadian economy, Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1284, 1293, 1298-1303, 1312-14, 1319-30, 1349-53
- Combines, planned takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd., of Argus Corporation Ltd., inquiry dropped, 1063-4
- Competition policy in Canada and the Combines Investigation Act, 109-10, 663-6, 675-84, 1121-2, 1135
- Constitution of Canada
  - Patriation, correspondence between the Prime Minister of Canada and the First Ministers of the Provinces on the subject of, 2079-86
- Consumer Credit and Cost of Living, Special Joint Committee (1967), implementation of recommendations contained in report, 238-41
- Corporations and Labour Unions Returns Act, report of Ministry of Industry, Trade and Commerce, 2059-61, 2108-09
- Economy of Canada, 1012, 1067-72, 1081-2, 1113-17
- European Community, Canada's claim for compensation re loss of preferential access of Canadian commodities to British market, 579-80, 661-2, 671
- European Parliament, Strasbourg and Brussels meetings, 307-13, 316-20, 329-33
- Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1158-63, 1169-70, 1218-20, 1230-2, 1816
- Free trade, an economic consideration for Canada, 1738-41
- Habitat, United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, report of Canadian National Committee, 1959-64
- Industry, textile imports affecting Canadian industry, 781-7, 791-3, 843-6, 901-02, 974-9; subject matter ref to Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 979
- International Women's Year, 671-4, 836-8, 896-9

Inquiries, calling the attention of the Senate to matters of national and international interest - Concluded

- Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, Florida conference, 2221-2, 2224-33
- Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, Quebec City conference, 1137-43, 1145-55
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Columbo conference, 984-8
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Tokyo conference, 234-8, 245-9
- Labour, working poor in Canada, 2019-23, 2154-8
- Mexico, communique of Parliamentary delegation to Canada, 1874, 1877-8
- Mexico, visit of Canadian Parliamentarians to, 775-7, 852-3, 930-3
- National lottery, proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada, 2160-3, 2168-9
- New Brunswick, economic conditions, 1750-4, 1817-20, 1821, 2009-13, 2015-18, 2033
- North Atlantic Assembly, London conference, 342-7, 362-5, 456-9
- Public Service, action of Treasury Board in reclassification of economists, sociologists and statisticians, 2318-21
- Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation for maintenance, 501-04, 537-40, 567-9, 603, 954-5, Order withdrawn, 966
- Social welfare, distribution of income, 2144-9, see also appendix of May 19/75
- Television and radio coverage of Senate and committee proceedings, 1365-6, 1483-4, 1487-8
  - Order discharged and inquiry withdrawn, 2099
- Transportation
  - British North America Act as it pertains to transportation, 2049-54, 2063-6, 2070, 2106-08, 2115-18, 2196-8, 2217-21, 2333-4
- Work Ethic in Canada, 281-8, 339-42, 474-8, 518

Inquiries, general

- British Trade Mission offices in Canada, 206, 252
  - Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, appearance of Gerda Munsinger on television program, 1034, 1073, 1239-40, 1256-7
  - Christian Evangelical Centre of Canada, action of National Revenue Department re, 2183-4, 2354-6
  - Federal-provincial relations, dispute re resource revenue taxation, inquiry withdrawn, 660
  - Indian and Eskimo recruitment development program, 569
  - Parliament Buildings, East Block renovations, 241; inquiry dropped, 279
- See Questions*

Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, Standing Senate Committee*Budgets of Committees

- Agriculture, 348
- Banking, Trade and Commerce, 348, 524-5, 956, 1502, 1781, 2119
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, 525, 1088, 1624
- Foreign Affairs, 348, 1781
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs, 525-6, 795
- National Finance, 525, 795, 1088, 1337, 1781, 2119
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, 525, 795, 956, 1502
- Science Policy, 160, 348, 795, 1088, 1244, 1261, 2119
- Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1973-74), ref to com, 192
- Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1974-75), ref to com, 1005
- Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1975-76), ref to com, 2167
- Consideration of matters without reference by the Senate, 109
- Inter-Parliamentary associations, resolution re sharing of expenses of, 1493-4
- Intersessional authority, 505, 576-7, 770-3, 815-16
- Members, 96
- Orders of the Day, notification to senator of item standing in his name, 2123
- Regulations re attendance of senators, ref to com, 951-4

Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, Standing Senate Committee - Concluded

Reports

- Committee budgets, 160, 348, 524-5, 795, 956, 1088, 1244, 1261, 1337, 1502, 1624, 1781
- Regulations re attendance of senators, 1781-2, 1790-1, 1911-13; m that rep be ref back to com, 1913, 1917-19, 1933-6, m neg, 2118, rep adopted, 2118
- Salary revisions, report tabled, 2261

International Air Transport Association bill S-18. 1r, 265; 2r, 301-03; ref to com, 303; rep without amdt, 373; 3r, 382; r.a., 581

International organizations

Privileges and immunities, 934, 957-8, 973

International Women's Year, 671-4, 836-8, 896-9, 1346-7

- Abortion law, 837, 838, 898
- Agricultural activities, need for training of women in time of food crisis, 837-8
- Anti-discrimination legislation, 897
- Asia and Africa, male domination, 837
- Background of women's role during past centuries, 1346
- Honorary aide-de-camp to Governor General, Colonel Mary Vallance, 672
- Indian women, loss of status on marriage to non-Indian, 898
- Inequalities between men and women, 838, 897
  - University graduates, 898
- Leadership of women in industry, professions, arts and sciences, 1346
- Protest speech of student at public meeting contest, 673-4
- Provincial jurisdiction in matters of property laws, civil rights and education, 1346
- Royal Commission on the Status of Women, 672, 897
- Scandinavian countries, Belgium, France and Germany, role of women, 836
- Social revolution by women, 896
- Song of Equality, by Jacqueline Lemay, 673
- Speaker of the Senate, Hon. Renaude Lapointe, 671-2
- Statement of Helvi Sipilä, UN Assist. Sect. General for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs, 836, 896
- UN Charter (1945), 896
- UN conference on ways and means to end discrimination against women, 672
- UN disregard of women's rights and failure to implement ideals of founders, 672, 896
- UN resolution re International Women's Year, 672, 836, 896
- 'Why Not' campaign, 896
  - Comments of Hon. Marc Lalonde, women MPs and others, 672-3
- Women's Program, Dept. of State, 897-8
- Women's responsibility in economics, social and cultural development, worldwide friendly relations and cooperation, 836
- Women's wages in Italy, 837
- Working women, heads of families, 898
- Speakers: Senators
  - Fergusson, Muriel McQueen, 896-9
  - Inman, F. Elsie, 1346-7
  - Norrie, Margaret, 836-8
  - Quart, Josie D., 671-4

Interparliamentary Advisory Committee

Canadian delegations to conferences, committee to study and rule on, 1490, 1494

Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, Florida conference, 2221-2, 2224-33

- Agenda, 2224
- Canada-US relations, 2222
- Canadian Centennial coins, presentation to US delegates, 2222
- Committee I, 2224, 2225
  - Canadian cultural legislation and regulations, 2227
  - Eastport, 2226
  - Flathead River, 2225-6
  - Garrison Diversion project, 2225
  - Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement, 2225
  - Law of the Sea, 2226-7
  - Richelieu-Lake Champlain, 2225
  - Skagit, 2226
  - Water boundaries 2226
  - West Coast pollution, 2226
- Committee II, 2224, 2227-30
  - Ant-inflation program, 2228
  - Canada-US automotive agreement, 2227-8
  - Canadian cultural legislation and regulation, 2229-30
  - Controls on trade with Cuba, 2229
  - Extension to Canada of US restrictions on political contributions, 2230
  - Foreign Investment Review Act, 2229
  - Multi-lateral trade negotiations, 2230
  - Saskatchewan takeover of potash companies, 2228-9
  - Trans-Border economic issues, 2227
  - US dumping charges and countervailing duties, 2228
- Committee III, 2222, 2230-2
  - Agriculture, 2232
  - Energy, 2222, 2230-2
- Plenary meeting, 2232
- Speaker: Senator
  - Macnaughton, Alan A., 2221-3, 2224-33

Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, Quebec City conference, 1137-43, 1145-55

- Committees and members of, 1138
- Delegates, 1138
- Designation of meeting places and timetables, 1138
- Energy resources, 1141-2
  - Alaska reserves, 1141
  - Coal reserves, 1141
  - Nuclear energy, 1142
  - Prices, 1141; controversy re, 1141
  - Shortfall in deliveries to US, 1141
  - Solar and geothermal energy, harnessing of tides, heat pumps, 1142
- Excerpt from speech by Prime Minister Trudeau, 1140
- Excerpt from speech by US Deputy Secretary of State, 1140
- Reform of Canadian section of Group, 1137-40
- Trans-border problems, 1139
- US Congress contacts, importance of, 1139-40
- Speakers: Senators
  - Macnaughton, Alan A., 1137-40
  - van Roggen, George C., 1140-3

Inter-Parliamentary Union, Colombo, Sri Lanka conference, 984-8

- Aid to developing countries, 985-8

- Sri Lanka and Pakistan, 985, 986-8

- Tarbela Dam, 987-8

- Birth control, 987, 988

- Canada's esteem in foreign countries, 985

- Disarmament, 984

- Drugs, 984-5

- Economic conditions in Canada, 985-6

- Economic cooperation, 984

- Education and training in resource development, 984, 988

- Human rights, 984

- Living standards, 985

- Population statistics, 986

- Poverty problems, 987

Speakers: Senators

- Buckwold, Sidney L., 988

- Rowe, Frederick William, 984-8

Inter-Parliamentary Union, Tokyo conference, 234-8, 245-9

- Arab-Israeli conflict, 236

- Briefing of delegates, 237

- Japan, economic expansion, 245-7; employment standards, 246-7; inflation, 246, 248

- Labour unions and strikes in Canada, effect on foreign investments, 245-6

- Middle East, 247-8; Canadian peacekeeping force, 247

- Organizational meetings on energy, iron and steel, education, environment and pollution, 235

- Population trends and economic and social development, 235-6, 237

- Resolutions presented, 235-6

- UN Conference on World Population, 236

Speakers: Senators

- Asselin, Martial, 245-8

- Molgat, Gildas L., 234-8

- Robichaud, Louis-J., 248-9

Intersessional authority of Senate, 505, 576-7, 770-3, 815-16*Investigations in Parliament, 1398-1403, 1409, 1476-9*Iraq

- Mr. Elkadi Kw Kussai, visitor to Senate, 1742

Ireland, Republic of

- President Erskine Childers, death of, 265

Israel

- Canada-Israel income tax convention, 1792, 1793-8

Italy

- Earthquake victims, Canadian government assistance to, 2111

Japan, 234-8, 245-9

- Delegation from House of Councillors, visitors to Senate, 2364

- Economic expansion, 245-7

- Employment standards, 246-7

Japan - Concluded

Inflation, 246, 248

Inter-Parliamentary Union, Tokyo conference, 234-8, 245-9

Ohara, Mr. Yasunaga, National Diet Library, visitor to Senate, 299

Jerome, Hon. James

Appointment to office of Speaker of House of Commons, 2

Joint Committees, see Committees*Judges

Alberta, consolidation of district court divisions, 1040-1

Annuities for judges and deceased judges' spouses, 1052

Appts. according to provincial volume of litigation, 1042

Canadian Judicial Council, 1052

Fringe benefits, 1041-2

Income tax, 1041

Newfoundland court of appeal, 1041

Ontario, workload of county court judges, 1041

Pensions, 1052

Prince Edward Island, consolidation of county and supreme courts, 1041

Restriction on earnings from extra-judicial functions, 1041

Salary increases, 1041, 1043, 1051-2

Selection of judges, 1041, 1042-3, 1051

Superior Court workload, 1052

Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 1051-2

Choquette, Lionel, 1080

Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 1042

Flynn, Jacques, 1053, 1080

Laird, Keith, 1040-2, 1053

Molson, Hartland de M., 1042

Walker, David J., 1042-3

Judges bill C-47. 1r, 1005; 2r, 1040-3, 1051-3; ref to com, 1053; rep without amdt, 1066; 3r, 1080; r.a., 1095

Judson, Hon. Wilfred, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada

Royal assent, 1281

Justice, administration of, allegations of interference by cabinet ministers, 1825-6, 1846-8, 1857-9, 1890-3, 1920-2, 1930-1

Kickham, Hon. Thomas J. (Deceased Dec. 1/74)

Tributes, 324

King George V Cancer Fund

Assets value, 1482

Background of fund, 1481, 1482

Payment of assets to National Cancer Institute of Canada, 1481

Trustees of fund, 1481

Trust fund provisions re transfer of funds, 1481-2

Speakers: Senators

Buckwold, Sidney L., 1483

Cottreau, Ernest G., 1481-2, 1483

Yuzyk, Paul, 1482-3

King George V Cancer Fund Winding-Up bill C-76. 1r, 1467; 2r, 1480-3; 3r, 1486; r.a., 1617

Labour

- Air transport, flight delays due to labour dispute, 2062-3
- Basic hourly rate for grain handlers, 82; disparity in labour rates, 82
- BC strike legislation, 1326-8
  - Labour movement reaction, 1327-8
  - Supermarkets, 1327; Canada Safeway, 1327
- Canadian Labour Congress, possibility of general strike, 2130
- Canadian Labour Congress proposals re 'Attack on Inflation - a program of national action', 1323-4
- Construction empires, 36
- Construction industry in Quebec, pardon granted to Dede Desjardins, 1053, 1066
- Corporation and Labour Unions Returns Act, report of Ministry of Industry, Trade and Commerce, 2059-61
- Defiance by unions of court orders, 2237
- Essential services, proposals re collective bargaining, prohibition against strikes, and compulsory arbitration, 79-80
- Government intervention in dispute and effects of, 82
- Grain inspectors' dispute, settlement of, 336
- Industrial Inquiry Commission, 93
- Japan, employment standards, 246-7
- Labour unrest, 24, 36
- Loss of working days through conciliation delays, 81-82
- Montreal Police Force, threatened strike, 849
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1285, 1319, 1355, 1370-1, 1409-10, 1416-17, 1428-31
- Price controls vs wage controls, 1322
- Problems of equity in temporary freeze of wages and controls, 1322
- Public service, strike of general labour and trades group, 642
- St. Lawrence Ports operations, 817-27, 832
- Strike of longshoremen in Quebec, back-to-work legislation, question, 833, 838-9, 840, 846, 849, 855, 867, 888, 900-01, 912
- Trades Union Congress of Britain, statement of policy, 1328-9
- Unions and strikes, effect on foreign investment in Canada, 245-6, 600
- West Coast grain handling operations, 76, 77-94, 95
- West Coast ports operations, 723, 724-30, 731
- Withdrawal of services by longshoremen at Montreal, 1006-07
- Working poor in Canada, 2019-23, 2154-8
- See* St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-58, 817-27, 832
  - West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12, 76, 77-93, 95,
  - West Coast Ports Operations bill C-56, 723, 724-30, 731,
  - Working poor in Canada, 2019-23, 2154-8.

Lafond, Hon. Paul C.

- Canada Year Book, 1822-3
- Distribution of document in Senate chamber, question of privilege, 644
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-370, 527
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Bruce) bill C-228, 601
- North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1727-8
  - NATO defence, 1726, 1727
  - Canada's contribution, 1727
- Scientific Committee, Subcommittee on Major Concerns of Modern Society, 1727

Lafond, Hon. Paul C. - Concluded

- North Atlantic Assembly, London conference, 456-9
- Economic Committee discussions, 457-8
  - Defence budgets, 457
  - Energy supplies, 457, 458
  - Germany, inflationary problems and labour unions, 458
  - Inflation, 457
  - Multinational corporations and Atlantic Alliance, 457-8
  - Recommendations, 457
  - USSR, currency resources from exports of oil, wood, coal and weapons, 458
- Regulations respecting attendance of senators, 1791, 1933-4
  - Committee review of reasons for absence, 1791
  - Senate vacancies and workload, 1791
- Representation bill 1974 C-36, 424
- Senate business, 924

Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C. (deceased Feb. 13/75)

- Tributes, 532-4

Laird, Hon. Keith

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 144-6
- Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank bill S-24, 1062-3
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2265-6, 2280, 2289
  - Land ownership, 2265-6
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 144
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1014, 1016-17
  - 'Give', definition of, 1016-17
- Immigration bill S-12, 164-5, 166, 230-2, 233
  - Appeal against deportation order, 166, 231
  - Deportation statistics, 230-1, 233
  - Ignoring of deportation order, 164-5, 166-7, 231
  - Illegal activities, 232
  - Indictment or summary conviction, 231
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1908-10
  - Broadcasting, 1909
  - Canada-US relations, 1909
  - Detroit Free Press* article re 'magazine dispute', 1909-10
  - Foreign Investment Review Agency, 1909
  - Maclean's* magazine, 1909
  - Potash industry, Globe and Mail article re, 1909
  - Time* and Reader's Digest, 1909
- Indian Oil and Gas bill C-15, 426
- Inflation, 144-5
  - Government expenditures and control of, 144; provincial and municipal, 144-5
  - Legislation, multiplicity and complexity of, 145
  - Literature surplus, 145
  - Windsor Star* article on, 144
- Wage and price controls, 144
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee
  - Budgets of committees
    - Agriculture, 348
    - Banking, Trade and Commerce, 348, 524-5, 956, 1502, 1781, 2119
    - Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, 525, 1088, 1624
    - Foreign Affairs, 384, 1781
    - Legal and Constitutional Affairs, 525, 795
    - National Finance, 525, 795, 1088, 1337, 1781, 2119

Laird, Hon. Keith - *Concluded

- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee - Concluded
  - Budgets of committees - Concluded
    - Regulations and other Statutory instruments, 525, 795, 956, 1502
    - Science Policy, 160, 348, 795, 1088, 1244, 1261, 2119
  - Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1973-74) ref to com, 192
  - Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1974-75) ref to com, 1005
  - Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1975-76) ref to com, 2167
  - Consideration of matters without reference by the Senate, 109
  - Reports
    - Regulations respecting attendance of senators, 1781-2, 1790-1, 1911-13, m that rep be ref back to com, 1911-13, 1917-18, 1933-6, 2118
    - Salary revisions, report tabled, 2261
- Inter-Parliamentary associations, resolution re sharing of expenses of, 1493-4
- Judges bill C-47, 1040-2, 1053
  - Alberta, consolidation of district court divisions, 1040-1
  - Appointments according to provincial volume of litigation, 1042
  - Fringe benefits, 1041-2
  - Income tax, 1041
  - Newfoundland court of appeal, 1041
  - Ontario, workload of county court judges, 1041
  - Prince Edward Island, consolidation of county and supreme courts, 1041
  - Restriction on earnings from extra-judicial functions, 1041
  - Salary increases, 1041
  - Selection of judges, 1041
- Law Clerk and Parliamentary Counsel of the Senate
  - Appointment of Raymond du Plessis, Esq., Q.C., 2048-9
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
  - Reports
    - Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001, rep without amdt, 1244
- National Finance Committee
  - Reports
    - Estimates, Supplementary (B) year ending Mar. 31/76, 1937, 1948-53
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments
  - Newspaper article re Chairman Senator Forsey, question of privilege, 794-5
- Regulations respecting attendance of senators, 1781-2, 1790-1, 2118
  - Absence beyond 21 days, 1790
  - Committee review of reasons for absence, 1791
  - Official business, specifying of, 1790-1
- Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, 1208
- Rules of the Senate
  - Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, 1426
  - Senate speech quoted verbatim in Commons, 1359-60
  - Suspension of rule 95 re private bills, 1208
- Senate and House of Commons Act
  - Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, 953
- Unemployment insurance, 145
  - Pensioners, 145

Lalonde, Hon. Marc, Minister of Health and Welfare

- Medical Care bill C-68, 2366-75
  - Ceiling on federal contributions, 2367, 2369-70, 2372-3
  - Costs (1975), 2369; provincial per capita costs, 2370-1
  - Federal-provincial conferences, 2367, 2373
  - Immigration of physicians, 2367

Lalonde, Hon. Marc, Minister of Health and Welfare - *ConcludedMedical Care bill C-68 - *Concluded

- Nursing homes, 2374
- Physicians' fees, 2372
- Provincial percentage increases (1975-76), 2368
- Psychiatrists and physiotherapists, 2368-9
- Quebec, 2358-9, 2370
- Seat belts vs accidents and medical care, 2367-8

Lamontagne, Hon. Maurice, P.C.

- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, 2112-13, 2114
  - Backlog of appeals to board, 2112
  - Export levy, 2113, 2114
  - Increase in workers affected by guidelines, 2112
  - Labour leaders' influence on inflationary trends, 2112
  - Price increases vs cost-of-living adjustments, 2112
  - Small industries, 2113
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, La Presse report of alleged statement by Senator Lamontagne, question of privilege, 1165-6
- Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, 761-5, 766, 908-09, 910, 911
  - Institution, definition of, 765-6
  - Prohibition of illegal exports into Canada, 764
    - Articles made by person now deceased or which have been in Canada 35 yrs. or more, 764, 765
    - UNESCO convention, 764
  - Review Board, 763-4, 908-09, 910
  - System of export control, 762-4
    - Determination of fair cash price, 762, 764
    - Financial assistance for custodial institutions, 763
    - Ministerial permits of bulk licences, 763
    - Objects of national heritage, 762
    - Permits, 762, 908, 909
  - Tax incentives for sale or donation of cultural property to custodial institutions, 763
    - Exemptions, 763
  - UK legislation, 761, 763, 765
  - Value of articles such as manuscripts, etc., determination of, 765
- Economy of Canada, 1012, 1067-72
  - Cost-push inflation, 1072
  - Countercyclical policies, 1068, 1072
  - Crude oil exports, ceiling on, 1072
  - Current account deficit, 1071
  - Employment and unemployment, 1070
    - Excerpts from speeches relating to economic conditions (1966, 1970), 1068-9
  - Exports, decline due to work stoppages, 1070
  - Finance Minister's statements re fiscal policies, 1068-9, 1071
  - Gross national product, 1070
  - Housing market, 1069
  - Interest rates, 1069
  - Provincial deficits, 1071
  - Recessions (1953-74), 1067-8
  - Trade deficits re parts and accessories of motor vehicles, 1071
  - US economic conditions, 1069, 1070
  - US production of small cars affecting auto pact, 1071-2
- Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 648, 649
- National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 749, 751
  - Construction industry, stabilizing of, 751

Lamontagne, Hon. Maurice, P.C. - *Concluded

- Official Languages Act, rights of air pilots in Quebec, 2344-6
  - Motion re, 2344
- Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation by federal government, 964
- Rules of the Senate
  - Amendment to committee report after presentation to Senate, 908, 909
- Science policy
  - Commission on the Future, termination of mandate for, 1173, 1220
  - Data bank, 295
  - Excerpts from letters from Prime Minister and Deputy Secretary of the Cabinet re Institute for Research on Public Policy, 1171-2, 1221
  - Future research areas of Science Policy Committee, 1173
  - Impact of committee report on other countries, 1222
  - Information center, Futures Canada, 295
  - "Managing the Future: Conference on Anticipatory Institutions", 1171, 1221
  - Prime Minister Trudeau's speech at Duke University, 296-7
  - Recommendations to government by committee, 1222
  - Study undertaken by government into futures research and futures information, 1172-3
  - Training program in cooperation with management and schools, 295-6
- Science Policy, Special Senate Committee
  - Annual meetings, regional and national, 296
  - Appointment, 295-8
  - Club of Rome President, visit to committee, 473
  - Expenses, 160, 348, 1088, 1223-4, 1244, 1260, 1261
  - Members, 295
  - Reports
    - Quorum, 1355
    - Termination of mandate re Commission on the Future, 1164, 1171-3, 1220-6, 1246-7, 1259-60
    - Terms of reference, 295, 1171
- Senate business, 1880, 1881
- Senate and House of Commons Act
  - Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, 952
  - Senators' work in public interest outside of Senate, 952
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 878

Lang, Hon. Daniel A.

- Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing bill C-21, 1631
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974, C-42, 415
- Canadian economy
  - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1446-9
    - Economic Summit Conference, Canada's absence from, 1447
  - Government expenditures, 1447-8
    - Federal budget deficit, 1447
    - Members' indemnities, 1448
    - Ontario, 1447
    - Prime Minister's statement, 1448
    - UK government budget cuts, 1448
  - Labour and management demands, 1448-9
  - Labour strike actions affecting economy, 1447
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2283
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2387-9
  - Appeals, 2389
  - Background of capital punishment legislation, 2387

Lang, Hon. Daniel A. - ConcludedCriminal Law Amendment bill C-84 - Concluded

- First and second degree murder, 2388-9
- Prison term, ten years or life, 2389
- Recommendation by jury, 2389
- Transitional provisions re pending matters, 2389
- Treason, 2388-9

Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements bill C-57, 1175-8

- Basic and additional revenues, 1175-6
- Equalization formula as result of revenues to oil and gas producing provinces, 1175
- Freehold oil and gas revenues, 1175
- Income tax revenue guarantee, 1175, 1177
- Personal and corporation tax, 1177
- Tax changes affecting fiscal arrangements, 1176-7
- Tax rebates on oil and gas revenue, western provinces, 1177

Income Tax bill (No. 2) C-65, 1421, 1422

Income Tax Conventions bill S-32, 1789-90, 1796-8; Commons amds, 2244

- Accruing property income, 1790
- Capital gains, 1790
- Conventions with France, Belgium and Israel, 1789
- Countries with which Canada has concluded conventions, 1797
- Federal-provincial jurisdiction, 1796-7
- Prohibition against discrimination, 1790, 1797
- Supplementary agreements, 1789
- Taxation by countries not under convention, 1798
- Teachers' tax exemption, 1790
- Withholding tax on dividends and interest payments and royalties, 1789, 1797

Passports, special, for MPs, restrictions on, 2262-3

Remembrance Day, 257

Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances) bill C-4, 256-8

- Dependent children, 257-8
- Equality for male and female veterans, 258
- Escalation of allowances to consumer price index, 257
- Orphans, 257-8

Langlois, Hon. Leopold, Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate

Agriculture Committee

- Meetings during Senate sittings, 1045, 1196, 1639
- Membership, motion re, 591

Aircraft Registry bill S-5, 1001

- Federal-provincial conferences, lack of, 1001
- Property and civil rights of provinces, 1001
- Seizure and sale of aircraft, 1001

Alliance Security &amp; Investigation, Ltd. bill S-26, 1053

Anti-inflation policy, m to authorize com to study subject matter of Bill C-73, 1408, agreed, 1426

Appropriation bill No. 3, 1974 C-31, 192-3, 203, 204-5

Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 379, 389, 390-2, 407-11, 412, 413, 429, 431-2

Appropriation bill No. 5, 1974 C-45, 402, 424-5

Appropriation bill No. 1, 1975 C-54, 703-05, 718-19, 720-21, 722, 723, 735-6

Appropriation bill No. 2, 1975 C-55, 707-08, 738-9

Appropriation bill No. 3, 1975 C-64, 1097, 1098, 1129, 1131-2

Appropriation bill No. 4, 1975 C-79, 1602-04, 6121-14

Appropriation bill No. 1, 1976 C-90, 1971-2, 1977-80, 1981-2, 1984

Langlois, Hon. Leopold, Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

- Appropriation bill No. 2, 1976 C-91, 1972-3, 1988-91
- Appropriation bill No. 3, 1976 C-93, 2288
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1976 C-94, 2268, 2269
- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee
  - Engagement of services of counsel and technical, clerical and other personnel, 1427-8
  - Meetings during adjournments, 2047-8
  - Meetings during Senate sittings, 373, 505, 535, 563, 1034, 1403, 1416, 1438, 1485, 1502, 1856, 2069, 2098, 2120, 2178, 2192, 2216, 2338
- Beef producers, federal assistance for, 241, 253
- British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 134
- Canada-United States relations, communications between Canada and US, newspaper article re remarks by Senator Davey, 2192-3
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
  - Appearance of Gerda Munsinger on television program, 1619
  - Profane language used on TV programs, 1128
  - Role of CBC and CRTC administrative office, 1128
  - Saint-Jean-Baptiste Day program, 1128
  - TV program 'Les Beaux Dimanches', com authorized to examine and report on, 225-6; rep of com, 1127-9
  - National unity, deprecating of, 1128
- Canadian National Railways, cost of construction of tower in Toronto, 2185-6
- Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation bill S-27, 1062
  - Background of corporation, 1062
  - Change of name to 'Teleglobe Canada', 1062
  - President and chief executive officer, 1062
- Committees
  - Authorization to meet during adjournment of Senate, 2171-2
  - Meetings, co-ordinating committee to organize scheduling of, 1091
  - Notices of meetings of subcommittees and steering committees, 2192
  - Proceedings, delay in printing and distribution of, 703-04
- Consumer Credit and Cost of Living, Special Joint Committee (1967), implementation of recommendations contained in report, 2239-41
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, 1730-3, 1772-6, 1884-6, 1896-7, 1899
  - Appeal from decision on summary conviction, 1732
  - Cattle theft, 1885
  - Conditional release, 1731-2
  - Conspiracy in or outside Canada, 1731
  - Criminal offence resulting in serious harm, 1732
  - Evidence of police officer, 1885, 1896-7, 1899
  - Impaired drivers, 1731, 1775
  - Jury system, 1773, 1774
  - Kidnapping, extortion, organized crime, 1775
  - Morgentaler* amendment, 1732, 1772-4, 1885-6
    - Canadian Institute of Public Opinion, survey results, 1774
    - Excerpts from notes of supreme court judges, 1773
    - Statement of Past President of Bar Association, 1773-4
  - Murder, conspiracy to commit murder, trafficking in narcotics, 1733
  - Offence against internationally protected person, 1730
  - Placing bets on behalf of others, 1731
  - Rape and other sexual offences, 1731
    - Complainants' testimony, 1731
  - Telecommunications, use of 'blackbox', 1731
  - Theft, forgery of credit cards, etc., 1884-5
  - Verdict of guilty where facts admitted and there is error in law, 1885

Langlois, Hon. Leopold, Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

Deputy Leader, reappointment, 46

Emergency sittings, authority to convene Senate during adjournments, 328

Energy

Statement of policy re oil and gas, notice of inquiry, 2150

Estimates

Agriculture, 193

Assistance to provinces, individuals or other segment of economy, 1971

Assurance that passage of bill will not prejudice further debate, 708

Auditor General's statement re government financial management, 1977

Borrowing authority, 389, 391, 708, 738-9, 1132, 1603, 1612-13, 1972-3, 1988, 1989

Budgetary and non-budgetary items, 704, 1602-03

Canadaair, 719, 720

CNR deficit, 704

Cheque cashing before March 31, 1989-90

Chief Electoral Officer, 193

Correction in figure relating to supplementary estimates (D), 703

Deferment of capital projects, 1980-1, 1984

Departmental estimates, suggested method for inquiry by Senate, 1972

Discussion on subject matter of appropriation bills remaining on Order Paper, 1783

Dollar items, 379, 704-05, 719, 723, 1603, 1613-14, 1971, 1979, 1980

Statistics (1973-76), 1979, 1980

Economic development and supply, 379

Environment, 193

Federal-provincial fiscal arrangements, 704, 18-19

Globe and Mail article re Workers get shock at bank: Government cheques NSF, 1977-8

Groundfish stabilization, 704

House of Commons, program expenditures, payment to Leader of Social Credit Party, 722, 1613

Indian economic development, 379

Industry Trade and Commerce, 193

Information Canada, 193

Insurance, 193

Inter-Provincial Pipe Line Ltd., 720

Leading Cases in Constitutional Law, excerpt from decision in Edinburgh and Dalkeith Railway Company v. Wauchope, 391

Loto Canada, 2246-7

Milk subsidies, 704

Oil refiners, compensation to, 445

Old age security fund, 704, 1971-2

Deficit, 1971-2

Payments to provinces, 379

Percentage increase over 1974-75, 1971

Railways, compensation to, 379

Referral of supply bills to National Finance Committee, 736, 1131-2, 1133, 1613

Special employment measures, 1602

Spouses' allowances, 1602

Student summer employment, 1603

Transfer payments, 2288

Treasury Board, 704, 720

Unpredicted expenditures, 719

Veterans allowances, 704

Votes for grants in fiscal year, 1972

Votes for which additional sums are required, 1972

Langlois, Hon. Leopold, Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued*Estimates - Concluded

- Votes payments on calendar year basis, 1972

- Wheat, two-price program, 193

- Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/75, ref to com, 108

- Supplementary (A), 108

- Supplementary (B), 300

- Supplementary (C), 441-2

- Supplementary (D), 586

- Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/76, ref to com, 555

- Supplementary (A), 1409

- Supplementary (B), 1824

- Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/77, ref to com, 1777

- Export Development bill C-9, 459-62, 464

- Authorized capital, 459-60

- Foreign investment insurance program, 460

- Interest rate, 462, 464

- Short-term and medium-term credit for small businesses, 461

- Feeds bill S-10, 1480, 1635-6

- Commons amds, 1480, 1635-6

- Penalty upon conviction for indictable offence, 1635

- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, tribute upon resignation from the Senate, 967-8

- Foreign Affairs

- Canadian Defence spending, remarks by United States Ambassador, report in Globe and Mail, 2122-3

- Foreign Affairs Committee

- Meetings during Senate sittings, 713, 2216

- Gasoline excise tax, 1100

- Immigration bill S-12, 166, 213-19

- Haitians, 215

- Illegal activities, 217

- Ministerial power of discretion re indictment or summary conviction, 214

- Persons remaining in Canada by force or stealth, 216-17

- Immigration Policy, Special Joint Committee

- Terms of reference, 592

- Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 637-8

- Press report on Senate committee action, 637-8

- Income Tax Conventions bill S-32, Commons amds, 2236

- Information Canada, inaccuracies in publications regarding Governors General and Prime Ministers, 1757

- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, Standing Senate Committee

- Orders of the Day, notification of item standing in senator's name, 2123

- Italy, earthquake victims, Canadian government assistance to, 2111

- Labour, defiance by unions of court orders, 2237

- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee

- Expenses (special) for fees and travelling of witnesses re examination of Bill S-19, 525, 526

- Meetings during Senate sittings, 505, 542, 579, 713, 1438, 2216

- Legislation, difficulty in dealing with omnibus bills, 1775-6

- Loto Canada, 2103-04, 2110-11, 2246-7, 2268, 2269

- Manitoba Indian Brotherhood, meeting with senators, 291

- Medical Care bill C-68, 2359

- Money bills, Senate authority to amend, 1657

- Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, Commons amds, 2066-8

- National Capital Region, Special Joint Committee, 1126

Langlois, Hon. Leopold, Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

National Finance Committee

Expenditures, supplementary budget, 1337

Meetings during adjournment, 2048

Meetings during Senate sittings, 684, 774, 795, 973

National lottery, method of proceeding with, 2103-04, 2110-11

Nova Scotia, destruction of forests and residential property by fire, 2179

Official languages, rights of air pilots in Quebec, 2381-6

O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan, the late, 2034-5

Olympic bill C-63, 1202-03

Deficit forecast, 1203

Identification of gold coins content, 1203

Minister's statement re possible withdrawal of bill, 1202

National context of Games, 1203

Permanent assets from capital investments, 1203

Regattas to be held at Kingston, 1203

Olympic Games, Flame Ceremony on Parliament Hill, 2419

Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation by federal government, 966

Newfoundland, request for use of RCMP during labour strike, 966

Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1459, 1468

Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill S-9, 156-7

Advertising, 157

Regulations, authority for, 157

Royal patent, 156

Public bills, suspension of rules, motion withdrawn, 1292

Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1658-9

Regulations and other statutory instruments, agreements between federal government and provincial governments, 2103, 2110

Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, 1208

Rules of the Senate

Delay in raising of point of order, 1111

Minister invited to Senate Chamber to explain bill, precedents, 217-19

Excerpt from The Modern Senate of Canada re, 218

Minister's statement of policy, senator's comment on or criticism of, 1202

Supply bills, 721-2, 735

Borrowing authority, 722

Excerpt from Bourinot, 4th edition, 722

Forms and Proceedings, 721-3, 735

Senate role in money bills, 723

Suspension of rule 95 re private bills, 1208, 1234

Salaries (Lieutenant Governors) bill C-24, 1094

Saskatchewan, safety of Gardiner Dam, 2179

Senate

Adjournments, 712-13, 731

Motion rescinded, 731

Business, 31, 124-5, 152, 178-9, 221-2, 240, 289, 315, 325, 351, 380-1, 396, 482, 483-4, 505-06, 524, 540-1, 556, 579, 592-3, 594, 656-7, 740-1, 758, 796, 899, 923-4, 956, 988, 999, 1057, 1059, 1086, 1090, 1111, 1122, 1164-5, 1210, 1226, 1297, 1337, 1409, 1437-8, 1467-8, 1502-03, 1524, 1537-8, 1547-8, 1615, 1647-8, 1682, 1711, 1729, 1756-7, 1778, 1793, 1846, 1874-5, 1878-9, 2007-08, 2044, 2045-7, 2097-8, 2120-2, 2151-3, 2167, 2192, 2215, 2255, 2302, 2308, 2335, 2360

Emergency sittings, authority to convene Senate during adjournments, 328

Monday evening sittings, motion for, 1874-5, 1878-9, motion, as modified, agreed to, 1881

Wednesday sittings, hour of adjournment, 2097-8, motion rescinded, 2308, 2335

Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, 2203, 2204-05, 2206

Langlois, Hon. Leopold, Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate - *Concluded

- Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, referral to Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service Committee, 1437, 1442
- Statutes of Canada (references to Court of Queen's Bench of Quebec) bill S-16, 274-7, 293
  - Ambiguous powers, citations re, 275-6
  - Appeal Court, 276
  - History of Court of Queen's Bench of Quebec, 274-5
- Supplementary Borrowing Authority bill C-80, 1641-4, 1650
  - Borrowing through issue of treasury bills and raising of new funds through bonds, 1642
  - Capital markets, 1642, 1644
  - Draftmanship of legislation, 1650
  - Inclusion of borrowing authority in appropriation bills, 1642
  - Referral of bill to committee, question of, 1643, 1644
  - Requirement of recommendation of Governor General, 1643
- Supreme Court bill S-2, 155
- Temporary Immigration Security bill C-85, 1820, 1832-6
  - Deportation of person other than Canadian citizen, landed immigrants or visitors, 1820
  - Expiry date of legislation, 1833
  - Ministerial powers, 1833
  - Reasonable grounds for minister's opinion, 1834
  - Source of information, disclosure of, 1835
  - Terrorism, 1832-3
- Transportation, disruption of airline services in Canada, 2237
- Western grain stabilization, Agriculture Committee authorized to study subject matter of Bill C-41, 1615

Lapointe, Hon. Renaude, Speaker of the Senate

- Alliance Security and Investigation, Ltd., bill S-26, Commons amdt, 1261
- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1581, 1583, 1587
  - Motion (Hon. Mr. Molson) to amend bill, 1581, neg, 1581
  - Motion (Hon. Mr. Phillips) to amend bill, 1583, neg, 1587
- Appointment to office of Speaker of the Senate, 1
- Budget speech, accommodation for senators in Senate gallery of Commons, 1087
- Christmas decorations, Senate, 1476
- Condolences on death of brother, 382
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee, 160
- Feeds bill S-10, Commons amdts, 1467
- Felicitations on appointment to office of Speaker of the Senate, 22, 26, 32, 37, 51, 58, 62, 72, 81, 82-83, 111, 116, 120, 138-9, 144, 167-8, 174-5, 184-5
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, speech at unveiling of portrait of, 469
- Guidelines for Motions for Production of Papers, ref to Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 467
- Immigration Policy, Special Joint Committee, 564
  - Members, Commons, 627
- Immigration Policy, unauthorized press publication of confidential draft report of Special Joint Committee, 1285-6
- Investigations in Parliament, statement re question of privilege, 1478
- Library of Parliament, commemorative dollar for 100th anniversary, 1197
- MacKenzie, Hon. Norman, visitor to Senate, 1303
- National Arts Centre, reception for artists in Speaker's Chambers, 2003
- National Capital Region, Special Joint Committee, message from Commons, 1097
- Official Languages, report of Commissioner, 757, 2003
- Opening of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament, communications from Governor General's Secretary, 1, 2
- Parliament Buildings, accommodation in East Block, 2185

Lapointe, Hon. Renaude, Speaker of the Senate - *Concluded

Property qualification of members of Senate, Supplementary return tabled, 472

Prorogation of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament, communication from Governor General's Secretary, 2452; statement re prorogation, 2454

Right to Information bill C-225, subject matter ref to Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 467

Rules of the Senate

Conflict of Interest, question of privilege re reference of Green Paper to Committee, Hon. Mr. Croll, 780

New edition, 1813

Participation in debate by senator not scheduled to speak, 560

Right of senator to adjourn debate, 560

Rulings and statements

Adjournment during pleasure or to reconvene at call of bell, 1111, 1112

Debate developing during Question Period, 1784

Debate on report without amdt and motion for third reading of bill, statement re, 2395, 2396

Legal statements, Speaker's authority to give decision on, 989

Motion (Senator Godfrey) re proposed regulations respecting attendance of senators, 988-9

Point of order re motion to amend committee report, 889-90

Point of order (Senator Greene) re omission from Minutes of Proceedings, 988-9

Point of order (Senator Greene) re resolution on regulations respecting attendance of senators, 952, 953

Point of order (Senator Molson) re motion presented and seconded by senator not present, 955

Ruling on senator being allowed to continue speech, 2365

Suspension of rule 95 re private bill, 1207, 1209

Senate

Chamber renovations, 1282-3

Painting of Royal Canadian Engineers, authority to photograph for Heritage Publishing Company, 46

Photographing of precincts and of senators for distribution to Canadian embassies, 253, 255

Senators, new, introduced in the Senate

Austin, Hon. Jacob, 1354

Barrow, Hon. Augustus Irvine, 1

Cottreau, Hon. Ernest George, 1

Lucier, Hon. Paul Henry, 1395

Smith, Hon. George Isaac, 1282

Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, ref to Joint Committee on Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, 1437

Visitors

Alberta Parliamentarians, 1087

British Columbia, Mr. William Templeton, Victoria Legislative Assembly, 854

British Columbia Parliamentarians, 1087

Bulgaria, President of the General Assembly and His Excellency the Ambassador, 124

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, Africa region delegates, 1087

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, Secretary General Sir Robin Vanderfelt, 1966

Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, former Speaker of the Senate, 1970

Icelandic Parliamentarians, 2184

Iraq, Mr. Elkadi Kw Kussai, 1742

Japan, delegation from House of Councillors, 2364

Japan, Mr. Yasunaga Ohara, 299

Polish Ambassador, His Excellency Jozef Czesak and Mrs. Czesak, 1442

Saskatchewan, Parliamentarians and wives, 262

Laskin, Rt. Hon. Bora, P.C., Chief Justice of Canada

Administrator of the Government of Canada

Opening of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament, Speech from the Throne, 2-7

Royal assent, 95, 220

Laskin, Rt. Hon. Bora, P.C., Chief Justice of Canada - *Concluded

Deputy Governor General

Prorogation of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament, Speech from the Throne, 2543

Royal assent, 467, 581, 1095-6, 1476, 2096

Law Clerk and Parliamentary Counsel of the Senate

Appointment of Raymond du Plessis, Esq., Q.C., 2048-9

Law reform

Abortions, 17, 120-1, 188, 838

Drug convictions, 66

Family law, 16-17

Rape victims, 66

Law Reform Commission

Assets distributed through bankruptcy, 661

Benefits available to lower income groups, 660-1

Canadian Welfare article by Prof. Friedland on Law for the Laymen, 661

Composition of commission, 624, 625, 643, 644

Members of legal profession, 625

Part-time commissioners, 644

Quebec representation, 644

Family property and sharing of assets in event of marriage breakup, 624, 643

Judgment debtors, problems through ignorance of law, 661

Law educational system, 625

Legal profession statistics, Quebec and Ontario, 625

Objectives in field of criminal law, family law, code of sentencing and expropriation, etc., 624

Poor man's bankruptcy, 661

Studies of commission to date, 624

Speakers: Senators

Benidickson, W.M., 624-5, 660-1

Choquette, Lionel, 643-4

Law Reform Commission bill C-43. 1r, 583; 2r, 624-5, 643-4, 660-1; ref to com, 661; rep without amdt, 759; 3r, 768; r.a., 832Lawson, Hon. Edward M.

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1582

Interest rates, 1582

Bank profits, 1582

Labour and industrial negotiations, 1582

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, 2139

Labour, failure of employers to file reports with AIB, 2139

Canadian economy

Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1326-30

BC strike legislation, 1326-7

Labour movement reaction, 1327-8

Supermarkets, 1327; Canada Safeway, 1327

Interest rates, 1327-8

Limit of increase for low-income workers, 1327

'Loopholes' alleged in program, 1329-30

Propane and butane industry employee-employer dispute and withdrawal of essential services, 1328

Trade Union Congress of Britain, statement of policy, 1328-9

US controls, 1329

Lawson, Hon. Edward M. - Concluded

- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2423-5
  - Bank robbery in BC, 'comedy of errors' re, 2424-5
  - Deterrent aspect, 2425
  - Parole violations, 2424
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 374-5
  - Healthways* magazine, excerpt from, 374
  - Misunderstandings by public re purpose of legislation, 374-5
  - Penalties for possession or trafficking of drugs, 375
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 824-5
  - Government policy in conciliation matters, 825
  - Losses to workers and producers from strike action, 825
  - Penalty provision, 824
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 859-61
  - British Columbia salary increases in governmental areas, 860
  - Expense and travel allowances, 860
  - Parliamentary restaurant charges vs tradesmen's free meals, 860
  - Press reaction to parliamentary increases, 859-60
  - Public servants in $60,000 bracket, 860, see 889
  - Retroactive clause, 860
  - Salary scale of judges, reporters, editors, teachers, tradesmen, 857-61
  - Working hours of senators, unjust criticisms of, 860

Leader of the Government in the Senate, Hon. Raymond J. Perrault, P.C.

Deputy, Hon. Léopold Langlois

Leader of the Opposition in the Senate, Hon. Jacques Flynn, P.C.

Deputy, Hon. Allister Grosart

Lefrançois, Hon. J. Eugène

- Boucher, Hon. William A., the late, 2251
- Bourque, Hon. Romuald, the late, 11-12

Legal and Constitutional Affairs, Standing Senate Committee

- Criminal law, subject matter of Bill C-83, an act for the better protection of Canadian society against perpetrators of violent and other crime, ref to com, 1852-3
- Expenses, 213, 525-6, 795
- Meeting in camera, 1770-1
- Meetings during Senate sittings, 505, 542-3, 579, 713, 758, 2216
- Members, 96
- Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest, Green Paper on, ref to com, 774
  - Question of privilege re, 779-81
- Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, motion that financial compensation by federal government be considered by com, 954-5, 962-6; agreed, 966
- Reports
  - Conflict of interest (Members of Parliament), Green Paper on, 2278, 2303-06
  - Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, rep with amdt, 1867-8, 1884-6, 1893-1900
  - Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-83, 2119-20, 2127-8, 2163-6
  - Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-370, rep without amdt, 555
  - Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, rep with amdts, 969-71, 983, 1007-21, 1023-33, 1036-8, 1046-9
  - Judges bill C-47, rep without amdt, 1066
  - Law Reform Commission bill C-43, rep without amdt, 759
  - Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001, rep without amdt, 1244

Legal and Constitutional Affairs, Standing Senate Committee - Concluded*Reports - Concluded

- Parole system in Canada, report tabled, 10
- Representation bill C-36, rep without amdt, 443
- Statute Revision bill S-3, rep without amdt, 243
- Supreme Court bill S-2, rep without amdt, 243
- Territorial Lands bill S-20, rep with amdt, 579
- Televising of committee proceedings, 509-14, 521-3, 543-54
- Motion to approve decision of com, 512-14, 521-3, 543-6; m in amdt, 546-54; m as amended agreed, 554

Leger, Rt. Hon. Jules, His Excellency the Governor General of Canada

- Royal assent, 397, 2450

Liberal Caucus, invitation to members of Opposition, question, 1868*Library of Parliament, Joint Committee

- Commemorative dollar for 100th anniversary, 1197
- Commercial use of picture of Parliamentary Library, question, 1729, 1764-5
- Members
  - Commons, 60
  - Senate, 109
- Report of Librarian, First Session of 30th Parliament, 12
- Report of Librarian (1974-75), 2062
- Research staff, 146, 516

Lieutenant governors superannuation

- Appointments after royal assent of bill, 1339
- Contribution rate, 1338
- Inadequacy of remuneration, 1338
- Lieutenant governors not included, 1338
- Members of Parliament retired to office of lieutenant governor, 1339
- Pension at 65 years of age or upon becoming disabled, 1338

Speakers: Senators

- Bourget, Maurice, 1337-8, 1339-40
- Carter, Chesley W., 1339
- Choquette, Lionel, 1340
- Flynn, Jacques, 1338-9

Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23. 1r, 1304; 2r, 1337-40; ref to com, 1340; rep without amdt but with observations, 1369; 3r, 1370; r.a., 1476Loan companies

- Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies, 47, 100-03, 107, 160, 180, 314

Loto Canada, 2160-3, 2168-9, 2191, 2234-5, 2267-9

- Chairman of Board of Directors, 2234
- Crediting of revenues to National Lottery Account and distribution to:
  - Olympic Games deficit, 2234, 2235
  - Physical Fitness, Amateur Sports and Recreation programs, 2234
  - Provincial governments, 2234
- Establishment of Loto Canada by supplementary estimate, question of, 2234-5
  - Federal-provincial consultations, 2235
  - Restriction to 13 draws, 2234
  - Shares, government control, 2234
  - Tabling of annual report, 2234
  - Variations in payments requiring item in estimates, 2234

Lotteries

Loto Canada, 2160-3, 2168-9, 2191, 2234-5, 2267-9

See National lottery, 2163, 2168-9, 2191, 2234-5, 2267-9

Lucier, Hon. Paul Henry

Introduced in the Senate (Nov. 12/75), 1395

Macdonald, Hon. John M., Chief Opposition Whip in the Senate

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 138-42

Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing bill C-21, 1631

Deficiencies in drafting of legislation, 1631

Agricultural Stabilization bill C-50, 1192-4

Controlled production, 1193

Production costs, 1192-3

Production to alleviate world hunger, 1193

Stop loss level, 1193

Support price of 90% over 5 years, 1192

Top loading, 1193-4

Alberta-British Columbia Boundary bill S-13, 225

Anti-Inflation program, National Defence cutbacks in Nova Scotia, 1683, 1716

Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 406-07

Bond issue by government, depreciation in value, 140

Canada Pension Plan bill C-22, 277-8

Applications and payments, retroactive clause, 277-8

Assignment or attachment of benefits, 278

Religious sects, exemption for, 278

CNR services, Atlantic Provinces, 1924, 1976

Christian Evangelical Centre of Canada, action of National Revenue Department re, 2354-6

Citizenship bill C-20, 2092-4, 2323

Armed forces personnel, 2093

Land Holding Disclosure Act, NS and Cape Breton Island, 2323

Language requirement, 2093

Oath of allegiance and oath of citizenship, 2094

Reinstatement of citizenship, 2093

Residency requirement, 2093

Students, 2093

Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-92, 2040-1

Compensation to be not more than 100% disability pension, 2041

Three months limitation, 2041

Continental Bank of Canada bill S-30, 1345

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No.2) C-84, 2410-11

British law, 2410

Deterrent aspect, 2410-11

Medical means as replacement for hanging, 2411

Montreal statistics on murders, 2411

Victims of murder, 2411

Explosives bill S-17, 271-2

Authorized explosives, 271

Factories licensed to manufacture explosives, 271

Offences, 272

Macdonald, Hon. John M., Chief Opposition Whip in the Senate - Continued

- Farm Credit bill C-34, 796-7, 864, 880
  - Age limit, 797, 880
  - Availability of farm land, 797
  - Financial obligation of borrowers, 797
  - Loan statistics, 795
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 138-9
- Inflation, 140-1
  - Government 'restraints', 141
- National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment) bill S-23, 833-5
  - Acts deemed traitorous or cowardly exacting death penalty, 834
  - Canadian Catholic Conference, statement issued by, 835
  - Deterrent aspect, 834-5
  - National security, 834
  - Policemen and prison guards, 835
  - Theology and the Death Penalty*, paper issued by Task Force for Abolition of Capital Punishment, 835
  - Violence in administration of justice, 835
- National Housing bill (No.2) C-77, 1676, 1678, 1679, 1680
  - Appraisal of housing costs in various areas, 1678
  - Cooperatives, 1679
  - House price limits, 1676
  - Servicing of land, 1679
- Newfoundland
  - Anniversary of entry into Confederation, 139
  - Transportation, 139-40
    - Inter-city passenger routes, Canadian Press article re, 139-40
    - North Sydney-Cape Breton-Port aux Basques, 139
    - Passenger trains, eastern Canada, 140
- Nova Scotia
  - Destruction of forests and residential property by fire, 2178-9
  - Springhill fire disaster, federal aid for community, 1242
  - Storm damage, 136
- Olympic bill C-63, 1198-1200
  - Deficit forecast, 1199
  - Federal government responsibility for Games, 1199-1200
  - Profit potential from sale of gold coins, 1199
  - Programs of government assistance for Games, 1199
  - Security costs, 1199
  - Trade marks and copyrights, 1199
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1429, 1430, 1431
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill S-9, 157
- Public Service Staff Relations bill C-70, 1245
  - Authority of Chairman to appoint outside arbitrator, 1245
  - Backlog of work of board, 1245
  - Term of office of board members, 1245
- Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances) bill C-4, 268-9
- Statute Law (Veterans and Returned Soldiers' Insurance) Amendment bill C-86, 1910-11
- Supreme Court bill S-2, 162
  - Residence requirement for judges, registrars and deputy registrars, 162

Macdonald, Hon. John M., Chief Opposition Whip in the Senate - Concluded

Transportation

- BNA Act provisions relating to transportation, 2196-8
- Newfoundland ferry service, 2197-8
- Newfoundland and Ontario Steamship Ltd., 2198
- Shipping, charter rates, 2198
- Prince Edward Island, 2196-7
- CNR facilities, deterioration of, 2197
- Strikes and unemployment, 2197-8
- Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, 942-3
- Canadian Wheat Board report, excerpt from, 943
- Lack of escalator clause, 943
- Subsidy for Spring and Durum wheat, 943
- Unemployment, 141
- Working poor, 141
- Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1689-90, 1698, 1701-02, 1703, 1704
- Application forms for UI, 1703
- Failure of government in economic policies, 1689
- Minimum benefit, 1702
- Notice of interview, 1702
- Persons 65 yrs. and over, 1689-90, 1698
- Prison or institutional inmates, 1703

Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, P.C. (Deceased May 28/76)

Tributes, 2176-7

Macnaughton, Hon. Alan A., P.C.

- Army Benevolent Fund bill C-17, 303-04
- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Florida meeting, 2221-2, 2224-33
- Agenda, 2224
- Canada-US relations, 2222
- Canadian Centennial coins, presentation to US delegates, 2222
- Committee I, 2224-7
  - Canadian cultural legislation and regulations, 2227
  - Eastport, 2226
  - Flathead River, 2225-6
  - Garrison Diversion project, 2225
  - Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement, 2225
  - Law of the Sea, 2226-7
  - Richelieu-Lake Champlain, 2225
  - Skagit, 2226
  - Water boundaries, 2226
  - West Coast pollution, 2226
- Committee II, 2224, 2227-30
  - Anti-inflation program, 2228
  - Canada-US automotive agreement, 2227-8
  - Canadian cultural legislation and regulations, 2229-30
  - Controls on trade with Cuba, 2229
  - Extension to Canada of US restrictions on political contributions, 2230
  - Foreign Investment Review Act, 2229
  - Multilateral trade negotiations, 2230
  - Saskatchewan takeover of potash companies, 2228-9
  - Trans-Border economic issues, 2227
  - US dumping charges and countervailing duties, 2228
- Committee III, 2222, 2224-5, 2230-2
  - Agriculture, 2232
  - Energy, 2222, 2230-2
- Plenary meeting, 2232

Macnaughton, Hon. Alan A., P.C. - Continued

- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Quebec meeting, 1137-40, 1145-55
  - Committees and members, 1138
  - Delegates, 1138
  - Designation of meeting places and timetables, 1138
  - Excerpt from speech by Prime Minister Trudeau, 1140
  - Excerpt from speech by US Deputy Secretary of State, 1140
  - Reform of Canadian section of Group, 1137-40
  - Trans-border problems, 1139
  - US Congress contacts, importance of, 1139-40
- Canadian textile problems, 2045, 2055-6
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2280-1
  - Real Property, evidence of Canadian Bar Association, 2280-1
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2418-19
  - Deterrent aspect, 2418
  - Human error in judgment, 2418
  - Montreal Gazette* article re capital punishment, 2418
  - Taking of life, question of right re, 2418
- Environmental Contaminants bill C-25, 1371-2
  - Chemical contamination from industry, 1372
  - Federal-provincial consultations, 1372
  - Major provisions of bill, 1371-2
- Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40, 499-501
  - Air transportation, 500
  - Articles for handicapped persons, 500, 501
  - Building materials and water distribution equipment, 500, 501
  - Clothing and footwear, 499, 501
  - Day care centers, 501
  - Liquor, wine, tobacco, 500
  - Transportation equipment, 500, 501
  - Vehicles of high-energy-consuming category, 500
- Excise Tax bill C-66, 1267-71, 1278
  - Air transportation, 1268, 1271
  - Building insulation materials, 1268
  - Businesses and persons eligible for refund, 1267-8
  - Deficit resulting from single oil price policy, 1269
  - Gasoline for personal use and for travel to and from place of business, 1267, 1268, 1269
  - Income tax refunds, 1270-1
  - Method for filing of claims and administration of refunds, 1270
  - Records of gasoline purchases, 1268
  - Wines, 1268
- International Air Transport Association bill S-18, 301-03
- Japan, delegation from House of Councillors, visitors to Senate, 2364
- Martin, Hon. Paul, resignation from the Senate, 210
- National Commercial Bank of Canada bill S-24, 1057
- National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77 (Chairman, Committee of the Whole), 1673-81
- Ocean Dumping Control bill C-37, 1038-40
  - Courts of criminal jurisdiction, 1040
  - Detainment, seizure or forfeiture of ships and aircraft, 1039-40
  - Dumping by aircraft over land, 1040
  - Exceptional circumstances involving safety of human life, 1039
  - London Convention on ocean dumping control, 1038-9
  - Oslo Convention, 1039

Macnaughton, Hon. Alan A., P.C. - Concluded

- Ocean Dumping Control bill C-37 - Concluded
  - Penalties for contravention of act, 1039
  - Permits for dumping, 1039
  - Times, rates of disposal, etc., compatible with protection of marine environment, 1039
- Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 981-2
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1601
  - Commercial production deadline, 1601
  - Grants, repayable grants, loan guarantees, 1601
  - Program statistics, 1601
- Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, (Chairman of Committee of the Whole), 2203-07
- Speaker pro tem, 239
- Unemployment Insurance bill C-69 (Chairman, Committee of the Whole), 1695-1706

Manitoba

- Indian Brotherhood, meeting with senators, 290-1
- Request to appear before Senate committee, 315-16

Manning, Hon. Ernest C., P.C.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 68-71
- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1579
- Canadian economy
  - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1303, 1349-53
    - Credibility of government program, question of, 1350-1
    - Demands vs productivity, 1350
    - Government expenditures, federal and provincial, 1351-2
      - Bilingualism program, 1352
      - Olympic entertainment, 1352
      - Salaries of top-level officials, 1352
      - Studies of toilet facilities, offices, industrial plants, etc., 1352
      - Translation services, 1352
      - Work force, 1352
    - Government role in inflationary trend, 1350
    - Psychological reactions to controls, 1350, 1352-3
    - Solving of inflation by
      - Lessening of external pressures involving trading partners, 1353
      - Productivity, 1353
      - Self-discipline, 1353
    - Temporary aspect of controls, 1350
    - Unsatisfactory results of wage and price controls, 1351; US publication re, 1351
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 530-1
  - Distinction between punishment for murders of policemen and others, 529
  - Royal prerogative, 529-30
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2413-15
  - Alternatives to death by hanging, 2414
  - Deterrent aspect, 2415
  - Permissive society, 2414
  - Premeditated murder, 2414
  - Principle of justice, abandonment of, 2414
  - Prison term, 2414
  - Responsibility of members of Parliament, 2414
  - Sanctity of human life, 2414
- Drury, Hon. Charles Mills, resignation offer and rejection by Prime Minister, 1891

Manning, Hon, Ernest C., P.C. - Continued

- Economic conditions and prospects, 69-71
  - Arab nations monopoly in oil industry, 69-70
  - Athabasca Tar Sands and Mackenzie River pipeline, 70-71
  - Canada-US trade relations, 70
  - Commodity price determination, 69; transportation costs, 70
  - Energy resources and establishment of Petro-Canada, 69
  - Financial Times* of Canada editorial, 69
  - Oil prices, 69-70, 71
- Energy
  - Government policy re Canadian ownership of companies developing oil and gas on crown lands, 2159-60, 2210
- Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40, 573
  - Unlicensed wholesalers, 573
- Federal-provincial relations, dispute re resource revenue taxation, inquiry withdrawn, 660
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 405-06, 1014-15, 1016, 1037-8
  - Application for withdrawal of criminal record, 1038
  - Drug control vs gun control, 1015
  - Drug subculture, dangers to youth, 1016
  - 'Give', definition of, 1015, 1016
  - Parole or pardon, 1038
  - Penalty for trafficking, 1015
- Gasoline excise tax, 1112
- Immigration, presence in Canada of Xaviera Hollander and Gerda Munsinger, 1013
- Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 630-4
  - Oil industry, 631-2
    - Alberta oil royalties, 632
    - Natural Resources Transfer Agreements, 632, 633
    - Political price determination, 631-2
    - Syncrude project, 633-4
- Income Tax bill (No. 2) C-65, 1422
  - Alberta royalties on resources, 1422
  - Interest and dividends credit for man and wife, 1422
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1931-3, 2326-7, 2328
  - Broadcasting, 1932, 2326, 2327, 2328
  - Canada-US relations, 1932
  - Canada-US treaty negotiations, question of, 1933
  - Canadian ownership of and advertising in periodicals, percentage stipulations, 1932
  - Canadian publication, definition of, 2326
  - MD of Canada*, 1933
  - Time*, 1932
- National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 744
- Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to Argentina, 1975, 2142
- Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to India, 1859-60, 1869, 1975
- Olympic bill C-63, 1201, 1202
  - Regional aspect of Games location, 1201
  - Western attitude towards potential deficit, 1201
- Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation by federal government, 568-9, 965-6
  - Alberta, 965, 966
  - British Columbia, 965
  - Federal-provincial negotiations re RCMP, 569, 965
  - Newfoundland, request for use of RCMP during labour strike, 965-6
  - Option of provinces, 965
  - Police forces in metropolitan centers, 966

Manning, Hon, Ernest C., P.C. - *Concluded

- Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 902-06, 907
  - Consumer protection, 903
  - Control of profits to insure reinvestment in exploration and development, 905-06
  - Crude oil prices, 903, 904
  - Dwindling of irreplaceable resources, 903
  - Elements creating instability and uncertainty in oil exploration, 904-05
  - Exchange of energy between US and Canada in certain regions, 905
  - Federal-provincial relations and national unity in solving of problems, 903-04
  - Political price fixing, 902-06
  - Tax on exports to US, 903
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1410
- Senate
  - Monday evening sittings, question of, 1877-8
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 875-8
  - Commons members, suggestion for graduated increase on re-election, 875
  - Comparison with news editors, entertainers, athletes, etc., 877
  - Cost of living index and industrial composite index, 877-8
  - Inflationary trends and restraints, 876-7
  - Leadership of members of Parliament in crisis of wage demands and of prices, 877
  - Press reaction and unjustified reports to proposed salary increases, 876
  - Public servants in $60,000 bracket, 876, see 889
  - Senators, members of Commons, provincial premiers, comparison of workload and remuneration, 878
  - Service to the public, primary importance of, 876
  - Suggestion for automatic fixed-dollar salary increase, 875, 876, 878
- Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, 2205
- Televising of committee proceedings, 548
- Trade
  - Balance of payments, deficit, 877
  - Inflationary trends affecting export markets, 877
- Transportation, 70
- United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention, status of Palestinian Liberation Organization as participants, 1166
- West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12, 80-81
  - Termination date of agreement, 80-81

Manpower and Immigration Department

- Manpower Division, motion to authorize com to examine and report on estimates for, 400-01, 419-20; agreed, 420
  - Questions of National Finance Committee, 401
  - Responsibilities and functions of Manpower Division, 400-01
  - West Germany economic development, report on, 419-20; unemployment and inflation plans re, 419

Marine safety

- Air and sea rescue, request for location of unit in Newfoundland, 1860
- British Columbia fisheries, 1814-15, 1860

Maritimes

- See* Atlantic provinces and names of individual provinces

- Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001. 1r, 1233; 2r, 1233-4; ref to com, 1234; suspension of rule 95, 1234-5; rep without amdt, 1244; 3r, 1251-2, 1257-9; r.a., 1281
- Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., former Leader of the Government in the Senate (Resigned Oct. 30/74)
Farewell speech to Parliament on appointment to office of High Commissioner to the United Kingdom, 207-08
Tributes, 208-12
- Martland, Hon. Ronald, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court
Deputy Administrator of the Government of Canada, 1-2
- Matheson, Hon. Alexander W., the late, former Premier of Prince Edward Island, 1861-3
- McDonald, Hon. A. Hamilton
Aeronautics bill S-34, 2125
Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1580-1
Food prices, 1587
Termination clause, constitutionality of, 1580-1
Appropriation bill No. 2, 1976 C-91, 1986
Boucher, Hon. William A., the late, 2251
Canadian economy
Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1326
Citizenship bill C-20, 2283-4
Alien ownership of land, Saskatchewan, 2283, 2284
Powers of Lieutenant Governor in Council, 2283
Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-92, 2041-2
Evaders and escapees, 2042
Three months' limitation, 2042
Widows' allowances, 2042
Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2427-8
Defensive attitude of society, 2428
Deterrent aspect, 2428
Escapees from Manitoba institution and aftermath of crime, 2428
"Santa Claus" murders, 2428
Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Bruce) bill C-228, 601
Estimates
Lockheed long-range patrol aircraft, 1986
Farm Credit bill C-34, 788-91, 806-07, 863, 864
Age limit, 788, 789, 807, 863
Agriculture investments, 790
Availability of farm land, 806-07
Capital fund of corporation, 789, 790, 807
Full-time and part-time farming, 789
Interest rate, 789, 791
Loans in relation to mortgage capacity or productivity of real estate, 789, 790-1
Maximum loan, 788
Repayment record, 788
Security, 791
Statistics on persons involved in farming, 864
Western farming, 864
Feeds bill S-10, 158-9
Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 81

McDonald, Hon. A. Hamilton - Continued

- Fire Losses Replacement Account bill C-18, 338
  - Yukon and Northwest Territories, insurable properties and premiums, 338
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1019, 1026
  - Advertising of drugs by means of give-away, 1019
  - 'Give', definition of, 1019
- Indian Oil and Gas bill C-15, 337-8, 352-3
  - Alberta oil, royalties to Indian Bands, 337-8
  - Consultation with Indian Bands, 362
  - Oil prices and increased revenue from 337-8
- Interparliamentary conferences, delegations to, 1490
  - Interparliamentary Advisory Committee to study and rule on, 1490, 1494
- Marine safety, British Columbia fisheries, 1815, 1860
- North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1489-94
  - Armed forces in Europe, 1489-93
    - Canadian troops, 1491-2, 1493; newspaper article re, 1493
    - Central Europe and Warsaw Pact countries, 1491
    - Equipment statistics, various countries, 1490-2; aircraft, Lockheed P-3 Orion, 1492, tanks, Leopard and Centurion, 1492, 1494
    - Nuclear power, 1490-1
    - Reserves, 1494
    - US military bases in Spain, 1493
  - Canada's defence policy, 1493
  - Canadian delegation, 1490
  - Energy resources, protection of, 1492-3
- North Atlantic Assembly, London conference, 342-7
  - Canadian delegation, 344
  - Canadian troops in Lahr and Baden, and equipment for, 345-6
  - Defence of the Western European Union, 348
  - Mutual and balanced force reductions, 344-5
  - NATO, 342-5
  - Oil crisis, 344
  - Problems in Cyprus, Greece, Turkey and Middle East, 345
  - Replacement of aircraft, 345
  - USSR maritime forces, 345
  - USSR territorial gains as result of World War II, 342-3
- Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) C-10, 595-7, 621-2
  - Corporate farms, partnerships, cooperatives or farming enterprise, 596
  - Elevator companies, question of commission for, 596
  - Increase in advance payment to $15,000, 595
  - Investment of cash advance payments, 622
  - Option to deliver on quota system or offboard sales, 596
- Rules of the Senate
  - Reference of items to National Finance Committee, 1109
  - Televising of committee proceedings, 553-4
- Transportation
  - BNA Act provisions re transportation, 2220, 2221, 2333-4
- Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, 1089
- West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill1 C-12, 81-82
  - Basic hourly rate for grain handlers, 82; disparity in labour rates, 82
  - Farmers' payments for grain, 82
  - Government intervention in dispute and effects of, 82
  - Loss of working days through conciliation delays, 81-82

McDonald, Hon. A. Hamilton - Concluded

- Western Grain Stabilization bill C-41, 1723-6, 1737-8, 1766
  - Administration of act, 1725, 1737
  - Advisory committee, 1725
  - Branch offices, question of, 1737
  - Crop insurance, 1737
  - Depreciation costs, 1737
  - Eligibility to participate, 1724-5
  - Instability of agricultural income, 1723
  - Payments vs contributions, 1723-4
  - Production costs, 1724
  - Retirement of farmer or sale of operation, 1724, 1725
  - Tax reductions and payments, 1724, 1726
  - Voluntary participation in plan, 1724
- Wheat Board bill (No. 2) C-88, 2315-17, 2333
  - Advisory committee
    - Election of new committee, 2316
    - Members, 2315, 2316
    - Payments to members, 2316
  - Costs of pooling account, 2316
  - Malting barley, 2315-16, 2333
  - Provision for further pools by order in council, 2317

McElman, Hon. Charles

- Broadcasting, appearance of Gerda Munsinger on CBC television program, 1618, 1619
- Crime and violence, 1646-7
  - Motion that subject matter be ref to Health, Welfare and Science Committee, 1647
  - Terms of reference of proposed committee, question of, 1647
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 688-92
  - Administration of law, objections of sponsor of bill, 688-9
  - Clemency recommendation, 688
  - Constitutionality of bill, question of, 688
  - Federal government process of enacting law, 691-2
  - Fredericton meeting of students at University of NB, 690
  - Liberal Party convention decision on capital punishment, 689
  - Miscarriage of justice, 691
  - Moncton meeting of parliamentarians, law enforcement officers and others, 689-90
  - Murders of recent date of police officers, 689
  - Pre-sentence report, 691
  - Responsibility of jury, 690-1
  - Royal prerogative of mercy, 690
  - Treason and sea piracy, 688
  - US judicial system, 691, 692; Canadian Press report published in Saint John Telegraph Journal, 692
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, tribute on occasion of resignation from the Senate, 968
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1077
- Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1159-61, 1169-70
  - Cost-sharing of insecticide spraying, 1159-60
  - Cropping of affected areas, 1161
  - Damaging side effects of DDT and other chemicals, 1160
  - Federal-responsibility, 1160-1
  - Maple and Birch 'dieback', 1160
  - New Brunswick dependence on forest industry, 1158
  - Provincial efforts to combat problem, 1169-70

McElman, Hon. Charles - Concluded

- Income tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1938-46
  - Bill C-118 (1965), excerpts from debate on, 1938-9, 1940, 1943
  - Broadcasting, 1944
    - Bellingham station, 1944-5
    - Canadian advertising on US stations, expenditures on, 1944
  - Canada-US relations, 1944-5
  - Canadian ownership of and advertising in periodicals, percentage stipulations, 1939
  - Canadian Periodical Publishers' Association*, letter from, 1944
  - 'Dumping' of textiles in Sherbrooke, Quebec, by American-owned subsidiary, 1942
  - O'Leary Royal Commission, excerpt from report, 1939-40
    - Statements by
      - Hon. Grattan O'Leary, 1939-41
      - Hon. Salter Hayden, 1941-2
      - Right Hon. John G. Diefenbaker, 1938-9
    - Telegraph-Journal*, St. John, NB, article re Canada-US border TV war, 1945
    - Time Canada* and Reader's Digest, 1938-9, 1942, 1943
      - Advertising rates to Canadian advertisers, 1943
      - Dumping of cost-free content, 1943
  - National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 742, 743-4
  - Senate business, 1916
  - Televising of committee proceedings, 509, 510-11, 512, 513, 543-6

McGrand, Hon. Fred A.

- Animal Contagious Diseases bill C-28, 1632-3
  - Artificial insemination centres, 1632-3
  - Compensation for diseased animals, 1632
  - Export health certification, 1632, 1633
  - Foreign meats arriving in Canadian waters, 1633
  - Garbage feeding, 1633
  - Maintenance of deadyards and rendering plants, 1632
  - Quarantine, 1634
  - Transportation and care of animals, 1633
  - Tuberculosis, brucellosis, hog cholera, 1632
- Crime and violence, special Senate committee proposed, 916-22
  - Abortion, 917
  - Anatomy of Human Aggression*, by Eric Fromm, 917
  - Capital punishment, 917
  - Child abuse, 918-19
    - Murderers who have suffered parental cruelty, 918
    - UK investigations, 918
  - Crime and Punishment as ritual of life*, excerpt from article by Dr. Carl Menninger, 920
  - Enuresis, Fire Setting and Cruelty to Animals: a Triad Predictive of Adult Crime*, 919
  - Guns, freedom of purchase, 920-1
  - Human Aggression*, by Dr. Anthony Storr, 917
  - 'Jungle made by humans for humans', 917
  - New Zealand, low crime rate, 920
  - Penal system failure, 921
  - Physical punishment and loss of freedom, 917-18
  - Psychopathic Personality, Sociopathic Personality and Character Neurosis, excerpt from address by Prof. James McHorter, 919-20
  - Rehabilitation of convicted murderers, 921
  - Religious sects in pacifist role, 917
  - Society's ignorance of causes of crime, 921
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 404-05

McGrand, Hon. Fred A. - *Concluded

- Quarantine bill S-31, 1778-80
  - Cleansing or removal of infested or contaminated conveyance, 1779
  - Detention by quarantine officer or permission to proceed, 1779
  - Referral of detention order to superior court judge, 1779
  - Extension of provisions to include other dangerous diseases, 1779
  - Medical examination, 1779-80

McIlraith, Hon. George J., P.C.

- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1577
  - Termination clause, 1577
- British North America Acts 1867 to 1975 bill C-3, 1054
  - Appointment of senators from NWT and Yukon, 1054
  - Residence requirement, 1054
- Canada-United States relations, 228-9
- Canadian Film Industry, academy award to Crawley Films Ltd., of Ottawa, 2003
- Clerk's Scroll, 1667, 1685
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2430, 2433-6, 2439
  - Commutations, 2434
  - Deterrent aspect, 2434-5
  - Excerpt from speech of Opposition leader, 2434
  - First degree murder, 2435
  - Responsibility of members of Parliament to electors, 2435, 2439
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 880-4, 885
  - Motion to amend com rep, 880-2, 883
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1011, 1015-16, 1019, 1020, 1021, 1023-5, 1026, 1027
  - Conditional or unconditional pardon, 1023-4
  - Drug trials cited, 1024, 1026, 1027
  - 'Give', and 'traffic', definition of, 1015, 1020, 1024-5, 1027
  - Legal and illegal distribution of drugs, 1020
  - Onus of proof for possession or trafficking, 1011
  - Penalty, 1015, 1023
  - Possession of cannabis, trafficking, importing or exporting, 1023
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1925-9
  - Broadcasting, 1928
    - Bellingham station, 1928
    - Canadian advertising in US market, 1928
    - Reciprocal agreements between governments, 1928
  - Canadian ownership of and advertising in periodicals, percentage stipulations, 1926, 1927
  - Freedom of the press, interference with, 1927
  - MD of Canada*, 1926
  - 'Substantially the same as', question of interpretation of phrase, 1926-7
    - Excerpt from Commons Debates re, 1927
  - Time and Reader's Digest*, 1927
- National Capital Region, proposed study by joint committee, 229
- National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 742, 743-4
  - Forgiveness provision for municipalities, 744
  - Housing starts, decrease in, 742
  - New homes, mortgage provisions, 743
  - Non-profit and cooperative housing, 743
  - Rentals, 743
  - Sewage treatment grants, 743-4
  - Statutory limits for making and insuring loans, 744

McIlraith, Hon. George J., P.C. - Concluded

- National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, 1667-9, 1671, 1672-3
  - Assisted home ownership restrictions, 1668
  - Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., 1669
  - Grants to municipalities, 1669
  - Housing target, 1673
  - Interest-free loans, 1668
  - Investment in public and private residential construction, annual, 1668
  - Servicing of land, 1668-9
- Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation by federal government, 963-5
  - Coordination and cooperation of various police forces, 964
  - Financial obligation of province to pay for provincial force, 964
  - Newfoundland, request of use of RCMP during labour problems, 965
  - RCMP work in matters under federal jurisdiction, 964-5
- Public Service Employment, Staff Relations, Superannuation, Interpretation bill C-38, 464-5, 466
  - Clerk of the Privy Council and Secretary to the Cabinet, 465, 466; responsibilities, 466
  - Privy Council functions, 465
- Rules of the Senate
  - Committee reports, referral back to com or to Committee of the Whole for reconsideration 883-4
  - Precedents cited in excerpts from Senate Journals, 883
- Rules of the Senate, report of Committee on Standing Rules and Orders, 1360-3, 1423, 1424, 1425, 1426, 1464
  - Adoption of report, motion for, 1360
  - Forms and proceedings, 1360
  - Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee, 1423, 1424, 1426
  - Parliamentary reform, 1360
  - Powers and duties of committees, 1423-4
  - Principle of bill, debating of at second reading, 1361, 1363
  - Printing of rules as appendix to current debate, 1361
  - 'Question' or 'matter', definition of, 1361, 1363
  - Quotations of speeches made in Commons, 1360, 1464
  - Standing Rules and Orders Committee, 1424
  - Terms of reference of committees, 1361-2
  - Unanimous consent, 1362
- Senate business, 221, 222
- Speaker pro tem, 833
- West Coast Ports Operations bill C-56, 730

Medical care

- Ceiling on federal payments, 2317-18, 2338, 2340-1, 2365, 2367, 2369-70, 2372-3
- Costs (1975), 2369; provincial per capital costs, 2370-1
- Excerpt from speeches of Hon. Mr. MacEachen (1966), 2339-40
- Expenditures, anti-inflation program effect on, 2365
- Federal-provincial conferences, 2342-3, 2367, 2373
- Immigration of physicians, 2367
- New Brunswick refusal to participate in program, 2357
- Nursing homes, 2358-9, 2366, 2374; NB, 2358-9
- Physicians' fees, 2372
- Provincial percentage increases (1975-76), 2368
- Provincial reactions to legislation, 2341-2
- Provincial responsibilities, 2365
- Psychiatrists and physiotherapists, 2368-9
- Quebec, 2358-9, 2370
- Seat belts vs accidents and medical care, 2367-8
- Statement of Hon. Mr. Macnaughton, 2341

Medical care - *Concluded

Statement of Hon. Mr. Robarts (1966), 2339
 Statistics on accidents and medical care, 2368
 Victoria conference of provincial health ministers, 2342

Speakers: Senators

Burchill, G. Percival, 2358-9
 Denis, Azellus, 2317-18
 Flynn, Jacques, 2359
 Grosart, Allister, 2359
 Langlois, Leopold, 2359
 Phillips, Orville H., 2357-8
 Smith, G. I., 2338-44
 Sullivan, Joseph A., 2339

also

Lalonde, Hon. Marc, Minister of Health and Welfare, 2236-75

Medical Care bill C-68. 1r, 2307; 2r, 2317-18, 2338-44, 2356-9, 2364-6; bill committed to Committee of the Whole, Hon. Alan A. Macnaughton in the Chair, Hon. Marc Lalonde, Minister of Health and Welfare, taking part in debate, 2366-75; rep without amdt, 2375; 3r, 2378; r.a., 2450

Meighen, Rt. Hon. Arthur, the late, question re removal of portrait from Commons corridor, 53, 564

Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest, Green Paper on, 373, 573-4, 580, 774, 779-81

Ref to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 774

Question of privilege re, 779-81

Mexico, communique of Parliamentary delegation to Canada, 1874, 1887-8

Delegation members, Mexico and Canada, 1887-8

Economic Rights and Duties of States, Charter of, 1887

Tour agenda, 1887

Trade negotiations, 1887

Two hundred mile economic zone ('Patrimonial Sea'), 1887

Mexico, visit of Canadian Parliamentarians, 775-7, 852-3, 930-3

Agriculture, 931, 932

Banff School of Advanced Management, visits to other countries, 930-1

Canadians retired in Mexico, 776-7

Exchange of cultural exhibitions, 776-7

Exchange of visits of parliamentarians and businessmen, 932-3

Housing, 931

Industrial development, 931, 932

Influence in international policies, 775

Joint ministerial meetings, Canada-Mexico, 775

Political system, 776, 853

Chamber of Deputies, 776

Institutional Revolutionary Party and other parties, 776

President, 776

Seasonal agricultural workers in Canada, 777

Standard of living, Canada-Mexico, 775

Tariff preferences for developing countries, 852

Tourism, 853, 931-2

Trade, Canada-Mexico, 776-7, 852-3

Mexico, visit of Canadian Parliamentarians - *Concluded

- Women, status of
  - Chamber of Deputies, 776
  - Equality before law and in all aspects of life, legislation for, 777
  - National programs for family planning, etc., 777
  - Social improvement, 777
- Speakers: Senators
  - Cameron, Donald, 930-3
  - Fergusson, Muriel McQueen, 775-7
  - Flynn, Jacques, 852-3

Michaud, Hon. Herve J.

- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 580-1
  - Deterrent aspect, 581
  - Organized crime society, 581
  - Television portrayals of violence, 580-1
- Crop insurance programs, 1622-3
  - Maritimes crop insurance, 1622-3
    - Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, 1622
    - Spot loss insurance, 1622-3
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 803-05
  - Agricultural production, worldwide need, 803-04
  - French language literature in regard to legislation, 805
  - Full-time and part-time farmers, 803
  - Security requirements, 804
  - Small farms development, 804-05
- Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1160
  - Christmas tree industry, 1169
  - Smallholdings and farmers' woodlots, 1169
  - Statistics on NB forestry ownership, 1169
- New Brunswick economic conditions, 1750-4
  - Acadian heritage, 1753-4
    - Statement of Antonine Maillet, authoress, 1754
  - Agricultural problems, 1751
    - Agronomy students at Laval and Moncton Universities, 1753
    - Inquiry of Senate Agriculture Committee, 1751
    - Meeting of Senate Agriculture Committee and results of, 1753
    - Prospects for young people in farming profession, 1752
    - Statements of Prime Minister and of Agriculture Minister re, 1751
  - Bilingualism, lack of, 1752
    - Globe and Mail* article, 'NB Credit Unions show different approach of French and English', 1752
  - Improvement project in northeastern NB, Evangeline article re, 1753
  - Memramcook Institute as training centre, recommendation re, 1752
  - RC clergy declaration in support of northeast area, 1750-1
- Small Farms Development Program
  - Farm management consultants, 2079
  - Number of loans approved for provinces, 1197-8, 1213

Migratory bird sanctuaries

- Warden services for sanctuaries in the Maritime provinces, contracts for, 279

Ministers of House of Commons taking part in Senate proceedings

- Andras, Hon. Robert K., Minister of Manpower and Immigration
  - Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1695-1706
- Danson, Hon. Barnett, P.C., Minister of State for Urban Affairs
  - National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 748-57
  - National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, 1673-81
- Lalonde, Hon. Marc, Minister of Health and Welfare
  - Medical Care bill C-68, 2366-75

Molgat, Hon. Gildas L.

- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-370, 526-8, 536-7
  - Commissions, members and powers of, 526-7, 536-7
  - Geographic considerations in establishing constituencies, 527, 536
  - Rural and northern constituencies, 527
- Estimates, year ending Mar.31/77, 2190
- Fort-Falls Bridge Authority bill C-367, 851-2
  - Agreement between governments of US and Canada for reconstruction of bridge, 851-2
  - Date of commencement, 851
- Free trade, an economic consideration for Canada, 1849-52
  - Auto pact, 1849
  - Communist world contracts, 1850
  - Economic blocs, development throughout world, 1850
  - Economic Council of Canada report, 1850, 1851
  - Imports, competition to Canadian products, 1850
  - Multi-national corporations, 1850
  - Textile and other manufacturing, problems of, 1851-2
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Tokyo conference, 234-8
  - Arab-Israeli conflict, 236
  - Briefing of delegates, 237
  - Organizational meetings on energy, iron and steel, education, environment and pollution, 235
  - Population trends and economic and social development, 235-6, 237
  - Resolutions presented, 235-6
  - UN Conference on World Population, 236
- New Brunswick economic conditions, 2033
- Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No.2) C-53, 1156-7, 1167-8
  - Damp or tough grain, 1156
  - Date of coming into force, 1157
  - Limitation to wheat, oats and barley, 1167
  - Offboard sales, 1156-7
  - Provisions re initial price, interest, deliveries, etc., 1156
  - Unharvested grain, 1156
- Regulations re attendance of senators, 1934-5
  - Travel distance, 1934
- Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, 928
  - Bread prices, 928
  - Price of wheat for consumption in Canada, 928
  - Production costs, 928
  - Subsidy to producers and consumers, 928
- Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1687-9, 1694-5
  - Advance payment, 1688
  - Background of unemployment insurance, 1687
  - Dependency reduction from 75% to 66 <sup>2</sup>/<sub>3</sub>%, 1694
  - Extension of qualifying period, 1688
  - Leaving employment voluntarily, 1687
  - Overlap between unemployment insurance and other social security measures, 1687, 1694

Molgat, Hon. Gildas L. - *ConcludedUnemployment Insurance bill C-69 - Concluded

Persons 65 yrs. and over, 1688, 1694

Retirement benefit, 1688

Sharing of costs between employees, employers and government, 1688-9, 1695

Sick benefits, 1688

Social insurance number, 1688

Social security measures, increase in benefits (1971-74), 1694-5

Termination of claim, 1688

United Grain Growers Limited bill S-33, 1924-5, 1930

Molson, Hon. Hartland de M.

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1573-4

Government expenditures, 1574

Termination clause, constitutionality of, 1574

Motion for amdt re, 1574

Construction industry in Quebec, pardon granted to Dede Desjardins, 1035, 1066

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2406, 2436-8, 2444

Deterrent aspect, 2436

Organized crime, Montreal, 2436-7

Policemen, possible attitudes of self-preservation, 2437-8

Prison reform, 2437

Prison term, 2438

Question of privilege re press report, 2406

Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee

Unauthorized release to press of draft report, 1755-6

Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/77, 2190-1

Fisheries

Extension to 200-mile coastal jurisdiction, 2208, 2377

Rights of MicMac Indians of Cross Point Reserve to fish Atlantic salmon, 2208, 2264

Gelinass, Hon. Louis-Philippe, the late, 1714

Immigration, presence in Canada of Xaviera Hollander and Gerda Munsinger, 1007, 1013

Judges bill C-47, 1042

Manitoba Indian Brotherhood, meeting with senators, 291

Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., resignation from the Senate, 212

Palestinian Liberation Organization, position taken by Canadian delegation at United Nations meeting, 110, 137-8

Parliament Buildings, use of Senate rooms by members of House of Commons and others, 110

Parole, consideration of changes in present system, 1371

Prime Minister Trudeau's visit to Paris, news report re accompanying officials, 161, 180

Public Works, Langevin Building, costs of renovations under headings of structural, mechanical, decoration and communications, 2243

Rules and Orders Committee

Appointment of chairman, 577

Authority to reprint rules, 1537

Commencement date of amendments contained in report, 1537; order rescinded, new date authorized, 1720

Rules of the Senate

Point of order re motion presented and seconded by senators not present, 944

Rules of the Senate, report of Committee on Standing Rules and Orders, 1317-18, 1331-6, 1355-64, 1423, 1424, 1425, 1426, 1464-6

Absence of senators, 1359

Adjournment of debate for prolonged period, 1465-6

Adoption of report, one day's notice of motion, 1357

Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, terms of reference, 1357

Molson, Hon. Hartland de M. - Concluded

Rules of the Senate - Concluded

- Bilingual form of bills originating in Senate, 1357, 1360
- Committee of the Whole, procedure for discussion in, 1362
- Declaration of property qualification, 1359
- Ex officio* members of committees, 1358
- Forms and proceedings of the Parliament of Canada, 1356, 1362-3
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee, 1357, 1364, 1424, 1464-5
- Joint Committee on Library of Parliament and Other Shared Services, 1359
- Limitation of senator speaking only once in any debate, 1356
- Motion to refer matters to committee, 1357-8, 1363-4
- Motions during debate, 1356
- Motions for which no notice is required (matters of urgent public importance), 1357, 1363
- Oral questions, 1356, 1465
- Organization of committees, 1358
- Powers and duties of committees, 1424
- Preservation of order and decorum in Senate, 1356
- Previous question, 1357
- Principle of bill, debating of at second reading, 1363, 1464-5
- Private bills
  - Deposit of bill and fees, 1359
  - Substantial amendments, notice of, 1359
- Procedure when Speaker leaves the chamber, 1356
- 'Question', or 'matter', definition of, 1363
- Quorum of committees, 1358, 1465
- Quotations from speeches made in Commons, 1356, 1359, 1360, 1363, 1465
- Recalling of Senate earlier than set forth in motion for adjournment, 1356
- Reports from committees, 1359
- Select committees, 1357
- Senator's final reply to inquiry on second reading of bill, 1356
- Speaker addressing house, 1357
- Special procedure or practice in committee, approval of Senate for, 1358, 1364
- Time of daily sittings, 1364
- St. Lawrence Islands National Park, government expenditures on, 1549-50, 1588
- Senate and House of Commons Act
  - Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, 951
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 874
- Senate business, 482, 484
- Televising of committee proceedings, 509, 512-13

Money bills

- Senate authority to amend, 1656-9
- See* Appropriation bills,
Estimates.

Morgentaler, Dr. Henry

- Abortion charges, 1036, 1732, 1742-6, 1767-8
- Admission of facts but denial of guilt, 1745, 1746
- Canadian Institute of Public Opinion*, survey results, 1767, 1774
- Excerpts from notes of supreme court judges, 1773
- Jury decision, reversal by court of appeal, 1767-8
- Statement of Past President of Bar Association, 1773-4

Motor vehicle tire safety

Maintaining and enforcing standards, 126
 National tire safety mark, 126, 150
 Regulations, lack of information on, 150-1
 Replacement tires, 125

Speakers: Senators

Flynn, Jacques, 2069
 Haig, J. Campbell, 149-51
 Hicks, Henry D., 151-2
 Langlois, Leopold, 2066-8
 Neiman, Joan, 125-6, 152
 Perrault, Raymond J., 150, 151

Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8. 1r, 47; 2r, 125-6, 149-52; 3r, 161; Commons amdts, 1048, 2066-8; r.a., 2096

Multiculturalism

Ministry of State, organization and budget, 742, 849, 866

Narcotics

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code, 300, 354-62, 366-8, 374-5, 382-5, 402-06, 446-54, 456, 969-71, 983, 1007-11, 1014-21, 1023-33, 1036-8, 1046-9, 1066, 1074-80
 Study of legislation by Senate committee, question re, 316

National Arts Centre

Reception for English- and French-speaking artists in Speaker's Chambers, 2003

National Capital Region, Special Joint Committee*Members

Commons, 1174
 Senate, 1133

Message from Commons, 1097

Message to Commons, 1126

Reports

First report, Committee quorum, 1237
 Second report, services of advisers and staff, 1914
 Terms of reference, 1097, 1126

National Commercial Bank of Canada

Assets of Canadian domestic banks, statistics re, 959-60
 Authorized capital and shares, 935, 960
 Branch offices, 936, 959, 961
 Comparative United States and Canadian banking statistics, 959
 Head office, 935
 Name of bank, possible conflict re, 960, 974
 Pension funds of crown corporations, investment of, 973-4
 Provisional directors and shareholders, background of, 936, 961-2
 Risk financing, 960
 Specialty operations, 936, 960
 Sponsor (Boyd, Stott & McDonald Limited), 936
 Term deposits, 961
 'Wholesale bank', 936, 973

National Commercial Bank - Concluded*Speakers: Senators

Everett, Douglas D., 961-2
 Flynn, Jacques, 973-4
 Grosart, Allister, 958-61
 Hays, Harry, 935-6, 974
 Laird, Keith, 1062-3

National Commercial Bank of Canada (Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank) bill S-24. 1r, 923; 2r, 935-6, 958-62, 973-4; ref to com, 974; rep with amdts, 1057, 1062-3; 3r, 1063; r.a., 1281

National Defence

Defence spending, remarks by United States Ambassador, report in Globe and Mail, 2122-3

National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment)

Acts deemed traitorous or cowardly exacting death penalty, 834
 Canadian Catholic Conference, statement issued by, 835
 Communication between public and members of Parliament, question of, 895-6
 Crime increase, 835-6
     Montreal kidnappings, 835
     Violation of parole conditions, 836
 Deterrent aspect, 800, 834-5, 840
 Doctrine of atonement, 894
 Government attitude towards total abolition of death sentence, 800
 Law and order, tyrannical use of phrase throughout history, 840-1
 Murder of Chicago boy, 894-5, 896
     Excerpt from autobiography of Nathan Leopold, convicted killer, 895
 Murders of Toronto policemen cited, 800, 801
 National security, 834
 Occupational hazards vs loss of life, 801
 Opinions of prominent lawyers, 894
 Parole or leave of absence records, 801
 Policemen and prison guards, 835
 Quality of mercy, 894
 Rehabilitation, 895
 Royal prerogative of mercy, 894
 Statistics on killings of policemen, 801
Theology and the Death Penalty, paper issued by Task Force for Abolition of Capital Punishment, 835
 UK Royal Commission on Capital Punishment, conclusion of, 841
 Violence in administration of justice, 835
Speakers: Senators
     Argue, Hazen, 800-02, 1459
     Beaubien, L.P., 835-6
     Carter, Chesley W., 893
     Greene, John J., 893-6
     Macdonald, John M., 833-5
     O'Leary, M. Grattan, 840-1

National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment) bill S-23. 1r, 643; 2r, 800-02, 833-6, 840-1, 893-6, Order stands, 1168, 1297-8, 1459, 1816-18, 1836, 1848-9

National Finance, Standing Senate Committee

Auditor General of Canada, report of Independent Review Committee, question of referral to com, 796
 Authority to publish and distribute report on Manpower Division estimates, 2208

National Finance, Standing Senate Committee - Concluded

Budget for expenditure re study of legislation, 525, 795, 1088, 1337, 2119

Counsel and staff, engagement of, 351

Estimates, authority to examine and report on

Year ending Mar. 31/75, 108

Supplementary (A), 108

Supplementary (B), 300

Supplementary (C), 441-2

Supplementary (D), 586

Year ending Mar. 31/76, 555

Supplementary (A), 1409

Supplementary (B), 1824

Year ending Mar. 31/77, 1777

Supplementary (A), 2178

Manpower and Immigration Dept., Manpower Division, com authorized to examine and report on, 400-01, 418-20

Meetings during adjournment, 2048

Meetings during Senate sittings, 684, 774, 795, 973

Members, 96

Reports

Estimates

Year ending Mar. 31/75, 136-7, 189-90

Supplementary (A), 136-7, 189-90

Supplementary (B), 349-51, 372

Supplementary (C), 444

Supplementary (D), 693-4, 695-702

Year ending Mar. 31/76, 971-3, 983-4, 1054-7, 1082-6

Supplementary (A), 1549, 1565-70, 1602

Supplementary (B), 1937, 1948-53, 1966-70

Year ending Mar. 31/77, 2182-3, 2187-91, 2212-14

Supplementary (A), 2223, 2234-5

Supplementary Borrowing Authority bill C-80, rep without amdt, 1649

National Flag of Canada

Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada), 710-11, 714-15, 740

National Forestry Week, 2076*National housing (Bill C-46)

Advisory council, 756

Building materials tax, 745-6, 747-8

Forgiveness provisions for municipalities, 744, 747

Government costs, 746

Handicapped persons, 753

Housing starts, decrease in, 742, 744-5, 747, 749

Indians, 751

Inspection of projects, 746, 751

Interest charges, 747

Mortgage insurance plan, 753, 754, 755

Newfoundland, deterioration of buildings after lease expiry, 755-6

New homes, mortgage provisions, 743

Non-profit and cooperative housing, 743, 745, 750

Older homes, 745

Registered home ownership program, 746, 747

National housing (Bill C-46) - Concluded

Rental housing projects, 743, 746, 754
 Senior citizens, 749, 750
 Sewage treatment plants and trunk storm sewer systems, 744, 747, 756
 Statutory limits for making and insuring loans, 744, 756
 Veterans, 750
 US program for income tax deductions of interest and municipal taxes, 748

Speakers: Senators

Buckwold, Sidney L., 747-8, 749, 754, 755
 Carter, Chesley W., 750, 751, 752, 755
 Cook, Eric, 755-6
 Flynn, Jacques, 742, 753, 755, 756
 Grosart, Allister, 744-7, 748, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757
 Hicks, Henry D., 744, 754
 Lamontagne, Maurice, 749, 751
 Manning, Ernest C., 744
 McIlraith, George, 742, 743-4
 Neiman, Joan, 752-3
 Riley, Daniel, 749
 Williams, Guy, 751
also
 Danson, Hon. Barnett, Minister of State for Urban Affairs, 748-57

National Housing bill (No.1) C-46. 1r, 742; 2r, 743-8; bill committed to Committee of the Whole, Senator Bourget in the Chair, Minister of State for Urban Affairs Hon. Barnett Danson taking part in debate, 748-57; rep without amdt, 757; 3r, 757; r.a., 758

National housing (Bill C-77)

Abuses of legislation privileges, 1678
 AHOP, 1673-4, 1676, 1678
 Appraisal of housing costs in various areas, 1678
 Continuity of program and target, 1676
 Cooperatives, 1679
 Costs of program, 1677
 Critical areas of housing, 1674
 Density, 1674
 Design, 1674
 Expenditures of interest reduction grants (1976), 1679
 House price limits, 1676
 Housing standards and construction quality, 1673, 1675, 1676-7
 Inflationary effect of new regulations, question of, 1673
 Land assembly programs of municipalities, 1675
 Loans and grants, 1674
 Low cost medium density housing, $1000 grants to municipalities, 1680
 New Brunswick semi-detached homes under AHOP, 1673-4
 Private funding, 1675
 Refinancing of mortgage, 1676
 Rental accommodation, 1677
 Repayment conditions, five-year clause, 1678
 Servicing of land, 1675
 Single parent family, 1676
 Two-person families, 1674
 Warranty from builder to owner, 1681

National housing (Bill C-77) - Concluded*Speakers: Senators

Grosart, Allister, 1667, 1671-2, 1677, 1678, 1679-80, 1681
 Macdonald, John M., 1676, 1678, 1679, 1680
 Macnaughton, Alan (Chairman, Committee of the Whole), 1673-81
 McIlraith, George, 1667-9, 1671, 1672-3
 Perrault, Raymond J., 1667, 1671
 Phillips, Orville H., 1669-71, 1675, 1676
 Williams, Guy, 1678
also

Danson, Hon. Barnett, Minister of State for Urban Affairs, 1673-81

National Housing bill (No.2) C-77. 1r, 1667; 2r, 1667-73; bill committed to Committee of the Whole, Senator Macnaughton in the Chair, Minister of Urban Affairs Hon. Barnett Danson taking part in debate, 1673-81; rep without amdt, 1681; 3r, 1681; r.a., 1712

National lottery, proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada, 2103-04, 2110-11, 2160-3, 2168-9, 2191

Excerpt from speeches or statements re, 2160
 Excerpt from speech of Treasury Board President, 2162-3
 Gullibility of the poor in relation to lotteries, 2162, 2169
 Method of authorization for, 2103-04, 2110-11, 2160-3, 2168-9
 Policy of government in fiscal matters, departure from, 2162
 Regressive taxation, 2162, 2169
 Religious attitudes towards gambling, 2169

Speakers: Senators

Flynn, Jacques, 2161
 Forsey, Eugene A., 2103-04, 2110-11, 2160-2, 2163
 Grosart, Allister, 2163
 Hicks, Henry D., 2168-9
 Perrault, Raymond J., 2161, 2162-3
 Rowe, Frederick William, 2169

National Museums

Storage of Canadiana, 2209
 Artisanship of John D. Howe, 2217

National Press Gallery

Invitation to reception issued to members of Parliament, question, 61-62

National unity

National interests and unity, 28-30
 TV program 'Les Beaux Dimanches', separatist tendencies, 1127-8

Natural resources

Resource development, 38
See Energy resources

Neiman, Hon. Joan

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 14-18
 Capital punishment, expiration of trial period of partial abolition, 1656, 1716
 Criminal Code (Commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 937-40, m that subject matter be ref to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 940-1
 Cabinet decisions re commutation of death sentence, 940
 Petition of Right Act, 939

Neiman, Hon. Joan - Concluded

- Criminal Code bill S-21 - Concluded
  - Remission Service of Justice Dept., Fauteux Commission on, excerpt from report, 937
  - Responsibility of judge and jury, 940
  - Royal prerogative, 937-40
  - Statistics on death sentences, 940
  - Statutory power of clemency, 937-8
  - Treatise on the Laws, Privileges, Proceedings and Usages of Parliament*, excerpt from, 938-9
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No.1) C-71, 1898, 1907
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No.2) C-84, 2421-3
  - Challenge to identify violent and anti-social behaviour, 2421
  - Disparities in treatment of accused persons, 2422
  - Excerpt from proceedings of Commons Justice and Legal Affairs Committee, 2423
  - Parole, 2423
  - Prison term, 2423
  - Professional criminals, resources of, 2422
  - Toronto Sun* article re sex offender, 2421-2
- Economic conditions, 15-16
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee
  - First report, 255
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 354-8, 456, 1017-18, 1076-7
  - Cannabis, 354-6, 357-8
    - Convictions for possession of, 355-6, 1017-18
    - Effects of, 357
    - Research on, 357
  - Drugs and alcohol, use by teenagers, 355-6
  - LeDain Commission, 354
  - Search by police, authority for, 356
  - 'Sell', 'traffic', 'give', definition of, 1017-18
- Government expenditures, 16
- Inflation, 15-16
- Law reform, 16-17; family law, 16-17; abortions, 17
- Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, 125-6
  - Maintaining and enforcing of standards, 126
  - Replacement tires, 125
- National Housing bill (No.1) C-46, 752-3
  - Handicapped persons, 753
  - Senior citizens, 753
- Native people, 17
- Oil crisis, 15
- Parliamentary reform, 17
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 820
- Social security, 16
- Status of women, 16-17
- Televising of committee proceedings, 547
- Transportation, 16

New Brunswick

- Bay of Fundy power potential, 112
- Bilingualism
  - Agricultural representatives, 121-2
  - Globe and Mail* article, 'NB Credit Unions show different approach of French and English', 1752
- Court of Appeal decision re K.C. Irving, Ltd., 1023, 1045-6
- Economic conditions, 1750-4, 1817-20, 1821, 1854-5, 2009-13, 2015-18, 2033
- Ferries operating between Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, possible increase in fares, 1815

New Brunswick - Concluded

Forestry, devastation by Spruce budworm, 1158-63, 1169-70, 1218-20, 1230-2, 1816
 Kent County, report of Agriculture Committee, 2308, 2334
 Lumber industry, effect of inflation on, 122
 Saint John, increase in bus fares, 1815-16
 Storm damage, possibility of federal aid, 1720-1, 1729-30

New Brunswick economic conditions, 1750-4, 1817-20, 1821, 1854-5, 2009-13, 2015-18, 2033

Acadian heritage, 1753-4, 2009-12, 2016-17
     Acadian Village, 2012
     Statement of Antonine Maillet, authoress, 1754
 Advertisement of Regional Economic Expansion Dept. entitled The New Approach, 2012
 Agricultural problems, 1751, 1818, 2009-10
     Agronomy students at Laval and Moncton Universities, 1753
     Meeting of Senate Agricultural Committee and results of, 1751, 1753
     Prospects for young people in farming profession, 1752
     Statements of Prime Minister and of Agriculture Minister re, 1751
 Artists and musicians from NB, 2018
 Bilingualism, lack of, 1752
     Globe and Mail article, 'NB Credit Unions show different approach of French and English', 1752
 Fisheries, 1818-19
 Gloucester County, 2012
 Highways, Route 11, 2012
 Improvement project in northeastern NB, Evangeline article re, 1753
 Infrastructural works, government expenditures on, 1818
 Memramcook Institute as training centre, recommendation re, 1752
 Mineral resources, 2019
 Mining, 1819
 New Brunswick Psychological Association, letter to Premier of NB., copy to Prime Minister, 2010-11
 Nuclear power plant, change of site, 1817
 Relocation of workers, 2011
 RC clergy declaration in support of northeast area, 1750-1
     Recommendation re farmlands, 1751
Saint John Telegraph-Journal article re Northeast New Brunswick, 2012
 Shipping, 1820
 Social equality program, 2017-18
 Tourism, 1819
 Transportation, 1819
 Unemployment, 1820
Speakers: Senators
     Fournier, Michel, 1817-20
     Michaud, Herve J., 1750-4
     Molgat, Gildas L., 2033
     Riley, Daniel, 2009-13
     Robichaud, Louis-J., 2015-18

Newfoundland and Labrador

Anniversary of entry into Confederation, 139
 CNR services in Newfoundland, 1868, 1903
 Come-By-Chance refinery, financial assistance for, 1826-7, 1860
 Curling, congratulations to Newfoundland Rink on winning of Canadian Men's Championship, 1889
Education and Culture in Newfoundland, by Hon. Frederick William Rowe, 2308-09
 Fisheries, ice conditions, 117; foreign fishermen inside limit, 117
 Judges, 1005, 1040-3, 1051-3, 1066, 1080, 1095

Newfoundland and Labrador - *Concluded

- Marine safety, request for location of air and sea rescue units in Newfoundland, 1860
- Offshore gas and oil, negotiations between federal government and producing provinces, 2070, 2142
- RCMP, request for use of during labour strike, 965-6
- Trans-Canada highway, maintenance cost subsidies, 1903, 1922
- Transportation
  - Air Canada service St. John's-Ottawa, 506-08
  - Inter-city passenger routes, Canadian Press article re, 139-40
  - North Sydney-Cape Breton-Port aux Basques, 139
  - Passenger trains, eastern Canada, 52, 140
  - Strait of Belle Isle, 64
  - Trans-Canada Highway, 63-64

Newspapers, periodicals, speeches, interviews, etc., excerpts from

- Abortion, article in Status of Women News, 120-1
- Anatomy of Human Aggression, 917, 1289
- Articles on Senate by Senator Rowe, press account of, question of privilege, 480
- Autobiography of Nathan Leopold, convicted killer, 895
- Business Corporations Law for Canada, report of Task Force, 490
- Canadian armed forces in Europe, article re, 1493
- Canadian Pacific: A Brief History, by J. L. McDougall, 40-41
- Canadian Pacific Railway - A Century of Corporate Welfare, by Robert Chodos, 38-39, 40
- Canadian Press
  - Article entitled "Senior civil servants bitter over Ottawa's wage example", 1351
  - Article quoting statement of Hon. Mr. Pepin, 1576
  - Article re CNR estimates and plans, 139-40
  - Report of statements made by Leader of the Government re matter concerning Senator Giguere, 1395-7
- Canadian Transportation and Distribution, statement by Transport Minister re transportation policy, 42-43
- Capital punishment, statement issued by Canadian Catholic Conference, 835
- Communications: Some Federal Proposals, 850
- Crime Against Internationally Protected Persons: Prevention and Punishment - an Analysis of the UN Convention, 1769
- Crime and Punishment as Ritual of Life, excerpt from article by Dr. Carl Menningers, 920
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, question of privilege re newspaper article, 2406
- Drug epidemic, excerpt from Healthways Magazine, 374
- Economic prospects, excerpts from speeches by Minister of Finance and by Senator Lamontagne, 168-9
- Education and Culture in Newfoundland, by Hon. Frederick William Rowe, 2308-09
- Energy Policy for Canada - Phase I, Vol. I, Analysis, 1216
- Equal rights, statement of Helvi Sipilä, UN Assistant Secretary General for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs, 836, 896
- Excerpts from Prime Minister's speeches re anti-inflation legislation, 1454-5
- Financial Post: Transportation costs, 43
- Financial Times: 'Canada left out - Crucial oil meeting next month', 605
- Financial Times survey re percentages of wage settlements, 2105
- Globe and Mail:
  - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, article by Prof. J. D. Morton re constitutional problems of White Paper, 1320
  - Canadian Defence spending, remarks by United States Ambassador, 2122-3
  - Canadian Pacific Railway, article re, 43, 44
  - Equal opportunities for women, article re, 187
  - Price controls, 1323
  - Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee Chairman Senator Forsey, article re, 794-5
  - Sarnia-Montreal pipeline, statement by President of Interprovincial Pipelines, 112
  - Senate reform, statements by Prime Minister, 32

Newspapers, periodicals, speeches, interviews, etc., - Continued

- Globe and Mail - Concluded
- Time magazine, article by J. Carruthers re, 582-3
- Whittling Down a Freedom, editorial re, 582, 641-2
- Government expenditures, effect on inflation, excerpt from report of Canadian Economic Policy Committee, 1056
- Helsinki Declaration, statements by leaders of various nations re, 1758
- Housing, excerpt from speech by Hon. Mr. Danson, 1457
- Income Security for Canadians, White Paper on, 250
- Inequalities between men and women, UN publication re, 838
- La Presse report of alleged statement re CBC by Senator Lamontagne, 1165-6
- Leading Cases in Constitutional Law, excerpt from decision in 'Edinburgh and Dalkeith Railway Company v. Wauchope', 391
- Managing the Future: Conference on Anticipatory Institutions, 1171, 1221
- May's Parliamentary Practice, 'Queen's Consent to Bills', 566
- Ministry of State for Science and Technology, paper re National Research Council functions, 114
- Modern Senate of Canada, The, excerpt re Minister explaining bills in the Senate, 218
- National Flag, speech by Governor General on initial raising of, 710
- National Research Council, financial assistance for, excerpt from paper of Ministry of State for Science and Technology, 114
- Newspapers featuring articles on Helsinki Conference, 1757, 1759-60
- Newsweek article on drug control, 1451
- Nobel Peace Prize winner, refusal of USSR to permit acceptance of award, letter from Senator Forsey re, 1761
- Ottawa Citizen article titled 'Carpets escape the axe', 1585
- Ottawa Journal article re comments of President of Time Canada before Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 2140
- Ottawa Journal article re Nova Scotia storm damage, 1766
- Palestinian Liberation Organization, attendance at UN General Assembly, statement re position taken by Canadian delegation, 110, 137-8
- Peking Review article on USSR disregard of agreements, 1760
- Police Costs - Where are all those Millions?, booklet issued by Quebec Justice Dept., 538
- Poverty in Canada, report of Senate Special Committee, updated, 282
- Pricing of Crude Oil: Economic and Strategic Guidelines for International Energy Policy by Taki Rifai, 618
- Prime Minister's speeches re government policies on controls, 1443
- Psychopathic personality, sociopathic personality and character neurosis, excerpt from address by Prof. James McHorter, 919-20
- Regional development incentives, Halifax-Chronicle Herald article re, 1620
- Remission Service, excerpt from report of Fauteux Commission, 935
- Science policy, excerpts from speeches of and letters from Prime Minister and from Deputy Secretary of Cabinet re Institute for Research on Public Policy, 296-7, 1171-2, 1221
- Secondary industry trade policies, Separatist leader's comments re government attitude, 978
- Social Security in Canada, Working Paper on, 250
- Song of Equality for International Women's Year, by Jacqueline Lemay, 673
- Status of women, Le Devoir editorial re, 1103
- Textile industry, Gazette articles re, 781-2
- Theology and the Death Penalty, paper issued by Task Force for Abolition of Capital Punishment, 835
- Tidal power, Bay of Fundy, excerpt from paper by George Baker, P.Eng., 112-13
- Toronto Globe and Mail article 'The Brutal Reality of Brezhnev's Policy', 1759
- Treatise on the Laws, Privileges, Proceedings and Usages of Parliament, 938-9
- Unemployment in Victoriaville clothing industry, Le Devoir article re, 844
- US judicial system, Canadian Press report in Saint John Telegraph Journal, 692
- US Police: A New Image?, excerpt from Christian Science Monitor, 1254-5

Newspapers, periodicals, speeches, interviews, etc., - Concluded

- Wage and price controls, US publication by C. J. Grayson, Chairman of Prices Commission re unsatisfactory results of, 1351
- Wall Street Journal article by Claire Boothe Luce re permissive society, 1290-1
- Whatever Became of Sin?, by Carl Menninger, 1291
- 'Why Not' campaign, comments of Hon. Marc Lalonde, women MPs and others, 672-3

Norrie, Hon. Margaret

- Abortion, 120-1
  - Priorities for Government Action, 121
- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 120-2
- Air Canada service Ottawa-Halifax, question of privilege, 1479-80
- Animal Contagious Diseases bill C-28, 1632-3
- Bilingualism, agricultural representatives, New Brunswick, 121-2
- Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-92, 2039
- Crime and violence, 1252-5
  - Basic principles for prevention of crime, 1253
    - Statement of Henry Fielding, founder of crime prevention organization, 1253
  - Netherlands crime reform, 1253-4
    - Communication between prisoners and personnel, 1254
    - 'Land Without Prisons', Newsweek article, 1253
    - Penal system, 1253
    - Prison population, comparisons, 1253-4
    - Rehabilitation, 1253
  - US Police: A New Image?, excerpt from Christian Science Monitor, 1254-5
  - Youth training, 1253
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 863-4
  - Age limit, 863
  - Maritime farmers, problems of, 863-4
- Feed grains, assistance to Atlantic provinces, 1035
- Feeds bill S-10, 161-2
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 120
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, tribute on occasion of resignation from the Senate, 968
- Habitat, United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, report of Canadian National Committee, 2099-2102
- Halifax Relief Commission Pension Continuation bill C-78, 1717-18
  - Background of Commission formed after Halifax explosion, 1717-18
  - Pensions and allowances paid to widows and disabled persons, 1718
  - Transfer of responsibilities and assets to Canadian Pension Commission, 1718
- Inflation, 121-2
  - Beef industry and prices, 122
  - Supply of goods and services, 121
- International Women's Year, 836-8
  - Abortion law, 837, 838
  - Asia and Africa, male domination, 837
  - Inequality of wages for men and women in Canada, 838
  - Statement of Helvi Sipilä, UN Assist. Sect. General for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs, 836
  - UN Charter, 836
  - Women's responsibility in economics, social and cultural development, worldwide friendly relations and cooperation, 836
  - Women's wages in Italy, 837
- Televising of committee proceedings, 550

Norrie, Hon. Margaret - Concluded

Transportation

BNA Act as it pertains to transportation, 2211-12

Atlantic provinces, 2211-12

Halifax container pier, 2212

Halifax and Saint John, 'Gateway to Eastern North America', 2211-12

Passenger rail service, 2212

Sea-Wings cargo business, 2212

Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1703

North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1489-94, 1513-16, 1726-8

Armed forces in Europe, 1489-93, 1494, 1726, 1727

Canadian troops, 1491-2, 1493; newspaper article re, 1493

Central Europe and Warsaw Pact countries, 1491

Equipment statistics, various countries, 1490-2; aircraft, Lockheed P-3 Orion, 1492, tanks, Leopard and

Centurion, 1491, 1492, 1494

Nuclear power, 1490-1

Reserves, 1492, 1494

US military bases in Spain, 1493

Canada's role in NATO, 1490, 1727-8

Canada's community of interests, 1727-8

Senate representation, 1490

Defence policy, 1493, 1726, 1727

Canada's contribution, 1727

Education, Cultural Affairs and Information Committee, 1515, 1517

Energy resources, protection of, 1492-3

Helsinki Agreement, 1515

Interparliamentary advisory Council and sub-committee, 1493-4

Political Committee, 1514

Recommendations and Resolutions adopted at Copenhagen Session, 1514-15, 1517-23

Challenges of Modern Society Committee, 1520

Eastern Mediterranean, 1515, 1518, 1522-3

East-West relations, 1515, 1519

Economic aid to Portugal, Greece and Turkey, 1520

Energy supplies within the Atlantic Alliance, 1521

Eurogroup activities, 1521

International Policy for raw materials, 1523

Middle East, 1514, 1522

National economic policies, 1517

National energy policies, 1521

Nuclear energy, 1523

Portugal, 1514, 1522

Rationalization of defence resources within Alliance, 1518-19

Restructuring of NATO forces, 1517-18

Science Committee budget, 1519-20

Spain, 1514, 1522

United States arms embargo on Turkey, 1521-2

World economic order, 1520

World monetary reform, 1520-1

Soviet Union, armed forces and equipment, 1515-16

Warsaw Pact, 1727-8

Speakers: Senators

Carter, Chesley W., 1494

Grosart, Allister, 1493-4

Lafond, Paul, 1726-7

North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference - *ConcludedSpeakers: Senators - *Concluded

McDonald, A. Hamilton, 1489-94

Perrault, Raymond J., 1727-8

Yuzyk, Paul, 1514-16

North Atlantic Assembly, London conference, 342-7, 362-5, 456-9

Canadian delegation, 344, 364-5

Canadian troops in Lahr and Baden, and equipment for, 345-6

Defence of Western European Union, 345

Economic Committee discussions, 457-8

Defence budgets, 457

Energy supplies, 457, 458

Inflation, 457

Recommendations, 457

Education, cultural affairs and communications, 362

Mutual and balanced force reductions, 344-5

NATO, 342-7, 362

Information service, 364

Oil crisis, 344

Political differences, 362

Problems in Cyprus, Greece, Turkey and Middle East, 345

Replacement of aircraft, 345

Security and cooperation in Europe, 362-3

Ukrainian historian Valentyn Moroz, confined in Vladimir prison, 363-4

US amendment to trade bill, 363

USSR, 342-3, 345, 363-4, 458

Economic conditions and trade prospects, 458

Maritime forces, 345

Territorial gains as result of World War II, 342-3

Treatment of dissidents, 363-4

Speakers: Senators

Lafond, Paul C., 456-9

McDonald, A. Hamilton, 342-7

Yuzyk, Paul, 362-5

North Atlantic Treaty OrganizationSee* North Atlantic Assembly, 342-7, 362-5, 456-9Northern Canada Power Commission

Commission members, functions and jurisdiction, 808, 813, 814

Construction of transmission network, 808

Employment of native people, 808

Expenditures over $50,000, approval of Governor in Council for, 814, 815

Financial records and procedures, maintenance of, 809

Lack of authority of Yukon and NWT councils, 814

Meetings of Commission, 840, 851

Operating budget, 808, 809

Ownership of northern generating power, 808

Power rates, 814

Speakers: Senators

Bourget, Maurice, 807-09, 814-15

Choquette, Lionel, 813-14

Connolly, John J., 840, 851

Smith, Donald, 815

Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13. 1r, 795; 2r, 807-09, 813-15; ref to com, 815; rep with amdts, 840, 851; 3r, 855; Commons concurrence in Senate amdts, 1005; r.a., 1095

Northland Bank bill C-1002. 1r, 1524; 2r, 1598-1600; ref to com, 1600; suspension of rule 95, 1601; rep without amdt, 1602; 3r, 1619; r.a., 1712

Northwest Territories

Appointment of senators to represent Territories, 1005, 1054, 1060-2, 1081, 1095
 Fire losses replacement account, 325, 338, 353, 366, 397
 Northern Canada Power Commission, 807-09, 814-16, 840, 855, 1005, 1095
 Northwest Territories representation in Commons, 583, 594-5, 622-3, 642, 656
 Senate appointment, question, 1772

Northwest Territories representation

Boundaries of constituency, 594-5
 BNA Act, amdt re NWT representation, 622
 Chairman of Commission, terms of appt., 623
 Indians and Eskimos, voting franchise, 622
 Neo-colonialism in respect of Territories, 623
 Population statistics, 595
Speakers: Senators
     Grosart, Allister, 622-3
     Prowse, J. Harper, 594-5

Northwest Territories Representation bill C-51. 1r, 583; 2r, 594-5, 622-3; 3r, 642; r.a., 656

Nova Scotia

Cape Breton coal mines, operating losses, 176; DEVCO, 176
 Destruction of forests and residential property by fire, 2178-9
 Halifax Relief Commission pension continuation, 1714, 1717-18, 1721-3
 National Defence cutbacks as result of anti-inflation program, 1683, 1716
 Springhill fire disaster, possibility of federal aid, 1241-2
 Steel industry, Cansteel study of Atlantic rim, 176
 Storm damage, 135-6, 1765-6

Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to India and to Argentina, 1859-60, 1869, 1975, 2142

Ocean dumping control

Alternate disposal in controls of dumping, 1050
 Appeal agency, 1050-1
 Conference on Law of the Sea, Geneva, 1050
 Courts of criminal jurisdiction, 1040
 Deliberate or accidental dumping, 1051
 Detainment, seizure or forfeiture of ships and aircraft, 1039-40
 Dumping by aircraft over land, 1040
 Exceptional circumstances involving safety of human life, 1039
 Federal-provincial consultation, 1050
 London Convention on ocean dumping control, 1038-9, 1050
 Ontario, pollution of lakes and rivers, 1050
 Oslo Convention, 1039
 Penalties for contravention of act, 1039
 Permits for dumping, 1039, 1050
 Times, rates of disposal, etc., compatible with protection of marine environment, 1039

Ocean dumping control - *ConcludedSpeakers: Senators

Belisle, Rheel, 1049-51

Connolly, John J., 1040

Macnaughton Alan A., 1038-40, 1051

Ocean Dumping Control bill C-37. 1r, 1005; 2r, 1038-40, 1049-51; ref to com, 1051; rep without amdt, 1088;
3r, 1088; r.a., 1096

Official languages

Implementation of resolution re, report to Parliament tabled, 289-90

Language rights of air pilots in Quebec, 2344-8, 2378-86

Quebec official language, 54-58, 829, 912

Report of Commissioner for fiscal year ended Mar. 31/74, tabled, 757

Report of Commissioner for fiscal year ended Mar. 31/75, tabled, 2003

See Bilingualism and biculturalismOfficial languages

Motion that Senate support language rights of air pilots in Quebec (Hon. Maurice Lamontagne), 2344-8, 2378-86

Speakers: Senators

Flynn, Jacques, 2344, 2345, 2348, 2378-81

Lamontagne, Maurice, 2344-6

Langlois, Leopold, 2381-6

Perrault, Raymond J., 2386

Walker, David, 2346-8

Oil

Income tax, 583, 606-14, 616-21, 627-40, 645-56

Indian oil and gas, 325, 337-8, 351-3, 402, 426, 467

International conference of oil-producing and oil-consuming countries, 605-06, 744-5

See Energy resourcesOld age security

Absence from Canada, 1103

Calculation of income, 1102

Discrimination reflecting on Bill of Rights, 1124

Federal-provincial responsibilities in social security, 1101

Guaranteed income supplement, 1101-02

Inflation and cost of living, 1123

Joint application, 1124, 1125

Married or common-law status, 1124, 1125

Means test, 1102

Overpayments, 1103

Statistics on recipients and benefits, 1123-4

Suspension of allowance, 1102

Termination of allowance upon husband's death, 1124, 1125

Universality vs selectivity, 1025

White Paper on Income Security for Canadians, 1101

Working Paper on Social Security in Canada, 1101

Speakers: Senators

Carter, Chesley W., 1101-03, 1125-6

Choquette, Lionel, 1126

Phillips, Orville H., 1123-5

Old Age Security, Old Age Assistance bill C-62. 1r, 1087; 2r, 1101-03, 1123-6; 3r, 1126; r.a., 1134

O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan (Deceased Apr. 7/76)

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 48-51
- Alberta-British Columbia Boundary bill S-13, 223-4
  - Boundary Commission, composition of, 223-4
- Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, 768-70
  - Book of Kells, Ireland, 770
  - Bureaucracy in discretionary powers of minister, 768
  - Canadian identity and nationalism, 769
  - Freedoms of thought and action, elimination of in over-protection by government, 768, 770
  - Preservation of muniments, excerpt from statement of Hon. Joseph Howe, 770
- European Parliament, 316-19
  - Canada-US relations, 317-19
  - Finished products, export of, 317
  - Treaty of Rome, 316, 317
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 58
- National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment) bill S-23, 840-1
  - Deterrent aspect, 840
  - Law and order, tyrannical use of phrase throughout history, 840-1
  - UK Royal Commission on Capital Punishment, conclusion of, 841
- Representation bill C-36, 435-6
  - Increase in parliamentary representatives, executives and assistants, opposition to, 435-6
  - Salary increases of members, 436
- Senate reform, 49-51
  - Appointments, 50-51
  - Committees, 50
  - Initiation of bills, 49
  - Investigation of provincial rights, 49-50
  - Suspensive veto, 49
- Tributes, 2034-6
- United Nations Peacekeeping Force, pension benefits for dependants of Canadian soldier killed in Cyprus, 760, 768

Olympic bill C-63. 1r, 1174; 2r, 1188-90, 1198-1205; ref to com, 1205; rep without amdt, 1211; 3r, 1211; r.a., 1281

Olympics

- Coin-selling program to include gold coins, 1188-9
- Cost according to market price of gold, 1189
- Deficit forecast, 1199, 1200, 1201, 1203
- Expenditures, inflationary trend, 1204
- Federal government responsibility for Games, 1199-1201
- Gold content of coins, 1204-05
  - Statement of Postmaster General, 1204-05
- Gold requirements for program, 1198
- Limit on coins to be issued, 1189
- Location of Games, regional and national aspects, 1201-03
- Lottery receipts, 1188
- Minister's statement re possible withdrawal of Bill C-63, 1202, 1204-05
- Permanent assets from capital investments, 1203

Olympics - Concluded

- Profit potential from sale of gold coins, 1199
- Programs of government assistance for Games, 1189-90, 1199
- Security costs, 1199
- Trade marks and copyrights, 1189
- Western Canada attitude towards expenditures undertaken for Games, 1201-02
- Western Canada projects sponsored by federal government, 1202

Speakers: Senators

- Argue, Hazen, 1201-02
- Asselin, Martial, 1200-01
- Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 1188-90, 1198, 1204-05
- Flynn Jacques, 1203-04
- Langlois, Leopold, 1202-03
- Macdonald, John M., 1198-1200
- Manning, Ernest C., 1201, 1202

Olympic Games, flame ceremony on Parliament Hill, 2419*Ontario

- Corporations Act, 493, 495, 496
- Legal profession statistics, 625
- Police force, claim for compensation for maintenance, 501-3, 568
  - Costs of administration of force, 568
  - Financial implications of RCMP provincial operations, 501, 502
  - RCMP contracts, letter from Solicitor General re, 503
- Pollution of lakes and rivers, 1050

Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police

- Motion that matter of compensation by federal government be referred to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 954-5, 962-6, agreed, 966
  - Advantages to contracting provinces in use of RCMP, 962-3
  - Alberta, 965, 966
  - British Columbia, 965
  - Coordination and cooperation of various police forces, 964
  - Cost-sharing formula, 955
  - Federal-provincial negotiations re RCMP, 963, 965
  - Financial obligation of province to pay for provincial force, 964
  - Newfoundland, request for use of RCMP during labour strike, 965-6
  - Option of provinces, 965
  - Police forces in metropolitan centers, 966
  - RCMP operations in Ontario and Quebec, 963; in other provinces, 954
  - RCMP work in matters under federal jurisdiction, 964-5
  - Subsidizing by Ontario and Quebec and other provinces, 955

Speakers: Senators

- Carter, Chesley W., 966
- Grosart, Allister, 964
- Manning, Ernest C., 965-6
- McIlraith, George, 963-5
- Perrault, Raymond J., 962-3

See Quebec Provincial Police

Opening of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament

- Communications from Governor General's Secretary, 1, 2
- Speech from the Throne, 2-7
- See Address in reply to Speech from the Throne

Orders in Council dealing with prerogatives of Prime Minister, 1349, 1355

Ouellet, Hon. Andre, Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs

- Announcement of resignation because of pending contempt of court appeal, 1890-3, 1920-3

Pacific Western Airlines, possible move of head office to Calgary, 1824-5, 1859, 2376, 2444

Palestinian Liberation Organization, status as participants at United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and position taken by Canadian delegation, 137-8, 1238, 1242-4, 1248-9

- Current discord at international conferences, 1238
- Resolution adopted by General Assembly inviting PLO to attend Congress, 1238
- Statement of Secretary of State for External Affairs re government decision to request postponement of meeting, 1248-9

Parliament

- Sessions of Parliament, legislative program, 1902-03

Parliamentary immunity

- Question of privilege, 1398-1403
- Statement by Leader of the Government, 1409

Parliamentary reform, 17, 28-29

- Conflict of interest, 28, 153, 163, 373, 573-4, 580, 774, 779-81
- Senate reform, 32, 49-53, 62-63, 74-75, 184

Parliamentary secretaries

- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries, 847, 856-61, 868-80, 889, 899

Parliament Buildings

- Centre Block, inaccuracies in commercial use of pictures of, 1765, 1777
- East Block accommodation, 2185
  - Advisory Commission on Parliamentary Accommodation, 2185
  - Letter from Commons Speaker to Prime Minister, tabled, 2185
- East Block, cost of proposed renovations, and preservation of Privy Council Chamber, 241, 279
- East Block, Senate use of rooms, proposal, 110
- Identity cards for senators, 179-80
- Ottawa Citizen* article re question of privilege of Senator F. W. Rowe, 1777
- Senate, use of rooms by Commons members and others, 110
- Use of picture in commercial advertising of Guaranty Trust, 556, 564, 956-7

Parole

- Consideration of changes in present system, question, 1371
- Criminal Law Amendment (Crown liability, immigration, parole) bill C-71, 1714, 1730-3
- Parole in Canada, report of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, tabled, 10

Passports

- Passport Office refusal to accept $50 and $100 in Canadian currency, 2037, 2077
- Restrictions on special passports of MPs, article in Globe and Mail, 2262-3, 2362-3, 2443
- Use of diplomatic and special passports for travel to Namibia, 2363-4, 2443-4

Paterson, Hon. Norman McL.

- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2448
  - Murder of Moncton policemen, 2448
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2005-06, 2301
  - Canada-US relations, 2005-06
  - Foreign investments contributing to Canadian revenue, 2005
  - Reader's Digest* article, 2005
- United Grain Growers Limited bill S-33, 1925
- Western Grain Stabilization bill C-41, 1766

Penitentiaries

- Action taken to implement principal recommendations of Special Joint Committee, 2200
- Proposed construction of medium security prison in Saint John, 1916-17, 1922-3

Pensions

- Lieutenant governors, 1304, 1337-40
- Pension Plan, Canada, 242, 249-52, 277-9, 300, 307, 314

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate

- Abortions
  - Study of procedure for obtaining therapeutic abortions, committee on, 1428, 1624-5, 1639, 1654-5
- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 26-30
- Air Canada service Fredericton-Ottawa, 855, 867
- Aird, Hon. John B., resignation from the Senate, 334
- Air Transport, flight delays due to labour dispute, 2062-3, 2168
- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1503-08, 1511, 1512-13, 1559-64, 1575-7, 1579, 1580, 1582, 1586, 1587
  - Agriculture and support programs, 1563
  - Anti-Inflation Board, 1506, 1511
    - Functions and powers of Board and Administrator, 1506, 1560, 1562
    - Regulations of Governor In Council, 1506, 1511, 1561
  - Bank interest rates, 1582
  - Compensation, fringe benefits, etc., 1504, 1505
  - Constitutionality of bill, 1561
  - Cost inflation, wage and price controls to counteract, 1503
  - Energy, food and housing supplies, 1504
  - Enforcement provisions, 1505-06, 1508
  - Existing contractual arrangements, 1505
  - Export profits, 1504
  - Federal-provincial cooperation in application of guidelines, 1507-08, 1512-13, 1561, 1586
    - Toronto high school teachers, 1507, 1508
  - Fish and farm products, exemption from guidelines, 1504
  - Government expenditures, 1504, 1507
  - Human rights, protection of, 1560
  - Judicial review of decisions of Appeal Tribunal, 1563-4
  - Labour leaders' attempts to defeat program, 1505
  - Low-income groups, 1504-05
  - Maintaining of balance of fiscal and monetary policies, 1504
  - Penalty for contravention of guidelines, 1505
    - Appeals to Tribunal, 1506, 1560; costs, 1562
  - Postal workers, 1587

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

- Anti-Inflation bill C-73 - Concluded
  - Prices and incomes policies, 1504, 1508, 1562
  - Productivity and compensation for, 1508-09
  - Professional compliance, 1504
  - Public reaction and result of polls, 1560
  - Statement of Hon. Mr. Pepin, Canadian Press article re, 1576
  - Three-year period of program, 1505, 1562-3, 1575-7, 1586
  - US-Canada wage demands and productivity, 1507
- Anti-inflation program, questions
  - Budget reduction in Regional Economic Expansion Dept., 1683
  - Family allowances, 1683, 1716, 1721
  - Government rejection of Board's opinion re postal workers' contract, 1627-8, 1655
  - Judges' salaries, 1662, 1681
  - Meeting of Minister of Finance and provincial representatives re implementation of guidelines, 1549
  - National Defence cutbacks in Nova Scotia, 1682, 1716-17
  - New Brunswick, increase in bus fares in Saint John, 1846
  - Wage guidelines, 1683
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 416
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1975 C-79, 1615
- Auditor General of Canada, report of Independent Review Committee, question of referral to com, 796
- Austin, Hon. Jacob, introduced in the Senate, 1354
- Bills, printing and distribution of, 61
- Bills, public and private, dealt with during session, 1286-7
- Boucher, Hon. William A., the late, 2251
- Bourque, Hon. Romuald, the late, 11
- British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 133
  - Advertising of bill, 133
- British Columbia Women's Basketball Team, 1889
- British Trade Mission offices, 252
- Budget, date of presentation, 161
- Canada-United States boundary, government policy re demarcation line on Dixon Entrance on Strait of Juan de Fuca, George's Bank and northwards, 2308
- Canada-United States relations, 1626-7
  - BC provincial election, question re comments of US ambassador, 1627
  - Canadian Radio and Television Commission, policy re commercial content of cable systems, 1626-7
  - Communications between Canada and US, newspaper article re, 2192-3, 2377-8
  - Report of Foreign Relations Committee tabled, 1716
  - Unofficial meeting of US Ambassador with media representatives in Ottawa, 1626
- Canadian Armed Forces casualties in defence of France in World War I and World War II, 1417
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
  - Munsinger, Gerda, presence in Canada and appearance on television program, 1034, 1073, 1239-40, 1257, 1618-19, 1625
- Canadian coins, reported change in design, 1937, 1955
- Canadian economy
  - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1293, 1298-1303, 1319
    - Anti-Inflation Board, functions and powers, 1301-2
    - Consultations with provincial finance and labour ministers, 1303
    - Dollar value (1946-75), 1298, 1319
    - Energy, raising of costs by OPEC nations and effect on Canada's economy, 1299
    - Guidelines of attack on inflation, 1300
    - Housing needs, 1301
    - Labour and industry, wage settlements affecting international trade, 1300
    - Maximum increase allowable to wage earners and other income groups, 1301

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

Canadian economy

Attack on Inflation - Concluded

Parliamentary and other governmental restraints, 1301

Powerful groups to be affected, 1300

Professional groups, 1301

Canadian Labour Congress

Political affiliation, 2153-4

Possibility of general strike, newspaper report re meeting and proposals for liberal corporatism, 2130

Salary increases for officers, 2159, 2209-10

Canadian National Railway

Cost of construction of tower in Toronto, 2185-6, 2263-4

Services in Atlantic provinces, 1923-4, 1976

Canadian Press report of statements made by Leader of the Government re matter concerning Senator

Giguere, 1396-7

CTV news report on death of Viateur Ethier and misrepresentation as member of Conservative Party, 1241

Candu reactors, proposed sale to Argentina and Korea, 1307, 1319

Citizenship bill C-20, 2311, 2312, 2324, 2336-7, 2348-9, 2362, 2444

Federal-provincial conferences, 2284-5

McGill Law Journal article 'The Central Fallacy of Canadian Constitutional Law', 2348

Powers of Lieutenant Governor in Council, 2312

Referral of clause 33 to Supreme Court, question of, 2348-9, 2362, 2444

Clerk's Scroll, 1667, 1684-5

Combines investigation, New Brunswick court of appeal decision re K. C. Irving, Ltd., 1023, 1045-6

Combines, planned takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd., of Argus Corporation, 1064

Committee meetings, co-ordinating committee to arrange scheduling, 828-9, 1091

Committee meetings during Senate sittings, 1856-7

Committees, implementation of new schedule of meetings, 1937-8

Committees, sub-committee meeting, 1931

Committees work during session, 1287-8

Conflict of Interest, Green Paper, 28, 774

Question of privilege re referral to com, Hon. Mr. Croll, 574, 580, 779-80

Connaught Laboratories testing adjacent to proposed housing development, 616, 732, 902

Construction industry in Quebec, pardon granted to Dede Desjardins, 1035, 1066

Copyright Act, Economic Review, 'Crown copyright reserved', replacement of words, 2200, 2322-3, 2362

Crerar, Hon. Thomas A., P.C., the late, 779

Criminal Code

Abortions, Dr. Henry Morgentaler's acquittal of charges, 1036

Control of weapons and firearms, question as to progress of bill in committee stage, 479

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2309, 2387, 2406, 2428-33, 2440

Alternatives to death by hanging, 2430

Background of convicted killers, psychological effects of, 2429-30

Commutations, 2430

Date of introduction in Senate, question, 2309

Deterrent aspect, 2429, 2431, 2432

Parole, 2430

Psychological and moral aspects, 2432

Question of privilege (Hon. Mr. Molson), 2406

Recidivist percentages, 2429

Unequal aspects of implementing penalties, 2432

Vengeful reactions towards violence, 2428-9

Wilson, Prof. James Q., study on criminal behaviour, 2431, 2432

Criminal law, subject matter of Bill C-83 ref to com, 1852-3

Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate, reappointment of Hon. Leopold Langlois, 46

Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee, 188-9

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - *Continued

Energy resources

- Conservation of fuel, car awaiting Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, 2209, 2443
- Construction of Arctic gas pipeline, supply of Arctic gas to southern Canada, 2037-8, 2069-70
- Development of tidal power in Bay of Fundy, 2070, 2142
- Government policy re Canadian ownership of companies developing oil and gas on crown lands, 1259-60
- International conference of oil-producing and oil-consuming countries, 605-06, 774-5
- Lighting of government buildings, 606, 1238-9
- Offshore oil and gas resources in Atlantic Provinces, 2070, 2141-2, 2143
- Oil and gas reserves, negotiations between federal government and governments of producing provinces, 2070
- Passamaquoddy-Cobscook Bay, US Corps of Engineers report on, 2210-11
- Prices for crude oil and natural gas, announcement of minister re, 2142-3
- Proposed construction of pipeline from Prince Rupert to Edmonton, 2037
- Proposed pipeline treaty between Canada and United States, 2037

Energy, Statement of Policy, Proposed Petroleum and Natural Gas Act and New Canada Oil and Gas Land Regulations, 2169-71

- Background of Statement of Policy, 2171
- Crude oil and natural gas prices, 2169, 2170
- Dependency on imported oil, 2170
- Discretionary powers under new regulations, 2171
- Domestic energy, increase in prices, 2170
- Exploration and development in frontier regions of Canada, 2170, 2171
- Export prices of natural gas, 2170
- Freeze period on petroleum products prices, 2170
- Government decisions re crude oil and natural gas prices, 2170
- National energy strategy for Canada, 2169-70
- Reduction in average use of energy, 2170
- Self-reliance on natural gas, 2170

Environment, protection of coastal waters from radio-active pollution, 889, 924

Estimates

- Family allowances, 1084
- Government restraints, 1083
- Loto Canada, 2247-9
- Oil subsidies, 1084
- Purchases of goods and services, 1084, 1085
- Recommendation of Canadian Economic Policy Committee, 1084
- Transfer payments to provinces, 1084
- Unemployment insurance, 1083

Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/76, rep of National Finance Committee, 1082-5, 1086

European Community, Canada's claim for compensation re loss of preferential access of Canadian commodities to British market, 579-80, 662, 671

- Cheddar cheese, Canadian, 671
- Concessions of interest to Canada, 671
- Negotiations leading to agreements between various countries, 671
- Wheat and barley, 671

Excise Tax bill C-66, 1275-6, 1280

- Building insulation materials, 1277
- Export and import oil commitments, 1275
- Gasoline for personal use and for travel to and from place of business, 1276-7
- Gasoline tax in other countries, 1280
- Nova Scotia home heating costs, 1275
- Subsidy paid by low-income persons, 1276
- Worldwide oil crisis, 1275

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

- External Affairs Department, Passport Office, refusal to accept $50 and $100 denominations, 2037, 2077
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 886, 887, 890
  - Rejection by Commons of amdt similar to Senate proposed amdt, 890
- Federal government buildings, Langevin Block and Justice Building, 137
- Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements bill C-57, 1186-7
  - Medicare, government concern and reassessment of programs, 1186-7
    - Home care and clinical supervision, 1186
    - Remote areas, problems of, 1187
    - Shortage of persons in medical profession, 1187
  - UK health services, unsatisfactory operation of, 1186
- Feed grains, freight assistance to Atlantic provinces, 1035
- Felicitations to Hon. Renaude Lapointe, Hon. Paul Martin and others, 26
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, speech at unveiling of portrait of, 469
- Ferries operating between Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, 1815, 1860, 1861
- Ferry service between North Sydney and Port Aux Basques, possible increase in fares, 1861
- Fisheries
  - Extension of 200 mile coastal jurisdiction, 2208, 2377
  - Rights of MicMac Indians of Cross Point Reserve to fish Atlantic salmon, 2208, 2264
- Florida land deals, involvement of Canadians in alleged swindle, 1012, 1198
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1028, 1029-30
  - Absolute or unconditional pardon, 1030
  - 'Give', 'trafficking', definition of, 1028-30
  - Regina vs Christiansen*, case cited, 1029
- Foreign affairs
  - Aid to Chile, 1438-9, 1597-8
  - Canadian Defence spending, remarks by United States Ambassador, report in Globe and Mail, 2122-3, 2192-3, 2201
  - Special passports of MPs, restrictions on, 2263, 2362-3
- Forestry, devastation by Spruce budworm, 1162, 1163, 1219-20, 1230-2
  - Acreage affected in Ontario, Quebec, Maritimes and Newfoundland, 1219
  - Economic results from destruction, 1219
  - Federal cost-sharing in aerial control programs, 1219-20
  - Lumber companies participation in control, 1220
  - Position statement prepared by Environment Department, 1230-2
    - Effectiveness and efficiency of chemical control, 1230-1
    - Possible alternatives to widespread use of chemicals, 1231-2
    - Scope and effectiveness of environmental monitoring, 1231
    - Task force report, 1220
- Gasoline excise tax, 1101, 1112-13
- Gelinas, Hon. Louis-Philippe, the late, 1713
- Gouin, Hon. L.M., retirement from the Senate, 2057
- Government expenditures, 27-28
- Government Expenditures Restraint bill, questions re date of introduction in Senate, 2130, 2159, 2264
- Government Whip in the Senate, appointment of Hon. William J. Patten, 46
- Grain inspectors' dispute, settlement of, 336
- Grain subsidies paid on shipments to Eastern Canadian ports for export, 2156, 2201-02, 2211, 2376-7
- Grey Cup Game, Vancouver, 301
- Habitat, United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, report of Canadian National Committee, 1963, 2199-2200, 2278-9
- Helsinki Declaration on European Security and Co-operation, 1293
- Identity cards for senators, 180

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

Immigration

- Gulf Islands, British Columbia, ministerial discretion permits, 2322
- Presence in Canada of Xaviera Hollander and Gerda Munsinger, 1007, 1013

Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 649-52

- Energy resources, 649-52
  - Alberta, incremental royalty, 650
  - Corporate tax reduction, 652
  - Exploration expenditures write-off, 652
  - Federal-provincial agreements, 649-51
  - Government revenue loss, 651, 652
  - Prices, 650

Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1992-2002, 2274, 2337, 2396-7

- British law re purchase of advertising on foreign stations, 1994
- Broadcasting, 1998-2002
  - Bellingham station, 1998-2002
  - Mexican border stations, 2000-01
  - UHF TV, Vancouver, 2000
  - Warmetco station, 1999
- Canada-US relations, 1994, 2000
- Canadian advertising in Time, 1993
- Discussions with Committee Chairman re amdts, 2274
- Freedom of advertising, 1993
- Mexican President's statement re relations with US, 1995-6
- Time* and Reader's Digest, 1993-8
  - Advertising revenue, 1994
  - Subscription rate, Canada and US, 1995-6

Indians and Eskimos

- Manitoba Brotherhood, request to appear before Senate committee, 316
- Recruitment development program, 569

Industry, textile imports affecting Canadian industry, 901-02, 945-8

- Dollar value of imported suits or suiting, 901
- Government concern and study of problem, 901-02, 945-6
- Import control list, 946
- International Trade in Textiles, agreement re, 947
- Polyester-cotton fabrics, sources of imports and processing of, 946
- Polyester filament yarn, duty surtax on, 946
- Restraints to be implemented on imports of men's suits, acrylic yarn, knit fabrics and nylon, 901
- Textile and Clothing Board, role of, 946
- Inquiry into imports of certain fabrics and clothing, 946-7

Inflation, 27 (See Canadian economy)

Inman, Hon. Elsie F., illness of, 1931

Insulin, production of, 110-11

Justice, administration of, allegations of interference by cabinet ministers, 1825-6, 1846-8, 1857-9, 1920-2, 1930-1

Drury, Hon. Charles Mills, resignation offer and rejection by Prime Minister, 1890-3, 1920-2

Ouellet, Hon. Andre, resignation because of pending contempt of court appeal, 1890-3, 1920-2

Kickham, Hon. Thomas J., the late, 324

Labour conditions

- Montreal Police Force, threatened strike, 849
- Strike of longshoremen in Quebec, back-to-work legislation, 833, 838-9, 840, 846, 849, 855, 867, 888, 900-01, 912

Withdrawal of services by longshoremen at Montreal, 1006-07

Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C., the late, 532

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
  - Expenses, 526
  - Meetings during Senate sittings, 543
- Liberal Caucus, invitation to members of Opposition, 1868
- MacKay, Hon. John, Lieutenant Governor of Prince Edward Island, the late, 135
- MacKenzie, Hon. Norman, visitor to Senate, 1303
- Marine safety, British Columbia fisheries, 1814-15, 1860
- Marine safety, request for air and sea rescue unit in Newfoundland, 1860
- Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., resignation from the Senate, 208-09
- Meighen, Right Hon. Arthur, the late, portrait of, 564
- Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest, Green Paper on, 574, 580
  - Subject-matter ref to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 774, 779-80
- Money bills, Senate authority to amend, 1656
- Montreal police force, threatened strike, 849
- Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, 150, 151
- Multiculturalism, Ministry of State, organization and budget, 849, 866
- Narcotics, study of legislation by Senate committee, 316
- National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, 1667, 1671
- National interests and unity, 28-30
- National lottery, proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada, 2161, 2162-3
  - Excerpt from speech of Treasury Board President, 2162-3
  - Method of authorization for lottery, 2163
- National museums, storage of Canadiana, 2209; artisanship by John D. Howe, 2217
- National Press Gallery, invitation to reception, 61
- New Brunswick storm damage, possibility of federal aid, 1720-1, 1729-30
- Newfoundland, CNR services, 1868, 1903
- Newfoundland, financial assistance for Come-By-Chance refinery, 1860
- North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1727-8
  - Canada's community of interests, 1727-8
  - Warsaw Pact, 1727-8
- Northwest Territories, Senate appointment, 1772, 1778
- Nova Scotia, storm damage, 135-6, 1766
- Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to Argentina, 1975, 2142
- Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to India, 1869, 1975
- Official languages
  - Implementation of resolution re, report to Parliament tabled, 289-90
  - Language rights of air pilots in Quebec, 2386
- Oil export tax, 1264, 1265-6
- O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan, the late, 2034
- Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation by federal government, 962-3
  - Advantages to contracting provinces in use of RCMP, 962-3
  - Federal-provincial negotiations, 963
  - RCMP operations in Ontario and Quebec, 963
- Pacific Western Airlines, possible move of head office to Calgary, 1824-5, 1859, 1868-9, 2376, 2444
- Palestinian Liberation Organization, position taken by Canadian delegation at United Nations meeting, 110, 137-8
- Parliamentary reform, 28-29
- Parliament Buildings
  - Commercial use of Centre Block picture on Christmas cards, 1765
  - Commercial use of Parliamentary Library picture by The Publishers Clearing House, 1764-5
  - East Block, use of rooms by senators, proposal, 110
  - Senate, use of rooms by members of Commons and others, 110

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

- Parole, consideration of changes in present system, 1371
- Passports
  - Restrictions on special passports of MPs, article in Globe and Mail, 2262-3, 2362-3, 2443
  - Use of diplomatic and special passports for travel to Namibia, 2363-4, 2443-4
- Penitentiaries, proposed construction of medium security prison in Saint John, 1916-17, 1922-3
- Penitentiaries, recommendations of Special Joint Committee, implementation of, 2200, 2249
- Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 906-07
  - Alberta-Ontario-Quebec prices, 907
  - 'Political price fixing', 906
  - Prices vs international political price fixing, 906
  - Provincial royalties, 907
  - Provisions to achieve uniform price, consumer and producer protection, 906-07
- Political Parties, possible RCMP investigation, 2063
- Post Office, opinion of Anti-Inflation Board re settlement with Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1597
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1285, 1319, 1355, 1370-1, 1403, 1409-10, 1416-17, 1428, 1429, 1430, 1439, 1459, 1468
- Prerogatives of Prime Minister, orders in council re, 1349, 1355
- Prime Minister Trudeau's visit to British Columbia with cabinet ministers, 1763, 1764
- Prime Minister Trudeau's visit to Paris, news report re accompanying officials, 161, 180
- Privileges and immunities of senators, motion for appointment of special committee, 1434-6; Order discharged and motion withdrawn, 1733-4
  - Hiring of counsel and staff, 1435
  - Terms of reference, 1433
- Privileges of Parliament
  - Parliamentary Library, commercial use of picture of, 1729, 1764-5
- Progressive Conservative Party of Canada, leadership convention, 1778, 1813
- Public Service
  - Bank's refusal to cash government cheques, 1974-5, 2003-04, 2008
  - Commission, new offices, interior wall decoration, 1930, 1975-6
  - Salary bracket of $60,000, 889
  - Strike of general labour and trades group, 642
- Public Works
  - Langevin Building, costs of renovations under headings of structural, mechanical, decoration and communications, 2243
- Quebec Official Language Act, decision of federal government on petition, 912, 924-5
- Queen Elizabeth, celebration of Silver Jubilee in Canada, 1318-19, 1403
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1639-40, 1662-3, 1664, 1665-6
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, newspaper article re Chairman Senator Forsey, 794
- Representation bill, 1974 C-36, 420-3, 437-8, 439-40
  - Quebec, 421
  - Representation by population, 421
  - Statistics of provincial representations, 422-3, 437, 439, 440
- Restaurant of Parliament, source of meat supplies, 1007, 1012-13
- Rowe, Hon. Frederick William, publication of book, Education and Culture in Newfoundland, 2308-09
- Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, 1209
- Rules of the Senate
  - Initiation of money bills, 887
  - Point of order, amending of money bills, 886
    - Excerpts from Commons Standing Orders and from Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules and Forms re, 886
  - Referral of items to National Finance Committee, 1109, 1110
  - Suspension of rule 95 re private bills, 1209
  - Use of unparliamentary language, 1109

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

- Saint John, N.B., increase in bus fares, 1815, 1816, 1846
- St. John the Baptist Day, 2259
- St. Lawrence Islands National Park, government expenditures on, 1549-50, 1588
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 817-18, 821, 826-7
  - Government policy in conciliation matters, 826
  - Grain supplies in Quebec, 826
  - Injunctions obtained by private interests, 827
  - Maritime Employers Assoc. and International Longshoremen's Assoc., 817, 818
  - Mediator Charles Poirier (1975), 817
  - Mediator Judge Alan Gold (1974), 817
  - Parliamentary responsibility in settlement of dispute, 817
  - Penalty clause, 827
  - Rate of pay, 818
- St. Patrick's Day, 1902
- Saskatchewan, safety of Gardiner Dam, 2179, 2377
- Science Policy Committee, 1259
- Senate
  - Adjournment from afternoon to evening sitting, 1108, 1110
  - Adjournment, summer, 1280
  - Business, 31, 60-61, 222, 255-6, 454-5, 713, 714, 723, 848-9, 878-9, 1091, 1107, 1111, 1250, 1261-4, 1265, 1286-7, 1653-4, 1661, 1682, 1686, 1712, 1717, 1718-19, 1875-6, 1879, 1880, 1914-16, 1954-5, 1966, 2356
  - Committees, work of, 28-29
  - 'Consecutive sitting days', 31
  - Monday evening sittings, question of, 1879, 1880
  - Photographing of precincts and of senators for distribution to Canadian embassies, 473
  - Protective staff, summer uniforms, 1156, 1213-14
  - Reform, article in Globe and Mail quoting statements of Prime Minister, 47
  - Role of, 28-29
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 856-9, 879-80
  - Commissioners to be appointed by Governor in Council for annual inquiry into allowances, 858
  - Comparisons with newspaper reporters and editors, 857
  - Economic problems of members of Parliament, 879
  - Expenses and travel allowances, 858
  - Food retailing industry, salaries, 879
  - Indemnities and allowances, adjustment of, 857, 859
  - Industrial composite index (1970-74), 857
  - Opposition members, 858
  - Provincial legislature allowances, 858
  - Senate and Commons, sitting days and hours of work, 880
  - Service to the public, importance of, 879-80
- Senate (Intersessional Authority) bill S-22, 770-1
  - Administration of internal economy of Senate between sessions, 771
  - BNA Act provisions re privileges, immunities and powers of Senate, 771
  - Committee meetings between sessions, 772
  - Intersessional authority, question of money bill concept, 771
  - Royal prerogative, necessity of, 771
- Sessions of Parliament, 1903
- Small Farms Development Program
  - Farm management consultants, 2079
  - Number of loans approved for provinces, 1197-8
- Smith, Hon. George Isaac, introduced in the Senate, 1282
- Spain, King Juan Carlos I, attendance at coronation of, 1485

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

Sports

Congratulations to Montreal Canadiens on winning of the Stanley Cup, 2199

Congratulations to Newfoundland Rink on winning of the Canadian Men's Curling Championship, 1889

Springhill, N.S., fire disaster, possibility of federal aid, 1242

Tailoring service for Senate and Commons, 2167

Tax treaties or conventions with other countries, 855, 867, 925, 942

Televising of committee proceedings, 509, 510, 513, 548-9

Television commercial advertising of Guaranty Trust, use of picture of Parliament Buildings, 556, 564, 959-7

Transportation

Bilingual air traffic services, Commission of Inquiry, 2261-2, 2322, 2335, 2352-3

Crowsnest Pass freight rates, 889, 924

Disruption of airline services in Canada, 2237, 2243, 2249-50, 2258-9

Memorandum of Understanding between the Minister of Transport and the Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association, 2276-7

Trans-Canada highway, maintenance cost subsidies, Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island, 1903, 1922

Transport Minister Hon. Jean Marchand, rumour of resignation, 573

Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1693, 1694

Opposition criticisms of bill, 1693-4

Persons 65 years and over, 1694

Studies of systems in other countries, 1693

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, invitation to send Canadian Parliamentarians to Russia, 1250-1, 1257

United Kingdom Prime Minister Harold Wilson, visit to Ottawa, 473, 480

United Nations Assembly resolution re Zionism, 1411, 1417, 1439

United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention, status of Palestinian Liberation Organization as participants, 1166, 1238, 1242-4, 1248-9

Canada's participation in refugee relief, peacekeeping and ceasefire missions, 1244

Current discord at international conferences, 1238

Resolution adopted by General Assembly inviting PLO to attend, 1238

South Africa, exclusion from UN, 1243-4

Statement of Secretary of State for External Affairs re government decision, 1248-9

United Nations Peacekeeping Force, pension benefits for dependants of Canadian soldier killed in Cyprus, 768

Uranium of Canada, Limited, proposed referral of report to National Finance Committee, 1639

Victoria Memorial Museum, rumoured change of name, 1035, 1165

Visitors to Parliament, abatement of noise in precincts, 1012

Welfare ministers' conference, statement by Minister of NHW re federal policy in social welfare field, 556, 564

West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12, 77-78, 80, 89-93, 94

Basic hourly rate, 78, 92

Conciliation commissioner, Dr. Neil Perry, recommendations of, 77-78, 89-90, 91-92

Consultations between government representatives and company officials in Saskatoon, 91

Cost-of-living and pension proposals, 94

Industrial Inquiry Commission, proposal of Labour minister, 78

Legislative proposals, 78

Term of collective agreement, 78, 80, 89

West Coast Ports Operations bill C-56, 724-5, 728-30

Collective agreement provisions, 725

Disruption to economy due to strike, 724, 725

Mediator W. Kelly, Labour Assist. Deputy Minister for Industrial Relations, 724

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - *Concluded

- West Coast Ports Operations bill C-56 - Concluded
  - Negotiations process, 724
  - Non-supervisory and supervisory longshoremen, 724
  - Penalty for failure to comply with legislation, 729-30
  - Stevedoring companies and ship and dock foremen, 724
  - Time limit on proceedings of arbitrator, 728
- Wheat Board
  - Adjustment payments to grain producers, 1297
  - Annual report, 732-3

Petro-Canada

- Authorized capital, 1178
- Control by Governor in Council, 1218
- Crown corporations's assets, 1216
- "Energy Policy for Canada - Phase I, Vol. I, Analysis", 1216
- Equity and debt investment for Petro-Canada, 1216
- Establishment of national petroleum company as crown corporation, 1178, 1215
- Excerpt from minister's statements re petroleum industry, 1215
- Foreign control, 1217
- Government policies detrimental to small companies, 1215, 1216
- Private sector achievements, 1215-16
- Revenues for exploration, 1217
- Sale of government interest in Panarctic Oils, 1178
- Scope of activities, 1178-9
- Speakers: Senators
  - Cook, Eric, 1178-9, 1218
  - Grosart, Allister, 1215-18

Petro-Canada bill C-8. 1r, 1174; 2r, 1178-9, 1215-18; ref to com, 1218; rep without amdt, 1244; 3r, 1251; r.a., 1281

Petroleum administration

- Alberta Energy Board, 926
- Alberta-Ontario-Quebec prices, 907
- Alberta-Saskatchewan-British Columbia, oil production for national consumption, 914, 925
- Consumer and producer protection, 903, 906-07, 916
- Control of profits to ensure reinvestment in exploration and development, 905-06, 914
- Cost compensation, 851
- Crude oil prices, 851, 903, 904
- Domestic oil, 862
  - Administration of interprovincial trade, 862
  - Exercise of federal power, 862
  - Federal-provincial agreements, 862
  - Licences for interprovincial transactions, 862
  - Penalties for default of provisions, 862
  - Price restraints, 862
- Dwindling of irreplaceable resources, 903, 926
- Elements creating instability and uncertainty in oil exploration, 904-05
- Exchange of energy between US and Canada in certain regions, 905
- Federal-provincial relations and national unity in solving of problems, 903-04, 915-16
- Federal-provincial temporary arrangements, controversy re, 913
- Frontier oil, 913
- Natural gas, price restraints and controls, 914

Petroleum administration - Concluded

Nuclear and other energy components, control of, 914-15
 Petroleum export voluntary charge payable to National Energy Board, 861-2
 Political price-fixing, 902-07, 915
 Prices, 906, 914, 925-6
Pricing of Crude Oil, by Taki Rifai, 926-7
 Production costs, 926
 Provincial royalties, 907, 913
 Sarnia-Montreal pipeline, 915
 Use of petroleum products in various sectors, extent of, 913

Speakers: Senators

Flynn, Jacques, 982, 1002
 Grosart, Allister, 912-16
 Hays, Harry, 861-3, 934-5
 Macnaughton, Alan A., 981-2
 Manning, Ernest C., 902-06, 907
 Perrault, Raymond J., 906-07
 Prowse, J. Harper, 925-7

Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 1r, 847; 2r, 861-3, 902-07, 912-16, 925-7, 934-5; ref to com, 936; rep with amds, 981-2, 1002; motion to amend French version, 1013; 3r, 1013; Commons concurrence in Senate amds, 1034; r.a., 1095

Petten, Hon. William J., Chief Government Whip in the Senate

Agriculture Committee, meetings during Senate sittings, 1022
 Appointment to office of Government Whip, 46
 Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, meetings during Senate sittings, 1006
 Committee meetings, schedule of, 828
 Investigations in Parliament, 1479
 National Finance Committee, meetings during Senate sittings, 774, 827
 Senate business, 774, 828, 1022, 1036

Phillips, Hon. Orville H.

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1575, 1583-4
 Appeals, 1583
 Motion for amdt, 1583
 Regulations, 1583
 Termination clause, 1575
 Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, 2104-05
 Appeal Tribunal members, 2106
 Backlog of appeals to board, 2105
 Financial Times survey re percentages of wage settlements, 2105
 Government spending, 2105
 Inflationary effects of high interest rates, food, fuel and transportation costs, 2104
 Maritime wage settlements, 2104, 2106
 Money supply, 2105
 Women's professional and business groups, 2104
 Anti-inflation program
 Budget reduction in Regional Economic Expansion Dept., 1683
 Government rejection of Board's opinion re postal workers' contract, 1627, 1655
 Wage guidelines, 1683
 Appropriation bill No. 2, 1976 C-91, 1984-6

Phillips, Hon. Orville H. - Continued

Canadian economy

Attack on Inflation – a program of national action, 1284, 1293, 1298-1303, 1312-14

Anti-Inflation Board, 1314

CBC News Magazine commentary re financial operations of business groups, 1314

Conferences with provincial finance and labour ministers, 1312

Cost-of-living index (1970-75), 1312-13

Deputy ministers' salaries, 1314

Government expenditures, 1313-14

Interest rates, 1313, 1314

Low income groups, 1313, 1314

Mirabel Airport, 1314

No-interest loans to foreign countries, 1314

Parliamentary and other governmental restraints, 1313

Regional disparities, 1313

Voluntary restraints, 1313

Canadian Labour Congress, salary increases for officers, 2159, 2209-10

Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-92, 2039-40

Carleton University award of Rip Van Winkle award to Veterans Affairs Minister, 2039-40

Evaders and escapees, 2040

Prisoners of war held at Dieppe, 2040

Prisoners of war held by Japanese, 2040

Widows' allowances, 2040

Energy resources

Prices for crude oil and natural gas, announcement by minister re, 2142

Energy, statement of policy re oil and gas, 2179-81

Berger inquiry, 2180

Canada-US relations, 2179

Development of frontier resources, 2180

Electricity costs, Atlantic provinces, 2181

Energy conservation, gas and oil, 2179-80

Exploration regulations, 2181

Hydroelectric power generation, statement of Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, 2180

Nuclear energy, 2180

Oil prices, 2181

Petro-Canada, 2181-2

Provincial exports of energy, 2180

Estimates

Bilingualism, 1986

Housing grants, 1986

Lockheed long-range patrol aircraft, 1984-5

Nova Scotia heating costs, 1985

Oil subsidies to Ottawa Valley line, 1985

Olympic Games deficit, 1985, 1986

Percentage increase in government expenditures, 1984

Transport Department reductions, 1985-6

Two-price wheat system, 1985

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1036-7

Fingerprinting, 1037

Parole or pardon, 1037

Summary conviction or conviction upon indictment, 1036

Medical Care bill C-68, 2357-8

Federal-provincial conferences, 2357, 2358

New Brunswick refusal to participate in medicare program, 2357

Nursing homes, 2358

Phillips, Hon. Orville H. - Concluded

- National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, 1669-71, 1675, 1676
  - AHOP, 1676
  - Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., 1670
  - First purchase, question of, 1676
  - Grants and repayable loans, 1670
  - Housing costs, 1669
  - Mortgage arrangements, 1670
  - Mortgage funds, diversion to low and moderately-priced housing, 1669
  - Processing of applications, 1670
  - Refinancing of mortgage, 1676
  - Rental accommodation, 1670
  - Servicing of land, 1669
  - Single parent family, 1670, 1676
  - Standards, 1669-70, 1675
- Old Age Security bill C-62, 1123-5
  - Discrimination reflecting on Bill of Rights, 1124
  - Inflation and cost of living, 1123
  - Joint application, 1124
  - Married or common-law status, 1124
  - Statistics on recipients and benefits, 1123-4
  - Termination of allowance upon husband's death, 1124
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1370, 1371
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine and Trade Marks bill S-35, 2132
- Quarantine bill S-31, 1785-6
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1663, 1666
- Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, 1205-06
  - Assets or property, branch holdings, 1206
  - Closing of small branches due to membership drop, 1205-06
  - Legion background, 1205
  - War veterans allowance, 1205
  - Youth programs, 1205
- Transportation, BNA Act as it pertains to, 2063-6
- Transportation, flight delays due to labour dispute, 2062-3, 2168

Point of order

- Adjournment from afternoon to evening sitting, 1110
- Amending of money bills, 886-8
  - Excerpt from The Modern Senate of Canada, 887
  - Precedents of amdts by the Senate, 887
  - Rights of Senate in Matters of Financial Legislation, report of special committee, 887-8
- Appropriation bill, 387-8, 390
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill, discussion on amdt, 1015
- Initiation of money bills, 887
- Investigations in Parliament, 1477-8
- Minister speaking on behalf of government, 1202
- Motion presented and seconded by senators not present, 944
  - Speaker's statement re, 944
- Question of privilege re Air Canada service, 506-07
- Question of privilege re Green Paper on Conflict of Interest, 779-81
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1666
- Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, motion re, 952
- Senate reform, discussion out of order, 1578-9
- Unscheduled speakers taking part in debate, 560
- See Privilege*, question of

Police forces

- Montreal police, threatened strike, 849
- Murder of Moncton policemen, 529, 561
- Ontario and Quebec provincial police, financial compensation for maintenance, 501-04, 537-40, 567-9, 603
- Motion for referral to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 954-5, 962-6, agreed, 966

Polish Ambassador, His Excellency Jozef Czesak and Mrs. Czesak, visitors to Senate, 1442

Political Parties, possible RCMP investigation, 2063

Post Office

- Anti-Inflation Board's opinion re settlement with Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1597
- Government rejection of Anti-Inflation Board's opinion re contract settlement, 1627-8
- Strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1285, 1319, 1355, 1370-1, 1409-10, 1416-17, 1428-31, 1454, 1459, 1468

Poverty in Canada

- Children in poverty, report by National Council of Welfare, 625-6
- Real and fraudulent poverty, 241
- Report of Special Senate Committee, updated, 281-2, 626
- Unequal distribution of wealth, 475
- Work ethic in Canada, 281-8, 339-42, 474-8, 518
- Working poor, 283

Prairie grain advance payments (Bill C-10)

- Abuses of cash advances, question of, 615
- Corporate farms, partnerships, cooperatives or farming enterprises, 596, 614
- Crowsnest Pass Agreement, 598
- DREE, 599
- Elevator companies, question of commission for, 596, 597, 615
- Flax, 597-8
- Grants and subsidies to railways, 599
- Increase in advance payment to $15,000, 595, 614
- Instigation of Act by Conservative government, 614
- Investment of cash advance payments, 615, 622
- Labour problems and effect on wheat and farm industry, 600
- Loans in relation to land values, 596-7
- Option to deliver on quota system or by offboard sales, 596
- Prices and production costs, 615
- Railway branch lines, proposed removal of, 598-9
- Repayment record, 615

Speakers: Senators

- Argue, Hazen, 597-9, 600, 602
- Benidickson, W. M., 615
- Buckwold, Sidney L., 599, 600
- Flynn, Jacques, 599, 600
- McDonald, A. Hamilton, 595-7, 615, 621-2
- Sparrow, Herbert O., 598, 599
- Yuzyk, Paul, 614-15

Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) C-10. 1r, 583; 2r, 595-601, 614-15, 621-2; ref to com, 622; rep without amdt, 684; 3r, 709; r.a., 731

Prairie grain advance payments (Bill C-53)

Damp or tough or unthreshed grain, 1156, 1166, 1167
 Date of coming into force of act, 1157
 Offboard sales, 1156-7
 Persons authorized to purchase grain for board, 1166
 Provisions re initial price, interest, deliveries, etc., 1156
 Repayment statistics and defaults, 1156, 1167

Speakers: Senators

Molgat, Gildas L., 1156-7, 1167-8
 Yuzyk, Paul, 1157, 1166-7

Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 2) C-53. 1r, 1136; 2r, 1156-7, 1166-8; ref to com, 1168; rep without amdt, 1180; 3r, 1198; r.a., 1281

Prime Minister of Canada

Inaccuracies in pamphlet issued by Information Canada regarding Prime Ministers of Canada, 1757
 Orders in Council concerning prerogatives of Prime Minister, 1349, 1355
 Visit to British Columbia with cabinet ministers, 1763-4
 Visit to Paris, news report re accompanying officials, 161, 180
 See Trudeau, Right Hon. Pierre Elliott, P.C., Prime Minister of Canada

Prince Edward Island

Ferries operating between Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, possible increase in fares, 1815
 Judges, 1005, 1040-3, 1051-3, 1066, 1080, 1095
 MacKay, Hon. John, Lieutenant Governor, the late, 135
 Matheson, Hon. Alexander W., the late, former Premier, 1861-2
 Trans-Canada highway, maintenance cost subsidies, 1903, 1922
 Transportation, 73
 Tuna fishing and revenue from, 74
 Unemployment insurance for rural residents, 74

Printing of Parliament, Joint Committee

Members
 Commons, 60
 Senate, 109
 Printing and distribution of bills, question, 61

Private bills

See Bills, general data,
 Bills, Private, Commons,
 Bills, Private, Senate.

Privilege, question of

Air Canada service
 Ottawa-Halifax, 1479-80
 Point of order re, 506-07
 Allegations of conflict of interest re Sky Shops Export Ltd. (Senator Giguère), 1348

Privilege, question of - Concluded

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Appearance of Gerda Munsinger on TV program, answer to inquiry, 1256-7, 1618-19

La Presse report of statement by Senator Lamontagne, 1165-6

Canadian Labour Congress, political affiliation, 2153, 2154

Canadian Press report of statements made by Leader of the Government re matter concerning Senator Giguère, 1395-7

CTV News report on death of Viateur Ethier and misrepresentation as Conservative member of Parliament, 1241

Comment of government leader re remarks of Senator Croll, 198

Conflict of Interest, Green Paper on, Senator Croll, 779-81

Conflict of interest, interpretation of, 1308-09

Conflict of interest re withdrawal of senator from debate on Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1315-16

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, press article re passage of, 2406

Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee

Unauthorized release to press of draft report, 1755-6

Immigration policy, unauthorized press publication of draft report of Special Joint Committee, 1285-6

Investigations in Parliament, 1476-9

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, meeting in camera, 1770-1

National Defence and Criminal Code bill S-23, adjournment of Orders of the Day for second reading, 1459

Newfoundland, CTV references to, 2215-16

Omission of motion and of Speaker's ruling from Minutes of Proceedings, 961

Parliamentary immunity, 1398-1403

Statement by Leader of the Government, 1409

Parliamentary Library, commercial use of picture of, 1729, 1764-5

Publishing industry, letter from Hon. Mr. Davey to Globe and Mail re editorial entitled 'Whittling Down a Freedom', 582, 641-2

Right to invoke any rule of the Senate, 198

Senate, articles by Senator Rowe, press report of, 480

Team Canada, press report of speech by Senator Godfrey, 98-99

Third reading of Bill C-58, absence of Hon. Mr. Davey, 2450

See Point of order

Privileges and immunities (international organizations)

European Community, 957-8

Comprehensive economic cooperation agreement, 957

Ottawa office, establishment of, 957-8

Recommendations of Foreign Affairs Committee, 957

Visit of Prime Minister to Community, 957

Speakers: Senators

Grosart, Allister, 958

van Roggen, George C., 957-8

Privileges and Immunities (International Organizations) bill S-25. 1r, 934; 2r, 957-8; 3r, 973; r.a., 1281Privileges and immunities of senators, 1395-7, 1398-1403, 1409, 1434-6

Motion for appointment of special committee, 1434-6; Order stands, 1458

Hiring of counsel and staff, 1435

Search warrants, procedure for dealing with, 1434

Sky Shops Export Limited, alleged conflict of interest (Senator Giguère), 1348, 1395-7, 1398-1403, 1434-6

Terms of reference, 1434

Privileges of Parliament

Ottawa Citizen article re comments of Senator F. W. Rowe, 1777

See also Inquiries,

Privilege, Question of,
Questions.

Privy Council

Clerk of the Privy Council, 465

Secretary to the Cabinet for Federal-Provincial Relations, 465-6

Progressive Conservative Party of Canada

Best wishes for successful leadership convention, 1778

Congratulations on election of leader, 1813-14

Property qualification of senators

Return presented, 242

Supplementary return authorized, 242; supplementary return tabled, 472

Proprietary or patent medicine and trade marks (Bill S-9)

Authority for making regulations, 128, 157

Certificates for registration, 127

Continuous scientific review of medicine, 156

Herbal medicinals, 156

Listing of ingredients, 157

Proprietary division of food and drug regulations, 127

Quality, manufacture, safety and effectiveness of proprietary medicines, regulations re, 127, 157

Royal patent, 156

TV advertising, detrimental aspects, 128, 156, 157

Speakers: Senators

Bonnell, M. Lorne, 126-7, 128

Buckwold, Sidney L., 127, 128

Grosart, Allister, 128

Langlois, Leopold, 156-7

Macdonald, John M., 157

Sullivan, Joseph A., 155-6, 157

Proprietary or Patent Medicine and Trade Marks bill S-9. 1r, 47; 2r, 126-8, 155-7; ref to com, 157; rep with amdt, 240, 245; 3r, 253; r.a., 832

Proprietary or patent medicine and trade marks (Bill S-35)

Excerpt from speech by Hon. Marc Lalonde, 2126

Federal-provincial consultation, 2126

Self-medication, 2126

Speakers: Senators

Cottreau, Ernest G., 2125-6

Phillips, Orville H., 2132

Proprietary or Patent Medicine and Trade Marks bill S-35. 1r, 2103; 2r, 2125-6, 2132; 3r, 2144; r.a., 2207

Prorogation of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament

Speech from the Throne, Rt. Hon. Bora Laskin, P.C., 2453

Prowse, Hon. J. Harper (Deceased Sept. 28/76)

- Alberta-British Columbia Boundary bill S-13, 219, 225
  - Boundary Commission, composition of, 219, 225
  - Federal-provincial agreement on boundary lines, 225
  - Strip-mining operations, effects on boundary lines, 219, 225
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 388
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 560-2, 589
  - Deterrent aspects, 562
  - Excerpt from Code re responsibility for carrying out sentence, 560-1
  - Jury and judge responsibility in sentence of death, 562
  - Louis Riel case* cited, 561
  - Murder of Moncton policemen, 561
  - Nuremberg* trials, 561, 562
  - Royal prerogative, 562
  - Vengeance vs justice, 561-2
- Distribution of document in Senate chamber, 644
- Excise Tax bill C-66, 1271, 1277-8
  - Gasoline for personal use, 1278
  - Prices, 1277
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 382-5, 1048-9
  - Convictions for possession, 1047
  - 'Give', definition of, 1047
  - LeDain Commission, 383
  - Parole or pardon, 1048
  - Penalty for trafficking or possession, 1047-8
  - Teenagers use of drugs, 383-4
- Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 616-20, 652-3
  - Coal, 619-20
    - Annual report of South African Coal, Oil and Gas Corp., 619
  - Oil industry, 616-20
    - Alberta, 617-19; oil and gas conservation board, 618
    - Export tax, 617
    - Great Canadian Oil Sands, 619
    - Prices, 617, 618, 619, 652
    - Pricing of Crude Oil, Economic and Strategic Guidelines for International Energy Policy*, by Taki Rifai, 618
    - Production costs, 618
    - Royalties, 617
    - Tar Sands, 619, 620
- Northwest Territories Representation bill S-22, 594-5
- Parliamentary immunity, question of privilege, 1398-1401, 1402
- Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 925-7
  - Alberta Energy Board, 926
  - Alberta-Saskatchewan-British Columbia, oil production for national consumption, 925
  - Depletion of natural resources, 926
  - Prices, 925-6
  - Pricing of Crude Oil*, by Taki Rifai, 926-7
  - Production costs, 926
- Senate and House of Commons
  - Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, 953
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 878-9
  - Provincial government remuneration, 878-9
- Senate business, 484

Prowse, Hon. J. Harper - Concluded

Senate (Intersessional Authority) bill S-22, 772-3

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, difficulties encountered between sessions because of impending election, 722

Sittings of Senate committees during election periods, question of feasibility of, 772

Televising of committee proceedings, 509

West Coast Ports Operations bill C-56, 727

Labour unions and management, irresponsibility in not reaching agreement, 727

Right to strike, 727

Public bills

See Bills, general data,

Bills, Public, Commons,

Bills, Public, Senate.

Public Service

Bank's refusal to cash government cheques, 1974-5, 2003-04, 2008

Civil Service insurance, 712, 766-7, 770, 775, 832

Commission, new offices, interior wall decoration, 1930, 1975-6

Employees in $60,000 bracket, 876, 889

Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Senate Committee, 160, 188-9, 1545-7

Reclassification of economists, sociologists and statisticians, Treasury Board action re, 2318-21

Recommendation to establish permanent Staff Relations Board, 998

Strikes of general labour and trades group, 642

Workload of present board, 999

See Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee

Public Service employment, staff relations, superannuation

Federal-provincial relations, 465, 466

Clerk of the Privy Council and Secretary to the Cabinet, 465, 466; responsibilities, 466

Privy Council functions, 465

Speakers: Senators

Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 466

Forsey, Eugene A., 466

McIlraith, George, 464-5, 466

Public Service Employment, Staff Relations, Superannuation, Interpretation bill C-38. 1r, 464; 2r, 464-6; 3r, 466-7; r.a., 467

Public Service staff relations

Apolitical aspect of board appointments, 1236

Authority of chairman to appoint outside arbitrator, 1237, 1245

Backlog of work of board, 1236-7, 1245

Board composition and responsibilities, 1236-7, 1246-7

Term of office, 1245, 1246-7

Finkleman report, 1235-6

Topics involving committee recommendations, 1235

Speakers: Senators

Buckwold, Sidney L., 1235-7, 1245-6

Flynn, Jacques, 1245, 1246

Macdonald, John M., 1245

Public Service Staff Relations bill C-70. 1r, 1235; 2r, 1235-7, 1244-6; 3r, 1251; r.a., 1281

Public Works

Langevin Building, costs of renovations under headings of structural, mechanical, decoration and communications, 2243

Publishing industry, 62, 556, 564, 582-3

Globe and Mail article by J. Carruthers re Time magazine, 582-3

Letter from Senator Davey to Globe and Mail re editorial entitled 'Whittling Down a Freedom', 582

Television commercial advertising of Guaranty Trust, use of picture of Parliament Buildings, 556, 564, 956-7

Time and Reader's Digest magazines, tax concessions in advertising, 582

Time magazine, brief presented to members of Commons, 62

Quarantine

Black death of Europe and London plague, 1786

Cleansing or removal of infested or contaminated conveyance, 1779

Detention by quarantine officer or permission to proceed, 1779

Extension of provisions to include other dangerous diseases, 1779

Immigration (1847) causing ship-fever, typhus and cholera, 1786

Grosse Isle monument to victims, 1786

Medical examination, 1779-80

Research scientists, tribute to, 1786-7

Pasteur, Fleming and Snow, 1787

Speakers: Senators

Connolly, John J., 1786-7

McGrand, Fred A., 1778-80

Phillips, Orville H., 1785-6

Quarantine bill S-31. 1r, 1763; 2r, 1778-80, 1785-7, 1788; ref to com, 1788; rep without amdt, 1874; 3r, 1893; r.a., 2096

Quart, Hon. Josie D.

Canadian Sovereignty Symbol bill C-373, 687, 709

Importation of beavers from US for Grey Owl film, 709

Environmental Contaminants bill C-25, 1404-05

DDT and other chemicals, dangerous effects of, 1404

Federal-provincial consultations, 1404

Government authority to obtain information re environment and manufactured substances, 1404

Habitat, United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, 1964

International Women's Year, 671-4

Honorary aide-de-camp to Governor General, Colonel Mary Vallance, 672

Protest speech of student at public meeting contest, 673-4

Royal Commission on the Status of Women, 672

Song of Equality, by Jacqueline Lemay, 673

Speaker of the Senate, Hon. Renaude Lapointe, 671-3

Symbol of Why Not buttons, comments of Hon. Marc Lalonde, women MPs and others, 672-3

UN conference on ways and means to end discrimination against women, 672

UN disregard of women's rights in appointments to principal positions, 672

UN resolution re International Women's Year, 672

Quebec

Bill 22 on use of French language, 54-58

Administrative discretion, 57

Constitutionality of, 56-57

Universities, 57-58

Construction industry, pardon granted to Dede Desjardins, 1035, 1066

Labour conditions, strike of longshoremen, 833, 838-9, 840, 846, 849, 855, 867, 888, 912

Legal profession statistics, 625

Official Language Act, question re government decision on petition, 829, 912

Provincial police, 501-04, 537-40, 567-9, 603, 954-5, 962-6

St. Lawrence ports operations, 817-27, 832

Statutes of Canada (references to Court of Queen's Bench of Quebec) 243, 274-7, 291-3, 301, 467

Quebec and Ontario Provincial Police

Motion to authorize Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee to consider financial compensation by federal government, 954-5, 962-6, agreed, 966

Quebec Provincial Police financial compensation for maintenance, 501-04, 537-40, 567-9, 603, 954-5, order withdrawn, 966

Agreements between federal-provincial governments for services of RCMP, 501

Financial implications, 501, 502, 538

Compensation claims, 501

Conferences and correspondence between Quebec Justice Minister and Solicitor General, 503, 538-9

Constitutional jurisdiction of provinces over police matters, 539

Opting-out formula, 539

Police administration costs, 503-04, 568

Police Costs - Where are all those Millions?, booklet issued by Quebec Justice Dept., 538

Separatism, danger of upsurge as result of federal-provincial differences on subject, 540

Staff and equipment, lack of facilities in Quebec to fight organized crime, 538

Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 537-40

Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 501-04

Desruisseaux, Paul, 567-8

Flynn, Jacques, 603

Manning, Ernest C., 568-9

Queen Elizabeth, Her Majesty, celebration of Silver Jubilee in Canada, 1318-19, 1403

Question of Privilege, 98-99, 198, 480, 506-07, 582, 641-2, 779-81, 961, 1165-6, 1241, 1256-7, 1285-6, 1308-09, 1315-16, 1348, 1395-7, 1398-1403, 1409, 1459, 1479-80, 1618-19, 1729, 1764-5, 1770-1, 2215-16, 2450

See Privilege, Question of

Questions

Abortions, study of procedure for obtaining therapeutic abortions, 1428, 1624-5, 1639, 1654-5

Air Canada service Fredericton-Ottawa, 854-5, 867

Air transport, flight delays due to labour dispute, 2062-3

Anti-inflation program

Budget reduction in Regional Economic Expansion Dept., 1683

Family allowances, 1683, 1716, 1721

Judges' salaries, 1662, 1681

Meeting of Minister of Finance and provincial representatives re implementation of guidelines, 1549

National Defence cutbacks in Nova Scotia, effect of, 1683, 1716

Questions - Continued*Anti-inflation program - Concluded

Postal workers' contract, government rejection of Board's opinion on, 1627-8, 1655

Saint John, N.B., increase in bus fare, 1815-16, 1846

Wage guidelines, 1683

Auditor General of Canada, report of Independent Review Committee, 796

Beef producers, federal assistance for, 240-1, 253

Bilingual air traffic services, Commission of Inquiry, 2322, 2335, 2352-3

Letters from Air Traffic Control Assoc. and Air Line Pilots' Assoc., and to Minister of Transport, 2352-3

Budget, date of presentation, 161

Canada-United States boundary, government policy re demarcation line on Dixon Entrance on Strait of Juan de Fuca, George's Bank and northwards, 2308

Canada-United States relations, 1625-7

Canada-United States relations, communications between Canada and US, newspaper article re remarks by American Ambassador, 2122-3, 2192-3, 2201, 2377-8

Canada Year Book, 1788, 1821-3

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Gerda Munsinger, presence in Canada and appearance on CBC television program, 1034, 1073, 1239-40, 1256-7, 1618-19, 1625

Canadian coins, reported change in design, 1937, 1955

Canadian economy, statement by Prime Minister re anti-inflation legislation, 1293

Canadian Labour Congress, political affiliation, 2153-4

Canadian Labour Congress, possibility of general strike, newspaper report re meeting and proposals for liberal corporatism, 2130

Canadian Labour Congress, salary increases for officers, 2159, 2209-10

Canadian National Railway services in Atlantic provinces, 1923-4, 1976

Canadian National Railways, cost of construction of tower in Toronto, 2185-6, 2263-4

CTV news report of death of Viateur Ethier and misrepresentation as member of Conservative Party, 1241

Candu Wheat Board, adjustment payments to grain producers, 1297

Candu reactors, proposed sale to Argentina and Korea, 1307, 1319

Capital punishment

Commutation of sentences of accused murderers and kidnappers, 400

Partial abolition and expiration of trial period, 1656

Childers, Erskine, President of Republic of Ireland, death of, 265

Citizenship bill, suggested referral of Clause 33 to Supreme Court, 2362, 2444

Clerk's Scroll, 1667, 1683-5

Combines investigation, New Brunswick court of appeal decision re K. C. Irving, Ltd., 1023, 1045-6

Combines, takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd. of Argus Corporation Ltd. reference of matter to Senate committee, inquiry dropped, 1063-4

Connaught Laboratories Ltd., testing operations adjacent to proposed housing development, 586, 616, 732, 902

Construction industry in Quebec, pardon granted to Dede Desjardins, 1035, 1066

Copyright Act, Economic Review, 'Crown copyright reserved', replacement of words, 2200, 2322-3, 2362

Criminal Code (control of weapons and firearms) bill S-14, progress of bill in committee stage, 479-80

Criminal Code, illegal abortions, Dr. Henry Morgentaler, acquittal of charges, 1036

Crowsnest Pass freight rates, 889, 924

Distribution of document in Senate chamber, 644

Energy resources

Atlantic provinces, development of tidal power in Bay of Fundy, 2070, 2142, 2210

Atlantic provinces, offshore oil and gas resources, 2070, 2141-2, 2143

Conservation of fuel, car awaiting Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, 2209, 2443

Construction of Arctic gas pipeline, supply of Arctic gas to southern Canada, 2037-8, 2069-70

Government policy re Canadian ownership of companies developing oil and gas on crown lands, 2159-60, 2210

Questions - Continued

Energy resources - Concluded

- International conference of oil-consuming and oil-producing countries, exclusion of Canada, 605-06, 774-5
- Lighting of government buildings, 606, 1238-9
- Oil and gas reserves, negotiations between federal government and governments of producing provinces, 2070
- Passamaquoddy-Cobscook Bay, US Corps of Engineers report on, 2210-11
- Proposed construction of pipeline from Prince Rupert to Edmonton, 2037
- Proposed pipeline treaty between Canada and United States, 2037
- Environmental affairs, protection of coastal waters from radio-active pollution, 889, 924
- Estimates, fiscal year ending Mar. 31/77, removal of item from order paper, 1782-5
- European Economic Community, Canada's claim for compensation, 579-80, 661-2, 671
- External Affairs Department, Passport Office, refusal to accept Canadian currency of $50 and $100 denominations, 2037, 2077
- Federal government buildings, Langevin Block and Justice Building, 76-77, 137
- Feed grains, freight assistance to Atlantic provinces, 1035
- Ferry service
  - Between North Sydney and Port Aux Basques, 1861
  - Between Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, 1815, 1860, 1861
- Fisheries
  - Extension of 200 mile coastal jurisdiction, 2208, 2377
  - Rights of MicMac Indians of Cross Point Reserve to fish Atlantic salmon, 2208, 2264
- Florida land deals, involvement of Canadians in alleged swindle, 1012, 1198
- Foreign affairs
  - Aid to Chile, 1438-9, 1597-8
  - Canadian Defence spending, remarks by United States Ambassador, report in Globe and Mail, 2122-3, 2201
  - Special passports for MPs, restrictions on, 2263, 2362-3
- Gasoline excise tax, 1100-01, 1112-13
- Government Expenditures Restraint bill, date of introduction in Senate, 2130, 2159, 2264
- Grain subsidies paid on shipments to Eastern Canadian ports for export, 2156,
- Helsinki Declaration on European Security and Co-operation, 1293, 1466
- Identity cards for senators, 179-80
- Immigration, Gulf Islands, British Columbia, ministerial discretion permits, 2322
- Immigration, presence in Canada of Xaviera Hollander and Gerda Munsinger, 1007, 1013, 1034, 1249-40
- Indians, Manitoba Brotherhood, request to appear before Senate Committee, 315-16
- Information Canada, inaccuracies in publications regarding Governors General and Prime Ministers, 1757, 2003
- Insulin, production of, 100, 110-11
- Italy, earthquake victims, Canadian government assistance to, 2111
- Justice, administration of, allegations of interference by cabinet ministers, 1825-6, 1846-8, 1857-9, 1890-2, 1930-2
- Labour
  - Defiance by unions of court orders, 2237
  - Strike of longshoremen in Quebec, back to work legislation, 833, 838-9, 840, 846, 849, 855, 867, 888, 912
  - Withdrawal of services by longshoremen at Montreal, 1006-07
- Liberal Caucus, invitation to members of Opposition, 1868
- Marine safety, British Columbia fisheries, 1815, 1860
- Marine safety, request for location of air and sea rescue unit in Newfoundland, 1860
- Meighen, Rt. Hon. Arthur, the late, portrait of, 53, 563
- Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest, Green Paper on, ref to Commons com, 373, 573, 580
- Money bills, Senate authority to amend, 1656-9
- Montreal police force, threatened strike, 849

Questions - Continued

- Multiculturalism, Ministry of State, organization and budget, 742, 849, 866
- Narcotics, study of legislation by Senate committee, 316
- National Capital Region, proposed study by joint committee, 229
- National lottery, method of proceeding with, 2103-04, 2110-11
- National Museums, storage of Canadiana, 2209; artisanship of John D. Howe, 2217
- National Press Gallery, invitation to reception, 61-62
- New Brunswick storm damage, possibility of federal aid, 1720-1, 1729-30
- Newfoundland
  - CNR services, 1868, 1903
  - Financial assistance for Come-By-Chance refinery, 1826-7, 1860
  - Trans-Canada highway, maintenance cost subsidies, 1903, 1922
- Nova Scotia storm damage, possibility of federal aid, 135-6
- Nuclear reactors
  - Sale by Canada to Argentina, 1975, 2142
  - Sale by Canada to India, 1859-60; further questions, 1975
- Oil export tax, 1264, 1265-6
- Pacific Western Airlines, possible move of head office to Calgary, 1824-5, 1859, 1868-9, 2376, 2444
- Palestinian Liberation Organization attendance at United Nations General Assembly, position taken by Canadian delegation, 110, 137-8, 1238
- Parliament Buildings
  - East Block, use of rooms by senators, proposal, 110
  - Senate, use of rooms by members of House of Commons and others, 110
- Parole, consideration by government of changes in present system, 1371
- Passports
  - Restrictions on special passports of MPs, article in Globe and Mail, 2262-3, 2362-3, 2443
  - Use of diplomatic and special passports for travel to Namibia, 2363-4, 2443-4
- Penitentiaries
  - Proposed construction of medium security prison in Saint John, 1916-17, 1922-3
  - Recommendations of Special Joint Committee, implementation of, 2200
- Political Parties, possible RCMP investigation, 2063
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1285, 1319, 1370-1, 1403, 1409-10, 1416-17, 1428-31, 1439, 1454, 1459, 1468
  - Opinion of Anti-Inflation Board re settlement of wage dispute, 1597
- Prerogatives of Prime Minister, orders in council re, 1349
- Prime Minister of Canada
  - Visit to British Columbia with cabinet ministers, 1763-4
  - Visit to Paris, news report re accompanying officials, 161, 180
- Prince Edward Island, trans-Canada highway, maintenance cost subsidies, 1903, 1922
- Privileges of Parliament, commercial use of picture of Parliamentary Library, 1729, 1764-5
- Public Service
  - Bank's refusal to cash government cheques, 1974-5, 2003-04, 2008
  - Commission, new offices, interior wall decoration, 1930, 1975-6
  - Salary bracket of $60,000, 889
  - Strike of general labour and trades group, 642
- Public Works, renovation of Langevin Building, costs under headings of structural, mechanical, decoration and communications, 2243
- Quebec Official Language Act, question re government decision on petition, 829, 912, 924-5
- Queen Elizabeth, celebration of Silver Jubilee in Canada, 1318-19, 1403
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, passage of, 1639-40
- Regulations and other statutory instruments, agreements between federal government and provincial governments, 2103, 2110
- Restaurant of Parliament, source of meat supplies, 1007, 1012-13
- Saint John, N.B., increase in bus fares, 1815-16

Questions - Concluded

- St. Lawrence Islands National Park, government expenditures on, 1549-50, 1588
- Saskatchewan, safety of Gardiner Dam, 2179, 2377
- Secrecy in government, discussion of TV program re committee involved in, 1349
- Senate
  - Amplification and simultaneous interpretation system, 13-14
  - Northwest Territories Senate representation, 1772, 1778
  - Protective staff, summer uniforms, 1156
  - Reform of Senate, article in Globe and Mail quoting statements of Prime Minister, 32, 47
  - Seating arrangements for senators on ceremonial occasions, 13
  - Sessions of Parliament, legislative program, 1902-03
  - Small Farms Development Program
    - Farm management consultants, 2079
    - Number of loans approved for provinces, 1197-8, 1213
  - Tailoring service for Senate and Commons, 2167-8, 2209
  - Tax treaties or conventions with other countries, 855, 867, 925, 942
  - Television commercial advertising by Guaranty Trust, use of picture of Parliament Buildings, 556, 564, 956-7
  - Time* magazine, brief presented to members of Commons, 62
  - Transportation
    - Crowsnest Pass freight rates, 889, 924
    - Disruption of airline services in Canada, 2237, 2243, 2249-50, 2258-9
    - Pacific Western Airlines, 1824-5, 1859, 1868-9, 2376, 2444
  - Transport Minister Hon. Jean Marchand, rumour of resignation, 573
  - Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, invitation to Canadian Parliamentarians to visit Russia, 1250-1, 1257
  - United Kingdom Prime Minister Harold Wilson, visit to Ottawa, 473
  - United Nations
    - Assembly resolution re Zionism, limitation on contributions as result of, 1411, 1439
    - Congress on Crime Prevention, status of Palestinian Liberation Organization as participants at, 1166, 1238
    - Peacekeeping Force, pension benefits for dependants of Canadian soldier killed in Cyprus, 760, 768
  - Victoria Memorial Museum, rumoured change of name, 1035, 1165
  - Visitors to Parliament, abatement of noise in precincts, 1012
  - Voting procedure on Bill C-84, 2444
  - Watergate tapes, reference to Prime Minister Trudeau by former U.S. President Nixon, 179
  - Welfare ministers' conference, statement by Minister of NHW re federal policy in social welfare field, 556, 564
  - West Coast ports operations, resumption of work by longshoremen and related operations, 742
  - Wheat Board annual report, 685, 732
  - See also* Inquiries,
    - Privilege, Question of,
    - Privileges of Parliament.

Radio and television

- Canadian radio-television and telecommunications, 803, 829-32, 841-3, 849-51, 998, 1007, 1095
- See* Broadcasting

Railway bill C-48. 1r, 712; 2r, 760-1; ref to com, 761; rep without amdt, 795; 3r, 803; r.a., 832

Railways (Bill C-48)

- Compliance by companies to regulations, 760
- Disclosure of financial operations, 760
- Ministerial powers, 760
- Western Economic Opportunities Conference, 760

Railways (Bill C-48) - Concluded*Speakers: Senators

Cook, Eric, 760

Flynn, Jacques, 760-1

Railways

Abandonment of lines and effect on municipal property tax assessments, 44-45

Atlantic provinces, CNR services, 1922, 1923-4, 1976

Branch lines, Western Canada, proposed removal of, 698-9

Canadian Pacific Railway, 38-45

Canadian Pacific: A Brief History, by J. L. McDougall, 40-41

Canadian Transportation and Distribution, excerpt from magazine re freight policy, 43

Crowsnest Pass, 41-42, 889, 924

Globe and Mail articles re CPR, 43, 44

Hudson's Bay Company, 39

Income from oil, gas and other minerals, 41

Income from real estate and related operations, 40

Integration of CNR and CPR, 43-44

Land grants and sales, 39-42

Marathon Realty, CPR subsidiary, 39

Tax and land concessions, 38-39

The CPR: A Century of Corporate Welfare, by Robert Chodos, 38-39, 40Railways bill S-1 (pro forma). 1r, 7*Reform of the Senate

Appointments, 50-51

Committee work, 74-75

Initiation of bills, 49, 52

Investigation of provincial rights 49-50

Official Opposition, reinforcement of, 184

Orders in Council and other legislation, 52-53

Prime Minister's comments, 32, 62-63, 184

Representation from Yukon and Northwest Territories, 53

Suspensive veto, 49, 54

Term of appointment, 54, 75, 184

Refund of fees

Honey Bear Brewing Corporation Limited, 1782

Regional development incentives

Commercial operations, 1621

Abenaki Motor Inn, 1621

Commercial production deadline, 1601

Disparity in allocation of grants or loans, 1620

Five-year extension of program, 1620

Grants, repayable grants, loan guarantees, 1601

Per capita income, 1620

Program statistics, 1601

Question re passage of bill, 1639-40

Slow-growth areas, 1620, 1621

Time lapse in application for grant and approval of, 1620-1

Halifax Chronicle Herald article re, 1620

Regional development incentives - Concluded

Unemployment statistics, 1620

Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 1658

Belisle, Rheal, 1665

Forsey, Eugene A., 1666

Grosart, Allister, 1664, 1665

Langlois, Leopold, 1658-9

Macnaughton, Alan, 1601

Perrault, Raymond J., 1639-40, 1662-3, 1665-6

Phillips, Orville H., 1666

Smith, George I., 1620-2, 1664, 1666

Regional Development Incentives bill C-74. 1r, 1524; 2r, 1601-02, 1619-22; ref to com, 1622; rep without amdt, 1639; 3r, 1658-9; r.a., 1712

Regulations and other statutory instruments

Agreements between federal government and provincial governments, 2103, 2110

Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, Standing Joint Committee

Budget, 178, 205-06, 525, 795, 956, 1502

Duties and functions of committee, 515, 1534, 1535

Guidelines for Motions for Production of Papers, ref to com, 467

Members

Commons, 60

Senate, 109

Newspaper article re Chairman Senator Forsey, question of privilege, 794-5

Reports

First report, 178, 205-6

Second report tabled in Commons Oct. 29/74

Third report, 239-40, 264

Fourth report, 327-8, 338

Fifth report, 1100, 1133-4

Sixth report, 1479, 1487

Seventh report, 1638

Eighth report, 2045

Ninth report, 2307-09, 2333

Right to Information bill C-225, ref to com, 467

Secrecy in government, subject matter ref to com, 1349

Terms of reference, see Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate Oct. 24/74

Travel arrangements for committee outside of Canada, authority for, 1479

Regulations regarding attendance of senators, 1781-2, 1790-1, 1911-13, 1917-18, 1933-6

Absence beyond 21 days, 1790, 1917-19

Attendance records, 1912, 1918-19

Committee review of reasons for absence, 1791, 1917-18

Official business, specifying of, 1790-1, 1912, 1917-18

Senate vacancies and workload, 1934

Travel distance, 1934-5

Remembrance Day

CBC program, 257

Thirtieth anniversary ceremonies held in France, 258-9

Representation (Bill C-36)

Amalgamation formula, 423-4

Quebec, 421

Representation by population, 421

Statistics of provincial representations, 422-3, 437, 439, 440

Speakers: Senators

Buckwold, Sidney L., 438

Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 436, 437

Flynn, Jacques, 438-9

Hicks, Henry D., 438

Lafond, Paul C., 424

O'Leary, M. Grattan, 435-6

Perrault, Raymond J., 420-3, 437-8, 439-40

Representation bill 1974 C-36. 1r, 402; 2r, 420-4, 435-40; ref to com, 440; rep without amdt, 443; 3r, 443; r.a., 467

Research staff

Parliamentary Library, 146, 516

Senate, 321, 516

Restaurant of Parliament, Standing Joint Committee

Meat supplies, question re, 1007, 1012-13

Members

Commons, 60

Senate, 109

Riel, Hon. Maurice

Immigration Policy, Special Joint Committee

Reports

First report, 1006, 1021

Second report, 1306

Third and final report, 1375, 1376-94

Unauthorized press publication of confidential draft report of committee, 1285, 1286

Right to Information bill C-225, subject matter ref to Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 467

Riley, Hon. Daniel

Capital punishment, commutation of sentences of accused murderers and kidnappers, 400

Energy resources

Development of tidal power in Bay of Fundy, 2142, 2210

Passamaquoddy Bay, US Corps of Engineers report on, 2210-11

National Housing bill C-48, 749

National Museums, storage of Canadiana, 2209; artisanship by John D. Howe, 2217

New Brunswick, economic conditions, 2009-13

Acadians, 2009-13

Acadian Village, 2012

Culture of, 2011

Advertisement of Regional Economic Expansion Dept. entitled The New Approach, 2012

Agriculture, 2009-10

Fisheries, 2010

Gloucester County, 2012

Highways, Route 11, 2012

Riley, Hon. Daniel - *Concluded

New Brunswick economic conditions - Concluded

New Brunswick Psychological Association, letter to Premier of N.B., copy to Prime Minister, 2010-11

Relocation of workers, 2011

Saint John Telegraph-Journal article re Northeast New Brunswick, 2012

Unemployment, 2010

New Brunswick storm damage, possibility of federal aid, 1720, 1729-30

Northwest Territories Senate representation, 1778

Parliamentary Library, commercial use of picture of, 1764-5

Penitentiaries, proposed construction of medium security prison in Saint John, 1916-17, 1922-3

Prince Edward Island, CNR services, 1924, 1976

Saint John, N.B., increase in bus fares, 1815, 1816

Televising of committee proceedings, 510, 511-12, 521

Transportation, BNA Act as it pertains to, 2221

Robichaud, Hon. Louis-J., P.C.

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1578-9

Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 528-30, 1733

Acquittals and convictions in murders of police officers (1967-73), 529

Atlantic Provinces Policemen's Assoc., meeting in Moncton, 530

Royal prerogative in commutation of death sentence, 529, 530

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2411-13

Deterrent aspect, 2412

Incorrigibles, 2412

Statistics, 2412

United States, 2412

Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1163

Cost-sharing of insecticide spraying, 1163

Damaging side effects of insecticides, 1163

Inter-Parliamentary Union, Tokyo conference, 248-9

Canadian delegation, 248

Inflation problems in Japan, 248

Labour unions in other countries, 248

National Forestry Week, 2076

New Brunswick, economic conditions, 2015-18

Acadians, 2016-17

Artists and musicians from NB, 2018

Mineral resources, 2019

Social equality program, 2017-18

Regulations re attendance of senators, 1917-18

Absence of 21 days, 1917

Committee review of reasons for absence, 1917-18

Official business, specifying of, 1917

Senate and House of Commons Act

Objection to motion for referral of subject matter to com, 953

Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, 953, 954

Senators' work in public interest outside of Senate, 953

Senate role, 1578-9

Rowe, Hon. Frederick William

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 62-68, 71

Alberta - British Columbia Boundary bill S-13, 224

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, appearance of Gerda Munsinger on television program, 1619, 1625

Rowe, Hon. Frederick William - Continued

- Crime and violence, 1449-53
  - Crime increase and demands on protective resources, 1449-50
  - Drug control, Newsweek article re, 1451
  - Good Housekeeping* article by Art Linkletter entitled 'What I've learned about drugs since my daughter's death', 1451-2
  - Gun control, 1452
  - Marihuana convictions of young people, 1451-2
  - Prison population per capita, 1451
  - Royal Canadian Mounted Police duties, 1450
  - Sex deviates, 1451
  - Training of police in psychology, pathological conduct and behaviour, 1450
  - Unnecessary activities of police, 1450
  - Vice squads, 1450
  - Vulnerability of democratic society, 1452-3
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, 1746, 1899
- Education and Culture in Newfoundland*, by Hon. Frederick William Rowe, 2308-09
- Energy
  - Offshore oil and gas resources in Atlantic provinces, 2143
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 62
- Ferry service between North Sydney and Port Aux Basques, possible increase in fares, 1861
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control, and Criminal Code bill S-19, 448-54, 1048-9
  - Long-standing effects from use of marihuana, 450, 451
  - Misunderstandings re legislation, 449
  - National Organization for Reform of Marihuana Laws (US), 449
  - Penalties for drug convictions, 447
  - Tobacco and alcohol, use by children, 453, 1048
- Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1161-2
  - Damaging side effects of insecticides, 1162
  - Federal responsibility in control, 1162
  - Newfoundland, 1161-2
    - Birch and Mountain Ash, 1162
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1955-8
  - Canada-US relations, 1955-6, 1958
  - Freedom of the press, question of, 1957-8
  - MD of Canada*, 1957
  - Time Canada*, 1956-7
  - Women's magazines published in US and circulated in Canada, 1957
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Colombo, Sri Lanka conference, 984-8
  - Aid to developing countries, 985, 986, 987-8; Sri Lanka and Pakistan, 985, 986
  - Tarbela Dam, 987-8
  - Birth control, 987
  - Canada's esteem in foreign countries, 985
  - Disarmament, 984
  - Drugs, 984-5
  - Economic conditions in Canada, 985-6
  - Economic cooperation, 984
  - Education, scientific techniques for promotion of, 984
  - Human rights, 984
  - Living standards, 985
  - Population statistics, 986
  - Poverty problems, 987
- Labour, the working poor in Canada, 2019-23
- Labrador hydro development, 64-65
- Law reform, 66; rape victims, 66; drug convictions, 66

Rowe, Hon. Frederick William - Concluded

- National lottery, proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada, 2169
  - Method of authorization for, 2169
  - Religious aspects of gambling, 2169
- Privileges of Parliament
  - Library of Parliament and Centre Block, commercial use of pictures of, 1765
- Ottawa Citizen* article re comments of Senator F. W. Rowe, 1777
- Rules of the Senate, 1359
- Senate
  - Chamber seating arrangements for senators on ceremonial occasions, 13
  - Reform, 62-63
  - Televising of committee proceedings, 547-8
- Temporary Immigration Security bill C-85, 1829
- Transportation, 63-65, 506-08
  - Newfoundland, 63-65; Air Canada service St. John's-Ottawa, 506-08; Strait of Belle Isle, 64-65;
  - Trans-Canada Highway, 63-64
- Transportation, British North America Act as it pertains to transportation, 2106-08, 2064
  - Newfoundland, 2106-08
    - Disruption of tourist trade and general welfare because of labour strike, 2108
  - Terms of Union re transportation services, 2108
  - Trans-Canada Highway, 2106-07
    - Provincial disparities, 2106-07
- United States, Canada's relations with, 66-68

Royal assent

- Beetz, Hon. Jean, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 1791-2, 2002, 2207
- de Grandpre, Hon. Louis-Philippe, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 2152
- Dickson, Hon. R. G. B., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 731, 899
- Judson, Hon. Wilfred, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 1281
- Laskin, Rt. Hon. Bora, Chief Justice of Canada, 95, 220, 467, 581, 1095-6, 1476, 2096
- Leger, Rt. Hon. Jules, His Excellency the Governor General, 397, 2450
- Spence, Hon. Wishart F., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 313-14, 656, 740, 832, 1134, 1617, 1712, 2301

Royal Canadian Legion

- Assets or property, branch holdings, 1195, 1206
- Branch agreements to amends to act, 1206-07
- British Commonwealth and Empire, deletion of words from act, 1195
- Closing of small branches due to membership drop, 1205-06
- Department to assist or advise ex-servicemen's clubs, 1196
- Filing date of petition, 1212
- Legion background, 1194, 1205
- Senior citizen housing sponsored by Legion, 1195
- War veterans allowance, 1194, 1205
- Youth sports training programs, 1195, 1205, 1206
- Speakers: Senators
  - Carter, Chesley W., 1194-6, 1206, 1207, 1209
  - Flynn, Jacques, 1207, 1209
  - Grosart, Allister, 1206-09
  - Langlois, Leopold, 1208
  - Perrault, Raymond J., 1209
  - Phillips, Orville H., 1205-06

Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28. 1r, 1180; 2r, 1194-6, 1205-07; ref to com, 1207; suspension of rule 95, 1207-09; rep without amdt, 1211-12; 3r, 1212; r.a., 1281

Royal Canadian Mounted Police

Federal-provincial agreements with provinces re RCMP personnel, 501, 568-9
Financial implications of provincial operations, 501, 502
Quebec and Ontario, claims for compensation, 501-04, 537-40, 567-9, 603
Subject matter referred to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 954-5, 962-6

Rules and Orders, Standing Senate Committee

Chairman, appointment of Hon. Hartland de M. Molson, 557
Members, 96
Report, 1317-18, 1331-6, 1355-64, 1422-6, 1460-6
Sub-committee for co-ordination of meetings, 828-9, 1091
Members, 924
Terms of reference, 526, 537-8

Rules of the Senate

Amendment to committee report after report presented to the Senate, 908, 909
Appropriation bills, 721-2, 735-7
Borrowing authority, 722
Excerpt from Bourinot, 4th edition, re supply bills, 722
Forms and Proceedings, 721-3, 735
Senate role in consideration of money bills, 723
Suggestion that matter of bills being ref to com be considered by Standing Rules and Orders Committee, 736-7
Comment on speech of Commons member, 2416
Committee budgets, special expenses, 525-6
Committee report on regulations re attendance of senators, rule re consideration of, 1781-2, 1790-1
Committee reports, ref back to com or to Committee of the Whole for reconsideration, 882-4
Precedents cited in excerpts from Senate Journals, 883
Speaker's ruling reserved, 882-8; Speaker's ruling, 890
Debate on com rep without amdt and motion for third reading, Speaker's statement re, 2395, 2396
Debate on interrogation restricted to brief explanatory remarks, 1213
Delay in raising of point of order, 1111
Forms and Proceedings, question of authority of rules, 882-3
Initiation of money bills, 887
Minister invited to Senate Chamber to explain bill, precedents, 197-8, 217-19
Excerpt from The Modern Senate of Canada re, 218
Minister's statement of policy, senator's comment on or criticism of, 1202, 1203
Motion to amend committee report, 882-3; point of order re Speaker's statement, 890
Point of order, 387-8, 390, 506-07, 560, 779-81, 882-3, 886-8, 944, 952, 1015, 1110, 1202
Amending of supply bills, 886-8
Excerpt from The Modern Senate of Canada, 887
Precedents of supply bills amendments by the Senate, 887
Rights of Senate in Matters of Financial Legislation, report of Senate special committee, 887-8
Presentation of committee reports before review by senators, 1606
Private bills, suspension of rule 95, 1207-09, 1601
Privilege, question of, 98-99, 198, 480, 506-07, 582, 641-2, 779-81, 961, 1165-6, 1241
Reference of Green Paper on Conflict of Interest to committee, 779-81
Referral of annuities bill to committee, 1643-4
Referral of estimates and other matters to National Finance Committee, 440-1, 1109-10

Rules of the Senate - Concluded

- Senator speaking twice on same subject, 1513
- Televising of committee proceedings, 509-14, 521-3, 543-54
- Two days' notice between 1r and 2r, 1109
- Unscheduled speakers taking part in debate, 560
- Use of unparliamentary language in debates, 562, 1109

Rules of the Senate, report of Standing Committee on Standing Rules and Orders, 1317-18, 1331-6, 1355-64, 1422-6, 1460-6, 1537, 1813

- Absence of senators, 1359
- Adjournment of debates for prolonged periods, 1460-2, 1464, 1465-6
- Adopting of report, one day's notice of motion, 1357, 1360
- Authority to reprint rules, 1537
- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, terms of reference, 1357
- Bilingual form of bills originating in Senate, 1357, 1360
- Bills, explanation of content at initial presentation of, 1464
- Commencement date of amendments contained in report, 1537; order rescinded, new date authorized, 1720
- Committee of the Whole, procedure for discussion in, 1362
- Declaration of property qualification, 1359
- Ex officio* members of committees, 1358
- Forms and proceedings of the Parliament of Canada, 1356, 1360, 1362-3
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee, 1357, 1364, 1423-6, 1462, 1464-5
- Joint Committee on Library of Parliament and Other Shared Services, 1359
- Limitation of senator speaking only once in any debate, 1356
- Motions during debate, 1356
- Motions for which no notice is required (matters of urgent public importance), 1357, 1363
- Motion to refer matters to committee, 1357-8, 1363-4
- Oral questions, 1356, 1460, 1462-3, 1465
- Organization of committees, 1358
- Parliamentary reform, 1360
- Powers and duties of committees, 1423-4, 1425
- Preservation of order and decorum in Senate, 1356
- Previous question, 1357
- Principle of bill, debating of at second reading, 1361, 1363
- Printing of rules as appendix to current debate, 1361
- Private bills, deposit of bill and fees, 1359
- Substantial amendments, notice of, 1359
- Procedure when Speaker leaves the chamber, 1356
- 'Question' or 'matter', definition of, 1361, 1363
- Quorum of committees, 1358, 1460, 1465
- Quotations from speeches made in Commons, 1356, 1359, 1360, 1363, 1460, 1464, 1465
- Recalling of Senate earlier than set forth in motion for adjournment, 1356
- Reports of committees, 1359
- Select committees, 1357
- Senate speech quoted verbatim in Commons, 1359-60
- Senator's final reply to inquiry on second reading of bill, 1356
- Speaker addressing house, 1357
- Special procedure or practice in committee, approval of Senate for, 1358, 1364, 1461, 1463
- Standing Rules and Orders Committee, 1424

Rules of the Senate, report of Standing Committee on Standing Orders - *Concluded

Terms of reference of committees, 1361-2, 1461, 1463, 1464

Procedure or practice inconsistent with practices and usages of Senate, 1461, 1463

Time of daily sittings, 1364

Unanimous consent, 1362

Speakers: Senators

Argue, Hazen, 1460-2

Benidickson, W. M., 1364

Bourget, Maurice, 1425

Croll, David A., 1364, 1422-3, 1425-6

Grosart, Allister, 1425, 1462-4

Laird, Keith, 1359-60, 1426

McIlraith, George, 1360-3, 1423, 1424, 1425, 1426, 1464

Molson, Hartland de M., 1317-18, 1331-6, 1355-64, 1424-6, 1464-6, 1537

Rulings by the Speaker

See Lapointe, Hon. Renaude, Speaker of the Senate

St. John the Baptist Day, 2259

St. Lawrence Islands National Park

Government expenditures on, 1549-50, 1588

St. Lawrence ports operations

Bankruptcy of livestock breeders, 820

Deterioration of supplies in storage, 819, 826

Inability of society to maintain law and order, 822

Injunctions granted to manufacturers and millers, 819, 827

Labour unrest, 823-4

Losses to workers and producers, 825

Maritime Employers Assoc. and International Longshoremen's Assoc., 817, 818

Mediator Charles Poirier (1975), 817

Mediator Judge Alan Gold (1974), 817

Parliamentary responsibility in settlement of dispute, 817

Penalty clause, 824, 826, 827

Precedents in emergency legislation, 819, 821

Wage and job security demands and controls, 819, 824

Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 818-20

Buckwold, Sidney L., 823-4

Connolly, John J., 826

Forsey, Eugene A., 825-6

Greene, John J., 822-3

Grosart, Allister, 821-2

Lawson, Edward M., 824-5

Neiman, Joan, 820

Perrault, Raymond J., 817-18, 821, 826-7

St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59. 1r, 817; 2r, 817-27; 3r, 827; r.a., 832

St. Patrick's Day, 1902

Salaries (Lieutenant Governors)

- Comparison to salaries of other officials, 1092
- Former provincial levels of salaries, 1081
- Jurisdiction of lieutenant governors, 1093
- Non-accountable allowances and other benefits, 1081
- Pensions, 1092-3, 1094
- Special fund for expenses incurred outside provincial capitals, 1095
- Status of lieutenant governors, 1091-4
- Tax benefits, 1095

Speakers: Senators

- Asselin, Martial, 1091-3, 1094
- Benidickson, W. M., 1095
- Connolly, John J., 1081, 1094, 1095
- Forsey, Eugene A., 1093, 1094
- Greene, John J., 1095
- Langlois, Leopold, 1094

Salaries (Lieutenant Governors) bill C-24. 1r, 1065; 2r, 1081, 1091-5; 3r, 1095; r.a., 1096

Saskatchewan

- Parliamentarians and wives, visitors to Senate, 262
- Safety of Gardiner Dam, question, 2179, 2377

Science policy

- Budget, 1261, 2119
- Commission on the Future, termination of committee mandate for, 1173, 1220
- Committee work in creating awareness of science futures, 1223, 1224
  - Tribute to chairman, 1224
- Data Bank, 295
- Defence Research Board, 114-15
- Excerpts from letters from Prime Minister and from Deputy Secretary of Cabinet re Institute for Research on Public Policy, 1171-2, 1221
- Expenditures of committee, 160, 348, 1088, 1223-4, 1244, 1260
- Futures branch of US Congressional Library, 1225
- Futures research areas of Science Policy Committee, 1173
- Granting agencies, 113-15
- Impact of committee report on other countries, 1222
- Information centre, Futures Canada, 295
- Institute for Research on Public Policy, 1221, 1222, 1225
- Inter-Council Coordinating Committee, 115
- Managing the Future: Conference on Anticipatory Institutions*, 1171, 1221, 1223
- National Research Council, 113-14
- 'Need for an Overall Science Policy', excerpt from committee reports (1970-73), 1225
- Predictive and normative approach in future, 1224
- Prime Minister Trudeau's speech at Duke University, 296-7
- Recommendations to government, 1222
- Research and development programs, lack of coordination, 1225-6
- Research in government laboratories and in industry, comparison, 1226
  - Other countries, 1226

Science policy - *Concluded

Study undertaken by government into futures research and futures information, 1172-3

Training program in cooperation with management and schools, 295-6

US state commissions on futures, 1225

Speakers: Senators

Carter, Chesley W., 1225-6

Grosart, Allister, 1222-4

Lamontagne, Maurice, 1164, 1171-3, 1220-2

Science Policy, Special Senate Committee

Annual meetings, regional and national, 296

Appointment, 295-8

Budget tabled, 1261

Club of Rome President, visit to committee, 473

Commission on the Future, authority to hold conference re, 295-8

Termination of mandate re, 1171-3

Expenses, 160, 348, 1088, 1223-4, 1244, 1260, 1261

Members, 295

Reports

Quorum, 1355

Termination of mandate re Commission on the Future, 1164, 1171-3, 1220-6, 1246-7, 1259-60

Terms of reference, 295, 1173

Secrecy in government, discussion on TV program re committee involved in, 1349

Selection Committee

Appointment, 7

Reports

Standing committees, members, 76, 96-97

Senate

Adjournments, 712-13, 741, 1280

Summer adjournment, 1280

Amplification system and simultaneous interpretation system, 13-14, 504, 1092

Bills, printing and distribution of, 61

Business, 31, 60-61, 124-5, 152-3, 178-9, 221-2, 240, 255-6, 289, 315, 325, 351, 380-1, 454-5, 482, 483-4, 505-06, 524, 540-1, 556, 579, 592-3, 594, 656, 713-14, 723, 740-1, 758, 774, 796, 816, 828-9, 848-9, 899, 923-4, 956, 999, 1022, 1036, 1057, 1086, 1090-1, 1107-12, 1122, 1164-5, 1210, 1226, 1250, 1261-4, 1265, 1286-8, 1297, 1337, 1370, 1409, 1437-8, 1467-8, 1502-03, 1524, 1537-8, 1547-8, 1615, 1647-8, 1653-4, 1660, 1661, 1682, 1686, 1711-12, 1717, 1718-19, 1729, 1756-7, 1778, 1793, 1846, 1874-81, 1914-16, 1954-5, 1966, 2007-08, 2044, 2045-7, 2069, 2097-8, 2120-2, 2151-2, 2192, 2215, 2255, 2302, 2308, 2335-6, 2356, 2360

Chamber renovations, 1282-3

Christmas decorations, 1476

Clerestory of the Senate Chamber, Special Senate Committee, 480-2

Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1973-74), 192

Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1974-75), 1005

Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1975-76), 2167

Clerk's Scroll, 1667, 1683-5

Comments re Senate, Hon. Grattan O'Leary (1942), 870-1

Comments re Senate, Hon. Renaude Lapointe (1973), 871

Senate - Continued

Committees

- Scheduling of meetings, 828-9, 923-4
- Science Policy Committee, work of, 1164, 1171-3, 1220-6, 1246-7, 1259-60
- Sittings of committees when Parliament is adjourned, 951-3
- Work of, 28-29, 74-75, 945, 951-3
- Conflict of interest, report of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 2278, 2303-06
- Consecutive sitting days, 31
- Criticisms by public and in press re Senate consideration of Bill C-49, 645-7
  - Process of Senate consideration of bill, items discussed and witnesses interviewed, 645-7
- Distribution of document in Senate chamber, 644
- Deputy Leader of the Government, reappointment of Hon. Léopold Langlois, 46
- Emergency sittings, authority to convene Senate during adjournments, 328
- Government Whip, appointment of Hon. William J. Petten, 46
- Identity cards for senators, 179-80
- Intersessional authority, Bill S-22, 505, 576-7, 815-16
- Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate*, No. 96, correction, 1036
- Monday evening sittings, question of, 1874-81
- Newspaper account of articles on the Senate by Senator Rowe, question of privilege re, 480
- Northwest Territories Senate representation, 1772, 1778
- Painting of Royal Canadian Engineers, authority to photograph for purposes of Heritage Publishing Company, 46
- Parliamentary immunity, 1476-9
  - Question of privilege, 1398-1403
  - Statement by Leader of the Government, 1409
- Photographing of precincts and of senators for distribution to Canadian embassies, 253, 255, 473
- Privileges and immunities of senators, 1395-7, 1398-1403, 1409, 1434-6, 1458, 1718, 1721, 1726
- Property qualification of senators, return presented, 242; supplementary return authorized, 242; supplementary return tabled, 427
- Protective staff, summer uniforms, 1156, 1213-14
- Reform
  - Appointments, 50-51
  - Committee work, 74-75
  - Initiation of bills, 49, 52
  - Investigation of provincial rights, 49-50
  - Official Opposition, reinforcement of, 184
  - Orders in Council and other legislation, 52-53
  - Prime Minister's comments, 32, 62-63, 184
  - Representation from Yukon and Northwest Territories, 53
  - Suspensive veto, 49, 54
  - Term of appointment, 54, 75, 184
- Regulations respecting attendance of senators, 1781-2, 1790-1, 1911-13, 1917-18, 1933-6, 2118
- Research staff, 146, 321, 516
- Resume of Senate work Oct.21-Dec.20/75, 1717
- Role of, 28-29, 74-75, 148-9
- Salaries and expense allowances of members, 847, 856-61, 868-80
  - Public and press reaction to, 847, 856-61, 868-80, 889, 899
- Seating arrangements for senators on ceremonial occasions, 13
- Senate and House of Commons Act, regulations respecting senators' attendance and deductions for absence, 948-54
- Senators' work in public interest outside of Senate, 952, 953
- Tailoring service for Senate and Commons, 2167-8, 2209
- Televising of committee proceedings, 509-14, 521-3, 543-54

Senate - Concluded

- Television and radio coverage of Senate Committees, 1365-6, 1483, 1484, 1487-8; Order stands, 1817
- Controls, 1483, 1484, 1488
- Other countries, 1483
- Press reporting of Senate proceedings, 1365
- Public reaction to appearance of senators on television, 1365
- Relevance of Senate to constitutional procedure, 1365
- Resolution adopted by Commons, 1483, 1487
- Right of public to view proceedings, 1365

Unreformed Senate of Canada, The, excerpt re senatorship, 870, 872; vacancies, 945

Wednesday sittings, hour of adjournment, 2097-8; motion rescinded, 2308, 2335

See Rules of the Senate,

- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 847, 856-61, 868-80,
- Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, 2177, 2186-7, 2193-6, 2203-07.

Senate and House of Commons

- Regulations respecting attendance of senators, 948-54; motion that Senate make regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, 948-51; motion in amdt that subject matter be ref to Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee, 951-4, agreed, 954
- Committee work, 950; meetings while Parliament is adjourned, 951-3
- Deduction for member's absence, 948
- Reform, 950-1
- Remuneration, 949
- Resolution affecting balance of national accounts, question of, 952
- Senatorship, public and press reaction to, 949
- Sittings of Senate and Commons, statistics on, 948-9

Speakers: Senators

- Carter, Chesley W., 952-3
- Cook, Eric, 951
- Croll, David A., 951-2, 953, 954
- Godfrey, John M., 948-51
- Greene, John J., 952, 954, 961
- Laird, Keith, 953
- Lamontagne, Maurice, 952
- Molson, Hartland de M., 951
- Prowse, J. Harper, 953
- Robichaud, L. J., 953

Senate and House of Commons, salaries and parliamentary secretaries

- Adequacy of increase, question of, 866
- Attendance in Parliament, Senate recording of and Commons statements re, 874
- Statistics on attendance, 871-2, 879, 880
- Commissioners to be appointed for annual inquiry into remuneration of members of Parliament, 858, 869-70
- Committee work of senators, 874-5
- Commons members, suggestion for graduated increase on re-election, 875
- Conflict of interest aspect of bill, 870
- Cost of living index and industrial composite index, 869, 877-8
- Economic problems of members of Parliament, 879
- Expenses and travel allowances, 858, 860, 869, 870
- Hours of work on Senate sitting days, 872-3
- Income ranges affecting investments or borrowings, 876
- Increase for woodworkers, plumbers, teachers, labourers, 859
- Indemnities, suggestion for automatic fixed-dollar increase, 875, 876, 878
- Industrial composite index (1970-74), 857

Senate and House of Commons, salaries and parliamentary secretaries - Concluded

- Inflationary trends and restraints, 876-7
- Labour demands and union settlements, 860
- Leadership of members of Parliament in crisis of wage demands and of prices, 877
- Leave of absence and deduction for, 872, 874, 875
- Opposition members, 858
- Parliamentarians' remuneration, scale of, (1953-70), 857, 859, 869
- Parliamentary restaurant charges vs tradesmen's free meals, 860
- Press reaction and adverse reports re proposed salary increase, 859, 860, 870, 876
- Prime Minister, ministers and deputies, 869
- Principles governing salary increase, 868
- Provincial legislature allowances, 858, 876, 878-9
- Public servants in $60,000 bracket, 860, 876, 889
- Remuneration of senators and Commons members vs salaries in other business and professional areas, 857, 859-61, 868, 877, 879
- Retroactive clause, 860
- Senate rejection of bill suggested, 878
- Senatorship, public and press reaction to, 870-1
- Sittings of Senate and Commons, statistics, 871-2, 879, 880
- Speakers of Senate and of Commons, remuneration, 869
- Working hours, unjust criticisms of, 860
- Speakers: Senators
  - Carter, Chesley W., 874
  - Croll, David A., 874
  - Flynn, Jacques, 868-70
  - Godfrey, John M., 870-5
  - Greene, John J., 874
  - Lamontagne, Maurice, 878
  - Lawson, Edward M., 859-61
  - Manning, Ernest C., 875-8
  - Molson, Hartland de M., 874
  - Perrault, Raymond J., 856-9, 879-80
  - Prowse, J. Harper, 878-9
  - Walker, David J., 874, 875

Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44. 1r, 847; 2r, 856-61, 868-80; 3r, 889; r.a., 899

Senate and House of Commons, supplementary retirement benefits

- Freeze on salaries of members of Parliament, 2186
- Liberal caucus support re cancellation of 7% increase, statement of Prime Minister re, 2193
- Press criticism of members of Parliament, 2195
- Provincial legislatures, salary increases, 2194
- Saskatchewan legislature, salary increases, 2195
- Senior public servants, 2193-4
- Sessional expenses and other allowances, 2186
- Supplementary retirement benefits, 2186-7, 2194, 2196
- Speakers: Senators
  - Argue, Hazen, 2195, 2204
  - Carter, Chesley W., 2186-7, 2196
  - Denis, Azellus, 2195
  - Flynn, Jacques, 2187, 2193-5, 2196, 2203, 2204, 2205, 2207
  - Forsey, Eugene A., 2195-6
  - Greene, John J., 2204

Senate and House of Commons, supplementary retirement benefits - *ConcludedSpeakers: Senators - *Concluded

Grosart, Allister, 2205-06
 Hicks, Henry D., 2205
 Langlois, Leopold, 2203, 2204-05, 2206
 Macnaughton, Alan A., Chairman, Committee of the Whole, 2203-07
 Manning, Ernest C., 2205

Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81. 1r, 2177; 2r, 2186-7, 2193-6; ref to Committee of the Whole, 2196; considered in Committee of the Whole, 2203-07; rep without amdt, 2207; 3r, 2207; r.a., 2207

Senate (intersessional authority)

Administration of internal economy of Senate between sessions, 771
 BNA Act provisions re privileges, immunities and powers of Senate, 771
 Committee meetings between sessions, 577, 772
     Limitations encountered, 577
     Reports, preparation of, 577
 Committee work, delays due to dissolution of Parliaments, 577
 Dissolution periods 1963-74 (number of days), 576
 Informal arrangements previously used, 772-3
 Intersessional authority bill, question of money bill concept, 771
 Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, difficulties encountered because of impending election, 772
 Resolution re intersessional authority, 576
 Royal prerogative, necessity of, 771

Speakers: Senators

Connolly, John J., 771-2
 Flynn, Jacques, 576-7, 815-16
 Perrault, Raymond J., 770-1
 Prowse, J. Harper, 772-3

Senate (Intersessional Authority) bill S-22. 1r, 505; 2r, 576-7, 815-16; ref to com, 816

Senators, deceased

Boucher, Hon. William A. (June 23/76), 2251-2
 Bourque, Hon. Romuald (Aug. 14/74), 11-12
 Crerar, Hon. Thomas A., P.C. (Apr. 11/75), 778-9
 Gelinas, Hon. Louis-Philippe (Jan. 1/76), 1713-14
 Hugessen, Hon. A. K. (Mar. 30/76), 2007
 Kickham, Hon. Thomas J. (Dec. 1/74), 324
 Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C. (Feb. 13/75), 532-4
 Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, P.C. (May 28/76), 2176-7
 O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan (Apr. 7/76), 2034-6
 Prowse, Hon. J. Harper (Sept. 28/76)
 Smith, Hon. Sydney J. (July 15/76)

Senators, new

Austin, Hon. Jacob (Nov. 5/75), 1354
 Barrow, Hon. Augustus Irvine (Sept. 30/74), 1
 Cottreau, Hon. Ernest George (Sept. 30/74), 1
 Lucier, Hon. Paul Henry (Nov. 12/75), 1395
 Smith, Hon. George Isaac (Oct. 21/75), 1282

Senators, resignations

Aird, Hon. John B. (Nov. 28/74), 334-6
 Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, P.C. (May 25/75), 967-8

Senators, resignations - Concluded

- Gelinas, Hon. Louis P. (Dec. 10/75), 1713-14
- Gouin, Hon. Leon Mercier (Mar. 18/76), 2057
- Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C. (Oct. 30/74), 207-12

Senators, retirements

- Welch, Hon. Frank C. (July 14/75)

Sessions of Parliament

- Legislative program, government policy re, question, 1902-03

Sky Shops Export Limited, Dorval Airport, alleged conflict of interest (Senator Giguere), 1348, 1395-1403, 1434-6

Small farms development program

- Consultants assigned to individual provinces, 2079
- Consultants serving NB, NS and PEI, 2079
- Loans approved provincially Sept. 21/72 to June 30/75, 1197-8, 1213
  - British Columbia, 1198
  - New Brunswick, 1213
  - Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Quebec, 1198

Smith, Hon. Donald

- Migratory bird sanctuaries, warden services in Maritime provinces, contracts for, 279
- Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, 815

Smith, Hon. George Isaac (Introduced in the Senate Oct. 21/75)

- Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1508, 1509, 1528-32, 1537, 1580
  - Professional categories under provincial jurisdiction, 1508, 1509
- Anti-inflation program, government rejection of Board's opinion re postal workers' contract, 1627-8
- Cabinet ministers, rejection of resignations by Prime Minister, 1892-3
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2281-2, 2286, 2350
  - International law, question of, 2281
  - Land ownership, 2281-2
    - Certification of title, 2282
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, 1893-6, 1898, 1899, 1907-08
  - Morgentaler* amendment, 1907-08
    - Right of judge to infer from peace officer's evidence that disturbance has occurred, 1894-6
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2438, 2439-42
  - Parole, 2440
  - Prison term, 2440
  - Sanctity of life, 2440
  - Senate responsibility, 2438-9
  - Statistics, inadequacy of, 2440, 2441
  - Victims of crime, 2440
- Energy, development of tidal power in Bay of Fundy, 2070
- Grain subsidies paid on shipments to Eastern Canadian ports for export, 2156, 2201-02, 2211, 2376-7
- Halifax Relief Commission Pension Continuation bill C-78, 1721-3
  - Background of Commission formed after Halifax explosion (1917), 1721-2
  - Blind persons rehabilitation, 1722
  - Payments to be within credit of account, 1722
  - Pensions and allowances paid to widows and disabled persons, 1718
    - Inequalities of, 1722
  - Transfer of funds to provincial or municipal organization, 1722

Smith, Hon. George Isaac - Concluded

- Income Tax bill (No. 2) C-65, 1439-42
  - Alberta royalty reduction, 1441
  - Interest and dividends credit for man and wife, 1440
  - Investment tax credit, 1440
  - Registered retirement savings plans, 1440-1
  - Resource allowance, 1441-2
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1881-3, 2395, 2396
  - Broadcasting, 1882
    - Bellingham station, 1882
  - Canada-US relations, 1883
  - MD of Canada*, 1881-2
  - Ministerial rulings, 1882-3
  - Time and Reader's Digest*, 1882-3
- Justice, administration of, allegations of interference by cabinet ministers, 1858
- Medical Care bill C-68, 2339
  - Ceiling on federal payments, 2338, 2340-1
  - Excerpt from speeches of Hon. Mr. MacEachen (1966), 2339-40
  - Federal-provincial consultations, 2342-3
  - Provincial reactions to legislation, 2341-2
  - Statement of Hon. Mr. Macnaughton, 2341
  - Statement of Hon. Mr. Robarts (1966) 2339
  - Victoria conference of provincial health ministers, 2342
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1620-2, 1664, 1666
  - Commercial operations, 1621
    - Abenaki Motor Inn, 1621
  - Disparity in allocation of grants or loans, 1620
  - Five-year extension of program, 1620
  - Per capita income, 1620
  - Slow-growth areas, 1620, 1621
  - Time lapse in application for grant and approval of, 1620-1
    - Halifax Chronicle-Herald* article re, 1620
  - Unemployment statistics, 1620
- Senate
  - Monday evening sittings, question of, 1877
- Supplementary Borrowing Authority bill C-80, 1644
- Temporary Immigration Security bill C-85, 1827-30, 1831, 1832, 1833-4
  - Appeals, 1827-9
    - Certificates submitting opinion of minister and Solicitor General, 1828
  - Improvements suggested:
    - Certificate giving opinion re national interest, 1829
    - Expiration date of effect of legislation, 1829
    - Reasonable grounds for minister's opinion, 1828-9
  - Ministerial powers, 1827-8, 1834
    - Retaining of powers after expiration date of Games, 1828, 1829-30

Smith, Hon. Sydney J., Former Speaker of the Senate, retired
Deceased July 15/76

Social security

Old age security, 1101-3, 1123-6, 1134

Social welfare, distribution of income, 2144-9

Distribution of income by quintiles, 2145

Forms required of welfare recipients, 2144, see also appendix to Debates of May 19/76

Social welfare - Concluded

Income redistribution through government intervention (1970), 2145-6

Myths concerning welfare, 2144

Report of study of government expenditures on welfare, 2147-8

Subsidies to businesses, 2147, 2149; CNR and CPR, 2149

Universality of welfare programs, 2146-7

Speaker: Senator

Croll, David A., 2144-9

Spain

King Juan Carlos I of Spain, attendance of Senator Perrault at Coronation, 1485

Sparrow, Hon. Herbert O.

Canadian Wheat Board, adjustment payments to grain producers, 1297

Continental Bank of Canada bill S-30, 1345

Estimates, discussion on subject matter of appropriation bills remaining on Order Paper, 1784

Estimates, fiscal year ending Mar. 31/75, Supplementary (C), 441-2

Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/76, rep of National Finance Committee, 971-3, 983-4

CIDA, authority to carry funds from year to year, 973

Employees in the government, statistics, 972

Expenditures and GNP, 972, 983

Growth of budgetary expenditures in various depts., 972, 983

Increases in statutory items and non-statutory items, 972-3, 983

Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/76, Supplementary (A), rep of National Finance Committee, 1549, 1565-70, 1602

Budgetary expenditures, various departments, 1565

Dollar items, 1565-70

Agriculture, 1569

Energy, Mines and Resources, 1566

External Affairs, 1568

Finance, 1569

Industry, Trade and Commerce, 1566

National Health and Welfare, 1566, 1568

Public Works, 1566-7

Regional Economic Expansion, 1570

Science and Technology, 1567

Secretary of State, 1567, 1568-9, 1570

Solicitor General, 1569

Transport, 1567, 1568, 1569

Urban Affairs, 1568

Veterans Affairs, 1567-8, 1569

Yearly estimates totals (1969-76), 1565

Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/76, Supplementary (B), 1937, 1948-53, 1958-9

Dollar items, 1948-53

Percentage increase of supplementary estimates in relation to main estimates, 1948, 1959

Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/77, rep of National Finance Committee, 2167, 2173-5

External Affairs Department, Passport Office, refusal to accept Canadian currency of $50 and $100 denominations, 2037, 2077

National Finance Committee

Meetings during adjournment, 2038

Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) C-10, 598, 599

Crowsnest Pass Agreement, 598

Western Grain Stabilization bill C-41, 1725

Speaker of the House of Commons

Commission appointing Hon. James Jerome to office of Speaker of the House of Commons, 2

Speaker of the Senate

Commission appointing Hon. Renaude Lapointe to office of Speaker of the Senate, 1

Former Speaker Hon. Muriel McQueen Fergusson, speeches at unveiling of portrait in Senate foyer, 469-71

Pro tem

Bourget, Hon. Maurice, 382, 396, 1395, 2176, 2361

Deschatelets, Hon. Jean-Paul, 1781

Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, 582, 803

Macnaughton, Hon. Alan A., 239

McIlraith, Hon. George J., 833

Statement at Opening of Session, 1

See Lapointe, Hon. Renaude

Special Committees, see Committees

Speech from the Throne at Opening of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament, 2-7

Consideration date, 7

Laskin, Rt. Hon. Bora, His Excellency the Administrator of the Government of Canada, Opening of Parliament, 2-7

Termination date of Address in reply, 13

See Address in reply to Speech from the Throne

Speech from the Throne at Prorogation of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament

Laskin, Rt. Hon. Bora, 2453

Spence, Hon. Wishart F., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court

Deputy Administrator of the Government of Canada, 313-14

Royal assent, 313-14

Deputy Governor General

Royal assent, 656, 740, 758, 832, 1134, 1617, 1712

Sports

British Columbia Women's Basketball Team, congratulations on winning of championship, 1889

Canadian Men's Curling Championship, congratulations to Newfoundland rink, 1889

Message of congratulations to Montreal Canadiens on winning of the Stanley Cup, 2129

Pan American Games, congratulations to Canadian team members, 1318

Russia-Canada hockey series, 58-59; Press report of speech by Senator Godfrey, 98-99

Stanbury, Hon. Richard J.

Anti-inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, 2098, 2137-9

Appeals, 2098

Compensation cases, 2098

Increases in compensation in excess of guidelines, 2098

Right of notification to an appeal board, 2098

Authority of Administrator, 2098

Compensation in Quebec industry, 2098

Gross National Product, 2138-9

Right to freedom, 2137-8

US economy, 2138-9

Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, 542

Brotherhood Week, 542

Indian and non-Indian children, wilderness camping, 542

Labour-management conferences, 542

Religious dialogue, 542

Student exchange, 542

Stanbury, Hon. Richard J. - Concluded

Canadian economy

Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1373-5

Domestic savings, 1374

Federal-provincial leadership, 1374-5

Labour demands, 1374

Trade strategies, 1374

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2408-09

Deterrent aspect, 2408

Gallup poll, 2408, 2409

Media coverage of subject and effects of, 2409

Responsibility of members of Parliament, 2409

Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Joint Committee

Rep with amds, Bill C-52 (Superannuation), 1545-7

Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, 1707-08, 1710-11

Benefits payable on cessation of employment, 1707

Common-law spouse, 1710

Continuation of employment beyond December, 1707

Continuation of pension entitlement on job change, 1707

Equalization of benefits to male and female employees, 1707, 1710

Interest rate on return of contributions, 1710, 1711

Transfer of pension credits, 1707

Widower's benefit, 1707, 1710

Statute Revision bill S-3, 128-9

Indexing of statutes and regulations, 129

Loose-leaf editions, 129

Omission of federal and private acts from earlier revisions, 129

Powers of commission, 129

Status of women, 16-17, 187-8

International Women's Year, 188, 671-4, 836-8, 896-9

Statute Law (status of women) 1065, 1103-07, 1122-3, 1136, 1281

*See Women, status ofStatute law relating to income tax, 583, 606-14, 616-21, 627-40, 645-56, 1403, 1417-22, 1439-42, 1454, 1459, 1476*Statute law (status of women)

Acts amended, 1104, 1107

Civilian war pensions and allowances, 1104

Criminal Code, 1104

Elections, 1104

Immigration, 1104

National defence, 1104

Pensions, 1104

Public Service employment, 1104

Unemployment insurance, 1107

Cadet organizations, 1106

Education, 1105

Excerpt from Le Devoir editorial, 1103

Female staff of the Senate, 1103-04

Labour force discriminations, 1105

Pension inequalities, 1106

Statute law (status of women) - Concluded

Political status, 1105

Recommendations of Royal Commission on the Status of Women, 1104

Speakers of the Senate, 1105, 1107

Speakers: Senators

Belisle, Rheal, 1104-07

Denis, Azellus, 1103-04, 1107

Statute Law (Status of Women) 1974 bill C-16. 1r, 1065; 2r, 1103-07; m for amdt to French version, 1122, agreed, 1123; 3r, 1123; Commons concurrence in Senate amdt, 1136; r.a., 1281

Statute law (superannuation)

Benefits payable on cessation of employment, 1707

Common-law spouse, 1708, 1710

Continuation of employment beyond December, 1707

Continuation of pension entitlement on job change, 1707

Equalization of benefits to male and female employees, 1707, 1708, 1710

Interest rate on return of contributions, 1708-09, 1710, 1711

Members of Parliament, 1709

Transfer of pension credits, 1707

Widower's benefit, 1707, 1710

Widows of senators, 1710-11

Speakers: Senators

Bélisle, Rhéal, 1708-09, 1710

Choquette, Lionel, 1709-10

Forsey, Eugene A., 1710

Stanbury, Richard J., 1707-08, 1710-11

Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52. 1r, 1706; 2r, 1706-11; 3r, 1711; r.a., 1712

Statute law (veterans and civilian war allowances)

Common-law wife, 260, 261

Dependent children, 257-8, 260, 267-8, 269

Discrimination affecting those under age of 65 yrs., 268

Escalation of allowances to consumer price index, 268

Means test, 268

Orphans, 257-8

Qualification of 365 days overseas, 268, 269

Residence requirement, 268

Widowers of female veterans attaining age of 60 yrs., 261

Speakers: Senators

Bélisle, Rhéal, 258-62

Benidickson, W. M., 269-70

Carter, Chesley W., 267-8

Lang, Daniel, 256-8

Macdonald, John M., 268-9

Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances) Amendment bill C-4. 1r, 242; 2r, 267-70; ref to com, 270; rep without amdt, 272; 3r, 281; r.a., 314

Statute law (veterans and returned soldiers' insurance)

Common-law spouse, 1884

Death benefit limitation, 1884

Statute law (veterans and returned soldiers insurance) - Concluded*Speakers: Senators

Carter, Chesley W., 1883-4

Macdonald, John M., 1910-11

Statute Law (Veterans and Returned Soldiers' Insurance) bill C-86. 1r, 1856; 2r, 1883-4, 1910-11; 3r, 1917; r.a., 2002

Statute revision

Indexing of statutes and regulations, 129

Loose-leaf editions, 129

Omission of federal and private acts from earlier revisions, 129

Powers of commission, 129

Speakers: Senators

Choquette, Lionel, 159

Stanbury, Richard J., 128-9

Statute Revision bill S-3. 1r, 12; 2r, 128-9, 159; ref to com, 159; rep without amdt, 243; 3r, 253; r.a., 467

Statutes of Canada

Ambiguous powers, citations re, 275-6

Appeal Court, 276

History of Court of Queen's Bench of Quebec, 274-5

Speakers: Senators

Flynn, Jacques, 291-3

Langlois, Leopold, 274-7, 293

Statutes of Canada (to revise references to Court of Queen's Bench of Quebec) bill S-16. 1r, 243; 2r, 274-7, 291-3; 3r, 301; r.a., 467

Sullivan, Hon. Joseph A.

Abortions, study of procedure for obtaining therapeutic abortions, question re committee on, 1428, 1624-5, 1639, 1654-5

Connaught Laboratories Ltd., sale of land and laboratory testing adjacent to proposed housing development, 586, 616, 732

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 358-62, 1079-80

'Drugs, Society and Personal Choice', 361

Hazards of use of cannabis, 359-60

Effect on learning ability, 359-60

Metabolic interactions with other drugs, 359-60

Persistence of THC in the body, 359

Tar content, 359

Legal aspects, 360

Permissive society, 361-2

Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2004-05

MD of Canada, 2004-05

Time and Reader's Digest, 2004

Medical Care bill C-68, 2339

Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill S-9, 155-6, 157

Herbal medicinals, 156

Listing of ingredients, 157

Safety and effectiveness of proprietary medicines, 156

Scientific review of medicines, 156

TV advertising, detrimental aspects, 156

Sullivan, Hon. Joseph A. - *Concluded

Sports

Montreal Canadiens, message of congratulations on winning of the Stanley Cup, 2129
Team Canada, 98-99

Superannuation

Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, 1706-11, 1712
Subject matter of Bill C-52 ref to Committee on Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, 1437; rep with amds, 1545-7

Supplementary borrowing authority

Borrowing through issue of treasury bills and raising of new funds through bonds, 1642, 1649-50
Capital markets, 1642, 1644
Draftmanship of legislation, 1650
Inclusion of borrowing authority in appropriation bills, 1642
Referral of bill to committee, question of, 1643, 1644
Requirement of recommendation of Governor General, 1643
Retroactivity of authority, 1650

Speakers: Senators

Everett, Douglas D., 1649-50
Flynn, Jacques, 1642, 1643, 1649
Grosart, Allister, 1643-4
Langlois, Leopold, 1641-4, 1650
Smith, George I., 1644

Supplementary Borrowing Authority bill C-80. 1r, 1638; 2r, 1641-4; ref to com, 1644; rep without amdt, 1649;
3r, 1649-50; r.a., 1712

Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act

Senate and House of Commons, 2177, 2186-7, 2193-6

Supply bills

See Appropriation bills,
Estimates.

Supreme Court

Appeals as of right, 163
Appeals, restriction to Supreme Court, 103-04, 153-4
Case overload and delays in hearings, committee on, 104-05
Conflict of interest, 163
Interest on judgments, 103, 153, 163
Judges, 1005, 1040-3, 1051-3, 1066, 1080, 1095
Jurisprudence, 163
Quorum, 163-4
Residence requirement for judges, registrars and deputy registrars, 103, 153, 162-3

Speakers: Senators

Connolly, John J., 103-06, 162-4
Flynn, Jacques, 106, 153-5
Macdonald, John M., 162

Supreme Court bill S-2. 1r, 12; 2r, 103-06, 153-5, 162-4; ref to com, 164; rep without amdt, 243; 3r, 253; r.a., 467

Supreme Courts of Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island

See Judges bill C-47, 1005, 1040-3, 1051-3, 1066, 1080, 1095.

Tailoring service for Senate and Commons, question, 2167-8, 2209

Tax treaties

Countries with which Canada has concluded tax treaties or conventions, 855, 867, 925, 942

Team Canada, 58-59, 98-99

Telecommunications

Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission, 803, 829-32, 841-3, 849-51, 998, 1007, 1095

Teleglobe Canada

Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation, 1034, 1062, 1067, 1080

Telegraphs Act

Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission, 803, 829-32, 841-3, 849-51, 998, 1107, 1095

Televising of proceedings of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 509-14, 521-3, 543-54

Committee decision re, 509-14

Authority of committee, question, 509-12

Motion to approve decision of committee, 512-14, 521-3, 543-54; agreed, 554

Television and radio coverage of Senate and committee proceedings, 1365-6, 1483, 1484, 1487-8, Order discharged and inquiry withdrawn, 2099

Controls, 1483, 1484, 1488

Decisions of other countries re broadcasting of parliamentary proceedings, 1483

Public reaction, 1487-8

Resolution adopted by Commons re broadcasting of proceedings, 1483, 1487

Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 1487-8

Croll, David A., 1483, 1484

Greene, John J., 1365-6, 2099

Temporary immigration security

Appeals against minister's decision, 1827-9

Certificates submitting opinion of minister and Solicitor General, 1828, 1829

Expiry date of legislation, 1829, 1833

'Reasonable grounds' for minister's opinion, 1831

Source of information, disclosure of, 1835

Speakers: Senators

Buckwold, Sidney L., 1831, 1832

Connolly, John J., 1830

Forsey, Eugene A., 1830-2

Langlois, Leopold, 1820, 1832-6

Rowe, Frederick William, 1829

Smith, George I., 1827-30, 1832, 1833-4

Temporary Immigration security bill C-85. 1r, 1813; 2r, 1820, 1827-36; ref to com, 1836; rep without amdt, 1874; 3r, 1893; r.a., 2002

Territorial lands

Conflict of interest, 372, 376
 'Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest', 377
 Offshore rights and the seabed, 376, 377
Speakers: Senators
     Buckwold, Sidney L., 371-2
     Flynn, Jacques, 375-7

Territorial Lands bill S-20. 1r, 326; 2r, 371-2, 375-7; ref to com, 377; rep with amdt, 579; 3r, 579; r.a., 1095

Textile industry

See Industry, Canadian textile problems, 781-7, 791-3, 843-6, 901-02, 945-8, 975-9

Thompson, Hon. Andrew

Aeronautics bill S-34, 2124-5, 2131-2
     Authorization re instituting of security measures, 2125
     Canadian air carriers landing in foreign countries, 2125
     Conventions, international, 2124, 2125
     Landing of foreign air carriers without being subjected to security measures, 2125
     Security measures for civil aircraft of foreign air carriers, 2124, 2131
 Immigration bill S-12, 166
 Italy, earthquake victims, Canadian government assistance to, 2111

Time and Reader's Digest magazines, 582-3, 641-2

See Income Tax bill C-58
 Publishing industry.

Trade

Balance of payments, deficit, 877
 Canada's claim for compensation re loss of preferential access of Canadian commodities to British market, 579-80, 661-2, 671
 Canada-United States relations, 227-9
 European Community, 307-13, 316-20, 329-33, 515, 579-80, 661-2, 671
 Free trade, an economic consideration for Canada, 1738-41, 1849-52, 2059
 Inflationary trends affecting export markets, 877
 Japan, 234-5, 245-9
 Mexico, 775-7, 852-3
 Preferential rates for developing countries, 485, 515
 United Nations Trade and Development Conference, 515

Trade Marks Act

Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bills S-9 and S-35

Translations

Criteria of Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, correction of, 264

Transport and Communications, Standing Senate Committee

Members, 96
 Reports
     Aeronautics bill S-34, rep without amdt, 2141

Transport and Communications, Standing Senate Committee - ConcludedReports - Concluded*

- Aircraft Registry bill S-5, rep with recommendation that bill be not proceeded with 980-1, 990-7, 999-1002
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation TV program 'Les Beaux Dimanches', 1099, 1118-20, 1127-9
- Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission bill C-5, rep without amdt, 998
- International Air Transport Association bill S-18, rep without amdt, 373
- Railway bill C-48, rep without amdt, 795

Transport Minister Hon. Jean Marchand, rumour of resignation, 573

TransportationAir service*

- Disruption of services (bilingualism), 2237, 2243, 2249-50, 2258-9
- Eastern Canada, 73
- Fredericton-Ottawa, 854-5, 867
- Halifax-Ottawa, 1479-80
- St. John's-Ottawa, 506-08
- Air service, flight delays due to labour disputes, 2062-3, 2168
- Bilingual air traffic services, Commission of Inquiry, 2322
- Letters from Canadian Air Traffic Control Assoc. and Air Line Pilots' Assoc., and to Minister of Transport, 2335, 2352-3
- Crowsnest Pass freight rates, 41-42, 598, 889, 924
- Feed grains, freight assistance to Atlantic provinces, 1035
- Ferries operating between Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, possible increase in fares, 1815
- Memorandum of Understanding between Minister of Transport and the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association, 2276-7
- Newfoundland
  - Air service, 506-08
  - Inter-city passenger routes, Canadian Press article re, 139-40
  - North Sydney-Cape Breton-Port aux Basques, 139
  - Strait of Belle Isle, 64-65
  - Trans-Canada Highway, 63-64
- Nova Scotia, 20
- Official Languages Act, language rights of air pilots in Quebec, 2344-8, 2378-86
- Prince Edward Island, 73
- Railways
  - Abandonment of lines and effect on municipal property tax assessments, 44-45
  - Canadian Pacific Railway, 38-45; land grants and sales, 39-42; mineral rights and revenue from, 40-42; Trail copper smelter, 42; Crowsnest Pass, 42
  - Freight rates, 43
  - Passenger trains, 43-45, 52, 140
- Resumption of airline services in Canada, appointment of Commission of Inquiry, 2261-2, 2276-7

Transportation

- British North America Act as it pertains to transportation, 2049-54, 2070, 2106-08, 2115-18, 2196-8, 2217-21; motion to refer subject matter to Transport and Communications Committee, 2221, 2333-4
- British Columbia terms re transportation services, 2218
- Chignecto Ship Canal, 2219
- Ferry employees right to strike, 2197, 2218-19
- Government policy, lack of statement re, 2218
- Halifax and Saint John, 'Gateway to Eastern North America', 2211-12
- Halifax container pier, 2212

Transportation - ConcludedBritish North America Act as it pertains to transportation - Concluded

Intercolonial railway, 1117-18

British Columbia, 2218

New Brunswick, 2217-18

Newfoundland, 2106-08, 2115-18

CNR operations, 2115-18

Abandonment of passenger service, 2115-16

Elimination of freight trains, 2116

Limited 'train consist', 2115-16

Overcharges on freight, 2117

Shipment delays, 2116

Ferry service, 2197-8

Newfoundland &amp; Ontario Steamship Ltd., 2198

Road cruiser service, 2116

Bus fares, 2117

Bus purchases, questions re, 2116

Shipping, charter rates, 2198

Terms of Union re transportation services, 2108, 2117, 2118

Trans-Canada Highway, 2106-07

Provincial disparities, 2106-07

Passenger rail service, 2212

Prince Edward Island

Background of ferry services to PEI, NB and NS, 2050-1

CNR and Canadian Brotherhood of Transport and General Workers, labour disputes, 2053-4

CNR facilities, deterioration of, 2197

Charlottetown Guardian article re statement of Highways Minister, 2053

Excerpt from BNA Act re provisions relating to PEI services to be assumed by federal government, 2049-50

Ferry services of Albert, Northern Light and Stanley, 2150

Marine East Coast Co-ordinating Committee, 2050, 2054

National transportation policy, 2053

Potatoes, transportation by truck and resulting highway and marketing costs, 2052

Railway traffic provisions, 2051-2

CNR discontinuance of passenger service, 2052

Transportation rates on passengers, vehicles and freight, 2051

Federal government responsibility for increase, 2051

Saskatchewan, inquiry re rail abandonment, 2220

Sea-Wings cargo business, Atlantic provinces, 2212

Unemployment, 2198

Speakers: Senators

Bonnell, M. Lorne, 2049-54, 2070

Buckwold, Sidney L., 2219, 2220

Burchill, G. Percival, 2221

Carter, Chesley W., 2220

Duggan, James, 2115-18

Forsey, Eugene A., 2217-21

Greene, John J., 2219

MacDonald, John M., 2196-8

McDonald, A. Hamilton, 2220, 2221, 2333-4

Norrie, Margaret F., 2211-12

Phillips, Orville H., 2063-6, 2220

Riley, Daniel A., 2221

Rowe, Frederick William, 2106-08, 2064

Treaties

Countries with which Canada has concluded tax treaties or conventions, 855, 867, 925

See Agreements, conventions, treaties

Tributes

- Aird, Hon. John B., resignation from the Senate, 334-6
- Bourque, Hon. Romuald, the late, 11-12
- Crerar, Hon. Thomas A., P.C., the late, 778-9
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, P.C.
  - Resignation from the Senate, 967-8
  - Unveiling of portrait in Senate foyer, 469-71
- Gelinas, Hon. Louis-Philippe, the late, 1713-14
- Gouin, Hon. Leon Mercier, resignation from the Senate, 2057
- Hugessen, Hon. A. K., the late, 2007
- Kickham, Hon. Thomas J., the late, 324
- Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C., the late, 534-2
- Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, P.C., the late, 2176-7
- MacKay, Hon. John, Lieutenant Governor of Prince Edward Island, the late, 135
- Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., resignation from the Senate and appointment to office of High Commissioner to United Kingdom, 208-12
- Matheson, Hon. Alexander W., the late, former Premier of Prince Edward Island, 1861-2
- O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan, the late, 2034-6
- See Felicitations*

Trudeau, Rt. Hon. Pierre Elliott, P.C., Prime Minister of Canada

- Orders in Council concerning prerogatives of Prime Minister, 1349, 1355-
- Visit to British Columbia with cabinet ministers, 1763-4
- Visit to Paris, news report on accompanying officials, 161, 180
- Watergate tapes, reference to Prime Minister by former US President Nixon, 179

Trust companies

- Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies bill S-7, 47, 100-03, 107, 160, 180, 314

Two-price wheat

- Bread prices, 928, 929
- Canadian Wheat Board report, excerpt re two-price system, 943
- Escalator clause, lack of, 929-30, 943
- Price of wheat for consumption in Canada, 928, 929-30
- Production costs, 928, 929-30
- Statements to Commons committee re floor price;
  - Canadian Federation of Agriculture, 929
  - National Farmers Union, 929
  - Ontario Wheat Producers' Marketing Board, 930
  - Palliser Wheat Growers Assoc., 930
- Subsidy to producers and consumers, 928, 929
- Speakers: Senators
  - Argue, Hazen, 928-30, 1088, 1089
  - Macdonald, John M., 942-3
  - Molgat, Gildas L., 928

Two-Price Wheat bill C-19. 1r, 900; 2r, 928-30, 942-4; ref to com, 944; rep without amdt but with recommendation, 1088-90; 3r, 1090; r.a., 1095

Unemployment

- Community employment, 283
- Importation of farm labourers, 284, 287
- Loss of working days through strikes, 81-82
- Manpower centres, functions of, 400-01
- Prince Edward Island, transportation problems of employable persons, 84
- Textile workers, 782, 784, 786-7, 791
- Unemployment insurance for pensioners, 145
- Welfare and unemployment insurance vs wages, 283, 284, 287
- Work ethic in Canada, 281-8, 339-42, 474-8, 518
- Working poor, 141

Unemployment insurance

- Amdts to be proclaimed in Jan/76, 1700
- Appeal procedure, 1704
  - Statistics on appeals, 1704
- Application form for insurance, 1704
- Claimants outside Canada, 1703
- Dependency reduction from 75% to 66 $\frac{2}{3}$ %, 1696, 1697
- Disentitlement, 1699
- Escalation in unemployment insurance payments, 1697
- Leaving employment voluntarily and refusal of suitable employment, 1702
- Minimum benefit, 1702
- Persons 65 yrs. and over, 1696, 1697, 1698
  - OAS and GIS benefits, 1696, 1698
  - Refunds, 1701
  - Retirement benefits, 1702
  - Statistics, 1698, 1701
- Prison or institutional inmate, 1703
- Qualifying time, extension of, 1700
- Recovery of advance payments, 1703
- Regional breakdown of savings, 1700
- Self-employed persons or partnership, 1699
- Sharing of costs between employees, employers and government, 1697
- Sick benefits, 1700-01, 1702
- Social insurance number, 1705
- Social security measures, increase in benefits, 1696
- Students returning to school, 1700
- Suitable employment, defining of, 1703
- Training or instruction for new employment, 1702-03
- Unemployment statistics (1974), 1697
- Speakers: Senators
  - Forsey, Eugene A., 1690-1, 1698, 1699, 1700, 1702, 1705, 1706
  - Fournier, Sarto, 1705-06
  - Grosart, Allister, 1671-3, 1697, 1698, 1699, 1700, 1701, 1702, 1703, 1704, 1705
  - Macdonald, John M., 1689-90, 1698, 1701-02, 1703, 1704
  - Macnaughton, Alan, 1695-1706
  - Molgat, Gildas L., 1687-9, 1694-5
  - Perrault, Raymond J., 1693, 1694
- also*
  - Andras, Hon. Robert K., Minister of Manpower and Immigration, 1695-1706

Unemployment Insurance bill C-69. 1r, 1686; 2r, 1686-95; bill committed to Committee of the Whole, Senator Macnaughton in the Chair, Minister of Manpower and Immigration Hon. Robert K. Andras taking part in debate, 1695-1700, m to amend clause 6 not carried, 1700, debate cont, 1700-06; 3r, 1706; r.a., 1712

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics

Canada-Russia hockey series, 58-59, 98-99
 Economic conditions and trade prospects, 458
 Invasion of other countries, 1759
 Invitation to Canadian Parliamentary delegation to visit Russia, 1250-1, 1257
 Maritime forces, 345
 Military power, 1761
 Nobel Peace Prize winner, refusal of USSR to permit acceptance of award, 1760-1
 Territorial gains as result of World War II, 342-3
 Violation of treaties and agreements, 1758-61
 Warsaw Pact, 1759-60

United Grain Growers Limited bill S-33. 1r, 1914; 2r, 1924-5, 1930, 1946-7; ref to com, 1947; rep without amdt, 2003; 3r, 2009; r.a., 2207

United Kingdom

Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., High Commissioner to UK, farewell speech to the Canadian Parliament on appointment to position, 207-08; tributes, 208-12
 Trades Union Congress of Britain, statement of policy, 1328-9
 Wilson, Rt. Hon. Harold, Prime Minister, visit to Parliament, 473, 480

United Nations

Canada's participation in refugee relief, peacekeeping and ceasefire missions, 1243, 1244
 Crime Prevention, status of Palestinian Liberation Organization as participants in UN Congress, 1238, 1242-4, 1248-9
 Current discord at international conferences, 1238
 Resolution adopted by General Assembly inviting PLO to attend Congress, 1238
 Statement of Secretary of State for External Affairs re government decision to request postponement of meeting, 1248-9
 Crimes Against Internationally Protected Persons; Prevention and Punishment - An Analysis of the UN Convention, 1769
 Habitat, Conference on Human Settlements, report of Canadian National Committee, 1959-64, 2099-2102, 2199-2200, 2278-9
 Pension benefits for dependants of Canadian soldier killed in Cyprus, 760, 768
 Resolution naming Israel as racist nation, motion re condemnation of, Senator Croll, 1397-8
 Limitation on contributions as result of resolution, question, Senator Greene, 1411, 1417
 South Africa, exclusion from UN, 1243-4
 UNESCO, 487-8, 515, 1243
 Agreement for Facilitating International Circulation of Visual and Auditory Materials of Educational, Scientific and Cultural Character, 4-7
 Convention, 515
 Excerpt from Montreal Star re, 487-8
 Withdrawal of grants and exclusion of Israel from European Zone, 488, 1243
 Objectors to UNESCO decision, 1243
 World population, conference on, 236
 Zionism, Assembly resolution re and limitation on Canada's contributions as result of, 1411, 1419

United States

- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Florida meeting, 2221-2, 2224-33
- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Quebec City meeting, 1137-43, 1144-55, 1625-7
- Canada-United States relations, 66-68, 71, 227-9, 234, 1653, 1716, 1747-50
  - Foreign Affairs Committee authorized to report on, 227-9, 234; com authorized to publish and distribute Vol. I of report, 1653; report tabled, 1716
  - Committee report, 1747-50
  - Questions re, 1625-7
- Canadian defence spending, remarks by United States Ambassador, report in Globe and Mail, 2122-3, 2201
- Watergate tapes, reference to Prime Minister by former US President Nixon, 179
- See Canada-US relations

Uranium Canada, Limited, proposed referral of report of National Finance Committee, 1639

Urban affairs

- National housing, 742, 743-57, 758

van Roggen, Hon. George C.

- Aird, Hon. John B., resignation from the Senate, 334-5
- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1577, 1581
- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, 2113-15
  - Export levy, effect on resource industries, 2113-14
  - New plants and equipment, 2114
- Austin, Hon. Jacob, introduced in the Senate, 1354
- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, 1140-3, see also 1145-55
  - Energy resources, 1141-2
    - Alaska reserves, 1141
    - Athabaska tar sands and Colorado oil shale, 1141
    - Coal reserves, 1141
    - Nuclear energy, 1142
    - Prices, 1141; controversy re, 1141
    - Shortfall in deliveries to US, 1142
    - Solar and geothermal energy, harnessing of tides, heat pumps, 1142
  - Excerpts from speeches made in Quebec City, 1140-1, 1143
- European Parliament, 307-14
  - Brussels meetings, 309-10
  - Canadian delegation, 308-09
  - Canadian relations with European Community, excerpt from Senate Committee report on, 310
  - Economic situation, 311
  - Energy resources, 312-13
  - Exchange meetings in Ottawa, 308
  - Ottawa office, establishment of, 308
  - Prime Minister's visit to the Community, 308
  - United Kingdom, 312
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1048
  - Application for withdrawal of criminal record, 1048
  - Unconditional pardon, 1048
- Foreign affairs
  - Canada-United States relations, 1747-50
    - Changing concepts of the relationship, 1748
    - Current problems, 1748
    - Information program, 1749
    - Inter-Parliamentary Group meetings, 1749
    - Legislative channels and contacts, 1748-9

van Roggen, Hon. George C. - ConcludedForeign affairs - *Concluded*Canada-United States relations - Concluded

Statistical comparisons on trade, 1749

'The Institutional Framework for the Relationship', foreword of Vol. I of report, 1747-8

Trade relations, 1748

Tributes to committee members, witnesses and staff, 1750

Foreign Affairs Committee

Canada-United States relations, committee authorized to report on, 227-9, 234; committee authorized to publish and distribute Vol. I of report, 1653

Reports

Canada-United States Relations, 1747-50

Temporary Immigration Security bill C-85, rep without amdt, 1874

Free trade, an economic consideration for Canada, 1741

Immigration bill C-12, 239

Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1869-73

Broadcasting, 1870

Bellingham station, 1872

Canada-US negotiations, 1870-1, 1872

Canadian advertising expenditures, 1870

CRTC recommendations, 1871, 1872

Ministerial rulings, 1870

Time and Reader's Digest, 1869-70, 1871-2

Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C., the late, 534

National Press Gallery, invitation to reception, 61-62

Oil industry, Canada-US relations re, 71

Privileges and Immunities (International Organization) bill S-25, 957-8

Comprehensive economic cooperation agreement, 957

European Community, recommendation for establishment of Ottawa office, 957-8

Recommendations of Foreign Affairs Committee, 957

Visit of Prime Minister to Community, 957

Regulations re attendance of senators, 1935-6

Travel distance, 1935

Veterans

Compensation for former prisoners of war, 2014, 2038-43

Royal Canadian Legion, 1180, 1194-6, 1205-09, 1211-12, 1281

Statute Law (veterans and civilian war allowances), 242, 267-70, 272, 281, 314

Veterans and returned soldiers' insurance, 1856*Victoria Museum, rumoured change of name, question, 1035, 1165*Visitors

Alberta parliamentarians, 1087

Baltic Nations, Consuls of Estonia and Latvia, 1867

British Columbia, Mr. William Templeton, Victoria Legislative Assembly, 854

British Columbia parliamentarians, 1087

Bulgaria, President of the General Assembly and His Excellency the Ambassador, 124

Club of Rome President, Dr. Peccei, 473

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, African region delegation, 1087

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, Secretary General Sir Robin Vanderfelt, 1966

Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, former Speaker of the Senate, 1970

Icelandic parliamentarians, 2184

Iraq, Mr. Elkadi Kw Kussai, 1742

Japan, delegation from House of Councillors, 2364

Visitors - Concluded

Japan, Mr. Yasunaga Ohara, National Diet Library, 299
 MacKenzie, Hon. Norman, 1303
 Mexico, Parliamentary delegation, 1874, 1877-8
 Polish Ambassador, His Excellency Jozef Czesak and Mrs. Czesak, 1442
 Saskatchewan, parliamentarians and wives, 262
 Senior citizens from March Township and Kanata, 555
 United Kingdom, Prime Minister Harold Wilson, 473

Vote

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1581, 1587
 Appropriation bill No. 5, 1974 C-45, 417
 Citizenship bill C-20, 2290
 Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2450
     Question re voting procedure, 2444
 Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1030-1, 1078
 Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 655-6
 Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2032

Walker, Hon. David J., P.C.

Aird, Hon. John B., resignation from the Senate, 335
 Canada Business Corporations bill C-29, 494-7
     Administrative discretion, 494
     Complaints re mishandling of business, 496-7
     Directors, 496
     Ontario Corporations Act, 494, 495, 496
     Shares and dividends, 496
 Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 558-9
     Deterrent aspect, 558, 559
     Increase in murder crimes, 559
 Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies bill S-7, 103
 Gasoline excise tax, 1101
 Income Tax bill (No. 2) C-65, 1418, 1420
 Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1842-5, 1848, 2393-5
     Canada-United States relations, 1844
     Destruction of competition, 1844
     Economic aspects of legislation, 1844
     Mass Media Committee, 1842-3
     Time Magazine and Reader's Digest, 1842-5
 Judges bill C-47, 1042-3
     Salary increases, 1043
     Selection of judges, 1042-3
 Justice, administration of, allegations of interference by cabinet ministers, 1825-6, 1847, 1848
 Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, P.C., the late, 2176-7
 Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., resignation from the Senate, 210-12
 Official Languages Act, language rights of air pilots in Quebec, 2346-8
 Parliamentary immunity, 1399
 Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1429, 1430-1
 Restaurant of Parliament, source of meat supplies, 1007, 1012-13
 Rules of the Senate
     Conflict of Interest, Green Paper, question of privilege re reference to committee, Hon. Mr. Croll, 780
 Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 874, 875
 Televising of committee proceedings, 522
 Tributes to Senator Hayden, Chairman of Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 1317

War veterans

- Dependent children, 257-8, 260
- Discrimination affecting those under age of 65 yrs., 268
- Eligibility for pension benefits, 259
- Equality for male and female veterans, 258, 260, 261
- Escalatory clause, 257, 268
- Orphans, 257-8
- Remembrance Day, 257, 258-9
- Royal Canadian Legion, 1180, 1194-6, 1205-09, 1211-12, 1281
- Statute Law (veterans and civilian war allowances) 242, 267-70, 272, 281, 314
- Widowers attaining age of 60 yrs., 216

Watergate tapes

- Reference to Prime Minister Trudeau by former US President Nixon, 179

Weapons and firearms

- Control of weapons and firearms, 193, 293-5

Welch, Hon. Frank C.

- Retired from the Senate, July 14/75

Welfare

- Community employment, 283
- Poverty in Canada - report of Special Senate Committee, 281-2
- Unemployment insurance vs welfare, 283, 284, 287
- Welfare ministers' conference, statement by Minister of NHW re federal policy in social welfare field, 556
- Work Ethic in Canada, 281-8, 339-42, 474-8, 518
- Working poor, 283

West Coast grain handling operations

- Agriculture policies, improvement in, 84-85
- Basic hourly rate for grain handlers, 78, 82, 92; disparity in labour rates, 82
- Conciliation commissioners, Globe and Mail item on, 88
- Consultations between government representatives and company officials in Saskatoon, 91
- Cost-of-living and pension proposals, 94
- Costs of strike action, 87
- Essential services, proposals for collective bargaining, prohibition against strikes, compulsory arbitration, 79-80
- Government intervention and inadequacies in dispute, 82, 86-87
- Grain prices, 85
- Industrial Inquiry Commission, proposal of Labour minister, 78
- Loss of working days through conciliation delays, 81-82
- Prairie farmers and grain handlers reaction to Perry report, 84
- Recommendations of conciliation commissioner, 77-78, 79, 89-90, 91-92
- Termination date of agreement, 78, 80-81, 89

Speakers: Senators

- Argue, Hazen, 82-85
- Flynn, Jacques, 78-80
- Grosart, Allister, 85-89
- Manning, Ernest C., 80-81
- McDonald, A. Hamilton, 81-82
- Perrault, Raymond J., 77-78, 80, 89-93, 94

West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12. 1r, 76; 2r, 77-93; 3r, 93-94; r.a., 95

West Coast ports operations

- Collective agreement provisions, 725
- Disruptions in economy due to strikes, 725-7
- Labour unions and management, irresponsibility in not reaching agreement, 727
- Mediator W. Kelly, Labour Assist. Deputy Minister for Industrial Relations, 724
- Non-supervisory longshoremen, 724
- Penalty for failure to comply with legislation, 729-30
- Resumption of work by longshoremen and related operations, question, 742
- Right to strike, 727
- Stevedoring companies and ship and dock foremen, 724
- Time limit on proceedings of arbitrator, 728
- Western farmers, difficulties of communication with government, 727-8
- Speakers: Senators
  - Argue, Hazen, 727-8
  - Flynn, Jacques, 725-7, 730
  - Forsey, Eugene A., 728
  - McIlraith, George, 730
  - Perrault, Raymond J., 724-5, 728-30
  - Prowse, J. Harper, 727

West Coast Ports Operations bill 1975 C-56. 1r, 723; 2r, 724-30; 3r, 730; r.a., 731

Western grain stabilization, Agriculture Committee authorized to study subject matter of Bill C-41, 1615

Western grain stabilization

- Administration of act, 1725, 1737
- Advisory committee, 1725
- Branch offices, question of, 1736, 1737
- Crop insurance, 1736, 1737
- Eligibility to participate, 1724-5
- Instability of agricultural income, 1723, 1735
- Payments vs contributions, 1724
- Production costs, 1724, 1736-7
- Prolonged hardship, 1736-7
- Retirement of farmer or sale of operation, 1724, 1725
- Tax deductions, 1724, 1726
- Voluntary participation in plan, 1724, 1736
- Western Agricultural Conference, 1736
- Wheat Board, role of, 1736, 1737
- Speakers: Senators
  - Bell, A. E. Haddon, 1725
  - Buckwold, Sidney L., 1725, 1726
  - McDonald, A. Hamilton, 1723-6, 1737-8
  - Sparrow, Herbert O., 1725
  - Yuzyk, Paul, 1725, 1735-7

Western Grain Stabilization bill C-41. 1r, 1714; 2r, 1723-6, 1735-8; ref to com, 1738; rep without amdt, 1756; 3r, 1766; r.a., 1792

Wheat

- Two-price wheat policy, 900, 928-30, 942-4, 1088, 1090, 1095
- West Coast grain handling operations, 76, 77-94, 95

Wheat - Concluded

- West Coast ports operations, 723, 724-30, 731
- Wheat Board, 12, 106-07, 169-72, 255, 265-7, 656
  - Annual report, 685, 732
- Wheat Board (Bill C-88), 2260
- Wheat Board (Bill S-6), 12, 106-07, 169-72, 255, 265-7, 656

Wheat Board (Bill S-6)

- Cash advances, 267
- Excerpts from press release by Senator Argue, 171
- Final payment, 170
- Grain prices, 170-2
- Initial price, 172
- Malting barley, 266
- Operations of Board, 170, 172
- Speakers: Senators
  - Argue, Hazen, 170-2, 266-7
  - Buckwold, Sidney L., 106-07
  - Yuzyk, Paul, 169-70

Wheat Board bill (No. 1) S-6. 1r, 12; 2r, 106-07, 169-72; ref to com, 172; rep without amdt, 255; 3r, 265-7; r.a., 656

Wheat Board (Bill C-88)

- Advisory Committee
  - Election of new committee, 2316
  - Functions, 2330
  - Members, 2315, 2316
  - Payments to members, 2316
  - Producers as members, question of, 2330
- Costs of pooling account, 2316
- Kent County can be saved*, study of NB district, 2330
- Malting barley, 2315-16, 2330-3
  - Grainview* article entitled Why Alberta barley growers are suing CWB, 2331
- Provision for further pools by order in council, 2317
- Wheat grading, 2332
- Speakers: Senators
  - Argue, Hazen, 2331-3
  - McDonald, A. Hamilton, 2315-17, 2333
  - Yuzyk, Paul, 2330-1

Wheat Board bill (No. 2) C-88. 1r, 2260; 2r, 2315-17, 2330-3; ref to com, 2333; rep without amdt, 2356; 3r, 2356-7; r.a., 2450

Whips

- Chief Government Whip in the Senate, Hon. William J. Petten
- Chief Opposition Whip in the Senate, Hon. John M. Macdonald

White Papers

- Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1284, 1293, 1298-1303, 1312-14, 1319-30, 1349-53

Williams, Hon. Guy

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 142-4
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2417
  - Organized crime, 2417
  - Public viewpoint, 2417
  - Self-preservation, possible attitude of police and guards, 2417
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 142
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 453-4
- Indians of Canada, 142-4, 453-4
  - Alcoholism and drug addiction, 142-3, 453-4
  - Buffalo kill, 142
  - Demonstration on Parliament Hill, 143
  - Fishermen's assistance program, 142
  - Great Lakes pollution, 142
  - Money-poor and land-rich aspects of Indian life, 144
  - Restrictions on former freedoms of livelihood, 142
  - Talent potential for sports, arts and Indian culture, 143
  - Treaties, 142
- Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C., the late, 534
- National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 751
  - Indians, 751
- National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, 1678
  - Construction quality, 1676

Wilson, Rt. Hon. Harold, Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, visit to Ottawa, 473, 480*Women, status of, 16-17, 187-8

- Abortion, 120-1, 188, 837, 917, 1036
- Advisory Council on the Status of Women, priorities cited, 187-8
- Canada Labour Code amdt, 187
- Canada Pension Plan, inclusion of homemakers, 187
- Divorce or dissolution of marriage, 187
- Equitable employment of women to federal government positions and boards, commissions and crown corporations, 187
  - Superannuation Act amdts, 187
- Indian women, loss of status on marriage to non-Indian, 898
- International Women's Year, 188, 671-4, 836-8, 896-9
- Status of Women News, statement issued by National Action Committee, 120-1
- Statute Law (Status of Women) bill C-16, 1065, 1103-07, 1122-3, 1136, 1281

Work Ethic in Canada, special Senate committee proposed, 281-8, 339-42, 474-8, 518

- Changes due to economic environment, 474
- Community employment, 283
- Definition of work ethic, 474-5, 477
- Evaluation of services performed for society, 476
- Guaranteed annual income, 281, 339-40
- Immigrants employed for farm work and menial jobs, 284, 286, 476
- Loss of working days because of strikes, 286
- Management-labour relations, 284
- Market orientation concept of work, 477
- Poverty in Canada - Report of Special Senate Committee, 281-2
  - Report updated, 282

Work Ethic in Canada - Concluded

Provincial needs for workers, 284
 Real and fraudulent poverty, 241
 Right to work, unions or employers denial of, 476
 Social security programs, 477
 Social status vs job status, 475
 Teachers and public servants under contract, 477
 Unemployment insurance, 283, 284, 286, 477
 Unequal distribution of wealth, 475
 Waste and duplication in social security programs, 340
 Working poor, 283

Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 339-42
 Carter, Chesley W., 474-8
 Croll, David A., 281-8, 518
 Grosart, Allister, 518

Working poor in Canada, 2019-23, 2154-8

Benefits for those under 65 yrs., 2157
 Canada Pension Plan, 2157
 Employment, provincial statistics, 2019
 Excerpt from speech of Prime Minister of Canadiana Conference, 2158
 Expansion of money supply and redistribution of resources, 2155
 Gallup poll results re income statistics, 2155
 Minimum wage, 2019-22
     Provincially, 2019, 2022
     Rates for experienced adult workers (legislated as of Dec. 31, 1974), 2021
     Vs welfare, 2021-2
 Misallocation of human and physical resources, 2155
 Old age security, 2156-7
 Poverty line, 2022
 Responsibility to work, 2156
 Social security review (1973), 2156
 Specified areas of working poor, 2019
 Supplementary income as work incentive, 2022
 Union workers, 2022
 Welfare expenditures (1966-76), 2157
 Women in the labour force, 2157

Speakers: Senators

Austin, Jack, 2154-8
 Croll, David A., 2019-23

Yukon Territory

British North America Acts 1867 to 1975, appointment of senators to represent Territories, 1005, 1054, 1060-2, 1081, 1095
 Fire losses replacement account, 325, 338, 353, 366, 393
 Northern Canada Power Commission, 807-09, 814-16, 840, 851, 855, 1005, 1095

Yuzyk, Hon. Paul

- Alaska Boundary Treaty of 1825, 100th anniversary of establishment of Canada's western boundaries, 578
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2077-9
  - Citizenship certificates, 2077
  - Eligibility age, 2078
  - Judges of citizenship courts, 2078
  - Landed immigrants, residency requirements and qualifications of, 2078
  - Pledge appended to Bill of Rights, 2078-9
- Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada) bill C-233, 740
  - Implications of penalty, 740
  - Motion that bill be ref to com after m for 3r, 740; agreed, 740
- Estonia, 58th anniversary of Proclamation of Independence, 1785
  - Tribute to Estonians, 1785
  - US Resolution re foreign policy of non-recognition of annexation of Baltic States by USSR, 1785
- Feeds bill S-10, 157-8
  - Bureaucratic control over regulations, 158
  - Whole seeds or grains free of deleterious substances, 158
- Helsinki Conference on Security and Co-operation, 1757-61
  - Disputes, peace solutions for, 1757
  - Families, uniting of, 1758
  - Human rights, 1757
  - Journalists, visa and travel difficulties, 1758
  - Mediterranean, 1757
  - Military manoeuvres, 1757
  - Newspapers featuring articles on Conference, 1757-60
  - New York Times* article, 1757
  - Nobel Peace Prize winner, refusal of USSR to permit acceptance of award, 1760-1
    - Letter from Senator Forsey re, 1761
  - Obligation to obey international law, 1757
  - Peking Review* article on USSR disregard of agreements, 1760
  - Process of detente, 1757
  - Security, 1757
  - Statements by leaders of various nations, 1758
  - Toronto Globe and Mail* article - The Brutal Reality of Brezhnev's Policy, 1759
  - Tourism, youth meetings, education and culture exchanges, 1758
  - Trade, 1757
  - USSR, 1758-61
    - Invasion of other countries, 1759
    - Military power, 1761
    - Violaton of treaties and agreements, 1758-61
  - Warsaw Pact, phases of strategic plan, 1759-60
    - Disunity of the West, 1759-60
    - Global democratic peace, 1760
    - Period of peaceful co-existence, Khrushchev's policies of de-Stalinization, 1759
    - Social change, 1759-60
- King George V Cancer Fund Winding-Up bill C-76, 1482-3
  - Background of fund, 1482
  - Trustees of fund, 1482
- Multiculturalism, Ministry of State, organization and budget, 742, 849, 866
- North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1514-16
  - Canadian delegation, 1514
  - East-West relations, 1515
  - Education, Cultural Affairs and Information Committee, 1515
  - Helsinki Agreement, 1515
  - Political Committee, 1514

Yuzyk, Hon. Paul - *ConcludedNorth Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference - *Concluded

Resolutions adopted re

Middle East, 1514

Portugal, 1514

Southeastern section of Alliance, 1515

Spain, 1514

Soviet Union, armed forces and equipment, 1515-16

North Atlantic Assembly, London conference, 362-5

Canadian delegation, 364-5

Education, cultural affairs and communications, 362

NATO, 362, 364

Information service, 364

Political differences, 362

Security and cooperation in Europe, 362-3

Ukrainian historian Valentyne Moroz, prisoner in Vladimir prison, 363-4

US amendment to trade bill, 363

USSR, treatment of dissidents, 363-4

Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, 807-09, 814-16*Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) C-10, 614-15

Abuses of cash advances, question of, 615

Corporate farms, partnerships, cooperatives of farming enterprises, 614

Elevator companies, question of commission for, 615

Increase in advance payment to $15,000, 614

Instigation of act during Conservative government, 614

Option to deliver on quota system or offboard sales, 615

Prices and production costs, 615

Repayment record, 615

Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 2) C-53, 1157, 1166-7

Damp or tough or unthreshed grain, 1166, 1167

Defaults in repayments, 1167

Limitation to wheat, oats and barley, 1166

Persons authorized to purchase grain for board, 1166

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, invitation to Canadian Parliamentarians to visit Russia, 1250-1, 1257*United Kingdom, Prime Minister Harold Wilson, visit to Ottawa, 480*Visitors from Baltic Nations, Consuls of Estonia and Latvia, 1867*Western Grain Stabilization bill C-41, 1725, 1735-7

Branch offices, question of, 1736

Crop insurance, 1736

Instability of agricultural income, 1735

Production costs, 1736-7

Prolonged periods of hardship, 1736-7

Voluntary participation in plan, 1736

Western Agricultural Conference, 1736

Wheat Board, role of, 1736

Wheat Board bill (No. 1) S-6, 169-70*Wheat Board bill (No. 2) C-88, 2330-1

Advisory Committee members, 2330

Functions, 2330

Producers as members, question of, 2330

Kent County can be saved, study of NB district, 2330

Malting barley, 2330-1

Grainview article entitled 'Why Alberta barley growers are suing CWB', 2331

Zionism

- UN resolution naming Israel as racist nation, 1397-8, 1411, 1417
  - Limitation on contributions as result of resolution, question, Senator Greene, 1411, 1417
  - Motion re condemnation of, Senator Croll, 1397-8

